"With regard to the position of the British in North Africa, the Italo-German press affirms that the victories won by them cost them dearly. What is more, the British as yet have not entrenched themselves in the interior of Cyrenaica. At present the principal forces of the enemies are separated by the vast Sirt desert in which only reconnoitering units are operating. The whole situation reminds one of the position of the belligenents in the "Western desert," with the same conditional front which leads to all kinds of surprises.

"Military operations in Ethiopia have assumed a protracted nature. The Italians are maneuvering, with their reserves still holding out against the offensive of the British.

ERITREAN FRONT

"The advance of the British troops on the Eritrean front, where the fighting near Keren has already been on for forty days, has come to a complete standstill. The flank maneuver of the northern column which brought it within 20-25 kilometres of the city proved to be as futile as the flank movement from the south.

"In the meantime the Ethiopian detachments under the command of British officers continue to advance on the western and southern Ethiopian fronts. Lately the British have been successfully advancing on Addis Ababa also from the west. All the successes of the British in west and south Ethiopia are to a considerable extent determined by the retreat of Italian troops into the central part of the country, where it is possible they may put up a decisive resistance. This also explains the rapid advance of the motorized South African army on the Somaliland front.

"As a result of the defeat sustained by the Italians in stubborn fighting on the Juba River, their command evidently decided to retreat to the North and Northwest and surrender the entire territory of Somaliland to their enemy. After occupying Mogadiscio without a battle and reaching Dagabura on March 10, covering 900 kilometres in two weeks, the British undoubtedly will send a separate column from here on to Berbera. This operation, which aims at getting back British Somaliland, may be carried out in interaction with the Navy. In this case it is to be expected that the reserve of the British command, numbering 25,000 men stationed in Aden, will be brought into action, and that the decisive operation will be developed in the central part of Ethiopia from the east and southeast.

"In East Africa the British have not got the upper hand in forces; their main advantage is in the existence of numerous motorized troops and also in the assistance rendered by the Ethiopian guerrillas.

"Apparently here, also, the Italian command decided to withdraw troops into the interior of the country and organize resistance on the line of the Somaliland mountain chain, which is difficult of access. Evidently General Wavell has not got big reserves at his disposal.

stuffs have been carried away to Germany, especially pork, of which the Germans are very fond. For four months before I left France I had not seen an egg. The same can be said of coffee. Since last summer, we drank roasted barley sweetened with saccharine, for the stock of sugar was very, very low. During the Franco-Prussian war and the siege of Paris in 1871, rats sold for a high price as food. It looks as though the same conditions will be experienced once again.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS ARE MOST RESENTFUL

The most resentful group against the occupation of the Germans are the students of the universities. There have been several uprisings and a number of killings . . . by German soldiers. I remember one such incident in the Latin Quarter one Saturday night, when unarmed students insulted some German soldiers in one of the cafes near the Sorbonne university. Two of the group were killed. As a result, the university was closed and the entire faculty dismissed. This also included the closing of Sainte Genevieve library.

body that was inimical to the Ethiopian cause five years ago. At that time they would not permit Professor Jeze to continue his classes in the University Law School for no other reason than that he was the legal representative of Ethiopia at the League of Nations.

My last promenade in Paris was in Montemartre, but it was in the day time. Because of the complete blackout which has been in vigor for the 16 months I was there, it would have been impossible to see anything in the night. I saw rue Pigalle, rue Fontaine and Place Blanche.

They were such lively, gay spots a few years ago. Today all that is changed. Most of the cabarets are closed and "For Rent" signs are pasted on the windows.

ONCE FAMOUS SPOTS ARE ALL CLOSED NOW

Eugene Bullard, flying ace of the last war, left his popular cafe restaurant in rue Fontaine before the Germans arrived and is now in New York City.

Brick Top's once famous place is closed and there is nothing left to indicate that her cabaret ranked with the most successful that Paris has ever seen. I strolled in the adjacent streets and found everything dead and deserted, but for the German soldiers, who come there in great numbers.

I went to the rue Fontaine and passed the cabaret of Josephine Baker. It is now transformed into a movie house. Fifteen years ago, on any evening, it would have been impossible to gain entrance, so numerous was her clientele. Prince and potentate, mandarin and maharajah; they all came to enjoy her syncopated entertainment and to sip of the rare wines and champagnes of France.

I was told Miss Baker and her titled Italian husband had gone to Brazil in South America. Again, someone said she was in Nice on the blue Mediterranean. In either case, it was impossible for me to verify the statement, for Paris is cut off from the outside world.

The only musician I found was Bobby Jones, and he was getting ready to return to America. The good old days of the twenties have died and it looks to me that Paris will never reach the pinnacle of success and popularity which once made of it the "playground of the world."

African War Is 'Not Settled,' Says Red Army Paper

MAR 19 1941

(Wireless to the Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, March 18.—The imperialist fight for the control of Africa is now becoming a protracted struggle, Colonel Popov says, in his weekly military review in the Soviet army organ, Red Star.

Despite what may appear to be brilliant successes on the part of the British troops in Africa, it seems that General Sir Archibald Wavell "has not got big reserves as his disposal," Colonel Popov says, and the likelihood of receiving new reinforcements from Australia or India is not great. Hence, says the Soviet expert, the British are at this time, especially in view of the Balkan crisis, obliged "to regroup their forces and desist from further offensive operations in North Africa," while both sides jockey for positions of vantage in the coming engagements.

The review is in part as follows:

"Spring has set in on the principal theatres of war. The winter campaign which brought so much disillusion to Italy has been completed. Nonetheless, Britain has not attained decisive successes. The victories won by the Greeks in Albania and by the British in Libya have not brought Britain closer to solving the strategic tasks of the war.

SITUATION IN WEST

"The situation in the west cannot be considered sufficiently definite. With the arrival of spring the danger of invasion of the British Isles becomes more acute. At the same time this by no means lessens the significance of the blockade. It is not for nothing that the foreign press is paying much attention lately to the struggle on Britain's sea routes. Britain and her overseas friends are seriously apprehensive of the possibility of the repetitions of 1917 events in the new situation. Indeed, since the end of February, the activity of the Germans on sea has increased. On the other hand, the British have undoubtedly consolidated themselves in the air and the R. A. F. is actively counteracting the air operations of its enemy.

"The struggle in the air, which at one time slackened down, now reveals a tendency to develop anew.

"The situation of the British in the Balkans is, as before, considerably complicated. The local assaults of the Greek troops have gone on since the end of February, determined by the desire to improve their positions, and taking into account the definite offensive plans of the enemy.

"As regards the activity of the Italians during the last few days, it is confined at yet to preliminary operations of local importance. This is to be explained by the striving to ensure themselves the district of Tepelini.

NORTH AFRICA FRONT

"With the front in North Africa becoming stabilized, the struggle over the sea routes in the central part of the Mediterranean continues to be of major importance. The possibility of using the Mediterranean routes today plays an exceptionally important role for both sides. The blockade by the German air corps of the Sicilian strait, over which the German reconnaissance planes are constantly patrolling, is apparently quite effective. At the same time the Italo-German planes, which have their base in Sicily, are by systematic mombings rendering the air and naval base of the British in Malta ineffective.

"During the day raids the attacks of the German dive bombers are carried out under the cover of smoke screens. The favorable flying conditions on the North African coasts are making it easier for the German air corps to execute its second task, namely, to carry out air operations against the land troops and rear of Wilson's army stretched along the only highway.

"With regard to the position of the British in North Africa, the Italo-German press affirms that the victories won by them cost them dearly. What is more, the British as yet have not entrenched themselves in the interior of Cyrenaica. At present the principal forces of the enemies are separated by the vast Sirt desert in which only reconnoitering units are operating. The whole situation reminds one of the position of the belligenents in the "Western desert," with the same conditional front which leads to all kinds of surprises.

Britain Falling Back On Vast Reserve Of HerBlackManpower

Hint Negroes Are Better Fitted For Ordeal Ahead

JAN 19 1941

ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS
LONDON BUREAU
MINISTRY OF INFORMATION BUILDING

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON.—(ANP)—I do not presume to assess the possibilities of destruction of Britain's airmen while engaged in this frightful aerial warfare. But it's becoming increasingly obvious that the long and bloody struggle which lies ahead will be fought chiefly in the air and might rapidly threaten to destroy the flower of Britain's youth. In view of this fact, the British government is forced in time to fall back on the available resources of her black man power, hence the extraordinary change of tone in the article reproduced later in this column from the London Evening Standard.

In the early stages of the war, the color bar in the Royal Air force was of striking significance that native opinion in Nigeria was offended by an air ministry ruling that Negroes may not enter the Royal Air force. A local newspaper comments that France has long trained Africans for her air force, and that in 'undemocratic Russia' Negroes may join the Red air force.

GET DIFFERENT VIEW

The British government has always considered it dangerous for her black subjects to play with firearms because they know that they can indeed, "play very roughly" when the necessity arises which might result in a rude awakening for Britain. In view of this fact, the utmost precaution had been taken hitherto in preventing colored people from obtaining the knowledge necessary to manipulate their lethal engines of the air.

As history unfolds her troubled pages, Britain is beginning to see things in a different light. What with the enormous financial contributions the colonies have made towards the production of aircraft, and the moral support they are giving, Britain can no longer enforce the color bar in the Royal Air force.

Under the present ruling, there is a clause that any applicant for a commission in the Royal Air force is asked to show that he is of pure European descent. In view of the fact that West Indians hitherto were prevented from joining the ranks of the Royal Air force, it will be interesting to see if the above mentioned clause will be waived in their favor.

Much of the cream of the British intelligentsia is disqualified from participation in the RAF as officer pilots owing to deficient eye-sight This defect is not to be encountered to anything like the same extent among West Indians whose academic and physical capacities fit them in every way for the rank of officer in the RAF.

MANY ARRIVING

Large numbers of West Indians have arrived in London to join the Royal Air force and all of them have made grade A in their medical examination and have been taken on and assigned to various departments of the air force.

The London Evening Standard Stated Recently: "The official announcement that there is no color bar in the Royal Air force and that British subjects of non-European descent have been accepted for service, draws attention to a theory that men of some colored races are not so liable as white men to have a 'black out' during high speed manoeuvres in the air. The blackout if a momentary blindness which comes while the airman is flattening out after a steep dive or while he is turning at a high speed. It is not caused by speed on a straight course, but the development in the speedy of fighter aircraft, which are built to turn more quickly, has, of course, made the problem more acute.

"The trouble is caused by severe pressure inside the skull. A fluid forms a kind of cushion to protect the brain from jarring shocks following a sudden movement of the body. Thus we are not disturbed by an ordinary sudden movement. But when the movement is abnormally sharp there is pressure inside the skull, which acts at once on the blood vessels in the abdomen. Dilatation of these vessels is caused, and a pooling of blood follows in the abdomen. The withdrawal of this blood from the brain causes the black-out. The experience does not usually leave any ill-effects.

RACIAL ADVANTAGE

"One pilot, describing his experience, said he felt that his head was like water which was forced to the bottom of a bucket by being whirled around. Simultaneously he had a feeling that he was being pushed down in his seat. If the airman were lying down while taking sharp curves he would not be so likely to experience a black out.

"There would be less tendency for the blood to surge into the abdominal pool. The specialists who have studied methods to counteract this tendency urge that airmen should be young, should have resilient or elastic abdominal muscles, and that they should be trained to contract those muscles in order to atop the pooling of blood in the abdomen. If a pilot screamed at the top of his voice he would contract the abdominal wall and achieve this effect. This is where the theory that men of Negroid extraction would not be so liable to suffer a black out comes in.

"They usually have highly-developed abdominal muscles. It is well known that Negro boxers can withstand severe punches on the solar plexus without losing consciousness. They could, some doctors believe, perform evolutions in the air that a white man could not attempt. But whether they have the other physical and mental qualities that make good flying men has not yet been determined. Investigations, by the way, into quite another field certainly suggests that Negroes have this advantage over white men—they are not so susceptible to mustard gas."

SCIENTISTS FAN AFRICAN REVOLT

Ethiopians Rallied By Archaeologists Against Italian Masters

BY DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON, Jan. 20—(AP)—British archaeologists and big game hunters, attempting roles similar to that of Lawrence of Arabia in the World War, were credited Monday with fanning a mounting revolt among Ethiopians against the Italian conquerors of their country.

Just as Thomas Edward Lawrence, himself an archaeologist, rallied the Arabs against the Turks London sources declared present-day British agents were providing "continuous and valuable" service in arousing the Ethiopians. Among them are British Army officers.

Authoritative military circles declared the British occupation of Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan north of the Ethiopian border, was a threat to continued Italian domination over the former kingdom of Haile Selassie.

Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's East African campaign, they said, is now geared for "more advanced operations." British units were reported to be punching their way past Sabderat and Tessenei, in Italian Eritrea east and southeast of Kassala.

British intelligence officers, intent on sabotage and raising the tribes to the double standard of the Lion of Juda and Great Britain, were declared to have repeatedly penetrated Italian positions in Ethiopia. One was said to have fired a signal pistol near an Italian base to guide British bombers to it.

Authorized British quarters kept silent on the size of the rebel movement, but one neutral military source placed the number at between 30,000 and 80,000 men. They are supplied with British guns.

It was recalled that Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs R. A. Butler told the House of Commons, Dec. 18, the government's policy was to extend all possible assistance to the dethroned Ethiopian emperor and to Ethiopians "willing to fight for freedom."

British military sources said the ejection of the Italians from Kassala "ended all chances" of a Fascist invasion against Khartoum, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and the Nile cotton-growing region.

Two Italian divisions, including two Blackshirt battalions, were routed and suffered 2,000 casualties in the operations around Kassala, these quarters said.

BRITAIN'S NEW-FOUND AFFECTION FOR ETHIOPIA

FEB 6 1941

• Great Britain has decided to recognize Haile Selassie—for the moment! In the House of Commons Monday, Foreign Minister Anthony Eden announced that Britain would "welcome" an independent Ethiopia—and that, of course, the Empire had no "territorial ambitions" in that country whatsoever.

It is immediately apparent that Mr. Eden doth protest too much. This "independence" of Ethiopia, dispatches from London let us know, is to be understood in a Pickwickian, that is, in a British imperialist sense. It is the same sort of "independence" which Egypt "enjoys" and which is to be meted out to India—with the dependent country torn by artificially stimulated differences between the racial groups among the people, while the British rule the roost.

Raymond Daniell, who cannot be described as hostile to the British ruling clique, wires the New York Times yesterday to the effect that Mr. Eden's words should not be taken too literally. "There are reasons that lead this correspondent to believe that they [the British] do not wish to see Ethiopia become completely independent if and when they win the war," boldly declares this London correspondent of the Times.

The United Press confirms Mr. Daniell's "belief" by declaring that "a British mandate over Ethiopia" is in the wind. William H. Stoneman, who has always been close to the British foreign office in his views and predictions, backs this up with a statement in his dispatch that the British rulers "wish to insure that Ethiopia will be modernized and civilized and past experience has convinced them that it would be too much to ask Haile Selassie alone to guarantee the speedy realization of this process."

"Modernizing" and "civilizing" were Mussolini's announced mission—and they are always the hypocritical alibis for imperialist plunder everywhere throughout the world.

Mr. Stoneman goes farther and reveals that the process of conquering and oppressing India has been hit upon by London in advance, for the conquest of Ethiopia. The frontiers of the former Ethiopia, he indicates, will be cut to one-third, in order to allow the other two-thirds to be split up into "independent" tribes—under British rule, of course. Overnight, the British imperialists have become fondly solicitous about the Galas and the Shankalas and other tribes—with the same "solicitude" they have nurtured for the "Moslems" in India.

The ruling class of the British Empire—which now "welcomes" the "independence" of Ethiopia in order to make it a British mandate—is the same class which did all in its power to speed on the conquest of that nation by fascist Italy. Only a few weeks ago, Churchill sealed this betrayal once more by his assurance to Italian imperialism that Great Britain would not interfere with that conquest. Then Mr. Churchill was engaged in an effort to buy out Italian imperialism—a bribery to which he can readily return—and the "independence" of Ethiopia did not amount in his eyes to a tinker's damn.

Now this ruling class of England thinks that Ethiopia may be a juicy spoils for itself and begins to talk of it in the terms of a British colony.

Fortunately, the Ethiopian people will have something to say about this whole matter. They fought valiantly, against great odds, for their real independence from Italian fascism; they can be counted on to resist this new game of Empire at their expense.

For the American people, in these revelations there is a vivid reminder again of the imperialist character of this war—that it is between two bandit camps interested exclusively in the chaining of the colonial peoples.

ROME SAID TO SEEK EXODUS IN ETHIOPIA

FEB 8 1941

Appeal for British Assent to Evacuation of Colonists Is Reported Anew in Vichy

HELP OF SPAIN IS INVOKED

FEB 8 1941

VICHY, France, Feb. 7 (UP)—Italy sent a secret envoy to Vichy this week with an urgent appeal for aid in removing 80,000 Italian colonists, including 15,000 women and children, from Ethiopia, where they face possible massacre by Ethiopians supporting Britain's invasion of Italian East Africa, it was understood reliably tonight.

Despite official Italian and French denials, Count Giuseppe Volpi, former Italian Minister of Finance, was in Vichy early in the week seeking Spanish intervention in an effort to obtain Britain's relaxation of her blockade to permit the repatriation by way of Jibuti, French Somaliland. Count Volpi has since left France, it is understood.

Count Volpi was understood in well-informed quarters to have sought in talks here with the Spanish Ambassador, José Felix Lequerica, to obtain the Spanish Government's intervention with the British Ambassador to Madrid, Sir Samuel Hoare. The Italian argued that Britain should consent to relaxation of the blockade because "it is a question of the solidarity of the white races."

British Reluctance Foreseen

Many quarters believed that Britain would be reluctant to agree to any such rescue plan because it would interrupt military operations at a vital moment. British forces are driving down the Gondar road toward the Lake Tana region of Ethiopia. Time for these military operations is growing short, it was pointed out, because the Ethiopian rainy season will start in May.

[It was said in London on Wednesday that there had been no British-Italian negotiations on the repatriation question. The view was expressed that the British probably would be unwilling to enter any arrangement unless the Italians first agreed to stop fighting in East Africa.]

The Spanish Embassy here has made no public report on the negotiations thus far, but it is understood that Ambassador Lequerica has sent a detailed summary of the Italian request to Madrid. The French Government is said to be prepared to lend its full support to the Italian proposal.

Ethiopian rebels are said already to have cut the railroad to Jibuti at several points between Addis Ababa and Harar and between Harar and Jibuti. No through trains have been running over the line for three months, it is understood here.

If the Italian civilians should reach Jibuti safely, an enormous task would lie ahead in getting them to Italy. There are no food stocks in Jibuti available for such an army of refugees.

Selassie's Troops Cut Deep Into Ethiopia; Headed to Addis Ababa

FEB 1 1941

CAIRO, Egypt—With the Red, Yellow and Green imperial flag of Ethiopia hoisted "somewhere" in the rugged mountains of that ancient kingdom, to mark the triumphant return to the land of his fathers, Emperor Haile Selassie I, Conquering Lion of Judah, King of Kings and Elect of God, is again at the head of his armies leading them on to a decisive battle against the Italian invader, it was reported in official quarters this week.

The bearded emperor traveled from his headquarters in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan in a British bomber to a hidden mountain fastness. where he has established field headquarters in the very heart of Ethiopia. Here he was met by the Crown Prince, a British liaison officer, high officials of the Ethiopian government, who had been carrying on the struggle under the leadership of General Abebe Arragai, and detachments of the Ethiopian Army.

The emperor was accompanied by a high-ranking British officer, a dignitary of the Ethiopian Church, and the great warrior, Ras Kassa, former war minister. On arrival, the emperor and his official party were received at a royal function, attended by British and Ethiopian officials, all of whom reviewed a smartly dressed and well-equipped detachment of the regular army.

Greeting Emperor Haile Selassie, the British laison officer, who read a message from Major-General William Platt, commander of the Sudanese forces, said: "Your Majesty: we express our best wishes for success in the enterprise upon which you are now embarking and for the future welfare and contentment of your country and people.

"It is our earnest hope that our combined and coordinated efforts will soon rid your country of our common enemy. It is a great disappintment that operations against the enemy elsewhere prevent my expressing these sentiments personally to your majesty at this moment."

Replying to the words of welcome to his own country by a representative of his British ally, the Negus Negasti declared: "I am entering Ethiopia with full confidence of assistance from the British Government and allied forces in order to crush the common enemy."

The reception ceremonies were marked by royal and military dignity. The emperor, walking with the Crown Prince at his side, hoisted the Ethiopian flag with his own hands as a bugler blew the royal salute. Review of the troops and a quick lunch followed, as the party set out to join a British military mission and regular forces in the interior of the country.

On setting foot on Ethiopian soil, from which he was driven by the Fascist forces in 1936, the emperor issued the following proclamation:

"My people of Ethiopia, listen! Glory is for him whose judgment is impartial, who breaks the arm of the strong and comforts the weak.

"Italy is our blood enemy since former times, having crossed our frontier and started an unjust war of aggression. We resisted so far as we were able, then went to Europe to seek aid. Meantime, you warriors of Ethiopia, without sheating your swords, without furling your flag, armed only with natural bravery, fought a country with superior arms rather than submit to invaders. You fought in the wilderness and mountains, waiting for us. This struggle for five years enabled you to see the fruit of labors and sacrifices.

"I have informed you my arrival is with theaid of the British Government, who have entered into a covenant to drive out the enemy from our country. My joy is boundless when I tell you that, after being away four years and eight months, I have now, by the grace of God, returned to my country. . . .

"People of Ethiopia! You know the bitter life of those who have lost their Government, their independence and country.

". . . I now forgive those of you who have worked against the interest of your King and country. . . .

"From one end of Ethiopia to the other, raise arms against the enemy who have come to destroy your race, rob your property, belittle your glory, pollute your blood. Wipe him from the face of Ethiopia.

"Italy is cornered in the grip of the great British sea, air and land power. Italians in Ethiopia have not escaped my trusted warriors. In my name, in your name, before the world, I thank the Government and people of Great Britain for their touching unforgettable reception and hospitality during my bitter trials.

"Long live Ethiopia and her independence. Long live Great Britain."

Arrival of the Negus was the occasion for national rejoicing, it was said, and everywhere, even in London, it is now being feared that a general uprising of the Ethiopians against the Italians will result in a whole sale slaughter of men, women and children. Because of this fear, the Churchill government some time ago urged the tIalians to get out of the country in time, or remain at the risk of their own women and children.

In the meantime, the great pincer movement of Ethiopian and British forces on four fronts, to converge of the Ethiopian border and thence onward to Addis Ababa is rolling everything before it. The Italian forces, it has been reported, have witndrawn from the interior to the capital, Addis Ababa. using all their reserve forces to maintain their lines of communication and protect their convoys.

Heading toward Addis Ababa are the forces being led by the emperor in the Tana region from the Sudan, the British of two fronts in Kenya, one moving in the direction of Addis Ababa, and the other heading into Italian Somaliland, and a two-pronged movement in Eritrea towards the Ethiopian border.

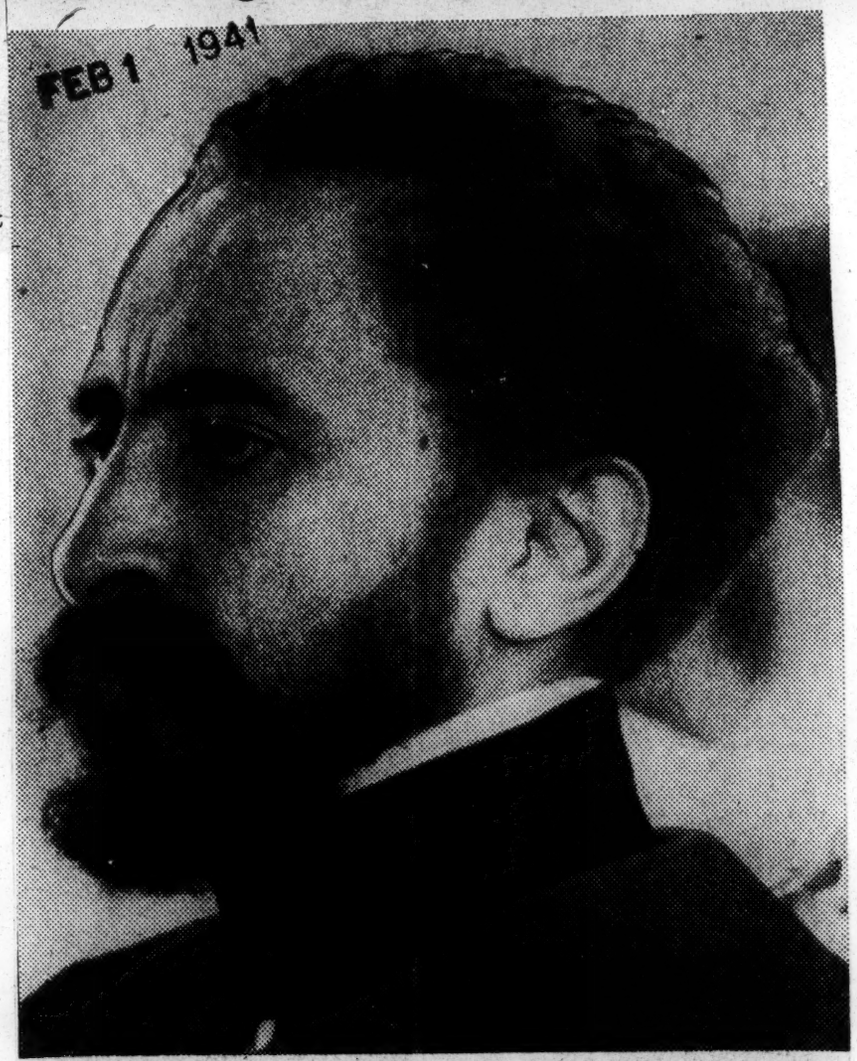
Raises Flag Over Homeland

FEB 1 1941



His flag of victory unfurled in his ancient kingdom, Emperor Haile Selassie I, Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Negus Negasti and Elect of God, returning from a five-year exile in England, to lead his armies and the British Expeditionary Force in the re-conquest of Ethiopia from the Italian invader. The emperor is now on Ethiopian soil, on his way to Addis Ababa.

HELPING ETHIOPIA—NOW

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Khartum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, the British are arming and training 200,000 Ethiopians to fight the Italians in Abyssinia and drive them out.

Since July, picked British officers and non-commissioned officers have been in the ancient kingdom, teaching the natives how to handle the modern arms sent into that part of the country where Italian control does not extend.

A fortnight ago Emperor Haile Selassie entered Ethiopia after an absence of nearly five years and officially took command of the vast Ethiopian guerrila forces.

With the Italians on the run in Libya and Albania, and cut off in East Africa, the prospects of Haile Selassie winning back his kingdom are very good.

The colored people of the world are a unit in praying for the defeat and ejection of the Italians from Abyssinia.

But what is most illuminating to colored people of the world is the fact that England withheld aid to Ethiopia until the British Empire was threatened.

Back in 1935 and 1936 the little Emperor pleaded in vain with the English and the British-dominated League of Nations to help him to battle the Italian aggressor.

England would not help one bit and, as usual, the United States, which has since aided China, Finland, Norway, Brazil, Argentine and other countries, followed the lead of Downing Street.

Had England given Ethiopia the help she asked in 1935 and 1936, the British Empire would not be in the fix it is today.

Experience has shown since that Hitler was in no position then to wage a war against England and that Mussolini's army could have made no headway whatever against Ethiopian soldiers properly equipped.

Had England and the United States openly supplied Haile Selassie with the aid he sought, Mussolini would have been stopped in his tracks and the Rome-Berlin Axis would have died aborning.

Aid is being given to Ethiopia—now, in the hope that this will help save England's skin, but, as usual, it may be "too little and too late."

However, if Ethiopia manages to regain her independence, few intelligent colored people will lose any sleep over what happens to the British Empire.

Town of Kassala Falls To Native Forces; Italians Ringed

By ST.CLAIR BOURNE

Buckling under determined assaults of native forces under command of Emperor Haile Selassie himself, Italian forces occupying Ethiopia are not only withdrawing rapidly all along the line but face possible extinction if they refuse to surrender, reports indicated this week. The recapture of Kassala, northern border town by the Ethiop troops was admitted by Rome in official communiques.

Meanwhile, American supporters of Ethiopia, confidently predicting the near return of Selassie to his throne, prepared to launch huge "Aid Ethiopia" drives in this country, flooded the office of Ethiopian Consul General John H. Shaw, 78 Water St., with requests for authorization to proceed as soon as the U. S. state department gave its sanction.

Haile Selassie, London reported, has set up his court in Khartum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, about 300 miles from Kassala from where the campaign of the native forces is being personally directed. Tribal chieftains, long active in the punishing guerrilla warfare which has exacted frightful toll of the Italians ever since their original invasion 5 years ago, are flocking to the Emperor to pledge their support.

In the Kenya and Tanganyika territories south of Ethiopia huge native forces, trained and well equipped by the British are said to be poised for an attack on the Italians as soon as weather permits and the northern campaign, also aided by the British, is reported moving rapidly.

British authorities indicated in London lst week their hope that the Italians would seek to evacuate the non-combatant portion of the estimated half-million Italians in Ethiopia, even offered such assistance as they could, implying no doubt of an Ethiopian victory outcome in the campaign. The strength of the Fascist forces in Ethiopia now are estimated as high as 150,000. That of the natives, although almost impossible to approximate, is definitely conceded to be much greater.

Perusal of the map reveals that the Italians have no avenue of retreat other than to Mogadiscio, sole Italian Somaliland port, but which can be reached from Addis Ababa only over almost 1,500 miles of mountains and desert which are almost completely uninhabited and, moreover, are wide open to attack by the southern native columns all along the route.

Even if the Italians should withdraw to Mogadiscio, experts point out, British warships patrolling the Indian Ocean must be reckoned with.

Claims from Selassie's headquarters that Kassala was taken without a shot being fired were substantiated in dispatches from Rome this week which claimed that Italian forces had evacuated the town as a "strategic move." General belief, however, is that the retreat is only the beginning of a general withdrawal which may eventually turn into a rout.

Monday in his office, Consul General Shaw revealed that he has received many communications from organizations and individuals relative to sponsoring drives to aid Ethiopia, and also spent considerable time conferring with Robert L. Ephraim, president of the Negro World Alliance and the Ethiopian Redemption Committee, both of Chicago.

Ephraim, after the conference, told a Star & Amsterdam News reporter that Shaw had given him full authority to direct the drive to aid Ethiopia in the United States as soon as the state department gives its sanction, then left for Chicago where, he said, further preparations would begin immediately upon his arrival.

Sanction of such campaigns must be given by the U. S. Deaprtment of State in accordance with a law which prohibits such movements otherwise.

Ironically enough, one of the first organizations to contact Shaw, he admitted, was the Committee for Organization of Aid for Ethiopia, located, of all places in Rome, N. Y.

British Erase Racial Bar In Royal Air Force

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Chicago Defender Foreign Correspondent)

LONDON.—The color bar in the imperial forces of the Crown, including the Royal Air Force, has been officially abolished for the duration of the war.

This was contained in a statement from the Air Ministry to the League of Colored People, last week. The letter states that the Imperial Air Council has decided "that for the period of the war, British subjects from the colonies who are in Britain, including those not wholly of European descent, are to be on the same footing as British subjects from the United Kingdom as regards eligibility for voluntary enlistment in the Armed forces, including the Royal Air Force."

The document goes on to state "British subjects of non-European descent who are in this country are considered on their merits for service with the Royal Air Force, and several have been accepted since the outbreak of war. A careful examination of overseas manpower resources has been made recently, and that the machinery is being set up in certain overseas countries for the local selection and entry of suitable personnel."

The first African to be selected for training as a pilot under the new scheme was Babatunde O. Alakija, son of A. Alakija, a member of the legislative Council of Nigeria and a nephew of the Alake Abeokuta, a leading West African chief.

Since then, several Negroes from Africa and the West Indies have joined the R.A.F. and other branches of the fighting forces.

Among those granted commissions are Dr. Otto Wallen, son of a former Trinidad mayor, and Dr. A. Marsh of Jamaica who have been made lieutenants in the Royal Army Medical Corps.

Arundel Moody, son of Dr. H. A. Moody of Jamaica, has been admitted into an Officers' Training Corps, and Miss C. Moody, who is a physician, has joined the R.A.M.C.

Several Indians have recently arrived in England to join the R.A.F. As most of them hold pilot certificates, they hope to be soon able to take part in bombing raids over Germany. They were received in audience by the King and Queen in Buckingham Palace.

These volunteers, however, are not enough to meet the rapidly expanding needs of the Royal Air Force, so the Colonial Office has made arrangements for the establishment in the various West Indian islands, as well as Bermuda, British Guiana and British Honduras, of local selection and medical boards to select colored candidates for service in the R. A. F. as pilots, observers, wireless operators and air gunners.

The names of the candidates selected by these boards are transmitted to the Air Ministry and are subject to the Ministry's approval. The candidates, if admitted, are provided with their passage either to England or Canada for training.

TRINIDAD, British West Indies.—Italy has 1,200 miles of frontier in East Africa to guard and defend. The distances in her north African possessions, Lybia and Tripoli, are also enormous. With the taking of Bardia, near the Lybian Egyptian frontier by the British (and I think by Free French troops as well) some 500 miles remain to be conquered before the Italians can be pushed westward as far as Benghazi, Lybia's main city.

The British "blitz" started in driving the Italians out of the distance they had penetrated into Egypt, and in its six weeks has veritably proved itself a lightning campaign. We read of 30,000 Italian prisoners in one place, of many other thousands in another, of various generals and staff officers captured

That operations in Ethiopia will be made as parallel in time as possible with the Lybian attack seems pretty obvious. Another Prime Minister is on his way back from Egypt, the Premier of the Punjab in India, stating that the Punjab troops in the Western Desert will not leave until they have defeated the Italians there. These troops are also in the Sudan and on the borders of Abyssinia; their morale, said the Premier, was extraordinary, and that there was a deep feeling of sympathy between these and African soldiers.

General Wavell is the leader in command of the entire military operations in the Middle East, as these regions are termed. His statement acknowledged the help given by Egypt, and continued: "We had our periods of danger in the months that followed last June, when Italy's ruler decided that good loot could be had without much fighting or danger. Our garrisons in Egypt Sudan, East Africa, and British Somaliland were most dangerously weak. Fortunately, no determined attack was made except in British Somaliland, where the Italians employed the force of seven Brigades with artillery and tanks to drive back our five battalions. We acknowledge the compliment in the face of the force they thought necessary."

No wonder that the various peoples of Africa, be they Negro Ethiopian, Arab or Egyptian, along with their Indian allies, should fight with such spirit, now that the hour has come. Although doubtless they have not read what I am going to quote, Hitler's race theories are known long since to the inhabitants of the Dark Continent and of India. Says a German newspaper writing of Nazi aims in Africa; "German policy will be to establish a firm and clear order from the start which defines the position of the native unequivocallyl.

"That this position is to be one of slavery is quite clear. The German going to the colonies will have to have a certain familiarity with the language and the peculiarities of the natives, not only to facilitate his becoming their master, but also for economic reasons.

"The emancipation of native races or the encouragement of their culture receives no place in the German colonial policy." What is to be done, continues the paper, with the many educated Negroes in Aganda? It can contain large numbers of black workers, but offers very little scope for Negroes with a higher education. (All of this must appear somewhat uncertain now to the German reader, providing he is allowed to know the magnitude of the Italian rout in Africa).

Fighting is taking place not only in Ethiopia, Lybia and regions in Italian East Africa, but further south in (British) Kenya, where the recent victories of the British have just been celebrated in its capital Nairobi. Difficult conditions have been overcome; for instance, in the taking of Elwak, Brigadier Pinard's forces (South African) had to cover great distances with only one bottle of water to last 30 hours, on foot, in terrific heat.

The effort of the colonies continues unabated; rather, it is encreasing. From Barbados, British West Indies, comes 2,300 pounds as a first installment to the British Red Cross. Trinidad has set itself the task of collecting the large sum of 100,000 pounds, to buy aircraft British Honduras has given its third contribution of 1,000 pounds. From the people of Bermuda eight large packing cases of clothes arrived in London, with this message: "Goods win through; London will too." The people of French Cameroon in West Africa have sent enough gold to England to buy a Spitfire plane; it will be called the "Cameroons Francais." Total composed of gifts from Native Rulers and individuals to the Sudan War Planes Fund is 5,000 pounds.

Assam, already having contributed four fighters to the Royal Air Force now sends a further 20,000 pounds, the price of one bomber and makes other gifts to Air Raid Victims Fund and Red Cross. The Nyzam of Hyderabad has two fully equipped chaser squadrons actually fighting the Italians in the Middle East. The Maharajah of Gaekwar, another of Indian's powerful princes, gave 50,000 pounds (10 fighting planes can be bought with this) and had already given the same sum and an infantry unit.

An organization in Belgian Congo donated 1,200 pounds to the British Consul for the Red Cross. In all the colonies of Great Britain have sent 17,890,000 pounds for war purposes between the outbreak of the war and the end of December.

At the end of November General de Gaulle returned to England from his mission to French Cameroon where he was hailed as the only true representative of France. From London now comes a message describing a Free luncheon at which Cardinal Hinsley said they honoured the General as " a great Christian leader who sought inspiration from the glorious Christian past of his country." Replying General de Gaulle pointed out that France was not vanguished as she still possessed her colonial empire her navy, a mercantile marine of 2 million tons, and gold to the amount of 50 billion francs.

In the past few months de Gaulle Committees and de Gaulle representatives have been nominated in almost every country, and it goes without saying that the people of this island are in open sympathy with the leader of true France, that is to say, of "Free France."

JULIAN JOINS CANADA ROYAL AIR FORCES

JAN 19 194

Lets Loose Blast On Negro Press

By JOHN H. THOMPSON

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—(ANP)—Col. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, erstwhile Ethiopian air ace who achieved this distinction by never fighting an air battle while in Ethiopia, and styled Harlem's "Black Eagle" by ridiculing daily papers, jubilantly announced to reporters this week that he had passed the final tests at Ottawa, Canada, as a pilot in the Royal Air force. He received his commission this past week.

Attired in an expensive flying coat of real leather, direct from his Bond street tailors in London, minus the monocle he customarily wears, Julian told reporters he hoped to be in London within the next few weeks, wanted to fight his heralded air duel with Riechmarshall Goering at the first opportunity, berated the Associated Negro Press for sending out articles which he said held up his exploits to ridicule.

Says White Press Makes Him

Said the redoubtable "No-Way Corrigan", whose first and only attempt at a non-stop crossing of the Atlantic ended in Flushing Meadows, "I don't give a hoot for all the Negro papers in the world. The white press is what makes me. No matter what the Negro papers say about me I am still the biggest Negro in the country, have more money than any other Negro and don't ask any one for favors but the white people. As long as the white papers give me a spread once in awhile I am satisfied."

Considerable mystery has been evinced here in Harlem as to the probable sources of Julian's seemingly unlimited supply of funds. The veil of mystery was partly lifted here this week when Julian hinted that he was involved in one of the numerous espionage rings now operating in this country. He also passed out hints that he was not going to England to engage in flying but would be a member of the British Intelligence Service.

Gets Reprimand

It is known here that Julian was called into the secretary of state's office in Washington recently and reprimanded for talking too much about affairs of state. It was wondered here why a private citizen of any country would be called down by a government official unless his activities as an espionage agent were known. "An unknown citizen's utterances on any question could not have any bearing on any international situation, it was pointed out.

And Col. Julian, the best dressed, most expensively attired Negro in Harlem, gives no inkling to the true facts. And incidentally, in an effort to ascertain what country Julian claims citizenship, he was last listed as a citizen of Turkey! A native of the BWI, he changes citizenship like a snake does its skin and with less apparent effort. No matter what country to which he claims allegiance, he finds no difficulty in coming in and out of the United States. It is known he refused citizenship in Italy following the conquering of that country.

He recently gave a demonstration of his flying ability for reporters of the Amsterdam News, a local weekly.

Julian is reported to have had to use considerable influence to win his commission in the R. A. F.

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON.—British victories in the northern African theatre of war over the Italians is responsible to a large degree, to the secret hate which native troops have for their Fascist masters and Mussolini's failure to obtain their loyalty to his cause. Il Duce's success at home in bulldozing the Italian people into taking the role of international bandits has failed miserably in Africa.

Mussolini deserves no mercy. He is a gangster just as evil and incredibly ruthless as the other sadistic weakling, Hitler. His record is black and his purpose is just as sinister. And to think that the late Neville Chamberlain wanted to be friendly with such a vermin and recognize the theft of Abyssinia! For the good of mankind and for the future of the world, Britain must exterminate Mussolini who is the living compendium of all evil qualities. What changes time brings; Mussolini began his career as conquerer 17 years ago when his fleet bombarded Corfu. Next this modern Caesar assailed benighted Abyssinia.

It was there that his son in law Count Ciano and his son Bruno earned glory by machine-gunning native villages. "Oh the joy of bombing villages," chanted young Bruno Mussolini, the adolescent thug, during the Abyssinian campaign, De Bono was not kil'ing off his legitimate prey. Mussolini thereupon installed Marshal Badoglio on the gallows with sealed orders to annihilate the unfortunate Abyssinians with mustard gas which caused immeasurable suffering, misery and death. For that, Badoglio was made Duke of Addis Ababa. It is, indeed, great satisfaction to know that such barbarous inhumanities have brought their own swift and bitter retribution.

Negus Prophecy

Just before the col'apse of Abyssinia, the negus, saddened and disillusioned, forced to leave his country after his most sanguine hopes had suffered an eclipse made this dramatic statement: "Do the people of the world realize my responsibilities not only to my people but to the world, and do they know that I am hold-

It might be recalled that the emperor and his foreign secretary left London about five months ago for an unknown destination in the Sudan. Since then, very litt'e have been heard about the emperor. For good reasons known to the British military command and the British government, the emperor's activities have been a close secret. I can, however state officially that it is intended by the British government that Abyssinia must be for the Abyssinnians and in order to bring about this successfully, I can assure you that the British government have not been idle in their pursuit.

Britain's Greatest Fifth Column

Italy's Libyan army alone numbers 250,000 whites and thousands of Askaris. She has big garrisons of mixed troops in Abyssinia, who are still trying to repress the emperor's rebels and so make Abyssinia a colony in full sense. The Abyssinians have not forgotten or forgiven. They have been carefully watching the battle in the Mediterannean and today, they are agog with excitement over Britain's successful campaign in the African theatre of war. At the time of writing, it was officially announced in London that revolt in Abyssinia is growing with grave symptoms. Thus it will be seen that the biggest fifth column in the world dwells in the Italian empire and it is on the side of Britain.

Graziana, the Italian commander in chief, is entangled in a whole web of intrigue chiefly with the problem of the Libyans who dislike him intensely. So, therefore, he cannot but reckon with the probability of mutiny among his large indispensable native levies who owe him no allegiance except due to the glamour of success.

It was the black soldiers conscripted in Libya who were ordered to hold the front at Sidi Barrani. One of their divisions was comprised of old men and others generally considered unfit for service, since they are suffering from eye trouble, and other common desert diseases. A typical case is that of one grandfather serving with his two sons in the same regiment. These men refused to go forward. As members of the Senussi tribe they declined to strike their own clansmen in Egypt. As Moslems they wou'dn't further violate the holy territory of Moslem Egypt.

Mussolinis Islam Sword

Mussolini's bogus straight sword of Islam will assume the classical Mohammedan curvature and speedily rebound to destroy in its path the fleetest Italian. The ghost of the Tripolitan Arab patriot Mukhtar (thrown from an Italian aeroplane) is descending on the disconcerted legionnaires of Graziana in the form of 500 kilogram bombs. The Italians who sealed up the wells of Cytenaica and thus reduced the indigenous population to submission are now themselves being steadily starved and forced by their parching thirst into a capitulation only equalled by the route of the Carthaginians at Zama. Fortunately for the Italians, the British High command is not motivated by the gangrene of gangsterism which extermination. The captured understands only capitulation by troops freed after 18 years of servile bondage in a service or regime utterly alien to their culturral and political tradition, will now find themselves in a concentration camp encircled with barbed wire in the middle of the burning desert as did 80,000 inhabitants of Cyrenaica, who died a miserable death for the crime of no tbeing the true descendants of the Roman Imperium.

250 Italians Expelled From Addis Ababa

Others To Follow at Rate of 1,000 a Week.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, April 28.—(AP)—Turbaned Ethiopians massed in the main square of this capital city tonight and cheered as an Amharic radio announcer read the names of the first 250 Italians to be expelled from the city.

The names included those of well-known party leaders and members of the secret police. They are expected to go to internment camps next Monday and to be followed by others at the rate of 1,000 weekly.

Upon the return of Emperor Haile Selassie to the capital all Italians not evacuated will be required to live in special safety zones.

The city, meanwhile, is preparing for the return of the King of Kings, Haile Selassie.

South African Natives Will Be Employed As Army Porters

LONDON (BM).—Recruitment of the "Native Military Police" in the Union of South Africa has ceased, by order of the Prime Minister and Minister of Defence, General Jan Smuths.

A new unit, called the "Native Military Corps," has been formed to recruit Africans for service outside the Union with the European troops as guards, motor and animal transport drivers, stretcher bearers, porters, medical and hygiene personnel and other duties with the white troops in the field.

While Africans will sign on for whatever duties may be allotted to them, "Anywhere in Africa," efforts will be made to fit them for, and assign them to, the duties for which they are fitted in the Labour Corps.

The rates of pay for privates will be 1/6d per day, Lance-Corporals 1/6d and the highest rank of Sergeants, 2/3d.

A recruit who declares that he has dependants will be required to allot to them nine pence of his daily pay to which the Government will add nine pence, thus bringing the total amount available for wives and children up to 1/6d per day.

Privates without dependants still have half of their pay deferred for the period of their service.

Other ranks will have 1/6d deferred

Africans with dependants will also be encouraged to defer some portion of their nine pence. "So as to obviate loss and wasteful spending," declares the Minister for Native Affairs.

Efforts of certain white friends of the Africans to get the Government to grant the Natives an additional allowance for urban dwellers of eight pence a day to cover rent and other essential services, have not so far been successful.

South African Natives are very disappointed by the Government's decision not to use them as combatants.

It is pointed out that England has armed and is training large armies of blacks in West and East Africa to fight against the Italians on the Kenya-Abyssinia front.

These troops have already distinguished themselves many have won decorations for gallantry in action against the enemy.

The first Military Medal awarded in the African War was given to Corporal Asamu of the King's African Rifles.

He showed conspicuous calmness in supplying and feeding a Bren gun when under enemy fire.

Under his covering fire, the men under his command were able to reach safety

But on account of the racial conflict in the Union, due to the colour bar system, the authorities are afraid to antagonise European public opinion and abolish the colour bar policy in the armed forces, although it is realised that over 1,000,000 Natives could be armed and trained for service in the Near East.

Capital Negro Leaders Call For Aid to Destroy Hitler

Support All Gov't Moves to Help British, Soviet Peoples; Stress Fight on Nazism Linked to Negro Rights in America

(Special to the Sunday Worker)

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Triumph of Hitler over the Soviet Union and the British people would mean "the spreading of all the evils of fascism, race hatred and race superiority in the United States," a group of distinguished Washington Negro leaders declared in a statement issued here today.

Signed by well-known ministers, trade unionists and civic leaders, the statement asserts that it is "of vital concern to the Negro people that Hitler be destroyed." Support to the President's announced program of aid to Britain and the Soviet Union was urged.

However, the statement warned, effective action against Hitler can only be undertaken if Jim-Crowism is destroyed in the United States. Stress was laid on execution of the President's recent order barring discrimination in the defense industries.

FULL STATEMENT

The text of the statement follows:

"Great Britain and the Soviet Union are today engaged in a desperate struggle for national independence against the Hitler hordes who would enslave the world."

"The Negro people realize that Hitler and Hitlerism is a menace to America's peace and democracy. Its triumphs would mean the spreading of all the evils of fascism, race hatred and race superiority here in the United States. It is therefore of vital concern to the Negro people that Hitler be destroyed and that they should give complete support to the President's announced program of aid to Britain, the Soviet Union and all other countries fighting Hitler aggression.

"The Negro people are convinced that a successful struggle against Hitlerism calls for an effective execution of the President's recent executive order to abolish racial discrimination in defense industry.

"It is the candid opinion of the Negro people that the most effective way to maintain and extend democracy in America is by abolishing Jim Crowism, by passage of the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax bills and all legislation protecting the rights of labor."

AFRICA AND THE WAR

In a broadcast talk to mark the fiftieth anniversary of British rule over the protectorate of Nyasaland, Lord Moyne, Secretary of State for Colonies, declared last week in London, that "this war involves the future of Africa as well as Europe." If the Nazis won, the hope of civilizing the natives in Africa would be at an end. The Africans would be thrown back into slavery under German taskmasters.

We should like to inquire from Lord Moyne what the Britannic government proposes to do for Africa at the conclusion of the present conflict? If the future of Africa is interlocked with the outcome of the European war, why then has not Mr. Churchill or Mr. Eden outlined to the African people the objectives sought by the British War cabinet? We have heard many speeches in which alluring promises were made to the Indian and to the Arab peoples. India has been promised political freedom. The Arabs have been assured that their nationalist aspirations will be advanced to the point of national satisfaction through the aid and influence of Great Britain. But poor Africa has only been referred to as geographical points where the Allies and the Axis forces have locked horns.

The Africans, Lord Moyne declared, would be thrown back into slavery under German taskmasters. British rule in Africa has yet to give any cause for the natives to fight for its continuance. Economic, industrial exploitation, suppression of political rights, child labor, are all the identifying garments of slavery. Moreover, there are many sections of South Africa in particular where the natives are not allowed on the streets after dark. Ruthless measures are invoked against them on the slightest provocation. The Africans are not protected by British rule, and up to the present moment there has been no effort by the British government pointing toward even a mild desire to give political or economic freedom to the people of the Dark Continent.

We are convinced that Britain does not intend to extend to Africa the type of democracy she is prepared to grant to the people of India and Syria. We can readily understand that attitude. While imperialistic rivalries are going on in various parts of the world for the control of raw materials, the securing of markets for manufactured goods, economic spheres of influence for the export of capital goods and finance-capital, as well as the securing of air and naval bases, it is chiefly in Africa that the struggle is now centered.

The Dark Continent has become the international battleground of the Axis Powers, which seek to secure a firm foothold along the Northern and Western coastlines in order to dominate the Mediterranean and the Atlantic oceans.

Furthermore, Africa is the gateway to the East—the link between Europe and Asia—and so holds the key to world power.

Control of the Suez, occupation of Dakar on the coast of French West Africa, would give Hitler the means of striking at Britain's sea-power and even threatening the Western hemisphere.

Three Negroes Nazi Hostages In France

MAY 26 1941

NEW YORK CITY—(A N P)—Three members of a Negro family were among the 140 Americans taken of the ill-fated S. S. Zamzam by the Germans before a Nazi sea-raider sent the ship to the bottom in mid April, it became known here following disclosure of the incident.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Dosuma and their 12 year old daughter, Ayodel, who were en route to Sierra Leona where Mr. Dosuma was supposed to take up an assignment as head of the mission school of the Baptist Foreign missions. The mission's headquarters are in Baltimore.

The fate of the Dosumas as well as the other victims is still being tossed about because of various interpretations of international law. It had been reported that the Americans would be permitted to leave their refuge in St. Jean de Luz in France, where they had been taken by a German merchant ship, but difficulties seem to have arisen to postpone the release.

The family, prior to their departure, had lived at 59 East 133rd Street, New York City. Mr. Dosuma, holder of a political science degree from Columbia University had taught remedial arithmetic in the public schools here for a while. Although he formerly attended Hampton Institute, he is a graduate of Lincoln University at Oxford, Pa. He was known there as T. Dosuma Johnson.

AFRICAN PLAYS BIG PART IN EUROPEAN WAR'S SETTLEMENT

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNS)—Foreign observers, skilled at reading behind the headlines in war news releases, see an increased pressure being daily brought on England in her last ditch struggle to maintain her position of supremacy and world domination. The uprising of the natives in Iraq, followed shortly by the open alliance of the French Vichy government with Hitler, was a body blow to England's propaganda bureau, intent on impressing the voters of the United States that only aid in the way of war materials is now needed to assure an eventual British victory.

Unfortunately, England can no longer claim that it is Hitler alone she is fighting—when France, as well as the Danubian and Balkan countries of Hungary, Rumanii, Yugoslavia. Bulgaria and the rest are also allied with Hitler. It is all very well to claim that for many of these countries the alliance is a forced one—but that does not alter the fact that, to all intents and purposes, England is actually at war with all Europe. This fact, naturally, is not given any prominence in the press today, but it is one interesting for students of world affairs.

And it is of particular interest to Negroes the world over, and to students of African affairs. The European war has long since transferred much of its activity to African soil—it is, furthermore, an open secret that a new reshuffling of African colonies will be one of the major issues of whatever peace settlement is eventually made.

It is not at all unlikely that England will lose much of her former African territory. Already she is encountering increasing difficulties in persuading Africans under her control to go forth to war and murder for her sake—or at the sake of a white empire now threatened with disintegration. Just as the natives in Iraq refused to blindly follow British orders, so too are the Africans demanding a New Deal.

It is well konwn that for the past few years German agents, many under the guise of missionaries, have been at work in Africa, inciting the natives under British rule to rebellion. In return they have promised the African tribal chiefs that their lands and their rule will be returned to them once this current white war is over. The worth of these German promises is, naturally, highly problematical. It is a matter of record that German control of African colonies, before she lost them in the World War of twenty-five years ago, was one of appalling cruelty, harshness, and inhuman barbarism. It is too much to suppose that the German mind, in regard to the colored peoples, have changed since then. African leaders now siding with Hitler against Britain know that—but to a certain extent the have been taking a leaf from Stalin's book on modern war. They figure that, in the struggle for freedom, any ally is better than none. They hope that having driven out one set of white conquerors, the will be better equipped and better trained to drive out whatever white forces attempt to remain in leadership.

This became apparent in Ethiopia, where with British assistance Haile Selassie drove out Italians, and is now fast on the road to driving out the British forces who have attempted to remain as ''protectors''—a word beter known as meaning ''oppressors.''

One more bitter truth should be by now apparent to Britain as the war seeps deeper into territories of colored peoples. The aid and collaboration Britain expected in these places is either half-hearted or utterly lacking. The reason is clear. Britain was never a friend to the colored peoples of the world. Rather, the British Empire grew to power and might by the oppression and expliotation of colored races.

The oppressed people are now remembering it—to Britain's cost.

No Hatred Is Shown By Haile Selassie

Christ-Like Spirit Urged By Emperor

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON, (ANP)—It is, indeed, rather significant that only a few weeks ago I pointed out in these columns, the conspicuous act of humanitarism shown by the Abyssinian patriots in their policy of "render not evil for evil."

The emperor, upon his triumphal entry into Addis Ababa, fully outlined these Christian principals again.

He said: "Let us therefore rejoice, but in the spirit of Christ. Do not reward evil for evil. Do not indulge in the untimely atrocities which the enemy, even in these last days, has been accustomed to practise against us. Do not shame Ethiopia by acts worthy of our enemies. I shall see they are disarmed and given safe passage to the place from which they came."

The superlative excellence of this statement can be compared with any of the declarations made in the Sermon on the Mount.

In reading the admirable article of the London Times Addis Ababa correspondent, I was delighted to see that he mentioned the fact that the Italians were safe in the hands of the "tolerant" Ethiopians.

This point cannot be too greatly emphasized for throughout the whole of the Abbyssinian war, certain elements in England used as arguments against the application of sanctions to Italy, fabricated stories about the barbarity of the Abyssinians.

In spite of the appalling treatment meted out to the most patriotic Abyssiniians by the Italians conquerors, the patriot troops often fighting on their own and, un-influenced by the restraining hands of British officers have shown that they are fully capable of conforming to the etiquette of war as practised by the most chivalrous foes in European history.

The detailed account of the Times correspondent in Addis Ababa permeated by a spirit of obvious friendliness towards the Ethiopian people can but give pleasure to the millions of Negroes in the British colonies and the Western hemisphere. When Haile Selassie takes his seat once more in a future league of nations none can doubt the moral qualities of the Abyssinians. Qualities shared by all Negroes the world over and which fully justify Ethiopian rights to play their part in re-establishing of civilized standards of existence after the defeat of Hitlerism.

EMPEROR DEMANDS SEACOAST OUTLET

By Our Foreign Correspondent

LONDON—(Censored)—June 10—Big economic, political and social changes, constituting a veritable Social and Industrial Revolution, will be inaugurated at once throughout the length and breadth of Ethiopia.

The former system of Direct Rule, a sort of semi-feudal administration through rases and chiefs will be replaced by parliamentary government and direct representation of the people, declared the Emperor, outlining his plans for the country's failure.

MUST HAVE OUTLET TO THE SEA

Referring to Jibuti, which in peacetime is Abyssinia's only outlet to the sea and outside world, the Emperor has made this important declaration:

"If Jibuti is entirely in the hands of the Italians I hope Ethiopia will be able to get Jibuti. There is a treaty between Ethiopia and France that France will not accept to cede Jibuti to anyone except Ethiopia."

Commenting on African policy in general the Emperor has informed British representatives at Addis Ababa that: "I have already expressed my desire to collaborate with the British Government and people, and also wish to do the same wtih the British territories in Africa."

CONSTITUTION AND ADULT SUFFRAGE

The Emperor has also let it be known that he intends to open a democratic Parliament as soon as possible. He has already decided who will form his first Cabinet, the personnel of which will be announced shortly. When education is sufficiently advanced all women will be granted votes.

To prepare the people for these political reforms, the Emperor and his advisers are drawing up plans for both day and evening education as well as agricultural development and social welfare, for "unless these things are carried out in my country the independence of Ethiopia would be only nominal," he added.

OLD SOCIAL ORDER MUST GO

Addressing the Rases and other leading native dignitaries in the capital, the Emperor intimated that the old social system of tribal administration will have to be abolished, if Ethiopia is to take her place among the advanced nations of the world.

Ethiopians Murdered by Italian Police Officer

Telegrams from Addis Ababa reported that the first murder trial held there under British military jurisdiction had resulted in the conviction and death sentence on an Italian police lieutenant named Vengeruzo Clarizeo, whose crime was described as one of unspeakable brutality. On the night on which Imperial Forces entered Addis Ababa, Clarizeo was still commanding a posse of about 15 police which was patrolling the Ethiopian quarter. He found a crowd of Abyssinians in and around a bar at 7 o'clock, asked why they were not obeying the curfew, and then ordered the posse to open fire with a tommy-gun, killing seven Abyssinians and wounding 14. Clarizeo challenged British military jurisdiction in Addis Ababa on that date and also claimed that he was obeying orders, but brought no supporting evidence.

Messages from Johannesburg said that, acknowledging a message from Mr. Fadden, the Acting Prime Minister, on behalf of the Government and people of Australia, which expressed grateful appreciation of South Africa's most effective contribution to the successful operations in East Africa, General Smuts had replied that "our comradeship now being cemented in war will outlast this conflict and knit our peoples of the Commonwealth nations more firmly together than ever before."

May 16.—British G.H.Q., Cairo, and R.A.F. Headquarters, Middle East, announced :—

"In spite of continuous and heavy rain, further progress has been made in our advance on Amba Alagi. In the southern area the important pass of Shashamanna has been occupied and further prisoners have been taken.

The Resurrection Of Ethiopia

FIVE YEARS ago, the Kingdom of Ethiopia was betrayed by a community of States which, whilst it professed the crystallization of law and order in international society, yet it proceeded by its labyrinthine system of diplomacy to harpoon the existence of Ethiopia as a political entity in the family of nations.

By a series of treacherous acts, Italy violated the canons of world politics and invaded and subjugated the land of Ethiopia.

At Geneva, His Majesty Haile Selassie challenged the States of the world to remember that such words as "International Morality" formed part of man's existence as a political animal, in the interdependence and relations of States. But his appeal fell on deaf ears.

Then he made a prophecy, and ere he left the corridors of the League of Nations, at Geneva, that temple of political babels collapsed and within a few years, the very accusers, jurors and judges of this self-same Haile Selassie, with very few exceptions, drank the same potion which Ethiopia was forced to taste in order to lie at the proud feet of a conqueror.

Ethiopia died, in 1936, after its crucifixion.

But the Emperor, the Ethiopians, the Black World, and lovers of justice and freedom, all over the four corners of the earth, did not forget the infamy, the brutality, and the crucifixion of an innocent State.

The time of reckoning has come and lo, today, Ethiopia has risen from the dead !

True, Britain has helped to reconstitute Ethiopia as a State for which all Africans should be grateful; but I wished the London "Times" had written the following, five years earlier: "Britain has undergone a victorious campaign to liberate an African race from Italian tyranny and Africans everywhere have had their faith restored in Britain as the champion of justice for the African people."

However, it is better late than never !

OCT 28 1941

NEW YORK CITY—(SNS) — A five-month-old colored baby boy and a 12-year-old colored girl are among the 4,000 British children that the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children is caring for in England in its 34 children's projects, it was announced by Edna Blue, executive chairman. American headquarters of the Plan are at 55 West 42nd Street, New York City.

The children can be "financially adopted" through the Foster parents' Plan. Foster parents pay $15 per month for the support of the children. Case histories, and photographs are sent to foster parents.

The case histories of the children follow: "John is a war baby in the fullest sense. His father is in the army and his whereabouts are unknown. The mother has been unable to care for her three other children especially in wartime. She is a young colored woman, born in England. Her parents come from Jamaica.

"The child was brought to our Nursery where he is safe and well cared for. John is big and strong and remarkably clever for his age. He weighs more than 15 pounds, can sit up and makes a strong effort to talk.

The case history of Marie J. Stanley follows:

"Marie was born in Holland but has lived a good part of her life in Jamaica. She and her parents arrived in England just before the war started and were unable to return to their home.

"Her father was the colored leader of a dance orchestra, her mother had a coffee stall. Both now live in Birmingham, and are working in munitions factories.

"Their home was destroyed in an air raid recently. The Stanleys lost everything.

"Birmingham was unsafe, so the Stanleys asked that Marie be taken into the Foster Parents' Plan colony.

The Plan is trying to raise $1,000,000 to care for its projects. Eric G. Muggeridge, Plan executive secretary, is now in London, directing the work of the organization.

An International Committee composed of the Earl of Listowell, The Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Helen Hayes, Russell Maguire, are sponsoring the work of the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children.

Beat Hitler Now or Be Enslaved, Warns Negro Columnist

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 19.—A stirring appeal to Negroes to "forget everything except the contest in Russia" because a Hitler victory would mean serfdom for millions and "slavery and peonage for Negroes" has appeared in Arthur Huff Fauset's weekly column in the Philadelphia Tribune for Oct. 18th. Mr. Fauset is the principal of the Singerly-Douglass Public School here. His column is entitled "I Write As I See" and is reprinted here in full:

MORE OF THE WAR

There is nothing more important today on earth except the war, and by that I mean that if something is not done quickly to stop the Germans in Russia there will not be room on earth for some of us.

This may sound ridiculous, but if you will survey the history of the past few years you will see more truth than fiction in what I am saying. Nation after nation has fallen before the Nazi monsters. Did any of them dream a few years ago that the fate which is theirs today was destined for them?

One by one Hitler has plucked these nations and trampled them under his feet. Only Russia really saw what was up, and it is thanks to her mighty preparations in the past, plus the final touches which she was able to apply during the respite of the Soviet-German pact, that she has been able to wage such a magnificient battle against these hordes of the devil.

TO ARMS, AMERICA AND ENGLAND!

But Russia cannot do it alone. England and America must help and I insist they must fight. A second front must be opened up.

Why is the front so long forming? We hear talk of all kinds of difficulties. No ships. No available material. No extra forces. I think this is eyewash. But even if there are some grains of truth to the reasons ascribed, does it seem reasonable that America and England will be able to fight Germany more capably after the Nazis have gorged the Soviet Union, than now when the Reich has her hands more than full on the eastern front?

I fear the wiles of those who are advising caution at this point. When has England had such a chance during the entire war? Not until Russia entered on June 22.

BEWARE THE APPEASERS!

I fear the Lindbergh-Nye-Ford-Wheeler clique in America, the old appeaser group in England, the 60 families in our country who control the wealth of the nation, and their British cousins who control the wealth of Great Britain. These I strongly suspect are doing everything in their power to hold back the arms of America and England in order to assure the prostration of Soviet Russia, after which they plan some skull-duggery with Nazi Germany.

What will those plans imply? An attack on the Jews. The annihilation of all democratic freedom. Serfdom for untold millions of poor folk in all lands. Slavery and peonage for Negroes. These I see if Hitler is permitted to do in Russia what he has succeeded in doing in France, the low-lands of Europe, the Balkans and elsewhere.

The answer? Forget everything except the contest in Russia. Demand all-out aid to Russia. Demand that another front be opened immediately. Insist that America do anything at all—yes, even to entering the war, to defeat Hitler now and completely.

Do not wait. Do not hesitate. Do not argue. Either we beat Hitler in the next ten months, or many an American now living will wish he never had been born.

London Official Advises Segregation of Shelters

Last week while Hitler's bombers continued to raze London, Viscount Cranley, emerged from the comparative security of the steel and concrete shelter of his ancestral home, to make a tour of 30 of London's air raid shelters; report his findings in the London Sunday Times, and recommend the segregation of colored people seeking safety from the Blitzkrieg.

Declaring that he felt it was his duty to make a personal investigation, his Lordship said he found the mentality of the people "grave" and that the police, social workers and civil defense officials were anxious to have some one from the royal family "cut" the red tape and put his recommendations into effect.

Heading the list of things his Lordship found wrong during his underground trips, "was the staleness of the air, so foul smelling and hot that it was noticed 6 feet from the entrance on the open street. Many shelters were littered with dirt, and little hope of it being cleaned up."

Lack of water, light, toilet facilities, and the volume of noise in the crowded shelters—many of them having as many as 5,000 people—were other things that appalled his Lordship. He stated that "conditions might cause a very grave outbreak of disease at anytime. Tremendous lowering of the standards of public morality and a complete breakdown in national unity."

"Lavatories consist of a row of cubicles, every ten or so labeled 'men' or 'women'. The entrances are in full view of the public, some with tattered sacking the only screen. The interior consists of a bucket."

London's colored people are such a small fraction of the population that—except for the riots following the end of the last war when Englishmen sought to get rid of their loyal colored soldiers who had helped them to win it—they have never been a problem. They are so scattered about the vast besieged city, that it would be impossible to build separate compartments for them.

Many were born in England. They are the children of Africans, Indians, West Indians and natives of Britain's far flung Empire, drawn to the scene of the conflict by their loyalty. Many are students and seamen. The latter with their white wives and children would be forced to forego the little protection they might be able to afford their families in their time of greatest need.

Lord Cranley was reared and educated in the type of schools that fit the nobility for his Majesty's own life guards. They contributed many stalwarts to Sir. Oswald Moseley's Fascist outfit, and continue to slip through the Ministry of Information, the kind of matter calculated to alienate the loyalty of the Empire's colored subjects.

The lowering of the race and class barriers during Hitler's forays upon England, threatens the foundations upon which they maintained their noble positions.

The government thoroughly shocked by the situation, shunted the problem to Charles Key, a Labor member of Parliament, and announced that he had been made responsible for all London shelters.

First Negro Member Of RAF Is Nigerian

By NANCY CUNARD

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad—(ANP)—It is a Nigerian, from Britain's West African colony, who is the first African to be accepted for training as a pilot in the British Royal Air Force. His name is Babatunde O. Alakija, C.B.E., a nephew of the Alake of Abeokuta. He is already with his unit and wrote that he liked it. Was given a fine send-off from the famous Aggrey house in London, to which came many retired Nigerian government officials, including Lt. Colonel Cole, Major Hans Vischer, Lady Guggisberg and Lady Graeme Thomson.

Mr. Alakiji was for many years public schools high jump champion and all-around athlete. He is a relation of Oluwole Alakija whom I knew in London, and who contributed a fine essay on music to my anthology, 'Negro,' in 1933. This young man was then a student at Oxford; took his degree at law, married an English wife and went back to his native country, Nigeria with her.

Here the over-six foot son of My Marryshow famous Grenada newspaperman and race leader, is on the Brtish Air Force in training for pilot's certificate. I have talked with him twice, and a more pleasant and intelligent young man it would be difficult to meet. There are young men of color in training too at Piarco Air school. And five colored Trinidadians I met on the eve of their journey to England to enter the air force there.

EXCLUSIVE STORY SAYS ETHIOPIANS TAKE NO PRISONERS

JAN 18 1941 B-U-L-L-E-T-I-N-!

CHICAGO, Jan. 16—In a story written by William H. Stoneham, Chicago Daily News correspondent in London, the British are reported to have offered the Italians a chance to evacuate women and children and to send them to some port in Italy by way of Djibuti in French Somaliland.

Because of the brutal manner in which Italians murdered Ethiopian women and children in 1936, the British fear that the Ethiopians, once they got the upper hand, would massacre, not only Italian soldiers taken as prisoners, but Italian women and children who have migrated to that country as well.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Ethiopia may be the first country to be freed from the slavery of Axis domination. Emperor Haile Selassie, King of Kings and Lion of Judah will again rule over his people who have been independent since before the days of the Pharaohs. This was learned early this week by the Pittsburgh Courier from an authoritative East African expert just arrived in New York.

But behind this dramatic new development in Britain's total war against the Axis powers is probably the most sordid chapter in modern history...a tale of barbarism unequaled since the beginning of the Christian era.

ETHIOPIAN CAMPAIGN STARTED LAST AUGUST

While the fight for Ethiopia's freedom made headlines only this week, your correspondent learned that the campaign actually started to get under way last August. The Emperor arrived in Khartoum, capital of the British Sudan last September. But for months previously in both the Sudan and the Kenya Colony, British officers have been intensively training Ethiopian rebels in the use of hand grenades, modern rifles and machine guns. Field artillery instruction is also being given.

For several months British bombers have been attacking Addis Ababa, Dire Dawa and Harrar in Ethiopia; Asmara, capital of Eritrea, and Massua, and Italian Somaliland. High explosives have created such havoc in these Italian army centers that large numbers of troops were forced to evacuate to nearby hills.

From Massua across Ethiopia to Lake Rudolf, a reign of aerial terror has been spread by R.A.F. flyers. It is estimated that there are 250,000 Italian troops of various types in Ethiopia today.

EFFICIENT INTELLIGENCE NETWORK IS DEVELOPED

My informant explained that part of British strategy in the Lybian campaign was to immobilize all Italian aircraft in that region so as to cut off supplies to the Italian garrisons in Ethiopia. These supplies (including the spaghetti) were ferried at night in big Caproni bombers. So at this writing Mussolini is powerless to send help to his "unconquerable legions" in East Africa, by land, sea or air. Their present situation is practically hopeless.

In the meantime Emperor Haile Selassie, surrounded by trusted chieftains, who fought valiantly against overwhelming odds during the invasion of their country, has developed an efficient intelligence network in every town and village. Their methods of communication are nearly as fast as radio, but they are as ancient as Ethiopian civilization.

Fascist and military authorities were completely ignorant of what was going on under their noses, except that for reasons which they could not fathom, chiefs and warriors had a way of disappearing, never to be seen again. This confounded their masters.

Alarmed at this turn of events, in one Italian stronghold it was found that fifty elders and able-bodied young men had disappeared so an inquiry was held. In front of the assembled populace three young men were horse-whipped within an inch of their lives. But no one "knew" where the others had gone, or why!

ETHIOPIANS HAVE TAKEN NO PRISONERS TO DATE

Called by the Emperor and his generals to training stations scattered along the frontiers of the Sudan and Kenya, these Ethiopian rebels receive guns and instructions. Soon they return to join the bands of highly-organized marauders who are now preying on Italian garrisons in increasing numbers. They travel at night and are given food, comfort and information in every village they pass.

With a "direct line" to R.A.F. headquarters, these experts in guerilla warfare are quickly informed when there is going to be an air raid on an Italian outpost.

Silently they surround it to await the crash of bombs. Once the raid is over, the warriors rush the garrison during the confusion. They slaughter every soldier in the vicinity.

"The Ethiopians have taken no prisoners to date," my informant told me grimly.

After all arms and food have been removed, the garrison buildings are burned and any captive Ethiopians are freed to take their places in the ranks of the rebels.

Thousands of Italian farmers, honest peasants who were lured to "the land of milk and honey" by an intense propaganda campaign after Italy occupied the country, were forced to flee their farms in outlying districts by this state of affairs. All have been conscripted in the army. Except in a few major towns, all women and children have been evacuated to coastal towns in Italian Somaliland, where they live in constant fear of raids from both air and land.

UNSUCCESSFUL IN RAISING NATIVE ARMY

Contrary to popular belief, the Italian overlords did not occupy all of Ethiopia. At no time did they attempt to settle the Western Provinces of Galla, Wallaga, Gore or Gojan. These saw only isolated military patrols sent to maintain order. The Italians did, however, try to raise a native army, but were not successful. There were too many desertions. The "soldier" disappeared to the West. His rifle and equipment went with him.

My informant who witnessed the Italian "civilization" of Ethiopia in recent years, said that the Italian system of colonization must be seen to be believed.

Soon after the occupation of the country and the appointment of Marshal Badoglio as Viceroy, Italian patrols entered every house in each village where they literally tore young girls of ten to sixteen years from the family bosum.

YOUNG GIRLS RAPED BY MUSSOLINI'S "HEROES"

Thousands all over the occupied territory were herded into houses and huts, where they were held prisoners. By day and by night they were criminally assaulted by Mussolini's "conquering heroes."

After months of this debauchery it was discovered that hundreds of these innocent Ethiopian maidens were stricken with syphilis and other diseases. Instead of receiving medical attention they were promptly banished from the village and forbidden to return on pain of death. Many perished from cold and hunger. Others were picked up by their people who nursed them back to health with herbal drugs—prepared, as they have been for thousands of years—by native doctors.

"It is commonplace to see cripples—young and old—slowly making their way along streets and trails. In most cases they have been cruelly beaten by the heavy end of an Italian rifle for failing to give the fascist salute," I am told. "From the very beginning the Ethiopian people were treated as slaves by their Itailan overlords. Every day new laws were promulgated. It would have taken a Philadelphia lawyer to keep up with all of them. The native population has maintained passive resistance since the coming of the foreigner. They have been shot, mercilessly beaten or jailed for not obeying laws, the existence of which they were wholly ignorant."

MUSSOLINI'S DREAMS

Mussolini's dreams of the fabulous deposits of oil and gold which he expected to provide millions of dollars of foreign exchange for the purchase of imports never materialized. Instead Ethiopia has turned out to be the most costly

The Negro People's Stake in the War

• The statement of 28 Negro leaders in Washington (published in the last Sunday Worker) urging full aid to the Soviet Union and Great Britain is of enormous significance.

If there is any group that would know whether there's a people's stake in the war, it is the Negro people. For years they have struggled, with increasing support from labor and white progressives, for their full citizenship, their main enemies being the forces of fascism and Hitlerism at home. The Negro people can be found among the first to recognize the changed character of the European conflict since the invasion of the Soviet Union, and will see the world-wide dangers inherent in Hitler's attack upon the stronghold of racial equality and freedom. Says the statement:

"It is therefore of vital concern to the Negro people that Hitler be destroyed and that they should give complete support to the President's anounced program of aid to Britain, the Soviet Union and all other countries fighting Hitler aggression."

The statesmanlike view of these leaders re-emphasizes that the struggle against Nazism abroad requires an unrelenting effort to stamp out its vestiges at home.

"The Negro people are convinced that a successful struggle against Hitlerism calls for an effective execution of the President's recent executive order to abolish racial discrimination in defense industry. It is the candid opinion of the Negro people that the most effective way to maintain and extend democracy in America is by abolishing Jim Crowism, by passage of the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax bills and all legislation protecting the rights of labor," the statement continued.

These labor, civic and religious leaders have expressed the interests and the undoubted sentiments of the Negro masses. One can see here how the war of the Soviet and British peoples is being tranformed into a people's war against fascism, with the peoples of Europe and America recognizing that their own advance is bound up with the military destruction of Nazi aggression.

West African Seaman Saves Ship From Nazi Plane Attack

JAN 4 - 1941

LONDON, England, Jan. 2.—(Censored)—The world has heard of the heroism and gallant seamanship of the armed merchant cruiser, Jervis Bay, which went down with flag flying, fighting to defend a British convoy against a German raider in the Atlantic. But how many have heard of George Taylor, the African seaman who took part in that gallant action?

Well, here is the story of a Negro that must be told.

STEERED BLAZING SHIP SAFELY TO PORT

With a bullet wound in one eye and half blinded in the other, Taylor, a native of Freetown, Sierra Leone, a British colony on the West Coast of Africa, saved a ship and valuable cargo when attacked and set ablaze by an enemy bomber in the Atlantic.

Taylor, despite his wounds stuck to the wheel of the bridge, obeying his captain's orders, as the damaged ship did her best to elude the raider.

Taylor, one bright brown eye peering from a bandaged head, told reporters when interviewed that was what he had done.

"Captain Thomas, my skipper, was great," the African said. "He did everything for the ship and his crew any man could have done. If I go back with one eye I'd like to sail with him again.

DECKS AFLAME

Taylor told how the ship fought until her gun was out of action and her decks were in flames.

"We were being tumbled about in the seas left by heavy storms, and congratulating ourselves that we had passed the worst of the weather when four explosions rocked our ship.

"I've often wondered what a stick of bomb was. Now I know. Only two hit the ship; one on the hatch and the other in the after well deck. The main mast was ripped out of the deck and fell overboard on a tangle of wire shreds and stays.

"It was my trick at the wheel, and I was flung across the wheelhouse by the lurching of the ship. Captain Thomas shouted from the chart-room 'Hard a-port!' and I got back to the wheel and whirled it round. It was then that I saw the plane.

"It was diving straight at us. When I saw splinters flying I ducked behind the bridge front. For an hour we dodged as the plane came tearing down to us with its machine guns rattling."

It was at this point that George Taylor stopped a bullet and became a hero. Crouching on the deck clutching the spokes with one hand and with his brain just able to interpret his captain's orders, the African carried on for another hour. By that time the whole ship was ablaze and orders were given to abandon her.

"We had one life-boat and a dinghy left," Taylor said. "Every one got into the boat except the captain, the chief engineer, his second mate, two radio men, the cabin boy and myself. As the boat was being lowered the plane came for it with its guns hammering and then made off. After the boat had got away, the captain inspected the damage and decided the ship could still be saved. And with signal lamps recalled the boat. The fires were put out and a warship which had picked up an S.O.S. before the radio was destroyed, came to the rescue."

Selassie's Ethiopian Revolt Seems Likely To Be Successful

FEB 2 1941

(Editor'e Note: Ex-Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has returned to his former kingdom and is now leading an offensive to regain his throne from the Italian conquerors. In the following article Mark Barron, who accompanied first the Ethiopian and later the Italian armies as a war correspondent for the Associated Press when the Fascists conquered this historic African kingdom, tells of the situation Selassie faces in reorganizing his army to revolt against Mussolini's legions.

By MARK BARRON
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Through the eerie mountain fastnesses of Ethiopia today Haile Selassie, deposed emperor, is marching to reclaim from his Italian conquerors the kingdom that the Queen of Sheba unwittingly began centuries ago when she rode off on a mule for a romantic rendezvous with King Solomon.

Somewhere in his former kingdom most likely in the valley of the Blue Nile on the route to Lake Tana, the Negus has landed and raised again his royal standard of red, yellow and green colors. And with British officers and Moorish troops he is rallying his loyal subjects to rebel against their Fascist rulers.

So while the two other sections of his Italian legions are daily being pushed into full flight across the sands of Libya and hills of Albania, Premier Mussolini is also facing the reality that his troops in Ethiopia, estimated to be about 100,000, are virtually a "lost battalion."

If Selassie, with British aid, can rewin his kingdom from the Fascists it portends to be an even more terrific blow to the prestige of Mussolini and his colonial aspirations than his setbacks in both Libya and Albania.

For the many races of both Africa and Asia, whether they be black or brown and whether they be Christian or Moslem, are extremely, almost fanatically religious.

"Loss of face" is the most serious of all sins to them.

Mussolini, duce of a Christian country, has proclaimed himself as "Protector of Islam," therefore a high chief of Moslems.

A Double Menace

Ethiopia is the melting pot of the Moslem and Christian worlds, although the coptic Christian has been the state church since the fourth century. There are about as many Moslems in Ethiopia as there are coptic Christians and if Mussolini should meet defeat and "lose face" there it may mean an almost irreparable loss of prestige in all the strange lands of Africa and Asia where Il Duce had hoped to increase his colonial holdings in future years.

The blockaded Suez Canal and the British Mediterranean fleet make it impossible to send the Italian forces in Ethiopia seaborne supplies or bolster their ranks with additional troops.

Selassie went back into Ethiopia from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan so he obviously must be beginning his offensive from the Lake Tana area where the Gojjam tribes have long been famed as the most ferocious of his warriors.

Selassie, heir to the first King Menelik, who was the first born of the Queen of Sheba and Solomon, still has a few of his former military commanders left alive. The Italians have acknowledged that several of them have been leading revolts since Addis Ababa was captured in May, 1936.

With Selassie now is Ras Kassa, who was one of the leading commanders of Ethiopian divisions against the invading Fascists. Ras Kassa, an energetic man, is successor as minister of war to the renowned Ras Mulegheta, who was killed on the field of battle when the Ethiopians almost turned back Marshal De Bono's Italian troops on the northern front in 1935.

Ras Kassa is an enthusiastic horseman and he and Ras Seyoum used to stage horse races for Selassie's enjoyment on the meadows outside Addis Ababa.

Frenquently Ras Kassa got so excited over the races that he would run onto the field, pull a diminutive jockey off his mount and ride the horse himself.

He would always win for the other riders pulled up their mounts, not daring to beat a rider with the rank of prince.

Another Able Leader

Aside from Ras Mulegheta, the Ethiopians also lost another able leader in Ras Desta Demtu, who married Selassie's daughter when she was only eleven years old.

Ras Desta, who was commander-in-chief of the Ethiopian armies on the southern front, was ordered executed by Marshall Rodolfo Graziani, first Italian viceroy of Ethiopia and now commanding the retreating Fascists in Libya. Ras Desta, an able military leader, was widely traveled and visited the United States on a diplomatic mission in 1933.

Two of Selassie's commanders who, however, are apparently still alive and possibly organizing the rebelling Ethiopians are Sultan Olol ("Loud Mouth") Dinle and Hohammed Tarik. The latter has no court title because he is a jungle warrior of humble family, but he won military fame as an officer in the Turkish army during the World War.

Sultan Olol, who had acquired a taste for champagne and barroom paintings when he visited New York as aide to Ras Desta, was in "protective custody" of the Italians for a time but recent dispatches said that he was back in action with the Sidamo and Borano tribes he ruled in southern Ethiopia.

The Sidamo and Borano warriors live on fertile plateaus leading to the great Lakes region just north of the Kenya border and from there they face a comparatively clear path to make a lightning offensive against Addis Ababa. With help from the British forces in Kenya they are already launching attacks along this line as well as a second offensive from Moyala, Kenya into Italian Somaliland.

British Lend Extensive Aid

Selassie's new offensive to regain his throne is being given all aid by British forces in an attempt to collapse the Italian defenses as quickly as possible. For time is a most important element in war in this country whose people were thus described by Homer, the Greek poet:

"The Ethiopians are furtherest from mankind; the gods go to their banquets and the sun sets in their country."

The dry "baga" season, which begins in October ends in mid-June and when the rainy "karamt" season begins it is impossible for any army to move.

And if the rebellion of the natives spreads to a large extent Mussolini's commanders also face a grave danger from within their own ranks for a considerable number of the troops on the Italian side are askaris and dubats, who are native mercenaries and are very prone to desert to the other side if their pay isn't forthcoming regularly.

In fact, they also have a tendency to desert on the day after a pay day.

War, to them, is strictly a cash business.

So Selassie, the quiet little king of kings and lion of Judah, may yet walk again between the two huge elephant ivories that flank the entrance to the dining room of the royal palace in Addis Ababa, seat himself in his expansive blue morroco leather chair and drink in peace that sour white wine he likes so well.

JAN 4 - 1941

LONDON, England, Jan. 2.—(Censored)—The world has heard of the heroism and gallant seamanship of the armed merchant cruiser, Jervis Bay, which went down with flag flying, fighting to defend a British convoy against a German raider in the Atlantic. But how many have heard of George Taylor, the African seaman who took part in that gallant action? Well, here is the story of a Negro that must be told.

STEERED BLAZING SHIP SAFELY TO PORT

With a bullet wound in one eye and half blinded in the other, Taylor, a native of Freetown, Sierra Leone, a British colony on the West Coast of Africa, saved a ship and valuable cargo when attacked and set ablaze by an enemy bomber in the Atlantic.

Taylor, despite his wounds stuck to the wheel of the bridge, obeying his captain's orders, as the damaged ship did her best to elude the raider.

Taylor, one bright brown eye peering from a bandaged head, told reporters when interviewed that was what he had done.

"Captain Thomas, my skipper, was great," the African said. "He did everything for the ship and his crew any man could have done. If I go back with one eye I'd like to sail with him again.

DECKS AFLAME

Taylor told how the ship fought until her gun was out of action and her decks were in flames.

"We were being tumbled about in the seas left by heavy storms, and congratulating ourselves that we had passed the worst of the weather when four explosions rocked our ship.

"I've often wondered what a stick of bomb was. Now I know. Only two hit the ship; one on the hatch and the other in the after well deck. The main mast was ripped out of the deck and fell overboard on a tangle of wire shreds and stays.

"It was my trick at the wheel, and I was flung across the wheelhouse by the lurching of the ship. Captain Thomas shouted from the chart-room 'Hard a-port!' and I got back to the wheel and whirled it round. It was then that I saw the plane.

"It was diving straight at us. When I saw splinters flying I ducked behind the bridge front. For an hour we dodged as the plane came tearing down to us with its machine guns rattling."

It was at this point that George Taylor stopped a bullet and became a hero. Crouching on the deck clutching the spokes with one hand and with his brain just able to interpret his captain's orders, the African carried on for another hour. By that time the whole ship was ablaze and orders were given to abandon her.

"We had one life-boat and a dinghy left," Taylor said. "Every one got into the boat except the captain, the chief engineer, his second mate, two radio men, the cabin boy and myself. As the boat was being lowered the plane came for it with its guns hammering and then made off. After the boat had got away, the captain inspected the damage and decided the ship could still be saved. And with signal lamps recalled the boat. The fires were put out and a warship which had picked up an S.O.S. before the radio was destroyed, came to the rescue."

Selassie's Ethiopian Revolt Seems Likely To Be Successful

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Through the eerie mountain fastnesses of Ethiopia today Haile Selassie, deposed emperor, is marching to reclaim from his Italian conquerors the kingdom that the Queen of Sheba unwittingly began centuries ago when she rode off on a mule for a romantic rendezvous with King Solomon.

Somewhere in his former kingdom most likely in the valley of the Blue Nile on the route to Lake Tana, the Negus has landed and raised again his royal standard of red, yellow and green colors. And with British officers and Moorish troops he is rallying his loyal subjects to rebel against their Fascist rulers.

So while the two other sections of his Italian legions are daily being pushed into full flight across the sands of Libya and hills of Albania, Premier Mussolini is also facing the reality that his troops in Ethiopia, estimated to be about 100,000, are virtually a "lost battalion."

If Selassie, with British aid, can regain his kingdom from the Fascists it portends to be an even more terrific blow to the prestige of Mussolini and his colonial aspirations than his setbacks in both Libya and Albania.

For the many races of both Africa and Asia, whether they be black or brown and whether they be Christian or Moslem, are extremely, almost fanatically religious.

"Loss of face" is the most serious of all sins to them.

Mussolini, duce of a Christian country, has proclaimed himself as "Protector of Islam," therefore a high chief of Moslems.

A Double Menace

Ethiopia is the melting pot of the Moslem and Christian worlds, although the coptic Christian has been the state church since the fourth century. There are about as many Moslems in Ethiopia as there are coptic Christians and if Mussolini should meet defeat and "lose face" there it may mean an almost irreparable loss of prestige in all the strange lands of Africa and Asia where Il Duce had hoped to increase his colonial holdings in future years.

The blockaded Suez Canal and the British Mediterranean fleet make it impossible to send the Italian forces in Ethiopia seaborne supplies or bolster their ranks with additional troops.

Selassie went back into Ethiopia from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan so he obviously must be beginning his offensive from the Lake Tana area where the Gojjam tribes have long been famed as the most ferocious of his warriors.

Selassie, heir to the first King Menelik, who was the first born of the Queen of Sheba and Solomon, still has a few of his former military commanders left alive. The Italians have acknowledged that several of them have been leading revolts since Addis Ababa was captured in May, 1936.

With Selassie now is Ras Kassa, who was one of the leading commanders of Ethiopian divisions against the invading Fascists. Ras Kassa, an energetic man, is successor as minister of war to the renowned Ras Mulegheta, who was killed on the field of battle when the Ethiopians almost turned back Marshal De Bono's Italian troops on the northern front in 1935.

Ras Kassa is an enthusiastic horseman and he and Ras Seyoum used to stage horse races for Selassie's enjoyment on the meadows outside Addis Ababa.

Frenquently Ras Kassa got so excited over the races that he would run onto the field, pull a diminutive jockey off his mount and ride the horse himself.

He would always win for the other riders pulled up their mounts, not daring to beat a rider with the rank of prince.

Another Able Leader

Aside from Ras Mulegheta, the Ethiopians also lost another able leader in Ras Desta Demtu, who married Selassie's daughter when she was only eleven years old.

Ras Desta, who was commander-in-chief of the Ethiopian armies on the southern front, was ordered executed by Marshall Rodolfo Graziani, first Italian viceroy of Ethiopia and now commanding the retreating Fascists in Libya. Ras Desta, an able military leader, was widely traveled and visited the United States on a diplomatic mission in 1933.

Two of Selassie's commanders who, however, are apparently still alive and possibly organizing the rebelling Ethiopians are Sultan Olol ("Loud Mouth") Dinle and Hohammed Tarik. The latter has no court title because he is a jungle warrior of humble family, but he won military fame as an officer in the Turkish army during the World War.

HARLEMITES FORM UNIT TO OPPOSE GETTING INTO WAR

Group Is Headed By George S. Schuyler, Noted Newspaper Columnist

NEW YORK, N. Y.—March 13—Charging that the Lend-Lease Bill means war and that war is against the interests of he Negroes of the United States, representative residents of Harlem have organized a Negroes Against War Committee, with George S. Schuyler as Chairman.

The Committee contends that concentration on war production, from which Negroes are largely barred, will lessen New Deal appropriations for relief and relief work from which Negroes have benefitted. It holds that it is criminal to give billions of dollars of American wealth to Britain while millions of Negroes are living in poverty. It calls England the Mother of Race Prejudice.

Mr. Schuyler, who is on the staff of The Pittsburgh Courier and The Crisis magazine, called upon Negroes, in his first statement following his appointment, to write to their U. S. Senators and Representatives in Washington, urging them to vote "No" on the Lend-Lease Bill, H. R. 1776.

"While this committee favors adequate defense for the United States," he said, "we are unalterably opposed to sending Negro soldiers either to Europe or Asia to help defend the ill-gotten gains of the British plutocracy. This British oligarchy, which has grown rich off the exploitation of colonial peoples, has done more than any other group to further race prejudice. I cannot see how any Negro of intelligence can be in favor of a law which would aid England."

Reveals Why Nazis Killed Senegalese

By NANCY CUNARD

HAVANA—(A N P)—A Cuban who arrived here three weeks ago from France told me the following interesting fact concerning the Senegalese troops at the time of the German invasion of France; according to him the killing of large numbers was due to this very incident. As far as is known this has never been reported in the press. He said:

"The Senegalese became more and more annoyed at the orders given them to retreat; they were almost unanimous in wanting to continue to fight the advancing Germans, but French officers commanded falling back to new positions until they came to Fontainbleau (this was about the middle of June, 1940).

"Here the Senegalese decided to disobey any such further orders and concerted themselves in a part of the huge forest there. They lay in ambush for the Germans Soon after, the German troops arrived, and while their officers made their billets for the night in the town, various German soldiers camped out in the forest. In the darkness Senegalese soldiers slid down from the trees where they had lain in wait and cut the throats of about 180 Nazi soldiers so that when the officers came the next morning many dead bodies met their astounded eyes. After that the order was given "Take no Senegalese prisoners; shoot them at sight".

This, according to my informant, was the reason for the mass killings which took place during the German advance. Later this measure was stopped.

In Paris, continued this Cuban who, as a naturalized Frenchman fought in the French army and who wants to get to General de Gaulle's forces, orders have been given by the Nazis that a number of night establishments should stay open. One of them is the "Cabane Cubaine" in Montmartre; in it is still the colored Cuban musician, Senor Barreto (brother of the famous pianist who s working in London) All of life, including the reduced "night life by order" is devoid of any kind of liberty; gloom pervades Paris, and there is hardly any difference between occupied and un-occupied France.

African Unions Send Aid To USSR

Scientists, Journalists, Churches Back Campaign

(By Wireless to Inter-Continent News)

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 30. — The whole of Africa is swept by a movement of active support for the Soviet Union in its great struggle against Hitler Germany.

The trade union movement has issued an official appeal to members and friends to send money for medical aid. Two needle trades unions each contributed 1,000 pounds sterling. Other trade unions have contributed considerable sums.

SCIENTISTS ACTIVE

In Pretoria, prominent scientists, journalists and ministers appealed at a mass meeting for aid to the Soviet Union.

The mayor of Pretoria, who took part in the meeting, declared: "The Soviet Union is the greatest ally we could ever have hoped to have. We are absolutely confident of the ability of the Soviet people to repulse the Nazi hordes."

The press here in general estimates highly the heroism of the Red Army, and is full of admiration for the courage and might of the Soviet Union.

1,250,000 Americans Will Be Examined For Conscription

WASHINGTON, May 28 —President F. D. Roosevelt, last Monday, fixed July 1 as the date for medical examination with the purpose of conscription of all men in the United States, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Alaska, who have completed their 21 years of age after October 16, 1940, which was the first and last previous day for compulsory medical examination.

It is estimated that 1,250,000 young Americans will be concerned in this second medical examination.

The order for the examination concerns all male residents in the territories mentioned above, regardless of whether or not they are United States citizens.

The coming examination was described by the President as "Necessary in the interest of national defence."

Negro In RAF Speaks To Mother In United States

PHILADELPHIA—(A N P)—A Colored youth who could not get in the U. S. Air Corps and had to be satisfied with NYA, spoke to his mother over the radio from "somewhere in England," two Sundays ago, while Mrs. Lula C. Gilmore, the mother, beamed and thanked God that he was still alive.

Gentry Gilmore is the youth's name and two years ago, after working in an NYA airplane modelling class, he tried to enlist in the army, but no Negro volunteers were wanted then. He tried the air corps, and of course, was ignored. Then he went to Canada and was immediately accepted.

For months now he has been "somewhere in England," and seemingly doing well.

"Hello mother," he said over the radio. "Everything is going all right. I admit that this is dangerous work, but it will help me to return to you a much better son. For your sake I hope I am rendering a very useful service....."

To this, the British announcer replied: "You certainly are, Brother Gilmore."

Gilmore said he was recently promoted to a higher unit in the RAF and that he wouldn't exchange his uniform for anything.

The mother did not know of the broadcast until she received a radiogram from the British Broadcasting company on the same day, asking her to listen in.

ENGLAND'S INDIAN ARMY

Although the British Empire includes one-fourth of the earth's population, its army has heretofore been small and largely white because of fear that, if armed, the 400 million colored subjects might revolt.

With the coming of the battle against Nazi aggression, however, Britain has been dipping into India's teeming population for cannon fodder, and there are now nearly a million Indians in John Bull's uniform.

A. C. Sedgwick, NEW YORK TIMES correspondent writing from Iran, reflects the prevailing British attitude toward these troops on which the Empire depends. Says he:

"The chief value of Indian troops, in any comparison with first-class European armies, is in their endurance and their ability to thrive on the SIMPLEST FARE,

Negro Mother, Child, Rescued From Nazis

Were Taken Off S. S. Zam Zam When Torpedoed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (UP).—American diplomatic efforts have succeeded in rescuing an American mother and child from a German prison camp, it was learned today.

Mrs. Thomas O. Johnson and her 14-year-old daughter, Julia, Negroes, were abroad the Egyptian steamer Zam Zam when it was sunk by a German raider on April 17.

Together with Mrs. Johnson's husband, whose nationality has not been determined, they were imprisoned in Germany and it was only after protracted diplomatic efforts that citizenship was established and their release effected. They are now in Berlin and have been issued American passports.

The records do not show Mrs. Johnson's birthplace but the daughter was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., April 19, 1927. The husband and father presumably still is in a German prison.

The State Department has been unable to ascertain the whereabouts or fate of two other Americans who were wounded in the Zam Zam sinking.

The German Embassy here has notified the department that the German government has been unable to trace Francis J. Vicvary of New York and Ned Laughinghouse of Wilson, N. C.

They were taken aboard the German raider Tamesis. The report by the German authorities that they had been unable to trace the two Americans might indicate that the raider has not reported to any German base since the Zam Zam sinking.

GOLD COAST

Warrior's Son

The natives of West Africa's Gold Coast love the cinema. Especially do they love films with an African setting in which big Paul Robeson is supported by a small black cherub named Bob Papafio. The son of Big Papafio, an itinerant pugilist who fought himself out in England, Bob was discovered by Actor Robeson and given his first part in Sanders of the River. But Bob Papafio will make no more films for a while. Last week TIME's resident correspondent in Liberia, Henry B. Cole, told why.

"When the Germans started the blitz in London," reported Correspondent Cole, "a bomb went through the roof and hit Mrs. Papafio (of Indian descent) as the family sat in their tiny suburban villa. When Big Papafio went to the rescue, his wife was stiff dead. And what was worse, some gas went into Big Papafio's eyes and made him blind.

"Young Bob coaxingly assisted his blind father and 13-year-old sister to pack their bag & baggage, got a berth on a West African ship and sailed down to the Gold Coast. Last week blind Papafio went on the miue (Government Station ZOY) to tell his three and a half million countrymen how the blitz was going on in England.

"He belged finally: 'My countrymen, I urge you to hold on steadfastly until victory is achieved. Britain shall win!'

"With him he brought splinters of the bombs which killed his wife and wrecked his home.

A writer for the Associated Negro Press recently called attention to the controversy raging over the white publication "Nazi Plan for Negroes."

This writer calls the Nazi Plan "just a copy of England's and urges that there is discrimination existing on a large scale in the British Empre's colonial possessions."

The article is as follows:

"Much ado is being raised over the reprint of an article in a well known white publication, regarding the 'Nazi Plan for Negroes.'

"In discussing this pamphlet with well known educators in Washington, they ask: 'what could be worse than the treatment accorded the Negroes by the British Empire?'

"Relating stories of the cruelties perpetrated on the natives of South Africa, it is related that they are not permitted to walk on the streets of certain large cities; they must stay n the native quarters, and if they are ound on the streets without a pass after certan hours, they are locked up; they are not permitted to own land, and, in general, they are given a thorough 'gong over.'

"When confronted with these crimes against the Negroes in South Africa, Britons say that the South African possessions enjoy the status of dominions and parliament dares not interfere in the rights and laws of the dominions.

"The same condition prevails in Austrailia, where Negroes are denied entry into the country.

"Moving up to Uganda, a new book recently published in England says that the natives in the East coast are not permitted to own land in the city limits; they are not permitted to raise coffee, and they are pretty generally confined and restricted to one class of work.

"These possessions are not dominions, and do not enjoy the status of dominions. They are crown colonies, and, as such, are directly subject to the government and laws imposed by England itself.

"The determination of the British to keep the natives subjugated in a condition just short of slavery, say these savants, is little short of cruelty, and that Hitler plan as outlined in these pamphlets cannot be much worse than practices now already in force."

Rogers Says:-

APR 26 1941

BY J. A. ROGERS

NEGROES IN FRANCE HELD ALL KINDS OF JOBS FROM ARMY GENERALS TO CAR CONDUCTORS

FROM TIME TO TIME I meet Negroes who hope for a German victory. Their idea, I suppose, is that if a man is robbing you retail, the way to stop it is to fall into the clutches of another man who has openly announced that if ever he gets the chance, he is going to rob you wholesale.

Between 1925 and 1937, I spent the greater part of the time in Europe, visiting most of the countries there. From Norway to Italy and from Holland to Russia, a Negro, no matter how dark, could stop in any hotel and eat in any restaurants. He didn't have to inquire whether Negroes were served there. It was true that work of any kind was most difficult to get, even for the natives, and Negroes who weren't musicians, could get almost none.

Mr. Rogers

ONLY JIM CROWED ONCE

IN FRANCE, foreigner, white or black, were much restricted in the matter of work, white Americans and black Americans alike. But if you were French your chances were much better. I saw Negroes, some of them coal-black, in all kinds of work from members of the cabinet, full generals in the army in command of white men, professors in colleges, to conductors and motormen on the subway. I saw even Negro women conductors on the subway. I met and talked with hundreds of these people. The hundreds of American Negro tourists I met in France will, I am sure, bear me out about the general lack of color discrimination in France.

DURING all the years I spent in Paris. I was discriminated against only once, and that was in a place run by Americans to which I had been invited. In Germany, Holland, Italy, Belgium, everywhere, I saw an almost total absence of color prejudice. England was the only exception, and even there it was except in the matter of work, very much less than in America.

HITLER CHANGED THINGS

NOW all is changed on the continent. And by one man, the very man that some Negroes are expecting to come as their deliverer—Hitler.

No sooner had Hitlre entered Paris than the jim crow signs went up. You may blame the French for that. I don't. I saw American Negroes running jim crow places in Paris and they weren't under military duress. There were two or three restaurants in Paris run by Negroes and catering to white Americans where Negroes weren't wanted. And as for such jim crow places in America, I could name them by score. Once in a barber shop in Boston, Mass., the proprietor refused to shave me, saying that he served only white people. In Atlanta there is a barber shop, the best in the town, owned and run by Negroes and a Negro has about as much chance of getting served there as he has of walking into Hitler's palace and having Hitler invite him to stay to dinner. During the night club era, Harlem had several spots, like the Cotton Club, Barron Wilkins. and the Cubanacan, where if a Negro entered he had to fight his way in.

RACE POGROMS TO AFFECT AMERICA

I DO NOT say that the French had any particular love for Negroes. They were individualists and had no great love even for themselves. I didn't expect them to gush over in love on my shoulders, when Negroes do not do it to one another. But the French had a spirit of individual liberty and democracy, the greatest I have seen and beside which the democracy in America is sheer mockery.

Does anyone think that the Nazi suppression of Negro liberty in France, even if you say it could have been better, will not have its repercussions in America, where color prejudice is already so strong? Will not the great anti-Negro element in America be only too glad to join hands with Nazi Negro-haters in Europe?

America is heading towards Fascism. If her aid to Britain fails, the labor unions are going to get full blame for it. With the army and navy in the power of the government, the unions are going to be suppressed. The unions were very strong in Germany and Italy but they went down, It can happen here.

I have no keen love for the democracies, especially for their activities in Africa. But I deal in realities and I never permit my bile to run my common sense. Judging by the samples we have had, I feel it will be just too bad for black men in a Nazi-dominated world.

ETHIOPIA

Home Is the Negus

MAY 12 1941

The steaming city of Addis Ababa last week prepared to welcome home its conquering Lion of Judah, Emperor Haile Selassie, King of Kings, who was ousted from his throne by the Italians five years ago last week. Houses were decorated with the national colors (green, yellow & red) and native artists were busy painting pictures of the Negus as St. George slaying an Italian dragon with help from the British Army. Togaed Ethiopians massed in the main square and cheered as a radio announcer read out the names of the first 250 Italians to be sent to internment camps, while some 10,000 Italians moved into ghettos to await internment or deliverance.

In a dim, wind-swept palace on a hilltop outside Addis Ababa the Emperor received a New York Herald Tribune correspondent, bulky Hiram Blauvelt, and delivered himself of an interview. The Negus said he was grateful to the British for getting him back his throne; that he was grateful to the U.S. for the help sent in his country's time of distress; that he was glad Ethiopia was joining Britain and the U.S. as one of the world's free countries; that he was still a member of the American Museum of Natural History.

Correspondent Blauvelt duly noted this intelligence and backed out of the presence, inadvertently stepping on the tail of the Emperor's favorite dog, which let out a series of piercing yelps. Next morning the King of Kings mounted a twelve-foot dais and appointed three generals in his Army. His son, Crown Prince Asfa Wassan, he appointed a lieutenant general. His son, the Duke of Harar, he appointed a major general. The son of his second cousin, Chieftain Ras Kassa, he appointed a brigadier general. The two sons each got a kiss on each cheek for good measure.

At week's end, however, the Negus had still not made his triumphal re-entry into Addis Ababa.

The Truth Might Make Them Free

While propaganda is a powerful modern weapon and a great moral courage dispenser, it is like a two-edged sword in some instances,—cuts both ways. While press reports deal extensively with havoc being played on the British, there is always an accompanying report neutralizing the damage and the grave peril now staring the British people and the world in the face.

Encouraging news only is sent out, probably to keep up a high tension of morale among the English people—but this serves as a great menace to the help that might be forthcoming from the American people.

These glittering reports of victory serve the purpose of the isolationists and those who do not desire to help Britain. So the British are caught between the jam of trying to keep the courage and confidence of their people and seeking the aid of the American people on a broader scale at the same time. To give out the proper information sufficient to stir the American people might in the end puncture the morale of the English people.

On the other hand President Roosevelt is also caught between the jam of his promises made in a bid for a third term. The President declared in stirring tones that he would not send the soldiers of this country again to fight on foreign soil and we would not attack until we were attacked. This was covering a large territory and we have often thought that a third term was not worth this much. It set out to the enemy o say when and upon what occasion we would strike to help a friendly nation.

In his fireside chats the President hasn't been able to unify the American sentiment to the extent of countering the pre-campaign promises. It might be said that an attempt to take charge of the high seas amounts to an attack, but those around the President realize fully that such an assumption is tricky and risky politics.

In another school it is thought a waste of time to try to fireside chat and educate the people into a realization of the grave danger the President speaks of. War is not a reasoning factor by any means. it is rather an emotional function and the people must be lifted from their reasoning and analytical senses and thrown into a maelstrom of emotion — say by the sinking of a few American ships and the killing of a few hundred of American sailors. We then could jump away from the comfortable quarters of our radios and fine phrased fireside chats and spring our guns—remembering something, such as we remembered the Alamo, Goliad, the Maine and other immortal citadels hanging high on the principles of ancient history.

Break Down Those Walls—Negro Housing Is Defense

By Eugene Gordon

Photos from the Polish city of Warsaw show a street blocked off by a high stone wall. A caption says the wall was put there by the Nazis to separate the Jewish from the "Aryan" section. It says that beyond the wall lies the ghetto. Everybody who lives beyond that wall is condemned, by fascist "philosophy" backed by fascist brutality, to the eternal disgrace of walking within the pale.

But we have here another picture. This one comes from Detroit, Mich., United States of America, where it is not Hitler's shadow which blacks out the sunlight; where, indeed, Hitlerism is despised by 99 per cent of the people. There is, nevertheless, a shadow. This picture is quoted from a Negro newspaper, the Michigan "Chronicle." The "Chronicle" says that a "solid" concrete wall half a mile long is under construction "on the edge of the Negro community" on Eight Mile Road. This concrete wall, the newspaper charges, is designed to separate Negro and white residents of that area.

Quoting directly from the Chronicle:

"The accusation that a Negro ghetto, walling in the Negroes, was being built, was precipitated by the controversy over Negro housing in Detroit. Residents of Conant Gardens opposed the plan to build defense homes for Negro workers in their area and the Eight Mile Road area was brought to the [Detroit Housing] commission's attention as an adequate site.

"The wall on Eight Mile Road at Birchwood Ave. belongs to James T. McMillan, who owns the Blackstone Park subdivision which borders the Negro community. . . . The Rev. Horace A. White called the procedure 'sociologically disgraceful in these times of strain to unify the people of the United States.'"

The Rev. Horace A. White is correct in referring to the concrete-wall idea as "sociologically disgraceful." There have been walls, however, around Negro communities for generations. The only new development here is that the wall now is of tangible concrete. The wall around the Negro community of Harlem could hardly be higher, deeper and thicker if it were of concrete, stone and steel, instead, as it is, of being made simply of greed, hatred and prejudice welded together by a common understanding among landlords and their agents to keep Negroes "in their place."

That wall, too is "sociologically disgraceful;" but intangible, invisible walls like this have so long hemmed in the Negro populations of American cities that few persons think about it. The chief difference between Harlem, let us say, or Chicago's South Side, and Warsaw's Jewish ghetto is that the people of Harlem or of the South Side may wander at will outside their regular haunts, whereas the trapped people of Warsaw may not.

If the Negroes may wander outside, however, they may not stay outside. They must sleep there, eat there, go to school and church there, amuse themselves there, die there. Negroes of American cities, in other words, are as inevitably doomed to ghettoes as are the Jews of Hitler Warsaw.

The Negro people themselves, through their organizations, have been trying for years to do something about this housing problem. They have made little progress. As a result of pleas, begging, threats of political action and appeals to decent human instinct, the Negro people wrung a promise some years ago from the housing division of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works (a part of the Works Relief Administration) of perhaps 28 housing projects.

To what extent these projects have already been completed nobody who is supposed to know seems to know (actual entries have been extensively made). The Detroit "Chronicle," however, as have some individual persons, has charged (referring to the threat to create a ghetto in Detroit) that "While a great controversy rages over a site for 200 homes for defense workers, the whole program of rehabilitation and general housing for the wage earner is relegated to the sidelines." That has happened, of course, not only with respect to housing for Negroes. "Defense housing" has simply put a complete stop to the carrying out of the general housing program, a basic tenet of which was "slum clearance." Today we hear nothing of clearing the slums and building homes on their sites.

Federal, state and city housing has barely touched the terrible condition of millions. They are not only in the ghettoes but are in the ghetto sections of these ghettoes.

Now is the time to tell the government that if it wishes the Negro people's support of a defense program, it will have to take steps to convince them that they have something to defend. Decent houses, in which the Negro people could establish homes, would indeed be something they would gladly defend.

WPA Fight to End Anti-Negro Slanders Gains

Union Acts to Delete All Chauvinistic Material in WPA Writings

MAY 26 1941

A campaign by the WPA Teacher's Union No. 453 to eliminate reading material containing derogatory references to Negroes, met with partial success it was announced today. The Union demand that a non-partisan board independent of WPA, review all subjects with racial groups was granted. The manuscript entitled: "The Boy Who Wrote Swanee" which the Union exposed as slandering the Negro people has been withdrawn and assurances was given that it will not be published.

This issue came to a head some weeks ago when a group of Negro and white teachers, writers and artists employed on the New Reading Materials Project sponsored by the Board of Education came to the Union with proof of the Administration's chauvinistic policy in dealing with Negro life in America.

The Union's campaign received wide support from Negro teachers and from a large number of Negro and white organizations. The Union disclosed that many Negro teachers became members for the purpose of personally participating and supporting the campaign. Typical of the support received are the following statements made public by the Union today.

VIGILANCE LAUNCHED

The National Negro Congress wrote as follows:

"We want to compliment you and your organization for your vigilance in seeing to it that Democracy in the field of education is extended and that would-be patriotic Americans do not take us back to the ages of slavery. The National Negro Congress is behind you 100 per cent."

Urging the establishment of a board to review material dealing with racial groups the Rev. H. J. Robinson, Minister of the Church of the Master said:

"It further seems to me that it would be highly advisable to have a group of understanding Negro and white laymen in the field of literature, exercise in an advisory capacity the function of criticising manuscripts that deal with Negroes, and of directing project writers toward that material and those incidents that show Negroes in the light of their true contribution to America."

The unity of the campaign was marred only by the note of discord struck by Frank R. Crosswaith, Social Democrat, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee. Crosswaith predicated his interest and activity in the issue of Negro discrimination on the standing of Local 453 in the American Federation of Teachers and the A. F. of L. When the Union insisted that he judge the issue solely on the facts of the case, Mr. Crosswaith referred to his record but offered no assistance.

In commenting upon Mr. Crosswaith's statement, Mr. Herbert Newton, Negro, and vice president of the Union said:

"This latest act of Mr. Crosswaith is another sample of sabotage by a self-centered politician who pretends to represent Negro trade unionists. It is unfortunate that in solving problems of Negro discrimination we must act in spite of gentlemen like Mr. Crosswaith and those guilty of Negro discrimination may rest assured that we will act decisively whenever we learn of definite instances of discrimination."

A Case of Bad Judgement

During the past t[illegible]s, a controversy has been raging over the plan of a teacher at P. S. 89 to present the play, "Little Black Sambo," for the entertainment and enlightenment of the children. We cannot see how the presentation of such a play can serve a useful purpose; certainly it has no educational significance.

We do not believe Negroes should be thin-skinned and touchy and ready to "fly-off-the handle" every time something that doesn't flatter them is said, but in view of the fact that evil and vicious propaganda so frequently creeps into our school books and system, it is well that Negroes should remain circumspect.

A story of the adventures of "Little Black Sambo" and his family in the wilds of Africa is hardly a tale for young children, whose ideas are being formed. It can breed only a feeling of inferiority, which in all probability, it was designed to do. We see nothing wrong with the teaching of early Negro history, portraying the Negro in his true state at the time, but we are unalterably opposed to fictionized stories of the Negro's backwardness and savagery. We join the Committee for Better Schools in Harlem, the National Negro Congress, the WPA Teachers' Union, in condemning "Little Black Sambo." It should be banned from the schools.

NAZI PLANS FOR NEGROES

THE NEGRO INTELLIGENTSIA which places the British in the same category as the Germans with regard to their treatment of colored races, should read an article by Hans Habe in the current issue of The Nation, in which the author tells of the Nazi Plan for Negroes and the cruel treatment the 400,000 colonial troops fighting for France have received since their surrender to the Germans last summer.

According to this article on June 25, eighty Negroes and Arabs were selected among 8,000 captured in one Division and taken to a wood near Villacourt and shot. The eighty victims had been chosen at random. No one accused them of any specific crime; but it was explained that their execution was intended as an example for French snipers. The Negro soldiers were denied water and given barely enough food to keep them alive. At the German prison camps the Negroes were isolated with barbed wire strung around their barracks. No white man was allowed to converse with a black. The German soldiers regarded the "camp within a camp" as a kind of zoo: they were constantly standing around it and taking pictures, usually through the barbed wire.

The following five points are listed as comprising the Nazi policy with regards the Negro:

1. The colored people are an inferior race whose place must be fixed by the white "master race."

2. The free choice of trades and professions by the Negroes leads to social assimilation, which in turn produces racial assimilation. The occupations of the black colonial peoples and their function in the labor process by the "new order" wil therefore be entirely determined by the Germans.

3. Intermarriage between whites and blacks or halfbreeds and whites is forbidden. According to the Nuremburg

Special conveyances and public establishments will be created for them both in German and in occupied territories.

Under such a policy as that outlined above, a German victory would be as big a calamity to the Negro as it would be to the British Empire. While Negroes have much to complain of under the British and American rule, we are at least recognized as human beings and are granted opportunities for self

Prize Winning Book Called 'Year's Worst'

NOV 15 1941

Dr. L. D. Reddick Scores Author Of "Mr. George's Joint" For Injecting Personal Contempt And Prejudices Against Race Characters In Book.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 13. (ANP)—At the annual meeting of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick declared that the recent prize-winning novel, "Mr. George's Joint," was the worst novel on Negro life which has appeared this year.

Dr. Reddick stated, "This is not a 'bad book' because it is the story of a 'Gin Joint'; nor is it inferior because the characters are not respectable college graduates. But it is inferior, both as literature and as an attempt to understand human nature, because the author has the utterest contempt for her characters and paints a false picture of the reactions of human beings. To make bad matters worse, the publishers insist that this is an objective study and that it is a picture of the Negro as he really is. Nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, the book reveals more of the prejudices and literary shortcomings of the author than the fundamental human nature of characters of the story."

"Mr. George's Joint" received the $2,500 Thomas Jefferson award as being the most outstanding contribution to southern literature. This contest was sponsored by the Virginia Quarterly Review. The author, Elizabeth Wheaton, lives in Texas City, Texas, and the book was published on October 27.

"It's a pity," said Dr. Reddick, "that the first Jefferson award had to go to such a superficial, stereotyped picture of Negro life, or else the name of the award should be termed instead 'the Jefferson Davis Award for anti-Negro propaganda'."

New Book Called Anti-Negro And Very Subversive

DEC 29 1941

NEW YORK, N. Y.—(S N S) — The worst novel published on Negro life in America this year is "Mr. George's Joint," by Elizabeth Lee Wheaton, says Dr. L. D. Reddick in the December issue of OPPORTUNITY, Journal of Negro Life.

Writing in the current OPPORTUNITY Magazine, published by the National Urban League, Doctor Reddick lists the book as anti-Negro propaganda. He says that "It is clear that Mrs. Wheaton set out to write a book according to the derogatory stereotypes of the Negro."

Writing of the political implications of this book that portrays the lives of certain Negroes in a Texas town, Doctor Reddick thinks that a book like "Mr. George's Joint" may be classed as working against National unity in a crisis such as now. It is subversive to that end, he says.

American History Through the Eyes of the Coupon Clippers

FEB 3—1941

'Land of Liberty' Joins Galaxy of Reactionary Films

By David Platt

Almost every popular screen star in Hollywood is represented in "Land of Liberty," a cavalcade of American history which could easily have been written by any member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, American Legion Daughters of the Confederacy House of Morgan.

The film consists of several hundred scenes taken from 112 motion pictures about the Puritan epoch War of Independence, War of 1812 Mexican War, Slavery, Civil War Reconstruction Period, Winning of the West and the conquest of the Indian, Rise of Industry. Spanish American War, Theodore Roosevelt, Gay White Way, World War, Fascism, Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the present.

It would take several large volumes to enumerate and analyze the historical errors and vicious lies which range from David Wark Griffith's conception of Reconstruction to Archibald MacLeish's version of the World War. Cecil B. DeMille, producer of "Northwest Mounted Police"—that stinging rebuke to Democracy, edited "Land of Liberty" and the film is now being presented as a statement of "faith in America" by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Inc. Will Hays is President of this corporation of tycoons. When the film producers find it necessary to issue a manifesto. America had better take warning.

"Land of Liberty" was originally put together for exhibition at the World's Fair. However, since it was first released, the producers have found aid to British imperialism more profitable than aid to American Democracy and have expressed their abhorrence of majority rule by turning out several hundred motion pictures like Ramparts We Watch and Arise My Love which favor the interventionists.

History a la Chamber of Commerce

"Land of Liberty" is for the most part, standardized American history acceptable to the Chamber of Commerce mind. It contains certain individual sequences of striking power. There are impressive references to the early revolutionary wars against Britain which will not please Lord Halifax and Lord Stimson. There are powerful speeches by Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, James Madison and Abraham Lincoln. Particularly admirable are two scenes from DeMille's "Buccaneer," one showing the British redcoats invading Washington in 1812 after the city has been betrayed by fifth columnists in Madison's cabinet. The other shows Andrew Jackson and his poorly equipped soldiers making a brave and victorious stand against the British crown at New Orleans. I don't know the name of the actor who played Jackson but he is great.

After 1812, the film takes history for a long ride. From here on "Land of Liberty" begins to resemble more and more a railroad magnate's account of the life and times of Cornelius Vanderbilt or some such plunderer of the nation's resources. The Mexican War and the ruthless acquisition of California is on a par with some of the editorials against present-day Mexico in the New York Daily News. Pro Southern films like "Virginia City," "Jezebell" and "So Red the Rose" are used to misrepresent the Civil War and the Reconstruction Period. The Negro people are depicted as crap-shooters and loafers in two or three nauseating clips. The Winning of the West is described (or so it seems) by army generals and licensed land pirates. Every Indian is a savage. There are two kinds of white men—the bad and the good. The bad men are small time bandits. The good men are those who assist the railroads and the banks in plundering on a big scale.

The Spanish American War—that imperialist war for colonies and loot in which six hundred thousand Filipinos lost their lives fighting for their independence is depicted as a "war of liberation." Theodore Roosevelt, whose presidential campaign was backed by two Morgan partners, who led him by the nose while the was supposed to be "busting trusts," is presented as a "friend of the workingman." That he was an enemy of labor is shown by the way he aided the mine owners in the anthracite strike of 1902. "Land of Liberty" describes the World War as a war to save Democracy; and Franklin Delano Roosevelt as a "man of the people."

The outstanding heroes of "Land of Liberty" are Presidents who have betrayed the people — McKinley, Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt, army generals, members of the police force—the texas rangers, big business men like Diamond Jim Brady and Jim Fisk multi-millionaire swindlers, etc.

The true hero—the common man who made this nation great is ignored in this canvas. You will find this man in action in the wars of the revoluton. He was the minuteman at Lexington who fought the enemy within and without the Oliver Wiswells as well as the hired hessians. He fought for the Bill of Rights to secure for himself and family some of the fruits of victory. He was with Jackson at New Orleans and later on supported the president in his fight against the bankers. He fought for the independence of Texas and then watched helplessly as the public domain from Texas to California was seized by the land-grabbers working with corrupt legislators and congressmen. He opposed Negro slavery and answered Lincoln's call for volunteers while J. P. Morgan was selling worthles ammunition to the government and piling up a huge fortune at the expense of the people. He built the railroads and saw them pass into the hands of stock exchange speculators. Negro or white—he built the roads, paved the streets, strung up the wires, and mined the coal. Now he sees a vast land not of liberty but of insecurity where his liberty is to be unemployed and destitute, and to be pulled into a rich man's war.

This story of the common people cannot be found in Cecil DeMille's pseudo "Land of Liberty." Hollywood has too many ties to Wall Street to give us the World War as Eugene Debs saw it from inside the prison walls, or the Civil War from the viewpoint of the progressive Negro people. Hollywood has gone too far in the direction of U. S. Steel to give us the rise of American industry from the point of view of the worker who built it or the Abolitionist movement through the eyes of those who struggled for it.

Here is the building of the Union Pacific from the point of view of the and pirates; the Reconstruction period as it looked to the Ku Klux Klan, the World War as seen by the tycoons of the Corn Exchange Bank.

"Land of Liberty" is emasculated American history. However there is a great deal of fine material in it and some day, someone with social vision will take these 112 films, re-edit them and with the aid of a scientific commentary, transform it into a genuine people's film. As it stands now, the net result of "Land of Liberty" for almost everyone but coupon clippers is absolute zero. The common man will learn little from it either about his past, present or future.

MAR 1 1941

AUGUSTA, Ga., Feb. 27—(ANP)—Dr. Edgar C. Lucas, white pastor of the First Christian Church, in addressing the Optimist Club, stated that the novel, by Margaret Mitchell, "Gone With the Wind," is a "more terrific indictment of Georgia in ante-bellum days than 'Tobacco Road' is of the vicinity of Augusta today." He said he thought it would be better if the book had never been written or the play produced. He speaks of the males in both books as "glorified loafers," who "never paid rent on the good earth they occupied."

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—Following vigorous protest by the national office and New York branch of the N. A. A. C. P., and other interested groups and individuals, the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Ambassador Theatre here was terminated two days ago.

The picture was scheduled for a prevue benefit performance for "Bundles for Britain" on February 3, but upon the urging of the N. A. A. C. P. and other Negro civic groups, "The Birth of a Nation" was not shown, and "Four Feathers" was substituted in its stead.

Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was informed by a telegram from Bundles for Britain, Inc., that it had cancelled its acceptance of this benefit showing "because of its sympathy and respect for the colored people of America."

BIRTH OF NATION FILM STOPPED

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Within a few hours of its benefit show, Bundles for Britain today substituted another film for the scheduled showing of "The Birth of a Nation", to which colored civic groups had objected.

"This film has done more to stir up race hatred against colored people, to create sectional bitterness and to prepare ground for the revival of the Ku Klux Klan than any other agency," said Walter White ,secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in a protest. "Failure to cancel the performance will undoubtedly alienate many persons who favor England's cause."

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—(A.P.)—Within a few hours of its benefit show, Bundles for Britain today substituted another film for the scheduled showing of "The Birth of a Nation," to which negro civic groups had objected.

"This film has done more to stir up race hatred against negroes, to create sectional bitterness and to prepare ground fo rthe revival of the Ku Klux Klan than any other agency," said Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a telegraphed protest to the relief organization.

"Failure to cancel performance will undoubtedly alienate many persons who favor England's cause."

Announcing that the picture, "Four Feathers," had been substituted, Bundles for Birtain said in a statement it desired "to avoid offense to any section of our people."

'Virginia' an Imitation of 'Gone With The Wind'

VIRGINIA, a Paramount picture. Screen play by Virginia Van Upp; produced and directed by E. H. Griffith. At the Paramount.

FEB 1 1941

By Milton Meltzer

FEB 1 1941

This is a "Gone With the Wind" in knee-pants. It's not nearly so expensive, and only half as long, but it certainly takes after papa. It has every characteristic of that reactionary, anti-Negro monstrosity. Smart enough not to try to compete with Selznick's movie directly on its own ground, but anxious to spread the same lies, Paramount fights the Civil War all over again in the Virginia of 1941, with Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, technicolor and Carter Glass' politics as its chief weapons.

I have seen fakery and dullness before in many a movie but hardly anything to compete with "Virginia." So amateurish it is technically and so heavy-handed politically that even the commercial press' reviewers, who blurbed "GWTW," could give its offspring but two stars. The story tells of a lovely Virginia expatriate come back home broke to sell the ancestral estate. She meets the scion of another family of Virginians broken-down financially, but not spiritually, suh! A Yankee from up New York way, with lots of cold cash, fights for her hand but the Virginian, a real man, suh! Wins her in the end.

Now that is not new and usually not too offensive to moviegoers. But it is tricked out in the most blatant "blue and gray" dialogue. Everyone is a Yankee or a Rebel, the northerner calling himself a "modern carpetbagger." The Civil War, the Virginian hero, was not fought over slavery. That was just a gag of Lincoln's, a good slogan to fool people. It was a fight between pride and arrogance and the South would have taken care of slavery in its own way in good time. The Negroes in this movie love their masters just as their slave-parents loved their owners in the old days. Ezechial, jailed for killing a carpetbagger who harmed his master just after the "Rebellion," drags himself home after some 70 years in prison to die a beautiful, happy death in the old family house. At the church the Negro servants sit in a jim-crow balcony and at the wedding they watch the ceremony from outside the windows. And they just love it.

Delighted with this Southern idyll, the heroine exclaims: "Why this sort of thing should be spread all over the world!" The picture doesn't limit itself to falsifying the past. There are cracks about the people on relief who would never get off to take a job, and about the insanity of industrial cities and the need for everyone to go back to the land and live on the bounty of dirt and water. Whenever things bog down too noticeably someone is right there with an off-color gag to push things along.

Harlemites Stop Showing Of "Nation" On Broadway

FEB 24 1941

NEW YORK—(ANP) — Holding that the snowing of the film, "Birth of the Nation" would incite a riot, the Greater New York Coordinating committee and the Association of Trade and Commerce group represented by Atty. Harrison S. Jackson presented the facts to the District Attorney Dewey who ordered a Broadway theater to stop the run of the picture.

Originally scheduled to open Monday, February 3, the "Birth of the Nation" was not exhibited until the following day because of the efforts of several organizations including the NAACP.

Pointing out to the district attorney that the picture had caused many riots in other cities where it had been shown, and arguing that its showing exhibits a high degree of intolerance by the white man designed to incite hatred among the races, Atty. Jackson was able to have the picture's showing discontinued after the second day.

Dallas, Texas and tentative plans call for appearances in Houston as well as other cities in that state.

According to members of the organization, they will appear in Louisiana, Florida and other states en route to New York City.

"Birth of a Nation" Cut By Protest

MADISON, Wis.—"The Birth of a Nation," banned in Milwaukee, Chicago, New York City, the entire State of New Jersey, and in many other parts of the county, was put on the "blacklist" here following a protest by the Madison Council of the National Negro Congress.

The film, one of a series of pictures given weekly in the Union Play Circle here, was presented to show how the motion picture industry matured from a fly-by-night business into an organization capable of turning out artistic products.

Cut Following Protest

After the preview, which was followed by protests from the congress that it presented an unfair attitude toward colored people, further showing was cancelled, according to Ben Park, who is in charge of the Play Circle film bookings.

The picture, produced by D. W. Griffith 26 years ago, was the first successful full-length picture and served its purpose as an illustration of the advance made in motion picture production by introducing such new techniques as the fade-out, and its photography is considered good even when judge by present-day standards.

Has Emotional Appeal

However, "its appeal is pure emotional," the booking agent insisted, "and is based on the assumption that colored people are members of an inferior and servile race," since it treated with the Civil War period in the United States.

Mr. Parks asserted that the cancellation of the picture would arouse more thinking on the part of the student body than the actual presentation of it, when asked whether the showing to educated college students would not help them distinguish anti-colored propaganda in the future.

"Birth Of Nation" Is Banned By Gov. Bricker

APR 21 1941

CLEVELAND—(ANP)— Entirely of his own accord and without any outside pressure from interested Negro groups, Gov. John W. Bricker overruled a film censor's authorization for the showing of the "Birth of a Nation" in Ohio theatres.

APR 21 1941

The governor first read of the intended showing in the columns of a Cleveland daily newspaper. He immediately called into consultation Atty. Lawrence Payne, Ohio Parole commissioner and Negro Republican state leader who assured the governor that Negro citizens would resent an exhibition of the film.

Gov. Bricker in explaining his move to the director of education who approved the picture's showing, said that he did not interfere with the operation of any department, but that he felt that this "was no time to approve the showing of any picture that might have for its tendency the arousing of class hatreds."

American White Influx Changing Hawaiian Racial Attitudes

By MAMIE G. HOFFMAN

MAY 30 1941

HONOLULU.—(ANP)—When a traveler familiar with race doctrines and practices in other places visits Hawaii, he is impressed with ane apparent absence of what is commonly called race prejudice. He sees everywhere regardless of race or natonality, treated with respect and as an equal. He sees a man of any of the dark races seated in any section of public convevances and places of congregation Men regardless of color are accommodated in the best hotels.

If the traveler were to visit the municipal buildings he would find men of all races occupying responsible positions. If he were to visit the public school he might find a Negro woman as principal of a school in which she is the only Negro.

If he goes to the governor's reception he sees men of all colors shaking hands and holding friendly conversation with each other. Whenever the visitor is entertained at the home of a leading citizen he may sit at the table with guests, some of whom are, not of his own race. If he attends a luncheon such as is given by the Honolulu Yacht club, the Council of Social Agencies, the Honolulu Churen Feueration, the Educational Associateion or others he most certainly will find himself seated among people who are most obviously not of his own race.

If this visitor is taken to a university social affair he wll see young men and yo ung women of several races and mixed races dancing on the same floor and to the same music.

Should the visitor enter the canning factories, the sugar refineries or other industrial and commercial centers he would find white men taking orders from men of the darker races. The white man desposits his money in banks whose presidents, paying-tellers and other employees are dark skinned peoples. The territorial building is full of Oriental employees.

If the visitor should consult the Bureau of Vital statistics he would find that men and women of all races are intermarrying and that in the general process of interracial amalgamation through marriage, the white race is taking an important part. Here the visitor may attend a church wedding to witness a white young woman marry a man of some other race, Oriental or Polynesian, while the friends of both or of the several races give their sanctity by sitting in the pews.

The sociolcgist would explain to the visitor the fact that in Hawaii one of the most interesting laboratories of contemporary ethnic mixture in the world, there is no public opposition to the mixing of racial stocks The marriage license bureau reports show that for the period of 1930-1940 over one-third of the unions were of mixed stock.

The interested visitor can also find this to be true: that opportunity is open to all individuals of whatever ethnic group irrespective of ancestry; that there is no motive for the hard and sharply drawn class and caste lines which take race as their justifying pretext elsewhere.

In short, the race mores of Hawaii tend to be the mores of race equality. As has been stated above: under this code of racial equality it is possible for men of superior character, education and experience to attain to positions of power and dignity and to exercise authority without limitations as to race. Personal status depends more on personal merit and less on racial antecedent here than elsewhere. White men who have lived long in the territory have at least externally accepted this point of view. They learned to follow the adage "When in Rome, do as the Romans do."

Newcomers from the mainland, however, do not care for this unorthodox race attitude. They find it difficult to accept such sentiment The influx, from the mainland of so many white, "hoole" pronounced howle (the Hawaiian word for white citizens is a serious challenge to the race mores of Hawaii.

The coming of vast numbers of army and navy men at this particular time is marking the situation extremely acute. One sees the tenseness everywhere. There army and navy men come from all sections of the states, bringing their own traditions. In their traditions distinction of race and rank are highly important. Upon arrival here they seek very strenuously to perpetuate their ideals. They hose the doctrine of race inequality. Naturally they (many of them) are irritated by the liberal practices and attitudes of the local people. These thousands upon thousands of army and navy men together with throngs of new non-service peoples, are building many means of controlling or reshaping Hawaii's feelings about race, particularly about the Negro race. The attitudes which all these newcomers display tend to inhibit open avowal of race equality on the part of the citizens of the territory.

At the chief center of recreational activity for the service men, southern white boys from the mainland have positively been known to refuse to appear on asigned programs side by side with Negro sailors. If a Negro soldier seats himself in a restaurant or tavern beside some of these white fellows from the mainland many of them will immediately leave their seats. There have been cases where the boys rowing ashore from the vessel have been "snobbed" by "fellow-rowers". One Negro sailor lad is left the sole occupant of a seat in the dory while white boys sit crowded on the other seats.

Another noticeable change is this: if a man of African ancestry known as a Porto Rican goes to certain barbershops—those which attract tourists and service men—he gets his hair cut. But a man with African blood identified as a Negro of mainland origin, when he seeks service in these shops he s in some way, however unethical, made to know that he cannot get service.

This incident also is significant: The writer herself sat in the alcove by the ticket window of a popular Waikiki Beach theatre and saw Negro service men turned away on being informed that "the house is sold out" when within ten minutes afterwards many white persons came bought tickets and received admission into that same house which a few minutes before was all "sold out". Why? Somewhere in the vicinity of this famous beach recently a new night-club was opened; above its elaborate entrance of arched awning was hung the notices "For White Only".

The question in the minds of many is quite distrubing. One wonders about the result of this strang and unfortunate modification of race attitudes in beautiful Hawaii. Is Hawaii spiritually and ethcally, as well as physically speaking, realy "The Paradise of the Pacific?" Will the native population become relatively more and more helpless as groups with superior power impose themselves upon these who have lived many years in the islands The writer doubts very much, if this present day onslaught coninues, whether the status quo can continue. Even the collective behavior of Europeans, Orientals and Polynesians can not maintain a stable equilibrium

The widespread subtle penetration of mainland race prejudice with its venomously designed devices of social control is seriously and sadly altering Hawaii race mores.

Prejudice In Hawaii

A recent visitor to the beautiful Hawaiian Islands and the city of Honolulu says: "The Hawaiian Islands are highly Anglo-Americanized. The race attitude as far as the Negro is concerned, subjectively, is quite similar to that which prevails in the states. The Chinese, Japanese, Filipinos, Portuguese, Koreans, Porto Ricans and Hawaiians are all tolerated but the poor Negro is rejected. I'm stunned at the irony of what is called 'Hawaiian Racial Harmony'. A scrutiny of the history of Hawaii very plainly shows that the white man has accepted these Orientals because there was nothing else for him to do. 'Racial Harmony' here, of which some religionists and sociologists boast, fundamentally is a farce. The so-called brotherly love of one race toward another is veneer. Even the Orientals are possessed with the prejudice which mainlanders have brought over.

"In a recent editorial of the leading daily, The Honolulu Star-Bulletin the United States government ordering of Negro labor units of stevedores to Hawaii was described as indecent.

"The Chamber of Commerce heads the fight against Negroes being brought to the islands. The civic organizations are all lined up with the Chamber of Commerce, urging Hawaii's representative in Congress to fight (against it)."

Here we have a pretty sordid, yet typical picture of what goes on behind the scenes as regards the attitude of so-called democracy and even Christianity toward the Negro. The Hawaiian Islands have been described as one of the most beautiful spots in the whole world, and even here, where all races and colors are found, ". . . every prospect pleases, and only man is vile."

In spite of all the theories of race prejudice, we are sometimes inclined to believe it is something akin to the fierce hatred which exists between the lower (or higher) animals. No amount of culture, education, religion, wealth, or anything seems sufficient to remove it. Prejudice is like a rattlesnake, it strikes at anybody who comes within range.

By William L. Patterson

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—That section of Negroes in the United States who are thinking seriously in terms of National liberation herald the 43rd birthday of Luiz Carlos Prestes, the Brizilian "Knight of Hope," for his life has been one of struggle for the complete emancipation of Negroes in Brazil from the bonds of racial and national hatreds. Negroes in the United States had much to gain from their struggles.

Super-imposed upon the natural hatred that the Brazilian imperialists had for their very numerous dark-skinned citizens was the contempt and hatred which the United States, England and German imperialists brought into that country with them in their efforts to own and control the invaluable natural resources of Brazil. Luiz Carlos Prestes fought them all.

The great two years' march of Prestes and his band across ten Brazilian states was a March of Hope to Brazilian black men and women. The profound discontent of these black Brazilians with the inhuman persecution of their own Prestes waged offered a solution. Hundreds of Negroes marched with Prestes. There across the plains and mountains of Brazil black men added to the immortal traditions of struggle they have written in blood upon the pages of the histories of every American state.

THIRD OF POPULATION

Black men form almost one-third of the population of Brazil. If there they are somewhat freer than in our own United States they are nevertheless in Brazil still far from enjoying full citizenship rights.

The freedom of Luiz Carlos Prestes will be a blow making for the freedom of black men in every section of the Americas. The freedom of Luiz Carlos Prestes will strengthen the growing feeling of sympathy and common interests which Negroes in the Americas are beginning to express in unison.

Black America can herald Luiz Carlos Prestes as friend and liberator. It must merge its voice with the universal cry which arises demanding the liberty of Prestes from the terrors of the prison of the Vargas government in Brazil. This is part of the fight against the lynch-promoting imperialists of the United States.

GREETINGS FROM U. S.

The struggles of the National Liberation Alliance led by Luiz Carlos Prestes offers many splendid lessons for Negroes in the United States. The persecutions of Negroes here at home are peculiar only in the historical conditions of our country. Negroes are today everywhere, save in the glorious Soviet Union, a persecuted people. The persecution of every dependent people, every small nation, is inherent in imperialism. Luiz Carlos Prestes stood yesterday, and though in prison, stands today for the destruction of imperialism.

Negroes in the United States send greetings for long life to the Brazilian Knight of Hope.

Here in the United States the Negro people should let their desires be known the Brazilian embassy and consulates. To work for the freedom of Luiz Carlos Prestes is to work for the freedom and peace of the American nations.

ALLEGED MISTREATMENT OF A VISITOR

To the Editor The News: MAY 11 1941

A youth from Venezuela, while traveling through an Alabama village, was seized and slapped by one of our over-zealous local officials. According to the reports of witnesses, the youth from Venezuela was a Boy Scout, wearing a Scout uniform and having with him papers of identification and a letter of introduction from the president of Venezuela to President Roosevelt. MAY 11 1941

When the local official involved attempted to seize and search the boy's pack, he resisted, perhaps thinking that he was dealing with a thug, trying meantime to explain his identity to the officer. Not understanding him, the officer then seized and slapped the youth.

Such an incident would be a matter of regret and shame at any time, but just now it is for obvious reasons very unfortunate.

I think this incident should be investigated by the proper federal authorities, and if it occurred as I have reported it an official apology should be made to the boy and the country from which he comes.

This was reported to have happened at Langdale, Ala., on April 29.

Magazines As Mass Poisoners

Popular American magazines do an effective job of poisoning the public mind on and about colored people.

Writing on "Inside South America" in LOOK magazine, John Gunther finds "Brazil has indigestion from . . . too many races," and Indians and Negroes make "one of Brazil's most difficult sociological problems."

Both statements are deliberate falsehoods as hundreds of books on Brazil prove. What gripes American white people is the absence of racial discrimination and segregation in Brazil, where miscegenation is widely practiced and socially approved. Magazines like LOOK, LIFE, COLLIER'S and others lose no chance to damn any racial equality.

Actually there are no more races in Brazil than in the U. S. A., and miscegenation has been almost as widespread in the U. S. A. as in its southern sister. The only difference is the lack of segregation in Brazil.

Thos. Woodward, DAR, Meeting

Ridgeway, Oct. 22.—The Thomas Woodward chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held its October meeting with Mrs. S. O. Taylor, Miss Rebecca Robinson and Miss Ethel Mann of the Bethel section at the home of Miss Man. The vice regent, Mrs. Frank Sanborn, presided in the absence of the regent.

Mrs. R. L. Been led the devotional, stressing the opportunities of service that present themselves to women. Members joined in the saluate to the flag and the American creed. Roll call was answered with the name of a South American city. The minutes of the September meeting were read. Mrs. Goodson reported that the inscriptions from Aimwell cemetery had been sent to Mrs. Carson, as requested. Some few reported that they still had not completed their assignments in securing valuable records. Clothing and books were brought to the meeting to be sent to Tamassee.

The paper for the afternoon was prepared by Miss Harris. In a concise and interesting manner she gave a description of Brazil. Brazil, a country as large as the United States not including Alaska, is a rich section of South America, but still undeveloped. The Amazon river is navigable for 2300 miles up-stream. The climate is suitable for the production of tropical produce; coffee, tea, rice, sugar and fruits. Its magnanese, iron supply, rubber and dyes are invaluable. There is no color line, there being much Negro blood. Free schools, government colleges and printing presses are evidences of development. The Catholic faith is held by many. Brazil has a desire to carry out its wishes, without interference by foreign powers that may have a greedy eye for its valuable resources.

At the close of the meeting refreshments, carrying out the Halloween color scheme, were served. Mrs. D. V. Walker delighted the members with two piano selections.

The members adjourned to meet in November with Mrs Elliott and Mrs. M. W. Doty as hostesses. At that time a paper on Bolivia, another South American country, is to be presented

For Better Relations

With the backing of President Roosevelt numerous groups and individuals are active in promoting better cultural relationship between this country and the Latin American Republics to the South. One of the most active in this program is the Institute of International Education which is concerned with exchanging two graduate students or teachers from the United States with two of similar status from each of the other countries.

This program ought to accomplish some worthwhile results. But if it isn't handled carefully it may do more harm than good. While we subscribe to the idea of exchanging students as a means of fostering good will through personal contact, we hope the students from abroad will not be crammed into Jim Crow schools of the South to get their baptism of our American Way of Life. Nor do we believe students and teachers sent from this country ought to be drawn from the worse sections of the country. In fact, one of the requisites for the scholarships to study in another country ought to be proof of tolerance in matters of race, creed and color.

And speaking of exchanging students for the purpose of improving race relations, it seems to us that something practical could be worked out here at home. Perhaps it wouldn't be a bad idea to select two or three outstanding Negro students and place them in Southern white universities for a year's study, and similarly, place an equal number of white students in Negro schools like Fisk, Howard, Atlanta University, Dillard, Talladega, Hampton, Tuskegee, Morehouse, and Lincoln. We have said many times that politics and diplomacy alone are not going to solve the race issue. With education and personal contact, however, we believe much can be done. Anyhow the idea of exchanging Negro and white students, we think, is worth mentioning.

NEGROES HOLD SOME BIG JOBS IN HAWAII

By SIDNEY DONES
(As Told to Herman Hill)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11—Knowing of the interest race citizens would have in the fate of colored citizens living on the Hawaiian Islands since war has been declared and the Japanese have carried out a dastardly bombing of that possession, I immediately contacted Sidney Dones, prominent Los Angeles businessman, who returned last Friday from a visit to those lands, for a statement on the number and position of colored people living there.

Mr. Dones said there are relatively few American Negroes living in Hawaii, but some hold very important city and government jobs. "They own few businesses," continued Mr. Dones, "and for the most part are employed as musicians and in the defense industries. Most prominent of the Aframericans who have made good in a big way is Julius DeLifrus, cafe proprietor, who is widely known and respected by all."

"Of the 100,000 soldiers, sailors and marines stationed there, only a small percentage are Negroes, and they serve exclusively with the battle fleet," continued the Hawaiian visitor.

Mr. Dones expressed the belief that the island's 37 per cent Oriental population would remain loyal to America in this war with the Nipponese power. Mr. Dones returned prematurely from a six weeks' sojourn on the paradise of the Pacific because of unsettled world conditions.

Jay Franklin, in Syndicated Column, Tells Vivid Story, Illustrating Point Often Made by The Call

Over and over again THE CALL has pointed out that race prejudice here blocks the United States' efforts at alliance with the Latin republics. A commentator, Jay Franklin in his column last Thursday in the Kansas City Journal, put the same idea forcefully when he said:

"Here is one instance of the damage that has been done to our cause by the unlovely survival of slavery and reconstruction in our public life. Some time ago a beautiful, charming and highly cultured Latin-American girl was sent to a finishing school in the United States.

"Of Spanish ancestry, she had a touch of colored blood in her veins—whether Moorish, Indian or Negro does not matter. During her visit in this country she was snubbed or otherwise made to feel that the Americans regarded her as belonging to an inferior race.

RETAINED BURNING RESENTMENT

"Years passed. The girl returned to her home south of our borders and in due course of time married a rising young Latin-American politician. She retained a sense of burning resentment at the treatment she had received in the north.

"Today, her husband is the president of one of the republics to the south, one of the countries whose friendship is necessary to us for strategic as well as sentimental reasons.

SNUB FOR SNUB, SLUR FOR SLUR

"He has embarked on a policy of marked hostility to the United States, paying back snub for snub, slur for slur, on the American representatives at his country's capital. He threatens to make common cause with the Axis powers. Jim Crowe is coming home to roost in the Capitol of the United States, because the color line has alienated a powerful politician whose friendship we need and whose goodwill would be valuable to us in this time of crisis.

"Even today, with the fate of democracy at stake, the South will not consent to the passage of an anti-lynching bill and the spokesmen for southern interests refuse to enlarge the franchise by repeal of the poll tax for fear that thereby the Negroes will be allowed to vote.

AMERICA MUST PRACTICE DEMOCRACY

"If America is going to rest its case against Hitlerism on the principle of democracy, we should begin to practice democracy, by establishing social democracy, political democracy and economic democracy.

"And if we value the friendship of our good neighbors to the south, we had better get rid of Jim Crowe or else Jim Crowe will help get rid of us in all those nations of the Western Hemisphere where the color line has not been drawn and where racial discrimination is a national issue."

Who are the Djukas?

DEC 20 1941

• The Djukas are an autonomous nation of freed Negro slaves inhabiting the interior of Surinam, or Dutch Guiana. Ashantis transported from Africa to the Dutch South American colony, they revolted in the 18th century and established themselves in the interior of Surinam. So relentless was their warfare on the Dutch settlers that in 1762 the governor asked for a peace conference. A treaty signed by the House of Orange gave them in perpetuity all colonial land 25 miles inland from the coast, plus a tribute of 20,000 guilders annually; in return for which they agreed to live peacefully in the interior. The Djukas are ruled by a Granman, Ah Tu Den Du. They have two languages—talky-talky for general converse, and deepie-talky, known only to themselves. Some talky-talky words are: zon, for sun; sidom, for sit down; haiwatra (eye-water) for tears, and dediskin for corpse. Some years ago they requested and received recognition by the League of Nations.

Louis-Bear Charity Fight

ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS during the past week I have been approached by young Negro college men in reference to the ethics behind this fight. Their questions and publicly expressed opinions are splendid evidence, to the effect, that this proposed fight is causing much serious discussion among Negro college youth. The young men who discussed this subject with me are above average in intelligence and seriousness of purpose. That is why I deemed this subject important enough for an editorial column.

CHIVERS

Frankly these young men are peeved at Joe Louis and his advisers for not only risking his title but just simply putting on a fight show that would be of any benefit to the Navy. Then again they seem to think that Louis should do the same thing for some needy Negro cause. He might have even done so some time ago.

OTHERS NEED FUNDS

I suspect these young men are thinking of how sorely in need of funds are many Negro institutions of learning, the NAACP, the National Urban League and the Negro division of the National YMCA. The mere fact that they belong to a suppressed and deprived minority certainly is sufficient to condition these youth to a certain amount of sensitiveness and suspicion. Education has opened their eyes to the serious gaps in the foundations of American Negro life and increases their fear for the future.

I am therefore, sympathetic with their emotions on the subject at hand. At their ages I felt much the same way about racial conditions intensified by World War 1. Nevertheless, I sincerely believe that one of the principal functions of a teacher is to give youth the story of his experiences to reflect upon. This I try to do without prejudice in so far as I have become self-emancipated and objective in reference to race relations and I strive each day to be more so than I was the day previous.

I agree with these young men that Mr. Louis might do himself proud if he would do the same thing for some needy Negro interest. Such an action would establish his tradition indelibly upon the hearts of his people. He would be their hero long after the fleeting glories of the prize ring have flown into the all-consuming ether.

THEY ARE AMERICAN

However, I am disturbed by the philosophy which is directing the thinking of these youth in reference to the fight and the Navy. For one thing it leads me to believe that deep down in their hearts they do not feel that they are American nationals in totality. They must be made in some impressive way, by Negro leaders, to realize that they are irrevocably American Nationals. They are not only nationals but involuntarily so, simply because they were born into this nation. They are common shareholders in this nation because their forefathers were the second great group of immigrants to adopt this country, even though not on their own initiative. They cannot claim any other country because several hundreds of years of intermixture have made them physically and culturally unlike any other racial group to which they might desire to claim kinship.

Negroes are inseparably part and parcel of these United States. The symbols of this government and its philosophy of democracy have done them no harm. Their grievances are with the ruling classes who at any particular period control the helm of their "Ship of State". So when a crisis, international in character, arises they should relegate their grievances to the same state of family quarrels when the family is being threatened from without.

HAS NOT BEEN FAIR

Obviously the Navy has not been fair to the Negro nationals of the United States. It has shown a willingness to let the cream of white youth die, by the thousands in the angry waters of the seven seas rather than permit Negroes to man their guns. Nevertheless Negro youth must realize that each time an American battle ship sinks that these white youths have died in defense of the only home land that these Negroes have and therefore in their defense. Consequently Negroes should do everything within their power to help make the American Navy the best afloat and its fighting crew the most efficient in the world. I believe this to the extent that I think of myself first as an American and second as a Negro.

The logical conclusion then it that out of pure self-interest a minority group should extend itself to prove to the majority group that its patriotism is of the purest sort. The majority group must be thoroughly convinced that nationality can not be split.

Youth must remember that some day the war will be over and that there will be a reckoning day. Then the race question comes up, as it surely will, Negroes will be considered in terms of their demonstrated loyalty and usefulness when the going was hardest and the future not so bright.

Joe Louis is doing Negroes a greater service, if that is possible, by giving his services in this fight than he is to the fighting forces. More power to him.

NOV 30 1941

Group Pledges New Fight On Alcohol; Aid For Oppressed Chinese

MOBILE, Ala.—(AP)—Active opposition to racial intolerance, respect for the "conscientious decisions" of youth as to war service, financial support for the Chinese and "other lands suffering from war oppressions," a renewed battle against alcoholic beverages—these were the pledges made by members of the Alabama Methodist Conference in reports and resolutions adopted at their concluding business sessions Saturday.

Sunday will be the final day of the meeting and the high point will be the reading of the ministerial appointments at the closing session. The traditional conference love feast will be conducted by the Rev. C. S. Tally, of Panama City, Fla., and Bishop J. Lloyd Decell will preach the conference sermon.

In their resolution on racial intolerance, the Methodists pledged themselves specifically to combat anti-Semitism and to "insist upon just and considerate treatment for members of any religious, racial or political minorities."

The conference stand on war service was phrased to leave the decision with the young men as to whether they will bear arms and refrain from bearing arms because of conscientious objections and to honor eitiher decision.

The resolution on alcoholic beverages submitted by the conference board of temperance embodied an appeal to Methodist laymen to offer themselves as candidates for public offices; urged all Methodist voters to pay their poll taxes and register, and urged Methodists to support candidates "who give satisfactory assurance of energetic opposition to the liquor traffic, and a determination after election to lend their efforts to the extermination of the traffic."

Other clauses of the resolution adopted by the conference called for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicants in military reservations or to members of the military forces in any place; promised financial aid to the Alabama Temperance Alliance and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and proposed the calling of a conference-wide temperance meeting at Montgomery sometime next February.

The conference also settled an intra-church controvery of some years' standing Saturday when it adopted a resolution equalizing the salaries of the seven district superintendents.

A decision as to the place for the 1942 conference meeting was placed in the hands of a special committee consisting of Dr. H. M. Andrers, Selma; the Rev. D. C. Whitsett, Montgomery; the Rev. E. L. Hardin, Verbena; Mrs. Arthur Heustess, Montgomery, and W. B. Christenberry, Selma. This committee will decide on the meeting place sometime next Summer.

The Rev. W. W. Jeffries, of Andalusia, was elected director of the Methodist Children's Home at Selma to replace Dr. A. E. Shafer, of Pensacola, whose resignation from the home's directorate was announced.

Dr. G. S. Stanley Frazer, of Mobile, preached the sermon at a memorial service for seven ministers of the conference who have died within the past year. The ministers commemorated at the service were the Rev. J. W. Hightower, F. M. Lowrey, James Clendinnen, J. B. Tate, J. W. Hamner, J. W. Efinger and J. O. Lawrence.

Racial Issues

Editor The Telegraph:

More and more evidences that certain key figures now in America are using racial groups of people in efforts to increase the agitation to throw this nation into complete confusion over national and world issues is cropping up everywhere.

Some of these key figures are also key figures in American journalism and they are using the press as a powerful means of outward expression to stir up racial conflict in America.

Negroes and persons of other racial groups especially people of Balkan descent are being organized in separate groups to carry on their campaigns of forcing pressure upon President Roosevelt and the Congress. These groups are being supported editorially in certain newspapers throughout the land.

If anyone objects to the campaign, they are ranked as prejudiced or anti-alien, and a number of groups allied with this movement to undermine America immediately take up the cudgel of intolerance and verbally heave hot coals in the direction of those who see the sinister evil behind that movement.

'Russia Points the Way for Us In Education' Says Negro Editor

Dunjee Cites Dean's Book in College Address

(Special to the Daily Worker)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—The Soviet Union has demonstrated in the past 20 years "the most marvelous development of an educational program the world has ever seen," Roscoe Dunjee, editor of The Black Dispatch, one of the leading Negro newspapers published in the West and published in this city, declared in a recent address before the Texas State Teachers in Dallas, Tex.

"Twenty years ago, during the World War," Mr. Dunjee declared, "we saw Russian manpower collapse almost overnight, under the impact of the German offensives, but today Russia is seemingly the only old world power able to face the invading Teutonic hordes now stalking across the earth."

"Russia Points The Way"

Mr. Dunjee asserted that he cites education under the Soviets because "when one talks to Negroes about changing educational patterns of the group, the problem is approached by many with the thought that what we have in mind might take centuries to accomplish." He added that "if Negroes of the United States are sincerely consecrated to the task of revamping educational patterns, Russia points the way."

"We hope that no one present will close his mind to the facts we want to present here, under the assumption that we are in Texas holding a brief for Communism, as a political philosophy. Far be it from us to attempt anything of that nature. What we seek to offer here is the remarkable educational technique and practical type of training used in the Soviet Union to achieve certain ends, and the type of education that has almost overnight converted the teeming millions of Russian peasantry, extending back into far corners of Asia, from ignorant, untrained backwoods farming people, into skilled and trained artisans, and seeming masters of a Germanic social order which is the development of centuries.

New Education For the Negro

"I want to read to you a statement written by the Dean of Canterbury, the second highest Churchman in England, which relates to the progress made in a definite type of education in Russia, most of which has occurred during a period of 14 years. It puts to shame the idea of many American Negroes, who feel that revolutionary changes in our educational patters would take another century. I don't believe Russian people are inately more intelligent than the black people of America; a definitely charted course on the part of Negroes of America can in another 20 years completely revolutionize Negro life socially, politically and economically. We must scrap heap the present and institute new educational processes for the American Negro.

"'The (Soviet) census of January, 1939, enables us to make comparisons of the literacy in that year with the literacy of 1925. In the former year 51.1 per cent of the population over the age of nine were literate. In 1939, 81.2 per cent of the same group were literate. And the village is gradually approximating the town. The 1939 census figures being for the town 89.5; for the village, 76.8.

"'The progress of national minorities is equally remarkable. For example, literates in Tajik, Southern Russia, in 1926 were 3.7; in 1939, 71.1 per cent. The figures for female literacy were more remarkable still, from 1 per cent to 65.2 per cent.'

Progress of National Minorities

"The footnote is much longer but one important point brought out is that there are more than two million students studying in Russian technical schools.

"Anyone who has studied modern day social organization knows that out of our political and economic philosophies we have created a mechanical order in the control of a few people. The great machine world that has in 20 years swept Russia from the ranks of backward nations to the very top of power and might is also the directing influence in that part of the world in which we live. People whose education processes deal with abstractions and ancient philosophies are helpless in such an order."

White Women Who Work in Harlem Rip 'Crime' Tales

By Eugene Gordon

Five women, all white, three of them teachers, whose business takes them to Harlem at all hours of the day and into all kinds of homes, said in interviews yesterday that they had never found it necessary to call on the police to escort them to and from their work. Their statements were made in answer to assertions in a number of newspapers that "white women," especially teachers, had to have police escorts to and from their places of employment in Harlem.

Miss Anna Matlin, teacher in P. S. 184, said not only had she never required such an escort but knew of nobody who had. During the four years she has taught in Harlem, she said, she has frequently gone to meetings and parties in that community at night.

"The prime needs in Harlem are jobs, housing and expansion of recreational facilities, including the opening of school buildings for that purpose," Miss Matlin said.

Another teacher in P.S. 184, who asked that her name not be used, said she concurred in Miss Matlin's statement. She has taught there for two years, she said, and has never been molested on the streets, day or night.

Miss Alice Citron, the third teacher, said:

"In my 10 years of attending evening meetings, visiting parents' homes, and taking part in all kinds of activities in the Harlem area, I have had not one single unpleasant experience. I have never asked for nor expect to ask for a police escort.

TAKES ISSUE WITH HOWARD SECRETARY ON RACE PLATFORM

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—Taking issue with and severely criticizing the 10-point program promulgated recently by James Nabrit, secretary of Howard university, Edgar Brown, militant leader of the United Government Employes' Association said the most surprising omission in the plan was the failure to include the appointment by the President of an Associate Judge of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Charging a serious lack of understanding on the ways of a democratic government by our educational leaders, Mr. Brown said, "These leaders show an inability to sense some of the practical and obvious ways of doing something about the plight of the Negro masses."

Brown gives his own 10-point program as one that would more nearly accomplish for the race its goal for full integration into our democracy. He urges intelligent use of the ballot, financing of a national lobby, congressional appropriation for a training school for Negroes in the Armed services, legislation against unions that discriminate against Negroes, effective enforcement of fair employment practices and militant agitation through the press and radio.

Tenth, an all out national campaign of letter writing, broadcast, sermons and a $100,000 National Negro Lobby supported by a "March of a Million Dimes on Washington" to oppose in the name of democracy, justice and National Defense on the home front, the "Big Interests," who deny employment to the Negro.

Brown's 10-Point Program For Negroes' Salvation

First, in a 10 point program, number one place must be given to enforcing the right of all citizens to vote, regardless of race, creed or color, as guaranteed by the 14th amendment.

Secondly, Negroes should use the power of the franchise already in their hands in the North to force the issue in the South. Every Negro should demand an answer from the 478 members of Congress to the question: "Will you vote to appropriate the funds to enforce the 14th amendment to the Constitution?"

Thirdly, the Negroes, North and South, should concentrate on an all out effort by raising a $1,000,000 fund to elect to Congress next year fearless Negroes qualified in government.

Fourth, a national conference should be held in Washington, the nation's capital, sponsored by the present Negro elected members of the state legislatures, city councils, justices of the peace, magistrates, judges, et cetera. The leaders of the Democratic and Republican parties in Congress should be committed now to a program of race recognition in legislation and administration.

Fifth, a campaign by Negroes must be militantly championed for the inclusion of Old Age Pensions, Survivors Insurance, Unemployment Insurance and health services for domestic and farm workers as well as ministers by amendment of the Federal Social Security law.

Sixth, appropriation by Congress of $20,000,000 earmarked from the six billion dollars for expansion of the U. S. Army in 1942 to train thousands of Negro soldiers as commissioned officers for the approximate 200,000 colored soldiers of the U. S. Army and to increase the facilities for training Negro soldiers as air pilots and mechanics in the Air Corps of the Army and Navy.

Seventh, appropriation by Congress of $10,000 more yearly for Howard university and Freedmen's hospital to augment the present million dollar annual budget as authorized by federal law to provide a greatly expanded medical, legal, engineer and other professional and technical training for tens of thousands of needy and ambitious Negro students. Another $10,000,000 should be earmarked by Congress for the Negro Land-Grant colleges of the South.

Eighth, immediate legislation by Congress prohibiting labor unions enjoying protection of federal laws from the denial of membership and the same benefits in most of the powerful AFL organizations and others to Negro workers.

Ninth, permanent legislation by Congress authorizing and extending the life and power as well as putting "teeth" in the present President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices to ferret out and abolish discrimination on account of race, creed or color in government positions, unions, National Defense, U. S. Army, Navy, Marine, Coast Guard and American life.

WALTER CHIVERS SAYS

Supreme Court And The Negro

CHIVERS

I KNOW THAT THE above subject is not wholly pertinent to what follows but maybe it will attract attention to a line of thinking which I believe becomes more important daily. The point of departure for this column is the recent Supreme Court decision declaring the California "anti-Oakie" law unconstitutional. In short summary this law was designed to keep indigent people from migrating into the state of California. At least twenty-seven other states have enacted similar laws. It is needless for me to point out that thousands of these migrants are Negroes.

As a matter of fact job-seeking Negroes have been in an almost constant state of migration from one state to another looking for "something to do" since 1865. The guiding principle of employers in relation to Negroes has been the stimulus for this restless and unplanned movement. Negroes have been and still are the last hired and the first fired. Their chance at even a subsistence living depends upon the amount of rough, heavy, and dirty work to be done in any one area at any particular time. When the menial or should I say meanest jobs are completed it is the signal for the excess Negroes to move on to other territory or face virtual starvation.

Now back to the Supreme Court decision. It was unanimous. However, the majority of five judges and the minority of four judges reached the same conclusion by different reasoning. The one maintained that the state law was a violation of the interstate commerce clause of the federal constitution. The other declared in substance that the majority decision was based upon too narrow reasoning. They held that no state could prevent a citizen of these United States from entering its borders because he happened to be poor and unemployed.

The significance of the majority opinion and minority exceptions in this case are important to all underprivileged Negroes. Their migratory movements are now protected by the federal commission whose sworn duty is to protect interstate commerce. This is an interesting extension of the interstate commerce power but certainly a valuable one to the underprivileged.

The exceptions pointed out by the Supreme Court minority express the social evolution which our country is undergoing in its struggle, against great odds, to establish by peaceful and lawful means a working democracy. This opinion declares the citizenship rights of all Americans is the concern of the federal government. This statement will in all probability become the basis upon which many legal arguments for equalization of opportunities will be stressed in the future.

Peculiarly enough the majority opinion was read by Mr Justice Byrnes of South Carolina. Undoubtedly this liberal first opinion to be read by him, almost shocks some of us who feared the results of his elevation to the Bench. This can be said, however, that the assurance of economic security for life and freedom from political party chicanery can release a public man from many of his reservations and permit him to be himself.

Among the four liberal judges who took exceptions to the majority opinion is Mr. Justice Black of Alabama. He bids fair to go down in history as one of the greatest humanitarians of his time.

If Justices Byrnes and Black are used as the pace-setters it may yet be true that the legal salvation of Negroes will be decided by native born southerners and life-long democrats

Maybe there is something in the belief that professional politicians are not free to act as they wish but follow the dictations of the majority of their supporters. After all a professional politician is working on a job for a salary with which to support those dependent upon him as well as himself. This fact has a lot to do with a man's public actions.

CHICKENS COME HOME TO ROOST

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools voted unanimously last Thursday to drop ten colleges of the University of Georgia system from its accredited lists, effective September 1, 1942.

This drastic step is the direct outcome of the removal of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University and President Marvin S. Pittman of Georgia Teachers' College by a stooge State Board of Regents, at the behest of Georgia's suspender-snapping Governor Talmadge because these two educators allegedly advocated co-education of the two so-called races. This was rightly regarded as political interference.

Thus Georgia pays the penalty for its racial prejudice and the chickens of retribution come home to the jim crow roost.

There will be much cursing of Governor Talmadge for his part in bringing disgrace upon tax-supported education in Georgia, but the blame must be shared by the majority of white Georgians.

Not only did they elect Talmadge, whose extreme views on the question of race are unknown to no informed persons, but they re-elected him.

The sort of campaigning he did to oust two liberal educators, he also did to win his way to the Governorship; and if his viewpoints were unpopular in Georgia he would not be its chief executive.

Moreover, Talmadge's antagonism to racial co-education is not only popular in Georgia; and one of the ironies of the situation is that the Southern Association officers who voted the ouster of the Georgia University system represent higher educational institutions from which Negro students are barred by law and practice.

IF YOU WISH TO BE CALLED NAMES, BUY WHITMAN'S

Three years ago the NAACP asked the Whitman Candy Company of Philadelphia to discontinue its offensive labeling of "Pickaninny Chocolates."

The company not only ignored the request, but blossomed out this year with a bright red package in which, without saying so, it virtually tells the NAACP and the colored purchasers of Whitman's candies to go to blazes.

NOV 29 1941

A company official told the AFRO last week that the candy would sell just as well when labeled "Peppermint Chocolates," but for some queer reason the company did not do this.

Instead, it repeats the indignity, adds to it by increasing the size and color of the lettering, and blandly sends those who protest a form letter advising them they shouldn't be insulted.

This inexcusable disregard of the good will of candy buyers is remarkable in the field of modern advertising.

As we see it, Whitman is saying to colored buyers everywhere, "We do not desire your trade."

Our answer, it seems, should be to the effect that we do not want Whitman's peppermints, Whitman's Sampler, or any other Whitman products.

VITRIOLIC BLAST LEVELED AT BIBB FOR ATTACK ON LEADERS

BY M. S. STUART

WEARY of hearing, reading and talking about the numerous, sickening instances of race prejudice in our native America; almost despairing of improvement, with hope a limp and drooping thing in the lap of a discouraging situation; apprehensive lest this wide spread, deep rooted, apparently incurable national malady may at the crucial time prove the weak spot, the defect in our armor of defense, through which the enemies of democracy may break to prove its undoing and impracticability as a device for the government of mankind, this effort had resolved to seek respite from these sour winds of contention by writing this week on a subject as free as possible from controversial angles and trends. In fact, Cotton—inanimate, impersonal Cotton—had been selected as the soft and soothing topic of diversion to the more pleasant fields of thought; and the assembling of data on this subject had already begun, when the Courier came, heavy with its usual abundance of interesting news and reading matter. In its columns, mind changing declarations were encountered. So Cotton as a subject for discussion must for the present be tabled.

Mr. Stuart

A STONE IN THE PUDDING

NOV 15 1941

But the pleasant rumination of the current issue's columnar contents ran into a rude interruption when the mental molars crashed into a stone in the literary pudding in the form of Columnist Bibb's ugly broadside directed at Negro leadership.

SEE what this distinguished columnist says about those in whom you have reposed confidence: "It is now beginning to be realized and clearly understood that we have no stalwart leadership at all." Further, he asserts in effect that all who now essay the role of leadership, in whatever capacity, are, "scheming, cunning, flat-foot hustlers and hungry dogs, lean gray wolves, the vultures and jackals, seeking to capitalize upon the plight of a floundering people." Well, those are hard, nasty bones he is handing you to gnaw. Of course, you disagree with the epithets, the coarse, repulsive, log camp language in which he has clothed his so-called argument. That, however, is only the minor evil of the matter. Hold your nose while you undress this proposition he advances, and you expose a hunch back, pot-bellied, illogical deformity—a creature of inconsistencies and contradictions, flagrant fallacies glaring through the flimsy observations.

"IT DON'T MAKE SENSE"

In one paragraph, Brother Bibbs says that lawyers, physicians, ministers and others who are "insecure" (economically) cannot and should not "speak for the race" because such persons might owe the butcher, the landlord or be encumbered by a mortgage, and, therefore, incapable of leadership. According to this reasoning, then, only the secure, the wealthy are capable of leadership.

BUT another paragraph in the same piece laments the absence of current martyrs to lead us, bemoans the passing of the age of "self-abnegation." Put these two propositions together, to wit: That we ought to have some martyrs to lead us, and that only the secure, the wealthy can lead, and they hatch out the inevitable conclusion that what Bibbs is crying for is some rich martyrs to lead the race. You know "there ain't no such animal." Among the common, dictionary breed, no Morgans, Mellons or Rockefellers have ever been found.

LEADERS IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

In truth we do have leaders, both local and national. Very sensibly they have changed their manner of leading to be in tune with these material times.

True, we no longer tolerate the blantant, mouthing, ineffective protesters. Instead we have a type of quiet leaders who, in their respective fields, seek only results—not just noise. They are doing right well. Here some names will be called, and the Courier's Chicago Columnist is requested to call the names of some of "the dogs, wolves" and other brutes he had in mind.

Urges Passive Resistance

Dear Sir: By reading our newspapers and statements of various so-called leaders, one gets the idea that there are some of us who are still in doubt about what the white man thinks of us and our rights. No Negro, be he nine or ninety, could possibly be unaware of the planned inferior status which "our democratic" white folk have for us, and that is true of Herr Hitler's Germany, Mr. Churchill's England, and Mr. Roosevelt's America. If there is some doubt in anyone's mind, I suggest that they read the daily papers, go to the movies, or try to enlist in the democratic air forces to help God "save the King."

That being true, the point then is not what group of white, would be, world rulers will do the most for us after the war, BUT what are WE going to do for ourselves NOW. We know their plan to keep us in "our place" is well organized and I for one, think it is high time for us to organize a counter-plan to offset the vile propaganda of press, movies and radio. It is time for us to stop wasting our time and money and get to work and to fighting for what we know to be right.

We get on our knees and say, "thank you Father" for every little right thing they do, such as allowing the almighty Navy football team to play "against" a Negro. Hell, that Navy belongs to us as much as to any white man in this country. They do not Jim-Crow our taxes, do they? If they did, we could have a few ships of our own. That was only their duty and should not have been mentioned in our press, let alone praises for it.

I shall never have any more confidence in Negro leaders, the Negro press, the Negro's future unless and until they get together and fight for the Negro's rights FIRST, and to hell with the consequences. And what is nor aid for the freedom of white minorities in Europe until I AM FREED FIRST.

NOV 29 1941

I challenge all red-blooded Negroes to join me in a passive resistance movement for freedom and democracy in America and England: Join me in contempt for all men like Hitler, whether they be in Europe or America: Join me in contempt and hate of all Negro leaders, who insist in going along with the white man's plan and diabolical scheme to keep us in this position of inferiority. We are less than dogs in the eyes of all white men, and all other men look down on us because we refuse to fight against this damnable position. I know the masses are ready to fight, all we need is a leader. I challenge just one national leader to step forward and lead us. I will mount a soap box, I will go to jail or concentration camp if need be, but I SHALL NEVER FIGHT for any one until these black slaves are FREE.

As the CROW Flies

by

DR. W. E. B. DuBOIS

DEC 13 1941

At the invitation of the American Council of Learned Societies I have been attending this month in Cuba a Platica, a series of discussions, in which numerous distinguished intellectuals from Europe and America took part.

Among the universities represented were Columbia, California, Chicago, Michigan, Harvard, Montreal, Mexico and Chili. Other universities were represented indirectly by former professors; these included the Sorbonne, Vienna, Madrid, Oxford and Barcelona. The only Negro institutions represented were Atlanta University and the Haitian Ecole Normale des Instituteurs.

Dr. DuBois

It was a stirring experience to meet in Havana certain men of world-wide reputation: there was Jules Romains of France; and Count Sforza of Italy; Henri Bonnet and Henri Laugier, also of France, and Guiseppe Borgese. There was the great Cuban liberal, Ortiz y Fernandez; a former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Norway, together with authors and poets. Bellegarde of Haiti was one of the most widely known and best liked of the fifty or more delegates and I was very proud of the position which he occupied in the esteem of all. From America came Louis Adamic, Max Ascoli, Freda Kirchwey, and Richard Pattee.

It was a fitting introduction to this curious and intriguing meeting to fly from Atlanta to Havana. It was the longest journey in the air I have ever taken—something like two thousand miles in all—and the comfort and ease and convenience was astonishing. There was no vestige of racial discrimination and the sense of being above a tired and distraught world had infinite compensation. Awhile we rode above the clouds looking down upon a silver glory filled with cliffs and rolls and fluffy waves of mist; below the dark earth of the Florida Everglades glimpsed through; above was the cloudless grey-blue sky. Then came the sea. Sometimes it looked like a glacier of ice and snow; sometimes a single cloud hung over it like a cotton bowl or skein of silk; then we dropped and swooped and grandly swirled and I am in the midst of the broad, clean, cream-colored city of Havana.

Perhaps most enlightening in this meeting was a new orientation, a new centering of earthly affairs. Here were men and fine men, cultivated scholars, gentlemen of high social standing who showed their breeding in every movement. And yet they were refugees. They had been driven out of their homes and often away from their families. They had been spit upon and beaten. One felt the tensity of their feeling even when the subject under discussion did not warrant it. I can hear Laugier, humped-backed and near-sighted, almost screaming with shrill voice over some proposed change of word in the resolutions. I can see the calm, thin Sforza with his emotions always well in hand, and yet kicked across the world in the prime of life.

Looking upon these fellow human beings I wrote out one night, a resolution to present to the conference. It was not adopted, but it expressed my thought and I am sure the thought of many others:

"We who represent the brain workers of the world, meeting in Havana in this day of the agony of civilization, solemnly reaffirm our unaltered belief in freedom of thought, breadth of emotion, and liberty of life. We do not dare attempt to apportion among men and peoples of the past, the full balance of blame for a paradox of culture, which has mingled human misery and degredation with miracles of technique and triumphs of knowledge. But in the horror of the present, we unhesitatingly place the guilt for this new and bloody sweat of mankind, upon the shoulders of those apostles of reaction and deliberate cruelty and hate who, today increase evil without hope of good.

"We disown all those, who for envy or profit or blind delusion deny to any human being the elemental rights of man. By safeguarding the strength of men, protecting the souls of women and educating the minds of children, we still seek to break from the necks of humanity, the chains of poverty, crime and disease and free mankind for creative effort and civilized life. We welcome to fellowship in a new crusade, all men of every race, creed and hue, for a world movement toward Peace, Beauty, the Good Life and the free Spirit.

"Toward this we see one path alone; a democracy where every man has a voice in government, in art and in work; where every voice has the power of thoughtful utterance, and every soul, the will to see the stars."

Nazism Among Negroes

During recent months Negro Nazi agents in America, acting on Hitler's instructions, have been energetic in sponsoring a black "back to Africa" movement in certain parts of the United States, particularly in Harlem, the Negro district of New York, says a message from New York.

The main object of these black Fascists, apart from unscrupulously capitalising upon legitimate grievances of the Negroes, is to split Americans into opposing camps, white against black, and thus to weaken the country as a whole and hamper its defence.

The chief of these negro Nazi dupes, who, fortunately, have only a small following among the blacks in the United States, appears to be one Arthur Reid, president of the "African Patriotic League."

Another black Fascist rabble-rouser is Robert Jordan. He speaks under the auspices of the "Ethiopian Pacifist League." The League formerly had an anti-Fascist programme, but with Jordan's adept guidance, it developed into a pro-Axis group.

WORKS WITH JAPS

Jordan works closely with the Japanese. He, it is said, periodically visits the Japan Institute in New York, which is registered with the United States Department as a propaganda agency for Tokyo. He seems to be an ardent exponent of of the Nipponese cause in the Far East, and his speeches are filled with such statements as this one:

"The Japanese is the friend of the Negro. Racially we are both the same. Japan has no territorial ambitions in Africa. It wants to live in peace with the black man. Japan has done wonders for China. It has fought Communism and it has fought the British. We nationalist Negroes are fighting them both."

A third outstanding negro fifth columnist, who specialises in betraying the interests of his people, is one known as Ras de Killer, who also advocates Japanese control of the whole of Asia. Like others of his ilk, de Killer is in favour of transplanting all American Negroes to Africa.

The propaganda, which is being fed into Harlem generally by a variety of anti-Democratic organisations, concentrates on building anti-British and anti-Soviet sentiment among the Negroes. Every leaflet and every street meeting agitates for an intensified effort to prevent aid to England and Russia, it is emphasised.

The United States authorities are keeping a close watch on the nefarious activities of Hitler's black agents, who, it is officially stated, carry no weight whatsoever with the Negro masses in America.

On the other hand, a number of progressive Negro organisations are doing all they can to combat the subversive doings of the black fifth columnists in their midst.

All Races in N.Y.'s East River Houses

By EUGENE GORDON

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — One woman I talked to called New York's East River houses "a sort of league of nations."

The nationalities there range something like this: 60 per cent Italian, 15 per cent Jewish, 10 per cent colored, 10 per cent Spanish speaking, and 5 per cent "all others" — Greek, German, Armenian, Irish, Czechoslovakian, Russian.

Of course everything is "not perfect' 'here, Max Miller, head of the buying committee of the consumers' co-operative, said, 'far from it." But the people here are "learning" how to live together "without fighting."

Kindergarten Mothers' Club

"We have all sorts of activities here and all races and nationalities take part in them," Mr. Miller, who is Jewish, stated. "Take Mrs. Cornelia Lacey," he went on. "She is colored and is president of the Mothers' Club of the East River kindergarten.

The temporary chairman of the East River Tenants' council is tall, dark, tousleheaded William Blake, fourth generation America. Mrs. Blake fair and blonde, is Scandinavian.

All Races Play Together

Not only do the ten big apartment houses, from six to eleven stories high, furnish modern homes for 1,170 families of all nationalities but the buildings and their area, with trees, gardens and playgrounds, are unquestionably beautiful.

One of the numerous signs of improvement in the neighborhood is the magnificent new Benjamin Franklin High School. More beautiful than the houses or the grounds is the sight of colored, Jewish, Italian, Irish and old-stock American kids contesting with one another in healthful play.

Prejudice Is Banned

"We were told when we moved in that there must be no exhibition of prejudice against any race or nationality," said Mrs. A. McKenna, Irish-American and a Catholic. Her husband, a maintenance worker, has a job in Arlington, N.J.

If the parents want to learn how to get along with one another, let them watch their own kids at play in the gardens and courtyards of the East River houses, Mrs. Mary Filardo, an Italian mother of four children said.

"Mrs. Kaiser, my next-door neighbor, is colored," Mrs. Filardo said. "We're on real neighborly terms. I mean real neighborly, like visiting and exchanging little gifts and asking about each other's children. Her boy and my boy are pals."

Manager's Job Delicate

Big and handsome young Jacob Levine, manager of East River houses, sometimes faces a delicate task. A tenant complains that there's too much noise or that he has lost his job and therefore, can no longer pay the rent. He must leave the project.

Mr. Levine, suspecting something deeper, suggests that they sit and talk it over. Then the truth comes out: the tenant "can't" live next door to "somebody who doesn't speak good English" or somebody who is colored.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the people here, despite their original prejudices are learning that they can and that they should get along with other races," said Mr. Levine.

The Bill Of Rights

IN THE MIDST OF a world-wide attack on the "four freedoms," speech, press, religion and the right of assembly, America, at last sucked into the terrible holocaust by a treacherous attack, this week pauses to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

Many, who accept the precious guarantees of the Bill of Rights as a matter of course, are really not familiar with this great human document, which is formed by the first ten amendments to the Constitution.

This week by Presidential proclamations and by proclamations of many governors and mayors, public attention will be focussed on the Bill of Rights, which was formally ratified and became a part of the Constitution on December 15, 1791.

GEORGIA RATIFIES IN '39

Virginia's ratification of the amendments on that date to become the eleventh state to do so, effected their adoption as law. Strangely enough three states did not ratify the amendments until two years ago. Among these was Georgia which not until March 18, one hundred and forty eight years afterward, decided to put its belated approval on the measures.

When originally adopted the liberal provisions safeguarding civil liberties to American citizens, were not extended to black residents of the new states. In some sections of the country even at this late date, there is a number of persons, who by their actions indicate their belief that the human guarantees under rthe Bill of Rights should be denied Americans whose faces are black.

For example it is hard for many in this section to understand the broad provisions of Article Five, which specifically holds that "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or other infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. . . ."

DO NOT UNDERSTAND LAW

Lynchers through the years have never been able to grasp the full meaning of this law, just as many police and other peace officers who daily deliberately violate Article Four holding that "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall be issued but upon probably cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized."

In spite of these isolated and irritating refusals of some Americans to recognize that the Bill of Rights covers all citizens, black Americans nevertheless can join wholeheartedly in the observance this week.

For this week marks not only the anniversary of this great idea of government which stands perilously threatened by forces that would throw human freedom back to the Dark Ages, but also the 76th anniversary of another move toward a broader establishment of these principles.

On December 18, 1865, the Thirteenth Amendment, was declared to have been ratified in a proclamation by the Secretary of State. It was this amendment, and not the Emancipation Proclamation that marked the end of slavery in this country.

RAISED TO FREE SLAVES

The measure proposed to the Thirty-Eighth Congress by President Lincoln, was deemed necessary by the Civil War executive because of efforts made by post-bellum legislatures of South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi to perpetuate the institution of slavery under other names.

Three years later on July 26, 1868, the Fourteenth Amendment holding the citizenship rights of black Americans were not to be abridged, became law. And two years later, March 30, 1870, the Fifteenth Amendment establishing equal rights for Negro and white citizens was passed.

Interesting is the fact that four years before the 13th Amendment was passed the only bachelor President, James Buchanan, way back in 1861 sought to solve the slavery issue by appeasement.

At his suggestion a joint resolution was passed by Congress, which would have left the whole matter of slavery up to the individual states. Fortunately for you, this infamous law, called the Corwin Amendment, failed for lack of a sufficient number of ratifications, though it was approved by Ohio and Illinois.

WOULD NOT HALT SLAVERY

This proposal which would have been the Thirteenth Amendment, read as follows:

"No amendment shall be made to the Constitution which will authorize or give to Congress the power to abolish or interfere within any state, with the domestic instiutions thereof, including that of persons held to labor or service by the laws of said state."

Because they have so long been victims of oppression by those who would deny them the basic principles of human freedom, black Americans better than any others can understand the struggle in which America, Great Britain, China and Russia are now engaged.

They know that only under a democracy will they ever have any hopes of achieving full recognition for themselves of those "inalienable" rights accorded others under the Bill of Rights.

They feel that it is not a visionary document expressing noble sentiments in lofty lauguage. They see in it a promise of freedom from the tyrannies of men, as well as of intelerance, bigotry and hate. It protects individuals, races, minorities, and society as a whole, from religious, intellectual, and political restraints.

That's why the thirteen millions of black Americans today, as in past years, stand ready, able and willing to give their very all to their country in this the greatest period of danger in its history.

Slavery Being Turned Upside Down, White Editor Contends

DEC 19 1941

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.—(SNS)—White workers are being placed in more and more traditional "Negro jobs"—the race has "no leadership,—and the Negro race is in a helluva fix", Jonathan Daniel, white editor of the News and Observer, told the Negro Forum here Thursday.

DEC 19 1941

He cited instances in which so-called Negro jobs are gradually being closed to the race and said that crafts once practiced almost exclusively by Negroes are disappearing and that Negroes are being pushed by economic pressure from the farms with no place to go.

With white persons willing to close the door to profitable employment to Negroes and pay higher taxes to support the idle race, he said, it looks as if slavery is being turned upside down.

Race relations between the white and Negro races in North Carolina are "very cordial", he opined, and North Carolina is a state in which "we can live and talk with each other with understanding and comradeship".

"Prejudices are not restricted to the white race alone", he said. "The Negro race is without leadership. The race does not have a man such as Booker T. Washington that it can look to for leadership.

Powell In Slap At League Sec'y

By ALVIN E. WHITE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—The Rev. Adam Powell, newly elected member of New York's city council and minority leader in the same group, made a bid for national recognition here Friday night speaking at the public mass meeting of the National Conference of Negro Youth at the Metropolitan Baptist church, but failed in his purpose when he became vituperative toward a former speaker, castigating a nationally known organization and calling the speaker a "fifth columnist" to the Negro race.

Although Rev. Powell did not mention either the speaker or his organization by name, it was generally understood that his references were directed to Lester Granger, acting secretary of the National Urban league, himself a nationally known figure, and the organization he represented.

WORLD IS MUDDLED

Mr. Granger had been the first speaker on a rather lengthy program and briefly told the conference that it would serve no good purpose unless the message of the conference was taken back to the average young Negro of today. And he stated that the delegates to the conference did not represent the average Negro youth of today for the average Negro youth was the one who could not attend these conferences, but rather stayed home because of lack of funds and clothes to attend such a meeting.

He further pointed out that the entire world is in a muddle state and it behooved no groups to laugh at the predicament other groups found themselves in because of their particular beliefs.

Mr. Granger indicated the future facing Negroes was not very hopeful and that it is possible that out of the present conflict, there would be intensification of hate movements, possibly singling out the Negro for special persecution. His suggestions were for unification of purpose to meet the growing problems which would occur in a highly mechanized world growing out of the latest war.

DICKERSON SPEAKS

"There is no racial formula for the solution of the national problems," he said, "but we pledge the support of persons of my age group to help the Negro out of the situation he finds himself in today."

Earl Dickerson, alderman from Chicago and member of the President's Fair Employment Practice committee, followed Mr. Granger and spoke at length on the part the Negro is playing in the world today, emphasizing national defense.

"Unfortunately there are some Americans in every sphere of the economic, political and cultural life of this country who place the racial and religious prejudices that are relics of a by-gone and outmoded order before the welfare of the nation," said Mr. Dickerson. "They would shut Negro youth out of the struggle for freedom ending its long pursuit of life, liberty and happiness. Some of these people have been blinded by color bars; some corrupted by petty privileges, some are extracting huge profits from your oppression. These few have no little power.

"They own the press and radio: control theaters and schools, influence the moral tone of many churches, dominate some of our basic industries and control many of our leading trade unions. Through the avenues of propaganda, now more active than ever, they seek to spread this virus of race hatred at that moment when national unity is most imperative. You must counteract this un-American and vicious propaganda."

AUDIENCE CHEERS

The crowded house strained and moved anxiously in its seat as the chairman introduced the next speaker, the Rev. Adam Powell. All eyes were on the tall, handsome blond as he made his way to the center of the platform and every ear bent to catch his every word. Distinguished in appearance, looking far more like a white man than a Negro, Rev. Powell began, in his best pulpit manner. But it wasn't long before he had the crowd in the palm of his hand, figuratively speaking, and the cheers which greeted his every utterance indicated he was giving the crowd just what it wanted—an opportunity to give vent to pent up emotions.

Long after the speaker had taken his seat and bowed his head in silent prayer as is his custom after a public appearance, the cheering grew into an ovation. The young minister, flushed with his recent political successes in Harlem, rose and asked the Virginia State acapella choir, which had furnished the music, to sing, "I've heard of a City Called Heaven," adding the final dramatic touch to an occasion which sober Washington regretted Saturday morning.

The Rev. Mr. Powell prefaced his remarks with a brief statement concerning the recent elections in New York which he was fortunate enough to win and praised several other enterprises with which he had been identified.

GRANGER LEAVES

He then went into a tirade against Mr. Granger who, rushed in his own work, had to leave the conference as soon as he had finished speaking to get back to New York.

Among other things in his discussion Mr. Powell declared:

"In the middle is the Negro tricked by modernized Uncle Toms posing as leaders of the Negro people. Enemies are on our right, enemies on our left and chaois in our own ranks. Instead of laying down our lives for democracy, we should demand some democracy to fight for. There is no reason why the Negro should not rise up and give leadership to the world. We must recognize the fact that in the crisis of the world is the Negro's opportunity. Today, we make tomorrow's world the world we dream of or today we make it a world of discrimination, lynching, hypocrisy."

Calling by inference the Urban League, a "puppet in the hands of people" who impose upon the Negro a class system," Mr. Powell declared it a burden and its leaders fifth columnists.

"It is the fifth columnist of the Negro race and we shall purge it. There is no hope as long as we are led by people of that character."

STIRS HEARERS

Further, Mr. Powell stated, "When a man takes a sum of money from the piper he has to dance the tune the piper plays."

He closed his fiery address by calling upon the people to make their demands and to assert themselves, saying the future of the Negro lies with the people themselves and not the "big shots, but the ragged people, the hungry people."

Saturday's sessions were no less exciting.

Presided over by Jeanette Welch of the AKA Non Partisan council, addresses were made by Miss Winfred Norman, national chairman and several other persons who joined in the "plenary session" the theme of which was "Negro Youth Versus Hitler."

The Saturday session was possibly the liveliest of them all. Panel discussions were held in the conference rooms of the church, but at a late hour no reports had been rendered.

BELIEVES EDUCATED MIS-LEADERS MORE TO BE FEARED THAN "DUMB, DRIVEN MASSES"

LEADERSHIP is quite an issue. Some weeks ago, Miss McKenzie deduced the ranks from which our leadership should come. I think her idea was that our leaders would be stronger if they were able to reinforce their arguments by inducing mass action, perhaps political action. Mr. Bibb has recently struck at our leadership with his saw-toothed scythe and won an immediate retort from Columnist Stuart.

A letter comes to hand this week which raises for this writer the question: "Who shall select our leaders?" Are we to regard with suspicion those in positions of leadership who find favor with whites? If we choose our own leaders and these leaders eventually win concessions from the whites, when and where are we to determine that our self-selected leaders have gone the limit of using the whites for our ends and have become tools of the whites for ends not for the good of the race? It is all right to be cynical about some types of leaders and their backing, but we must be thoughtful also. We reproduce the letter referred to above, written by Mr. H. S. O'Rourke of Columbus, Ohio, for the benefit of your thinking.

MAJOR TARGET

"IN reference to the invitation extended by the Urban League to other organizations 'concerned with the welfare of Negroes' to meet with it in an ffort to 'co-ordinate on Negro security," writes Mr. O'Rourke, "the security of the Negro is the major target of many organizations among whites. They are working overtime in efforts to forestall any and all Negro advancement.

"Notable among these 'white' pit diggers in the South are the local Chambers of Commerce, the Lions, the K. of P.'s and all labor union locals, except coal miners, and, of course, the octopus, the K.K.K.

ARE "BAD MEDICINE"

"One in the know about conditions in the South knows that local Negroes who are recommended by any of the above groups, including police departments and other local officers are 'bad medicine' for their people because they are tied hard and fast to the stooge box and are compelled to operate as such. Among these stooges of the most dangerous type is the intelligent Negro who has broken, is breaking or wants to break the law; physicians who are malpractitioners scare specialists or quacks, pharmacists who are dope peddlers for such physicians; teachers whose jobs are secure only by way of conformity to 'order'; preachers whose sermons and pastoral activities keep their congregations scuttled and hating; gullible heads of Negro soldier, fraternal, civic and political groups.

SEEKS FAULTY FELLOWS

"The political and fraternal White South seeks the above faulty fellows to designate as Negro leaders. There is also a weakness among them to encourage Negroes to elevate freaks or any other caliber of extremist except actual Negro patriots.

"A check on these statements will be revealing. Something might be done about the blighting of local influence through their national heads or through publicity. Negro misleaders should be investigated and exposed locally.

"Through many executives of societies represented at this planned meeting, white enemies will be informed of all plans and aided in forestalling their realization, back home, by those innocent, earnest and faithful few in every community who sacrifice their funds to carry on the Negro's climb from the 'bottom.'

"Find a way to 'smoke out' these decoys or hunting dogs and the Negro's climb will seem unbelievable. Let him remain and we as a people will wander in the wilderness.

"Our lower classes cannot possibly hurt us like those we expect to see when we look up and they are not there, those who have had educational training and are spiritual defectives. It is the leader who can obstruct the way—not the weaklings behind.

"Double check any Negro from the South more than 30 years old who has been prominent. Discard most over 50.

"The Southern youths, black and white, are more dependable.

"The North, too, is infested with Negro misleaders in high places. Every town seems to have its quota or more.

Court Voids Race-Hatred Law in Jersey

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 5.—The New Jersey Supreme Court today reversed the sentences of nine men accused of making or promoting anti-Jewish speeches at a German-American Bund rally, and held the State's race hatred law was invalid because it conflicted with constitutional guarantees of free speech.

Among the nine were Wilhelm Kunze, the bunds's national leader, and August Klapprott, leader for the Eastern Seaboard States. Klapprott was also manager of Camp Nordland, in rural Sussex County, where the rally was held.

"To denounce one's fellows or advocate hostility to them, or a group," said the court in an opinion by Chief Justice Thomas J. Brogan, "is as revolting to any fair-minded man as it is absurd and unjust to the mind of a thoughtful man; yet, to make the speaker amenable to the criminal law, his utterances must be such as to create a "clear and present danger that will bring about the substantial evils' to society that the State has the right to prevent.

"The utterances must be such as constitute a danger to the State. We cannot say that the statements made by the plaintiffs-in-error were of this character."

The State's race hatred law made it a misdemeanor to make utterances in the presence of two or more persons of "hatred, abuse, violence or hostility" against any race, color or creed.

STUDY SHOWS COLOR CASTE DECLINES AS RACE PRIDE GROWS

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Social barriers among Southern Negroes, which formerly made an "upper class" of light-skinned members of the race, today are breaking down under the impact of growing racial pride, and brown-skinned Negroes tend to attain a higher rank than light-skinned Negroes.

These recent changes in the class system of Southern Negroes were disclosed by Dr. W. Lloyd Warner, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, in "Deep South," published this week by the University of Chicago Press. The book reports an extensive social and anthropological study of a Southern city, conducted under the direction of Dr. Warner.

NO COLOR BARRIERS AMONG UPPER CLASS

Four social scientists participated in the research: Dr. Burleigh B. Gardner and his wife, Mary R. Gardner, who carried on the study from the point of view of the whites, and Dr. Allison Davis and his wife, Elizabeth Stubbs Davis, whose research was from the Negro point of view.

"One need no longer be olive, yellow, or white, or even brown with 'good hair' (i. e., hair similar to that of whites), to be a member of the Negro upper class," Dr. Warner wrote. "The upper class today is largely a brown group, with Negroid types of hair.

"The emergence of this new upper class has been accompanied by an increase in caste solidarity (caste is defined as a non-intermarrying group), in 'race pride' and in the development of segregated institutions. Although it is impossible, in our economic system, for the colored society to function successfully as a 'solid' or highly organized group, it has been possible for it to develop at least a dogma of caste solidarity.

TABOO WHITE MARRIAGES

"The dogma and its related emotional patterns have been accompanied by strong taboos against the inter-marriage of whites and Negroes. A generation ago an individual's status was increased by his kinship to white persons of the middle or upper classes. Today both inter-marriage and illegitimacy are rather heavily tabooed in the colored upper and upper-middle classes."

"For example," he noted, "a large bridge party given by the agents of a colored insurance company, was attended by 26 men and 30 women of the upper and upper-middle classes. Only four black men were present. They were all agents of the company. Two of them served the guests, the other two sat outside in the hall and did not participate in the party."

ELIGIBILITY RULES

In discussing the new criteria of upper class membership, Dr. Warner, whose research for ten years has dealt with class systems in American life, pointed out that the most important questions asked about a person regarding his eligibility to move into the upper class are:

1. What has been his education?
2. Has he professional or semi-professional status?
3. Are his language, manners, and dress "polished"?
4. Is he black?
5. In the case of women, have they had relations with white men?

"The approved answer to the last two questions must be negative?"

Dr. Warner also discussed the changes caused by modern industrialism in the Negro-white relationship of the South.

Manufacturing firms moving in from the North hire labor as cheaply as possible, he said, with the result that Negroes are employed to do the same type of labor as whites, and may even be preferred to white workers because they can be hired for a lower wage.

INDUSTRIAL BOOM BRINGS BENEFIT

This puts money into the hands of colored workers, producing a small class of Negroes on an economic level above that of the lower-class whites, he said.

"In such a community, the white population must resort to terrorization continually in order to impress on the colored group that economic equality on the part of the latter is not real equality—that actually any white man, no matter how poor or illiterate, is above any colored man and must be treated with the appropriate deference.

"In the old plantation areas, on the other hand, where almost all of the colored people are families of poverty-stricken tenants and almost all of the white people are families or owners or large landlords, the system of caste is almost 'perfect' economically and socially, and there is relatively little terrorization of the lower caste.

"When the castes are in economic competition, as laborers and tenants, however, violence and conflict seem to be at their height."

Moral Bankruptcy

The other day at Atlanta Gov. Gene Talmadge publicly confessed that he had once participated in the extralegal flogging of a Negro. Considering the kind of people who become heads of governments nowadays, the confession is much less shocking than it might have been a generation ago. It will certainly surprise no one who is acquainted with Governor Talmadge's psychology and general sociological outlook. Neither will his smug and unctuous observation that "maybe I wasn't in such bad company after all." The company to which Governor Talmadge was electing himself was that of St. Paul the Apostle. St. Paul before his conversion had persecuted the Jewish Christians and had even consented to the lynching of St. Stephen. "That," said the Governor, "proves to me that good people can be misguided and do bad things." The implication here seems to be that while it is wrong to flog Negroes and stone Christians, a bad deed committed by a good man is somehow in a separate category from that of a bad deed by a bad man. Or possibly that "goodness" and "badness" may be somehow independent of good or bad actions.

Georgia's Governor made these extraordinary statements at hearings on a petition for the pardon of six Ku Klux Klansmen who had been convicted and imprisoned for the flogging of union mill workers four years ago. Those observations are the very essence of right reason compared to statements at the same hearing by one Ike Wingrow, attorney for the Klansmen. "It may seem strange," said Mr. Wingrow, "for a Jew to say this, but I honor the Ku Klux Klan . . . These Klansmen were trying to do the right thing even if they used the wrong methods. If I were Cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan, I would be proud of it." Such an utterly irra-

RACE PROBLEM

Charleston Newspaper Discusses Negro Troubles in New York.

In one of the newspapers of New York city one reads that the troubles in Harlem are in large part caused by the residential segregation of the colored folk. It is contended that were the negro families scattered throughout the city the racial conflicts would abate says the Charleston News and Courier.

If that be true, a remedy suggests itself. The colored people should be encouraged and assisted to establish homes in hundreds of villages and towns throughout the state and states nearby.

Our information is that in the North the 4,000,000 negroes are crowded in a dozen or twenty great cities and industrial towns. In a tour of a week in the state of New Hampshire some years ago we observed only three negroes, besides bellhops having temporary jobs in two or three summer hotels.

In New York city are 478,000 negroes, more than half the whole number in South Carolina. In New York all of them dwell in three or four areas of a few score acres and they dwell to themselves, while in South Carolina they are distributed over a territory of more than 30,000 square miles.

In South Carolina there are still race conflicts and crimes, but they have greatly diminished in recent years; indeed they are now rare.

The distribution of the negroes in New York, their settlement on farms and in Tonawanda and other sweet Auburns of the dale, would help the conditions that seems downright critical.

Why the Northern farms and villages do not seem to welcome the colored people is more than The News and Courier attempts to explain. The "race problem" in Northern cities is more acute by far than it is in South Carolina or than it has been in the last sixty-five years.

Go, write it in a martial-hand, be brief—it is no matter how witty.—Twelfth Night.

NO TIME FOR RACE AGITATION

Editor, The Journal: I have been sending your paper for the past week or so considerable copies of letters addressed to the Macon Telegraph, in which I raised some direct points on the University System-Cocking matter.

In my study of various theories concerning this matter, as brought out by newspaper items from all sides, I still do not understand why some of you do not bring out more strenuously the inopportuneness of the time for having this or any other similar controversy aggravated.

Personally, I am unalterably opposed to racial coeducation. Cocking's guilt or innocence is of negligible importance. All other features of the case, while important in varying degrees, are transcended by the problem of handling our racial troubles in the South with such satisfaction that we shall not be disturbed by outside forces in doing so.

Has anyone recalled the 30-day filibuster invoked by Southern members of the United States Senate a few years ago in their effort to block confirmation of the infamous antilynching bill that had already passed the House? Has anyone recalled that one of the principal arguments against this antilynching bill was that we had reduced lynching to a minimum, and had practically solved the racial problem on our own accord? Does anyone recall the fact that we already have imposed upon us the necessity to include Negroes on our juries because of decisions in the Scottsboro cases? And is it not known that there is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States a case of a certain Negro who was convicted in the Superior Court of Sparta, in Hancock County, in the Ocmulgee Circuit (Judge Joe Ben Jackson's decision being involved), involving violation of our Georgia labor contract law, financed by Negro interests or sympathizing organizations from the North? Do we not have this problem growing more and more without lending our own untimely efforts toward aggravation?

From reading the Cocking transcript—granting that it is authentic—it is apparent that Cocking himself was lending his efforts toward setting up such Negro units as would avoid the possibility of having sooner or later to admit Negroes to white units of the University System.

And the only way to stave off such a day, the only way we can stave off further racial problems, the only way we can keep down congressional and Supreme Court intervention, is to handle our Negro problem with such degree of justice and fairness that no legitimate complaint can be raised. And certainly this was no time to dig up a controversy involving this question; certainly, if the Governor thought Cocking ought to be fired, the matter could have been handled with minimum of publicity. I do not know Dean Cocking (although I have studied under Dr. Pusey), but I believe that he could have been approached in a sane and sensible way, and would have either amended his ways or resigned without requiring so much fanfare. Similar situations are handled all along in our local schools—and I have taught school myself when this was the case. It saves everybody embarrassment. Certainly, the Governor could have made an effort to handle this case in such a manner, if his sole purpose was to weed out unsatisfactory racial attitudes.

SIR: A reading of the press of today convinces me that there are many persons who do not realize that the struggle to destroy Hitler and Hitlerism is not a white man's battle alone. Such people, many of them Negroes, feel that the Negro, particularly the Southern Negro, faces such discrimination and suffers such injustices in our country that he would have very little, if anything, to lose by a Hitler victory. To such people permit me to suggest a reading of "Mein Kampf." There we find the German Führer revealed as the Machiavellian maniac that he is.

This book divulges a mind burning with a fanatic zeal to spread its beliefs with the sword throughout the world. In this Nazified world the Aryans shall rule as the superior race; other white peoples shall come under them, followed by the yellow races. The Negro—well, he is just "half ape." His art is worthless; his eminent artists, scholars, professional men, etc., are not educated in the same sense as are members of other races; they are only "trained," e. g., as one would train a poodle. He should not be permitted to become a citizen, but should, with the Jew, forever be a subject. He has nothing to contribute to civilization, and wherever his blood is found, there automatically is deterioration. It does not take a Doctor of Philosophy to see where such a race would fit into Hitler's New Order. The backwoods of Talmadge's Georgia would be a heaven in comparison. Hitler's sincerity and religious fanaticism make this prognosis all the more terrible to contemplate.

Persons who can read these ideas and still feel that the Negro has no stake in this conflict are blinding their minds to the facts. The Negro's fate is inextricably interwoven with that of democracy, for only through this medium can there be any hope of achieving a world in which all men will be considered equal.

Ala. Solon Insults Race In Radio Talk

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Congressman Luther Patrick of Alabama, who is said to have used the words "nigger" and "darkie" in a news commentary over local radio station WWDC, Monday, Dec. 15, has been asked for a public apology by the District of Columbia branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In a letter to WWDC's program director concerning the Alabama representative's alleged insult, the N.A.A.C.P. stated: "Intolerant and derisive remarks directed toward any segment of our population create disunity and serve the aggressors who would destroy our American institutions. We would like to have your assurance that every effort will be made to prevent the repetition of insulting epithets."

HUNGRY DOGS

IF PUT TO WATCH MEAT PILE, ARE BOUND TO EAT SOME OF MEAT

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

NEVER before in the history of our free existence in this country, has there been such an appalling lack and dearth of red-blooded, two-fisted, upstanding leadership. Never before has there been such universal and wide-spread condemnation of those who have sallied forth and held themselves out as spokesmen and leaders of our people. It is now beginning to be keenly realized and clearly understood that we have no stalwart leadership at all.

Mr. Bibb

There are those who are "race problem hustlers," scheming scavengers, brazen opportunists, and beardless boys who arrogate to themselves the right to speak for us and to shape the policies that control us, but we have no devout, inspired and enlightened leadership. Scheming, hustling creatures have come to the fore and vouchsafe to take over the mantle and the hegemony, but they are hungry strivers. They cannot be expected to guard the meat pile without eating the meat. Hungry dogs cannot be expected to protect succulent treasures.

HUNGRY LEADERS SPEAK FOR RACE

It is ridiculous to believe that men who have just graduated from the dining cars and Pullmans, who have not yet won their spurs in their chosen professions, can get out and battle for the welfare of their people when they themselves are insecure. Yet, in most of our communities, the physician and lawyer along with the minister, are those who sit in interracial meetings and "speak for the race." How can they be expected to be independent in thought and action when they themselves are being harassed by the butcher, the baker, the landlord and the mortgage man. They are not far enough removed from poverty. Very little should be expected and very little is accomplished.

A YOUNG man who has been fostering "job fights," inciting pickets and fomenting strikes was warned a few days ago that he would lose his job as a "social service worker" if he kept up his belligerency. He said that what puzzled him was the fact that his boss was the head of an organization that was sustained by subscriptions and begging, he answered that his boss should not pose as a leader if he could not back up his inner thoughts. The young man failed to realize that "control over one's subsistence is control over one's will." Another case of the hungry dog being put to watch the meat pile.

AGE OF MARTYRS HAS PASSED

NOV 8 1941

Of course, we remember the cases of the martyrs of history. We remember that when Martin Luther sought to bring about religious reforms, that he faced death by saying that: "Upon this rock I stand and can do none other so God help me." We remember the modern martyrs like MacSwiney and Gandhi but in the light of world affairs, it appears that the age of martyrs has passed.

IN our age, the pioneers and trailblazers, like William Munro Trotter and Dubois were accorded such half-hearted response that the role of self-abnegation and vicarious sufferings does not appeal to the present regime. Now, we have the hungry dogs, the lean, gray wolves, the vultures, and the jackals who have foisted themselves upon us. Some call them mis-leaders, others call them Uncle Toms, still others call them traitors, but in all fairness, they are nothing more than scheming, cunning, flat-footed hustlers who are seeking to capitalize upon the miserable plight of a floundering people.

The ray of hope and the gleam of salvation and change that we note is the fact that almost every one has awakened to the fact that most of these spokesmen and policy-shapers are hustling for themselves. They are rapidly being discredited and repudiated. They will flinch and duck out of the picture as they are truly revealed as hungry dogs watching a meat pile.

RACE RELATIONS CLASS SUBJECT AT DRUID HILLS

Newton Union Will Hear Dr. Beall Sunday Evening

"Christian Race Relations" will be the subject of a special program of the Newton Training Union of the Druid Hills Baptist Church at 6:15 p. m. Sunday, according to Raymund Read Callaway, chairman of the missionary committee.

Dr. Noble Y. Beall, secretary of the Department of Education of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, handling race relationships for the Baptist denomination in 18 Southern states will be a special guest and will comment on the program presented by the young people.

R. B. Eleazer, educational director of the Interracial Commission, will bring a word of greeting, and distribute a copy of his widely discussed address, "Christianity and Racial Adjustment" to each member.

Special music will be presented by the William Harper singers of the Mount Zion Baptist Church, singing Negro spirituals under the direction of M. P. Bostick, Training Union director of the Mount Zion Church, colored. The spirituals will be "Didn't It Rain" and "Oh, Lord, Remember Me."

The subjects and speakers of the Newton Union who will lead panel discussions are as follows: "The Shame of the South" will be discussed by David A. Cason Jr.; "Contacts With Color" will be discussed by Miss Mary Stuart Arbuckle; "Curing Color Blindness" will be discussed by Rache Bell. Carl Osteen, program chairman, will preside.

Following the Union program and church services led by Dr. Louie D. Newton, the entire Newton Union will be guests of Mrs. Charlotte Leatherwood at a reception at her home, 51 Princeton Way, N. E.

The personality parade will be led by Jack Fairey and the mem-

Declaring that war demands a united and firm stand on the part of Georgia education, Chancellor S. V. Sanford yesterday expressed confidence that all irregularities in the University System would be adjusted in 90 days and predicted that when the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools meets next December Georgia's blacklisted colleges would be reinstated effective September 1, 1942.

In a letter to the presidents, faculties and students of the 10 colleges which have been suspended, effective next September, Chancellor Sanford said parents and students should not be disturbed at present, pointing out there was "ample time in which to rectify the existing situation."

Credits Acceptable.

Chancellor Sanford made it clear that all credits for the current school year would be accepted at any time and anywhere by all standard colleges and universities, as will credits earned during the fourth or summer quarter.

"It is a case growing out of a conflict of ideals and strong convictions of strong personalities," the chancellor wrote. "Let us all be calm, firm, consistent, courageous, and avoid spreading pessimism, mental confusion, uncertainty and panic.

"The United States is today at war," he continued. "This is another reason why we should stand united and firm. In this blackout period we must discover within ourselves resources to live by which will enable us to face the issue with courage. Dark times are often birth moments and we cannot see light in the darkness, but do well to hope that a new era will come to birth out of it, even though we know it will come through suffering and agony.

Faith in Education.

"When your country needs you, it will call you. The nation needs educated men, both in war and in peace. I am confident in the light of what is taking place in the world today that colleges and universities in democracies are the hope of the world. We must have faith in education if this world is to be saved from this and similar catastrophes.

"In the future, more than in the past, our colleges and universities must send forth men and women equipped to cope with the intricate problems which confront us today—with faith unsullied and undaunted and with ability to face facts honestly, seeking only the truth."

GOV. TALMADGE IS CONDEMNED BY PROFESSORS

Georgian Is Assailed for Ousting Dean.

DEC 29 1941

The American Association of University Professors at the close of its two day convention yesterday in the Stevens hotel condemned Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia for ousting Dean Walter D. Cocking, whom, the governor charged, advocated racial co-education.

"The association," said the statement approved by the convention delegates, "views with unqualified disapproval the recent interference by Gov. Talmadge in the university system of Georgia.

"Arbitrary action and political considerations in educational affairs are not in accord with sound education administration and are inimical to the welfare of education. They are particularly harmful when they involve an attempt to arouse racial prejudices, especially at a time when it is imperative that the races learn how to live together in accord with each other."

Southern Body Commended.

The association commended the investigation made of the dismissal of the dean by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary schools and its action, Dec. 4, in suspending several Georgia educational institutions from membership in the organization.

During the afternoon session Dr. Ernest V. Hollis, consultant of the American Council on Education, revealed his findings after a year's survey of the occupational status of holders of Ph. D. degrees from 1931-'40.

It was a common belief in former years, Dr. Hollis said, that at least 75 per cent of Ph. D. holders were in the teaching profession. From his study he discovered that the percentage is actually only 57.6.

Industry Claims 18.3%.

His survey was made of 22,509 Ph. D. degree holders. Of the total he found that the government employs 10.9 per cent and industry 18.3. Only 1.6 per cent are listed as unemployed and seeking employment. An additional 2.2 per cent were classified as unemployed, chiefly housewives, and not seeking employment.

Dr. Hollis said that 25 persons of the total Ph. D.'s are in asylums or jails.

DEC 29 1941

"The war has heightened interest in the employment status of America's research and other scholarly workers," Dr. Hollis said.

Dr. Hollis' findings are to be published in detail in March. He holds a Ph. D. degree in education.

Two Priests Plead For Negroes' Rights

When the people of this country discriminate against Negroes they violate one of the first principles of democracy, it was declared by two priests in speeches at the fourth annual convention of the American Catholic Sociological Society yesterday in the Hotel Astor.

The Rev. Paul Hanley Furfey, a professor at the Catholic University of America, Washington, asked: "Are all men created equal at least in a limited social and political sense? Well, then, why do we force the Negro into an underprivileged position, denying him equal economic opportunity, equal education opportunity and equal justice under law?"

The Rev. Francis J. Friedel, president of the American Catholic Sociological Society of the University of Dayton, Ohio, said: "We claim to be a democracy in this country, yet we fail to observe the most elemental principles of democracy toward an important segment of our population."

DIALECT OUTLAWED BY WAR DEPARTMENT

OCT 4 - 1941

Use of Word "Darkie" Over Radio Network Reveals New Order Which Has Been Issued.

SAVANNAH, Ill., Oct. 2—Judge William H. Hastie, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, announced this week that Department officials have investigated the use of the word, "darkie" during the Mutual Network Broadcast from the Savanna Ordnane Depot,

Proving Ground, Illinois, last Sunday afternoon and has blamed a commercial announcer whose remarks were not approved before the program. The Commanding Officer of the Savanna Depot was instructed to admonish the announier immediately. All Public Relations Officers in the field have been advised by the War Department any words, anecdotes, pictures, or even dialetcs that tend to ridicule any racial or religious group are not to be made.

Over 300 stations carried the program from the Unit Training Center where a capacity audience had gathered.

In a letter to The Courier, Hastie said, "The War Department has taken this matter up with the Commanding Officer at the Savanna Depot. We have been advised that the epithet was used in the course of informal remarks by a commercial announcer. Immediately after the program, the announcer was admonished by the local military authorities. The use of such epithet is contrary to War Department policy. The episode in question is deeply regretted and every effort will be made to prevent the recurrence of any such incident."

The First Step in Solving A Problem Is To State It Clearly

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

A recent newspaper article by a famous lady author contains a statement beginning with the words: "The Negro thinks." It is a silly thing to say, for few if any white people know what any Negro thinks. And to imply that all Negroes think the same thing is patently absurd.

The Negroid tribes in Africa differ as widely as the Eskimos, Sioux, Incas and Aztecs of the Americas. Some of the Negroes brought to America as slaves were proud, clean and intelligent; some were primitive, light-hearted, simple and filthy.

These differences were magnified by the addition of white blood. Most of the Negroes, except in the deep south, have some admixture of white blood—in some instances the blood of aristocrats; in others the blood of trash. And their ideas and intellectual capacities are as different as their racial inheritances. The rich, Harvard-bred Negroes of New York despise the poor and simple of their own race.

The race problem introduced by slave traders will be with us forever. It cannot be solved by sentimentalists who ignore facts. It can be dealt with intelligently only by recognizing the fundamental facts that cannot be wished away. The two races are different and nothing can make them alike. Race "prejudice" is apparently inherent—placed in us by nature, as in other animals, to keep the race pure. The fact that children do not share it means nothing. Children have no understanding of ethics, either.

Yet despite their ineradicable differences, the two races can live together in peace and amity if they will—and if each locality will attend to its own business. The proof is in the fact that they do so live in many regions today.

The way not to handle the race problem is illustrated by Harlem, where recent increase of crime has focused the nation's attention.

Harlem is a poverty-ridden Negro gretto. Its death rate for tuberculosis is five times that of white sections of New York. Its sylphillis death rate is eight times as high. Its infant mortality rate it twice as high, and its maternal death rate three times that of the rest of the city.

All of these factors explain the crime record. More than one-third of the inmates of New York's penal institutions are Negroes, though they comprise only a fraction of the population. Compare this with the situation in South Carolina, where the two races are nearly even in number. A recent survey revealed that more than half of the law-breakers were white.

This is sufficient evidence that Negroes given an opportunity to work and earn a living are useful, self-respecting and well-behaved people.

Yet despite their ineradicable differences, the two races can live together in peace and amity if they will—and if each locality will attend to its own business. The proof is in the fact that they do so live in many regions today.

The way not to handle the race problem is illustrated by Harlem, where recent increase of crime has focused the nation's attention.

Harlem is a poverty-ridden Negro ghetto. Its death rate for tuberculosis is five times that of white sections of New York. Its syphilis death rate is eight times as high. Its infant mortality rate is twice as high and its maternal death rate three times that of the rest of the city.

All of these factors explain the crime record. More than one-third of the inmates of New York's penal institutions are Negroes, though they comprise only a fraction of the population. Compare this with the situation in South Carolina, where the two races are nearly even in number. A recent survey revealed that more than half of the lawbreakers were white.

This is sufficient evidence that Negroes given an opportunity to work and earn a living are useful, self-respecting and well-behaved people.

FEB 21 1941

American Negroes Want to Know What Are John Bull's Aims Now, Before Giving Him Aid.

Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla

WASHINGTON—(NNS)— In the bitter debates now raging in the Nation's Capitol over the Lend-Lease Bill, the question of Britain's war aims in the present conflict is becoming of paramount importance. The more realistic opponents of American involvement in the Second World War point a reminding finger to England's unhappy past record in such affairs.

From 1583 until 1920 Great Britain managed to enslave 495 millions of people, and acquire approximately one-third of the earth's surface for her Empire.

The excuse is often made in her behalf that all this is ancient history, that Britain's conquests belong to the past and that they should be overlooked if not forgotten in this present world conflict.

Actually, in the past quarter of a century alone, the British Empire has added to her territory over 1,100,000 square miles—has extended at the same time her rule over more than 11 million additional unwilling subjects. This was the "take" from the First World War—the Cameroons, Tanganyika, South West Africa, Western Samoa, and New Guinea, with predominate populations of black men.

In the present war, Great Britain is again silent on her territorial ambitions. A group of keen political observers in Washington remembering the bitter aftermath of World War I, are openly cynical of the future. In light of this semi-official suspicion of British motives, the colored people are asked to aid Britain, an exploiter of colored people, can well ask themselves, first, What Colored Brothers in Africa and the Far East. They Are Being Asked to Aid in Subjugating Them to White Imperialism.

Jews Face Racial Relation In Official Washington

WASHINGTOON — (ANP) — Casual observations in the capital reveal a situation unhealthy in the extreme as far as racial relations go. The general opinion is that discrimination is practised in the governmental departments against Negroes only—which in view of recent revelations, has proved a fallacy. There is a strong anti-Semitic current alive in Washington, with the Jews catching plenty of the same treatment accorded Negroes.

An administrative officer in one of the bigger bureaus here in an interview said,

"Not only do Negroes bear the burden of discriminatory practises, but the jews in my department are also under continual fire. Southerners accuse me of being partial to the Jewish workers. They claim the Jewish workers are held no longer than others. This is true because of the high efficiency rating the Jewish workers achieve.

"One southern woman told me she did not want to sit in a wing of the building where she could look of the window and see Negro clerks at work.

"Another refused to enter the building because of Jews and Negroes.

"So you can see it is not a pleasant task to administer the affairs of a department like this where you have thousands of workers of various nationalities, races, creeds nd colors".

And in other deprtments, the same thing persists. Altho open opposition to the Negro is practises, the subtle undercurrent uses the Negro question to get over its hatred of the Jews especially in one department where there is a large number of the latter working in the higher brackets.

The average southerner working in the government accepts the job as a routine matter and goes about his duties in a manner to which he has been accustomed in his native environment. But with others, the job becomes something live and keen interest is taken in it, making other slower workers seem like slouches. This, and the ambitions to rise in the serivce, have proven hindrances to non-whites and non-Christians in the departments and officials, as well as workers, have permitted this condition to grow until it is reaching alarming proportions in the various departments.

INDIANS HAVE LONE CLOWN. WE COULD PROFITABLY TRADE SOME OF OUR OWN

THE PRODUCTION rate of clowns among Indians, never high, has declined almost to the zero point. The Indian is sometimes referred to as the "vanishing American," but present signs indicate that Indian clowns will vanish long before the rest of the red men shuffle off. The indians probably will not be disturbed by the extinction of their blood brothers in this category.

A news item from Calgary (Canada) records the following in respect to Indian clowns: "There was a day when war paint on an Indian meant trouble. But today, it's all in fun. Hanson Bearspaw, of Morley, Alta., is believed to be the world's only Indian clown. He has a reputation that extends throughout the Alberta range country." According to this item, the stock of Indian clowns has been reduced to exactly one. Maybe, if Chief Bearspaw should die, clowning among the Indians would become a lost art like some of the arts of the ancient Egyptians. The world would come to know an entire race of men who had no gift for clowning.

INDIANS ARE BLESSED

Perhaps that is as it should be. Maybe Nature invests certain races with certain gifts. Maybe the Indians are compensated in other ways for the scarcity of clowns among them. They may, for example, have "eye-for-an-eye and tooth-for-a-tooth" men instead of clowns. Maybe if you shot down the brother of an Indian in a courtroom, the brother who remained alive, instead of clowning, would track down his brother's murderer whom the law turned loose and exact a vengenace of his own. It seems that there have been examples of that type of thing.

ALTHOUGH I do not think the Indians have any need to grieve over the decline of clowns among them, I take advantage of the opportunity to inform them of a steady source of clowns at cheap rates. They can be leased on a short term basis or contracted for in wholesale lots to be kept in storage and used for the proper occasion.

CLOWNS PLENTIFUL

Negroes produce clowns of all shapes, sizes, varieties and degrees of political and religious persuasion. They produce far more than the race needs. In fact, if all other races ran out of clowns, the stock of clowns among Negroes would fill the world need without imposing any undue psychological hardship on the race. The profits in such trade would be enormous if an exchange of types could be arranged. Suppose we could trade off one eyeball-rolling, tooth-displaying clown for two scowlers or a brace of dyspeptics. We could afford to exchange our clowns at a high rate because it is well known what a high value the other races place on our clowns.

I WAS RECENTLY in the act of having the photograph of a Negro carpenter taken at Camp Shelby in Mississippi. I wanted to show him at work at his trade. The boss was a white man. While I was insisting that the Negro carpenter go to work with his hammer and saw, the white boss was trying to wheedle the carpenter into displaying one of his golden smiles."

"To hell with the smile," I told the carpenter.

SOME EVEN HIGH-CLASS

But if our white friends think "skinning them back" is worth so much, let's trade with them at their own figure.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the varieties of clowns among us. We have some very high-class clowns among us, men with degrees from Harvard, Yale, and Oxford universities, even from Howard university. Howard clowns are a choice variety, a rare species which clowns without smiling. I think that in any fair trade a Howard clown would be worth a half dozen Dorothy Thompsons, Henry Fords or Thomas Edisons.

OUR PULPITS produce bumper crops of natural born clowns. They are not as smart as some of the others, but neither are they as dangerous. You can't always trust some of our smarter clowns. They may grin in your face and stab you in the back. Clerical clowns are quite domestic, as a rule. They work at cheap rates and can be persuaded to put on a show for a liberal hand-out of grub. Clowning comes to them so naturally that they are never unprepared. They labor without strain.. They don't even know when they are clowning.

LAWYERS HAVE SHARE

The legal profession breeds a choice brand of clowns also. They are a shrewd type. Their clowning is usually done in behalf of a client and is of the professional and stock-in-trade kind. They clown for the judge and the clown for the jury. But, unlike the clerical clowns, the lawyers know they are clowning. They could be traded off for lawyers who do not clown.

IF WE DISPOSE of about nine-tenths of our clowns, it could not be said that we were taking advantage of the rest of the world. Neither could it be claimed that we were adding to the gaiety of the world. The clowns all exist now, the trouble being that we have too many of them. If we traded them off and extended their scope of operations, we could naively insist in response to any charges made against us that we were simply "spreading joy." Nobody could complain about that.

Expensive Justice

JUSTICE is an elusive thing. It is often difficult to secure and hard to retain. Not infrequently it is a costly item in the span of a life.

But the Negro race pays more for justice than any other group of people in the country. Parenthetically, it may be added that the race obtains less justice.

Early this month a half dozen Negro boys, all of whom were respectable high school graduates, were walking on the streets in Congress Park, Illinois, just a few blocks from their homes in La Grange. It was night and so the police officers of that village decided to shake the boys down or to discourage them from coming into that town. So the boys were thrown into jail. Their relatives soon learned about their arrests and effected their release on bail. The boys had to hire a lawyer. They lost time. They committed no crime but were charged with disorderly conduct for the reason that more than two were walking down the street together.

A few years ago the United States Supreme court told the University of Missouri that Lloyd Gaines must be admitted to the law school or the state must supply a colored law school with equal educational facilities. The latter course was followed. Recently the Supreme court of that state sustained the regents of the University of Missouri in their denial of the application for admission to Miss Lucille Bluford to its school of Journalism. One would think that the justices of that court had never heard of the Gaines decision. To obtain justice, which the highest court of the land has already defined, Miss Bluford must take her case to the United States Supreme court. A long and costly procedure, to say the least. But being a Negro that is the price the state of Missouri compels her to pay.

Take the situation concerning the efforts of Negroes to vote in the South as another example. A law is made which prevents Negroes from voting. It is obviously unconstitutional and the lawmakers know it. In order for a Negro to prove that the law is of no effect he must appeal it to the highest court in the land at great expense. While the case is pending he can not vote. When the decision comes down the colored brother is overjoyed at his victory and the lawmakers enact another law which will take several more years and several thousand more dollars to prove that it is unconstitutional. But that is the price we pay for justice.

Because justice for the Negro is so difficult to obtain every possible advantage should be taken of the laws made for his protection.

In the state of Illinois colored people throughout the state are permitting the civil rights laws to go into disuse. Segregation and discrimination are rampant. In the southern part of Illinois the state of Georgia is not much worse. Separate schools, theatres and lunch rooms are used for the members of the respective races.

It would appear that the NAACP and other civic minded organizations should take an aggressive stand to wipe down racial discrimination throughout the state.

Since justice is so elusive, so difficult and hard to obtain it behooves us to hold fast to that which has been given us and strive to achieve other considerations that we as citizens deserve.

Dies Is Right

The American negro is being made the target for subversive attack by Communists and Nazis alike, and for the benefit of those who like to keep abreast of subversive activities in this country we offer this choice bit of information spread among the negroes:

"... to provide a new epic in history by leading the darker majority of mankind to a new life founded on international justice and the emancipation of the dark races from the white."

That didn't originate in Berlin. It is Japanese propaganda from a Tokyo source and is being spread among Southern negroes.

Chairman Dies of the House Special Committee on unAmerican Activities says that he will soon call for expulsion of all Japanese consuls assigned to this country from Tokyo. He can't call too soon.

Now that the German and Italian propaganda centers—the consulates and information bureaus—have been closed, there is no point in permitting the busy Axis brothers from the Orient to remain. If they stay here long enough some of our folks who like promises may begin to believe them.

For the benefit of the gullible they should be reminded that it will be somewhat impossible for Japan to liberate the "darker majority" until she completes the job on which she is now engaged, that of attempting to enslave those in China who are of her own color.

In the meantime, there is no reason why we have to put up with that sort of subversive, busily engaged American people should Philosophic shenanigans.

TODAY'S TALK

IT IS THE ZERO HOUR IN AMERICA—BLACK PEOPLE MUST GET RIGHTS

BY A. N. FIELDS

THE recent appointment made by the President of six outstanding citizens to inquire into racial discrimination as it prevents Negroes from getting work in the National Defense Program is at least a fine gesture, yet the question may be asked as to where this committee will begin? What will be the method of procedure? Are they to colloborate with the Truman commitee, which has power to enforce its edicts? Or will this body just make surveys and exposes for public consumption?

According to Senator Truman, his committee is already vested with unlimited power. It can subpoena witnesses, papers, corporation heads and union officials. The impression is abroad that the citizens committee will have no such power. If that is a fact then by what method are they to enforce their line of inquiry?

A. N. Fields

There is no desire to usher this committee out of court without a fair hearing. It is manned by men of ability, character and courage.

DICKERSON IS OUTSTANDING

Alderman Earl B. Dickerson is a distinguished member of the City Council of Chicago with a record for efficiency and courageous political activity, and he will, if possible, in his new field of endeavor, give valuable service to the task assigned. Unfortunately for our group we have been hindered in the proper presentation of our cause by two types of leadership: One, the political leader made so by machine politics, who is compelled to adhere to machine dictation because his sustenance comes from machine activities; the other type is, the Negro leadership which had its birth in white philanthropy. This last type of leader is naturally controlled by whatever foundation finances his activity and makes his existence possible.

In the case of Earl B. Dickerson, during his short time in the City Council, he has demonstrated his independence; he has fought for the things he believed his group in common with others were and are entitled to. He belongs to that limited few who regard the importance of racial achievement above political preferment. It is not contended here that he has reached perfection, but the position is taken that he has a solid foundation of courage and ability upon which a more complete development is to be expected.

SENATOR TRUMAN A BUSY MAN

According to those close to Senator Truman it is reliably reported that his many many activities precludes him from giving the orderly attention to this inquiry that it should have. Only a few weeks ago there was a delay in the hearing set by the committee. It was found that in addition to Walter White's plea for a delay, that other situations arose such as deaths in the [illegible] and a secret quest into the manner in which the funds of the government are being expended in the production of a national defense. It is enough to say that we always respect the dead. A delay of such nature, when we can pay our last respects, is always reasonable and human, but if a committee or individual is required to be taxed with two of the nation's most vital problems, then separate groups should be designated in order to have closer co-operation in the National Defense program and a greater achievement. No question is raised here as to Senator Truman's sincereness of purpose, nor his ability to do the job well. We are conscious of the fact that this question of racial discrimination goes to the very conscience of our American institutions. This committee is to delve into a situation where an attempt will be made to destroy a tradition, which is deep-rooted in some Americans' minds. The results of the Truman committee's finding will affect the social, economic and political status of 15,000,000 people.

This is not a job for glorification. It is one for historic service, and it will determine whether or not America is to live the truth or live a lie.

AMERICA MUST ACT IN BEHALF OF NEGRO

We have played upon words in our pretended interest in humanity too long. We must face facts. America MUST act NOW for the sake of all of its citizens or else openly admit to the entire world that her democracy is a failure.

This newspaper accepted the challenge five years ago, and it has consistently fought for the things that are now coming to pass. We shall continue to hew to the line, and we have determined that that line is, that the American Negro must share in his native homeland prosperity.

"As we explained to you, the 'woodpile' letter was a very unfortunate, tactless occurence, and since the first criticism the National Congress has been entirely discontinued. We sincerely regret that this letter was ever used and we assure you that no similar occurrence will again arise.

THE REAL FRIEND OF THE NEGRO

The Dothan Eagle calls attention to the fact that "For once a member of the New Deal, in fact a part of the inner circle of mighty men, South."

South.

Declaring that "it's almost past belief," the Eagle quotes a discussion of jobs dislocations with particular reference to the negro by Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt at a conference of leaders of labor and industry, as follows:

"Employers contended Negroes had neither the training nor experience for industrial work. Yet, without getting into it, there was no chance for them to get training or experience. We broke this circle by training the Negro vocationally and now there are many of them ready for jobs. But, despite shortages of skilled workers, they aren't getting the jobs."

Mr. McNutt further asserted, the Eagle adds, "that prejudice is much worse in Philadelphia and generally north of the Mason and Dixon line. The South has known the value of the negro worker for generations and has used him freely."

The Dothan paper points out that "we who live in the South have known all the time that the negro gets better treatment here than among his Northern 'friends' but we didn't expect any of them to admit it," and it could have added that negroes who are familiar with actual facts know it also.

The truth of the situation is that the South has been a far better friend of the negro than any other section of the nation in proportion to its means, and in cases where negroes have been given scant returns for hard labor, it generally has been a matter of dictation by ability rather than guidance by inclination. We feel safe in saying that, everything considered, the negro has enjoyed a greater share of the income and assets of the South than he will ever get elsewhere and those of them who have given the facts serious consideration will endorse this contention.

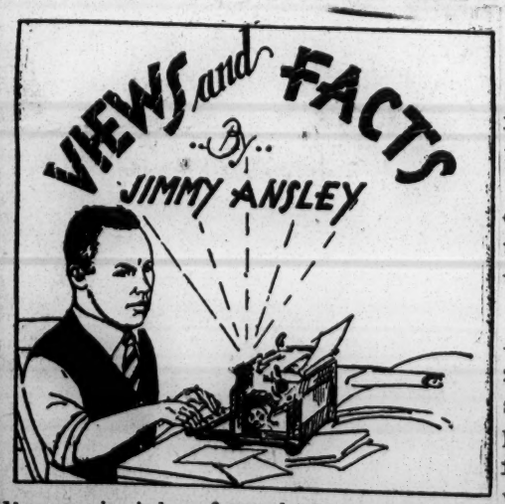
No Time For Racial Indifferences



We must band together as did ross the great deep to escape bondage and slavery. We have known no other form of government than that of a free republic, where we can speak the words that we desire to speak, can serve the God that our conscience tells us to serve, and to do the thngs which we choose to do freely.

It has never been the custom of American people, who are good citizens, to be under guard of so-called superiors and to take orders at the point of a bayonet or rifle and labor for them, that they might add to their wealth from the labor of a poor class of slaves. We poor people have always labored for our bread without being forced to do it, and we desire to continue to live in a country where freedom will reign eternally.

In the various branches of our governments, county, state, and national, we need men of courage, men who are far-sighted and who have common sense enough to stand up for RIGHT. We need no grafters or swindlers, but pure, honest and righteous men to steer the ship of state clear of the evils of every kind that may have a tendency to destroy all of the sacred principles of freedom and justice.

EVILS WEAKEN MORALS

There are many things that are going on in this country today that all right-thinking people are condemning. There are many evils that are grasping the human race that is weakening the morale of the present generation. Many of us know of these great evils that are so poisonous to our systems and we know too of the breeding places where these evils are hibernating.

It is our duty to erase from our communities all dens that are breeding places for crime of any nature. This can be done only by and through the cooperation of the officers of the law and the people working together for the purification of the human morals of every community.

CRIME SHOULD BE ELIMINATED

Crime is very expensive and causes suffering among the human race. Every person that has the least desire to become a criminal should be discouraged of such tactics and shown the brighter picture of life and then encouraged to walk the straight and narrow way.

In recent days things have happened in our own community that have brought sorrow and grief to the community. The minds of our people need to be educated to the extent that they will condemn crime in every form and promote every effort that is good to elevate the human morals of every race of people that inhabit the land.

Every citizen has an important role to play in life and may each of us do our share to prove ourselves worthy of doing a good job and doing the part well which we are to do and need to do.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM

An automobile containing seven Negroes crashed through the side of a bridge and went into Yellow Jacket Creek, four miles north of LaGrange, at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Charlie Poythree was pinned between the wrecked car and a post of the bridge. His fellow passengers could not release him. Along came two troopers of the Georgia State Patrol. They could not free him.

One of the troopers, G. W. Goss, got into the water to support Poythress and save him from drowning while his partner, Lee Dillingham, went for help. For one hour and a half Trooper Goss stood in the torrent, water up to his neck, holding up the head of the injured man. Eventually a truck equipped with chains pulled the car so the victim might be liberated. He died a few hours later from loss of blood.

Trooper Goss told the LaGrange Daily News: "I talked to him on every subject under the sun, to try to take his mind off his injuries. . . . I wish that Negro had lived. He had as much courage as any man I ever saw."

There is only one Negro problem between the brave and the honest of the two races. That is the problem of mutual assistance in a difficult and sometimes cruel world.—Atlanta Journal.

"NIGGER."

To the Editor: I have never thought it worth my time to marvel at the much too often use of the term "Nigger." I would however, like to help Mrs. Green in her inquiry in your paper. The original word was not limited to the Negro race as it is contemptuously and loosely done now. It referred to any individual who is mean, close, stingy and covetous.

The Sunday teacher who was guilty of the constant reference to the Negro who had been a sharecropper on his farm invokes my pity and certainly a plea from my heart for Heaven's mercy and blessings upon him.

The varied races of the earth are but part of the plan of our Creator just as he saw fit for two opposing forces, right and wrong in the world to test an individual's true worth. When our blessed Lord shall come again, the final test for every individual, black, white, or red, will be the sum total of his relationship with his fellow man.

As all Americans proudly say, "Americans are we!" so we say with equal enthusiasm and fervor, "Negroes are we!"

Pope says, "The proper study of mankind is man." When you hear the term Nigger used—that is the distinguishing mark between a gentleman and an inflated pair of pants. Surely our blessed Lord, having died to save all mankind, frowns upon many self-appointed ministers of the gospel.

May I say that one of the last places one would expect to hear such a remark is in the church of God and from one attempting to interpret His teachings. Just as the intelligent white man is fast learning that every Negro is a different individual so are we conscious of the differences manifested in individuals of the other group. If there were no differences, no Negro would care for whom he worked.

"UNCLE TOMS" PLENTIFUL IN OTHER GROUPS WHEN THE HEAT IS TURNED ON

PIERRE LAVAL, swart in his complexion and his dealings, lies abed, victim of an assassin's bullet. Before these words are read, he who bargained off the liberties of men may have been called to face his Maker. Unlike Abou Ben Adhem, this crafty Frenchman, whether he is called to accounting now or later, will not be able to claim that his life showed love for either his God or his fellow man.

As I think of the miserable role which Laval has played (he it was, you know, who "sold" the Ethiopians to Mussolini and started the train of circumstances which led to the present war), I can but recall those words I learned in school "First to thine ownself be true; then it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst net then be false to any man." Laval has been true, neither to himself nor any other man. With the same cruel unconcern with which he bartered the Ethiopians, he has been willing, for the sake of himself, to sell the French people, the English people, or any other people who stood across his path to power and security. Small wonder it is that retribution should lay him low.

LAVALS DISCOURAGE US

TOO often, we are discouraged and exasperated by the Lavals within our own race. The emergence of a Holley, the Georgia educator (?) who would treat with the worst enemies of the race, increases our pessimism to the point that sometimes we despair of our future.

But what is happening in France shows how any group will react when the heat is on. You would think that all Frenchmen would be united while the boot of the conqueror presses upon France. However, the short season in France has produced a bountiful crop of "Uncle Toms" who shuffle up and down the corridors outside the offices of their German lords and masters, awaiting an opportunity to sell France in order to secure themselves.

ALL HAVE "UNCLE TOMS"

I DO not doubt that there are "Uncle Toms" to be found among the Serbs, the Norwegians, the Czechs, even the Poles. I do not glory in their fecundity. I simply recognize that these people, like us, are human beings; or, more aptly, we, with all our faults, come pretty close to approaching the norm for other peoples.

Perhaps it has never occurred to you that Petain and Darlan and most of the men in the Vichy clique are standard brand "Uncle Toms." Laval is what should be termed a "Sambo," deliberately mendacious and malicious. You could hardly expect him to stop to wonder what the effect of any action he might take would be on his own mother and father.

I predict that the name Laval will become an adjective in the English language, like that of Machiavelli, but with scarcely such decent import.

WE HAVE De GAULLES

AND just as the French have their "Uncle Toms," we have our De Gaullists, gallant trustees of our slender hopes. They are brave and resourceful defenders of the race who never swerve from their course. They wouldn't turn back for a Presidential ukase.

Therefore, let us not be kidded by those who taunt, "Why don't you Negroes get together?"

Why should we be so much different from other people?

They all split under pressure.

If they didn't, there wouldn't be so much concern over a possible negotiated peace to conclude this war. That is a bait dangled to catch the "Uncle Toms" who lurk in the shadows of dark places in England.

NEGRO AND "NIGGER."

To the Editor: Why doesn't the Negro receive the proper respect that is due him? Is it because he is a Negro or because it is a lack of intelligence on the part of the "other" race who fails to give it to him?

This question was brought to my mind when I listened to the regular Sunday school lesson Sunday, August 3, over station WRAL. The class is usually conducted by R. N. Simms, Sr., but due to his absence, his place was filled by a Mr. "Somebody," whose name I do not remember. This man, presumably, was a religious leader trying to teach the word of God, but showed lack of any spiritual or religious leadership from the discourse of his teachings. In his discussion, he referred to a Negro who had once been a sharecropper on his farm. Not one time did he refer to the Negro as such nor as a colored man, but countless times, not less than a dozen to be sure, did he refer to him as a "nigger." These references were not made in or during private conversations, but over the air where hundreds or maybe thousands were listening. If this man was intelligent enough to be designated to be a Sunday school teacher, why couldn't he exercise enough intelligence to at least give the Negro the proper racial title, or as a matter of fact, why couldn't he have left it out altogether. The racial element was not important, the thing he attempted to do was to make a parable. So why mention race, except to give himself a chance to repeat the word "nigger"?

I often wonder what our white brethren think of the Negroes anyway. They seem to think that they are entirely responsible for their skin; after all, what difference does it make, whether a man is red, white or black? What does the color of the skin have to do with a man's heart or soul? The Creator made all men as he saw fit, there's nothing that can be done about it; if there were, I am sure there would be a lot of improvements in all races.

If anyone reading this article is able to show me why the teacher was justified in such remarks, I would like to know just to see how many others would have said the same thing.

Wants Popular Pamphlet on Negro Question

New York, N. Y.

Editor, Sunday Worker:

Because the conflict is sharpening, the powers that be will undoubtedly attempt to disunite the working people by setting race against race. For that reason, I believe it would be very timely and important for a good, very elementary pamphlet on the Negro question. There has been some very fine material published. However, the 2, 3 and 5-cent pamphlets are either incomplete in that they assume certain knowledge on the part of the reader, or that they deal with a particular phase of the question. The more complete publications are too expensive for many workers and, therefore, cannot be used for mass distribution.

Do you think it would be possible for such pamphlet to be published? And while it would deal with the Negro question specifically inasmuch as that's the most important race problem in the United States, it will undoubtedly serve to explain many phases of the race question to all workers.

What with Gov. Eugene Talmadge doing everything he can to inflame race relations by loose and vicious appeals to the white man against the black, and what with Walter White, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, matching the inflamations by making the war crisis his signal for ceaselessly bitter campaigns against every known form of race discrimination, a fine mess of trouble is being prepared for the South after the war. The Communists and the Ku Klux Klan, or their post-war counterparts, are being given all the signals they need to tear the South to pieces again when "peace" comes. Pity all of us here, white and black, that our most delicate and difficult race problem any people ever had should be subject to a ruthless professionalism like Walter White's on the one hand and a vicious demagogy like Gov. Talmadge's on the other!

Defends the Negroes

Editor The Telegraph:

I thought all Negroes had been put in their places, and it was all over but the shouting, until I read a letter in the paper Oct. 1, about Negroes evading the draft.

Perhaps a few Negroes in some towns have succeeded in evading the draft, but that does not mean that all Negroes are slackers. The Negro race is just as loyal to this country as any race. They fought and bled and died in the first World War, they are ready to do so now.

If Negroes are made conscious from day to day that this is a white man's country, that they have no rights here, no education is needed, that they are low down criminals, a burden on the white man's back and the only place for them is in the fields, it is no wonder that a few will rebel, after all Negroes are human.

This talk about Negroes and whites mixing in schools is unfair, Negroes have no more of a desire to send their children to white schools, than white people have to send their children to Negro schools.

One writer said that Negroes got more out of the pot than they put into it. The majority of Negroes do not earn enough to put much in any kind of a pot. It takes all they can rake and scrape together to live on and that is not enough.

Negroes pay taxes, too, and the ones that are not paying taxes, are struggling to pay rent, and that rent helps the white tax payers.

If there ever was a time when this viscious attack on the Negroes should stop, it is now. It is time to put this race prejudice aside and ask God's blessings on America, because the enemy is at the gate.

The enemy who is giving the whole world a big headache today is not a Negro.

"UNCLE TOMS" PLENTIFUL IN OTHER GROUPS WHEN THE HEAT IS TURNED ON

PIERRE LAVAL, swart in his complexion and his dealings, lies abed, victim of an assassin's bullet. Before these words are read, he who bargained off the liberties of men may have been called to face his Maker. Unlike Abou Ben Adhem, this crafty Frenchman, whether he is called to accounting now or later, will not be able to claim that his life showed love for either his God or his fellow man.

As I think of the miserable role which Laval has played (he it was, you know, who "sold" the Ethiopians to Mussolini and started the train of circumstances which led to the present war), I can but recall those words I learned in school "First to thine ownself be true; then it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." Laval has been true, neither to himself nor any other man. With the same cruel unconcern with which he bartered the Ethiopians, he has been willing, for the sake of himself, to sell the French people, the English people, or any other people who stood across his path to power and security. Small wonder it is that retribution should lay him low.

TOO often, we are discouraged and exasperated by the Lavals within our own race. The emergence of a Holley, the Georgia educator (?) who would treat with the worst enemies of the race, increases our pessimism to the point that sometimes we despair of our future.

But what is happening in France shows how any group will react when the heat is on. You would think that all Frenchmen would be united while the boot of the conqueror presses upon France. However, the short season in France has produced a bountiful crop of "Uncle Toms" who shuffle up and down the corridors outside the offices of their German lords and masters, awaiting an opportunity to sell France in order to secure themselves.

Harlem Leaders Laud President's Address But Condemn Silence On Negroes

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—Although opinions varied on the subject of President Roosevelt's fire-side chat last Tuesday night, almost all persons interviewed were in agreement that while the Negro is not getting just treatment economically, politically and socially, he is nevertheless true and loyal and wants to see democracy preserved and extended. Some of the expressions obtained are as follows:

Eugene Kinckle Jones, executive secretary, National Urban league: "President Roosevelt last night left no doubt in the public's mind as to his attitude toward the threat to our democracy which Hitlerism makes more imminent daily. United America can destroy this world menace, and there is no longer any excuse whatsoever for any person in America to sabotage the complete mobilization of our man-power by any un-American act such as the denial of defense work or defense service because of race, creed or color.

"The President's proclamation of an unlimited emergency means just that, that we should go to any limit to eliminate distracting and undemocratic factors from our national life."

Walter White, executive secretary, NAACP: "The President's speech means one thing and one thing only—war. Perhaps that is the language that the dictators understand. I listened with interest as an American—and with disappointment as a Negro. America is not prepared to fight a major war and her rate of preparation is cut down by ten per cent or more because of the stupid racial prejudice which shuts Negroes out of employment in the defense program. I listened in vain for some word from the President about this."

Eardlie John, assistant corporation counsel for New York City: "I was thrilled by the great speech of the President especially when he emphatically declared that we Americans 'will accept only a world consecrated to freedom,' and that the Emancipation proclamation was one of the great 'milestones of human progress.' "Day by day the stature of the President grows like a colossus—he towers over all his contemporaries. We as Negroes feel instinctively and confidently that as he grows he will do all in his power to allow us 'to play our full part without stint or without selfishness or without doubt'; and to put into effect his peroration 'we reassert our abiding faith in the vitality of our republic as a perpetual form of freedom, of tolerance and of devotion to the word of God'."

Rev. Dr. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., co-chairman, Greater New York Coordinating Committee: "The speech doesn't mean anything to me until the President makes a strong pronouncement regarding Negroes All this talk about fifth columnists and who is right and who is wrong means absolutely nothing until he comes out as commander-in-chief of the army, the navy and the air corp and abolishes the practice of jim-crow."

Mrs. Gertrude Rogers, supreme basileus, national sorority of Phi Delta Kappa: "As teachers, we are pledging unstintingly our loyalty and industry to the President of the United States and to the nation in this great crisis; and we wish to appeal to them to defend our democracy by extending our democracy."

Rev. George H. Sims, president, New York Colored Baptists State convention: "I think the President's speech was sane and sound. These are times when even the President has to think and then speak. I consider it a very fine address for these times. Of course, Negroes are part of America, and as a whole are doing their part and sharing the burden. We have always been true and loyal and we are now even if as a minority group we are made to suffer."

Dr. Channing Tobias, senior secretary of the colored work division, National Y. M. C. A. council: "There is little new in it (the address). I think it was what most of the people of the country have been thinking, and while the people do not want war, they are willing to do whatever is necessary to preserve what freedom there is in our country. Of course, there are those of us who feel that there is a lot to be done at home yet and would hope that whatever is done, democracy may come to mean more for Negroes than it does today."

Howard University Trustee Says White People Know Very Little About Negroes

Believes Colored Citizens Are In Many Respects The Most Loyal Americans.

Outlines Progress And Handicaps of The Negro In Radio Address In North Carolina

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Howard University Trustee and a member of the faculty at the University of North Carolina, stated in a radio address delivered recently, that the main thing the Negro wants from America is an opportunity which is not based on race or color.

According to the professor, the attitude of the Negro is "Give me an opportunity to make a decent living, to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and I will take care of myself."

Most Loyal Americans

"In these critical times when our paramount aim is the defense of our democracy and our American way of life, we must be a united people," Dr. Johnson said. "Our 13,000,000 colored citizens are in many respects the most loyal and dyed-in-the-wool Americans in our whole nation. We have always had their loyalty and we must continue to have it, but the only way to keep it is to deserve it."

Misconceptions of White People

The professor also stated that many white people have a way of saying "Oh, I know the Negro. You cant' tell me anything about Negroes. I've known them all my life." But he pointed out further that he is of the opinion that the average white persons knows very little about Negroes.

"If we were asked to name five Negroes, other than prize fighters and jazz orchestra leaders, who have achieved distinction in American life, I doubt if many of us could do it. No, I am afraid that what the average person means when he says that he knows the Negro is that he knows a few "Negro stories," and that he has a lot of threadbare notions about the racial characteristics of the Negro. I believe that our ideas about colored Americans and our relations with them would be more intelligent if we were better informed."

Economic Progress

In emphasizing the economic progress of Negroes since emancipation, Dr. Johnson pointed out that Negroes have accumulated 2½ billion dollars of wealth since emancipation.

"There are about 70,000 Negro business establishments of all sorts, of which 25,000 are retail stores doing an annual business of over $100,000,000" the professor stated. "There are 23 Negro banks having combined resources of more than $15,000,000, and there are 44 insurance companies with insurance in force to the total of nearly one billion dollars.

"The total purchasing power of Negroes is estimated at two billion dollars a year. Negroes own and publish 200 newspapers and numerous periodicals of all sorts.

Educational Progress

In telling his radio audience the story of educational progress on the part of Negroes, Dr. Johnson said:

"Illiteracy has decreased from 95 percent at the time of emancipation to 10 percent today. There are more than 100 colleges devoted exclusively to the education of Negroes. College attendance has increased tremendously in the past two decades, and the number of college graduates in the past five years alone is over 10,000. About 2,000 Negroes have received the degree of M. A., and over 200 have earned the Ph. D. degree. Three hundred have been elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and 100 are listed in "Who's Who in America." Certainly no well-informed person would be so stupid as to cling to the old notion that a Negro can't take an education."

Remarkable Achievements

The University of North Carolina professor told his radio audience that it would take a large volume to record the achievements of Negroes in various fields.

"Suffice it to say that their achievements are no longer confined to music and pugilism, but extend into many fields, such as poetry, fiction, drama, painting, sculpture, mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, aeronautics. architecture, law, medicine, biology, sociology and religion.

"Yes, the Negro has made remarkable progress—in fact, the most remarkable progress that any group of people has ever made under similar conditions."

The Negro's Handicaps

Dr. Johnson added that the Negro's progress represented, however, only one side of the picture. He pointed out that the other side shows blood, sweat, tears, poverty, degradation, frustration, and the everlasting struggle against the handicaps of racial status, such as economic handicaps, political and civic disabilities, inequalities in the administration of justice, educational inequalities, and the emotional strain of getting along with white people.

In speaking of the Negro's handicaps, he stated:

"Social customs, race prejudices, and even the labor unions have operated to keep the Negro out of the skilled trades and white-collar jobs and even to displace Negroes from some of their traditional occupations, such as janitor work and hotel work."

Political and Civic Disabilities

In outlining the political and civic disabilities suffered by Negroes, the professor said:

"It would probably not be exaggerating to say that in literacy, educational attainment, and in character, the average Negro today is as well qualified to exercise the rights and duties of citizenship as were the masses of white men when they were first granted free suffrage.

"Yet there are many places in the South today where qualified Negroes—even though they be doctors, lawyers, or teachers—are not allowed to register and vote freely for candidates for public office. Negroes as jurors are still relatively rare, and in not more than twenty southern cities are Negro policemen used to assist in law enforcement among their own people. On the various policy-making boards and councils which affect their lives as citizens, Negroes are almost entirely lacking in representation."

Inequalities in Administration of Justice

"We white people operate the machinery of justice, and we do a pretty good job of it," said Dr. Johnson, "but I think that sometimes we operate it in such a way as actually to promote crime. For one thing, our police too frequently consider it their prerogative to arrest Negroes wholesale on the slightest suspicion, to curse them, and to intimidate them into making confessions.

"In the courtroom we have a way of dealing much too leniently with a Negro who harms another Negro, thus encouraging a disrespect for law and a feeling that life is cheap if it happens to be a Negro's life.

"On the other hand, when a Negro harms a white person, we punish with more-than-average severity, thus causing Negroes to feel that the law is unjust. Furthermore, in the prisons and chain gangs of some of our southern states, Negro prisoners are treated more like beasts than human beings. An old Negro man once summed up the situation very well in these words, 'Justice may be blind, but she ain't entirely color-blind.'"

Educational Inequalities

"Great progress has been made in providing public schools for Negroes," Dr. Johnson said, "and we have a right to be proud of it, particularly here in North Carolina. But there still exist some inequalities which should give us a bad conscience. In the South as a whole, we spen dabout $45 a year for every white child enrolled and about $12.00 a year for every Negro child enrolled—a differential of nearly 4 to 1 in favor of the white child.

"In buildings, equipment, teaching facilities, and bus transportation, the Negro public schools lag far behind the white schools. Thousands of Negro youth have no high school facilities whatever, and provisions for graduate and professional training which are given as a matter of course to white students are almost entirely lacking for Negro students."

Emotional Strain

In speaking of the emotional strain of getting along with white people, Dr. Johnson said:

"I doubt whether very many white people ever begin to have an appreciation of the mental and emotional strain which Negroes undergo in their daily lives because of the fact that they are Negroes and have to get along with us white people. There are too many white people who consider it their God-given privilege to insult, intimidate, or injure people of a different color. There are white people who take insult too easily and who are always "right" in any difference of opinion with a Negro.

"Let's not forget that every Negro, from childhood through old age, has to adapt himself to expect the worse. No matter how cultured, how refined, how deserving of respect he may be, he is never entirely free from the fear of personal insult and bodily harm.

"I think that we white people might well pause and ask ourselves whether we have made an honest effort to apply our Christianity and our democracy to the Negro. I regret to report that I know many Negroes who have long since stopped believing that the white man is the Negro's best friend. One of the most disheartening things I have seen lately among Negro young people is their increasing feeling of futility and despair."

On the various policymaking boards and councils which affect their lives as citizens, Negroes are almost entirely lacking in representation."

"We white people operate the machinery of justice, and we do a pretty good job of it," said Dr. Johnson, "but I think that sometimes we operate it in such a way as actually to promote crime. For one thing, our police too frequently consider it their prerogative to arrest Negroes wholesale on the slightest suspicion, to curse them, and to intimidate them into making confessions.

"In the courtroom we have a way of dealing much too leniently with a Negro who harms another Negro, thus encouraging a disrespect for law and a feeling that life is cheap if it happens to be a Negro's life.

"On the other hand, when a Negro harms a white person, we punish with more-than-average severity, thus causing Negroes to feel that the law is unjust. Furthermore, in the prisons and chain gangs of some of our southern States, Negro prisoners are treated more like beasts than human beings. An old Negro man once summed up the situation very well in these words: 'Justice may be blind. but she ain't entirely color-blind'"

Educational Inequalities

"Great progress has been made in providing public schools for Negroes," Dr. Johnson said, "and we have a right to be proud of it, particularly in North Carolina. But there still exist some inequalities which should give us a bad conscience. In the South as a whole, we spend about $45 a year for every white child enrolled and about $12 a year for every Negro child enrolled—a differential of nearly 4 to 1 in favor of the white child.

"In buildings, equipment, teaching facilities, and bus transportation, the Negro public school lag far behind the white schools. Thousands of Negro youth have no high school facilities whatever, and provisions for graduate and professional training which are given as a matter of course to white students are almost entirely lacking for Negro students."

Emotional Strain

"I doubt whether very many white people ever begin to have an appreciation of the mental and emotional strain which Negroes undergo in their daily lives because of the fact that they are Negroes and have to get along with us white people. There are too many white people who consider it their God-given privilege to insult, intimidate, or injure people of ing of re- never en- of person- 'I thin- might w- selves wh- honest ef- tianity a- Negro. know ma- many Negroes who have long since stopped believing that the white man is the Negro's best friend. Thousands of Negro youth have no high school facilities whatever, and provisions for graduate and professional training which are given as a matter of course to white students are almost entirely lacking for Negro students."

There are too many white people who consider it their God-given privilege to insult, intimidate, or injure people of a different color. There are white people who take insult too easily and who are always "right" in any difference of opinion with a Negro.

"Let's not forget that every Negro, from childhood through old age, has to adapt himself to expect the worse. No matter how cultured, how refined, how deserving of respect he may be, he is never entirely free from the fear of personal insult and bodily harm.

"I think that we white people might well pause and ask ourselves whether we have made an honest effort to apply our Christianity and our democracy to the Negro. I regret to report that I know many Negroes who have long since stopped believing that the white man is the Negro's best friend. One of the most disheartening things I have seen lately among Negro young people is their increasing feeling of futility and despair."

H.U. Trustee Says Negroes Are Most Loyal Americans

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.—Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Howard University trustee and a member of the faculty at the University of North Carolina, stated in a radio address delivered recently, that the main thing the Negro wants from America is an opportunity which is not based on race or color.

According to the professor, the attitude of the Negro is "Give me an opportunity to make a decent living, to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and I will take care of myself."

Most Loyal Americans

"In these critical times when our paramount aim is the defense of our democracy and our American way of life, we must be a united people," Dr. Johnson said. "Our 13,000,000 colored citizens and in many respects the most loyal and dyed-in-the-wool Americans in our whole nation. We have always had their loyalty and we must continue to have it, but the only way to keep it is to deserve it."

The speaker also stated that many white people have a way of saying "Oh, I know the Negro. You can't tell me anything about Negroes. I've known them all my life." But he pointed out further that he is of the opinion that the average white person knows very little about Negroes.

"If we were asked to name five Negroes, other than prize fighters and jazz orchestra leaders, who have achieved distinction in American life, I doubt if many of us could do it. No, I am afraid that what the average person means when he says that he knows the Negro is that he knows a few "Negro stories," and that he has a lot of threadbare notions about the racial characteristics of hte Negro. I believe that our ideas about colored Americans and our relations with them would be more intelligent if we were better informed."

Cites Economic Progress

In emphasizing the economic progress of Negroes since emancipation, Dr. Johnson pointed out that Negroes have accumulated 2½ billion dollars of wealth since emancipation.

"There are about 70,000 Negro business establishments of all sorts, of which 25,000 are retail stores doing an annual business of over $100,000,000," the professor stated. "There are 23 Negro banks having combined resources of more than $15,000,000, and there are 44 insurance companies with insurance in force to the total of nearly one billion dollars.

"The total purchasing power of Negroes is estimated at two billion dollars a year. Negroes own and publish 200 newspapers and numerous period. ls of all sorts.

Educational Progress

In telling his radio audience the story of educational progress on the part of Negroes, Dr. Johnson said:

"Illiteracy has decreased from 95 per cent at the time of emancipation to 10 per cent today. The are more than 100 colleges devoted exclusively to the education of Negroes.

College attendance has increased tremendously in the past two decades, and the number of college graduates in the past five years alone is over 10,000.

About 2,000 Negroes have received the degree of M.A., and over 200 have earned the Ph.D. degree. Three hundred have been elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and 100 are listed in "Who's Who in America." Certainly no well-informed person would be so stupid as to cling to the old notion that a Negro can't take an education."

Remarkable Achievements

The University of North Carolina professor told his radio audience that it would take a large volume to record the achievements of Negroes in various fields.

"Suffice it to say that their achievements are no longer confined to music and pugilism, but extend into many fields, such as poetry, fiction, drama, painting, sculpture, mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, aeronautics, architecture, law, medicine, biology, sociology and religion.

"Yes, the Negro has made remarkable progress—in fact, the most remarkable progress that any group of people has ever made under similiar conditions."

The Negro's Handicaps

Dr. Johnson added that the Negro's progress represented, however, only one side of the picture. He pointed out that the other side shows blood, sweat, tears, poverty, degradation, frustration, and the everlasting struggle against the handicaps of racial status, such as economic handicaps, political and civic disabilities, inequalities in the administration of justice, educational inequalities, and the emotional strain of getting along with white people.

In speaking of the Negro's handicaps he stated:

"Social customs, race prejudices, and even the labor unions have operated to keep the Negro out of the skilled trades and white-collar jobs and even to displace Negroes from some of their traditional occupations, such as janitor work and hotel work."

Political and Civic Disabilities

In outlining the political and civic disabilities suffered by Negroes, the professor said:

"It would probably not be exaggerating to say that in literacy, educational attainment, and in character, the average Negro today is as well qualified to exercise the rights and duties of citizenship as were the masses of white men when they were first granted free suffrage.

"Yet there are many places in the South today where qualified Negroes— even though they be doctors, lawyers, or teachers—are not allowed to register and vote freely for candidates for public office. Negroes as jurors are still relatively rare, and in not more than twenty southern cities are Negro policemen used to assist in law enforcement among their own people. On the various policymaking boards and councils which affect their lives as citizens, Negroes are almost entirely lacking in representation."

"We white people operate the machinery of justice, and we do a pretty good job of it," said Dr. Johnson, "but I think that sometimes we operate it in such a way as actually to promote crime. For one thing, our police too frequently consider it their prerogative to arrest Negroes wholesale on the slightest suspicion, to curse them, and to intimidate them into making confessions.

Race Exclusion Faces All, N.Y. Leaguers Told

Dixie Not Sole Victim, Says F. B Washington at Annual Dinner

JAN 16 1941

NEW YORK (ANP)—Colored Americans are universally excluded from the main stream of culture, and New Yorkers, in their smug attitude of assuming that Southerners alone are backward in combating this evil, represent no exception.

This declaration from Forrester B. Washington, director of the Atlanta School of Social Work, greeted the 215 guests at the New York Urban League's twenty-first annual dinner meeting in the Royal Palm Room of Child's Restaurant, Wednesday evening.

"Business," said Mr. Washington, "is one of the main streams of culture—and where is business in New York? On Wall Street, Broadway, and there are no colored persons there. The Urban League should strive to get non-racial jobs in the downtown area."

Hits "Mayor" Selection

He condemned the selection of Bill Robinson as "Mayor of Harlem," and told his audience that they should "pick out the richest colored citizen in the community—not rich in worldly goods, but rich in thought, achievements, ability to help his people—and elect this sort of man as 'mayor,' not as the best tap dancer."

Mr. Washington, himself once a New Deal specialist and advisor under Harry L. Hopkins, said that even in Washington there is not a single colored man on any of the policy-making bodies. In an interview after the dinner, he said all those in the New Deal set-up are mere "figureheads and rubber stamps."

As evidence of the race's failure to seriously oppose this policy of exclusion, he recalled that 1200 Atlanta Jews raised $1,200,000 in one year to fight anti-Semitism—more than 12,000 colored Americans raised to aid the NAACP.

Paige Cites Progress

Judge Myles Paige, chairman of the meeting, told members that the Urban League is busily engaged in breaking down precedents in New York, as indicated by the presence of the dinner group at Child's, notorious for its many refusals to serve colored persons.

Pearl S. Buck, noted white author and authority on Chinese life, who also spoke, praised democracy, which "allows for change," as the best way to build a nation. She predicted that the colored American will find himself in the stream of culture if he will make himself indispensible to that stream.

Pay Cuts Disclosed

James H. Hubert, executive director of the league, in his annual report, stated that the league rounded out the year owing no money, although it had been necessary for the entire staff to take large salary cuts in order to balance the budget.

Others who spoke included Dr. William H. Kilpatrick, dean emeritus of Columbia University, who was chairman of the dinner committee and introduced the speakers, and Maceo Thomas, treasurer, who revealed that the league's 1940 income had exceeded that of 1939 by $3,000.

Race Leaders Hit Attitude Towards Negro

JAN 16 1941

Whites Only Tolerate Negro To Get His Voting Power

JAN 16 1941

Adjustment of hostile attitudes toward the Negro resulting from interracial misunderstanding was pronounced last Thursday the duty of the church by four Negroes prominent in the fields of law, politics, journalism, and women's activities.

This attribution of duty was made at a meeting in the Second Presbyterian Church, Greene and Tulpehocken streets, Germantown, by Attorney Raymond Pace Alexander, 19th and Chestnut streets; Mrs. Crystal Bird Fauset, former state legislator; the Rev. Marshall Shepard, pastor of Mt. Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church in West Philadelphia, and a state legislator; and Orrin C. Evans, newspaperman.

During the course of the meeting, which had been arranged by the Committee on Social Education and Action of the Presbytery of Philadelphia North, Dr. Leslie Pinckney Hill, president of Cheyney State Teachers' College at Cheyney, recited "Christ in Crisis", an original poem, and directed singing by a Cheyney 40-voice choir.

Throws Light on Press

Evans, discussing the treatment accorded the Negro in the daily press, with particular emphasis on the Philadelphia press, said that "between political campaigns less than two per cent of the total news concerns the Negro." Of all the news printed on the front page, he pointed out that 24.5 per cent was "anti-social" and "only 6 per cent constructive."

Churches, he said, could help change the hostile attitude toward Negroes created by the "generalizations arrived at by observance of only a few individuals."

Tells of Housing Plight

He pointed out that overcrowding was "another problem" colored people have to solve. In his section of North Philadelphia (17th and Jefferson sts.), Alexander explained that in eight-room houses where families of five or six white people once lived, now live "five and six Negro families."

"There is less opportunity offered the Negro," he said and pointed out that, until 1938, there were no colored physicians on the staff of the Philadelphia General Hospital and that "at least 12 colored nurses-aspirant with the necessary qualifications had applied for training at the hospital but had been denied.

Setting the total number of teachers in the Philadelphia school system at 7,773, Alexander said that "only two Negroes teach grades above the sixth."

Wants Church As Arsenal

Mrs. Fauset, paraphrasing a statement from President Roosevelt's fireside chat two weeks ago, held that the "Church should be the arsenal of democracy."

"God has nothing to do with the inferiority attributed to the Negro; that is man's own work," she declared. "During slavery time, and since, men have gone even to the Bible to justify this supposed interior status.

"There is nothing ignoble in having a brown skin; there is nothing ignoble in having kinky hair. To bring about greater democracy, a greater democracy is necessary in the Christian Church. The Church should become the arsenal of democracy.

Pleads For Christian Living

"We need to make use of the materials of Christian living. No biologist, no bacteriologist, no chemist, no other man of science could do with his materials what the Christian does with his.

JAN 16 1941

"The Negro is still on the bottom rung of American economic life, despite the fact that he gave you his beautiful folk music, has made you happy with his cooking, had laid the foundation of America, and has the greatest thirst for education."

Rev. Mr. Shepard, who said he entered politics because he thought "it would be the one frontier to give," said also that in politics the Negro is "tolerated because his vote is needed."

Depicts Political Struggle

Relating that he and other Negro politicians had "entreated the Vare administration" for Negro judgeships, tipstaves, and minor judiciaries, he asserted that "as soon as the Democratic Party came into power, the Republicans found a way to give Negroes some magistrates, tipstaves, and even a member on the board of education."

He said that when he was first elected to the legislature, he not only wanted to be an assemblyman, "but the chairman of a House committee."

"Now," he added, "there are not only six Negro members of the legislature, all Democrats, but that three of them are committee chairmen. And it wasn't the colored people that elected them, either."

JAN 16 1941

Color Line in Church

He pointed out satirically that "there is little color line in sports; in racketeering, where even the Jones boys of Chicago get along right nicely with white racketeers; in prisons, where Negro and white convicts get along fairly well—but that is not true in the church," Rev. Mr. Shepard charged.

"I have found that where severity and fundamentalism doth abound, race prejudice and intolerance doth so much more abound.

"If ill-will here in America continues to mount, the Negro will be in a worst position than even the Jews in Germany, where Einstein, after it mounted, was no better than a bum on a park bench.

"Maybe this meeting should never have been held, because many of you will listen to what we have to say and then go out and act your same old way. At least, here you will have met face to face with the truth of the Negro situation," he concluded.

Dr. Hill's poem, "Christ in Crisis, deals with the European war, in which "man is at war against truth"; of refugees finding asylum in America; and of a "God that watcheth the battle" and would eventually reckon with those responsible for the suffering of men.

The choir, dressed in gowns of maroon and gold-colored cloth, sang "King Jesus Is a-Listenin'", "America the Home of All Ages" by Dr. Hill, and "I'll Never Turn Back No More" by R. Nathaniel Dett.

Presiding officer of the meeting was Henry Willets, chairman of the Committee on Social Education and Action.

GEORGIA U. DEAN LEAVES

Kenneth Williams Accepts Professorship At U. Of Florida

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Kenneth D. Williams resigned Tuesday as dean of men at the University of Georgia and strongly implied that the move was prompted by the Board of Regents controversy.

Williams, a native of Florida, was brought to Georgia in 1938 by Dr. Walter D. Cocking, former dean of the School of Education. Cocking was ousted by the regents after Gov. Eugene Talmadge charged the educator favored racial co-education.

Williams said his decision to leave Georgia was prompted by "a better proposition financially and uncertain conditions here." He accepted a post at the University of Florida as professor of Educational Administration.

RESOLUTIONS WERE ADOPTED AT CELEBRATION HELD HERE

Negro Leaders Express Gratitude for Efforts in Their Behalf.

At the emancipation resolution celebration staged at the court house here Wednesday, the following resolutions were adopted:

RESOLUTION OF THANKS

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

To express appreciation and thanks is said to be a sure indication of culture and good breeding. We, the colored citizens of Concord and Cabarrus county are not lacking in these qualities. Our advancement toward the attainment of that which is noblest and best has not been without many handicaps and it cannot be summarized in the few words that we shall utter on this occasion. For words, as a vehicle of expression are too inadequate to carry the deep feeling of gratitude that fills the heart of the Negro citizens of our community. Yet, we are happy to have the privilege on behalf of these citizens, to attempt to bring our reflective minds some reasons for our appreciation as we assemble on this the occasion which marks the 78th milestone on the highway of Liberty and Freedom.

Pausing for a moment at this point on our journey, we review, with pride, the achievements of the race since the liberation of our foreparents from bondage. Without the slightest desire to minimize the failures of our group nor yet to magnify our virtues beyond reasonable proportion, we believe that we have reasons to rejoice and to be proud of the progress we have made since our freedom, among the other races in this great nation. In the city of Concord and Cabarrus county, we share with progressive and grateful Negroes throughout America the same joy for our successes, sorrows for our failures, ambitions for our present. and hopes for our future. So, as we pause here let us calmly consider the status of the Negro in our own community and mark the progress we, too, have made and a comparison of present condition with that of two or more decades ago. We shall find that: not onylly to the guidance of an All Wise Providence and to the constitutional authority of this great democracy under which we live; but also to the fine spirit of interracial co-operation manifested on the part of the leaders of both races are we indebted for the degree of success we have attained up to the present time. Sincerely, gratefuly and unreservedly we acknowledge the many beneficial favors extended to our people, the white citizens. In Health, Education, Special Charities and in other miscellaneous ways they have contributed and are still contributing toward the building of a better type of citizen among our people. Permit us to observe just a few of these beneficial considerations: 1. Facilities have been provided for us at the Cabarrus General Hospital. 2. Colored nurses and orderlies are given employment. 3. Negro children have received clinical treatment and examination. 4. A colored nurse is employed to serve the schools and citizens of this county. 5. One of the civic clubs (white) provided glasses for needy children with defective sight. In charitable considerations: The Lions club, for a number of years have sponsored a Christmas tree for needy children. 2. The Charity League has furnished milk for both Negro and White children. 3. The Salvation Army and the Red Cross have ministered to the needs of both white and colored without discrimination. 4. Several private individuals have contributed financially and otherwise to aid our people at Christmas time and also during the year.

Among the miscellaneous considerations we might mention: The Boy Scout officials gave their time and talents for the setting up of a Scout program for Negro boys. A gentleman of the city gave the use of his property for the establishment of a Negro Scout camp. One of the state's interracial boards is in our city. Through the efforts of "Parson Hughes" both a men and a women's civic club have been organized. The merchants of the city have made contributions to the Negro Christmas tree and Christmas Cheer liberally each year. The local bus station waiting room facilities for colored people is much better here than we have observed in cities much larger than Concord.

Be it resolved, therefore that we, the Negroes of Concord, here assembled, express our thanks and appreciation—

First: To Almighty God, who in His kind Providence, loosed the shackles of bondage from the ankles of our fore parents and, through the instrumentality of human agencies has made us to become citizens in this "The land of the Free and home of the brave."

Second: To our national and state governments whose executives have in many instances protected and defended the rights of the minority groups in our great commonwealth.

Third: To our city and county officials, to the clubs, institutions, organizations, business men and citizens whose attitude to our people has been a source of helpfulness and has encouraged us in our effort to prevent crime and ignorance and to promote character building and righteous principles in the heart of the youth of our race.

Fourth: To Mr. W. A. Brown, chairman, and to the Board of County Commissioners who so readily consented to our request for the use of this building for our celebration.

Fifth: To The Concord Daily Tribune for publishing through its columns, without charges, all announcements concerning our celebration.

Sixth: To the chairman and members of the various committees who worked so faithfully to make this meeting a success.

Seventh: To the Rev. J. S. N. Tross, for the wonderful address with which he favored us. This masterful message was indeed a literary gem. It will shine as an inspiration to our youth for many years to come.

Finally: To all who in any way, have given of their time, talents their financial and moral support to this occasion.

May the courage and hopes inspired by the messages of this hour prove a lasting benefit to us. Let us resolve that we will return to our respective homes with renewed faith in God, in Christ our Saviour and in our fellow men. May the time never come when we as a race will forget to observe, with deepest gratitude, the natal day of the freedom which we now enjoy.

Respectfully submitted,
—The Committee on Resolutions.

Miss Louise M. Spencer, Secty.
Miss M. E. Woods

On motion of Rev. H. B. Banks, the resolutions were adopted and a copy was ordered retained for our records and one sent to The Concord Daily Tribune for publication.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, TRIBUNE

IF THE ENGLISH had treated the Irish fairly during the past centuries, perhaps Ireland would not be so anxious to maintain its neutrality at the period of Britain's most perilous hour, is the thought expressed by Dr. Channing H. Tobias at Hampton Institute's Defense Conference last week. What Ireland does may determine the result of the War of Britain, is the thought of Dr. Tobias.

He was trying to emphasize the need for America to change its attitude toward colored Americans. If the English could use Ireland in their total defense plans against the Axis it might mean the difference between victory and defeat. But until now, Ireland turns down all of England's pleas.

It should be pointed out that deep-seated and continuous injustices are forgotten only by fools. They are often accepted because those upon whom they are imposed are too weak to reject them. But that does not mean that the wrongs they endure do not cause rancor to burn in their hearts.

Dominant groups who sweep over the world making serfs of their victims had better learn that lesson. There is no enduring love in the hearts of colored men for Great Britain. How could there be, when they remember South Africa? Can anyone be so stupid as to believe colored people love those who lynch them, segregate and disfranchise them? If they did they would be saints, not men.

And in this same connection—the United States is trying to build goodwill in the Western Hemisphere. Those who are attempting to accomplish this laudable purpose will never do it until they change their sneering attitude toward people who are not white. Large numbers of people in Central and South America are not white. In the islands of the Caribbean even larger numbers of the population are not white. Does anyone suppose that these people do not understand the terrible treatment accorded colored citizens in America?

Segregation in all of its horror was taken to the Panama Canal Zone by the United States Government. A colored citizen may not even purchase a postage stamp at the same window with a white citizen. Will the darker races believe that their great savior at the North will accord them justice?

We agree with Dr. Tobias—"We must have not only the appearance of solidarity, but real solidarity; not synthetic slogans, but better actural conditions . . . A double standard of citizenship cannot exist if we are to have national security." Colored Americans love the United States with a great burning devotion. No one can question their loyalty. They even fight to get an opportunity to die for their country. All of this despite the most studious effort on the part of its rulers to kill that love and to destroy that loyalty. But even that great love can be strained. The plea we are making is not so much for colored citizens as it is for the protection of the greatest country upon which God's sun shines.

Mayor McWhorter Asserts Racial Agitation Will Not Be Tolerated

Mayor Bob McWhorter today issued a statement reflecting a firm determination to stop "racial agitation" in this community, declaring:

"This is notice to anyoen who has engaged in such un-American, such Hitler-like practices in this community, that the responsible, constituted lawful authorities of the City of Athens, so long as I am Mayor will not sit idly by while anti-racial agitation is being fomented."

"Especially is it intolerable that anyone should use a patriotic occasion given by negroes, in behalf of their country's defense to break down cooperation between the races."

Agitation Reported

Mayor McWhorter was referring to agitation here reported in The Banner-Herald last Friday and Sunday. The report said in part:

"Investigators have uncovered here what looks like a conspiracy of statewide proportions to interfere with successful operation of the national defense program, it was learned yesterday.

"The conspiracy attempt follows the familiar Nazi pattern of appeal to racial prejudice and in this instance the conspirators are trying to arouse opposition among white people to the national defense program because negroes are cooperating with selective service and in some communities have been given public commendation by white citizens of their patriotic desire to serve their country in its hour of danger.

"Investigation reveals that the movement to destroy effective efforts at national defense by weakening support of the selective service program is being organized by a wandering agitator of known subversive sympathies who has at times taken a more or less prominent part in state political campaigns."

Mayor's Statement

The Mayor's statement follows:

The colored people of Athens and Clarke county have always been peaceable and law-abiding.

The authorities of the City of Athens do not intend that professional agitators shall disturb the peaceful relationship between the races here.

Especially is it intolerable that anyone should use a patriotic occasion given by negroes, in behalf of their young men who volunteered for service in their country's defense, to break down cooperation between the races.

The responsible, constituted lawful authorities of the City of Athens, so long as I am Mayor, will not sit idly by while anti-racial agitation is being fomented. And this is notice to anyone who has engaged in such un-American, Hitler-like practices in this community.

NO one can beat the British for stupidity. On the question of discrimination and segregation on account of color the British are masters of the art. Nothing seems to have a lasting effect upon them in this respect. With 400 millions of black and brown people in their colonial empire and with Hitler at their very throats, they still cannot tear themselves away from color prejudice.

Roy Wilkins

Latest news—and most stupid and bull-headed news—on this topic comes in connection with an athletic meet to raise funds for the British War Relief Society.

It seems that the sponsors [illegible] asked the A. A. U. to furnish some American track stars for an international track meet in Jamaica, British West Indies, for the War Relief Society. The A. A. U. named Barney Ewell, Penn State star, as the sprinter, and John Borican as the half-miler.

But when the two Negro athletes sought transportation they were told by the British steamship company that they could not be given first class accommodations. The white athletes representing America could ride first class, but not the Negro Americans.

Now, here were black boys willing to give their talents in a benefit track meet to raise funds to save Britain from horrible Adolf Hitler. Hitler is horrible (according to the British and their friends in America) because he is intolerant, believes in racial superiority, in Jim Crowism, in all Germans up, and all others, including Jews and Negroes, down. In other words, Hitler believes, as this column has stated repeatedly, in the same system in vogue in Mississippi, Texas, and other points south. Also in the same system in vogue in the great British Empire whose capital, London, could not find a hotel where the famous Mills brothers could lay their heads.

Before the war any Negro who travelled would tell you not to buy your tickets on a British or an American steamship. If black Americans wanted to go to Europe in peace and not have their trip ruined by insult before the ship got out of the Hudson River, they had to buy tickets on the Italian, French, or GERMAN steamships. That is a laugh for you. German ships treated Negro Americans much better than American or British ships.

So, when our two Negro athletes presented their brown faces at a British steamship line they were given the old British stuff—no first class cabins for Negroes.

Why [illegible] should we help save them from Hitler?

Another evidence of British stupidity and cruelty is found in the arrest of W. A. Domingo, militant West Indian leader who has lived in New York for many years. According to the best accounts available Mr. Domingo was arrested while still on board a steamship bound for Jamaica, B. W. I. He had not even landed or uttered one word about the war or his people.

What, then, was his "crime?" Simply this and nothing more: Domingo has advocated that his people be given real freedom under the British flag, that they have dominion status, that they be permitted to elect members of governing bodies who have something to say about running the islands, that decent wages be paid, that labor unions function, and a civilized standard of living be set up.

Everything Domingo has asked for and fought for the British Empire claims to be fighting to preserve against the onslaught of Hitler. Yet when Domingo advocates these same things he is thrown in the clink.

This would seem to indicate, just as the steamship company incident indicates, that the British Empire really is not interested in changing the world or improving democracy, but in maintaining the very thing it accuses Hitler of seeking to set up and maintain.

The fight, then, is not between two systems, but between two groups for the privilege of operating the same profitable system.

British West Indians who live in America and who are fond of turning up their noses at American Negroes and the American system would do well to consider these straws in the wind. The B. W. I. Negroes who wave the Union Jack and the American Negroes who wave [illegible] stars and stripes both ought to recognize that they do so with reservations. Hitler would be cruder, but no worse.

OPPOSED TO NEGRO CITIZENSHIP

Every fibre of Mr. Byrnes' frail body rejects and resents the Federal Amendments bestowing and guaranteeing citizenship to the Negro. His whole political life has decried the legislation which made these Amendments living parts of the law of the land. How will Justice Byrnes react, what mental reservations will disturb him, in the light of his recorded words of the past, when Negro litigants appear seeking justice at the bar of the High Tribunal—and they plan to continue to appear and petition as long as the studied injustices of Mr. Byrnes' Democratic section continue to be practiced?

He is opposed to Negro citizenship, and yet, on the bench, he will meet these clear-cut Constitutional mandates:

1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of Life, Liberty, or Property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

2. The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

A moral readjustment, so complete as to constitute a miracle is in prospect, it would seem, if Mr. Byrnes, the Associate Justice, is to triumph over the 30-year reactionary record of Mr. Byrnes, the Southern Politician and Stirrer of Hate and Venom against Negro citizens of the Nation.

President Roosevelt has been peculiarly insensible and unresponsive to direct appeals sent him by Negro organizations and leadership. Never more so, during the past 8 years, than in this matter of selecting the South Carolinian to follow and succeed that other reactionary, where Negro rights were concerned—Justice McReynolds. Better things were expected.

There is gloom in the Negro world. Those who so lustily and so eagerly looked forward last November with fervent hope and expectation and their votes, now, must see the harm they have done.

The Old Race Issue – Then and Now

EVER SINCE THE advent of the Negro as an economic and political contender he has encountered the ever present race issue and its attendant eventualities.

At the very outset of the Negro as a citizen, the politician from time to time has mounted the race question—displaying all the hatred available and arousing the rabble to his whims and schemes.

From the start there was a desire to get the Negro out of the political equation so that he would not have to be dealt with or considered at the spois counter. In the last century, especially in the south, the Negro has been driven almost entirely out of politics.

The so-called white primaries in the southern states came as an answer as to how the Negro could be read out of political participation and power. During the operation of these primaries, the Negro question got a little rest. With the coming upon the scene of new thought and a new political philosophy, with only whites participating, the Negro has gotten a respite from the spleen of campaign stumpers and scheming politicians. Petty quarrels had to be picked up within the ranks, family squabbles were aired at the expense and to the exclusion of issues and the electorate in the states in question were called upon to vote their passions and prejudices. As a result office came within the grasp of small men of small means, small vision and small endeavors. The minority came to power and the state entered into a state of inertia and political slavery—hence the solid south.

But, those who engaged in raising the old race issue of former days succeeded pretty well. There was ever present that hatred and jealousy upon which such issues always feed. In those days our fathers met them on the fronts and fought with crude methods for their political crisis. They had not enough weapons and it will be found that dealing in the race question was an inviting pastime which promised results at the ballot box.

Those looking on today at the reactions of a recent appeal to passion and race prejudice do not have that prestige and universal approval of former times. There was a time when if Governor Talmadge had pulled the farce at the University of Georgia at the expense of the race question it would have clicked pretty well without having any immediate reactions against the whites. But that isn't so today.

The Negro has other firmer friends. Our educational institutions are interlocked and under the rating system any institution that seeks to operate outside the regular rating bureaus and college associations is like a lone bank trying to do business outside of the clearing house.

Readers of the daily papers will note also the swiftness with which the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges moved in the direction of penalizing the state system. That same move swept the educational set-up of Mississippi and Louisiana from their standing. One schoo lost over a thousand students who did not want their credentials questioned because of politics infesting the schools.

The Rockefeller Foundation, the General Education Board and other powerful forces in the educational field now come in to question this lynching of the educational system in Georgia.

Thus it will be seen at a glance, in addition to the loss of standing and prestige, there comes a terrible financial crisis whose impact will sound from the chancellorship down to the janitors, and that is not all.

Prejudice is expensive. "It knows no quarter, sends no truce, sends no ransom for exchange and accepts none, leaves its dead to bury its dead."

It will soon occur to those who deal in race issues, arraying white man against black and despoiling fine institutions beneath a raving wrath, that the trade is not what it was in the old days when Tom Watson, Jim Hines and Hoke Smith rode to power and prestige at the expense of bended backs of black men and the sweeping of this state into a seething inferno of white heat and mob passion that literally threw it from its balance for three generations.

The Negro's Stake

The Negroes of this country have the biggest stake in the current world struggle, Dean William S. Pickens of the United States Treasury Department said in a speech the other day at the summer school of the North Carolina College for Negroes.

This is true, he declared, despite the divers discriminations which still operate against the colored man in the United States. In America the Negro's lot is yet far from ideal, but he is given the opportunity and the privilege of fighting for a better break, for criticizing malevolent or discriminatory conditions, and for educating and training himself for better jobs and higher citizenship.

The factor which gives the Negro such a high stake in the war now sweeping over a large portion of the earth is the known antipathy of the Nazis toward the Negro and the emphasis which they place upon Nordic racial superiority. Hitler on occasion is said to have praised highly the ante-bellum slavery system, insisting that the most promising cultural order in the world was destroyed when slavery was abolished in the United States.

Dean Pickens told his listeners at the Durham Negro college that his race is simon pure American. There has been no infiltration since 1859. The Negro quit immigrating before the war of the 60's began. He has been here longer than any others save the first white colonists and the Indians whom they found here. The American Negro is American to the marrow and is a devoted, loyal patriot. Dean Pickens says of him, however, that the Negro is the only American citizen who almost literally is trying to break into the defense effort.

This should not be. Many of the discriminations against the Negro in defense work are being gradually removed. This process of equity should be expedited. The Negro American insists upon sharing the burdens of defense. He should be given the privilege and the opportunity. The skilled trades should be opened to him. Full opportunities in the military units should become his.

One door of opportunity for sharing the defense burden swings wide to the Negro as well as the white citizen now. That is the chance to purchase defense savings bonds and stamps—a patriotic and highly profitable investment for any and all Americans.

Second Case Is Being Weighed By Local NAACP

School Girl Beat, Slapped by Couple In Heart of City

OCT 1 9 1941

The Atlanta branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Saturday had taken under consideration a second brutality case.

The case concerns the alleged slapping, chocking and beating of a girl student of Booker T. Washington High School last Thursday afternoon in downtown Atlanta by a white woman and her husband.

Meanwhile, the Association is pushing with full force the Ruth Thornton "street car persecution" case. Mrs. Thornton was kicked in the mouth recently by a white man when both attempted to enter a River street car at the same time.

TO REVEAL DEVELOPMENTS

Developments in both cases will be revealed in full Tuesday night, 8 o'clock, in the Butler Street YMCA assembly room. The weekly meetings now being held are referred to as "emergency" sessions.

At the meeting held last Tuesday night, Mrs. Ruby Blackburn, president of the TIC club, was named chairman of a defense fund committee. Money will be raised by this group to attempt to prosecute E. V. McCoy, white, who is alleged to have kicked Mrs. Thornton in her mouth.

Mrs. Blackburn has lined up 100 persons to work with her in the campaign for $500. Individuals have already made cash contributions to the fund and last week Eta Lambda chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity voted the fund $50 out of its entertainment budget. Other organizations and churches have made pledges.

TO PROSECUTE

The NAACP has taken several steps toward prosecuting McCoy. A $10,000 damage suit was served him last week and efforts are being made to force Fulton authorities to serve McCoy with two warrants charging assault and battery upon Mrs. Thornton. A white attorney has been employed by the branch to conduct legal matters in this case.

The NAACP also is endeavoring to appeal the fine of $27 received by Mrs. Thornton in Recorder's Court on the grounds she cursed McCoy and spit on him.

The latest alleged cruelty case involves a girl student of Booker T. Washington High School. The girl's last name was listed as Russell. She was reported slapped by a white woman after she accidentally bumped into the woman and then was choked and beaten by the woman's husband.

BUMPED INTO WOMAN

Witnesses said the girl bumped into the white woman, who was standing behind her, when she snatched a schoolmate from the line of street traffic. The white woman, according to reports, followed the girl to the other side of the street and then administered the slap. The woman's husband, witnesses declared, jumped from an automobile to make the attack on the school girl.

They Didn't Dare Print What Negro Leaders Said

Did you read last Tuesday's splendid statement of the 160 Negro leaders in the New York Times? You did not, for the Times refused to print one line of this declaration.

What the Times suppressed, the New York Herald Tribune also joined in omitting. In this censorship of this splendid statement against the war and for Negro rights these two particular New York morning papers set the pace for practically the entire monopoly press.

Contrast this studied silence of these newspapers in regard to this magnificent message from the Negro people with the space which they allotted to the declaration of Governor Herbert Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia, Marshall Field of P.M. and others who practice or encourage Jim-Crow.

It was only in the pages of the Daily Worker, among daily papers, that the statement of the 160 Negro leaders was published in full. It is only in the pages of the Daily Worker among the daily newspapers of the country that the fight for Negro rights is effectively carried on.

This is one more of many reasons why YOU should read the Daily Worker every day and should see that your friends and shopmates are acquainted with what the Daily Worker says. What will you do for the Daily Worker TODAY?

SAYS NEGRO SHOULD UNITE WITH OTHER MINORITIES

5-6K

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP).—The future of the Negro in the United States is definitely tied up with the future of other minority groups in this country, according to Ira DeA. Reid, and the more pressure these minority groups bring on the government to render assistance in their cases, the more rapidly will relief come to the Negro.

JUN 13 1941

In his position as consultant on the Negro and minority groups for the employment division of the Social Security board, Dr. Reid is called upon to solve the problems of thousands of whites as well as Negroes.

Letters pour into his office daily, says Dr. Reid, setting forth the most miserable circumstances imaginable. And they come from American citizens, whose names happen to have an Italian flavor, or Germanic tinge.

These people are not foreign-born, neither are their parents foreign born. "But," says Dr. Reid, "it is pathetic to read a letter written intelligently by some wife, who watches her husband slowly go to pieces because he can't get a job, merely because his name happens to be an Italian or Germanic name."

Such letters are sent to the President, who refers them to the employment division and then they are sent to Dr. Reid, who attempts to investigate and remedy the situation.

The Negroes' situation, though similar, has not created as much furore as has the discrimination practised against these native-born whites. The New York crisis precipitated an investigation when it was brought to the attention of New York's Jewish governor, Herbert Lehman.

Throughout the country, the sentiment against such minority groups continues to grow and its acceleration has reached such speed as to spread into sections where such prejudices never before existed.

Attention has been directed to this condition and that of the Negro who has been in the same boat for many years, although previously his treatment was looked over. But with the widespread growth of these prejudices, something drastic has to be done and done immediately.

Dr Reid's position in the bureau has been to rectify and bring about such reforms as can be made under the circumstances, although the task is a very difficult one.

Clearance through his office of these cases brings them to his attention. The cases are not confined to anyone part of the country, but are from all of the industrial sections where skilled and semi-skilled labor is at a high premium.

Citing the difficulties which industry is experiencing in obtaining competent help, Dr. Reid is called upon to convince those employers that the prospective workers are American citizens, regardless of what their former nationality might have been, what their parents were, and what their race or religion might be.

The Great Emergency

THE emergency is on. It is an unlimited national emergency. It is designed to appropriate everything that is necessary for the furtherance of our nation's defense efforts. It will corral the efforts and cooperation of every American citizen. It is a serious matter and any one who thinks it just another play in the game of international power politics is in for a disappointment that borders on the ridiculous.

From President Roosevelt's speech last week and his proclamation declaring a national unlimited emergency it appears that war is inevitable. The President did not concern himself with ways and means of keeping out of the war. He did not use his oft-repeated statement indicating his hatred of war. He told the little man of Europe that wears the funny mustache what he thought of him and referred to him by name. He told him further what America had done, is doing and shall continue to do. He committed the country to a policy of saving Britain, defeating the Axis powers and perpetuating democracy. If this does not indicate a change that points to the serious words have lost their meaning and "things are not what they seem."

The unlimited resources of this country will be on an "all out" basis. The manpower of the nation will be harnessed in a manner unparalleled in this country's brief history. Every person will have a part to play in the things that are to come. This includes women as well as men. It includes children who must be kept fit to replace their elders when cruel fate may toll the bell of time and carry them away to study war no more.

Negroes are going to play an important part in the future course of our defense program. More and more the nation will have to depend upon the most loyal segment of the population. More and more the nation will depend upon that fearless group of citizens who have waded through the bloody wars of the past without participating in the booty consistent with the contribution which they made.

Negroes will have to demand recognition, however. They will have to use every weapon that will shock the nation into an intelligent consciousness of racial military equality. Events are moving too fast for delay, for the natural growth of things and for matters to take their course.

Negroes can see better in the dark than whites, it was announced last week. Doesn't this mean something to the nation? Isn't it worth something to Uncle Sam to know that he has a wealth of potential flyers who can see better in the dark than flyers in other nations? We know it does. We demand that Uncle Sam tap this mass of physical superiority. We know, too, that Negroes' muscles coordinate better and quicker with their mind than whites'. We want the nation to have the benefit of that superior coordination. And believe us when we say that it is not only for the purpose of getting black men in all phases of military branches of this nation that we urge this based on the greatest instinct known to mankind—self preservation. As citizens of this country Negroes want to know that they will be on the winning side in the event of war. They feel that if they are used in all branches of the military service that will be the best insurance against defeat that this nation can give.

"Native Son" Writes An Editorial

From our point of view no issue before the American People today is more vital than the present war and the relationship of the American Negro now and after the United States enters the "shooting stage" of the conflict.

Last week, at the Fourth American Writers' Congress held at the Commodore Hotel in New York City, this issue was sharply presented by Richard Wright, a young Negro and distinguished Author of "NATIVE SON." Mr. Wright received the award at the fiction writers panel for the most distinguished work since the third American Writers' Congress in 1939.

We present, as our editorial, the salient points of Mr. Wright's address, delivered under the title: What We Think of Their War:

"The texture of what I have to say deals with the state of feeling that exists among the Negro people in this country toward the current war. That state of feeling is so clear and unmistakable that the war leaders of our nation recognize and fear it. It is the one thing on the war horizon which they cannot explain away. Indeed, the Negro's experience with past wars, his attitude toward the present one, his attitude of chronic distrust, constitute the most incisive and graphic refutation of every idealistic statement made by the war leaders as to the alleged democratic goal and aim of this war.

"Against the background of Hitler's treatment of the Jews, the Negroes' plight in this country is what even labor-baiting Westbrook Pegler quaintly calls an 'embarrassment' to the efforts of the war leaders! Throughout the high, ruling circles of the nation, the attitude toward the Negro is: 'Oh, why should we be bothered with this old Negro question?' Or, 'The Negro issue is a dead issue.' Or, 'Listen, all you do in bringing up the Negro issue is to make things worse for them.' Or, 'Oh, the Negroes? . . . Why, they're getting along all right.' And so on. The Negro people are aware of this, and their attitude toward this war is conditioned by it.

part of the Negro people to support

"The dogged reluctance on the this war is undeniably justified and is rooted deep in historical background. Bitter and obstinate memory separate 15,000,000 Negroes from this war, memories of hypocrisy, of glib promises easily given and quickly betrayed, of cynical exploitation of hope, of double-dealing, memories which are impossible to forget or ignore.

"Negro memory informs us with clarity that there are but ten points of difference between Wilson's 'Fourteen Points of Peace' and Roosevelt's 'Four Freedoms,' and that these ten points of difference mean precisely nothing insofar as the Negro is concerned.

"Negro memory recalls with shame those honeyed words and phrases used by his leaders who persuaded him to hope for a betterment of his lot after the First World War, and Negro memory recalls the bitter disillusionment that followed in the wake of that war 'to make the world safe for a democracy' which Negroes have never known.

"Negro memory recalls the brazen official orders of the generals of the American Expeditionary Force which were issued on August 7, 1918, to the French people and the French Army, urging them to segregate and insult the Negro troops, to refrain from honoring their gallantry.

"Negro memory still recollects the humiliations heaped upon the Gold Star Negro war mothers who were sent to France in cattle boats to see the graves of their dead in Flanders, while white war mothers sailed in first class on luxury liners.

"Negro memory cannot forget the lynching of a young soldier, Private Felix Hall, who was found only a few weeks ago in Fort Benning, Georgia, still clad in the uniform of the United States Army, hanging from a tree; and Negro links this lynching to the memory of the many Negroes who were lynched in their United States Army uniforms during and after the First World War.

"Negro memory knows that the same program of job discrimination which accompanied the First World War accompanies the Second World War, but with a wider scope and in an intensified degree.

"Negro memory has not forgotten that Congress has yet to pass an anti-lynching bill, and that the poll tax laws still disfranchise millions of poor blacks as well as poor whites in the South.

"Negro memory tells us that Atlanta, Georgia, was our Marne and Brownsville, Texas, was our Chateau-Thierry; what happened to us after we came back from the desperate struggles in Flanders will never be forgotten; it is written into the pages of our blood, into the ledger sheets of our bleeding bodies, into the balance statements in the lobes of our brains.

"In short, Negro memory in the United is forced to recognize that the character of the present war in no wise differs from the previous World War. Moreover, there is ample evidence at hand that the current war is nakedly and inescapably an imperialist war, directed against the Negro people and working people and colonial people everywhere in this world.

"The problems facing the Negro people in the United States lie squarely within the continental boundaries of the United States. We Negroes have no issues to settle in Mexico. We Negroes have not issues to settle in Brazil. We Negroes have no issue to settle in Martinique. We Negroes have no issues to settle in the Argentine. We Negroes have no issues to settle in the Azores or the Cape Verde Islands. And, above all, we Negroes have no issues to settle in Dakar.

"The cry of the Negro people today is for peace. The cry of America today is for peace. The cry of the common people of the world today is for peace. When the voice sounds for peace, the Negro people will answer it."

White Man Brought Negro to South, Educator Reminds

ATLANTA [AP] — Dr. J. McDowell Richards, president of Columbia Theological seminary, appealed to ministers Wednesday to speak plainly in interpreting the Christian's duty toward improving the condition of the Southern Negro.

"Recent events in our state make it necessary that we face anew the question of relationship between the races in the light of the teachings of Christ," he said in addressing the Atlanta Presbytery.

The Negro came South "by the will of the white man," he said, "and for better or for worse he is all about us here today, and his life is inextricably interwoven with ours."

Dual Caste System Is Kicking Back On South

CAMP WHEELER, Ga., June 19—If the Army continues to tighten up on its restrictions, Georgia whites will doubtless be forced to pay double for the illiterarcy and disease which they have forced on large segments of the Negro population.

Despite the large number of Negroes in Georgia and in Bibb County in which this city is located, draft boards here are faced with a serious problem supplying the quotas of Negroes called for under selective service. Since the draft quotas are based on registration statistics, if the Negroes can't fill the quotas, the whites will have to go.

Chief cause so far for the elimination of Negroes has been the prevalence of social diseases, largely due to lack of medical facilities and lack of education which are a result of the South's dual caste system. You can't have two good hospitals or schools where you haven't got money enough for one.

Of course, the whites blame all this on the Negro's lack of character.

Second cause for elemination of many Negroes is going to be illiteracy. At first the Army was taking in illiterates wholesale, but a new ruling has been issued requiring at least a fourth grade education. Negro peons in the backwoods of Georgia would think they had been to college if they ever got as far as the fourth grade.

The burden of representing these and white illiterates in the Army therefore is going to have to be taken over by whites and Negroes who have been to the fourth grade and beyond. Since the whites have the best and most schools, they'll doubtless have to take over most of the burden of fighting.

Of course, the Negroes will get the blame for this, too.

APR 26 1941

Virgil Jordan, the president of the National Industrial Conference Board, the brain trust of the American imperialists in a recent speech spilled the beans about what America's role is in the present conflict. Study his words and remember them as we are asked to shed our blood in the name of some high sounding phrase.

"Whatever the outcome of the war, America has embarked upon a career of imperialism, both in world affairs and in every other aspect of life, with all the opportunities, responsibilities, and perils which that implies. The war inevitably involves a vast revolution in the balance of political and economic power, not only internationally but internally. Even though, by our aid, England should emerge from this struggle without defeat, she will be so impoverished economically and crippled in prestige that it is improbable she will be able to resume or maintain the dominant position in world affairs which she has occupied so long.

"Whatever the facts about this war may have been are now, it must be unmistakably clear to any intelligent person that we are engaged in it. Our Government has committed the American community to participation in this war as the economic ally of England, and as her spiritual, if not her political partner in her struggle with the enemies of the British Empire everywhere in the world, to help prevent, if possible, their destruction of the Empire and if this should not be possible, to take her place as the heir and residuary legatee or receiver for whatever economic and political assets of the Empire may survive her defeat.

"At best, England will become a junior partner in a new Anglo-Saxon imperialism, in which the economic resources and the military and naval strength of the United States will be the center of gravity. Southward in our hemisphere and westward in the Pacific the path of empire takes its way, and in modern terms of economic power as well as political prestige, the sceptor passes to the United States. . . ."

IN OTHER WORDS HE WOULD HAVE AMERICA TAKE OVER THE IMPERIALIST MASTERY OF BRITAIN'S COLONIALS, THE MILLIONS IN AFRICA, IN INDIA AND IN THE CARRIBEAN. THIS IS HOW "DEMOCRACY" ENGAGES IN WARS OF DEFENSE."

The Race Scores Heavily

By DR. GORDON B. HANCOCK
Virginia Union University

IT IS HARD to avoid the conclusion that the Negro is gaining ground in this country. During these critical times the searchlight of common sense is being focused upon the nation and upon the component parts thereof. This nation is being forced to take stock of its citizens and their loyalties. Our way of life, our hopes and aspirations are being weighed in the balance and woe unto us if we are found wanting.

The threatened tieup of industry by elements that are sympathetic towards Hitlerism is one of the dark revelations of these perilous times. In an hour when everything is demanded if our country is to survive, we have certain elements who are putting selfish gains before the safety of our common country. There is something treasonable about some of the happenings in industry.

DR. HANCOCK

At first we were confronted with a series of explosions; today it is strikes and of the threats thereof that are paralysing our defense efforts. There can be no objection to labor trying to get certain gains.. The right of collective bargaining should be preserved by all means except by such means as will expose our nation to disaster. The right to organize is one that labor has won through sweat and tears and blood and one that intelligent men want to see pre-

t even this right should not take precedence over the measures for the nation's safety. Wherein the abridgement of these rights becomes necessary for the preservation of the larger liberties of mankind, they should be abridged. The safety of the whole is more important than the safety of some of its parts. When this war is won labor can, and will, have its rights. It is not necessary to jeopardize national safety to win its point. There is a more excellent way. When the matter is summed up it must be acknowledged that the major gains of labor have been through times of peace and not in times of crisis.

The growing enlightenment of mankind will make it increasingly difficult for one man or group of men to exploit the importunities of mankind. More and more the world will look with disdain upon injustices whether these be racial or political or economic. The real danger to the future is not merely in the slowness of the coming of the Kingdom but in the retrogressions that come with war and its concomitants. In the long run the under-dog will reach the top. It is true none of us can make the long run; but what we cannot do as individuals we can do as races and nations.

These foreign elements that this nation has taken to its bosom and set to its heavy laden tables of opportunity—while the Negro had to wait for the crumbs—is showing how little it appreciates their high estate. The Negro, fed on crumbs, is pressing for an opportunity to defend these crumbs and the country that provided them. The foreign elements are throwing bombs and striking and manifesting in every way their preference for another country and manner of life.

However inclined charitable men may be to call it by some other name, the behavior of certain elements in this country is nothing short of treason. History will be forced to record the fact that the Negro stood firm and waited for an opportunity to defend a country that in its opportunity has preferred others.

NEGRO'S SUPER-PATRIOTISM

The Negro's super-patriotism is not always to be unrewarded. Just as during the first World War the Negro's loyalty won for him greater respect and reward; so in this conflict the Negro is scoring heavily. In this nation's mind is often revolving the dreary thought that in the crisis the Negro who has been rejected is a greater help and credit to his nation than many who have been preferred before him.

The disgrace of codling traitors and spurning loyalists will become more and more odious as the generations come and go. The matter of biting the hand that feeds us is a matter of character; the matter of defending the country that affords us home and haven is a matter of character. In the last analysis character will have its reward. Character like truth may be crushed to earth but it will rise again.

The more I see of the treacherous tactics of certain elements in this country, the prouder I am of the record and loyalty of Negroes. This pride is bound to extend itself in ways that will be blessings to the Negroes. Whether the Negro realizes it or not the race is scoring heavy and substantial gains in the present crisis.

'Life' Pictures Student March On Capitol Here

National Publication Airs University's Difficulties.

With a story and six pictures showing the demonstration of University of Georgia students, who staged a motorcade from Athens, Ga., to the capitol last week to protest against the political interference of the Governor in academic affairs, Life, the national pictorial magazine, tells the nation this week about the difficulties Georgia's University System is facing.

The pictures show a long string of automobiles in the motorcade, students around the statue of Tom Watson, where they placed an effigy of the Governor; a closeup of two students with an effigy of the Governor, and three scenes at Athens, showing the burning of an effigy, another demonstration at the historic old arch, with a sign expressing contempt for the Governor, and an assembly of students pointing to the "jackass" card which was carried around Athens by some of the students.

"Since June the Governor has been waging a ferocious private war against 'furriners,' (non-Georgians) in the university faculty," the story accompanying the pictures said in part, and pointed out that the Governor had accused the discharged educators of advocating racial coeducation.

"By high-pressuring the Board of Regents the Governor obtained the dismissal of two able educators," the article went on to explain as it told about the university being dropped by the Southern University Conference. The article than pointed out that the Governor was out of town at the time of the demonstration in front of the capital, but expressed the opinion he will hear from the students again.

The magazine goes on sale at newsstands this morning.

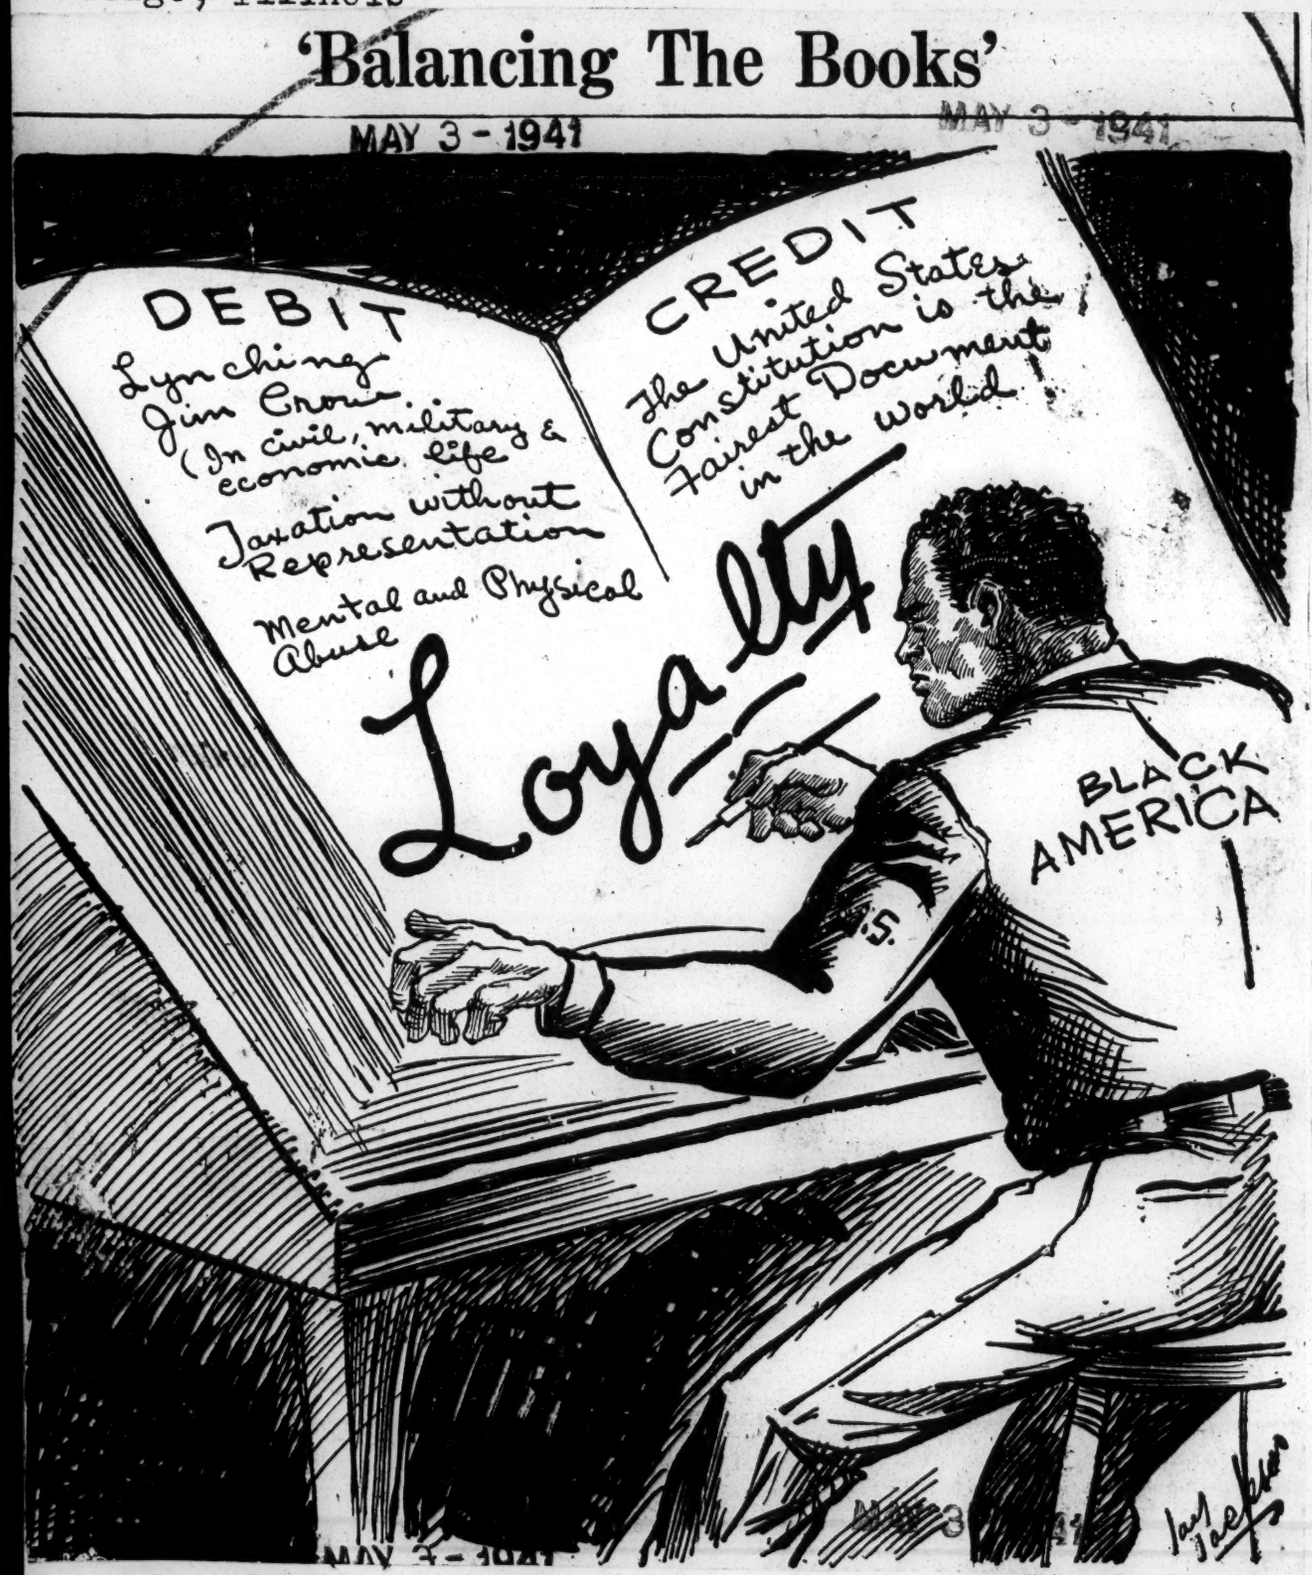
'Balancing The Books'



Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
May 6, 1941

A True New Deal Plan

To the plan of Martin F. Carpenter, "chief of the employment service division of the federal security agency", in Washington, to provide "integration of white and negro personnel" The News and Courier is, of course, opposed. So are white men, generally, in this part of the country.

Mr. Martin's plan is entirely consistent with the policies of the New Deal. Rejection of it would be a back-turning by New Dealers, North and South, on basic New Deal principles and practices—and we do not think that Southern New Dealers will be faithful to them in this matter.

Mr. Martin would have his plan adopted for the District of Columbia and would "have it serve as a model for operation of government agencies throughout the United States". Mr. Martin has "authority" to force the plan upon the District. "Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt, mentioned as a probable candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1944 . . . knows of the plan but has not personally or officially sanctioned it." He was at one time governor of Indiana. Mr. Martin also is a Democrat of Indiana. The negro vote is large in Indianapolis and other parts of Indiana. It may have the balance of power in elections. There is a spot, and Mr. Martin may have put Mr. McNutt upon it.

This "integration of personnel" plan, as described "by a senior member of the District of Columbia's 'employment center' . . . would put negro supervisors over white clerks in some instances and provides for interviewing of applicants for jobs by supervisors without regard to race or color". Mr. Martin admits that white applicants for jobs would "often be required to discuss their cases with negro interviewers". (There is nothing conflictive with New Deal principles in this; Mr. Martin is a true New Dealer.)

"The program would also mean that employers desiring to secure skilled or unskilled workers would have to accept any workers supplied without regard to race or color—that, for instance, an electrical contractor desiring electricians would not be permitted formally to express a desire as to preference between white and negro applicants for jobs."

Extended throughout the United States, which include South Carolina, it would, we suppose, apply to The News and Courier company as an employer of reporters, printers, pressmen. We oppose it. We don't like it; we are neither a New Dealer nor a democrat. The "democracy" (small "d") cannot recognize racial differences, and our federal government is sincerely and vociferously democratic. (We are holding our nose as we write.)

In South Carolina it is not likely that the leaders of the Democracy, from Senator Byrnes down, or up, to the Barnwell chieftains, or the representatives in congress, will speak with a loud voice about this matter, as long as hope lingers that it will not be pressed. Mr. Martin may be silenced. Nevertheless, his principles are of the New Deal, and they will appear in other practices. "The Negroes are in control of the Democratic party", Senator Byrnes said in 1938.

"Reconstruction", of the South, is afoot again. No one can oppose it and be entirely loyal to the New Deal. Besides, opposition would cost many Southerners their offices, related to "social gains", to which the salaries attached are good.

The disloyalty of The News and Courier to the New Deal is notorious and is looked upon, by many of our leaders in South Carolina, as an abomination. Mr. Martin's plan is but another of many plans looking to the same end, some of which are operative. Under the New Deal "social gains" are progressing, and democracy draws no color line.

If the Athens professor is a communist or is advocating social equality as between whites and blacks the governor is exactly right. But the evidence so far is not convincing. Many of those you see with the jitters over the supposed presence of communism may not have a very clear idea of just what communism is and are at a loss to know just where to find it. They just know its here but have no idea where. Social equality is a phantom. Negroes don't want it and wouldn't have it.

Virgil Jordan, the president of the National Industrial Conference Board, the brain trust of the American imperialists in a recent speech spilled the beans about what America's role is in the present conflict. Study his words and remember them as we are asked to shed our blood in the name of some high sounding phrase.

"Whatever the outcome of the war, America has embarked upon a career of imperialism, both in world affairs and in every other aspect of life, with all the opportunities, responsibilities, and perils which that implies. The war inevitably involves a vast revolution in the balance of political and economic power, not only internationally but internally. Even though, by our aid, England should emerge from this struggle without defeat, she will be so impoverished economically and crippled in prestige that it is improbable she will be able to resume or maintain the dominant position in world affairs which she has occupied so long.

"Whatever the facts about this war may have been are now, it must be unmistakably clear to any intelligent person that we are engaged in it. Our Government has committed the American community to participation in this war as the economic ally of England, and as her spiritual, if not her political partner in her struggle with the enemies of the British Empire everywhere in the world, to help prevent, if possible, their destruction of the Empire and if this should not be possible, to take her place as the heir and residuary legatee or receiver for whatever economic and political assets of the Empire may survive her defeat.

"At best, England will become a junior partner in a new Anglo-Saxon imperialism, in which the economic resources and the military and naval strength of the United States will be the center of gravity. Southward in our hemisphere and westward in the Pacific the path of empire takes its way, and in modern terms of economic power as well as political prestige, the sceptor passes to the United States. . . ."

IN OTHER WORDS HE WOULD HAVE AMERICA TAKE OVER THE IMPERIALIST MASTERY OF BRITAIN'S COLONIALS, THE MILLIONS IN AFRICA, IN INDIA AND IN THE CARRIBEAN. THIS IS HOW "DEMOCRACY" ENGAGES IN WARS OF DEFENSE."

The Race Scores Heavily

By DR. GORDON B. HANCOCK
Virginia Union University

IT IS HARD to avoid the conclusion that the Negro is gaining ground in this country. During these critical times the searchlight of common sense is being focused upon the nation and upon the component parts thereof. This nation is being forced to take stock of its citizens and their loyalties. Our way of life, our hopes and aspirations are being weighed in the balance and woe unto us if we are found wanting.

The threatened tieup of industry by elements that are sympathetic towards Hitlerism is one of the dark revelations of these perilous times. In an hour when everything is demanded if our country is to survive, we have certain elements who are putting selfish gains before the safety of our common country. There is something treasonable about some of the happenings in industry.

DR. HANCOCK

At first we were confronted with a series of explosions; today it is strikes and of the threats thereof that are paralysing our defense efforts. There can be no objection to labor trying to get certain gains.. The right of collective bargaining should be preserved by all means except by such means as will expose our nation to disaster. The right to organize is one that labor has won through sweat and tears and blood and one that intelligent men want to see preserved.

But even this right should not take precedence over the measures for the nation's safety. Wherein the abridgement of these rights becomes necessary for the preservation of the larger liberties of mankind, they should be abridged. The safety of the whole is more important than the safety of some of its parts. When this war is won labor can, and will, have its rights. It is not necessary to jeopardize national safety to win its point. There is a more excellent way. The Spirit Of Hitler

Adolph Hitler, the most despicable and hated man in all the world, has become the symbol of ruthless desecration and destruction, both of property and humanity, the manifestation of the spirit of all that is utterly devoid of decency and respect for the rights and happiness of others.

But the strange thing of all is that the spirit of Hitler is far more prevalent in the world than most of us are willing to admit. The ruthless and insufferable economic system that in many other parts of the world has driven so much humanity into a miserable slavery, only slightly removed from death and hell, must be destroyed as much for individuals in all nations as for the nations themselves, whose freedom and liberty have been taken away.

SAVANNAH JOURNA SAVANNAH GA

Greed and selfishness which with their slimy smugness have enabled a few people in the world to settle their economic problem seem in so many instances to have left its victims utterly devoid of any sympathy for those who have had the misfortune to be born poor, and who in an effort to serve their fellowmen have chosen to remain poor, rather than give themselves over to the making of money.

The insistence by students of world affairs that the economic structure of the world must be basically changed is a voice that will not be stilled. Wars and strife between the nations of the world are only the epidemic proportions of the germ-laden social order, which lies untouched and unremoved, waiting for some incident to spread the disease and horror over the face of the world.

We talk glibly about the American Way of Life, as if there was something almost divine in what in so many instances is sheer, hollow mockery. But we say little about the Christ Way of Life, the great Founder of which said, when told by some ambitious follower that he would go with him wherever He went: "the foxes have holes and the birds have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

The Drift Of The Current

By J. THOMAS NEWSOME

MAR 22 1941

MEN AND women of small means who had never dreamed of paying income taxes before nor had any conception of the intricacies involved in making out a report, have been brought face to face this year with the call which our own government has raised to her citizens, white and black, to come to the support of this democracy.

MR. NEWSOME

To the man in the street it is now apparent that deadly peril lies in the path of the way of life we have become accustomed to in the United States. Briefly stated, it is a contest between a democracy and the totalitarian conception of government.

RACE CONCERNED

Naturally the Negro is concerned, and that most vitally, in the outcome of the conflict. An article appearing in The Nation recently is not only arresting but startling. For the enlightenment of those Negroes who pretend to see no peril for the Race in the ultimate success of Hitler, this column calls attention to some of the "Order" for Negroes. This order follows:

1. "Colored People are inferior
2. Free choice of trades and professions banned
3. Death penalty for intermarriage
4. No electoral rights
5. Banned from railways and public places
6. Cannot join National Socialist Party or army save in labor battalions."

MAR 22 1941

This column believes that after discounting the German attitude towards Negroes and Jews, with full allowance for propaganda in favor of the democracies, there remains little doubt of what the Negro can hope for in the event of a Nazi victory. As this column sees it, the Negro race could look for nothing better than a perpetual status of inferiority should Hitlerism triumph over the democracies.

Even at its worse, the voice of protest is not completely silenced in a country like ours—a so-called democracy. Minority groups can really get a hearing; and, while the Negro is ignored as a part of the government in some places and denied the right of integration in the body politic in certain sections, he always can look with hope to the fundamental laws of the United States for a redress guaranteed in those fundamental laws and the Constitution of this country.

BEST HOPE FOR FREEDOM AND EQUALITY

It is the firm conviction of this column that that part of the Negro race holding allegiance to the United States should give wholehearted support to this government, which, in theory at least, is based upon the equality of all men under the law, irrespective of class, color or creed.

This column urges the Negro people to agitate, to protest and to demand what is their due under the law, but all of this should be directed to the heart and conscience of this democracy which, though full of faults, is the best hope for the ultimate freedom and equality of all men.

"Negroes Buy What They Want And Beg For What They Need"

We were shocked by this startling statement a few days ago from a man high in the councils of the church and one who has had wide experience over the nation. We have been among those who often complain of the terrible economic conditions which Negroes have to face in many sections of the country and in many parts of all sections. Negroes as a whole are the most underpaid group in the nation, unless it is the Mexicans of the Pacific Coast. It is simply astounding what small wages and income many workers and families among Negroes receive.

And yet we have been revolving in our mind how much truth there is in the assertion above. While it is true that Negroes in the seventy-five years since Emancipation have made unprecedented progress in education, buying property, and cultural development, it is also painfully true that Negroes have wasted millions of dollars in unnecessary and unprofitable pleasure, unwholesome food and drink, furniture and other equipment which his income could not justify. All of this has led observers to believe that the Negro can do a much better job supporting his churches, church-related schools, other charities and needs than he does.

For instance, one of the things we need as a denomination more than anything else we can think of at this moment is a full-fledged and ably supported theological seminary at Livingstone, together with the completion of the Price Memorial Building. While we were thinking of this we did a little calculating, and we discovered that there ought to be 200,000 members of Zion Methodism, who could spare a penny a week for these much-needed causes. If so and if this small gift were continued for one year, it would amount to the magnificent sum of $104,000.00 per year.

If we really mean to do it, and we should, we ought to stop talking about it and simply give the money that is needed for these worthwhile projects.

NEGROES SHOULD NOT BE DISCOURAGED FROM DOING THEIR PATRIOTIC DUTIES BECAUSE OF PROPAGANDA 'THIS IS A WHITE MAN'S COUNTRY'; NEGROES 100 PERCENT AMERICANS

This country is filled with highly paid propagandists and organizations working to discourage Negroes from performing their patriotic duties by trying to have them believe "this is a white man's country, and the white people alone, should be called upon to do the fighting and defending."

As I SEE IT, Westbrook Pegler noted columnist, was right when he admonished this nation to "keep racial snobbishness out of the Army.".

In speaking of the Army he said "Numbers of young Americans are straggling into an unfamiliar life as soldiers of the republic representing many strains of blood and race and many cross breeds which have resulted from the marriage of sons and daughters of European immigrants. The Negro who is certainly 10 percent native American is honorably represented."

This is as it should be. The American Army should compose all races. Each group should be given the opportunity to rise and fill any position in the Army according to ability and regulations. It is true the Anglo-Saxon's may represent the greatest number but when it comes to defending the nation this group of people could not begin to do the fighting for this country alone to say nothing of doing the manufacturng and other work necessary to defense.

That class of whites making the boast "This is a white man's country, and Negroes should be proud they are allowed to live here, is doing a serious injury to the protection of our democracy.

Nearly 350 years ago, Negroes were brought to this country as slaves. They have made a great contribution to America as laborers to help develop the natural resourses, build railroads, cities and factories.

One writer has truthfully said "We cannot take the Negro out of the history of this country, nor can we separate him from its future."

—— As a soldier, the Negro has been the bravest and are unexcelled in loyalty. There stands in Boston today a monument commemorating the bravery of Chrispus Attucks, a Negro, the first to shed his blood that this country might be free from the tyranny of England who now is fighting for her freedom from the tyranny of dictators in Europe.

Again when this country faced destruction in the Civil War or the War between the states and was threaten with invasion from foreign, shores, and at the time when it seemed the stars and stripes were gone forever, it was the strength and support of the Negro that turned the tide in favor of the union. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, speaking of the Negro as a soldier, who fought with him in the Spanish American War said, none were braver and none more loyal than were the Negroes who marched up San Juan Hill.

The part Negroes played in the World War No. 1, not only as soldiers with the American Expeditionary Forces in Europe, but as citizens who willingly did their bit by purchasing liberty bonds and thrift stamps and contributing in every way they could. here were no draft dodgers or slackers.

I was talking with a Negro War Veteran recently and he said the Allied soldiers did not really get to fighting until the American soldiers arrived and proved they meant fighting. "When I first arrived I saw French and German soldiers playing cards together at night and then go to battle the next day. But when it came to the American soldiers, there was no friendship with the enemy. We regarded them as enemies and put them away at every chance.

As Negro soldiers we had no personal hate but it was our duty to fight.."

In view of all this bravery, As I See It, the Negro is the only group in America who has to fight for a chance to serve his country. Negroes now, as a race, are asking a chance to help defend their country by water (in the Navy), on land (in the Army) and in the Air Corps. No where is too dangerous. In the civilian forces he is asking a chance to help do the job in defense industries. He does not ask special favors or exemption.

As a citizen he has played his part by helping to build America; by accumulating properties and wealth. He is sharing in the tax necessary to finance the defense program. The Negro, more than any other people, spends all his income in this country. It is quite natural that they believe if America is lost, all they have is lost. This contributes to the fact that despite all the Fifth Column and Communistic activities and movements to discourage their participation in the war, the young Negro draftees, in departing for training, express a remarkable willingness and spirit of enjoyment as if the were going off to college or attend some football game.

AS I SEE IT, Negroes have helped to form the very backbone of democracy—however, they have not enjoyed all of its rewards

After 250 years in slavery and 75 years of free people, Negroes can well appreciate the blessings of liberty.

AS I SEE IT, the government is making more provisions in giving the Negro more consideration in preparation to defend this country than at any time in the history of the race.

MAR 22 1941

I believe I am correct when I say that all the Nazi propaganda and Communist activities will not change the Negroes abiding faith and confidence in his country. His answer may be found in an old and favorite hymn "Just Like A Tree Planted By The River, I Shall Not Be Moved."

The Question Is Whether a Few Or All Shall Possess the Dignity of Manhood

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

An Italian writing man, known the world over, recently explained America's attitude in words that meant something like this: "You Americans thought you had the best of everything, and when you discovered that Germany had better technicians and better equipment and greater skill in all lines, your envy made you hate the German people."

That may seem logical to a prejudiced mind, but it is unadulterated rot.

Americans have always admired the training and skill of Germany's research chemists and other scientists and technicians—especially the German Jews who led the field—yet never have believed Germans or any other people superior in any particular to Americans.

Such racial or national vanity may not be praiseworthy or justified, but that is the way our people feel. And they aren't likely to hate anybody because of envy so long as they consider themselves a cut above all other races.

American antagonism to the Nazis can be traced to the fact that our people are free-born. Being free-born does something to the mind. It gives people a point of view and a mental attitude and a standard of ethics and sportsmanship and a generosity of spirit that nothing else can give.

Being free-born, our people hate tyranny and injustice and abuse of power, and therefore loathe and abominate all who practice these evils.

That is the whole story. If Englishmen or Frenchmen were doing what the Nazis are doing, they would seem equally base.

The Nazis despise democracy, yet the leaders of Germany have always demanded and obtained for themselves the same advantage that free men possess.

MAR 24 1941

In Wilhelm's time, the nobles and highborn considered themselves equal to any man and claimed the freedom to think and act as they pleased.

That is the basis of the difference between the two systems The big Nazis enjoy all the privileges of freemen, but think nobody else entitled to them. Free-born Americans believe all men entitled to the same privileges.

CURRENT OPINION

Continuation of lectures in Negro History at the College of the City of New York is an encouraging development of a much-neglected and integral part of American education. In the appointment of Dr. L. D. Riddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection of the New York Public Library, to deliver lectures in African and American Negro History at one of the nation's largest and most important colleges, we recognize an attempt on the part of the Board of Higher Education to discharge in some measure a modicum of its responsibilities to the taxpayers of this city.

The attempt, however, falls short in several important ways. According to present plans, the lectures will be given only to students who attend the day sessions. This will exclude several thousands of young Americans in search of a full view of American and world history a chance to learn of a people with whom they live and move as neighbors. In other words, the lectures should also be given to students who attend the evening sessions.

Furthermore, we can find no reason why Negro History should not be made a recognized and vital part of the education of all races in the New York school system, and it is understood that the future of Negro History in our colleges will depend to a large extent on the popularity of the course being conducted at City College. This is a challenge to the Negro race. Success or failure of the "experiment" is a matter for the Negro student to decide by signing up for the course. —AMSTERDAM-STAR NEWS.

SEP 21 1941

In discussing this pamphlet with well known educators in Washington, they ask "what could be worse than the treatment accorded the Negroes by the British empire?"

Relating stories of the cruelties perpetrated on the natives of South Africa, it is related that they are not permitted to walk on the streets of certain large cities; they must stay in the native quarters and if they are found on the streets without a pass after certain hours, they are locked up; they are not permitted to own land and in general they are given a thorough going over.

When confronted with these crimes against the Negroes in South Africa, Britons say that the South African possessions enjoy the status of dominions and parliament dares not interfere in the rights and laws of the dominions.

Look at Australia

The same condition prevails in Australia where Negroes are denied entry to the country.

Moving up to Uganda, a new book recently published in England says that the natives in the East coast are not permitted to own land in the city limits; they are not permitted to raise coffee and they are pretty generally confined and restricted to one class of work.

These possessions are not dominions and do not enjoy the status of dominions, however, they are crown colonies and as such are directly subject to the government and laws imposed by England itself.

The determination of the British to keep the natives subjugated in a condition just short of slavery, say these savants, is little short of cruelty, and the Hitler plan as outlined in these pamphlets can not be much worse than practices now already in force.

A wider dissemination of this information is sought by groups familiar with the customs and usages in South Africa, where a noted Negro educator once had difficulties with the British government and where a noted Negro preacher was forced to ask a representative of this government to intercede in his behalf.

The plight of the Negro throughout the world, even as sad a state as the world is now in, has changed little for anything but the worst is the belief of these persons who have had occasion to observe and see first hand the things of which they write and talk.

Few true stories of the condition of these people come from South Africa because they know no place to turn in their distress.

The governments of the Dominion of South Africa are said to spend 300 times as much on the improvement of land for whites as it does on improvements for Native Negroes. That is to say, if one cent is spent to improve conditions for the natives, $3 is spent to improve land and conditions for the white Europeans.

In the field of education, 60 times as much is spent for European white children's education as is spent for that of the natives.

These conditions, say experts, are not mythical; they are a part of the British treatment of natives and should be known to every black American who is being taught to hate Hitler and to love England.

AND STAY WHITE

From the Charleston, S. C., News and Courier

OCT 9 1941

Controversy and confusion of the kind troubling the Georgia university can be stopped, for good and all, by a simple and unqualified declaration of the leaders of the Negroes and their Northern white friends, the Rosenwald Fund, the various "Foundations," that they don't want mixed racial college and schools in the South, that they do not look to the eventual destruction of social barriers, that they consent to the southern white people's resolution that the two races must have complete separation with equal justice.

That is the declaration that they don't make and they won't make.

The white South looks on and observes the unremitting and insidious American Negro movement to demolish separation of the races in the South, and the white South is alarmed and on guard.

The white South witnesses the attempts of Negro students, the money furnished them in the North, to break into Southern colleges with assistance of the federal courts.

The white South is not blind to the trend of federal court decisions to shatter the walls that separate white and Negro life.

Southern white men of good conscience and good will have done and are doing everything possible to improve the Negro's lot, to punish lynchers, to give the Negroes good schools and fair treatment in every way—always with separation.

If these Northern Negro leaders, the "foundations" and their white allies of the "intellectuals" are in agreement with the position of the white South they do not say it, and they leave Southerners to infer that they are not.

White Southerners cannot and do not ignore the gnawing campaign that is carried on by these people. They are well aware that if they should carry their point in the schools and colleges they would turn to invasion of segregation in industry, that they would demand admission of Negroes into Southern cotton mills and mill villages.

The whole question is vexing and difficult. We well know the burden that Negro schooling places on Southern white shoulders, but we know as well that the white people are willing to carry it. They need assurance that the organized Northern Negro movement has not the purpose to undermine and destroy the integrity of the white South, and assurance is denied them.

The denial is the bottom cause of the controversy in Georgia, and it will not be observed by the prattle about "academic freedom," however it lead to imprudent and some times inexcusable incidents.

Rather the white people of the South would have no colleges, no schools, than mixed colleges, mixed schools.

The Northern "liberals," white and colored, have got to accept this position of the white South or to make war against it.

Without racial separation white people cannot live in the South and stay white.

Irate Georgia Throng Wants Independence Of Regents Restored

ATLANTA, [AP]—Six hundred students shouting under his capitol window Wednesday blamed Governor Talmadge for the "discrediting" of the University of Georgia and demanded that he purge higher education of politics.

Talmadge was absent on a speaking tour but the gaily-clad co-eds and youths left a petition appealing for restoration of the "independence" of the revamped state board of regents which recently ousted University Dean Walter D. Cocking on Talmadge's charges the educator advocated racial co-education.

"We honestly state," said the petition, "that no racial equality has been taught, advocated or practiced on this campus or on any other campus by the students of the university. We feel further that the students and faculty harbor no such ideals of racial equality."

Two days ago the Southern university conference unanimously voted to drop the University of Georgia from its circle, holding Cocking's dismissal was unjustified and caused by "political interference" in the system.

Motorcading 70 miles from the Athens campus, the protesting students popped out of 108 automobiles and staged a rousing half-hour demonstration around the monument of Thomas E. Watson, late fiery Georgia senator.

Cheer Leader Bill Malone of Greenville, Ala., and R. M. McKenzie of Rome, Ga., scaled the monument and dropped over Watson's form a hollow bust of Talmadge, then led the wildly cheering throng in the school's alma mater.

SEP 21 1941

In discussing this pamphlet with well known educators in Washington, they ask "what could be worse than the treatment accorded the Negroes by the British empire?"

Relating stories of the cruelties perpetrated on the natives of South Africa, it is related that they are not permitted to walk on the streets of certain large cities; they must stay in the native quarters and if they are found on the streets without a pass after certain hours, they are locked up; they are not permitted to own land and in general they are given a thorough going over.

When confronted with these crimes against the Negroes in South Africa, Britons say that the South African possessions enjoy the status of dominions and parliament dares not interfere in the rights and laws of the dominions.

Look at Australia

The same condition prevails in Australia where Negroes are denied entry to the country.

Moving up to Uganda, a new book recently published in England says that the natives in the East coast are not permitted to own land in the city limits; they are not permitted to raise coffee and they are pretty generally confined and restricted to one class of work.

These possessions are not dominions and do not enjoy the status of dominions, however, they are crown colonies and as such are directly subject to the government and laws imposed by England itself.

The determination of the British to keep the natives subjugated in a condition just short of slavery, say these savants, is little short of cruelty, and the Hitler plan as outlined in these pamphlets can not be much worse than practices now already in force.

A wider dissemination of this information is sought by groups familiar with the customs and usages in South Africa, where a noted Negro educator once had difficulties with the British government and where a noted Negro preacher was forced to ask a representative of this government to intercede in his behalf.

The plight of the Negro throughout the world, even as sad a state as the world is now in, has changed little for anything but the worst is the belief of these persons who have had occasion to observe and see first hand the things of which they write and talk.

Few true stories of the condition of these people come from South Africa because they know no place to turn in their distress.

The governments of the Dominion of South Africa are said to spend 300 times as much on the improvement of land for whites as it does on improvements for Native Negroes. That is to say, if one cent is spent to improve conditions for the natives, $3 is spent to improve land and conditions for the white Europeans.

In the field of education, 60 times as much is spent for European white children's education as is spent for that of the natives.

What Is A Man Profited, If He Shall Gain . . . ?"

(Editorial by Rev. J. F. Wilson)

We have heard a great deal recently about the superiority of the white race. It is a tradition that we cherish very highly. Sometimes, it is a tradition that we very brutally abuse and of which we take sinful advantage.

By all right, it should become the responsibility and privilege of a more capable, superior race to assist in every way possible to heighten the ideals and raise the standards of conduct of the supposedly inferior race.

Certainly, it should never be the case that the superior race will actually assist in the breaking down of ideals and moral standards of the less privileged race. But that very thing happened before our eyes on the Sunday just passed.

Our black friends were attempting in their simple manner to observe a day of religious significance to them. To be sure, all of them did not come together for this purpose, but many of them were drawn by the traditional meeting at this spot.

By constructing stands for the purpose of "heavy selling" among the throng of visitors; by keeping stores open, inviting trade; by bringing in ice cream trucks and picture-taking equipment to tempt the negroes to spend their little money.

The white people seemed to be saying: "make a big picnic. Forget that it is Sunday. Enjoy yourselves and add to our profit."

Why should we be amazed, when they learn their ideals of Sabbath desecration from us? Why should we expect them to be any better than we help to make them?

There are, thank God some of our white citizens who are humiliated at the terrible things which took place on Sunday. It is not likely that anyone profited by the extra trading which was carried on upon the Lord's Day. A little more money does not make people rich for long, especially when they have sacrificed goodness, Godliness, and common decency in the effort to get their money.

May God forgive these sins, and enable every white citizen to live a life before our negroes that will be an example to them of what a true citizen ought to be.

NAZISM IN WILMINGTON

Back in 1898, Wilmington, N.C., had colored aldermen, colored policemen and firemen, and John C. Dancy was collector of the port.

Major W. [illegible] Harris, white, ex-mayor of Wilmington, boasted last week in a public address, how all of these men were thrown out of office in the so-called Wilmington Rebellion of a half a century ago.

He said that Democrats defeated Republicans by stuffing ballot boxes with the names of dead persons so that one ward, the Fourth, which had only 474 registered voters, cast a majority of 1,174 votes for the Democratic candidate.

Harris spoke gleefully of chasing colored election officials away from the polls and stuffing the ballot box with 500 illegal ballots himself, of how the plant of the colored Daily Record was burned and the streets cluttered with the bodies of ninety colored men who were killed trying to vote.

America today purports to be outraged by the crimes of Hitler against the Jews and his murders of patriots in conquered countries, but here in our midst is one kind of native monster who blatantly brags about his criminal exploits and his hometown hearers and the public are neither abashed nor ashamed.

School Youths Promote Interracial Goodwill

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30—A program of promoting inter-racial goodwill is being featured by local high schools designed to let pupils of opposite racial groups see that they too, are Americans.

Recently, a Sumner high school committee consisting of Elizabeth McAllister, Rosie Lee Gillispie, Marion Emerson, James Hurt, Lyle Suter, Leamon Bolar and William Radcliff visited the Beaumont and Central high schools, white.

As one Sumnerite naively reported "After visiting these schools we found Sumner was not the only high school with problems."

Then, Sumner high was visited by four pupils from Clayton high (white) in St. Louis county. They were Mary Wiggen, Kay Murphy, Jim Shaw and Jim Morris. Sumner student group leaders conducted them on a tour of the building.

Georgia Editors Say:

TALMADGE'S PROPOSAL INSULT TO STUDENTS' INTELLIGENCE

(From The Athens Banner-Herald.)

Governor Talmadge has let the students down Campus representatives, at the Governor's invitation, conferred with him at the executive office last Saturday. In addition to rejecting their proposal to restore political independence to the Board of Regents, we rather suspected his excellency would seek adroitly and subtly to give the students the run-around.

However, there was nothing adroit or subtle about his proposition. It was not only crude, but an insult to the students' intelligence as well as their integrity, and the students accepted it as such.

Evidently the Governor felt that the mammoth motorcade that marched upon the capitol last week to denounce his political domination of the Board of Regents and seek redress was quite impressive, as he tried to influence them to try similar tactics on the Southern Association's investigating committee when it meets in Atlanta November 3, suggesting a noisy demonstration by a thousand or more students be staged while the committee is in session, in an effort to bluff or intimidate the association into keeping University System colleges on the accredited list.

This sophomoric proposal was shouted down at a students' mass meeting at Woodruff Hall. Had students been foolish enough to be led into such a trap, a demonstration such as the Governor suggested would naturally be construed by the investigating committee as an indorsement of the high-handed methods employed by the Governor and his regents, which would undoubtdely indicate to the committee that the Governor's political domination of the University System is complete.

We are of the opinion, though, that a proper approach to the accrediting agency would create a sympathetic attitude and, as we see it, only the students themselves through their executive committee of four outstanding campus leaders can make that approach. Any statements or commitments made by this students' committee would carry much greater weight with the association's investigators than the pronouncements of a Board of Regents, a majority of whose members by their own action have already eliminated themselves from the "accredited list" of public esteem.

Not Yet Ready to Enter War!

The American people are not of one mind about what the nation should do in the present international crisis. Some say we should give all aid to Britain, even up to active participation in the war; that we are as good as in the war now and might as well go through with it. Their position is that sooner or later Germany will attack us either with arms or through commerce, or both, and that now when Britain is able to strike lusty blows, is the best time to overcome the Nazis.

Those of opposite belief hold that we will be at war with Germany sooner or later, a long bitter struggle that will call for all our resources. For that reason they would have us prepare, build up our strength, and when attack comes, enter the contest at our best.

There is a third group, small in number, who hope against the evidence of their own eyes that we will escape entering war entirely. Those of that opinion either look for a British victory or for the Nazis to be so exhausted in conquering Europe that further warfare will be beyond even their avarice and bloodlust. This hope, most natural in a peace loving people such as we are, tinges the thinking of both the major groups. And well it may, because it is what a sane world must wish. Clearly the leaders of present day cannot go on killing each other interminably, without civilization crumbling.

It is not so long ago that the steel-minded East was covertly expressing the wish that war would come, because "it will make business pick up." What a horrible thought! Now war is on in the sense that preparation for it is engrossing the nation. Business has picked up in the East to such an extent that unemployment there is wiped out. But with the increased industrial activity has come a general dislocation of our ordinary way of life. Those who wished for war can now see that they who dance must pay the piper. Strikes, taxes and the imminence of fighting and dying take the flavor out of war profits.

We here in the middle west who had no steel to sell have been less war-minded than the East all along, and we are that way today. But like it or not, we are carried along with the current and must decide now whether the United States shall rush into war or make haste slowly, first bringing its preparedness up to its best.

Whatever others may think, the latter course is our preference. Our reason for that stand is our belief that we of the United States cannot prepare an adequate defense and all the while be sending war munitions abroad. We mean that it is a physical impossibility for us to make planes and tanks and guns enough to defend these shores, and at the same time make enough more [illegible] in the Atlantic ocean.

First of all this country is unprepared spiritually to make either a capable ally of Britain or a strong defender of itself. This difference over whether we fight now or later is of small consequence. The divided stand on whether individual gain or national need should come first, is the grave danger to America! Until the individual worker and the public official stand side by side in glorious self-effacement, both intent on doing their best for our country and for democracy, America is not ready to enter the war!

Site Secured for Defense Courses

BALTIMORE

The board of estimates, at its meeting Tuesday, approved an appropriation of $4680 for the rental and lighting of a new vocational defense school at 764 W. Lexington Street which will house courses for colored people.

By its action, the board struck out a previous appropriation of $7,000 in order to eliminate what under the circumstances, would be an excessive allotment for the first year.

The original appropriation of $7,000 was to have covered the entire course but, with the need for $2880 to cover rental and another $1800 to cover cost of installation of a modern lighting system, it became evident that the first year of operation of the school would require more than they early allowance should be.

Sum to Cover One Year

Because of this, the board rescinded its action appropriating the $7,000 for the entire course and approved a separate allotment of $4680 to cover one year of operation.

The suggestion was that new allotments would be made after the first year, the reason being that the lease under which the building was obtained permitted discontinuance of occupancy of the building after one year.

Further, the necessity of paying for the lights would not be an item to be confronted after the first year.

MAY 3 1941

Recommended by Lewis

Action of the board was upon a recommendation of John W. Lewis, assistant superintendent, business department, department of education.

In his letter to the board, Mr. Lewis said that the West Lexington Street building was decided upon after he had scoured the colored residential section in a futile search for a suitable place for the school.

He stated that the building could be obtained on a 3-year lease, which lease contained a clause requiring that the tenant maintain the place for one year after which he could vacate provided he furnished a 60-day notice to the landlord.

The latter, Andrew G. Steelman, refused to install the lights necessary for the operation of the school, but agreed that if these were installed by the tenant they could be taken away when the place is vacated, if there is a desire to do so.

An estimate that the lighting system installation would cost between $1500 and $1800 was provided by the assistant superintendent.

Mr. Lewis urged the board to consider the problem of lighting immediately as it is something that is vitally essential to the proper conduct of the school.

The board agreed to label the lighting item an emergency, and to receive sealed bids as soon as possible, without advertising.

The building is on Lexington Street and extends back to Waesche Street, and Mr. Lewis stated in his letter that the school would use the entrance on Waesche Street.

'Anti-Mob' Mother Set for Daughter

OCT 16 1941

An irate mother stood nervously twiddling her thumbs yesterday just before the motorcade of University of Georgia students arrived at the state capitol for their demonstration against the Governor.

"I just better not catch my daughter in that mob," she said, her eyes flashing. "Why, the very idea. If I catch her in that bunch, I'll give her a good piece of my mind."

She said she was a Talmadge supporter and was in favor of his policies, adding she thought some more educators ought to be kicked out of the University System.

PREJUDICE IS NOT NATURAL

The first thing to understand about race prejudice is that it is not natural or inherited. People are not born prejudiced.

MAY 3 1941

In the streets of Northern cities colored and white children can be seen going to school hand in hand, arm in arm, happily together. It is not until these children grow older that prejudice settles its dark pall over their minds as they absorb the poison from their elders.

MAY 3 1941

The story is often told how the first colored person ever to visit a little village in the interior of Russia was treated. He was the object of widespread and naive curiosity, to be sure; but an object of curiosity to be feted and to be made much of, not one to be shunned, segregated or lynched.—FRANK B. Defends the Negroes

Editor The Telegraph:

I thought all Negroes had been put in their places, and it was all over but the shouting, until I read a letter in the paper Oct. 1, about Negroes evading the draft.

Perhaps a few Negroes in some towns have succeeded in evading the draft, but that does not mean that all Negroes are slackers. The Negro race is just as loyal to this country as any race. They fought and bled and died in the first World War, they are ready to do so now.

If Negroes are made conscious from day to day that this is a white man's country, that they have no rights here, no education is needed, that they are low down criminals, a burden on the white man's back and the only place for them is in the fields, it is no wonder that a few will rebel, after all Negroes are human.

This talk about Negroes and whites mixing in schools is unfair, Negroes have no more of a desire to send their children to white schools, than white people have to send their children to Negro schools.

One writer said that Negroes got more out of the pot than they put into it. The majority of Negroes do not earn enough to put much in any kind of a pot. It takes all they can rake and scrape together to live on and that is not enough.

Negroes pay taxes, too, and the ones that are not paying taxes, are struggling to pay rent, and that rent helps the white tax payers.

If there ever was a time when this viscious attack on the Negroes should stop, it is now. It is time to put this race prejudice aside and ask God's blessings on America, because the enemy is at the gate.

The enemy who is giving the whole world a big headache today is not a Negro.

CONSISTENCY VERSUS INCONSISTENCY

MAY 2 1941

One of the most common statements heard in our group is "The Negroes ought to get together". This statement is made by people in our own race and people of the other group. We sometimes wonder just what is meant when this statement is made. When we observe other groups we find that they are subject to certain physical and social forces that motivate their actions one way or the other. We also have observed that the Negro is subject to the same physical and social forces. We also observed that all of us are affected by political and economic forces. We believe that the Negro people are together on this program, the advance ment of their race in America. However, there may be individuals in our group just as there are individuals in other groups who are inconsistent when it comes to certain principles and ideals. We also believe, based on experience, that other groups have their differences and are divided on issues just like the Negroes are. But it seems as if the Negro is criticized for his actions more than any other group.

The Negro could not have accomplished as much in a country that has been so bitter toward him if our program had been one of inconsistency. Of course we know that there has been in the past as well as today, individuals who adapted their program to the tune of the dollar. That is to say that their program has been one of inconsistency as well as of consistency—consistent when the dollars played a merry tune and inconsistent when the tune ceased. Such individuals in our group are in the minority just as they are in other groups, and usually fall by the wayside. We have leaders of our race who speak with crooked tongues to the masses and count the money with ease at the selling-off time. They have been in our group even since the days of slavery and, no doubt, will be in our midst until the end of time. They are in other race groups just as they are in our group.

The Negro has a definite program today as a minority group based on principle and issues. And we believe that the Negro is more determined to carry out that program in spite of the devil and high water. Men who speak with crooked tongues and dance to the tune of the American dollar cannot forever stay in the forefront. The masses are enlightened and will move them out of the way. So when we hear the statement that Negroes ought to get together we see earmarks of a theatrical stunt intended to break down the morale, courage, integrity and perseverence of a minority group struggling for their rights as citizens to share in all of the fruits of Democracy.

GIVE US A CHANCE

(Detroit Tribune)

There was a time in the early years of the automobile, when many white citizens scoffed at the idea of allowing Negroes to serve them as chauffeurs. Somebody boldly expressed the opinion that the automobile was too intricate a machine for the Negro to learn to manipulate. The same attitude was once taken regarding members of our race learning to fly airplanes. Today, however, we all know that some of the most expert chauffeurs and air pilots in the country are Negroes. In fact, Negroes can learn to manipulate and produce any machinery that any other individuals can operate and produce. All we need is the chance to use and develop our ability.

The Back Britain and Bust boys call us, who question the wisdom of the project, "screwballs" when it is just the other way around.

MAY 2 - 1941

Even if President Roosevelt does put Senator James F. Byrnes on the Supreme Court bench there is a strong possibility that Byrnes will find it impossible to contaminate the other members with his bigotry.

Gov. Prentice Cooper was bragging a few months ago about how certain it was the Negroes would never ride on Pullman cars in the South. We wonder if he has heard the latest news.

It is true that no Negro has ever betrayed his country but the number who have betrayed the best interests of their race should cause us to put the soft pedal on talk about traitors.

Democracy vs. "Eye Wash"

Two incidents have happened recently having to do with moral courage. The wife of the President relinquished her membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution when she discovered racial chauvanism in that organization which refused Marian Anderson the right to sing in Constitution Hall. The other episode occurred last week when Al Smith, the "Happy Warrior," took a walk when he discovered race prejudice stalking about in a musical organization to which he belonged, and preventing a Negro "barber shop" quartet from entering into competition with white vocalists.

In both of these two instances there was need for the exercise of moral courage. There are many people in America who in private denounce wrongs in our social order, but the few who will come out in the open and take a stand against a specific wrong. Such people are almost as scarce as hen teeth.

Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, struck at spinelessness and cowardice extant today, when in Houston, Texas, the other night he said "Mankind is sick of talk today. Talk out of which nothing ever comes."

All over the South today can be found thousands of white people who in private will say Jim Crow and mob violence is wrong, but where will one find the Wendell Phillips or the William Lloyd Garrison who will stand before a thousand whites and denounce the evil?

The action of the President's wife in casting aside her membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution and the later and identical action of another distinguished American, Al Smith, is indicatory of the stiffening of moral fiber in our social order.

The forming of such organizations as the Oklahoma Federation for Constitutional Rights, the Oklahoma Youth Legislature, Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, Southern Interracial Commission, are all signs of moral courage developing in the southern section of the United States.

Eye wash and crocodile tears are not going to rectify wrongs committed against minority groups. Not only must the white man's conscience be pricked but there must be fearlessness and resoluteness of action. Most missionary societies do nothing but talk about the problem. There must be action and movement towards every-day social vices such as taken by the President's wife and by a former candidate for the Presidency.

In an elementary way there is not much that white people would have to do in the South to rectify the wrongs done black citizens. In the language of Mr. Agar, "We could repair tomorrow some of our evils. For instance, if people who talk about democracy, and who argue that Negroes are entitled to it, would but have the moral courage to stand up demanding the untrammeled right of Negroes to vote in the South, the entire problem would be settled. The only way citizens can defend themselves in a democracy is with the ballot. So long as the ballot is denied millions of Negroes, the talk made about democracy for black people is just so much "eye-wash."

Brown Derby to Brown Shirt

THE Brown Derby had a son, whom he called Junior. And Al Smith, Jr., is making good. He was elected to the New York City Council. He was made the head of an investigation into the Municipal Civil Service Committee. And some people thought the young fellow would use the investigation to improve democratic methods.

It didn't turn out that way. His old man upheld "liberty" by helping to form the Liberty League which turned out to be the very apple of reaction's eye. Now Junior is following in papa's footsteps. His investigation, it turns out, was inspired by the Christian Front and has the approval of Father Coughlin. And its purpose, far from spreading democracy, is to abolish the merit system in civil service and to exclude Negroes and Jews from many civil service jobs.

In fact, Al Junior's committee, after taking a crack at the CIO, after attacking the State, County, and Municipal Workers Union on the grounds that city workers have no right to organize, really got down to brass tacks. It selected as its quarry Paul Kern, president of the Civil Service Commission. Paul Kern was a monster, the committee claimed. He had spread civil service to many formerly exempt jobs that Tammany used to hand out, he had refused to deny the rights of Negroes and Jews under the merit system. The number of Negro and Jewish firemen, policemen and sanitation department employees had increased since Kern took office. Moreover than that, Kern had publicly voiced his opposition to Nazi persecution of the Jews, had in other years called for Tom Mooney's freedom, had sponsored civil liberties, educational reform, and social legislation, had favored union organization, and had actually opposed vigilantism.

So Al, Jr., calls Kern a Communist. For proof—Kern believes in democracy and also admits subscribing to the Daily Worker and NEW MASSES. "If I were not permitted as a free citizen to subscribe for the Daily Worker, neither you nor Councilman Cohen would be here to criticize me," Kern remarked to the committee's counsel, Emil K. Ellis.

Obviously, Kern is too democratic. Al Smith, Jr., is intent on bringing about a safe democracy in which books and newspapers are banned, or Jews and Negroes (and Catholics, Mr. Smith?) are kept in their place, unions don't exist, and civil rights are canceled. Hitler's program is similar—on a larger scale, of course. But like Junior, Hitler had small beginnings. And the only way to stop Hitlerism before it throttles life itself is to throttle it. The investigation headed by Al Smith, Jr., is fascism and nothing else.

Professional Agitators Are Scored

Plan Used To Hamper Defense In State Exposed

ATHENS, Ga.—(S N S)—The Banner-Herald reported Wednesday that a patriotic occasion last December attended by prominent white citizens officially connected with the selective service organization in Clarke county and the city government is being used by "professional agitators" to stir up racial prejudice in Georgia.

The paper declares this "pandering to racial prejudice" is being conducted according to the familiar Hitler-Nazi pattern and will result in endangering successful cooperation between white and Negro citizens in behalf of the defense of our country."

JUL 10 1941

WANDERING AGITATOR ACCUSED

The Banner-Herald report further states:

"Investigation reveals that the movement to destroy effective efforts at national defense by weakening support of the selective service program is being organized by a wandering agitator of known subversive sympathies who has at times taken a more or less prominent part in state political campaigns.

Conspiracy against effective operation of the selective service law is punishable in the United States court by imprisonment of five years in the federal penitentiary and $10,000 fine, or both.

"Investigators here have revealed that the organizer is being aided by one of more local persons and that the methods employed are exactly like those used by Nazi agents abroad, and designed to hamper effective national defensive co-operation between races in the same community.

"The entire matter is being brought to the attention of official investigators, who can be relied upon to find out how far the plan has developed, how many persons are involved and who they are, and what efforts are being made to gain converts because of its danger to defense plans and support of the defense program.

SPEICAL ATHENS MEETING

"A Macon agitator, it is said, is also involved in the scheme. He is reported to have made a special trip to Athens to meet with the local group and the state-wide wandering agitator.

"The group is hurting the national defense program by using copies of pictures of white citizens commending Negro volunteers for military training by contending the event was an example of social equality. In Athens, a group of white citizens attended a meeting to give public expression for appreciation for the Negroes patriotic support of the selective service program. Such meetings were encouraged throughout the country on behalf of white trainees and to encourage support of national defense. The meeting here was attended by the mayor and officials of selective service as a patriotic duty.

"National selective service headquarters, representing the national government, is said to have been particularly anxious that in the communities of the south, where white leadership is generally recognized by both races as a matter of course, that white citizens give public expression of appreciation for the Negros' cooperation with defense plans as a symbol of national unity. Hitler, it is universally known, always weakens his intended victims by bringing about disunity within through appeals to racial prejudice. The national government and all supporters of national defense have worked for co-operation between races and against efforts at disunion."

MAYOR HITS AGITATION

tation" in this community was issued Wednesday by Athens' Mayor Bob McWhorter. Mayor McWhorter declared:

"This is notice to anyone who has engaged in such un-American, such Hitlerlike practices in this community, that the responsible, constituted lawful authorities of the city of Athens, so long as I am mayor, will not sit idly by while anti-racial agitation is being formented.

"The colored people of Athens and Clarke county have always been peaceable and law-abiding.

"The authorities of the city of Athens do not intend that professional agitators shall disturb the peaceful relationship between the races here.

"Especially is it intolerable that anyone should use a patriotic occasion given by Negroes, in behalf of their country's defense to break down cooperation between the races."

THERE IS A VAST DIFFERENCE IN THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT AND IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF GOVERNMENT

S-6K

The citizen can be both proud and loyal to his government; of which he is part and parcel; and hate its administration, in the hands of men, who manipulate it, for selfish and dictatorial purposes. It is not disloyal to country, or lack of patriotism in the heart of the citizen, who object to the policy of men in charge of our form of government, who use it for the promotion of selfish ulterior purposes; and who are quick to denounce all men, who have the moral courage and stamina to differ from them, and expose their propaganda. Men should be morally certain, that they are right, before they go ahead and brand all other men, as traitors to their government; when they have the lives, rights and property of those they condemn in their hands. There are neither excuse, or reparation for error; not even honest error, if there is such an article. If you take an individual's life, peace and happiness away from him, you cannot restore either. But you filch from the person, that which does not enrichen you, but makes the individual poor indeed.

Let us illustrate the point. The Negro is a native born American citizen; and under the Constitution, Bill of Rights and under every law of right and justice, he is entitled to every right, privilege and opportunity, any other citizen enjoys. He has proven his love of country and loyalty to the flag, by giving his life and blood on the battlefield, whenever his country required his services. He has made this supreme sacrifice uncomplainingly. Must he be charged with disloyalty to his government, by those, whom he honestly differs from; and who fought to destroy the Union, while he fought to preserve the Union? Must he be threatened with the loss of what few privileges, rights and opportunities he has, because of love for his country, he walks out in the open, and says to his President: Mr. President, "we want to do our part on our defense program, along with other citizens, but we cannot do that, unless you cut out race discrimination in the defense program. We stand upon the right of petition, set out in the Federal Constitution. We petition your Excellency to issue an executive order, proclaiming to the office of Production of Management, that all discrimination on defense programs, and every other Government service must cease, and all future contracts must carry this provision." This is the letter and spirit of our form of government. Our form of Government, is composed of native born and naturalized citizens; and not of races. The individual is the unit and not the race.

Abuse and vituperation against those, who differ from us, have never been accepted by an honest public sentiment as decent argument won a case, or established the truth. Noise nor temper is no proof of sincerity or patriotism. Honest men always look with suspicion on the fellow, who sees wrong in everybody except himself. Everybody is wrong but "me." This character usually has a trick up his sleeve; that will fall out before the public in time to betray the propagandists. This brings us down to the genius of our Form of Government. Free speech, free press, free religion and the right of public assembly in the time of peace; secure from molestation. When Lindberg, Senator Wheeler and all others, who agree with them, express their views on the war situation and suggests that the principles of democracy for which we fight, are already lost; they have the perfect right to do so freely, and unmolested by the President or any other American citizen or authority. The President has neither the right nor authority to call those, who criticise his war policies, copperheads because they do not see things as he does. The President is preaching the gospel of democracy to the world; and he cannot continue to consistently deny the application of the principles of democracy, to home folks, because they differ from him on questions of administration of public affairs.

The President as a private citizen, has the same right to criticise individuals as individuals have to criticise him; but he has no right to officially denounce and call other citizens hard names, because they do not swallow his policies, lock, stock, and barrel. He is as much the servant of those, who disagree with him, as he is the servant of those, who agree with him, and which he praises to the very top. For the President to take any other attitude, would be to sanction totalitarianism for the world, rather than making democracy safe for the world.

STUDENTS REJECT IDEA OF TALMADGE

Governor Advised Motorcade to Put Pressure on Meet of Accrediting Group

ATHENS, Ga., Oct, 20 (AP).—A University of Georgia student mass meeting, estimated by campus leaders at 1,500, shouted down tonight a proposal from Gov. Eugene Talmadge designed to appease the current dispute over political independence of Georgia's university system board of regents.

Told by Bill Gignilliat, Jr., of Savannah, that the governor had advised a motorcade of 1,000 students to demonstrate before representatives of the Southern Association of Colleges, an official accrediting agency scheduled to meet in Atlanta next month to investigate charges of political interference by the governor, the students booed, hissed and stamped disapproval.

The group voted to "unanimously reject the proposal of Gov. Talmadge" for student pressure on the association to retain the University of Georgia on the accredited list and adopted instead a program of opposition, including the proposal of an extra session of the legislature to enact legislation stripping the governor of the power of appointing members of the board of regents.

A group of students met with Talmadge last week to demand restoration of "political independence" in the board of regents by ousting all newly-appointed members who voted for the dismissal of Dean Walter Cocking on the issue of racial co-education and reinstatement of members previously ousted.

Gignilliat and Campus Leader Al Fowler said Talmadge declined to do this "because it would be politically inexpedient to do so" and suggested instead the mass meeting before the association's investigation committee.

The governor, continued Gignilliat, wished the students "by show of force and violence" to convince the investigators of the "student's out and out conviction that so far neither the governor nor the board of regents had done anything wrong." He was interrupted by boos.

Also included on the adopted program, besides the special legislative session, were these points:

First—Appeal to parents, leaders and citizens-at-large to aid in this purpose (stripping governor of power of appointing members of the board of regents).

Second—Enlist aid of student leaders in other colleges of the university system to organize students there in obtain ing a special session.

Negro Leaders Launch Movement To Nip Pro-Nazi Talk Among Race

Patriotic Charlotte Negroes announced today that they are in a movement to nip in the bud a lot of "incredible" talk among the less intelligent members of their race about the joys and benefits that would come if America should be dominated by Hitler. The movement was being led by the Charlotte Negro Community Crusaders, and Editor Henry Houston's The Post announced that Charlotte Negro churches would conduct "Loyal Sunday" programs.

"So far we have been unable to find the source of this pro-Nazis propaganda," Dr. J. S. N. Tross was quoted, "and we believe that there are no paid representatives of foreign governments at work among our people.

"Rumors to the effect that a Hitler victory will mean greatly increased wages and shorter working hours for colored people are becoming widespread. We hear it in the streets and it is whispered at Negro gatherings. So far we have been unable to determine the source of these rumors, but we do know that a great many of our less intelligent people believe them. It is incredible."

While the Crusaders search for the source of the propaganda the ministers of the various churches were being asked to conduct "Loyal Sunday" programs and to stress the falsity of such rumors and emphasize the importance of strong allegiance to the United States Government and its Defense program.

Racial Issue Raised Against Henderson

By Robert De Yore
Post Staff Writer

Leon Henderson's fitness to control prices for the American farmer was challenged before the House Banking Committee yesterday, but a committee member swiftly countered that the attack on the Federal price administrator was based on race prejudice.

Tom Linder, Georgia commissioner of agriculture and spokesman for Southern farm interests, observed in a committee hearing that if Congress enacts the Glass-Steagall price bill Henderson probably will be selected to administer it.

"The only reason so far advanced for Mr. Henderson to have this job is that he enjoys the friendship of (Bernard M.) Baruch, (Treasury Secretary) Morgenthau, (Nathan) Straus, Ginsberg and the Guggenheim interests," Linder declared.

Slur Called Un-American

Recalling that Linder's prepared statement praised the patriotism of farmers, Representative Kean (Republican), of New Jersey, asked the witness:

"Do you include yourself among the farmers you say are 100 per cent American?"

"Well, as they always say, present company excepted," replied Linder.

"I just wanted to ask why your statement concerning Mr. Henderson's qualifications mentions men that belong to one racial group?"

"I am not resposible for what race these gentlemen belong to," said Linder, and Kean declared:

"All I can say is that when you come in with such an un-American statement, as far as I am concerned your whole statement carries no weight."

OCT 1 1 1941

Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, committee chairmain, said he believed the witness was not referring to Henerson's association with one racial group but to mutuality of "financial itnerests and the like." Linder said he would reply to Kean by saying that he knew several farmers in his State who belonged to the same race and that "you couldn't find finer American citizens anywhere."

Sees Favoritism

Linder declared that the "actual effect" of the Glass-Steagall bill would be to "fix prices on farm products ,only" since the measure exempts restriction on wages and limits agricultural prices to 110 per cent of parity.

"It is impossible to control the prices of any commodities, either agricultural or industrial, unless you control the price of the labor entering into the production of such commodities," he said. "Fixing a price on cotton, wheat, cattle, or other farm products automatically fixes the maximum labor costs.

"Mr. Henderson has no more idea of the hardships of people on the farms than the man in the moon. Mr. Henderson has no more idea of financial and other problems that

Restrictions Are Spreading On West Coast

Growth of Race Population Brings Increased Friction

OCT 9 1941

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(ANP)—Alarmed by an upsurge of activity in all sections of the city looking forward to an extension of racial restriction covenants by which Negroes are prevented from occupying homes, the local branch of the NAACP last week took two steps designed to aid in the fight against such agreements.

First it made an appropriation to assist Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lofton of the Central Avenue gardens neighborhood, in their six-month-old fight to occupy the modest home purchased with their life savings and to prevent forfeiture of that home.

In a companion move the organization named a committee to try and persuade residents of the area lying between Normandy and Vermont avenues and Washington and Adams boulevards not to sign a covenant being circulated there.

SUITS DEFENDED

Attys. Thomas L. Griffith, Jr., counsel for the Loftons, explained that he and Atty. Loren Miller who is now associated with him, are defending three suits brought against the Loftons. The first of the suits was first decided favorably to the Loftons by Judge Frank M. Smith who later granted a new trial to complaining white property owners.

OCT 9 1941

With an appeal pending from Judge Smith's decision, another group of white property owners in the same tract sued the Loftons demanding that the court enjoin the Loftons from occupying the property. In still another suit Garland Freers, white real estate man, has asked the court to forfeit the Lofton property to him under a forfeiture clause in the 17 year old restriction covenant.

The attorneys explained that they are pressing a motion before Supreme Judge Frank M. Swain to compel a joinder of all property owners in the tract in the suit in order to curb the avalanche of suits now plaguing the Loftons.

The committee named by the association in the West side matter is headed by Baxter S. Scruggs, Y. M. C. A. secretary and includes Albert Baumann, Frederick M Roberts, J. S. Shackelford and Atty Miller and will probably issue a pamphlet appealing to white property owners on civil rights grounds and stressing the un-Americanism of restrictive agreements. It is designed as a preventative measure to curb such agreements and its activities will be extended to other sections where such agreements are in the offing.

HOUSING SHORTAGE

Association leaders stressed the fact that rapid growth of the Negro population has created an acute housing shortage which is aggravated by the widespread use of racial restriction agreements and said that some measures must be taken if Negroes are to find places in which to live.

On still another front, Atty. Miller filed affidavits before Superior Judge Ingall W. Bull asking leave to reopen a case now under submission. The affidavits recited that two plaintiffs in the case had sold their porperty since the close of the case in which property owners in the area lying between Cimarron and Arlington streets and Exposition and Jefferson boulevards seek to prevent five Negroes from occupying property in that section. Defendants there include Sam McDaniel, veteran movie actor, Mrs. Vetress Walker and Lewis Harris, city firemen. The attorneys affidavit makes the claim that the sales furnish additional reasons for a refusal of this injunction asked for.

Help the Negro

I'm positive that Clara Searcy Reed has something in view that I would say is a vision. How can we live on God's beautiful earth, saying we are Christians, children of God, sisters and brothers, serving our great Father? How can we go on each day with a color line drawn between races? Having in mind the Negro, who is thought of only as a servant for the opposite races? Yet, some of the finest men and women taking up American history have been Negroes. And the children of all races are putting to use the black man's contribution, using the Negro's labor and his fine art and ideas in their everyday living. Yet going on each day gathering more particles of hatred toward him. The majority of the white race cannot endure his companionship, to eat and drink with him; separate schools, churches and different text books with a different phase of learning. It has been said by one "that the Negro has but one-third the sense of the white race." Although intelligent people can and will contradict such a statement.

How do we expect God to smile on such a nation? Can't we in some manner come close to each other, and go to God in prayer and ask His divine blessings and precious guidance of our footsteps in such a corrupt world? And to bring a more perfect sister and brotherhood that on that great day we may be called His children when we all shall enter into His Kingdom, to rejoice and shout with gladness, to feast with love and kindness for shall each race be separated? As S. Baring Gould writes in that great piece of poetry Onward, Christian Soldiers.

"We are not divided,
All one body we,
One in hope and doctrine
One in charity."

OCT 10 1941

Those are very beautiful words. And I'm sure Mrs. Reed has the same vision as Mr. Gould, when we all shall be happy and rejoicing in our Father's House.

So I don't see where we can overlook our black brother today and expect to feast with him later. So why try to exclude the Negro from education? Let him be educated to the fullest extent. His schools need attention; give him a chance, let his contributions mingle with those of others, and let it help make a greater America.

Let him not be scorned, draw up the color line and let us all live closer to each other and all things closer to God.

We have valuable institutions for our race, yet they are being neglected. Join in and help save them . . . they serve in the black race and white race also. Help the Negro instead of knocking him. His service will be of great help to the present and future America.

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—The centenary celebration of the founding of Fordham university, the largest Catholic institution of higher learning in the United States, was the backdrop for a general denunciation of racial and religious prejudices by Vice-President Henry A. Wallace and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman last Tuesday night. These two were the chief speakers at the commemoration dinner honoring a group of eminent scholars and distinguishel guests, and was held in the Waldorf Astoria.

While no specific mention of the name was made, the cue for the evening was taken from the recent undemocratic remarks of Charles A. Lindbergh in which he blamed the British, the Jews and the Roosevelt administration for the present ills of the world.

Representing the President, Mr. Wallace declared that "no true Christian can speak bitterly against the Jew, the Negro, or the yellow man." He added that the faith of Americans that they lived in a land "chosen for a high destiny of service is totally different from believing in the inherent superiority of one race over all other races and of one scientific godless culture over all other cultures."

Governor Lehman saw religion as the great force that will save the world from barbarism and destruction, but recognized the threat of both religious and racial intolerance to democracy and world peace.

"Division between our people," the governor said, "must not be allowed to exist if democracy is to be preserved. Hate begets hate. Intolerance begets iintolerance. Oppression of the individual or of groups inevitably leads to the oppression of other individuals and groups. Wherever racial or religious division has raised its ugly head, the death knell of human liberties has been sounded.

LOUISVILLE EDITOR FLAYS RACE DISCRIMINATION

Race discrimination on the part of a union is an "unrelieved tragedy", Mark Ethridge, Louisville newspaper editor and chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice told the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, as he made a plea that labor "abolish all the devices of constitution and ritual" which now bar Negroes and other minority groups from the opportunity to work.

Ethridge spoke as chairman of the Fair Employment Practice committee which was named by President Roosevelt some months ago to "receive and investigate complaints of discrimination" against potential defense workers because of their race, creed, color or national origin.

"Our committee has the means to bring recalcitrant manufacturers into line and undoubtedly means will be found to bring recalcitrant unions to line," he warned.

"But we do not want to do that," he added. "We want your full support and your full acceptance of the national policy."

After recalling the many efforts made to integrate minority groups into the defense program, climaxed by an Executive Order by the President on June 25, Ethridge continued:

"Unfortunately, there are still many unions, and many locals of unions, not all of them engaged directly in the defense effort, which bar their fellowmen because of color. I would not be frank at all with you if I did not say that most of them are yours."

Citing examples, Ethridge, who as general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal, deals with 12 unions pointed out:

"We have a notorius case in which an employer subscribed in effect to Hitler's theory that Negroes are best fitted for slavery, or at the very best, for domestic work, but offsetting that, we have a notorious case in which a union, by hypocrisy and trickery, deprived Negroes who were already working of their right to employment."

On the eve of the first hearing of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, which opened Monday, October 2, in the Embassy Auditorium, Los Angeles, Ethridge told the unionists that discrimination against workers because of their race, creed, color or national origin, is "a game that this country cannot afford to play in the light of all it has stood for and challenged; it is certainly a game that the union of the United States cannot afford to play unless they want to invite the destruction which has come to their fellow-unionists in Germany and Italy."

Ethridge presided over the Los Angeles hearing which was attended by the entire membership of the Fair Practice Committee, with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, represented by proxy.

Across The Desk

By LUDLOW W. WERNER

RICHARD WRIGHT who made a big success of his "Native Son" could probably write another masterpiece if he were to take the elements necessary for stark realism and a moving drama which would, in my opinion, make him author of another best seller.

For those who are unfamiliar with Clinton Brewer, I shall give a brief description of his case history. It began back in 1922 when Clinton P. Brewer was sentenced to life imprisonment in Trenton State prison for killing his wife. Why he killed her is unimportant; the fact is that he committed an act which is in direct violation of the Ten Commandments and of man-made law.

For 19 years Clinton Brewer was a model prisoner in the Trenton jail; he studied, completed his education and became so interested in music that he became a composer of great promise. Besides all that he also became a polished conversationalist and the life he lived in prison was not at all wasted if one were to measure it in terms of accomplishments of the man. So bright was his future that, before he was even released from jail on parole, he had a job waiting for him as arranger for Count Basie; the Columbia Recording Corporation had royalties awaiting him from Basie's first recording of his hit tune.

Ludlow W. Werner

Before his release Brewer was the subject of reams of newspaper stories from coast to coast. Here was a prisoner who had become nationally famous while his application for a parole was pending.

Now society having decreed that Brewer had paid his penalty for his one misdeed, the man was released in July of this year to start life anew in the outside world; released to start it anew with the best wishes of thousands who, struck by his suddenly discovered musical genius, had high hopes that he would become one of the leading song-writers of the times.

But fate plays funny tricks on human beings. Some queer mental quirk, which 19 years in jail failed to straighten out, again cropped out and once more Clinton Brewer found himself a hunted man—hunted for killing another woman less than three months after he had been paroled, after serving 19 years in jail, for his first murder.

What a cruel trick and unkind fate for Clinton Brewer whose future should have been bright; whose future would not have been marred, as so many others have been, by the fact that he once was tried and found guilty of killing his wife. No, his genius would have removed all of that and he would have been accepted into society, not for what he had been but rather for what he presently was and would be in the future.

Perhaps when Clinton Brewer goes on trial again for his life, alienists and psychologists will try to dig into his inner consciousness in an attempt to find out what caused his apparent homicidal mania. if they find out it will be to the credit of medical science to have discovered th ecause. But it will be to the discredit of medical science that the man was allowed to go free without first being cured, mentally and morally.

It is for those reasons that I believe that someone like Richard Wright can take the case of Clinton Brewer and make of it another cause celebre, or rather another "Native Son." Such a book might even show the fallacy of our system of punishment for the commission of crimes. Most certainly, the moral could appropriately be drawn, for all and sundry, that "crime doesn't pay."

Intolerance, Good And Evil

In his speech in Birmingham which was heard over the nation, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, made a statement that should sink deep in the hearts of the people, high and low, when he said that intolerance is not always wrong nor tolerance always right.

This is a simple truth, simply stated, but it runs counter to many beliefs. There are great numbers of persons who elevate themselves to a self-erected pedastal and from this perch proclaim their broadness while heaping condemnation upon any they consider intolerant. But a lot of it is moonshine. Instead of being broad they merely display their ignorance.

Toleration is a word implying freedom from bigotry, but it not infrequently happens that those who most decry intolerance are the most bigoted, most self-righteous and most superficial among all observers. They would accuse Christ Himself of being intolerant because he ran the thieves out of the temple and would today denounce those who look with some degree of suspicion upon the piety and purpose of such persons as Stalin and Hitler, as such piety and such purposes bear upon religion.

To be intolerant of that which makes for destruction is not a thing to be condemned, though to be tolerant of such things may with propriety come under condemnation.

But the question of tolerance has to do with many important phases of life outside of the realm of religion. Tolerance of the views of others is always admirable but represents a form of tolerance that often is absent. As an illustration one finds some persons of high station and, presumably of a high intellectual order, referring to Southerners as intolerant because of their views upon racial equality and racial relations. Mrs. Roosevelt is among those who would instruct the South upon this score, yet the informed observer can but wonder at the tolerance of persons who can't tolerate the attitude of a people who prefer to choose their own intimates.

In practically all countries there are elements that do not wish to make other elements their intimate associates, avoiding relations with them in the family circles and in the marital state, with reasons that may appear quite superficial to some observers. But if one is tolerant the viewpoint of such persons will be accepted with good grace. The tolerant will not criticise the South for its decision not to accept the Negro as a social equal nor the Westerner for not accepting the Japanese as social equals. Such distinctions come within the rights of the people involved, just as the Negro has the right to choose his associates.

Narrowed down to actualities, the most intolerant persons as a rule are those who think their own way of life has attained perfection and who have no patience with the views of their fellows, while the most wisely tolerant are those who studiously avoid such an attitude.

The true test is to be tolerant of the right and intolerant of the wrong while being always tolerant of the mistakes of fellow beings.

JUSTICE LOUIS D. BRANDEIS

THE DEATH recently of Louis Dembitz Brandeis, retired Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, should be mourned by Negroes as well as all other liberal-minded Americans, for in a public career that encompassed almost a quarter of a century on the bench of the highest court of the land, Justice Brandeis proved himself a firm believer in the constitutional rights of all citizens, regardless of race and color.

With the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, he was known as the "Great Dissenter" at the time when the court was hidebound with converastism. In one of the earliest cases decided by the Supreme Court after he became a member, he concurred in the opinion of Justice William R. Day that the civil rights of Negroes were jeopardize when a local city ordinance tried to prevent colored persons from occupying houses in predominantly white blocks.

He also concurred in the famous Elaine, Ark., riots decision granting a new trial to the defendants; he joined with the late Justice Cardoza in declaring the Texas Primary Laws unconstitutional, and aided the Scottsbor boys to secure a new trial.

Other cases in which he concurred in decisions upholding the civil rights of colored citizens were those of the Angelo Herndon and Lloyd Gaines cases.

Although born in Kentucky, he had union sympathies even in his youth. His maternal grandfather had been a leader in a Polish revolution and an uncle helped nominate Lincoln for President in 1860. His father was an outspoken union sympathizer and his mother risked her life to bring succor to northern soldiers.

The country can ill afford to lose such men as the late Justice Brandeis.

HYPOCRISY SUPPORTS INSANITY.

Postmaster General Walker, invited to address the National Conference of Catholic Charities, had little to say about Christian charity but a good deal to say about the "duty" of America to throw its sons into the bloody turmoil of Europe.

"We of America cannot—we shall not—seek a peace purchased at the sacrifice of the hopes, the ambitions, the freedom of others," he said. This is a favorite topic among the war mongers. It is our duty, they tell us, to extend the four freedoms to every corner of the world whatever the cost may be in American blood and treasure.

Strangely enough, their anxiety is directed solely toward the restoration of those freedoms in the areas in which it can be accomplished only by the destruction of Hitler. They are not interested in restoring them in the Anglo-Saxon world, altho it might be expected that those who pledge the four freedoms at some time in the future to the oppressed peoples of Europe might find it wise to demonstrate their good faith in the field where immediate action is possible.

When Senator Lester Hill of Alabama came forth with a ringing plea for the four freedoms, William E. King, a leader of the colored people in Chicago, wrote him suggesting that a good start might be made in the senator's native state, where Negroes are certainly not free from either fear or want. Senator Hill was not interested in replying to the letter. He said, in response to queries, that he rarely answered mail except such as comes to him from Alabama.

Gandhi has advised the American people to think 50 times before entering the war. He is properly skeptical of the four freedoms. Self-government for India would give the British the enthusiastic aid in their struggle against Hitler of 300 million people, but they have not thought this aid worth the price. The cant and hypocrisy of this drive to make war a moral obligation to the American people is evident. The "duty" which Mr. Walker would impose on us is a fraud. Our duty is to ourselves and our children. If we destroy our nation and our form of government by embarking on this counterfeit crusade we shall go down in history as the most gullible and foolhardy people the world has ever seen.

There could be but one reason which would justify this nation entering the war. That would be the necessity of fighting to save the United States from conquest and destruction. That reason does not exist. So long as we do not dissipate our strength in chimerical crusades the United States is invulnerable. Its people know this, and the people who are trying to get u into the war know it as well. It was only afte their campaign to get us in by playing on th fear of invasion was wrecked on the rocks fact and logic that they began urging us to d for the extension of the four freedoms—extensic everywhere except to such spots as Alabama a India.

Stassen of Minnesota Outspoken In Denunciation of Un-American Practices—Victims of Intolerance Recognize Mockery of Those Who Prate Loudest About Democracy.

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 30—Delegates attending the Twin Cities Conference, St. Paul, Minn., called for a discussion of the Training and Employment of Negroes for National Defense Industries, held at the University of Minnesota, last week were electrified when youthful, Republican Governor Harold E. Stassen declared:

"Discrimination in the employment of workers, whether by industry, labor, or government is a direct violation of the long-established and democratic ideal of the 'right to work.' As governor of the State of Minnesota, I plan to act firmly and vigorously against all such un-American practices."

Emmett Scott

No more courageous word has been spoken during this whole period of defense production by a responsible official of state or national government. No weasel word of equivocation appears anywhere in the declaration here quoted.

THE NEGRO WORKER'S PROBLEMS

In his statement, Governor Stassen declared that Minnesota, throughout its long and vigorous history, has maintained a continuing interest in the welfare of all citizens within its borders without regard to race, creed or color.

An awareness of the special problems of the Negro worker in his search for productive, continuing employment should challenge, he said, the thought and enlist the active cooperation of all citizens interested in national defense and national unity. He called upon employers of his state to provide equitable employment and participation in defense industries to all qualified workers, without regard to race or color, in the firm belief, as he stated, that the American Way of Life can be successfully defended only with the help and support of all groups within our borders.

Here indeed is a challenge to the governors of the 47 other states of the Union. How many of them have spoken similarly and as courageously? They, too, have a responsibility to the citizens of their states to see that every racial group, whatever its creed or color shall be protected in the right, when qualified, to full participation, not only in defense industries, but also in all the tasks and responsibilities of their citizenship.

The President and the National Government can do much. Governors of a state can do more. They are closer to the people. They can, if they will, energetically cooperate in awakening healthy public opinion in their several localities, and in promoting that unity of purpose we stand so much in need of at this desperately critical period.

HELP AND SUPPORT OF ALL CITIZENS NEEDED

How many other governors of our states recognize, as Governor Stassen does, that the American Way of Life can be successfully defended only with the help and support of all citizens within their borders?

How many of them are willing to rise to the high level of administrative relationship, concerned with the welfare of all the people of their states?

How many of them, so far, are engaged in battling the forces of intolerance and bigotry—not lip-service-battling but real battling against those elements that profess a love of liberty, freedom and democracy, and yet visit upon their fellows every possible restriction in the affairs of their every-day life—particularly in the eleven Southern states of the nation—by low, sub-normal wages, denial of the franchise and suppression of the ballot, jim crowism in travel and public places, in educational appropriations and yet are loudest on the radio, in the public press, on the hustings, in state legislatures and most blatant of all, on the floors of the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate?

VICTIMS OF INTOLERANCE RECOGNIZE MOCKERY

It is a delusion to think, or imagine, that the victims of intolerance—whether on account of their color, their race origin, or their religious affiliation—do not recognize the hollow mockery of such professions and pretensions.

Most certainly, as this writer has pointed out more than once, the Negro people look askance at that great block of states, extending from North Carolina to the Gulf, controlled by Democratic machine politicians, from which come the most intolerant spokesmen in the country.

They prate most loudly of their love of, and their allegiance to, the sacred principles of the Constitution of the United States, the Bill of Rights, and the latest pronouncemnt calling for the extension of the Four Freedoms to the uttermost parts of the world.

We are striving for undivided loyalty in this country. We are seeking to promote civilian morale. We are hoping that our national patriotism shall be all-pervading and all-embracing.

NO TIME FOR TEMPORIZING

The times are too perilous for temporizing on these issues. Of the many serious problems engaging our attention while we are building a great Army machine, none fundamentally is more important. Army morale must be promoted and sustained, but it can be strengthened only as the mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, who make up the families from which selectees are chosen come to feel that downright sincerity of speech and action underlies our policies and programs.

A.M.E. MINISTER BRUTALLY BEATEN, COURIER IS TOLD

DUE WEST, S.C., Oct. 30—One of the most brutal instances of police terrorism as widely practiced in the South came to light this week, when it was reported that an AME minister, the Rev. B. J. Glover, Jr., pastor of Mt. Lebanon church, was unmercifully beaten, almost lynched and thrown on the chain gang because law officers of this prejudice-ridden town thought he was too "uppity" for a N———r.

From reliable information it appears that on September 29 last the Rev. Glover went into the Highway Police offices in the Moore's Incorporated Building, to get a South Carolina driver's license. The officer in charge asked to see his old license and noting they had been issued in Ohio began to ask questions about what Glover was doing in South Carolina and how long he was staying.

When the minister answered all questions in a manly way the officer remarked, "you must take your hat off when talking to a white man in the South". Another officer nearby said, "Let teach that D.... N..... a lesson" and struck Rev. Glover. The young minister attempted to defend himself and was immediately pounced upon by four or five men who beat him into a bloody mass.

FATHER PAYS $300 FOR RELEASE

The officers then took the bleeding minister to the police station and without rendering any medical aid or even the formality of a trial, they sentenced him to 90 days on the chain gang for resisting an officer.

On arrival at the chain gang stockade the minister was again beaten and although badly bleeding and spitting blood was forced to do some work from which he fell exhausted to the ground.

On hearing of the incident the minister's father, Rev. B. J. Glover, Sr., presiding elder of the Greenville District, rushed to the police station and was informed that his son could be released upon the payment of a $300 fine, $100 each on charges of resisting arrest, hitting an officer and disorderly conduct.

Rev. Glover is now confined to his home under the care of a physician. He was born and reared in nearby Greenwood and has lived here all his life with the exception of the time he spent at Wilberforce University where he was graduated in 1939. This was Rev. Glover's first pastorial charge.

Where Do We Stand, Now?

In recent weeks many distinguished white persons have spoken out boldly on the United States race question. Some of them have been sharp in their criticism of the Negro for his failure to help himself. They have charged that the white man is not entirely to blame for most of the ills from which the Negro suffers, and that Negro leadership, itself, must show the way.

Miss Fannie Hurst, the novelist, was quoted as saying: ". . . there isn't sufficient interest within the race itself in regards to its common problems. Your leaders are too super-critical of one another and there is very little unity of thought or purpose."

It appears to us that Miss Hurst has hit upon two very significant issues, and like it or not there is more than a spark of truth in what she has said. Regardless of the underlying causes, Negroes are not "sufficiently interested in their common problems," as experience has shown it takes some act that amounts almost to a catastrophe to shake them from their lethargy, and on the question of leadership, it seems that the easiest way to be crucified is to launch a program designed to advance the Negro's cause.

The Star-News has attempted all along to point out that any improvement of the Negro's position in this country must be led by Negroes themselves, with the cooperation of other groups. Recent developments on the local scene and throughout the country indicate that the race can determine its own destiny, but it must abandon its petty jealousies, narrow-mindedness and internal strife. It must learn to respect its leadership, for unless we can come together in the interest of the common good of all, and rally behind strong, courageous and honest leadership, our hope for becoming integrated into the life of this American democracy will be hopelesssly lost.

THE NAZI PLAN FOR NEGROES

By HANS HABE

The Illustrierte Beobachter, German illustrated weekly, has recently published a special issue devoted to the question of France's war guilt. This journal, known as the I. B., is an official German weekly and an offshoot of the Voelkische Beobachter, in which Adolf Hitler has the controlling interest. Published by order of Propaganda Minister Goebbels, this special issue was the opening gun for an anti-Negro campaign which may surpass in violence even the Nazi persecution of the Jews. In recent weeks, the German press has devoted more and more attention to American Negroes; the three or four latest issues of the Sturmer, Hitler's anti-Semitic sheet, have been directed entirely aganist the Negroes. Julius Streicher, its editor, is the Fuehrer's only intimate friend, an "old militant" and the only party leader who may "thou" Hitler. For the last few weeks the Sturmer has maintained that the misfortunes befalling the Aryan nations were not caused by the Jews alone: both Jews and Negroes are guilty. In a speech delivered by Streicher before a gathering of some party friends in Nuremberg a few weeks ago, he solemnly declared: "The emancipation of the Jews and the liberation of the black slaves are the two crimes of civilization committed by the plutocrats in the last few centuries."

By order of the high command courses have been organized to acquaint German soldiers and non-commissioned officers with the "tasks of Germany as a colonial empire." The whole curriculum is based on racial theories; Negroes from our camp were often taken to the lecture hall and exhibited as "specimens." As camp interpreter I had to accompany them, and this enabled me to attend the lectures an learn the German attitue toward the Negro problem. These courses, organized throughout German-held territory by the General Staff, stressed that intermixture with Negroes was one of the chief factors in the French defeat. Consequently, German policy toward the colonial peoples was to be inspired by the following principles:

(1) The colored people are an inferior race whose place must be fixed by the white "master race."

(2) The free choice of trades and professions by the Negroes leads to social assimilation, which in turn produces racial assimilation. The occupations of the black colonial peoples and their function in the labor process of the "new order" will, therefore be entirely determined by the Germans.

(3) Intermarriage between whites and blacks or half-breeds and whites is forbidden. According to the Nuremberg racial laws, sexual intercourse between members of the two races is subject to sanctions incluing the death penalty.

(4) Persons belonging to a race other than the white Aryan race will have no active or passive electoral rights in the German colonial empire.

(5) Negroes are forbidden access to railways, street cars, restaurants motion pictures, and all public establishments. Special conveyances and public establishments will be created for them both in Germany and in occupied territories.

(6) Members of inferior races are not allowed to join the National Socialist Party or its subsidiary organizations. Nor can they serve in the army. They must, however, serve in labor battalions.

It is easy to imagine the fate of the colored peole in a German colonial empire, if the General Staff of the German army is already disseminating these six commandments. Equal rights for Negroes are always described as a "democratic cancer." It goes without saying that the German lectures always consider the Negroes of "all continents" as belonging to the same race.

There is one essential difference between Hitler's Negro policy and his Jewish policy. Whereas he makes no attempt to "win over" the Jews, whom he drives out of Germany or tortures in Germany, with regard to the Negroes he pursues a double objective: he wants both to enslave them and to win them over.

On the one hand, the German people have to be propagandized with regard to the Negro question. It has to be made clear to the Germans of the twentieth century that the age of slavery had returned; that they, the master race, have the power of life and death over the Negroes. At the same time the Germans have to understand that the Negro—in contrast to the Jew—was not his enemy, but only his slave. And the Negro was made to realize—through constant reminders—that the German, whenever he pleases, can deprive him of all right to live, but does not necessarily hate him; that the German is not his enemy, but only his master.

Right What Wrongs?

Turmoil and trouble and even "bloodshed, disorder, and suffering for a generation" that some misguided leaders of the inter-racial movement are planning for the South to right fancied "wrongs imposed by whites" should be investigated by those agencies of the Federal Government which are charged with looking into revolutionary movements that involve incitement to riot.

What is in store for the South, if certain of these leaders who seek abolishment of color lines have their way, never was more clearly put than in the reprinted article carried in Friday's News-Tribune under the heading, "War Will Aid Southern Negroes Right Wrongs Imposed by Whites."

Consider this statement in the reprinted article: "Prosperity in the South will rise for a while if we go to war. But as soon as the war ends, the war expenditures will have been so vast that they cannot be continued. There will therefore be a tremendous collapse in the South's economic structure and with this will come unrest, dangerous doctrines, equally dangerous leaders. It is in this atmosphere that the negro will find his chance."

And again: "The only trouble has been that there has not been the proper social or political atmosphere for the movement. The war will furnish that. Probably nothing can check its onrushing tide but a cessation of the war before the United States gets in. This is why the negro is for war."

In those two paragraphs, you have the nigger-in-the-woodpile behind the inter-racial movement in this country. The leaders who are egging the negro on into demanding "social equality" and other "rights" are willing to hazard the peace and the very future of the nation to win their point; they realize that "there may be bloodshed, disorder, suffering for a generation," but this, they figure, "is the price of all great human movements."

What is the truth of the South's treatment of the negro?

So-called "friends" of the negro race in the North and their stooges in the South insist that there is no racial problem in Georgia and other Southern states, and in this they are hiding the fact that there is a serious problem which is rapidly being created by their subtle propaganda and false hopes held out to a race that is but a few generations removed from jungle savagery.

There is no racial problem in the South so long as agitators do not interfere with the nicely balanced status of the two races in the South, for the two races long ago accepted as best for the general welfare the rigid separation of the races that inter-racial leaders now seek to upset, and the two races have lived in peace and harmony under this principle.

Georgia's State Constitution recognizes the separation of the races, and inter-racialists argue that how can anyone say they are seeking to promote social equality when the State Constitution specifically forbids it? The answer to that one is obvious: what the inter-racialists have been trying to do is to create sufficient sentiment in Georgia and other Southern States so that the negroes and the white patrons of social equality may obtain the repeal of the "Jim Crow" section of the Constitution. The Constitution is not a rigid, iron-clad document, but it is a flexible one, subject to amendment in every general election, and if the inter-racialists succeed in their purpose of forcing the issue to a vote in a general election, in which negroes vote, there would be a possibility of swinging the election, if in the meantime they can sufficiently dull the reaction of the white voters to the question.

The reprinted article let a significant cat out of the bag with the statement: "Negro leaders and their friends in the Northern Democratic Party say that the war, like all wars, will loosen everything, including many age old attitudes."

The truth of the South's treatment of the negro is that the colored man is better off in the South, where the two races long ago reached an understanding, than he is in the North where his so-called friends are constantly putting ambitious ideas into his head, breeding trouble.

The negro receives in the South in educational facilities and opportunity far more than he puts into the section's economy, and except in a few cases which attract widespread notoriety because agitators see that they are emphasized, the negro receives kindly and friendly treatment from his white folks.

We have heard of many cases in which negroes have gone North because they thought their "friends" up there would look out for them, only to return home disillusioned and heartbroken, to realize how much better off they were in the South.

Shrewd Yankee traders were largely responsible for the bringing of the negro to this country, into slavery, while keeping slavery out of their own States, and but for their greed the negro would have been spared that chapter of American history and would have remained in Africa.

It is not too much to hope that the threatened "turmoil and trouble" will be averted through the very eagerness of the inter-racialists to push their cause and brag about what they seek to do; as the trite saying goes, fore-warned is forearmed, and the South's attitude on this question is tightening instead of loosening, in spite of wars and rumors of wars.

Material Contribution Made by Negro Race to Section's Development

The Negro race has made a material contribution to the development of Southwest Georgia which demands recognition in any survey.

The first colored residents of this section were slaves. There were thousands of them on the large plantations of this section. They cleared the lands, followed the plows, harvested the crops, and were "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for their masters.

But even before the end of slavery there were freemen among the Negroes of Southwest Georgia —men and women who had been manumitted by their masters, or had through industry and thrift been enabled to purchase their freedom.

It was a Negro bridge-builder who erected the first wooden structure to span Flint River at Albany. He was not an educated man, but he knew how to build a covered bridge that would carry the weight of any traffic of that day. During his lifetime he rected many bridges in this section.

Those who remember the Reverend Willis Warren agree that he was not only an unusual man, but one who in his lifetime was able to accomplish great good for thousands of members of a flock whose shepherd he was for many years. He was a Baptist preacher who founded a number of churches in this section, revived others, and brought them together in the Fowltown Baptist Association, of which he was moderator. His people called him "Pappy Wills" —it was the name by which he was universally known, and it was a fitting title because in a remarkable way he fathered the several thousand members of his churches. He owned and lived on a farm about eight miles northwest of Albany, and was rated a good farmer.

Very limited had been the educational opportunities of Pappy Willis, but he had a comprehensible knowledge of the Bible and of the complexities of life. The total membership of his churches was said to have been about 5,000, and each member paid a dollar a year to the association's moderator. He in turn gave them not only spiritual oversight but looked after many of their temporal needs. There were medicines in his home and in the leather bag which was always in his buggy when he went visiting among the members of his churches. He did not pretend to be a doctor, but he knew the signs of a torpid liver, had some idea about what do do for boils and carbuncles, and could even pull a tooth in an emergency.

When it came to patching up domestic infelicities, Pappy Willis was a past-master. When husband left wife, or vice versa, he had all the answers to charge and counter-charge, to complaint and alibi. He was not above using his buggy whip on a male member of his flock who refused to be reasonable when appealed to "go back to your fam'ly an' behave yourself."

His people went to Pappy Willis with their troubles and their problems, and he never failed to give them good advice. He knew how to be stern and deal out even-handed justice, but there was great charity in his heart, as thousands had reason to know. In all the years of his ministry nobody was ever able to say that he was not fair, honorable and square. When he died, thousands moved on his home. Vehicles, mules and horses filled the roads, and grounds, overflowing into adjacent fields and woods. No church in South Georgia would have held the throng that gathered for his funeral.

And long after Pappy Willis died, the good that he had done remained to influence the lives of his people. He was a sort of "overbishop" whose term of office was for life, and there was no other to take his place when he passed on.

NEGROES ARE JEWS, CLAIMED BY SCIENTIST

New Organization Gives Advanced Theories On Hebrewism

Negroes are Jews. Such is the fact revealed in a research study by Dr. Joseph J. Williams, S.J., Ph.D., Litt.D., a member of the Royal Geographical Societies, member of the International Institute of African Languages and Cultures, and member of the Catholic Anthropological Conference who has done 16 years research on the subject.

Other facts revealed by research study would claim that all the tribes from whom the slaves brought to this hemisphere were taken, were Jews. It is claimed by certain authorities on African languages and cultures that Hebrewisms of West Africa are as genuine as the Hebrewisms of pre-exilic Palestine.

Startling assertions such as the above are made by a new organization which is spreading rapidly through the mid-west and which has headquarters in New Orleans. It is the International Reassemble of the Church of Freedom League, Inc., with offices at 482 South St. Lawrence avenue, and 3016 South Lake Park avenue.

General messenger of the organization is E. A. Broaster, Bible genealogist. Regarding the subject of Negroes and Jews, Broaster quotes Dr. Williams as saying in his book, Hebrewisms of West Africa:

"Yet there remains that mysterious something, deep ingrained in his very being that effectively separates the Jew from the rest of humanity, if not racially, at least socially. For, while strictly speaking, the Jews are not a race, but a 'social and religious community' as we have seen, still in every day life, when the religious element has been eliminated, the renegade must still be classified as a Jew.

"As a consequence, although a Jew may be a perfect gentleman in every way, endowed with wealth and a man of education and refinement, the fact that he is a Jew is ever uppermost in the minds of men, and too often, the high esteem that is his due, is tempered with disgraceful prejudice.

"Nay more, if in time he comes to neglect the Sabbath rest, and ignores the fasts of precept; if he utterly disregards all dietary restrictions, and openly scoffs at the Law and the Prophets; if finally, he casts all religion aside and becomes an avowed atheist or Bolshevist—in a word, if he proves himself false to the most sacred traditions of his religion and his people —it makes no difference in the eyes of the world, he is still a Jew; and according to the consensus of public opinion, nothing he can do will make him less a Jew."

"What then practically constitutes the Jew? It is not race. The Jews form not a race. Racially they are as complex as some of our best Americans. It is not place of birth. No more is it a question of language. Neither finally is it a matter of religion.

"What is it then? Not technically —but in the broad acceptation of the word—what really differentiates the Jew from other men? The minimum requirements would seem to be a descent through at least one line of ancestors from one of the sons of Jacob, or from some individual who in the past was incorporated into the body of Jews so as to imbibe their spirit and adopt their practices."

He concludes this remarkable analysis of the Jew by saying: "In our quest for Jews in Africa, this must be the criterion of our judgment."

CENSOR ASLEEP

There are times when even the most rigid censorship of mails fails of its purpose. During the course of World World War II I have received letter after letter from the various British possessions and all of them bore the notation to the effect that the mail had been opened and inspected by a censor.

However, it remained for a friend of mine, who recently went on a tour of the West Indian Islands, to catch the censor asleep at the switch, for the post card which I received bore the following message from my friend: "Uncle is making a helluva mistake sending all the scum and garbage from the Deep South to the Islands. There has been no end of trouble."

If the censor were not asleep he would have probably confiscated the card and I would never have received it because the message certainly is not conducive to better relationship between the British Isles and the United States even though the U.S. has extended its sphere of influence more and more. With United States having naval bases on the West Indian islands, there has been an influx of citizens of the U.S., with a consequent influx of the type of damnable prejudice which the Southern white man carries with him. For some reason or other it is the Southern white man who constitutes not only the major group in our diplomatic forces but also in our armed forces.

With their prejudices against Negroes these Southern whites go to the British possessions and suddenly find themselves in a new situation—where Negroes are not the underdog and are business men and officeholders of importance in their cities.

The trouble arises when these prejudiced white go off the naval or military reservations and attempt to treat the natives like they treat Negroes in the South.

For years there has been agitation that the United States acquire these West Indian islands as colonies or territories. The example set by our soldiers and sailors presently based in those islands in such that natives of the islands would vigorously oppose such a transfer to the United States.

As my correspondent wrote, Uncle Sam is making one hell of a mistake by sending his prejudiced Southerners out for they are anything but ambassadors of good will.

"MOTHER TO SON"

is the title of a contribution of poetry sent me for publication in this column. The contributor is Ricardo Weeks, of 227 West 148th street. While I do not know Mr. Weeks, I should judge by his poetry that he is a profound thinker and should go places if he continues to write poetry such as he sent me. The poem follows.

MOTHER TO SON

Why don'cha be a good boy, son
Instead of being bad?
Don'cha know you're making life
More miserable and sad?

I keeps on telling you not to steal
And not to stay out late,
But still you keep on being bad
And spoiling your family's trait.

Already the white folks are talking 'bout
How terrible you carry on.
Don'cha know it's no good to live
With hatred round you, son?

I knows that Harlem ain't no place
To raise a boy like you;
But just the same it is your home—
So why brand it with taboo?

Why don'cha listen to mother, son?
Its no 'good to have a bad name.
Why don'cha behave yourself, boy,
And avoid this wanton shame?

CONGRATULATIONS

to Alexander King who on Monday received another promotion in the United States Post Office, this time as Assistant Superintendent of Delivery in the Office of the Superintendent of Delivery.

By his promotion Mr. King becomes the first Negro to attain such a position of prominence in the New York Post Office. It comes as a fitting recognition of his 49 years of service in the Post Office.

Those of us who are privileged to know Mr. King intimately rejoice with him in his promotion and his opportunity to be of greater service not only to the government but also to the race.

Speech Shocks City

By A. M. RIVERA, JR.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—The average colored citizen of Charlotte is fighting mad these days and Hitler's atrocities in Europe have nothing to do with this state of aroused civic anger. Object of undisguised wrath and hatred is Ned Davis, executive secretary of the Negro Chamber of Commerce here, who Charlotte folks say reached an all-time low in forfeiting the self respect of his people in an address before the American Business Club (white) of Greenville, S. C.

Reverberations from that speech, which made the point that no problems existed between the white and colored races but that the only trouble was with the Negro people themselves, rumbled noisily over the city the morning after the address when both the Greenville and Charlotte papers carried stories quoting directly from what people in this city describe as a humiliating manuscript.

The Charlotte man, who heads a "servant's clinic" in Charlotte, was invited to address the regular dinner meeting of the A. B. C. chapter in Greenville, held at the Hotel, Greenville.

All of the speech was declared distasteful to local people who have criticized him openly in letters to the editor of the local paper and in conversations and meetings all over the city. It was expected that the feeling of resentment would reach fever heat by Tuesday of this week when the officers of the Negro Chamber of Commerce were scheduled to be elected. A movement to oust Mr. Davis from his job with this organization rapidly gained support after his Greenville remarks were made public.

It was declared by local leaders that the Davis statements were not representative and that he should be relieved of a position which gives him enough prestige to make his utterances, described variously as "Uncle Tom" and "handkerchief head," any weight in comunity relationships.

EXCERPTS

Some excerpts from his address in Greenville are quoted below:

"There is no reason for social equality between the two races because the Negro couldn't use it if he had it.

"The white folks have always been masters and will remain so as long as there are whites and Negroes.

"There is no difference between the words Negro and 'nigger' as far as the race is concerned.

"We are black and always will stay black and we want to stay in our places.

"There are two things I do not allow a white man to do in my presence. One is to call me 'Mister' and the other is invite me to eat. Something is wrong with a white man that does that and I don't want to have anything to do with that kind.

"The trouble with the Negro today is that he has forgotten how to give service. We have buried the art of service and the schools have failed to teach the Negro how to work.

It is of no use to educate the Negro to be a mayor because they won't ever get there. But what should be taught the Negro is to serve the mayor as a servant in the proper way.

SOME SHOULD NOT NOT BE FREED

I sometimes meet Negroes whom I think should never have been given their freedom . . . 99 percent of all Negroes depend on white friends for a livelihood and if they're not good they won't get anything.

NOV 15 1941

The trouble with the average Negro servant is that they do not understand the white man is white in every sense.

"Putting the handle to a white man's name is very necessary in the life of a Negro.

"I run what is called a Negro servant's clinic. I don't know whether it is a clinic or not because I don't know exactly what that means."

These remarks were interspersed by jokes about Negro people. The white papers of Greenville reported that the speech made "a decided hit at the meeting" which was attended by members of the Dames club composed of wives of members of the A. B. C. chapter.

LETTER TO EDITOR

An index to popular feeling in Charlotte is the following letter, dealing with another similar talk by Davis before the Rotarians and addressed to the editor of the Charlotte Observer by Mrs. U. S. Brooks, wife of Prof. U. S. Brooks of Johnson C. Smith University.

Charlotte Observer,
Charlotte, N. C.

NOV 15 1941

In response to your letter to Ned Davis in Sunday's Observer may I inform you that Ned Davis is not a Negro "leader." If you heard the address referred to, you must have recognized the lack of foundation for many of his statements.

I have no doubt the man pleased his audience, for he is adept at inflating the white man's ego, and dispensing the type of adulation on which his ego thrives. However, the ignorant, clowning, grinning type of Negro which Ned Davis portrays could never be recognized by thinking Negroes as a leader, nor is he capable of conveying the Negro's ideas and ideals.

If the Rotarians are really interested in the Negro's point of view, I would suggest that they listen to Dr. H. L. McCrorey, Mrs. McCrorey, Dr. J. S. N. Tross, Dr. E. F. Tyson or a number of others whom whom I might mention who have the training and other qualifications essential to successful leadership.

You express your own fine contempt for New Davis when you address him through your public press as "Dear Ned." Negroes for the most part hold the same contempt for many of the man's views that you evidently hold for the man himself.

If Ned Davis pleased the Rotarians, I have not the slightest wish to rob them of their pleasure; but please don't try to cram him down our throats as a leader. We simply can't digest him.

Klan Objects To Speaker At White Meeting

NOV 15 1941

GREENVILLE, S. C.—(ANP)—The Rev. Fred V. Johnson, special representative of the South Carolina grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, protested the scheduled appearance of Ned Davis, president of the Charlotte Negro Chamber of Commerce, as after dinner speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the white American Business Club last week.

Rev. Mr. Johnson's protest was in the form of a resolution drawn up by authority of the grand cyclops of the Greenville klan. In part, the resolution said:

"Such appearances of a Negro in the capacity of an after dinner speaker before a group of white people is a violation of the principle of white supremacy and a recognition of racial and social equality and is in direct line with a communistic movement being made to break down white supremacy and place Negroes on an equal basis with white people."

For over a year white civic clubs here and in nearby cities have been using colored musicians, singers, and speakers as their guests.

Mr. Davis made his scheduled appearance at the meeting of the American Business Club, in the banquet room of a local hotel. His address was greeted with gales of laughter (Davis is a splendid humorist) and his more serious thoughts given the undivided attention of the entire group.

Prediction Comes True

READING THE NEWSPAPER accounts of the clemency hearings held before Governor Talmadge in the cases of the six East Point (Ga.) floggers, this writer cannot help but think of the admonition stated by the late Booker T. Washington years ago that beatings and lynching of Negroes would inevitably lead to beatings and lynching of white men.

MACKAY

A perfect example of the truth of this conclusion has been shown in the cases of these men, facing comparatively brief terms, but who now plead to be released from even this punishment. Perhaps by the time this reaches print the Governor will have already reached a decision. That will not matter since whether or not these men go free does in no way affect this piece.

The tragedy was that those responsible for the enforcement of law could not see before a man was killed, just where this wave of wholesale kidnapings and beatings was leading to.

KNEW ABOUT FLOGGERS

These officials knew years before any action was taken to stop it that a band of floggers was operating in Fulton county.

Detailed accounts of the activities of nightriders given this newspaper by the victims themselves were published. Atlanta police reports dated a full three years before a single arrest was made tell how these men had completely disregarded all the constitutional rights of their unfortunate victims, seizing them from their homes under the cloak of darkness and spiriting them to a lonely spot in the woods where they were subjected to merciless beatings by a gang comparable only to Hitler's storm troopers.

All of this was known to law enforcement officials, but not a finger was raised back then to interfere with these wholly illegal nocturnal practices The reason why no action was taken back then is not hard to understand. In the early days the floggers exercised due care and caution to see that all of their victims were Negroes.

THEIR BIGGEST MISTAKE

Their biggest mistake was the expansion of their terroism to include victims with white faces. Had they confined their lashings to Negro backs, doubtless they would still be operating unmolested.

But seeing how freely they could seize innocent Negroes off the streets and from within the sanctity of their homes while those sworn to uphold the law either winked or turned their backs the other way, the floggers no doubt reasoned that the same thing could be done with white victims.

Uncounted hundreds of Negroes were victims of this band of terrorists. Many were so intimidated they were actually afraid to report their harrowing experiences. Others seeing that nothing was ever done about it, thought it was not worth the effort of telling the police.

Acting as judge, jury and executioner the floggers pounced upon these unfortunate people for the most part feeble of excuses. One man was beaten so badly he remained in bed three weeks because he "talked back to a white employer." Another's back still carries ugly scars left by the heavy leather lash because he argued with a white woman employer, whom he charged had short-changed him out of his wages.

COOK THREATENED

A woman, an exceptionally good cook, was seized and severely frightened, though she wasn't beaten, because she had given the white woman she was working for a notice that she was leaving to accept a job paying higher wages.

These are but three scattered instances of the type of terrorism that was being practiced against Negroes in Fulton county, long before the floggers became ambitious and began using their lashes nn white victims.

Even at this late date, one of the leading opponents to granting clemency to the six floggers, fails to see the close relationship of all floggings, whether the faces of the victims be white or black.

Dr. Edward G. Mackay, district superintendent of the Methodist Church in Atlanta was bitter in his denunciation of what he termed the "new klan and its methods."

PRAISES "OLD KLAN"

Yet in the same breath, this apostle of the Christian faith, finds nothing displeasing in the "old klan and its methods."

"I honored and respected the old Ku-Klux Klan because it worked for those things which were right," Dr. Mackay argued.

In other words, we find this minister defending the beatings, persecutions and lynching of Negroes as practiced by the old klan "noble deeds" while becoming very much incensed over the actions of the "new klan" doubtless because it has failed to limit its terroristic practices to Negroes.

The Negro In The Present World Situation

In recent weeks we have been reading articles and speeches by outstanding white and Negro leaders in various fields, and of national reputation dealing with the Negro in the present world situation, and last week we received the first of a series of such articles to be sent out by Fight for Freedom, Inc., written by Mr. Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, member of the executive committee of Fight for Freedom, Inc., distinguished contemporary, historian and Pulitzer Prize winner for his work in the field of History.

Like all other such articles coming to our notice, Mr Agar deals most with the lot of the Negro in a German dominated world. Mr. Agar's article starts thus, and we quote: "In discussing the position of the American Negro in relation to the threat of a totalitarian world, we Americans have no grounds for pride in our general treatment of the Negro Honest Americans must agree that this country has never given its Negro citizens anything like a full measure of the rights and privileges of a democracy. Under such circumstances it would not be surprising for some Negroes to feel that their race owes less obligation to defend our way of government than the majority group that has enjoyed its benefits".

In pointing out the lot of the Negro in a German dominated world Mr. Agar quotes at length from articles by Mr. David H. Bradford, a Negro and a weekly contributor to the Louisville Courier-Journal, Mr. Bradford says: "One of the cardinal principles of the system created by Hitler is race prejudice, and no one needs to be clairvoyant to know upon whose back the lash of racial prejudice and discrimination would fall most heavily in America. All of the Negro's aspirations for a more complete life would be thwarted. His children would be taught only conformity in schools; and a controlled press would put a razor in the pocket of every Negro".

"All honest Americans admit, some openly and boldly, others in the quiet recesses of their own minds, that the status of the Negro in America is the lowest of any racial group in our land. Abundant evidence is available to support this fact. Progress has been and is being made, but in some fields the distance between his status now and the status of the majority group is as wide as it was three quarters of century ago.

"But, with all this load to carry, the democratic Christian U. S. A. is still the best government for the Negro. The principals on which the country is founded do leave the door open for the Negro finally achieving democracy's full benefits. The Bill of Rights and the brotherhood of man are still talked about as desirable goals. The term liberty, equality and opportunity are still respected in our midst and some day we can hope to attain them. We can still have hope and faith."

"In a Hitlerized government there would be no hope. The blood purity doctrine alone would exclude us entirely from the benefits in his society. Our present situation bad as it is, looms as a choice position when I think of what it would certainly be under a Hitler regime."

Like Mr. Agar says in another part of his article, we also believe that every intelligent Negro in America is well aware of the German attitude towards the Negro, both as it now exists under Hitler, and before he came along to occupy such a powerful and frightful place upon the world stage; we believe further that every Negro in America deep down in his heart is hoping and praying for the defeat of Hitler and all that Nazi Germany stands for, not, however, only because of his knowledge of Hitler's hatred for him, but, because of Hitler's treatment of the Jews, his brutality towards those whom he has conquered, and of what he expects will be the results of a Hitler victory on the United States, the land of his love, and the threat he offers against everything that is honorable and decent in the civilization Christendom.

Of tried and proven patriotism, with no possible connection with the nationalistic antipathies, political and social ideologies of Europe, the Negro is, in spite of everything that is being said and done as admitted, to keep him from enjoying the fullest fruits of the democratic principles of the United States, the most steadfastly loyal group in the racial make-up of United States citizenry.

With so much writing and speaking being done about the bad lot the Negro would fall into in a German dominated world we have begun to wonder if any one has been able to discover any wide-spread and growing pro-Nazi attitude and sentiment on the part of the American Negro.

To take another view: Under the principles of the Bill of Rights.—the Negro's rights often asserted by everyone, the existence of which is pointed out as being the avenue through which the Negro can have hopes of ultimately obtaining the fullest fruits of democracy,—exercising the rights of freedom of speech, of assembly and petition, as the program of National Defense has developed the Negro has been heard more and more in an effort to share to a larger degree in its economic benefits, and it is our hope that all this information being spread about the German attitude towards the Negro is not being spread to soften and dampen his clamor for a greater share in the work and other economic benefits of the National Defense Program.

The Negro in a World Dominated by the Nazi

By HERBERT AGAR

In discussing the position of the American Negro in relation to the threat of a totalitarian world, we Americans have no grounds for pride in our general treatment of the Negro. Honest Americans must agree that this country has never given its Negro citizens anything like a full measure of the rights and privileges of a democracy. Under such circumstances it would not be surprising for some Negroes to feel that their race owes less obligation to defend our way of government than the majority group that has enjoyed its benefits.

But intelligent Negroes themselves know well how incomparably worse their lot would be under any government dominated by the Nazi doctrines of racial superiority. On that score I can do no better than quote here from one of the articles of Mr. David H. Bradford, a Negro and a weekly contributor to the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Race Prejudice Is Barred

"One of the cardinal principles and discrimination would fall most heavily in America. All of the Negro's aspirations for a more complete life would be thwarted. His children would be taught only conformity in the schools, and a controlled press would put a razor in the hand and a bottle in the pocket of every Negro.

"All honest Americans admit, some openly and boldly, others in the quiet recesses of their own minds, that the status of the Negro in America is the lowest of any racial group in our land. Abundant evidence is available to support this fact. Progress has been and is being made, but in some fields the distance between his status now and the status of the majority group is as wide as it was three-quarters of a century ago.

"On a sympathetic and kindly attitude and understanding between Europeans and Natives in this country depends the future salvation of South Africa. If the Europeans are to develop a slave-state mentality in this country and if, as a result of that, the Natives develop a sense of hatred and distrust of the European, South Africa will be a sorry place to live in for our children and their children."

This striking statement was made by the Minister of Native Affairs, Colonel Deneys Reitz, at Durban when he opened the new premises of the Bantu Social Centre and when he announced the appointment of a Committee to investigate the economic position of urban Africans. The statement no doubt, has been highly appreciated by all who like to see South Africa developing along peaceful lines. This country owes its position of leadership in Africa to the co-operative achievement of both white and black. It is the brains of the white man and the brawn of the black man that have enabled South Africa to achieve this position of importance, and it will be the co-operation of the two races that will make the country safe for the higher ideals of life.

It is no exaggeration to say that friction between the races will retard South Africa's progress and make life miserable for their progeny. Let us face the stern realities of our inter-racial situation. Despite our policy of segregation, the fact remains that our economic interests are inseparably interwoven and our political destiny is one. The African has been called out of Africa's darkness and started on the road to civilisation. He cannot, whether he likes or not, develop along the lines of his ancestors in an Africa that has become Europeanised. Whether the white man likes it or not, the African has struck his tents and is marching on along the path of progressive mankind. His ambition, therefore, is not to remain a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for all time, but to be able in due course to contribute his distinctive share to the progress of the world. Like any other human being he resents exploitation and injustice.

It would indeed be a tragedy were he "to develop a sense of hatred and distrust of the European" as the result of the latter's unreasonable attitude towards him. What is most needed is a radical change of mind, will and heart on both sides of the colour line. The European should show a real greatness of heart which will attract in its turn a genuine spirit of co-operation from our side.

That responsible Europeans have now realised that the security of their race is not ensured by keeping the Africans down but by enabling them to rise in the scale of civilisation, no one can deny. The announcement that General Smuts has asked the Minister of Native Affairs to appoint a Committee to investigate the conditions of urbanised Africans is a clear indication that the Government realises that South Africa is not enriched by keeping Africans in a state of poverty. This gesture of goodwill is highly appreciated because it is a sign of the change that is taking place in our inter-racial relations. The improvement of the conditions of Urban Africans will go a long way to bring about a better understanding between the races and to eliminate suspicion and distrust.

That black and white are different in colour and in certain characteristics no sane man can deny. But that they are alike in their human nature is an indisputable fact. Does not the white man, like the black man, feel hungry, thirsty, pain, and cold? He does. Both have, therefore, equal rights in the satisfaction of these needs. Urban Africans are entitled to better housing, to medical, and social services, better wages and recreation. The improvement of their living conditions is a matter which the European section cannot neglect without endangering its own security.

Rogers Says:-

OPPRESSIVE JEWS CAUSE ANTI-SEMITISM TO SPREAD AMONG NEGROES

BY J. A. ROGERS

THERE is much talk about anti-Semitism among Negroes. A Negro street-speaker of Harlem is serving a four-months' sentence for so-called anti-Semitic utterances. But to my thinking there is no anti-Semitism among Negroes worth speaking of, if I understand the meaning of that term.

My reason is, first of all, that the Jew is recognized as white in America, and that the Negro sees him first and foremost as another white oppressor. Of course there are certain restrictions against the Jews in America but they are social, not legal, as in the case of the Negro. A Jew is in the Cabinet; another is governor of New York; there are high ranking army and the Jews in the navy, and so on. In short, the restrictions against the Jew in America are mere pin-pricks as compared with those against the Negro. And above all, the Jew has the power of jim-crow over the Negro—a power, which contrary to popular belief, he is just as eager to exercise as the Anglo-Saxon, broadly speaking.

JEWS RESPONSIBLE FOR ILL-WILL

NOV 1 - 1941

There are perhaps only two spots in America where Negro feeling against Jews as Jews exist, namely Chicago's South Side and Harlem. But even here it is weak, since the Jew is still thought of as white.

And the plain truth is that it was certain Jews who aroused this ill-will among Negroes. In Chicago, during the great migration when the Negroes overflowed into the so-called white district, Negro homes were bombed weekly, and it was charged that the real-estate dealers, most of whom were Jewish, were responsible for the outrages.

JEW LEAD RIOT

The mob murder of a Negro by Jews in Chicago about October 1924, did not help matters any. The Daily Worker (Communist) said editorially of this lynching of a Negro by Jews, "Race hatred has reached a high pitch when one oppressed race becomes the executioner of another." Incidentally, it was a Jew, Abraham Levy, who was charged with being the ringleader of the terrible Springfield (Ill.) riot in which many Negroes were killed.

IN Chicago, as in Harlem, business in the Negro neighborhood is largely in the hands of Jews, and the Negroes had to put up a bitter fight to get jobs in the places they were patronizing, all of which aroused great ill-feeling and even caused a riot. In Harlem, also, the Negroes are gouged for rent, and rightly or wrongly, it is said the Jews control the real estate situation there.

What exasperates certain thinking Negroes more about this situation is that the Jew also belongs to an oppressed group. In the real white man's land, Europe, the Jew is regarded even lower than is a Negro in America, and that goes for England. American jim-crow is almost a paradise to what the Jew is experiencing in Germany, Poland and Roumania now. America, too, in its colonial days, treated Jews very badly, and the Negro knows that the sole buffer between similar treatment of the Jew now is his, the Negro's, darker skin. There is a powerful undercurrent of hatred for the Jew in America, which is only waiting its opportunity to burst into flame.

INSULTS LAID TO JEWISH GROUPS

The Negro, in short, is the scapegoat that is saying the American Jew, therefore, as I said, injustice from a Jew makes some Negroes particularly mad. For instance, the insulting circulars against Negroes sent out by the Klapowitz Clothing Store of Washington, D. C.; the even worse discrimination practised by the Julius Garfinkel Store of the same city; and the long continued siege of insult and belittlement put out by Jewish-dominated studios in Hollywood. I could multiply instances, but just one more: Some Jews have an extreme fondness for Negro women, yet such often becomes even more racial than Anglo-Saxons when they see a Jewish girl with a Negro.

However, when all is said and done, it would be most unjust to blame all Jews for this. The simple truth is that the vast majority of Jews do not come into social or business contact with Negroes and cannot be held responsible for what other Jews do, any more than one Negro can be held responsible for the acts of other Negroes. No sane person will lump guilty and innocent together. Besides some of the most outspoken friends of the Negro have been Jews.

Furthermore this greedy type of Jew does not spare even other Jews. I recall how when Hitler began his oppression of the German Jews in 1933, and I said to a Jewish friend that it was too bad, he replied bitterly, "Serves them d...n well right. I am a Polish Jew. I once lived in Germany and the German Jew treated me like a dog."

EXPLOITING JEW MAY DOOM RACE

NOV 1 - 1941

Karl Marx, also, uttered a terrific blast against the exploiting Jew. He said, among other things, "Money is the jealous God of the Jews by the side of which no other god may exist." Marx, father of Socialism, and one of the world's greatest benefactors, was himself, of Jewish birth.

I shall return to this subject again.

In the meantime sending a Negro to jail for so-called anti-Semitic utterances will only make matters worse. If white people were to go to prison for Negro-baiting, the jails would be full. I see but one remedy.

Liberal, humane Jews must button-hole the oppressive Jews in their synagogues and warn them that a man who is sitting on a powder-keg must not play with matches. Some day the Negro and the white American is going to make peace and if anti-Semitism is really built up among Negroes it is going to be too bad for the Jew.

NEGRO PREJUDICE OF RECENT DATE

Here is one importantf act for the oppressive Jew to remember: The Jew was once dark-skinned, perhaps, even coal black. He lightened out by mixing with the white just as certain American Negroes. If ever the Negro becomes as light as the Jew color prejudice will disappear, but anti-Semitism will go on as long as there is Judaism unless advantage is taken of the present social upheaval.

Prejudice against the Negro is only three centuries old; it is nineteen centuries old against the Jew. And while the prejudice for the Negro exists only in certain lands it exists over the whole earth for the Jew. The oppressed man, Jew or Gentile, needs more than any other, to watch his step. The bad conduct of one can cause disaster for millions.

URGES NEGROES TO USE EVERY MEANS TO STING CONSCIENCE AND AWAKEN WHITE AMERICA

MAR 7 1941

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—"Negroes must do everything to sting and lash the conscience of America," Walter White told a Kansas City audience Monday night in a speech entitled "Does America Want To Be Saved?"

"The state of the world today has our country healthily half-scared, but unhappily it is not scared enough to give up race hatred, prejudice, bigotry and hypocrisy," he said. "It is not scared enough to practice real democracy."

Mr. White, who could be called the most important Negro today without much dispute, spoke at the annual meeting of the Urban League of Kansas City held at Lincoln high school auditorium. He is secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. New York City.

Urges Negroes to Protest

He challenged Negro Americans to protest to "a lot of deaf ears in Washington" and everywhere else, and to work for real democracy in America. This can be done, he prophesied, if there is courage enough and unity enough.

Mr. White stated that in another year, or perhaps a half year, our country may be the sole surviving democracy. "No one knows how far Nazi propaganda has infiltrated into Central and South America and into Mexico. As Vice-President Wallace said in Des Moines Saturday, the preservation of America is based on our being more willing than the Nazis to sacrifice our goods and even our lives if necessary."

"We must gird the loins of America so we may resist the encroachment of Nazism. There is a long distance between the preaching of democracy and the giving of it in this country," the speaker continued.

He then recited the discriminations against Negroes in the national defense program—in the army, the navy and in industry. "James Crow is found all the way through the army," he said, "and in the navy it's even worse."

Jim Crow School

He explained that there is no black boy in the air corps, although 269 Negroes have pilot's licenses granted by the Department of Commerce, and over 200 youths have finished CAA courses in Negro and mixed colleges over the country. This year there are some 12,000 pilots to be trained in the army and so far the only result of Negroes' pleas to enter the army air forces is the establishment of a jim-crow air school at Tuskegee. And this school will not be in full operation during 1941.

This discrimination in the army and navy the speaker ascribed to petty fear and unwillingness to challenge the status quo.

"What we need to do in this country is to stop being so scared!"

In a clear and forceful manner, the N.A.A.C.P. secretary told of the vicious circle Negroes find themselves in when they try to get employment in defense industries. They are refused jobs because they are not trained, and refused the training because they have no opportunity for jobs.

"There is one phase in American life where we are never discriminated against," Mr. White sarcastically remarked, "we pay the same tax rate as anyone else. Nobody gives us a lower rate for being Negroes."

The industries with contracts to manufacture airplanes and other war goods are getting their business from the taxpayers' money, Negro as well as white. Yet Negroes are refused jobs at the same time those industries are hiring known members of Nazi bunds, and foreign-born persons not yet naturalized citizens, many of whom are unable to speak English language.

Barred From Jobs

From his visits and contacts in various sections of the country, Mr. White told of incredulous instances of Negroes being barred from jobs. He then launched an attack on the defense training set-up in Kansas City where few courses are offered at the Negro vocational school and Negro youths are barred from the white school which offers many and varied courses.

"Equipment for the Negro school has been 'on order' and remains 'on order' while Adolph Hitler and his armed hordes like time—are marcheing on," he exclaimed.

"Negroes of Kansas City must protest in season and out of season to break down these differentials in training," he emphasized.

Mr. White advised Kansas Citians to try in every peacable way to get the local school authorities to provide equal facilities, and if refused, action for damages should be brought in the federal court against the superintendent of education and the school board.

"Keep protesting," he pleaded, "so we will awaken in America a sense of her danger and a sense of her obligation."

In answer to charges made by some that such action is radical, Mr. White said that the real radicals who will be responsible if this country is overthrown are those who refuse to practice democracy and shut the door of opportunity in the face of minority citizens. "You are showing the most complete devotion when you refuse to remain quiet," he said firmly.

Announces Hearing

Mr. White told the audience about the hearings to be held before a United States Senate committee on discrimination in the defense program. It is hoped that the hearings will lead to a sweeping investigation of the situation all over the country. Already Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the first lady of the land, has agreed to testify at the hearing, as well as Phillip Murray of the CIO and Quentin Reynolds, foreign correspondent who has first-hand information on how England dropped the color bar when the war began. William Green of the A.F. of L. has been invited to testify, and if he does not accept, will be subpoened. It is planned that operators of plants will be called as witnesses, both those who discriminate and those who do not. There is an impressive list of Negro witnesses who have been denied defense training and jobs solely because of their race.

Races Work Together

Saying that Negro and white people will not work together satisfactorily is only a subterfuge used to prevent Negroes from getting jobs, according to Mr. White. He gave as an example of the fine spirit which can exist among workmen of both races, the cooperation of workers in the shipyards at Mobile, Ala., ("as far south as you can go without falling into the gulf") and their use of a Negro among negotiators to settle a strike.

Mr. White said that Negroes are in sympathy with organized labor, but "organized labor must come into court with clean hands." If discrimination continues in some unions, it may be necessary to ask Congress to deny the benefits of the National Labor Relations Act to those unions which practice discrimination.

The real danger in the denial of jobs in defense industries lies in the establishment of a pattern of unemployment with the blessings of the federal government which may last for years, he explained. Continued unemployment will mean an increase in those on relief, and increase in crime, juvenile delinquency and poor health. Then those whites who are responsible and who will have to bear the added costs, will look about and say "The Negro is inferior."

There will be growing unrest, according to Mr. White. "How long can you expect 12,000,000 thinking black men to be patriotic and loyal?" he asked.

"We must become articulate, to preserve democracy here no matter what happens in other parts of the world so we may set the example and lead other countries back to decency in their relations with human beings—without regard to race, creed and color," the speaker said in conclusion.

Writer Flays Democracy In Race Journal

NEW YORK, June 26—The treatment of the Negro is an acid test to American Democracy, writes Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, in a timely article, "American Democracy and the Negro," in the current issue of Opportunity, Journal of Negro Life.

He says, "The most striking flaw in our democracy is our treatment of Negroes. Our attitude toward this race, which makes up one tenth of our entire population, is a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy."

AMERICANISM

It was "just like Mayor La Guardia" to declare as he did last Saturday in Washington that in the national defense emergency there is no such thing as a hyphenated American. "It had to come some time and it might as well be now," he said. "From now on an Icelandic-American or an Arabic-American or an Armenian-American is 'out,'" he added, naming a few although he meant all the other groups deriving from previous nationalities. "The Office of Civilian Defense will welcome the participation of every national group in the cosmopolitan American population," he continued, "but every one will be recognized solely as 'American'." Logically, and in consonance with the Civilian Defense Director's well-known tolerant attitude, his taboo of the hyphen would apply to the equally opprobrious practice of tagging Americans according to skin coloring or "race," and thus abolish a prejudice-creating stigma from an element whose allegiance to America never was and never can be divided with any other country.

There is nothing mysterious about the sustained loyalty of Americans identified with Attucks and Douglass and Marion Anderson and Dr. Carver. For them there just isn't any other country. Some day the scientific mind will take proper note that here in America a "new people" was created, was nurtured in the isolation of servitude, assimilated the surrounding culture, and contributed and still contributes to its expansion—full-fledged, sterling American folk. Their indivisible loyalty is easily explained as born of intense love of native home. That is why one does not have to worry about them as war spreads over Europe. Nevertheless other decent-thinking Americans should ask themselves whether it is not shortsighted and even brutal to strain that sort of loyalty to a near-breaking point by discrimination and Jim-Crowism whenever it offers itself to the service of the country.

Dark Hill People Are Race Mystery

JAN 23 1941

THE SOUTH has a race mystery in the people popularly called "Melungeons," who live in the mountainous areas of east Tennessee. The word "Melungeon" is believed to come from the French word "melange" meaning mixture. The people themselves resent being called Melungeons.

There are said to be about 2,000 of these people. They are very dark and have been there a long time. Their ancestors fought in the Revolutionary war.

It is not certain where they came from. One tradition is that they are a mixture of white, Indian and runaway Negro slaves. The people themselves claim to have come from Portugal.

There is a traditional story among them that a Portuguese boat was coming into the new world and a "hardness" sprung up between the sailors and the officers of the boat, which caused the sailors to mutiny and get rid of their officers. They landed somewhere along the Atlantic coast of South Carolina. The boat got burned. There they were with no means of getting back home and finally drifted into the mountainous regions of what is now East Tennessee.

They do not speak an Indian dialect—apparently never have. They have never practiced the Indian forms of religion but carry out rites of shouting and rolling somewhat similar to the Holy Rollers. They have suffered indignities and hardships on account of their race peculiarities. Once they owned fertile farms in the valleys.

VOTE TAKEN AWAY

THE CONSTITUTION adopted by the state of Tennessee in 1834 forbade them the right to vote. They were also not permitted to testify in court when any "white man" was concerned. These oppressions finally drove them out of the lowlands and they took up their residence on the high ridges where they have remained.

The injustices they suffered caused them to be bitter against white men and there are many tales of the raids which they made upon the white settlers in the valleys.

Immediately before the war between the states peace was reported to have been restored between the dark people living on the hills and the white people. The basis of this peace is said to have been th discovery of gold by the Melungeons.

The story even goes that they refined and minted this gold. Pieces of money which they offered as United States double eagles were generous in size and weight and readily accepted by the merchants. They kept the source of their supply a secret and it appears that nothing definite concerning their gold mine has come down to present days.

It was also immediately preceding the war that the legislature re-enfranchised the Melungeons but their fertile lands were not returned to them. They stayed on the ridges, still scornful of the white man. Only a few entered the army at the beginning of the war between the states but during the time and for many years after they were accused of bushwacking.

COULDN'T ARREST HER

MR. JAMES ASWELL of the Tennessee W.P.A. Writers' Project, tells this story about Big Betsy Mullins, who from her cabin on the ridge defied the law for twenty years. Betsy was arrested for moonshining no less than two dozen times. Yet she never saw the inside of a courtroom because of her weight. She is said at that time to have weighed 600 pounds. Some say that she was seven and a half feet tall and could "heft" a yearling bull over her head with ease. She could eat a whole pig, hide, hoofs and all at one meal. She could tear a firm-rooted pine from the earth with one hand and could splinter a two-inch oaken plank with her bare fist.

Finally the federal officers came to her cabin to arrest her. She was there waiting for them. The officers legally arrested her. But she was not taken from the cabin. The posse was unable to get her through the door because of her great size. And the officers discovered that if they had been able to get her through they could not have taken her to court, for she was too heavy to walk and the trail to the cabin was too steep for mules and horses to climb.

When Betsy Mullins died she is said to have weighed 900 odd pounds. A side of the cabin had to be knocked out in order to remove her body. The problem of getting her body to the graveyard was at last solved by wrapping her in great thicknesses of quilts and rolling her, inch at a time, down the ridge.

Voice of the People

"Negroes Under the Nazis"

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—You and the editor of the "Nation" hint that the Negro would be worse off under the Nazis than he is at present under Americans. Neither your editorial, "Negroes Under the Nazis" (April 7), nor the "Nation's" deserved rebuke" to Mr. Schuyler is based on anything more factual than mere assertion—and mere assertion, of course, proves nothing. How Nazis would treat Negroes is mere conjecture, and a conjecture based on published Nazi plans for the darker races. Maybe Negroes would be worse off under Hitler; frankly I don't know whether they would or not. But what I do know from bitter experience is that actual American treatment of Negroes closely parallels what the Nazis propose to do to the blackamoor if they ever get any large number of them under their control. I also know that seasoned Negro travelers who have lived in Germany for years report that even the Hitler German has little color prejudice in the mass. That a Negro is much more likely to be better treated in Germany than he would be in our own South.

What Mr. Schuyler, the "Crisis," and myself have pointed out from time to time are the deadly parallels between the "Nazi plan" and the American practice. I sometimes wonder if the Nazis didn't filch their Negro plan from page 93 of Bailey's "Race Orthodoxy in the South." "Jim crow" certainly antedated "Benutzung durch Juden Verboten!" The Nazi big-wigs themselves admit rather freely that their now notorious Nuremberg racial laws are patterned on actual American practice in treatment of Negroes. They have even complimented America on knowing how to treat inferior peoples, especially the Negro.

What seems to be the rub in the Nazi "herrenmoral" is Nazi intention to apply it to white peoples instead of the "lesser breeds without the law." Europe's "mission civilisatrice," if the Nazis have their way, is going to be applied to Belgians, Danes, Dutch, etc. instead of to Hottentots, Zulus and Indo-Chinese. In other words, Hitler proposes to make one vast German colony of Europe, to be exploited for the exclusive benefit of his superior "Teutonic Aryan." No other white man has been so mean as to propose to do to Europeans what Europeans have been and are doing to colored races. It is this Hitlerian proposition that seems to upset so many liberal Americans to the point where they ignore our own practices along this line. So far as I can see there is not the slightest evidence that the whites propose to get off the backs of the colored races. All the proposals that I have read about reorganizing the world along democratic lines are restricted to the European world exclusively. There is no mention of Asia or Africa as being within the provisions of this reorganization.

Hence, knowing these facts, and ignoring the hysterics which most Americans bring to their discussion of Hitler and the Nazis, why shouldn't an informed Negro emphasize the parallel between the Nazi and the American plan for Negroes?

As for Mr. Merguson's assertion that the Nazis murdered some half million Senegalese, one need only remember that in 1937 the total population of Senegal was only 1,666,374 people.

Phoebus. JAMES W. IVY.

Letters for the Voice of the People should be held to 200 words. The editor reserves the right to trim communications, preserving the essential thought. Unless accompanied by adequate postage, unused letters will not be returned.

[It is surprising to find Mr. Ivy arguing here that the Nazis didn't murder the 500,000 black troops, in view of the following statement from him in a letter to the April 5 "Nation": "As a Negro I am intensely interested in Hans Habe's 'The Nazi Plan for Negroes.' Mr. Habe's hint about a Nazi massacre of French Negro troops is boldly affirmed in a series of articles which are now appearing in the Negro Pittsburgh 'Courier.' The 'Courier's' European correspondent, R. Walter Merguson, a Negro long resident in France, asserts that more than a half million of France's black troops were murdered by the Nazis." While The Times-Dispatch expressed much skepticism concerning the truth of this report, in its editorial of April 7, there is no hint in Mr. Ivy's letter that he regarded the Merguson charge as untrue. Not only so, but he refered to the "massacred" men as "Negro troops," rather than Senegalese. Does Merguson say they were all Senegalese?—Editor.]

Frowning

State headquarters of the Office of Production Management and the Office of Emergency Management will be opened shortly in Birmingham, according to a dispatch from Washington. Birmingham will, of course, welcome the opening of branches of these two highly important defense agencies. Defense production and activity in our state should be expedited by such offices.

Included in the dispatch was a statement to the effect that the regional offices of the Social Security Board will not be moved from Birmingham to Atlanta, as rumors had intimated. It was stated that Washington leaders are frowning on Atlanta as the site of any further federal favors.

The reason for this was given as disapproval of policies of Gov. Talmadge, especially since the governor removed Dean Cocking from the University of Georgia.

We have said before that the effects of Gov. Talmadge's recent and present actions will, indeed, be far-reaching. Here is evidence to support this contention.

Negroes And Jews Are Kin In Travail

The Negro is hated because of his poverty and ignorance, they say, but the Jew is hated because of his riches and superb business intelligence. On the one hand we are as distant as the sun. His color sets him off with those of like complexion, but he is no more welcome in their society than the Negro; on the other hand the Jews and the Negroes are brothers in travail and persecution.

In America the Jew has certain advantages over the Negro. He is invariably rich and the Negro invariably poor. Money talks in this country. His business agility and financial success open doors that would otherwise be closed to him. Racial hatred and persecution have driven them into a perfect phalanx in order to survive, a dire need not yet realized by the Negro. Thus the Jews work with each other while the Negro work just as ardently against one anothers. The Jews have something, the Negro nothing. The Jew would employ another race only after his people have been supplied, the Negro would work for another Negro only when other races wouldn't employ them. There are exceptions, of course, but not enough to tip the scale on the opposite side. The Jews would start a business with a bunch of bananas and make a great success out of it. The Negro will start a great business and reduce it to a bunch of bananas. We start at opposite ends and get opposite results. When the Jewish holiday arrives there is not much left in the city to do business. When the Negro goes on holiday a similar thing happens.

Nearly in every community the Jews provide the money and the Negro provides the labor. No community can get along financially without the Jews' capital; no community can get along satisfactorily without the Negroes' labor. Neither Jew nor the Negro is liked but both are indispensable toward the progress of nearly every community. In their social relations the Jews do not mix, and the Negro cannot mix. Both bear the snob of the dominant race, the Jews more secretly, the Negroes more openly, but each feels the pang just the same.

Remember that left hand blow Lindbergh gave the Jews recently? Well, he did the identical thing to the Negro who found his dead baby. A reward, I think, was out for the finding of the child. You might know how much of abiding bunch of folks, loyal to their country, and so are it the Negro received. The Jews of America are a law- the Negroes, but hated nevertheless. Neither merits the slanders that come to them but they come just the same. God must have made them pretty strong for in spite of persecution they keep living right along. If it weren't for the spirit of Jesus beaming in the hearts and souls of a large number of folks comprising the dominant race the Hitleristic action would be duplicated in America against the Jews and the Negroes. We owe our sojourn of peaceful relationships to these very kind people.

In Germany the Jews are treated as dogs, and no less would the Negro. This inhuman treatment does not make them dogs but only treated so. We are likely to find them as loyal Germans as Hitler. The Fuehrer with his brutality might continue to make it hard for Jews and Gentiles alike in Germany, but no Kingdom has ever thrived on hate and neither can Germany. Some may perish, but the remnant of the Jews will continue to eat drink and live in houses in Germany long after Hitler is forgotten. Hitler will not win this war because he cannot. Thru slavery and other torments as ferocious as any human mind might conceive the Jews and the Negroes have gone thru they have not perished, they will not now. Persecutions might slow their pace, and darken their path but these shall never chill or crush their hearts. After the smouldering heap has been wiped out, the Negroes and the Jews shall rise again to menace their persecutors.

"PREJUDICE WILL VANISH"

SPEAKING BEFORE the National Council for Colored Women in Washington, D. C., on October 16, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told the delegates that prejudice because of race would eventually vanish in this country. She said:

NOV 1

"Prejudice is a thing but an idea which in time will be compeltely eliminated by the younger generations . . . If once we can be given a chance to work and break down what is just an idea, we can soon overcome the most deeprooted prejudice."

The gracious First Lady might have added an if—if this prejudice is not fostered and perpetuated by custom and tradition, which is the case in many sections of the country. Mrs. Roosevelt's idea is an encouraging one but does not jibe with the facts as evidenced by the news columns of our newspapers.

In a survey covering three months, made recently by the International Labor Defense, and based entirely on newspaper reports, 54 instances of violent terror in 15 states and the District of Columbia were reported against Negroes. These included 4 lynchings, in which one of the victims was lynched twice (he miraculously recovered from the first murder attack); eleven murders and 6 narrowly averted lynchings in which the victims suffered all the horrors but were saved at the last moment from death; and other cases of violence between the races.

The idea of Nordic supremacy is not being fostered by Hitler alone. Many parts of this country still hold to the opinion that the Negro is an inferior race and the time is not yet ripe to grant to him the full benefits of democracy. So long as this idea is kept alive, we feel that however much we may desire to see racial prejudice vanish, it will remain with us, and must be taken into account in our every day lives, Mrs. Roosevelt to the contrary notwithstanding.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

UNIVERSITY REVIEW There meets in Atlanta today an investigating committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

It is an investigating committee. It cannot bargain, suggest or advise.

It is not hostile to the state of Georgia or any of its institutions, educational or otherwise.

It is investigating whether or not charges of political interference and political domination of the faculties of the Georgia institution are true.

Here of late an effort has been made to obscure the facts.

A review is in order.

NOV 3 1941

IN THE BEGINNING Ten members of the faculties of the Georgia institutions have been fired by direct order of the Governor.

In the beginning there were charges against two.

In the beginning there were no charges of efforts at racial co-education, a charge which was denied and which has never been sustained by a single shred of evidence.

The first witness called in the first hearing denied the statement he was alleged to have made. The Governor called him a liar and the witness again repeated his denial and offered to bring his wife in to substantiate his denial. This was, properly, refused.

There followed shortly charges an effort was being made to bring about racial co-education and social equality. This was denied. No evidence sustained it, then or now.

There came next the second hearing by the Board of Regents.

It heard all the evidence and voted to retain Walter D. Cocking on the faculty of the school of education. The vote was 8 to 7.

That was the first chapter. The evidence had been heard, the verdict was returned.

SORDID CHAPTER The second chapter was rather sordid. Three members of the Board of Regents were forced out. They were three of the eight who had voted to retain the teacher.

There then were appointed to the board three men who were "the Governor's men." They were expected to vote "right." When the time came, they did.

This maneuver left the board without any considerable standing. No matter how much personal integrity its members possessed as individuals, the board as a board did not possess the confidence of the people, or of educators generally. Its majority belonged to the Governor.

It was obvious the new appointees were appointed to do what the three men dismissed, and their other five companions in voting, could not do on the basis of the evidence. They did it.

Next came the really sordid moves.

An employe of the state was sent to Athens, Ga. He there attempted, so the photographer said in an affidavit, to have the photographer fake a picture, superimposing the picture of Dean Cocking on a picture showing some Negro draftees being given dinner by the Clarke county selective service board. An offer of $50 was made. This was refused.

A day or so later the same man, in company with an Athens Negro, took Dean Cocking's one Negro servant, a combination yard-boy, cook and chauffeur, to a cabin at a tourist camp, told him he was in the headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan, put a pistol in sight, and had him sign a typewritten paper he was not allowed to read. This was what he swore in an affidavit.

NEXT DEVELOPMENT It was obvious frantic and depraved efforts were being made to obtain evidence to sustain the false charges that—of all things and places—in the state of Georgia an effort was being made to send white and colored people to school together.

There followed next the fantastic, incredible, frightening "hearing" at the capitol.

The new board sat in judgment.

It was exactly as if the judge, on hearing a verdict of not guilty, had learned how the jury had voted, had dismissed part or all of those voting to free the defendant, and brought in a new jury instructed to vote "guilty."

The new board voted not eight to seven, but ten to five.

No relevant evidence, not a word or a sentence, was offered all that day. It was a farce.

One educator was fired because a local politician asked for his firing. Another was fired because he hadn't been "right" politically. Still another was fired because he was the cousin of a political foe of the administration. Another was dismissed because had been employed by the Rosenwald Fund, which had given much to Georgia.

As a result the faculties of the state university system live in fear and trembling; the state has been advertised as being dominated by falsehood and intolerance. They know that only an aroused public opinion halted the faculty firings. They know present administration promises are worthless.

All this the committee will investigate.

Beaver Admits Irregularities Have Occurred

NOV 4 1941

Peters Doesn't Share Chairman's Views or Capitulation.

By LUKE GREENE.

Capitulating to the extent of promising political interference with the University System of Georgia would be eliminated in the future, a five-man committee of the State Board of Regents yesterday pleaded for mercy before an investigating group of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools meeting in the Ansley hotel to determine whether any state institutions would be dropped from the accredited list.

Chairman Sandy Beaver, who headed the regents' delegation, asked the association do no more than issue a warning to the University System and promised the state board would be willing to follow any suggestions as to how it might keep a clean slate with the accrediting agency in the future.

Emerging from the executive hearing after a three-hour conference, Chairman Beaver said he admitted to the investigating group there had been irregularities in Georgia and that he had no defense for some of these offenses, although henceforth he was willing to follow the correct course.

Committee Divided.

Indications were, however, that the committee was divided in its degree of capitulation, since James A. Peters, of Manchester, one of the Governor's closest advisers, did not share Beaver's viewpoint.

Speaking to newsmen after the conference, Chairman Beaver said:

"I told them that we could not defend all that we had done. We know there have been irregularities, that we have violated some of the best practices in educational organizations and have not followed accurately our own regulations.

"However, in the future, we are willing to adhere strictly to regulations and run according to the best form. I asked them to tell us how in their opinion the matter best could be handled."

Asked About Ousters.

Chairman Beaver said the investigating group inquired about most of the ousters that had been laid to political interference, including the removal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking from the school of education at the University of Georgia, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, from the presidency of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro.

Beaver said he thought the committee sufficiently explained the ouster of former Vice Chancellor Curtis Dixon, since this office was abolished by the regents.

The chairman said the committee also inquired about the removal of Professor P. D. Bush, from the North Georgia College at Dahlonega.

NOV 4

"I took the attitude that I was willing to crawl on my belly if necessary," Beaver asserted. "I think the majority of the committee was with me."

If necessary, Beaver said he was willing to go all the way and promise to restore all discharged educators to their former positions. He added he would be subject to future call by the investigating body.

However, Peters later declared he was inclined to believe that the past should be forgotten.

"Forget the Past."

"We are all agreed that there won't be any political interference in the future," he said. "But we had rather not talk about the past. There's no use to talk about what's already happened."

NOV 4 1941

Asked directly if he concurred in Beaver's statement to the press, Peters replied he would "let Beaver do the talking."

Peters did point out that he was astounded to learn how much authority the Southern Association commanded. He said he never had any idea that the organization was as powerful as it was. He added that some of this authority superseded that of the State Board of Regents.

Emphasizing his point that what had happened in the past was of no particular consequence as far as the committee was concerned, except insomuch as it reflected on what would be done in the future, Peters said the University System was not being tried for any criminal offense.

Similar to Tribunal.

Beaver declared later he regarded the committee of the accrediting association as similar to a federal tribunal and that he was willing to follow its suggestions in planning for the future.

He praised the committee as "one of the finest and most considerate groups" he had ever contacted, and added the members showed every inclination to help the University System work out its problem.

The committee of "judges" consisted of Chairman O. C. Carmichael, of Vanderbilt University; Dr. Richard C. Foster, of the University of Alabama, and Dr. Alex Guerry, of Sewanee University.

Sitting in with them were some other prominent educators, including Dr. T. H. Jack, of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa; Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of the American Medical Association, and Dr. W. D. Cutter, of Leland Stanford University, executive secretary; H. Claude Horack, of Duke, representing the American Bar Association; Arthur T. Martin, of the Association of American Law Schools, and S. H. Whitley, president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

These representatives also were interested in investigating the Georgia situation.

Candler Appears.

Regent Scott Candler, of Decatur, told the committee that the University System would be plunged directly into politics if any institutions are dropped from the accredited list.

Members of the committee also asserted the Governor never expected the ouster of the educators to cause such a furore in Georgia, and Peters charged that the newspapers had been largely responsible for the present state of affairs.

After the meeting Peters admitted he made some reference to the newspapers but said he meant that the Atlanta newspapers had "fanned the flame."

Immediately after the committee heard the regents, a committee representing the alumni society of the University of Georgia was ushered into the hearing room.

This committee consisted of Judge Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin, president of the society; Hughes Spalding, of Atlanta; former Governor John M. Slaton, of Atlanta, and Shelby Myrick, of Savannah. They pleaded that the University System not be blacklisted as did alumni representatives from Georgia Tech, R. B. Wilby and Frank Hooper.

Students Plead.

A group of University and Tech students headed by Bob Pottle and Bill Chromartie also asked for mercy, telling the committee that Mercer University, Emory, Agnes Scott and Shorter College were with them. They told of the unfortunate circumstances the students would be placed in if any units are dropped.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford was called in for a lengthy conference yesterday and was followed by Dr. M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech.

Dr. Brittain said the committee asked him about the proposal to make David I. (Red) Barron, of Monroe, vice president of the institution, but he told them that was not a matter of record. Dr. Brittain said soon after this proposal was made he contacted Barron in a downtown parking lot and that Barron did not want the job.

Asked about political interference, Dr. Brittain said there was virtually none at Tech. He, too, expressed the hope that the committee would only warn the Georgia institutions and not suspend, expel or put them on probation.

Before leaving last night for New York, Dr. Wilbur and Dr. Cutter, representatives of the American Medical Association, said their organization undoubtedly would follow the action of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

"We are here to protect the interests of the medical students," Dr. Wilbur said. Asked what reaction he got from the hearing, he replied:

"I got more out of the students than any of the others. They are thinking this thing through."

OCT 18 1941

Men, Management and Money Form the Three M's in America, But Race Shares None of the Prestige Although Science Proves No Inferiority.

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 16—The United States is the most highly developed industrial and business nation in the world. The trinity of factors responsible for this achievement is generally referred to as THE THREE M'S—MEN, MANAGEMENT and MONEY.

Twelve to thirteen million colored persons are a part of our whole population, now in excess of 150,000,000, including territories and possessions,—an increase of 8.6 per cent over 1930 census totals.

These 12,000,000 to 13,000,000 colored persons are entitled upon the basis of their American citizenship to share the birthright of individual liberty and freedom, the general welfare, the happiness, and, the social justice programs of our American scheme of life.

Mainly, they constitute the largest group of our inarticulate masses and know little or nothing of pressure organization and techniques. In the great world of industrial and agricultural life they receive a minimum of benefits, and live, the great majority of them, on subnormal levels of existence. They share none of the prestiges of management, but as men and women they are entitled to a larger share of the money which flows from employment.

DUAL CITIZENSHIP IN AMERICA

Only recently the Secretary of War called attention to the dual citizenship of Americans of Japanese, Italian and German ancestry who are being taken into the U. S. Army under Selective Service regulations, and who are being considered subjects by foreign governments.

It is among these that spy, sabotage and espionage activities are promoted. They are largely employed in important defense production and have every opportunity for serving the purposes of alien masters.

On the other hand, loyal Negroes against whom charges are never made of conspiracy or disloyalty, who have no dual relationships, are excluded, nearly always, except in inferior capacities, from those free privileges which permit opportunity for sharing in the money rewards of labor well performed.

While money is generally regarded as the least of the trinity of the Three M's, it is nevertheless the motivating power which provides food, clothing, shelter, education, and the comforts of life for wives and children.

LIVING BLEAK, CHEERLESS LIVES

Without it, bleak, dismal, cheerless lives are lived. The fabric of American life becomes thinner and thinner, for, whether we like it or not, the progress of all of us is inextricably bound together:

The laws of changeless justice bind
Oppressor with oppressed;
And close as sin and suffering joined
We march to fate abreast.

Aside from all this, an embittered citizenship group is a liability, not an asset. We are all at work now under the gun. If and when war come, we shall all be in the same boat. Everyone of us will have to win that war. We are working against time. These are self-evident truths they frankly need to be recognized.

In the essentially important tasks engaging our attention, it becomes the responsibility of government, industry, labor—of every element of armed defense—to do away with hide-bound discriminations and traditional prejudices.

The New Day ahead of us demands an earnest searching of hearts and minds that racial injustices shall no longer be practiced, and for the tbandonment of outmoded theories, the most notable of which is that racial differences, the so-called inferiority of Negroes to others, stand in the way of giving them a real chance to contribute to the greatness of our nation.

NEGRO PERFORMANCE EXHIBITS NO INFERIORITY

Herman G. Canady, professor of psychology at West Virginia State college, and chairman of the department of psychology of the American Teacher's Association, in a recent paper declares that where studies have been made in various localities, Negro youth performance shows no inferiority to that of white youth. Moreover, he points to findings of army testers who discovered that Negro recruits from the North were superior, not only to Negroes from the South, but in some cases actually superior as a group to white soldiers from the Southern States.

The only conclusion. he declares, that can be drawn at this time from the mass of available data is that there is no adequate scientific proof of fundamental Negro-white differences in intelligence or mechanical apitude, and that those differences which are found are due to lack of opportunity, training and other environmental factors.

With these scientific findings established, the way should be clear for removing theb arriers which obstruct and thereby prevent men and women of Negro extraction from sharing in that business operation which makes America great and provides the MONEY—one of the THREE M's, for well-rounded existence and happiness.

FAMED JURIST NOTED FOR STAND IN CASES AFFECTING NEGROES

OCT 18 1941

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 16—The great liberality of Louis Dembitz Brandeis, retired Associate Justice of the Supreme Court who died at his home here last Sunday evening, embraced the plight of the colored people of this country in his pursuit of justice.

From his appointment to the highest court of the land by Woodrow Wilson in 1916 until his retirement on February 13, 1939, he concurred in decision after decision upholding the constitutional guarantees of equal protection of the laws and of due process of law.

PARTICIPATED IN MANY GREAT CASES

One of the early cases decided by the Supreme Court after he became a member involved the constitutionality of a city ordinance forbidding colored persons to occupy houses in blocks where the greater number of houses were occupied by white persons. In an opinion by Justice William R. Day the court held that such ordinances invaded the civil right to acquire, enjoy and use property. Justice Brandeis concurred in the decision.

On the night of September 30, 1919, a number of colored people assembled in church in Elaine, Ark., was attacked and fired upon by a mob of white men. In the disturbance that followed a white man was killed. For this homicide five colored men were convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to death.

From an order of the Federal District Court dismissing a petition for habeas corpus the case was appealed to the Supreme Court. The late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, with whom Justice Brandeis was an apostle of dissent, delivered the opinion. The court held that a trial for murder in a State court in which the actcused are hurried to conviction under mob domination without regard for their rights, is without due process of law and absolutely void. Justice Brandeis concurred in the decision.

HELD FAST TO PRIMARY VIEWS

In the Newberry case the court divided on the question of whether the power of Congress over elections could be stretched to cover regulation of primaries for choosing candidates to be voted for in general elections for Representatives and Senators. Justice Brandeis joined in the dissenting opinion of Justice Mahlon Pitney holding that Congress had such power.

He held steadfast to the view that the right to participate in primary as well as general elections was secured to all citizens by the Constitution in the cases in which the accused are hurried the right to vote were colored.

In Nixon vs. Herndon the District Court dismissed an action for damages brought by a colored elector against the judges of election based on their refusal to allow him to vote at a Texas primary election.

The Supreme Court held in that case that the Texas statute barring colored persons from voting in Democratic primary elections in Texas for the nomination of candidates for Senator and Representatives in Congress and State and other offices violated the Fourteenth Amendment.

NIXON CASE RE-ARGUED

Immediately after that decision the Texas legislature enacted a new statute giving to every political party in the State the power to prescribe the qualifications of its own members. Under this new statute the Democratic State Executive Committee adopted a resolution limiting participation in party primaries to white persons.

Nixon was again refused the right to vote in a Democratic primary. He again brought suit against the judges of election for damages. The District Court again dismissed his suit, and the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirmed that judgment.

On review the Supreme Court held in an opinion read by the late Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo that the power exercised by the Executive Committee in this instance was State action and violated the Fourteenth Amendment. Justice Brandeis concurred in this decision.

SUPPORTED APPEALS OF SCOTTSBORO BOYS

He also concurred in the decision in the Scottsboro cases in 1932, reversing the conviction and death sentences of seven of nine colored youths charged with raping two white girls on a moving freight train near Scottsboro, Alabama, on March 25, 1931, on the ground that they had not been accorded fair trials.

He also concurred in the decisions in 1935 granting new trials to Clarence Norris and Haywood Patteson, two of the defendants in the Scottsboro cases. In the Norris case the court ruled that systematic exclusion of colored persons from grand and pettit juries was illegal.

Other cases in which he concurred in decision upholding the civil rights of colored people were those of Angelo Herndon and Lloyd Gaines. In the Herndon case the Supreme Court ruled that a Georgia statute forbidding incitement to insurection, a reenactment of a provision of the Black Codes of slavery days, violated the freedom of speech and assembly guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment. In the Gaines case the court rule that a State must provide equal educational facilities.

Justice Brandeis was born in Louisville, Ky., on Nov. 13, 1856. His maternal grandfather had been a leader in a Polish revolution. An uncle helped nominate Lincoln for President in 1860. His father was an outspoken union sympathizer, and his mother risked her life to bring succor to Northern soldiers.

"My Experiences In The U. S. A."

Through The Southern States

By Selby D. B. Ngcobo, M.A., B.Econ.

THE FIELD TRIP.

One of the most valuable things about the study of Race Relations was the Field trip. Twice during the academic year the students concerned under the leadership of the late Dr. Loram took a tour round selected parts of the United States or Canada. And these tours lasted a fortnight or two months The Professor and the students left behind books and theoretic studies and went out to learn something new and to verify what they already knew in a general way from actual life situations. During the second field trip between March and April, 1940 we went through the following Southern States:- Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas. We came into touch with men and women, white and black, who were dealing with practical situations and were richer for these experiences.

It was on the eve of this second field trip that Dr. Loram came to me and told me that we were going to undertake a trip through the South, and that I might experience difficulties because of my race. However, he said he would be there to father me along as much as he could. I said to Dr. Loram that I would value the experience of seeing something of the much advertised Southern States and that, as a South African Muntu, I could not imagine how the South could be very much worse from what I would get back home Somebody who was with me suggested that I might escape some of the inconveniences if I could disguise myself as an Indian under turban. That I refused to do I was thus laid bare to what was termed the "full Southern exposure"

THE JIM CROW COACH.

From New York to Washington, D. C. we travelled in the same rail coach with white passengers. As a matter of fact I was not the only coloured man in that coach. Things changed in Washington. I was rather struck with the irony of the situation, namely, that the colour bar should begin in the city which is the seat of the Federal Government which practises no legal colour bar against Negroes. When the train pulled out of the station at 3 a.m. I noticed that all the men of dark colour had been shepherded into one coach that was poorer than the others. There is nothing like it in this country as far as I know. The Jim Crow coach is very uncomfortable because of the smell from the diagonally situated toilets, the dirt and the lack of ventilation. If you have any food you have to eat it on your knees; there are no facilities. It is a very good example of segregation being synonymous with neglect. It is no wonder that many self-respecting Negroes when going South travel by private or hired cars.

In the United States Railways are not owned and operated by the Government, state or Federal; they are owned by private companies, and these companies have to conform to the colour bars and the racial exclusive behaviours of the Southern whitemen in order to receive their patronage and the licence to operate. That accounts for the existence of the jim crow, and also explains why it cannot be abolished by legislation from Washington. Looking through the windows I could see the old slave-worked plantations and after passing through many plantations and woods we arrived in Richmond, Virginia.

COLOUR PREJUDICE.

We had no sooner arrived in Richmond than I was made conscious of my colour and of the fact that I was different from the rest of our party. Through the usual traveller's ignorance, I went into a certain toilet and after spending a few moments in there a white janitor came along and accosted me thus: "Hey, where are you from?" "From New Haven," I replied. "Well, don't you know you are down South here.....did they not tell you about the Mason and Dixon line?" There was no further word from me; I decamped the next moment. I never could forget that dramatic moment in Richmond, Virginia. As I ruminated over this incident, I realised that the line of the Equator and the Mason-Dixon line were different. The former was a mere mathematical fiction which you could cross and still have many happy nights of sleep; but the latter line was a living reality that meant certain definite social relationships to both the whites and the Blacks. You could not cross the Mason and Dixon line and still be happy as a man of colour.

Yes, the South is very much colour - conscious as these other stories will show. At one time we got to Atlanta the capital of Georgia and now we were told that we had arrived in the deep South. We were told that in conference and in discussions we must not expect to be addressed as "Mr. So and So," but that we were to be addressed as "Professor" or "Doctor" or "Colonel." The courtesy title of Mr. or Mrs. is only reserved for the members of the white group.

In our party from up north there was a West African student studying at Columbia University and he had had leave from his faculty in order to join us in the trip. He was very dark in complexion and that made him the butt of a certain prominent Southerner's remarks. We were having an interview with this dignitary and before that could begin we were to be introduced. The white students in the party were introduced and received his outstretched hands. when it came to my turn and that of the West African the hand was withdrawn and there followed a pause. Turning aside from me the Southern dignitary turned to my West African friend and said: "Sit there, boy [pointing to a bench]...that is how we like to have them... as black as hell." In order not to embarrass our host we all with held our laughter, but after the interview every member of our party burst out in laughter; we were actually laughing at the now departed host because he little realised how he was near hell [the West African]. We were singled out for a different seat because of our colour. We did not feel bitter about all this. Nor were we apologetic about being black and African.

Analysis of 'Appeals' To the Negro People

By Eugene Gordon

The current number of Propaganda Analysis, "a bulletin to help the intelligent citizen detect and analyse propaganda," does the kind of job that has long wanted doing. It scientifically analyses printed material issued by the Negro people in their own behalf and by whites who desire the Negroes' support of the war against Hitler fascism. On the whole, because its analysis is based on fact, the bulletin presents, on its own part, an excellent bit of favorable propaganda for Negro rights.

Name-calling is an ancient propaganda device, according to the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, Inc., which publishes the bulletin from 211 Fourth Ave. And the use of Hitler's name for this purpose "is hardly new." Yet the editor of the magazine Opportunity: Journal of Negro Life is acknowledged to be justified (for he is telling the truth) when he writes that "a considerable section of America has already been conditioned to the Nazi conception of race" and calls Governor Eugene Talmadge "a Georgia Hitler."

The bulletin considers three main lines of pro-Negro propaganda: (1) that which strives to keep in public view the similarity between the Hitler and the United States treatment of the Negro people; (2) that which, issued by certain organizations made up chiefly of whites, aims at winning the Negro people to support of the war by justifying the Negro's demands for jobs; (3) Negro nationalist propaganda, which reminds the Negro of treament he received in the other war "for democracy" and warns him against all whites.

The first propaganda theme, says the bulletin, requires little artistry to get it across. It is true and everybody knows it is true. Since most of it appears in the Negro press as news, it is documented beyond all scepticism. As the bulletin asserts, the issue is brought down to a question of right or wrong.

Believers in democracy—or those who merely say they believe in it—are faced squarely with this question when reading or listening to the first type of propaganda: "Do I believe in full democracy for the Negro people, or do I not?" If so, he may accept the challenge and do something. If not, he may turn away and try to forget it. Accepting it or trying to forget it, he cannot deny that, if he believes in democracy, this treatment of the Negro is wrong.

There is a breach between getting people to see the point and persuading them to do something about it, once they have seen it. It is not hard for the Negro agencies of propaganda to convince the reader or the listener that what they say is sound; it is hard to get action on it, however. The second line of propaganda, put out by organizations mainly of whites, is geared in the direction of trying to persuade people to do something about the evil—giving Negroes jobs in the war industries, for instance.

These organizations, according to the bulletin, see the "war effort" hampered unless complete national unity is achieved. National unity may be achieved by putting Negroes into the jobs for which they are qualified. Fight for Freedom, Inc., is typical, according to the bulletin, which names also a number of number of other organizations, including the Communist Party.

Here, however, the bulletin refers to an alleged decline in membership (and, inferentially, in propaganda influence), without saying anything about the anti-working class propaganda designed to destroy the effectiveness of the Communist Party among just such of the oppressed as the Negro people.

Negro nationalist propaganda, finally, is linked in the bulletin with the other two kinds as being intended primarily to foster the interests of the Negro people — as the nationalists interpret these interests.

The New Slavery

When chattel slavery was wiped out of American economics, short-sighted fanatics wildly rejoiced, thinking the problem of the Negro had been solved. We know today that it takes generations upon generations to solve an economic problem affecting a race. Today only is the Negro beginning to climb out of the bondage that ignorance and lack of opportunity have forged for him. It will be generations yet before the American Negro finds the proper and destined place there is for his race in this country. And that place will not be found by prejudiced demagogues of either race.

Following emancipation of the chattel slaves, there developed another form of slavery —economic slavery of the workers of the nation, in mine and mill, in factory and forge. "Wage slaves," they have been called by students of the old industrial system. Undoubtedly this appellation was justified in many instances. Not so many years ago long hours of labor, pitifully scanty pay scales and heartless conditions of work made the "sweatshops" of the nation a scandal and an inhuman disgrace. Of course, there were, at all times, many employers of the highest character, who treated their workers as human beings and as men and women deserving every opportunity. But the exceptions, the sweatshop proprietors, provided too much justification for the charge that chattel slavery in the south had merely been exchanged for wage slavery in the industrial east.

Today the workers have found, through organization into labor unions, that they can seize the whip hand over industrial management. The pendulum has swung, probably too far, to the other side, and today industry is at the mercy of organized labor, which has only to call a strike and any plant in the country is hamstrung, helpless. The courts have even condoned destruction of property and the unwarranted practice known as "sit-down" strikes.

But the coming of the labor unions into such power does not mean that the workers themselves have escaped from slavery. They have only exchanged one master for another and, in many instances, a worse and more cruel one.

For, in many industries, the workers today are more surely, more viciously, bound as slaves to the chariot wheels of labor leaders than they ever were as wage slaves of their employers.

Wages were too low, hours were too long, conditions of work were often deplorable before the rise to power of the unions. But a man, no matter how bad his working conditions, was always free to seek and to find other employment. If conditions were intolerable in his own community, he could go elsewhere in this great country and market his skill and his labor as a free man.

Today that privilege, for tens of thousands of American workers, has gone. They are nothing but the human chattels of the labor bosses who use them as puppets in the warfare with industrial management.

Today the average member of many—not all—unions is a helpless pawn in the hands of the "big shots" of his union. If a strike is ordered, he must obey. At work or out of work, with income or without, he must pay his union dues. In many cases those dues are subtracted from his pay envelope before he sees it.

The individual worker who dares to rebel is not only put out of his present job; he is barred from employment at his trade anywhere in the United States. If he dares to rebel against the iron hand of his union masters, he is, not infrequently, beaten up and his family is ruthlessly doomed to starve.

There is a day coming when all men shall be free. When slavery in every form shall disappear from the face of the earth.

Slowly the nation is solving the hideous problems that resulted from the passing of chattel slavery. Slowly, through social awakening, the evils of the sweatshop and of wage slavery are passing away. But, so far, working men and women have but exchanged one form of servitude for another.

Servitude to the labor bosses is but the new slavery, following after servitude to the employers. In many respects the new slavery is worse than what has gone before.

In its turn it, too, will pass. And free Americans will once again be free to work where and at what they please, but when Abraham Lincoln said it: "... this government cannot endure permanently, half slave and half free."

If it does not pass, America, as we know it, is doomed. For it is just as true today as it was in the days of the exploitation of any kind by an understanding and acceptance of moral laws and obligations that are more compelling and more binding than any written upon the formal statute books.

Name-calling is an ancient propaganda device, according to the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, Inc., which publishes the bulletin from 211 Fourth Ave. And the use of Hitler's name for this purpose "is hardly new." Yet the editor of the magazine Opportunity: Journal of Negro Life is acknowledged to be justified (for he is telling the truth) when he writes that "a considerable section of America has already been conditioned to the Nazi conception of race" and calls Governor Eugene Talmadge "a Georgia Hitler."

The bulletin considers three main lines of pro-Negro propaganda: (1) that which strives to keep in public view the similarity between the Hitler and the United States treatment of the Negro people; (2) that which, issued by certain organizations made up chiefly of whites, aims at winning the Negro people to support of the war by justifying the Negro's demands for jobs; (3) Negro nationalist propaganda, which reminds the Negro of treament he received in the other war "for democracy" and warns him against all whites.

The first propaganda theme, says the bulletin, requires little artistry to get it across. It is true and everybody knows it is true. Since most of it appears in the Negro press as news, it is documented beyond all scepticism. As the bulletin asserts, the issue is brought down to a question of right or wrong. Believers in democracy—or those who merely say they believe in it—are faced squarely with this question when reading or listening to the first type of propaganda: "Do I believe in full democracy for the Negro people, or do I not?" If so, he may accept the challenge and do something. If not, he may turn away and try to forget it. Accepting it or trying to forget it, he cannot deny that, if he believes in democracy, this treatment of the Negro is wrong.

There is a breach between getting people to see the point and persuading them to do something about it, once they have seen it. It is not hard for the Negro agencies of propaganda to convince the reader or the listener that what they say is sound; it is hard to get action on it, however. The second line of propaganda, put out by organizations mainly of whites, is geared in the direction of trying to persuade people to do something about the evil—giving Negroes jobs in the war industries, for instance.

These organizations, according to the bulletin, see the "war effort" hampered unless complete national unity is achieved. National unity may be achieved by putting Negroes into the jobs for which they are qualified. Fight for Freedom, Inc., is typical, according to the bulletin, which names also a number of number of other organizations, including the Communist Party.

Here, however, the bulletin refers to an alleged decline in membership (and, inferentially, in propaganda influence), without saying anything about the anti-working class propaganda designed to destroy the effectiveness of the Communist Party among just such of the oppressed as the Negro people.

Negro nationalist propaganda, finally, is linked in the bulletin with the other two kinds as being intended primarily to foster the interests of the Negro people — as the nationalists interpret these interests.

The New Slavery

When chattel slavery was wiped out of American economics, short-sighted fanatics wildly rejoiced, thinking the problem of the Negro had been solved. We know today that it takes generations upon generations to solve an economic problem affecting a race. Today only is the Negro beginning to climb out of the bondage that ignorance and lack of opportunity have forged for him. It will be generations yet before the American Negro finds the proper and destined place there is for his race in this country. And that place will not be found by prejudiced demagogues of either race.

Following emancipation of the chattel slaves, there developed another form of slavery —economic slavery of the workers of the nation, in mine and mill, in factory and forge. "Wage slaves," they have been called by students of the old industrial system. Undoubtedly this appellation was justified in many instances. Not so many years ago long hours of labor, pitifully scanty pay scales and heartless conditions of work made the "sweatshops" of the nation a scandal and an inhuman disgrace. Of course, there were, at all times, many employers of the highest character, who treated their workers as human beings and as men and women deserving every opportunity. But the exceptions, the sweatshop proprietors, provided too much justification for the charge that chattel slavery in the south had merely been exchanged for wage slavery in the industrial east.

Today the workers have found, through organization into labor unions, that they can seize the whip hand over industrial management. The pendulum has swung, probably too far, to the other side, and today industry is at the mercy of organized labor, which has only to call a strike and any plant in the country is hamstrung, helpless. The courts have even condoned destruction of property and the unwarranted practice known as "sit-down" strikes.

But the coming of the labor unions into such power does not mean that the workers themselves have escaped from slavery. They have only exchanged one master for another and, in many instances, a worse and more cruel one.

For, in many industries, the workers today are more surely, more viciously, bound as slaves to the chariot wheels of labor leaders than they ever were as wage slaves of their employers.

Wages were too low, hours were too long, conditions of work were often deplorable before the rise to power of the unions. But a man, no matter how bad his working conditions, was always free to seek and to find other employment. If conditions were intolerable in his own community, he could go elsewhere in this great country and market his skill and his labor as a free man.

Today that privilege, for tens of thousands of American workers, has gone. They are nothing but the human chattels of the labor bosses who use them as puppets in the warfare with industrial management.

Today the average member of many—not all—unions is a helpless pawn in the hands of the "big shots" of his union. If a strike is ordered, he must obey. At work or out of work, with income or without, he must pay his union dues. In many cases those dues are subtracted from his pay envelope before he sees it.

The individual worker who dares to rebel is not only put out of his present job; he is barred from employment at his trade anywhere in the United States. If he dares to rebel against the iron hand of his union masters, he is, not infrequently, beaten up and his family is ruthlessly doomed to starve.

There is a day coming when all men shall be free. When slavery in every form shall disappear from the face of the earth.

Slowly the nation is solving the hideous problems that resulted from the passing of chattel slavery. Slowly, through social awakening, the evils of the sweatshop and of wage slavery are passing away. But, so far, working men and women have but exchanged one form of servitude for another.

Servitude to the labor bosses is but the new slavery, following after servitude to the employers. In many respects the new slavery is worse than what has gone before.

In its turn it, too, will pass. And free Americans will once again be free to work where and under what circumstances they please, but when Abraham Lincoln said it: "... this government cannot endure permanently, half slave and half free." he was a citation of any kind by an understanding and an awakened public under protected against exploitation of any kind by any written upon the formal statute books.

If it does not pass, America, as we know

SOUTHERN SAY-SO

FREE OUR ECONOMIC SLAVES FROM THE JAWS OF THE LOAN SHARKS

BY M. S. STUART

GOM-BEEN-ISM is a "jaw-breaking" mouthful; and if you will let your candor rise for a moment you must confess that you have not been accustomed to using this strange gob of verbage on little children and every-day people. Maybe if hurled at you by some smart word fancier you would think it a brick or bomb. at least until you had ignited your thought starter by a vigorous head scratching.

Well, in not being a bedfollow of this recluse of the word family you are not by yourself. You have plenty of company. Maybe it ought not to be allowed to run at large outside of its stall in the dictionary. Physically it looks like a haphazard conglomeration of syllables mechanically put together. Its origin being Irish, you could easily suspect it to have been conceived in moments when the spirits were cheering and the sire "in high." No, it is not the name of anything in Russia, a Creole dish, a disease nor of some pre-historic monster.

MANY GUILTY OF IT

While it is not exactly a crime and you are sure it is too big and strange to be used on the poorer classes of colored people, yet you probably do not know that these are the very classes in sme sections who are the victims of the evil practice which this queer word was originated to define.

If you have not already sneaked a peep "under the deck" while no one was looking, it may be information to you to know that gom-been-ism, to quote the namesake of Methuselah's grandson, is "the practice of the poor of depending upon loans of money at high rates of interest, as in parts of Ireland." Now that you have been lured up to the point in this effort, you may remember that many Negroes in the South, perhaps in other sections of this country, are the unwitting victims of this practice. You know that many of us are always alert for an opportunity to borrow. That when getting the money or credit, we don't care how high the interest or hard the terms. That frequently when we can, we make new loans to pay old ones.

THAT in this way the victims become mired deeper and deeper in debt. You know that on this road there is constant poverty and ruin at the end. You know that it only defers the day of disaster and that the only way to avoid it is to accept and bear the required sacrifice in the beginning, without borrowing, if possible.

NEGRO STREETS

You find this practice mostly on so-called Negro streets, like Beale avenue in Memphis, and Rampart in New Orleans, where Messrs. Slickerberg and Skinnumvich and the like, with their loan and pawn shops, always find enough Negro victims to grow rich. You say these Negro victims are Mr. Skinnumvich's economic slaves. You may have heard those words, "economic slaves" in the mouths of several speakers at the recent session of the National Negro Business league. If you did, you probably wondered if these speakers were just glibly reciting words they had heard or read, or if actually they realize the terrible rigidity of the economic bonds which the borrowing and debt psychology of our masses has rivited upon the race. You wonder if these leaders know that this debt tendency is one of the greatest hindrances to economic progress and the success of Negro business. If they do, you wonder why they just talk year after year and try to do nothing about it.

LEADERS TO BLAME

SEP 20 1941

You see race groceries and other commercial stores suffering, while the stores of Messrs. Sam, Ikey, Trickeystein, Gouge-owski and Whatnotski are crowded with Negroes every day. These victims say they cannot quit trading with Whatnotski, etc., because he lets them run an account and "is so nice" and similar drivel. When you hear this type of tommy-rot from Whatnotski's economic slaves, you know the price of bondage for these victims is one week's grocery bill. Your first impulse is to be vexed with them. One week's grocery bill! Surely they should have sense enough not to let this stand between them and independence. Surely in some way they could make this small sacrifice.

BUT when you let your thinking bore in a bit, you find that it is not so simple as you first thought.

VICTIMS OF A CUSTOM

First of all these victims have long standing custom to overcome. They are the slaves of a custom that runs back right to the gates of Emancipation. That first week outside the gates, their ancestors had to borrow. They had to go in debt for food. They and many of their posterity have been doing that ever since—by the month or year in the country—by the week or month in town. This custom by now is probably in the blood of some. You know how hard an old custom is to break, even with constant advice against it. But these masses have not had much advice nor encouragement. That which they have had has been mostly sporadic and in the abstract.

Next, you cannot recall any definitely formed, persistently pursued and ably led program for their deliverance during the past 75 years. You know that the money spent by Negroes in the higher brackets of finance for convention and vacation trips and other extravagances, in any year, would be sufficient to establish financial enterprises to lend money on low rates and easy terms to free these "economic slaves." You have heard of no movement in this direction. You have noticed no tendency to make this sacrifice.

NEXT, you know that many leaders do not themselves "practice what they preach." You know the masses see many who can do better going right on, even slipping in, buying from Whatnotski, and often accepting with a grin the lagniappes of discourtesies and insults which they denounce in their speeches. So, after pondering you are not so vexed with Whatnotski's "economic slaves."

SHORT CIRCUIT ADVICE

Now and then there has, you know, been advice from high places. "Live within your means." You may have heard that from the President in his fine annual address at the recent league session. You know that is good advice, yet you cannot forget that if you are sentenced to a long term in the low income brackets, that advice is easier to give than it is to follow. If you are an "economic slave," you want that advice to go farther and offer some practical solution for your economic emancipation.

Next week that is what this effort will talk about—SOLUTIONS.

School Issue Is Thrust Into 'Y' Conference

JUL 19 1941

By Harry B. Webber

BORDENTOWN — Ten national leaders of the race seated around a long conference table Saturday for the panel discussion on defense staged by the YMCA Annual Laymen's Conference became confused when their master of ceremonies Ira D. A. Reid, taking a tip from questions by the audience, lifted this question into their midst:

"What should Negro leaders who head separate set-ups take to end segregation without losing the gains that have been already made?"

The question resulted from a fiery discussion of growing segregation in American life in which both panel members and audience participated. It also resulted, when efforts by members of the Herald News staff to inject the Bordentown School defense training issue into the picture, were sidetracked by Mr. Reid.

To the question, the speakers made these answers:

WARREN M. BANNER, National Urban League: "I look upon the issue of segregated schools from an economic point of view. Take the two cities, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh. In Philadelphia, the people decided for separate schools. Today they have scores of teachers making good money, while Pittsburgh, which decided against segregation has only three teachers. I put the question up to you. What do you think?" Later, when pressed on his aparent O.K. of the separate school idea, Banner attempted to explain he did not mean to O.K. it. "It's a different problem for each community and has to be studied," he said after the meeting.

HUBERT DELANY, New York: "Unconditional equality without segregation. Pittsburgh is better off in the long run for having refused to accept segregation. Every segregated unit ends with the Negro getting the worst of it."

WILLIAM H. HASTIE, Washington, Civilian War Aide: "We should insist on the ideal always. Do schools exist for hiring teachers or for teaching children? Is the teacher or the pupil to be benefited?"

MAJOR JOHNSON, U. S. Army: "We have all opposed segregation in the army on the record. But one question is whether or not white soldiers being trained in southern camps may not spread southen ideas over the country after the emergency."

MISS FRANCES WILLIAMS of the Price Administration offices, Washington: "The government should take the power of administration from the holding companies and corporations to help end discrimination by firms against Negroes and we should have cross alliances with white groups fighting our cause."

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH of New York: "The trouble with Pittsburgh schools can be quickly solved if even a thousand Negroes march on the Board of Education."

CLARENCE MITCHELL of O. P.M.: "In appointing the committee to carry out the President's order against discrimination we should not make the mistake of assuming every Negro on it will be our friend and every white man our enemy."

WALTER WHITE: "Point out the high cost of segregation to the community. Use the courts."

MISS WILLIAMS: "Don't worry who gets the jobs at the top. Let the masses get them as well as the leaders."

PROF. CHARLES WESLEY, Howard University: "The question in Negro life is how we are going to help change the mind of the people in local communities to get rid of segregation. Name some practical suggestions. (At this point Mr. Wesley was interrupted by Mr. Delany who urged economic and political war) "I don't want an argument," Wesley fired at Delany.

PATRIOTISM

APR 26 1941

PLANS are being completed for an "I Am An American Day," which, coming so close to Decoration and Independence Days, will make the next three months a period for whipping up the patriotism of the country to a fever pitch, so that opposition to active participation in World War No. 2 by the United States will have practically died out by that time.

We as a racial group have just cause for pride for the contribution we have made to the development of our country both from an industrial and artistic standpoint. At the same time we realize that our system of government offers the best opportunity for individual development in the world today as witness the examples of Marian Anderson and Joe Louis.

Nevertheless, we think it well to realize that all this talk of democracy is so much "hokum" insofar as it relates to the Negro as witness the following dispatch from Montgomery, Ala., to The New York Times:

"Representatives of the legal departments of eight states sought today (April 16) to save their race segregation laws from being held unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. They prepared a friend-of-the-court brief for submission to the high court in the case of Representative Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois, who has attacked the Arkansas "Jim Crow" law relative to railroad segregation of whites and Negroes.

"The Mitchell case already has been argued orally before the Supreme Court. The attorneys contend that the Arkansas law was not properly before the court, but if it were, it was applicable to interstate as well as intrastate passengers and as such constitutional.

And if further proof is needed of where the Negro stands in this democracy of ours, read "What War Means To The Negro" in the current issue of New Masses—a record of the treatment we received in the last war.

It is well to remember that record as we hear all this talk about democracy and patriotism, and let our white friends know that we are not being fooled this time as we were in the last war.

We will fight if we have to but they certainly can't expect us to fight with the same enthusiasm as Americans of the Caucasian race, knowing what we must face when peace has again come to the world.

To paraphrase a well-known saying, "Patriotism is the last refuge of Nordics and scoundrels."

Three Classes of Thinkers Among Our Group

Editor, Journal and Guide:
Judging from the present and future social progress there are three classes of thinkers among American Negroes today.

Class No. 1 believes that we as a race are the masters of our own destiny, that our potentialities for continued social advancement are practically unlimited, that our faith in the eventuality of a sunny day of economic triumph will be actually realized, and last, but not least, that our debut into the clear light of full civic citizenship and economic mastery will be realized after we have escaped successfully from the tyrannical yoke of political bondage, which is now being zealously levied upon us.

This group of American Negro thinkers represents those upon whose shoulders rests the task of finding a fool proof solution for our present acutely embarrassing social difficulties. These intellectual pioneers believe, emphatically, that the degree of acceleration with which our full liberation shall be brought to pass depends wholly upon our individual and aggregate religious, social and military conduct.

Unlike Group No. 1, Class No. 2 of the thinking type of American Negro falls into the "parrot" category, but merely echo the sentiments of various Caucasion statesmen and intermediate political leaders of both races. This group comprising ministers, teachers, actors, musicians, laymen, etc., would have our people believe that the future political rise and social welfare of the Negro race depends upon the fate of the British Empire in World War No. 2.

But they forget that if Great Britain loses her present war with the Axis powers, both on the European continent and in Africa, that in the resultant chaotic political upheaval, many of the semi-heathen Negro tribes may emerge out of the darkness of protectorative servitude into the full light of sovereign, mature power and independence.

Especially is this true of Ethiopia. They forget that the British promise to rescue the fallen Haile Selassie kingdom from beneath Italian rule may be, in reality, but a clever British ruse to obtain Ethiopia for themselves as a British protectorate. They forget the recent object lesson of many, so-called great, French Negro leaders who rashly persuaded the French Negro populace to support the Petain-Laval regime in its untimely and extremely unfortunate military foray against the Nazis.

These leaders brought extreme discredit upon the Negro people everywhere for fearing to entertain their own personal views regarding the approaching conflict, by neglecting to withhold judgment regarding the ultimate outcome of the struggle, and by failing to exhort their respective following to steadfastly maintain a neutral (non-partisan, non-combatant) attitude as much as time and circumstances would permit, in keeping with the spiritual, intellectual, and physical strength of the individual, they led the French Negro masses into a virtual Hades of pain, misery, shame, defeat, and death.

Had the French Negro leaders been, for the most part, thinkers of the class No. 1 type, and if their actions had been governed according to the righteous dictates of their own inward consciences (as God intended) instead of swayed by the foundationless arguments of vociferous French politicians, they would have realized that as a subject people, within the land, the Negro layman, and all other race men not actively engaged in military or political pursuits, were not justly responsible for any war brought upon the state by the ruling regime.

What really happened, was that ignorant Negro leaders (intellectually well trained, but spiritually imperfect) stirred up the ire of the French Negro against Adolph Hitler and the Nazis, in behalf of Petain and Laval, causing themselves to be justly responsible for the dreadful calamity meted out upon the comparatively innocent French Negro people by the relentless Nazi sword.

When asked "Who would win the War?" a reliable leader of Class No. 1 would have truthfully replied "I do not know," and there let the matter end. Many of the French Negro leaders told the French Negro people that they thought France would win the war. Ultimate results, in the fallacy of their shallow belief many upright, able, and innocent Negro men, women and children perished.

Poor leadership is a harmful thing, but blind leadership is ten thousand times worse. Had the race leaders of France admonished the Negro people to adopt a patriotic, yet strictly neutral attitude throughout the duration of the Nazi-French controversy, war casualties of the lamentable period under discussion, would have been very few, among the Negro Frenchmen.

As we stand, today, we are fighting a war of wits. Enemies surround us on every side, many of them among our own race, color, blood, and kindred. The dungeon and the sword are some of the milder forms of the weapons which our spiritual enemies are causing to be used against us. Deadly disease, slow starvation due to malnutrition, and dire-disgraceful-poverty, the latter brought on through the medium of oppressive labor, exploitation on the part of prejudiced and jealous politicians, are other abominable social difficulties under which the American Negro is now laboring.

It is far above the spiritual virtue of the state to remedy these evils. Therefore, we must labor patiently on working and hoping for a turn for the best, until we are aggregately relieved by the intervention of superior outside forces or circumstances.

SOCIAL JUSTICE IS DESIRED BY ALL RACES

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Dr. J. J. Walker, pastor of the Central Christian Church, one of the leading white congregations of this city was very outspoken here Sunday afternoon when he told an interracial goodwill meeting at First Baptist Church that "There is no such thing as social equality—no such things as a superior race. Social justice is a thing desired by all races". To a packed audience, this courageous minister who believes in justice for all, spoke from the depths of his heart and gave Memphis a message that is so much needed in the midst of a double social standard, one for the white and one for the colred, under the present political machine.

Speaking further, Dr. Walker said: All races are subject to the same things individuals are—the blessings of a moraly and spiritually trustworthy universe. There is no such thing as a superior race. Many of the things coveted by one race of another race will be found to be will-o-the-wisps if attained.

The sane members of any race will not waste their time in pursuing so-called social equality", Dr. Walker insisted. "Within every race there are higher-ups meritoriously. There are also assumed higher-ups. No normal member of any race would care for the latter nor would he care for the former except he could enter the community of fellowship by way of merit. The world's finest felowship is made up of a superior race composed of the finest citizens of all races."

Dr. Walker ended his address amid roars, cheers and laud applause. Comments were made by various leaders that such addresses as Dr. Walker's and the liberal attitude of the white daily newspaper toward colored people of this city and a continuous pounding away against the oppression of the Negro would eventually bring about a better and newer day. One leader in commenting said, "Systems of oppression usually wreck themselves because systems of oppression are wrong, and the system of oppression used against the Negro would inevitably fall."

Mulatto Is Not Negro In Fla.

KEY WEST, Fla.—(ANP)— Under an old Florida law a mulatto was permitted to purchase liquor, but the sale of liquor to a Negro was prohibited. This fact was revealed by the discovery of a letter dated December 1[illegible], 1854, written to a state legislator.

The letter protested the passage of a bill permitting a Negro, or mulatto, having a written order from a white person, to purchase one quart of liquor. The writer pointed out that the same session of the legislature then passed a measure prohibiting sale to a Negro but failed to mention mulattoes, leaving them free to make purchases.

Raps Racial Attitude Of Southerners

BLUE RIDGE, N. C., June 19.—"Although we criticize the Germans for their racial prejudice, we think it is all right for Southerners to have the same attitude toward the Negro," Miss Lillian Smith, editor of the North Georgia Review said in addressing the Southern Student Christian Conference here Wednesday night.

The speaker added that "we South, also the most murders. We have the most churches in the take more out of the people than we give back, and still think it is good business to take more out of the soil than we put into it."

Dr. [illegible]ack Stubbs of the Marine hospital, Baltimore, Md. discussing in a brief address the South's health needs, said more hospitals are needed, and there is a shortage of doctors in the rural areas. "Health must be included in any consideration of the welfare of the people," he declared, "and that means all the people, white and black, rich and poor. Disease is no respecter of races, classes or persons."

Indians In America Are Making Progress Toward Cultural Aims

JAN 26 1941

Numbers Are Increasing And Members Of Race Contributing Vastly To U. S. Accomplishments

BY WALTER R. BOTTCHER

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The American Indian not only is making a liar out of those who called his a dying race, but he is steadily moving toward a wholly self-supporting status.

The Indian population in the United States rose in 1940 to 361,816, a 6.2 per cent gain over 1930 and a long step up from the 270,000 of the 1900 census.

Four and a half centuries ago, when pale-face conquerors first came to North America, 846,000 Indians are estimated to have roamed over what now is the United States.

The once great Indian empire—all but obliterated by governmental administration which Secretary of War Stanton in 1862 called a "sink of iniquity"—now is composed of 200 tribes with landed estates totaling 54,839,278 acres in 24 states.

Floyd W. Larouche, field representative of the Indian Service, says:

"There has come a resurgence of Indian culture, economy and spirit . . . the fruits of which no man can accurately foretell."

"Instead of being at the end of the trail, as the sculptor saw him a few decade ago, the Indian now is entering a new and auspicious era—one in which he has more to hope for than at any time since the white man landed on this continent."

JAN 26 1941

More than 12,000 of them volunteered for service during the World War, and all native-born Indians were made citizens by Congress in recognition of their patriotism by an act that automatically subjected them to the conscription statute of 1940.

Since the last tomahawk was laid aside a half-century ago, the redman has contributed figures like the late Will Rogers, humorist and actor; the late Charles Curtis, vice president of the United States; the late Zane Gray, author of many Western novels; Acee Blue Eagle, noted artist, and Jim Thorpe, gridiron immortal and Olympics champion.

But it was the public consciousness of Indian needs, aroused during the past decade and a half" that Larouche traces "the essential foundation for the Indian's new era."

The Indian reorganization act of 1934, now the basic law of Indian administration, "grew out of a long crusade," he says, adding:

"Investigations and revelations of public spirited men and women in the early 1920's led to an impartial inquiry by the Institute for Government Research. Under the direction of Lewis Merriman, a comprehensive report was published and led to significant improvements in Indian administration in 1929."

Later a complete legislative reversal of 50-year-old policies was successfully urged by President Roosevelt, who said in requesting adoption of the 1934 law:

"Certainly the continuance of autocratic rule by a federal department . . . is incompatible with American ideals of liberty. It is also destructive of the character and self-respect of a great race."

John Collier, long an advocate of Indian reform, was made Indian commissioner in 1933. He defined his objectives as:

1. To move the Indian toward economic self-support, including restoration of lands, credit and training.
2. To speed final settlement of Indian tribal claims against the government.
3. To establish civil liberty.
4. To promote conservation of natural resources in Indians' hands.
5. To seek conservation of the Indian social heritage, protection of Indian ceremonial life and reinvigoration of their arts and crafts.
6. To decentralize Indian administration and to recruit talent especially suited to administration of the Indian service.

The federal Indian office now spends around $33,000,000 a year and has 8,412 positions—many filled by Indians. Indian education annually costs approximately $10,000,000 and approximately $5,000,000 goes each

H. G. WELLS DISCUSSES NEGRO IN "COMMON WAR AND PEACE AIM"

JAN 7 1941

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(SNS)—Saturday's Memphis Press-Scimitar, liberal local daily, carried an article by the eminent English writer, H. G. Wells, (perhaps best known to many younger Memphians as the man who wrote the script for the motion pictures, "Things To Come," and "The World of Tomorrow"). The article, entitled "Common War and Peace Aim," was Mr. Wells' introduction to an 11-point document drafted by a British committee as a result of a discussion. The document is entitled "The Declaration of Human Rights."

In his introduction, in Saturday's papar, Mr. Wells devoted a portion of his space to the subject of the Negro. Under the head of "Negro Rights Recognized," Mr. Wells wrote:

"When we turn to the Negro, we are faced with the scepticism of a better disillusionment. The story of the Negro in the new world and in the old alike is a story to shame the whole white race....a race. It is natural and understandable that many colored men in America and Africa should grow up with a feeling that all white men are in a conspiracy against them to keep them down and under. But it is not true. They point to the fine propositions of the American Declaration of Independence, and remind us of the days of slavery.

"All over the world black men still suffer from hostile discrimination. But indeed those still only partly realized assertions of the Declaration of Independence have been a power for good. They ranked in men's consciences, and bore belated fruits. The heroic lives and sacrifices of the American Abolitionists are on record to

THREE NOTABLE ADDRESSES

JAN 24 1941

By Emmett J. Scott

Washington, D. C.—Three notable addresses were made here in Washington last week Each sought to stress, and, more definitely, to define this thing we call democracy.

They each came from high quarters—from President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and a high-ranking Member of the United States Senate.

In substance and form and eloquence of statement, the three addresses rank high, very high.

Coming from such high quarters they deservedly challenged the attention of the country and the world. They dealt with the fundamental concepts of our democracy, and were surcharged with patriotic purpose and social vision.

They set forth ideas and ideals, which, if lived up to, would bring about in this country of ours, a philosophy of living, a way of peace, and, in truth and in fact, a "government dedicated to the proposition that the rich and the poor alike stand upon common ground; that each has equal rights as well as equal opportunities; and that, each is entitled to the full protection of his government in the preservation of the priceless rights and privileges of citizenship."

Racial Prejudices and Bigotries

The realization of these ideals in America is now prevented mainly by racial prejudices and bigotries. These prejudices and bigotries fall with threatening impact day by day, year in and year out, upon the hapless heads of the great masses of one particular group of our American citizenship—the Negro group.

Chief Justice Hughes spoke with accustomed bluntness when, in his address, calling for the improvement of human relations in America he said, that "liberty cannot be preserved by majority rule unless the majority hold sacred basic individual rights regardless of race or creed." so that there may be "an abiding sense of human dignity and worth—and friendly cooperation in pursuit of common ideals of justice."

In further comment, and following up this thought, he emphasized the fact that "rancor and bigotry, racial animosity and intolerance are wholly incompatible with that cooperation because they undermine the very foundations of democratic effort.

The Consent of the Governed

In his address to the nation, Mr. Roosevelt referred to the totalitarian dictators as seeking to set up a "new order," and, by implication, spoke of our country as having a government "based upon the consent of the governed."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the third notable to speak during the week, declared that "while we sympathize with the oppressed and persecuted peoples of the world, we realize that we have great problems at home; that one-third of our population is ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad. We have been told repeatedly," he said, "upon the highest authority that unless and until, this situation is corrected our democracy is endangered."

The thesis of his remarks revolved around the sentiment that we should settle our own problems before we undertake to settle the problems of Asia, Africa, Australia, South America and Europe. He declared that the best way to safeguard our independence and freedom in America is to set our own house in order.

Indians In America Are Making Progress Toward Cultural Aims

JAN 26 1941

Numbers Are Increasing And Members Of Race Contributing Vastly To U. S. Accomplishments

BY WALTER R. BOTTCHER

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The American Indian not only is making a liar out of those who called his a dying race, but he is steadily moving toward a wholly self-supporting status.

The Indian population in the United States rose in 1940 to 361,816, a 6.2 per cent gain over 1930 and a long step up from the 270,000 of the 1900 census.

Four and a half centuries ago, when pale-face conquerors first came to North America, 846,000 Indians are estimated to have roamed over what now is the United States.

The once great Indian empire—all but obliterated by governmental administration which Secretary of War Stanton in 1862 called a "sink of iniquity"—now is composed of 200 tribes with landed estates totaling 54,839,278 acres in 24 states.

Floyd W. Larouche, field representative of the Indian Service, says:

"There has come a resurgence of Indian culture, economy and spirit . . . the fruits of which no man can accurately foretell."

"Instead of being at the end of the trail, as the sculptor saw him a few decade ago, the Indian now is entering a new and auspicious era—one in which he has more to hope for than at any time since the white man landed on this continent."

JAN 26 1941

More than 12,000 of them volunteered for service during the World War, and all native-born Indians were made citizens by Congress in recognition of their patriotism by an act that automatically subjected them to the conscription statute of 1940.

Since the last tomahawk was laid aside a half-century ago, the redman has contributed figures like the late Will Rogers, humorist and actor; the late Charles Curtis, vice president of the United States; the late Zane Gray, author of many Western novels; Acee Blue Eagle, noted artist, and Jim Thorpe, gridiron immortal and Olympics champion.

But it JAN 26 1941 the public consciousness of Indian needs, aroused during the past decade and a half" that Larouche traces "the essential foundation for the Indian's new era."

The Indian reorganization act of 1934, now the basic law of Indian administration, "grew out of a long crusade," he says, adding:

"Investigations and revelations of public spirited men and women in the early 1920's led to an impartial inquiry by the Institute for Government Research. Under the direction of Lewis Merriman, a comprehensive report was published and led to significant improvements in Indian administration in 1929."

Later a complete legislative reversal of 50-year-old policies was successfully urged by President Roosevelt, who said in requesting adoption of the 1934 law:

"Certainly the continuance of autocratic rule by a federal department . . . is incompatible with American ideals of liberty. It is also destructive of the character and self-respect of a great race."

John Collier, long an advocate of Indian reform, was made Indian commissioner in 1933. He defined his objectives as:

1. To move the Indian toward economic self-support, including restoration of lands, credit and training.
2. To speed final settlement of Indian tribal claims against the government.
3. To establish civil liberty.
4. To promote conservation of natural resources in Indians' hands.
5. To seek conservation of the Indian social heritage, protection of Indian ceremonial life and reinvigoration of their arts and crafts.
6. To decentralize Indian administration and to recruit talent especially suited to administration of the Indian service.

The federal Indian office now spends around $33,000,000 a year and has 8,412 positions—many filled by Indians. Indian education annually costs approximately $10,000,000 and approximately $5,000,000 goes each

H. G. WELLS DISCUSSES NEGRO IN "COMMON WAR AND PEACE AIM"

JAN 7 1941

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(SNS)—Saturday's Memphis Press-Scimitar, liberal local daily, carried an article by the eminent English writer, H. G. Wells, (perhaps best known to many younger Memphians as the man who wrote the script for the motion pictures, "Things To Come," and "The World of Tomorrow"). The article, entitled "Common War and Peace Aim," was Mr. Wells' introduction to an 11-point document drafted by a British committee as a result of a discussion. The document is entitled "The Declaration of Human Rights."

In his introduction, in Saturday's papar, Mr. Wells devoted a portion of his space to the subject of the Negro. Under the head of "Negro Rights Recognized," Mr. Wells wrote:

"When we turn to the Negro, we are faced with the scepticism of a better disillusionment. The story of the Negro in the new world and in the old alike is a story to shame the whole white race....a race. It is natural and understandable that many colored men in America and Africa should grow up with a feeling that all white men are in a conspiracy against them to keep them down and under. But it is not true. They point to the fine propositions of the American Declaration of Independence, and remind us of the days of slavery.

"All over the world black men still suffer from hostile discrimination. But indeed those still only partly realized assertions of the Declaration of Independence have been a power for good. They ranked in men's consciences, and bore belated fruits. The heroic lives and sacrifices of the American Abolitionists are on record to

JAN 24 1941

By Emmett J. Scott

Washington, D. C.—Three notable addresses were made here in Washington last week Each sought to stress, and, more definitely, to define this thing we call democracy.

They each came from high quarters—from President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and a high-ranking Member of the United States Senate.

In substance and form and eloquence of statement, the three addresses rank high, very high.

Coming from such high quarters they deservedly challenged the attention of the country and the world. They dealt with the fundamental concepts of our democracy, and were surcharged with patriotic purpose and social vision.

MAR 1 1941

PETERSBURG, Va.—"Young people in this country must decide whether we really know what we mean by democracy; whether we really care about democracy as we have it now and as we hope to make it grow in our country so that we are willing to live for it and fight for it, just as ardently as the young people in other parts of the world are living, fighting and dying for the forms of government that they believe in."

This challenge was sounded by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Sunday, when she spoke at Virginia State College. Ironically enough only a handful of whites heard the First Lady because of a State law prohibiting the mixing of the races in public gatherings.

Continuing further, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I know that some of you will tell me that there are many things in this country today that do not make it a true democratic nation and I will not contradict you because I know it is so. But there is one thing here which I think you must acknowledge to be true: there is more hope in this nation through education and the power of the people to control the government of it becoming a true democracy than any other country in the world."

Negroes and Whites "Get Together"

MAR 15 1941

In the past few years I have attended numerous interracial meetings where whites exclaim in their remarks to Negroes, "We must get together." How oft those words are repeated, yet the meaning is attached thereto is vague.

When shall whites and Negroes get together, and what relationship will this so-called union assume?

From past observations, too many times when whites and Negroes form some type of good-will pact, it was achieved at the expense of the remaining Negro people.

A few would meet in seclusion with a committee of our group during heated political campaigns or just prior to election, make many promiseh, pat the members of the committee on their backs, drop a few coins in their hands, possibly pass around a drink and the committee departed in the belief that at least they had arrived.

Once among themselves, they divided the spoils and went among th people spreading the news to vote for some particular candidate for office as "he will give us what we need."

Many are deceived by this proceedure and when their needs become acute, repeat the promises that have been made to them of no avail.

Another time when whites and Negroes have gotten together is when members of our group pour into their listening ears all of the sordid happenings among Negroes.

MAR 15 1941

Other occasions when whites and Negroes have been together are when Negroes put on the fool act for their amusement or when the lesser classes of whites and Negroes satisfy their lust in the company of each other under the cover of night.

Are these the desirable conditions under which the two races should meet?

No, in looking into the future we as a race want the friendship of whites and Negroes cemented only under those stimuli calling forth the best in both races.

When whites and blacks can work side by side in the path in which malice, hatred, envy and prejudice have been obliterated, we shall say then we are "getting together."

At the dawn of the day or age when the American races view calmly the ills of this great commonwealth and with an unbiased attitude approach the problems with a willingness to solve them for the greatest good of all America, then truly will we be accomplishing that long forseen Utopia of "getting together."

Let's get together in the things that count. What are they? First let us extend the privileges of this democracy to those of all colors and creeds denied them. Let us make the problems of the less fortunate of all races of this nation our fight. Only when we have emerged victoriously should we have the nerve to sing "God Bless America."

The Alien Problem

Since the Immigration and Naturalization Departments were transferred from the Department of Labor to the Department of Justice more attention has been given the problem of undesirable aliens than at any previous time, probably, in the Nation's history. The transfer occurred a few months ago, and since then a thoroughgoing survey of the undesirable alien situation has been under way.

It has progressed far enough now for Attorney General Jackson to reveal that there are now 8091 deportation warrants outstanding, and that of that number 3947 cannot be executed because the native countries of the deportees refuse to accept them, and 2302 because transportation cannot be arranged. One of the weaknesses of present immigration laws is that there cannot be deportation if the country of origin refuses to accept the deportee.

General Jackson believes that the time is past when the Government should have to depend entirely on deportation proceedings to rid the communal scene of undesirable aliens. For that reason he has recommended that the Congress find other means of handling them and suggests confinement pending actual deportation. He asks, and wisely, for realistic revision of immigration laws and further recommends that membership in the Nazi Bund or Communist Party by an alien be classified as a deportable offense.

There is pending before the Congress the so-called Hobbs Bill which endeavors to solve some of the undesirable alien problems, but on the matter of confinement of criminal classes it does not go far enough, for it permits a 90-day period of grace for the deportee after a deportation warrant is issued before confinement can be ordered.

Under present world conditions, some circumstances are beyond the control of the deportee even though he would be willing to leave rather than undergo confinement. The willingness of the country of origin to accept an alien ordered deported should not be a factor in relation to confinement. If the alien happened to be an enemy agent it might serve his native country to refuse deportation acceptance on the theory that the longer he was compelled to remain in the United States the more work he could do for those he was serving.

American involvement in the European conflict, despite all the changes which have occurred and the Government's frank alignment with the democratic Allies, has not yet reached the point where the term "enemy-alien" is being used, but that it will be reached is almost inevitable. It is encouraging to learn that someone with the vast power held by the Attorney General is thinking in realistic terms of defense against the particular class even before the enemy-alien classification is acknowledged.

WHEN Senator Wheeler said that the passing of the "Lend-Lease Bill" would project this country into war and result in "the plowing under of every fourth American boy, a storm of indignation was stirred up. The President said that such a statement was "dastardly." Maybe it was and perhaps another war would not plow under every fourth American boy but this much we know here and now. Every twelfth American boy is already plowed under and there has been no surge of indignation about it. The American colored boy is already plowed under. He is plowed under by the crushing practices and customs of this land. He is not dead from bullet wounds, but he does not have very much to live for and for all beneficial purposes he is plowed under.

Robert Maynard Hutchins last week exclaimed: "Today in America we do not permit men to die of starvation but neither do we give them an incentive to live." The colored American boy has no great incentive to live in this country. He does not share in the "four great freedoms" of this great Democracy; he does not have an equality of opportunity and in planning his future we run into abysmal darkness and Stygian espair. He is plowed under.

STIRS THE SOUL

WHEN the President is flanked by George of Georgia, Byrnes of South Carolina, Barkley of Kentucky, Harrison of Mississippi, Pepper of Florida and Glass of Virginia, what chance has the youth of color in America? It stirs the soul to hear all the pungent and penetrating talk about Democracy but the colored youth in this country knows as much about it as he does about the fifth dimension and the theory of relativity. We have been soothed by the syrups of deceit and lulled into false security. We are now basking and reveling in the paradise of fools.

We have no Democracy in America for the submerged one-twelfth and that is why every writer, every columnist and scribbler for the colored press, almost every week, is contending against this sham and farce. They had better keep it up now and wage war against it with a withering fire of words because if war is declared they will be ignomiously muzzled. Espionage laws will be re-invoked and every time a writer or speaker raises his voice or pen he will be slapped in jail. We must fight on this front until we are mowed down.

HAS INSTINCT TO LIVE

THE American colored boy will be plowed under until he can vote in the South, until he can enlist in all the departments of the War, Navy and Air, until he is not disfranchised socially, economically and politically. He will be plowed under as long as American industry bars him, as long as labor laws cut him out and as long as he is taxed without representation. As long as these evils endure he will have no incentive to live.

The reason that he is not already buried is because the instinct to live is stronger than the instinct to die. His condition is a shameful disgrace and a dastardly injustice. Some of this bombastic talk about "Democracy" may result in breaking down barriers here and there but as it stands now he lives in a half world and feasts off of the crumbs of civilization and remains plowed under.

When we make our interest count for more by constant agitation there will be changes but not until then. Ethiopia was plowed under but when Ethiopian interests became entangled with those of England, Ethiopia began to creep from under the sod and stretch forth its hands. That is what we are doing today. We are stretching forth our hands.

Dr. Gallagher Sees Need of Change From Old Order To Better Way For Present Era

FEB 15 1941

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 30 (ANP) —The January issue of "Social Action," monthly magazine published by the Council for Social Action of the Congregational Christian churches, is devoted to an article by Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, preisdent of Talladega college.

FEB 15 1941

Entitled, "The American Caste System," Dr. Gallagher's article traces the growth of the pattern of racial attitudes existing in America today giving special emphasis to the position of the Negro in the American pattern.

MODERN FARMER

Believing that prejudice against the American Negro is an acquired cultural pattern rather than an inherent attitude, the author sets out to list a procedure which might affect a change in the "immoral caste system."

Dr. Gallagher has been president of Talladega since 1933, and, as Edwin R. Embree states in his foreword, "is devoting his life to trying to bring real independence to Negroes, and to creating an atmosphere where there will be fair opportunities for all the diverse peoples who make up our nation."

He concludes: "We must know the various possibilities of racial realignment and make an ethical choice between these alternatives.. .....We must discover significant points at which to begin to work in effecting a change. The Christian must address himself to this task as a Christian, not as a member of a given racial group or as a resident of a certain section of a nation for it is clear that the lines of separation are not geographical or racial; they are human.

"The caste system will be broken only if we break it. We have a Christian obligation to release our minds, our energies, our time and our money fir this couse. In a warfare of this sort, there can be no neutral ground. He that is not for us is against us!"

An Alibi, Not a Reason

FEB 28 1941

In a large measure race prejudice in the United States is due to lack of acquaintance, which fades the moment the races get close enough to see each other's good points. The great cordiality and easy cooperation which obtains now among the youth in all parts of the country proves how easy accord can supplant race prejudice.

Already the lives of individuals point the way to that happy day. Writing to the CALL about its advertising manager, Earl Wilkins, who passed from labor a few weeks ago, Nat S. Finney, feature editor of the Minneapolis daily Star Journal, who knew him when they were in school, said:

"I think all of us here who knew him felt some sense of personal loss. To us Earl was a most unusual person. He had qualities that caused us to regard him with pride as an example of what a man may be if he has the essentials, intelligence and character.

"We agreed that Earl commanded our admiration by the manner in which he carried the burden of his social handicap of race. He did this so gracefully that I am sure that in our contacts with him we rarely gave a thought to his race. He seemed to have found some philosophy that made his burden seem non-existent to him and somehow that attitude was reflected in us.

Nothing more could have been said in praise of Wilkins had he been of the bluest blood of Boston's back bay. In fact the compliment is the higher because he had environment to overcome.

The same lesson is for all of us to learn, namely that we have an individual task to do to be worth while, which we cannot avoid by any excuse on earth, even race prejudice. It may meet us on our advent into the world and success with excuse for failure on the ure, we put forward race prejudice as an excuse, we become contemptible in follow us to the place where we are beaten before we buried, but in between we must take ip of the tongue.

the talents given us, be they one or five, and make good use of them. It is according as we use them that we do for ourselves and make opportunity for our people.

On the other hand, if for every failure, if for every race prejudice as an excuse, we become contemptible in the eyes of others, beaten before we start. A savage trembling in the jungle before the forces of nature because

Believing that prejudice against the American Negro is an acquired cultural pattern rather than an inherent attitude, the author sets out to list a procedure which might affect a change in the "immoral caste system."

Dr. Gallagher has been president of Talladega since 1933, and, as Edwin R. Embree states in his foreword, "is devoting his life to trying to bring real independence to Negroes, and to creating an atmosphere where there will be fair opportunities for all the diverse peoples who make up our nation."

He concludes: "We must know the various possibilities of racial realignment and make an ethical choice between these alternatives.. .....We must discover significant points at which to begin to work in effecting a change. The Christian must address himself to this task as a Christian, not as a member of a given racial group or as a resident of a certain section of a nation for it is clear that the lines of separation are not geographical or racial; they are human.

"The caste system will be broken only if we break it. We have a Christian obligation to release our minds, our energies, our time and our money fir this couse. In a warfare of this sort, there can be no neutral ground. He that is not for us is against us!"

An Alibi, Not a Reason

FEB 28 1941

In a large measure race prejudice in the United States is due to lack of acquaintance, which fades the moment the races get close enough to see each other's good points. The great cordiality and easy cooperation which obtains now among the youth in all parts of the country proves how easy accord can supplant race prejudice.

Already the lives of individuals point the way to that happy day. Writing to the CALL about its advertising manager, Earl Wilkins, who passed from labor a few weeks ago, Nat S. Finney, feature editor of the Minneapolis daily Star Journal, who knew him when they were in school, said:

"I think all of us here who knew him felt some sense of personal loss. To us Earl was a most unusual person. He had qualities that caused us to regard him with pride as an example of what a man may be if he has the essentials, intelligence and character.

"We agreed that Earl commanded our admiration by the manner in which he carried the burden of his social handicap of race. He did this so gracefully that I am sure that in our contacts with him we rarely gave a thought to his race. He seemed to have found some philosophy that made his burden seem non-existent to him and somehow that attitude was reflected in us.

Nothing more could have been said in praise of Wilkins had he been of the bluest blood of Boston's back bay. In fact the compliment is the higher because he had environment to overcome.

The same lesson is for all of us to learn, namely that we have an individual task to do to be worth while, which we cannot avoid by any excuse on earth, even race prejudice. It may meet us on our advent into the world and follow us to the place where we are buried, but in between we must take us as we are, be they one or five, and make good use of them. It is according as we use them that we do for ourselves and make opportunity for our people.

On the other hand, if for every failure, if for every race prejudice as an excuse, we become contemptible in beaten before we use them that we make opportunity for our people.

A STARTLING COMPARISON

THE NATION article, "Nazi Plan for Negroes," by Hans Habe has created a considerable although unwarranted stir among thinking Negroes.

It is startling only in its comparison to the American Plan for Negroes; the difference being that the Nazis are PLANNING to do it while the United States has largely done it.

Consider the first point, that Negroes are inferior and have a "place." What a familiar sound that has, especially after our efforts to get defense jobs for our people! While American Negroes may hotly deny it, the fact remains that they do have a fairly well defined "place" in American life, and it isn't on top.

The second point, the barring of Negroes from free choice of trades and professions because it will lead to social assimilation is also an important part not only of the American credo, but the Canadian, Australian, South African and British credoes, and explains why the bulk of Negroes are domestic workers, farmers or laborers.

The banning of so-called racial intermarriage is the law in two-thirds of our States and is frowned upon elsewhere, even by Negroes.

The disfranchisement of non-white peoples in the colonial empire the Nazi HOPE to control, is already the policy in the colonial empires the "democratic" nations ALREADY control. Five-sixths of American Negroes are disfranchised.

The segregation in and exclusion of Negroes from places of public accommodation in the so-called New Germany, strikes a very familiar note to all Aframericans except the small minority in the far North and East and Northwest.

The barring of Negroes from the National Socialist party seems strikingly similar to the same practice by the Democratic party in its Southern stronghold.

There is no doubt that Hitlerism is a menace to the Negro, but there is a Hitlerism much closer to us that should claim most of our attention.

Sometimes it seems as if some diabolical Nazi had been spying on America for ideas about oppressing minorities. Certainly the two "plans" have very few points of difference.

ORDAINED MINISTER TOLD NOT TO RETURN

MAR 15 1941

MEMPHIS, Mar. 13—(By ANP)—After being held in jail here for 14 days without formal charge, Edward Thos. McGuire, white, 25-year-old minister of a religious sect which he says promotes racial equality, was released Saturday and told to "vamoose."

City Inspector Hinds said McGuire was arrested because "he had been hanging around town all hours of the night, frequenting Negro houses and establishments and generally acting in a suspicious manner."

McGuire exhibited a paper purporting to be his certificate of ordination as a minister in the Church of God in Christ and said: "The real reason for my being treated so, I believe, is because of my religious faith which promotes racial equality. After I came to Memphis January 17 from Michigan, I conducted services in several Negro churches. At some of them I preached to congregations which included both Negroes and whites of our faith.

"Police thought I was an alien because I had a passport and seaman's papers in my belongings. The passport was one I had prepared in 1937 so I could take a trip to Switzerland—I never did get to go."

Inspector Hinds commented: "We held him without charge until investigation by our office and the FBI indicated he was not wanted at other places. We didn't have any charge against him except vagrancy. I released him and warned him to get out of Memphis and never come back."

Mr. McGuire charged he had been held incommunicado and without cause since police entered his room at the Blackwell hotel on Feb. 13 and took him to police headquarters for investigation.

As soon as he could get transportation McGuire said he planned to leave town.

Urges Negroes To Mingle With Biased Whites

MAR 22 1941

To the Tribune Editor:

Every now and then we hear someone say, " prejudice is getting worse in America." Yet no time was ever more propitious for winning the battle for tolerance. The difficulty is that there are too many completely "inferiorized" Negroes, the "appeasers and defeatists" in positions of leadership today.

Under the New Deal many educated Negroes have been employed as racial mediators. Some of them were fighters before and have since valiantly sought to protect the interests of Negroes; others have suffered complete muzzlement. A lot of them have been less effective in achieving status for the race than were those old-line political appointees of past adminstrations whom they criticized. They draw a good salary, but thir jobs might just as well be held by members of other racial groups for all the good they do.

Some of them are positive deterrents to racial programs in government. They shy away from real problems and fritter away their time making studies and surveys. An evidence of the timidity which encompasses many Negro employees in relatively secure tenure is seen in the failure to attend bi-racial meetings, interracial dinners or mixed athletic competitions, or to speak on any but "safe" or noncontroversial subjects

Seek Real Democracy

Many liberal social workers and the so-called radical fringe of young people are trying to make democracy work by reducing racial barriers. Some Negroes are too timid to eat with white people in the various hostelries. They rationalize thir inferiority feeling by declining to go where they are not otherwise invited to attend. Yet how many are often invited to, and do attend public meetings in private homes of their race where they are not invited on a pesonal basis.

One of the best ways to break down racial prejudice is by mingling with people who have prejudices, and who are unused to, and who have few contacts with Negroes. Negroes should attend and participate in all interracial luncheons and dinner meetings to which they are invited. Our intelligentsia should also frequent interracial sport contests and encourage these events. It was heartening to Walter White, "Bill" Hastie and others at the recent Bruin-Brewers basket ball game.

Too many white people know very well only Negroes of the Uncle Tom type. If our better classes shrink from meetings because of timidity, the race suffers. Of course some Negroes give evidence of innate inferiority by a show of over-appreciation of Negro-White relationships.

Eventually, however, if we persist in being seen at bi-racial meetings, we will be able to frequent lunch counters and other places where today we find ourselves unwanted and barred. Someday, the Supreme Court, since Reynolds is gone, is going to make unconstitutional these racial obstacles to civil liberties. Some day there will be no such an expensive undemocratic institution as separate schools.

Let us not be mourning the spread of prejudice. Let's help the N.A.A.C.P., N.N.A, and other friends break down these undemocratic practices of segregation. Let us help the liberals, and true Christians of which there still are a few. The time to begin this battle will never be earlier, nor more strategically sounder than now. Every successful attack upon Jim Crowism is a battle won in the war for Democracy and National Unity. This is no time for appeasers and defeatists in the Negro race.

THE MARCH ON WASHINGTON

MAR 22 1941

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, proposes a movement to stage a mass protest against discrimination in defense industry jobs by having 10,000 Negro from all parts of the country participating in a protest parade in the Nation's capital. Mr. Randolph rightly observes that such a march would focus national attention on the condition confronting the Negro in this country and the high percentage of unemployed in his ranks despite the billions our government is spending for national defense.

In the last issue of The New York Age, Oswald Garrison Villard, veteran liberal, grandson of the noted abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison, and one time editor of The Nation and former chairman of the Board of Trustees of Manassas (Va.) Industrial Institute for Negroes, had a most interesting letted in "Land Of The Noble Free," the column conducted by Miss Layle Lane, in which he pointed out the faults of the Negro in this counrty. Chief among these faults were enumerated a lack of unity and the failure to follow the right kind of leadership. Said Mr. Villard:

> "The Negroes need a Ghandi . . . 13,000,000 Americans with a just cause, determined to get their Constitutional rights, justice and fair play could turn this country upside down until they got those rights—if they had the stamina, the solidarity, the leadership to engage in legal and non-violent agitation."

This letter, coupled with Mr. Randolph's suggestion, offers a challenge to the Negroe of the country. If such organizations a the Elks, the N. A. A. C. P., the Nationa Negro Congress and other national group (including the Negro religious denomina tions) fall in line with Mr. Randolph's sug gestion and stage the March on Washington they would not only prove that the Negro is determined to get fair play in the matter of jobs but also that we can stand together and put up a united front for a just cause.

We think Mr. Randolph's suggestion an excellent one and hope that it will be speedily acted upon.

The Negro And Good Citizenship

By DR. J. A. JAMIESON

EVER SINCE the Emancipation Proclamation was issued there has been a race problem or rather the Negro race has had a problem. I wonder if there will ever be a time when there will cease to exist a racial problem. There are those who believe that it will eventually solve itself by some form of adjustment.

The slogan of the Pittsburgh Courier, in its campaign to break down prejudice is, "Educate White People." Can we successfully bring about any good by turning out en-masse TO EDUCATE WHITE PEOPLE? Why is the White man prejudiced against the Negro? Do all White people feel the same toward the Negro? Or, are some forced to be so because of fear—fear of certain individuals, fear of certain organization, or fear of certain factions of people? This writer read in an issue of the Liberty Magazine a very interesting article, under the heading "IS THE KLAN COMING BACK?" This article written by Hiram W. Evans, who is designated as the Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, should be read by every individual interested in the so called "Race Problem."

He states therein, the reason that his organization is intolerant of the Negro race is not based on racial hatred or on the question of native birth or religious belief. It is based, he says, on breeding principles. At present there is much inter-marrying between the White and Black races—especially in the East. The Klan professes to believe that unless this "unnatural" mating is stopped the American whites are doomed to lose their identiffcation.

But aside from this and other antagonistic views, why are we segregated from certain residential sections in the cities and communities? Why are we Jim Crowed on public vehicles for transportation, in public buildings? Is it because we are Negroes?

In a recent issue of the American Magazine, Mr. Paul Williams, a Negro associate architect in the F.H.A. set-up, tells how he has, in establishing himself in business and building for himself a reputation as an architect and not as a Negro, overcome a lot of the obstacles of race prejudice and built for himself the reputation as an individual who has achieved distinction in his particular field. But we need not go to California to select a Mr. Paul Williams as an example. We see men every day who are respected by white and black alike and who are making their way not as Negroes, but as individuals.

After looking into the lives of the innumerable Negroes who have taken their places among the greats of the nation, I have reached the conclusion (as stated in the outset of this article) that this "Race Problem" is entirely the Negro's.—Ours to solve when it is solved. I firmly believe that instead of educating the white man, we must educate the Negro. We can demand respect only as we prepare ourselves to live respectable lives, as intelligent citizens, attaining, as far as possible, economic independence.

The education of the Negro in the strictest sense of the term will prove a power whose force is unrestricted, a power that knows no color, race, nor creed, a power demanding and getting a full measure of respect, and a good citizenship.

Let us as a race, forget the fact that we are Negroes and prepare ourselves to take our places in this civilization, not as Negroes, but as men, and GOOD CITIZENS.

RED MEN ALIENS? 194

Every race in the United States enjoys religious freedom except the American Indian! Recently in a Northern State the Red Indian was designated as an "alien." These insulting, gross injustices to the only living, original "pure Americans" were related in an illustrated lecture last week in New York City by Dr. Barnabas S'hiuhushu, spoke as a guest of the New York Chapter of AMRC, Inc., The Rosicrucian Ord

Highlights of intense interest included the following:

"The Red Race of America had secret societies, or orders, modeled along the Ancient Craft, and another order of America of the White Race; or at least similar, insofar as observing rituals inculcating the principles of 'Freedom, Friendship, Brotherly Love, Charity and Reverence to a Divine Power, the Big Holy One, or the Great Mystery.'

Far from being "savages," the Indians had their own high form of intelligent civilization based upon their being "children of Nature." They had no crime problem and no prisons, and insanity among them was a thing unknown. Today, white civilization is burdened with innumerable prisons and insane asylums.

Never Broke Treaties

Once the Red man made a treaty with the White Men, they never broke it; the WHITE Men ALWAYS broke it FIRST. During the early period of American history, the French, in order to subdue the Indians, burned three million bushels of corn!, trying to starve them out. After being robbed of his lands, the Indian today must buy back what he rightfully owns.

After subduing the Indians, the whites began to "Christianize" them, forbidding them under severe penalty to worship their God as they pleased. The whites came from Europe to escape religious persecution, but immediately became persecutors themselves. For a long while, the United States Government strictly forbid the Red Men to speak their own language among themselves.

This was even true at Carlisle (Indian) University. However, the ban on their own language was finally lifted, mainly for the purpose of teaching the Indians so-called Christianity. There have always been Indian scholars, even before the discovery of America. Before the white man came, they practiced a form of government which they today call Democracy.

Far from being a dying race, as the white man would have us believe, there are thirty million Red Indians residing in Canada alone, (being twice the Negro population of the United States).

Speaks for Her Race

Editor, The Telegraph:

Where do we stand? In this day of trying times we must take a stand. What will be our decision?

FEB 1 1 1941

Here we are about to be surrounded with more than 10,000 soldiers. This seems to present a problem to the citizens of Macon why should it, when we have such good, wise Christian men and women in our city?

The things Major Kennard said about dives, juke joints, etc., in and around Macon are as true as God lives. Its citizens, we must face these facts. Major Kennard gave the battle cry, the Reverends Baker and Trimmer heard the cry and gave forth the signal to fight in their Sunday morning radio addresses, Feb. 2. Many of the good white Christian women and others stood ready to carry the banner forward.

I am speaking as a colored citizen about the conditions existing among my race of people here. Vice, liquor dives and juke joints really exist among them. I am not blaming or condemning the police or sheriff's force for I believe, we have some of the best and most efficient officers of the law in the United States. There are some things they cannot cope with, because they do not have the cooperation of the people in the community. It is up to the good citizens of Macon to help clean up these breeding places of vice and all must give their utmost cooperation. I am not attempting to correct the conditions of the white race in Macon, because there is no reason in the world why they, with all their intelligence and advantages could not easily cope with their vice if there is any existing among them. I am only writing about the conditions existing among my race in this great city and we will continue to have them unless we cooperate together.

We are now wondering what steps to take to guard these young men who are about to enter our city for one year of training. Let us stop to think. We love them as we love our own, but too much privilege isn't good for any young man.

They are now talking about opening picture shows on Sunday. I believe there should be no Sunday movies and all joints in and around town should be closed on Sundays. Instead, the doors of the church should be opened wide morning and afternoon. We should stop and think when we talk of so much recreation for the soldiers. They are going to camp for one year of training and it should be a year of real training, both physically and mentally.

Why should there be so much recreation for them in town? Shows, amusement and such recreation should be provided for them at camp. If the colored soldiers are looking for recreation in Macon, it is not to be found. With all due respect to the colored recreational community centers in Macon, which I have visited, there is no equipment to take care of the little ones, who are supposed to grow up physically strong and healthy. I think before our colored citizens invite the soldiers for recreation, someone should see the equipment and sanitary conditions that exist at these places.

DR. GANDY BLASTS 'DARKY' STORY

ATLANTA, Feb. 13 (ANP)—Before delegates attending the Southern Conference of Agricultural Workers in the Savoy Hotel ballroom, a young white man from Virginia, addressing the conference, referred to an experience he had with a "darky" on his father's plantation.

The next speaker scheduled to address the conference was Dr. G. M. Gandy, president Virginia State College, Petersburg. The effective manner in which Dr. Gandy registered his disapproval and condemnation will long be remembered by the young white Virginian. Dr. Gandy said, upon being introduced, "I am insulted by remarks of the previous speaker. He claims to be from Virginia, but I assure you that he does not represent the best people in Virginia. The best people of my state do not refer to colored people as 'darkies.' I am too indignant to make a speech," and took his seat.

This was not only a "spanking" for the individual responsible but it served as an object lesson for the rest of the white persons in attendance.

Those who observed the humiliation of this young man were of the opinion that he would never make that mistake again.

Catholic Editor Deplores Economic, Social Isolation Of Colored Group

JAN 30 194

SIGNS are not lacking that thoughtful white Americans are becoming cognizant of the threat to American democracy involved in the nation's treatment of its colored citizens; and here and there "voices in the wilderness" are heard calling the United States of America to change its course in this respect.

It is the duty of colored citizens, wherever these champions of true democracy appear, to let them know that we are not unmindful nor lacking in appreciation for their insistence upon fair treatment and our complete integration into American life.

Taking our own advice, we are reprinting below an editorial which appeared in "The Catholic Standard and Times", a Philadelphia newspaper, within the past two weeks, under the caption "A Loss to Democracy":

"The recent admission by an army officer that Negro draftees are discriminated against has once more brought to the fore the fact that the American Negro is not only excluded from the economic culture of our society, but that he is isolated socially. In an address to the Yale Graduate Sociology Club, Dr. Edwin R. Embree, of Chicago, a few days ago said, 'Our attitude toward this race is a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy. So long as we degrade one segment of the people, we set a pattern of caste and discrimination that may easily be transferred to other groups.' This is a charge that cannot be lightly dismissed, and it is the more serious in these days when we are proclaiming ourselves to the world as the champions of democracy.

"In the Catholic Church there is, of course, no distinction of races. In this country, however, the Church has been handicapped in her work for the Negro by causes beyond her control. Before the Civil War only five per cent of slave-owners were Catholics, and non-Catholic owners would not allow priests to minister to their slaves. The Negro came to look upon religion as an emotional experience only. In recent years the Communists have organized the Negroes for their own ends. Converts to Catholicity have increased only 27 per cent while the Negro population has increased 54 per cent. Here in Philadelphia a great deal of progress has been made, but a far greater deal remains to be done.

"Professor Walter Willigan, of St. John's University, sums up 'that the social, economic and moral regeneration of the Negro depends upon the speed and success of applying the principles of Christian social life to the Negro and his indifferent white brothers'."

Guardian
Boston, Mass.

PROMOTING DEMOCRACY

It was to be expected that Chief Justice Hughes in any discussion of democracy would take high and sure ground. That is what he did in his acceptance address last week to a delegation from the National Conference of Christians and Jews who brought him an award from the conference which lauded his "contribution to the improvement of human relations and advocacy of national unity". The chief justice said in part:

"Popular elections express the will of the people, but back of that will must be the true democratic spirit which alone can save us from the excesses of the rule of force.

"Liberty cannot be conserved by majority rule unless the majority hold sacred basic individual rights regardless of race or creed, so that, along with our differences of view, political and religious, we have a deep and abiding sense of human dignity and worth, and hence of our capacity for friendly co-operation in pursuit of common ideals of justice.

"Rancor and bigotry, racial animosities and intolerance are wholly incompatible with that co-operation. They are the deadly enemies of true democracy, more dangerous than any external force because they undermine the very foundations of democratic effort."

This has been said before, many times; and it needs to be said often in order to promote, as the chief justice declared, "an effective expression of the sentiment which vitalizes our democracy. For more than a century now the country has been complacent about democracy. Much about it was taken for granted. There has been little evidence of a people inclined to interpret and understand the "American dream" and much less inclination to make the dream real and triumphant. And because of the general indifference and complacency, foreign doctrines have seemed more desirable to a growing number of the discontented. Perhaps making the discontented more cynical has been the inspiped and puerile endorsement of democracy by spread eagle words instead of substantial support by deeds that would propel its development.

The threats of the war may be the needed means to rouse the nation from its lethargy. It is time for believers in democracy to be wide awake; for earnestly setting about the job of saving the "American dream" before it is destroyed completely. The weapon against its destruction and the means for its survival are one and the same: speedy and concrete growth. Paradoxically, it has to grow to live! It cannot thrive in soil stony with bigotry and intolerance.

U. S. Far Short of Real Democracy, Eleazer Asserts

This nation fall short of the goal of real democracy when measured by the standard of justice shown certain minorities, R. B. Eleazer, of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation asserted Friday.

This is especially true when the treatment of the Negro is considered, said the commission's educational director in an Emory University chapel address.

Genuine concern for the welfare of the Negro, he observed, "far from violating the traditions of the Old South, is in complete harmony with the best of those traditions which put to shame the neglect, injustice and hostility so common today."

It was Stonewall Jackson, he recalled, who taught a Sunday school class of slaves at First Presbyterian Church in Lexington, Va.; it was General Robert E. Lee who, after the war, twice dispersed mobs threatening Negroes.

Specifically, Eleazer said the Negro today "suffers from widespread political disfranchisement, taxation without representation, marked discrimination in distribution of public benefits, economic exploitation amounting sometimes to peonage and practical slavery, and inadequate legal protection, all supported by a caste system that contradicts everything that democracy stands for."

NOT REAL SOUTH

The fact is that Negroes are treated far better and appreciated far more in Georgia and the South than they are in the North. It is also being established more clearly all the time that conditions such as those described in Burns' stories of Georgia penal life and those pictured in Tobacco Road are to be greatly discounted because of the commercial and other questionable aspects of their authorship purposes—Cairo Messenger.

It has been well said and written, that the white man's prejudice against the Negro, in America, is the ACME of sin among civilized nations. The white man has never accepted his brother in black, as made of one blood, with a common father; entitled to equal rights and opportunities before God and man, to make his way from the bottom to the top of what men achieve; by his personal or race efforts. He will lift himself to the top in all things worthwhile, by his own boot straps, if he is given a free hand to help himself. The manhood of the race, does not ask for special favors, or privileges of the white man of government. The Negro prefers to make it the hard way, that he may develop the wisdom, commonsense, experience, and economy to hold permanently any place in the public regard he may achieve; and to hold intact, all we may gather in religion, spirit, property and rights; as a legacy to be handed down to Negro posterity from generation to generation. These are the rights and opportunities asked for, and the race take care of itself otherwise without offense to man, white or black, or the violation of any law of well established custom.

What the Negro objects to, is discrimination in the administration of the law, and segregation in the public service, on the ground of race and color. The Negro wants conditions to so obtain in the public service and public places, that the white man will feel that the Negro has the same rights there he has, and the Negro will feel the same way about the white man, without fear of molestation by any persons or officials. That the country is the common heritage of all the people, and knows no race or color in the distribution of rights, protection and benefits. Rights, opportunities, privileges and protection are the common property of all, and in their administration, there should be no color line. But race prejudice has superseded the spirit of the declaration of independence; made a mockery of the Bill of Rights and repealed the Federal Constitution and its amendments, wherever the law guaranteed the rights of the Negro in common with the white man; and substituted race hatred and religious intolerance therefor. The white preacher has failed his God, because he has wilfully neglected to warn his people of the sin of race prejudice and religious intolerance; out of fear that the whole truth might end in personal loss to him, in money and personal popularity.

Our white brothers ought to be careful both of what they preach as the gospel of Christ, and what they fail to preach which is his gospel. The Editor entreats them to read their Bible again; turn to the 9th chapter of I Cor. 16th verse, and read what the Apostle Paul said about the gospel of Christ. He said, "for though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity it laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." What gospel was Paul talking about? The gospel of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The white press has done more than any one agency in our national life, to stir up race prejudice and intolerance among the races. Its biggest job has been the fermentation of race hatred. Nationally, it promotes segregation, and feeds discrimination in public places. It never stands up and fights for equal rights for all; its policy is to obscure the Negroes' virtues and parade his vices. If the truth will help the Negro, this press will in a round about way, offer falsehood and misrepresentation to cover the Negroes' better life. For an instant; in the fight between Joe Louis and McCoy, the white press played up McCoy's failure, running his "mug" in order to hide Joe's victory and this is only a sample of the raw deal the white press, which is largely supported by Negroes, places a white man's defeat over a black man's victory.

Racial Lines Banished By $10,000 Fire

Colored, White Turn Firemen At Yorktown

YORKTOWN, Va.—Racial lines were forgotten here in the early morning of December 31, when scores of white and colored citizens cooperated valiantly with firemen in checking the spread of a $10,000 fire which destroyed the old courthouse.

The old historic courtroom was gutted with flames, and all furnishings, including three old and valued portraits were burned. It took three hours, from 2 a. m. to 5 a. m. for the fire departments from Williamsburg, Hilton Village, the Naval Mine Depot and Yorktown, aided by the townspeople, to bring the blaze under control.

The spectacular fire lent color and spectacle to the historic environs where buildings and monuments overlooking the York River tell of the glories and cherished traditions of the nation and Virginia.

Neighbors provided firemen and volunteer workmen with hot coffee as they struggled to keep the blaze from reaching nearby homes and inns.

Mound Builders Disappeared Before Columbus Came

JAN 8 - 1941

By The United Press

WASHINGTON.—A full flowering civilization, not essentially inferior to that of the Aztecs in Mexico or the Mayas in Yucatan, vanished without a trace in North America, probably a few generations before the first landing of Columbus. That is the conclusion of Frank Setzler, head curator of anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution.

His thesis was constructed from such scattered clews as are available in the history of the Hopewellians, mound builders of the Ohio and Upper Mississippi Valleys.

From the results of more than a century of research, Setzler explained in a study published by the institution, a tentative picture can be drawn of the ways of life of this mysterious people.

Construction of the large mounds, the surrounding earthworks and the hundreds of smaller mounds, he said, clearly required a dense population and a well co-ordinated society. This population must have had some stable economic basis.

Extensive Farming Required

"Hunting and fishing, no doubt, were of some importance as evidenced by barracuda jaws and other fish remains and by the representation of birds and animals in realistic carvings on pipes," Setzler said. "But even though direct evidence of maize is lacking, the practice of extensive horticulture must be admitted, because it alone could have supported the large population aggregates in which the Hopewell people obviously lived.

"There must also have been conscription of labor to construct mounds, which are 30 feet high, 150 feet wide, and more than 200 feet long. We do not know what division of labor there was, but the excellence of the art suggests a special craft of sculptors and modelers. To obtain obsidian from the Rocky Mountains, mica from the Southern Appalachians, copper from Wisconsin, and amphibians and fishes from the Gulf of Mexico, required time for exploration.

"Since most of the large mounds were built to cover the bodies of the dead, accomplished by their personal adornments and other objects, one can postulate a well developed ritual associated perhaps with a remarkable religious fervor.

Ruling Class Indicated

"The specific form of government organization cannot be known, but certainly some regimentation is indicated by the great communal works. I incline to deduce, from the widespread influence of these people, that if a select ruling class existed, they dominated a very large portion of the Mississippi Valley. Possibly their political organization was a northern extension of the system that prevailed in Mexico and Yucatan, although very few specimens can be identified with Mexican deities. Copper head ornaments and colored woven garments decorated with fresh water pearls and mica suggest insignia of authority. At least persons with such attire would be set apart."

This strange civilization, Setzler believes, was result of impact of two peoples, probably without definite conquest by either. A survey of the field shows the same culture, but in a simpler form, in the Lower Mississippi Valley and around the Gulf Coast. It appears to have moved northward until it came in contact with a more primitive but apparently vigorous and progressive people.

Then, perhaps by conquest and perhaps by absorption, the inventiveness and energy of the northern Indians and the complex social organization and religious system of the migrants from the south were amalgamated—greatly to the improvement of both.

Seen As Race Apart

No clew has been uncovered, Setzler said, which permits the dating of this development more closely than some time between the beginning of the Christian era and the coming of Columbus. There certainly were no Hopewellians left when the first white hunters and traders came into the Ohio Valley, for not a single artifact of European origin ever has been found in the mounds. In fact, the country was then inhabited by woodland Indians who had no memory of their predecessors, or even legends concerning them.

Some have suggested, he explained, that the mound builders may have turned southward and become the fathers of the highly organized Gulf State tribes encountered by the first white explorers and settlers. This is highly improbable, he said, because all the evidence indicates that the culture spread was in the opposite direction. Later Indian tribes of the northeast showed only superficial resemblances to it, such as might spring naturally from exigencies of life in a similar environment rather than from inheritance or borrowing.

No evidence has been found, he pointed out, which would indicate that any great catastrophe overtook the people. The whole civilization seems to have "faded" into extinction.

It has been well said and written, that the white man's prejudice against the Negro, in America, is the ACME of sin among civilized nations. The white man has never accepted his brother in black, as made of one blood, with a common father; entitled to equal rights and opportunities before God and man, to make his way from the bottom to the top of what men achieve; by his personal or race efforts. He will lift himself to the top in all things worthwhile, by his own boot straps, if he is given a free hand to help himself. The manhood of the race, does not ask for special favors, or privileges of the white man of government. The Negro prefers to make it the hard way, that he may develop the wisdom, commonsense, experience, and economy to hold permanently any place in the public regard he may achieve; and to hold intact, all we may gather in religion, spirit, property and rights; as a legacy to be handed down to Negro posterity from generation to generation. These are the rights and opportunities asked for, and the race take care of itself otherwise without offense to man, white or black, or the violation of any law of well established custom.

What the Negro objects to, is discrimination in the administration of the law, and segregation in the public service, on the ground of race and color. The Negro wants conditions to so obtain in the public service and public places, that the white man will feel that the Negro has the same rights there he has, and the Negro will feel the same way about the white man, without fear of molestation by any persons or officials. That the country is the common heritage of all the people, and knows no race or color in the distribution of rights, protection and benefits. Rights, opportunities, privileges and protection are the common property of all, and in their administration, there should be no color line. But race prejudice has superseded the spirit of the declaration of independence; made a mockery of the Bill of Rights and repealed the Federal Constitution and its amendments, wherever the law guaranteed the rights of the Negro in common with the white man; and substituted race hatred and religious intolerance therefor. The white preacher has failed his God, because he has wilfully neglected to warn his people of the sin of race prejudice and religious intolerance; out of fear that the whole truth might end in personal loss to him, in money and personal popularity.

Our white brothers ought to be careful both of what they preach as the gospel of Christ, and what they fail to preach which is his gospel. The Editor entreats them to read their Bible again; turn to the 9th chapter of I Cor. 16th verse, and read what the Apostle Paul said about the gospel of Christ. He said, "for though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity it laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." What gospel was Paul talking about? The gospel of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The white press has done more than any one agency in our national life, to stir up race prejudice and intolerance among the races. Its biggest job has been the fermentation of race hatred. Nationally, it promotes segregation, and feeds discrimination in public places. It never stands up and fights for equal rights for all; its policy is to obscure the Negroes' virtues and parade his vices. If the truth will help the Negro, this press will in a round about way, offer falsehood and misrepresentation to cover the Negroes' better life. For an instant; in the fight between Joe Louis and McCoy, the white press played up McCoy's failure, running his "mug" in order to hide Joe's victory and this is only a sample of the raw deal the white press, which is largely supported by Negroes, places a white man's defeat over a black man's victory.

Colored, White Turn Firemen At Yorktown

YORKTOWN, Va.—Racial lines were forgotten here in the early morning of December 31, when scores of white and colored citizens cooperated valiantly with firemen in checking the spread of a $10,000 fire which destroyed the old courthouse.

The old historic courtroom was gutted with flames, and all furnishings, including three old and valued portraits were burned. It took three hours, from 2 a. m. to 5 a. m. for the fire departments from Williamsburg, Hilton Village, the Naval Mine Depot and Yorktown, aided by the townspeople, to bring the blaze under control.

The spectacular fire lent color and spectacle to the historic environs where buildings and monuments overlooking the York River tell of the glories and cherished traditions of the nation and Virginia.

Neighbors provided firemen and volunteer workmen with hot coffee as they struggled to keep the blaze from reaching nearby homes and inns.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—When I first heard of the Jewish War Veterans being organized, I looked up a friend of mine who had considerable to do with its promotion. He and I had been fellow students at school, fellow members of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. I told him what I thought of the matter and offered to punch his nose, for, to say the least, I was plenty mad. All my life I have talked race tolerance and this looked like a direct slap in the face.

He convinced me, however, that their motive was to carry on Americanization work in a better way, so many of their people having come from all quarters of the world. He was so sincere about it that I agreed to help in every way possible.

But now I have had another decided upset. Tuned in for the opening of the draft at Washington, D. C., I almost had heart failure when I discovered that the National Commander of the Irish War Veterans was to pick something out of the fish bowl. The Irish don't need Americanizing, in spite of a friend who shouted with much glee that the number of Democrats among them was adequate proof that much work should be done.

Being a member of the National Speakers Bureau of the Democratic Party, my activity in the last campaign was such that I can be that much more effective in the unification campaign now being launched and in which there will be no party lines and there should be no race lines.

My public challenge to organize war veterans of Scandinavian and German ancestry is not merely a gesture. Organization of other races will force that action. For this reason, all war veterans should demand joint Americanization councils of the existing groups, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans, and others.

There must be a united front. There cannot be if there is any race considered except that of being American.—Emil E. Holmes.

What Dies Missed

THE Dies Committee has been turning up rugs, looking under tin cans and stair- cases and scanning the rosters of numerou organizations whose members are not des cendants of passengers who came to Americ via the Mayflower in its efforts, ostensibly to discover the persons and groups who have sinister designs on the continuation of th American form of government. The Die Committee has given us some informatio that we did not otherwise know but it i distinguished more by what it fails to do tha by what it actually did. The over-publi- cized work of the committee created fog and smoke screens. Many accusations went without proof. Although often and long re- quested to investigate the Ku Klux Klan i has just recently seen fit to make any men tion of that group.

But for real un-American activities it re mained for Municipal Court Judge Oscar Caplan to discover more by accident than Mr Dies ever will discover by purpose. On l s week Judge Caplan sent a bailiff out to th headquarters of the local German-America Bund to serve a court order. The bailiff seized a 30-page loose-leaf ledger that con- tained such information as would justify Mr Dies expenditure of the hundred thousand dollars that Congress gave him. The infor- mation acquired from the seizure of the Bund records disclosed that that un-American group has planted in the United States Army and Navy its own members whose avowe purpose is to work for and on behalf of the German Reich. These members hold stra tegic positions in the Army and Navy, it i said. So important was the information tha the Department of Justice and the War De partment launched an immediate investiga tion. The President of the United States ha expressed his deep interest in very startling disclosures that were made by the Municipa Court of Chicago.

The Chicago Bee and Negroes are particu larly interested in the work that the Die Committee is supposed to do. We are inter ested in its purpose for the reason that w believe if un-American activities are weeded out the colored citizen will get an oppor- tunity to exercise some of the rights guaran- teed to him by the Federal constitution. W are interested because we see the open and notorious violations of the laws of this coun- try incessantly repeated against America's 13,000,000 Negroes without anything being done about it. We are interested becaus many southern states, including, of course, Mr. Dies' own state of Texas, flagrantly vio- late the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constituton while our Congress refuses to raise one word in protest, although every congressman is pledged to aid in upholding the organic law of the land.

There may be some doubt as to whether certain acts come within the category of un- American activities but there are other acts of omission or commission for which there can be no doubt. If we want to know what un-American activities are we only have to resort to the Constitution to ascertain what that sacred document has ordained to be the supreme law of the land. From that infor- mation we know that any violation of that document would fall, without doubt, within the category of un-American activities and should be strenuously investigated by the committee formed to look into such matters. But apparently Mr. Dies does not think that way. He has said nothing about the conduct of southern officials in denying to the Negro the right to vote. He has said nothing about the inequalities existing in the South so far as Negroes are concerned. He has said noth- ing about the continuous violations of the three amendments of the Constitution that were enacted for Negroes.

Giving The Negro A Chance

From Virginia Methodist Advocate

FEB 22 1941

IF a solution is to be found to the problems of the Negro in the South, that solution must come from the sympathetic understanding and friendly cooperation of the Negro's best friends, the fair-minded white people of the South . . .

Americans have been horror-stricken at Hitler's treatment of the Jews and of defenseless national groups. We do not pretend to understand how he could be so brutal and heartless. Yet, as we shudder at his unspeakable violence, we should realize that we, as a nation, are not without guilt in our treatment of minority groups. There is no sound reason, for example, why four times as much money should be spent on the education of the white child as on the Negro child. (Let us not do less for the one but more for the other.)

Nor is there reason to provide three times as many hospital beds for white tubercular patients as for colored patients, especially when there are three times as many colored tubercular patients as white. The economic status of the Negro, caused by his almost impossible chance of making a decent living, is no tribute to our fairness or generosity. Let the Christian Southland become better acquainted with the situation as it is, and give the Negro the opportunity for which we would loudly clamor were our positions reversed.

The remarkable advance made by the Negro race in an almost incredibly short time and under trying conditions is ample evidence that all they need is further opportunity to advance. Even from a selfish standpoint, we should help him. If the Negro is infected with disease, his white neighbor cannot stay well; if he has no purchasing power, the white man cannot do business with him; if his education is neglected, he becomes more easily the prey of unscrupulous persons who offer bribes for his support that they cannot pay.

It is still true that America cannot exist half slave and half free. Let us recognize the wisdom of seeking the highest good for the Negro, and realize that the same time we are helping ourselves as well.

Recently, President Hutchins of Chicago University, broadcast over a National net work; that the Negro and other minority groups, were not 100 per cent behind our National Defense Program, explaining and giving some reasons why. Over the same net work Editor Lawson disputed the accuracy of Dr. Hutchins' statement, and attempted to repudiate it, by citing the Marion Anderson affair at Congress Hall in Washington, which has no bearing on the Editor's point. The point is not whether race prejudice is growing less in America, but whether the Negro is 100 per cent behind our National Defense Program, or not. Both of these gentlemen gave their personal opinion from their observations of make up, circumstances and conditions extent; calculated to fire in the hearts of the citizen-body; that spirit of love of country, which urges every citizen to give all he has for the freedom and independence of his home land.

Races like men of which they are composed, cannot escape their environments. Environments largely fix our opinions and conclusions. Negroes are creatures of environments, and are not inclined to do any more for their neighbors or country than they are willing to do for them. Dr. Hutchins and Editor Lawson are creatures of different conditions of environment; and in weighing the accuracy of their statements, we must take into consideration the environs which prompt the truthfulness of their statements. This is necessary, because there are but few men in America, big enough to rise above "fear" that something may happen to them, if they speak the truth and nothing but the whole truth so help them God.

Under the microscope of truth, which one is in the better position to tell the truth under God, without fear or favor; or thought of what may happen to them, if either tells the whole truth. First, President Hutchins is rich in character; plenty in money and a life position. In his own right he has a fortune, and the wolf is barred from his door. Takes orders from no authority, except his God and conscience. In education, experience and environment, he is superior to Editor Lawson; he does not have to hesitate with himself, and ask himself, will it affect my pay check if I speak what is in my heart?

On the other hand, Editor Lawson is dependent upon his salary check, for his service as Editor of a Negro magazine, supported by a class of good white folks, who do not believe the Negro able to carry himself, and are willing to carry him until he can stand alone. Editor Lawson invaribly thinks in terms of his pay check, and cannot afford to take the chance of losing it, by saying or writing something out of line with his employers' views, who furnish the money to meet his pay check. But few Negroes can see far enough in the future to think of the good of the race above their personal interest. Too many of us are willing to swap human liberty for temporary security. Dr. Hutchins is right and Editor Lawson is wrong. The majority of the Negroes in America are not 100 per cent behind our National Defense Program, because the program is not 100 per cent behind them, yet the Negroes are willing to put all they have into the program, including their lives on the battlefield; he loves his country more than his country loves him, and he understands that he must fight to maintain his own independence in common with the white man in self-defense. Editor Lawson does not represent the views of his race. He sees things through his pay check, not through the good of all his people.

The Negro would be less than a man and a patriot if he was 100 per cent behind any program, that segregated and discriminated against him; by refusing him admission to the Army and Navy that he might fight a long side of white soldiers for his country; and deny him the opportunity to work and earn a dollar of the billions being spent to build our impregnable National Defense. If Mr. Lawson is 100 per cent behind this kind of a program, he is guilty of trading his freedom for a meal ticket. Dr. Hutchins is right and Editor Lawson does not represent his race. The Negro is 100 per cent behind any program to defend the honor, integrity and supremacy of the American Government; but is not behind the discriminating policy of the administration at Washington, which refuses to integrate Negroes in the Army and Navy; that refuses to employ competent stenographers, bookkeepers and on administrative jobs, because of race and color. Neither merit nor demerit knows a color line, and efficiency or inefficiency knows no race or color. And any man who accepts discrimination in his own government is unfit for citizenship. The Negroes first defense line is at home to get rid of Hitlerism in America. Charity begins at home, and America is not in a position to sweep Germany's house until she cleans up her own house. As long as America oppresses Negroes and deny them their constitutional rights and opportunities to make an honest living, she is not in position to spend millions of American money to free the Jews of the same kind of slavery 13,000,000 of our citizens suffer from. Consequently we must stand out before the world as a country, of unreasonable hypocrites.

Negro Question Discussed By College Group

"Should Negroes Be Equal With White Persons in All Respects Except Marriage" was the subject of a forum discussion held at a chapel program today at Asheville college.

Taking the affirmative side was Miss May Randall, and Coleman Patterson. On the negative side was Miss Virginia Summey and Miss Sarah Bellote.

This is the first of a series of chapel programs to be held each Thursday on "Inter-Racial Problems" and sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. of the college.

Check On Anti-Racial Literature Suggested

FEB 28 1941

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Senator Gillette (D), Iowa, introduced today two bills which he characterized as "alternative approaches to the problem of preventing circulation of campaign literature which is scurrilous and designed to foment racial and religious hatreds."

Although Gillette was chairman of the Senate campaign investigating committee which recommended against this practice, he said he offered the bills as an individual and not as a representative of the committee.

One would require that the name of the publisher be plainly printed on campaign literature exposing any class of persons to hatred on contempt "because of race, religion, descent or nationality." It would set up in the Interior Department an office of minority relations with authority to investigate circulation of such campaign literature. Appropriation of not more than $500,000 to finance this office would be authorized.

The other would make it unlawful to circulate campaign literature "tending to incite arson, murder, assassination or riot" or having fraudulent or scurrilous character tending to incite hatred against any religious sect, creed or race. It would require that all campaign literature bear the name of the printer and the name of the person at whose instance it was produced.

Oklahoma Democracy Functions

During the recent census we heard the story of an old colored lady who when the white enumerator arrived at her door one morning announcing he was going to take the census, exclaimed: JAN 1 1 1941

"Lawdy mussy, what is you white folk gwine to do next. You done take de farm, de hosses and harness, and now you done come to take my senses".

Over at Enid, Oklahoma, in a state where white folk are supposed to maintain a system of separation in the school system we are advised a white man drives the school bus for Negro children. An outraged group of black patrons appealed to the authorities for relief from this situation and were advised that there is nothing in state laws prohibiting white persons from driving buses for Negro students.

But the cup of the Enid Negroes is running over with bitterness this year, for even though they applied for defense training and were denied, by some authority, a group of white students are each week taught defense training in the basement of the Booker Washington High School. Think of it; to be denied the privilege of defense training in a separate school and then to add insult to injury thirty white students are brought into a Negro structure for schooling in this same line of development.

What we say here does not relate to anything happening in fascist Italy or Soviet Russia. We are talking about a type of dictatorship, that does not square with law, justice or the American constitution, being practiced right here in the United States of America.

While you catch your breath we will continue. Down at Anadarko is exposed the robbery of the physical property of the Negro schools. Some time ago furniture was purchased for the new Negro school and subsequent to the erection of the building new furniture, and two new buses were purchased out of the separate school funds.

Everything proceeded according to Hoyle until one day the new buses were taken over to the white school and the old buses of the whites substituted. The furniture went the same way. School board officials replacing the new furniture with junk out of the white schools. This is the way and manner that democracy functions in Caddo County, Oklahoma. JAN 1 1 1941

Just as the old lady said about the census enumerator. The rulers of the land and the controllers of government down in the valley of the Washita are not satisfied when they strangle Negroes with basic unfair school laws. They come back later to take the remaining crumbs that leaked through the infamous two mill levy.

There's no sense in talking about democracy here in America without examining the type of government people are so prone to praise. White people maintain their school with an elastic arrangement which permits the use of from five to fifteen mills while Negroes, regardless of what may be the circumstances or the situation are held within an unholy two-mill vise.

If the Negro population is large and property valuations in the county are low one can see what happens to Negro schools. Resulting from just such a situation Muskogee schools have many years not been able to run the full nine months and teachers for years have been woefully underpaid.

Many county commissioners refuse to allow the two mill levy and while County Superintendents are quite willing to count all of the Negro school children during taking of the school census few of these county officials allow the per capita tax to reach the Negro schools. Transfer funds, of the separate schools are misappropriated, and the arbitrary denial of weak school aid is made possible by the law which provides that the County Superintendent has the power to determine which is the separate school and which is the district school. JAN 1 1 1941

Educational circles in this state usually acertain the taxable wealth and then announce to the people that the Negro secures a two mill levy on this valuation for the maintainance of the separate schools. Relatively speaking the basic law does black citizens a great injustice, but when later the robbers at Enid, Anadarko and other places slip in to loot this meager school treasury, we feel like the outraged old colored lady when she said "You white folk want to take our senses".

Richard Wright Calls Upon Writers to Aid Peace Fight

FEB 1 1 1941

From all corners of the world, outstanding progressives are sending greetings to New Masses on the occasion of its thirtieth anniversary which will be celebrated this week in a special sixty-four page issue of the magazine. Among those just received is the following from Richard Wright, leading Negro writer, author of the best-selling "Native Son," and recent recipient of the Spingarn medal for distinguished service to the Negro people.

By Richard Wright

During these days of war, it is with pride and an overwhelming sense of responsibility that I extend heartiest greetings to "New Masses," its editors, its co-workers, and its readers and subscribers. I say that it is with pride because for the first time during an imperialist war there exists in the world a new hope, a new workers' government and new magazines like New Masses to give voice and utterance to the aspirations of peace loving men. FEB 1 1 1941

I believe that all our hard years of struggle to keep New Masses alive have been a proving time, for we are on the verge of witnessing an "All Out" assault upon the hopes of the international working class. All of us, including New Masses, can congratulate ourselves upon the fact that, so far, the Soviet Union has through its strength and strategy, outwitted, out-maneuvered and out-fought the imperialist warmakers. The base of world evolution, the Soviet Union, stands impregnable and invincible, a beacon of guidance during these days of dark confusion.

But the hardest task lies yet ahead. The imperialists can maneuver no longer; they are fighting and must fight for a re-division of the spoils of the world, and no man knows when the day and hours may come when they, exhausted and bitter, will turn from their bloody mauling of each other and combine as common prey upon the world's lone socialist state. We must watch for this. We must fight against this. We must explain this again and again and again.

The one way out that I think that all writers should expound is this: STOP THE WAR. And when the ears of all honest men hear this command, they will at once begin to search for ways and means of ending this disastrous conflict and they will be able to come to but one conclusion: The people of the warring nations must devise new instrumentalities of political life and make their desire for peace effective in forthright action.

So, let us go forth with the determination to STOP THE WAR, standing ready to improvise creatively those implements of political activity that will wrest control of the destiny of mankind from the imperialist murderers and plunderers.

"Talmadge, Phooey!"

Students gaily gathered on the campus of the University of Georgia last week, marched up "Ag" Hill shouting "To Hell with Gene," hanged and burned Governor Eugene Talmadge in effigy not once but twice. Women students at Lucy Cobb dormitory had a third private hanging of their own.

Next day, at a mass meeting, students got up a petition demanding that the Talmadge-packed Board of Regents be unpacked. The students rounded up a caravan of 108 cars, rolled out of Athens bound for the Capitol at Atlanta, 70 miles away. At their head was a jalopy flying red and black streamers and bearing Student Leader Alpha Fowler Jr., son of a State legislator. Behind came placards: We Don't Want a Discredited University. . . . Keep Politics Out of the University. . . . Talmadge, Phooey!

With horns blowing and a sound truck blaring Dixie, the caravan circled the Capitol twice, then halted at a statue of oldtime Populist Demagogue Thomas E. Watson. A student jammed a wax bust of Talmadge over the statue's head. Up jumped Cheerleader William Malone and bellowed through his megaphone "Are we afraid of Talmadge?" The mob roared: "Hell, no!"

"Sinkwich [star halfback—see p. 62] for Governor!" shrilled Co-ed Betty Verdi. The crowd took up the cry.

Finally, singing "Glory, Glory to old Georgia," and cheered by thousands of Atlantans in the streets, the caravan whooped back to Athens.

The student demonstration last week was touched off by word from a meeting of the Southern University Conference (41 leading colleges of the South). Meeting in Birmingham, Ala. to ponder Georgia's grievances against its Governor, representatives of the other colleges found a clearly evident case of political interference: Talmadge's ouster of University of Georgia's Dean Walter D. Cocking on the charge (denied) that the dean had advocated coeducation of Negroes and whites (TIME, July 28). Though the Governor himself showed up to harangue the conferees, the Conference dropped Georgia without a dissenting vote.

Governor Talmadge sputtered: "No out-of-state agency has the authority or the right to dictate to the Board of Regents. . . . No outside influence in the United States or on the face of the earth can discredit the University of Georgia." The Atlanta Constitution cracked: "Certainly . . . the regents can, if they desire, employ a faculty composed exclusively of imbeciles."

The Conference decision was hard on the feelings of Georgia students and Governor, but in practical terms it did not affect in the slightest the college operation, nor fortunately its standing in the Southeastern football conference. But repercussions may be serious.

For as Governor Talmadge started a tour of the State making speeches charging that most of the members of the Southern University Conference favored coeducation of blacks and whites, the Southern Association of Colleges & Secondary Schools, an official accrediting agency, prepared to meet next fortnight to consider blacklisting Georgia. That action would mean that college credits obtained at Georgia would not be accepted as valid at other accredited institutions. Georgians feared the worst, for the chairman of both the Conference's and the Association's committees investigating Georgia is the same man, Dr. Alexander W. Guerry, vice chancellor of the University of the South.

"'No outside influence in the United States or on the face of the earth can discredit the University of Georgia . . .' So said Gov. Talmadge. He was correct. No outside influence has." For this we nominate yesterday's editorial on the subject in The Age-Herald for a proper medal. But the sin of discrediting the University of Georgia is not the only one Eugene Talmadge has committed. He is guilty also of inflaming race passions throughout the South at a very time when they can do his region and his country most harm. His guilt was compounded when, in commenting on the action of the Southern Conference in dropping the University of Georgia, he announced that in his opinion "the majority of those voting to discredit the University of Georgia are in favor of co-education of the blacks and whites." Not only is this not true, but Eugene Talmadge knows it is not true. Yet because of his loud and wanton statement many are going to believe or suspect it to be true and both races in the South will be made to suffer. The statement is the perfect and vicious example of the thing known as demagogy.

The Hitler Game

The very able statement by nearly a hundred American leaders on racial and religious intolerance ought to be pondered by every American citizen.

Under the auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, these leaders merged their own diverse political, social, and religious backgrounds in an eloquent plea for toleration and understanding.

Confusion and division have been definitely and consciously used as weapons by the Nazis.

The trick of fomenting racial and religious divisions in opposing countries, thus robbing them of their strength, has been exposed again and again.

Forewarned is forearmed.

Don't fall for it.

Let every citizen guard his own tongue, and squelch the peddlers of hate.

Then it won't work in America.

More Segregation Than Ever

The burden of an article in The New Republic, New York, by Dr. Will W. Alexander is that "The color line cracks a little" in the South. He cites decisions of the federal courts that negro teachers are entitled to equal pay for service, to the case of Congressman Arthur Mitchell's expulsion from a Pullman car which the supreme court decided was unlawful, to the decline of lynching, to an improved public opinion among whites about justice to the negro, and stresses that segregation—by law—seems to be coming to end. There is truth, much truth, in what Dr. Alexander writes.

Of justice to the negroes, of giving to them their full dollar's worth when they earn and pay the dollar for it have been always the wish and the habit of self-respecting Southern white people. So it was long before Dr. Alexander saw the light.

Racial segregation is more general in the South now than ever it was before. Law has had nothing to do with it, and the excellent people like Dr. Alexander striving to improve race relations have not stood in the way of its advance.

The increased segregation is voluntary on the part of both races. One sees the evidence of it everywhere. After the Confederate war negroes lived in all parts of Southern cities. In Charleston, for example, negroes inhabited many a house which well-to-do persons had to give up because war impoverished them. Most of these houses are now "reclaimed", and white people dwell in them.

A negro employe of the writer wished to buy a house, with his employer's assistance. He chose a house, in a negro district, and the price seemed to the employer too great. Then the employer found a house, doubly as good in every way as that one the negro liked, for sale at a bargain, but the serving man promptly rejected suggestion of buying it because it was in a block of mixed white and negro dwellings.

In the smaller towns and the villages of South Carolina the voluntary segregation is the rule.

In the Carolinas and Georgia a large part of the white population has been segregated in textile villages in the last half century, and the desire of the poorer white people, whether or not consciously entertained, to get away from labor association with negroes was an important factor in the establishment of the Southern textile industry. The ranks of "poor whites" in country neighborhoods of South Carolina have been decimated, and that is one of the causes of the decline in lynching.

Fifty years ago and less than fifty instances of white men living with negro concubines, while never common, were observable. They are not observable now. Nor can the marked decrease of the mulatto population of the South fail to be observed.

Dr. Alexander is impressed that there is little hostility of white travelers to the admission of negroes to Pullman cars. Were that not true it would be strange, for the simple reason that white men travel for the most part over paved roads in their automobiles, for long as well as short distances. The great majority of the white travelers in Pullmans in Southern states nowadays are Northern people. The feeling of the Southerner that he is not dependent on the Pullman company for segregation tends to allay his hostility to negroes as fellow travelers in Pullman coaches.

White men of better minds and characters have been "crusaders" against lynching three quarters of a century. The News and Courier, under the editorship of Francis Warrington Dawson who died in 1889, began to wage unceasing war against lynching and other violence done to negroes when white ruffianism following "Reconstruction" was rampant throughout the South. By his successors the war was carried on. Almost lynching has ceased. The efforts of men like Dawson and his lieutenant, N. G. Gonzales, were a factor in the improvement. They were not the main factor.

The races have drawn apart. More than ever they live apart. The associations, the contacts, have diminished. Crimes of violence are still of common occurrence in the South. Some decades gone they were often inter-racial. As a rule now they are intra-racial, and so far as the negroes are considered, the assaults and slaughters among themselves are now a greater problem than lynchings.

Further, the policing of the country districts has immensely improved, especially in the last twenty years. Rural policemen ride the paved roads on motorcycles.. Telephone wires run nearly everywhere. More than all, the motorcar takes a man accused of a crime that drives a community to frenzy to the penitentiary in two or three hours—and the frenzy dies in the months preceding his trial.

In South Carolina is little interest in segregation laws—and will not be unless and until laws shall attempt to force racial mingling, to shatter the segregation, or separation, with which both races are apparently content. What we are afraid of is effort of "intellectual liberals" in the North to compel amalgamation in the South.

Dr. Alexander and the brethren and sisters of his organization have meant well and have done well. The great reforms and improvements have been accomplished over their heads, when they were not looking—by the social reorganization and changing, the mechanical inventions and advances that have made a "new order".

Had the policing of New York city been no better thirty years ago than it was in Swig Swag township, fifteen miles over a road ten inches deep in red mud from the court house and jail, one suspects that never a negro would have been allowed in Harlem or Jersey City.

In no town or city in South Carolina having 10,000 inhabitants has a lynching occurred since negroes were set free. Lynching before that was unknown.

LET US BE CONSISTENT

One of the obstacles in the way of attaining full democracy for the Negro in America, is the Negro's own confusion of purpose often aggravated by irrational and inconsistent views. Seldom has there been a wholesome unanimity on vital issues. A divided council is a positive deterrent to objectives that require the resolution of the collective will. It is common knowledge that representative government yields more readily to mass action than to unsupported individual representation. A solid front against most of the evils about which we complain daily would do more than mitigate them. It would crack the wall of opposition—an opposition that owes its strength to the absence of effective, consistent challenge.

These things are elementary. Yet our super intellectuals and the so-called militant voices are often responsible for the confusion in our ranks. The initial stages of the proposed "March on Washington" met with more caustic criticism from certain Negro quarters than from official Washington. Had the White House been familiar with the virulence of the dissent in our own midst, it might have discounted the strength of the backers of the "March" —and the issues involved would have been ignored.

Fortunately Mr. A. Philip Randolph, the originator and organizer of the "March on Washington" was tenacious enough to reach the objectives sought. Although the proposed mass demonstration at the nation's capital was dubbed a "crackpot idea;" and though some quarters felt that it was unnecessary since the Congress and the President of the United States through letters, telegrams and sundry petitions were already quite conversant with the grievances and demands of the Negro people, Mr. Randolph nevertheless won an unprecedented victory. His "crackpot" idea resulted in an Executive Order abolishing discrimination in all defense industries. Moreover, the placing of two Negroes on the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice was a direct sequel to the extension of the 'crackpot idea."

However, we have not had such success in other matters equally important. For instance while some were decrying segregation in the army, others were advocating the establishment of military units manned exclusively by Negro soldiers and commanded by Negro officers. In other words they were making a plea for complete segregation. Such a position is, of course, indefensible. In the absence of a "forty-ninth state" there is little to recommend such a plan, when in the same breath we clamor for integration of Negroes in the armed forces of the nation.

On the question of maltreatment of Negro soldiers by hostile southern communities, again there was a division of opinion. Some argued that the U. S. government should protect its black soldiers wherever they may be stationed. For, to move them elsewhere on account of their being objectionable to a segment of the population is to make a dangerous concession at a time when the black man is called upon to make sacrifices and prepare for the defense of the American democracy. Others disagreed with this view, and pleaded for the removal of Negro troops stationed in the South, to northern camps where they will not be subjected to terrorism and mob violence. The fallacy of this argument is that it overlooks the possibility of the occurrence of similar incidents in the North. Should that happen—and it can happen —then, what is to be our position? If we are to be consistent, we will say send our soldiers to western camps. Suppose the West should object, then what? To pursue, therefore, such a course to its logical end would ultimately mean agitation on our part for the removal of the Negro from this civilization. We must remember that the South has no monopoly on race prejudice and discrimination. The Negro faces segregation in the North, East, South, and West. The difference is only one of degree.

These contradictions and inconsistencies are not doing us any good whatever may be the motives that inspire them. The unity of our own people on the issue of democracy for the Negro, appears to us to be the main consideration of the Negro people in this crisis. We must choose now whether we want full democracy partial democracy, or no democracy at all.

Race Problem Explained by Dr. Richards

Teachings of Christ Urged as Basis by Seminary Head.

While the racial problem was being fanned by political leaders yesterday, Dr. J. McDowell Richards, president of Columbia Theological Seminary, disposed in an opening address to the Atlanta presbytery that the relationship between the races be faced anew in the light of the teachings of Christ.

"When we turn from the physical aspect we may describe the situation of our brother in black by saying simply that he is in need. He is in need from an economic viewpoint by reason of the fact that most Negro workers are employed in our lowest paid occupations. Most Negro farmers belong to the tenant class. Even our defense projects have discriminated against Negroes to a large degree."

He said that the average value of houses occupied by Negro tenants is $500 whereas the government housing authority has fixed $3,000 to $4,000 as necessary to provide minimum accommodations for an American family. Dr. Richards pointed out that in Atlanta the Negroes have only one relatively small park and cited other ways in which the Negro is discriminated against in the courts and in provisions for street paving, sewers and recreation facilities.

Is The Negro a Problem In America?

MAR 22 1941

In the many years I have concerned myself with the relationship of whites and Negroes in America, again and again I have heard the assertion, "The Negro is a problem and always will be one." Pondering the situation, I fiind on the one hand the Negro's great contribution to America's civilization, and on the other I fiind that problems arise with the Negro only as a result of undemocratic attitudes of whites toward the group.

Whites are forever pointing to the poverty-sticken condition of many Negroes. If one studies the economic condition of the Negro he will find that this poverty is but the result of the white man's exploitation of the Negro, which has been practiced for 75 years.

In the South, where the so-called problem is worse, we find thousands of Negroes victims of the legalized slavery there. In most sections the school terms are inadequate for education of the Negro child. Along with poor equipment, the terms are shortened due to the poood administration and distribution of funds for education. When these chilren grow to man and womanhood without the proper education, whites then point to the ignorance of Negroes as a problematic condition. All the time the Negro's lack of learning is a result of the inequality of education in America.

We find when Negroes first came to America, they were engaged in many fields of industry, such as steel and iron works, in shipbuilding, and his inventive genius was much in evidence. With the birth of labor unions, Negroes were excluded from many of these trades and industries. He was forced to accept the menial tasks for a livelihood, although they did not pay a living wage.

As a result of this, when Negroes were convicted of the crime of larceny on numerous occasion, they became the object of the white man's scorn to the extent that many are of the conviction that all Negroes will steal. Why? Again the Negro is indeed a problem, because of discriminations of organized labor. We find Negroes in our own state, once rich by heritage, penniless now because of the graft and schemes practiced upon them by the monied class.

The subject of health of the Negro has long been a point of discussion among whites. They charge that social diseases are rampant among Negroes, although recent drafts showed that whites in large numbers are afflicted with the diseases. Tuberculosis takes an annual toll among our people that is alarming.

Yet, may I point out that Negroes came to America free from social diseases of any type: Syphilis germs cannot live in the vast interior of Africa due to intense heat. It was the amalganmation of whites and Negroes, a practice which began during slavery, which is responsible for the prevalence of the disease among Negroes. In many cases the disease reaches deadly stages because of lack of money for medical treatment. Inadequate housing (many structures now owned by white landlords, who will not spend a dime for repairs) and malnutrition assist the deady scourge in crushing the strength of its victims.

Many point to the race strife in America and say the so-called Negro problem is its base. I find that race trouble grows out of two major factors in America. First, when whites mix promiscuously among Negroes to satisfy their bestial desires. Only last week I was in conversation with a white man who admitted he was carrying on an affair with one of the town's lealing dusky beauties. This same man would possibly lead a mob against any Negro who openly admitted he was intimate with a white woman.

Another occasion of trouble is when whites attempt to force certain acts upon Negroes as in the days of slavery.

The case of James Vester at Perry, held last week, is an example of this. During a heated argument between a group of Negroes and whites, Vester Wilhell, the white youth, ordered the Negro to take his hands out of his pockets or he would strike him. When the Negro refused, Vester hit him and he in turn was stabbed to death. His life, snuffed out all because he failed to realize the days of ordering people around are over. Tlso in a democracy every man has rights regardless of his color and those rights should be respected.

Is the Negro a problem? Are Roland Hays, Marian Anderson, Dr. George Washington Carver problem children of America? Problems arise only when these and other dusky citizens are denied their full participation in the American way of life, for surely the contributions of the black man to America's civilization obliterates forever in the minds of anyone the idea that they are the Number One Problem here. Discriminations, inequality of education, of inadequate housing facilities—these and others practiced by whites against blacks, constitute our real problems in America. They can only be solved when great America quits beating around the bush and stands up for the execution of democratic ideals. The Negro is not a problem in America, only in the sense that whites make problems of us.

Africans, American Negro "Don't Mix"; So Shipping Company Hires U. S. Whites

MAR 27 1941

NEW YORK, N. Y.—There must be a great deal of difference between African sailors and American Negroes in the minds of the officials of the American-West African Line, Inc., for their refusal to employ Negroes on ships bound for Africa.

The National Maritime Union of America has been attempting for some time to have the company accept colored stewards as supplied and has refused to accept the company's argument.

About two years ago the Union supplied some of its members for the steward' department of the vessels of the American-West African Line.

RANK DISCRIMINATION

At the time, the company refused to employ colored members using the same argument as they now use with regard to colored members of the deck department.

MAR 27 1941

"The only conclusion that we can draw from the company's argument is that their position is one of rank discrimination, although the company is attempting to use subtlety in their endeavor to hide this phase of their position," declared Ferdinand C. Smith, national secretary of the Union.

However, Charles Barthold, vice president of the ship company, in defense of his company's stand in regard to placing a full or part colored deck crew on vessels operating to West Africa stated:

"We have no objection to colored sailors but would welcome the opportunity of using them if the vessels operated in another trade. The difficulty is that we carry native krooboys (who are also colored) on the deck for practically the whole of the time the ships are on the West African coast and the mixture we are certain would result most unsatisfactorily on the vessels."

"We regret, therefore, that we feel it very important that white men be furnished. We do not wish to discriminate against Negroes and we hire considerable numbers in different branches of our service," he continued.

The Union pointed out that there is no basis for the Company's contention and that they are only supposing a situation that might prove detrimental to the interests of the company.

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

It Is "Our" Country Indeed

History in the making is right before our eyes. Only because we are so near to it do we fail to see the significance of events. Some months ago a suit was brought in a federal court in Missouri with the managing editor of this paper as the plaintiff. The judge decided adversely, but in the trial of that case the fact was brought out that never in the judicial district had a Negro been called to jury service. Last week in a case with a similar litigant, Negroes were called for jury service.

To thinking men and women of this generation events like this are ordinary. But the old folk, the generation which came through the reconstruction, never believed the day would come when Negroes' citizenship would be recognized to the point of an equal day in court.

There are heights yet to be climbed. Negroes whose real motive is to escape the labor of trying, keep pointing out the difficulties in the way and the unfairness of prejudice. We prefer to put the emphasis on the gains. This United States, for all its lack of carrying profession of democracy to perfection, gives the best home to minority groups to be found in the world. Black Americans are derided and handicapped, but we are also educated and rewarded when we break through.

Distinguished men and women assembled last week to honor Dr. George Washington Carver. Let those who see American prejudice as an insurmountable barrier and therefore an excuse for doing nothing, be ashamed that they dare not follow where many, even some slave born like this scientist, have pointed the way. With right good heart we can say "Our country, 'tis of thee" because here we have found some opportunity and are making more.

RACE, WITH REST OF NATION, NOW FACES GRIM REALITY

Dr. Scott, Noting Statement That "Die Is Cast," Directs Attention to Sacrifices that Must Be Made—Says "Callousness" Must Be Discarded.

MAR 29 1941

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, March 27.—In Congress this week, discussing the $7,000,000,000 Aid-to-Britain bill, a remark was made to the effect that: "The die is cast."

We truly are now face to face with the grim reality that our nation has definitely swung to a policy, the end of which no man, woman, or child, now living, can measurably forecast.

It is now recognized that this changed policy marks a turning point in the annals of our government. It will lead to historic consequences. Our actions from now on, under this bill, mark a turning point in our history and a departure from our former conceptions of international law and practice.

By vote of the Congress, we are now committed to policies which raise the question: Is the United States about to plunge into actual participation in the war across the seas as a result of the unprecedented legislation just passed? In other words, are we not now in a position closely akin to war?

SACRIFICES CALLED FOR

One thing is very clear. The President in his remarks at the banquet of the White House Correspondents Association emphasized it that there may be no misunderstandings. We are entering, he said, a period calling for many and great sacrifices.

To use his own vivid language: ". . . The nation is calling for the sacrifice of some privileges, but not for the sacrifice of fundamental rights," in the interest of common, national protection and welfare.

He made an earnest plea for national unity, and inveighed against divisions of party, section, race, nationality and religion.

FOUR FREEDOMS

In the common purpose now expected of everyone, he again referred to the Four Freedoms, and particularly to the freedoms from want and fear—the bane particularly of disadvantaged and underprivileegd groups, in which, regretfully, it must be confessed, far too many hundreds and thousands, yea millions, of the 12,000,000 colored people of the United States are apparently permanently placed by reason of the unfavorably economic and social conditions under which they live, under which so many of them barely exist.

As we enter upon this great adventure and that rendezvous with destiny, to which the President so frequently refers, one recalls that courageously brave statement recently made by a consecrated leader of the Negro group, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, member as he is of the Selective Service Advisory Committee, appointed by the President himself.

Dr. Tobias was referring to the undemocratic, dual citizenship maintained by this country of ours with respect to its colored citizens, and remarked that America has not yet even sought the abolition of its double standards of citizenship, or shown any indicated intention on the part of government or industry to consider the Negro as a factor in the defense programs of the nation.

To sustain the morale of this group, there must be an abandonment of the present callous attitude. There must be overt acts of consideration of its justifiable claims to recognition.

THIS MORNING

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, II

In the South it is inevitable that relations between white man and black should give a lot of trouble because the black man very nearly equals the white in numbers. But there is no reason for a problem between Gentile and Jew here. There are about 200 Gentiles to every Jew in the Southern states. Of the South's total population of about 38,000,000 only about one-half of one per cent is Jewish. This compares with 3.69 per cent for the whole country, 17.02 per cent for New York state, 28.08 for New York City, and 43.87 for the Bronx borough of that city.

In Alabama the percentage of Jews to the total population is only 0.42. In Arkansas it is only 0.32; in Florida, 1.27; Georgia, 0.77; Kentucky, 0.91; Louisiana, 0.[illegible]; Mississippi, 0.23; North Carolina, 0.21 (lowest of all); South Carolina, 0.31; Tennessee, 0.89; Texas, 0.80; and Virginia, 0.92.

RACIAL APPEALS TO VOTERS SCORED

There Is No Such Thing as a 'Jewish Vote,' Rabbi Louis I. Newman and Others Say

'CHEAP POLITICS' ASSAILED

Morality as a Prerequisite of World Peace and Liberty Also Discussed in Sermons

OCT 26 1941

Racial and religious appeals for votes in a political campaign were deplored by rabbis in sermons here yesterday. Morality as a prerequisite of world peace and liberty were other sermon topics.

"No candidate or party should appeal to any racial or religious bloc at this time or any time," Rabbi Louis I. Newman said in Temple Rodeph Sholom, 7 West Eighty-third Street.

"Let me declare again as a rabbi that there is no such thing as a 'Jewish vote.' American citizens of the Jewish faith cast their ballot according to their own personal predilection, and not in the light of any alleged group interest.

"Any one who through a whispering campaign or in public speeches tries to manufacture a 'Jewish issue' is setting up a strawman for the fun and profit of knocking him down. Moreover, citizens of the Jewish faith take it for granted that no reputable party would designate as a candidate for an office any man who has any prejudice in his make-up or who could secretly or opening cater to those who are preaching and practicing community dissension."

In Temple B'Nai Jeshurun, Eighty-eighth Street, near Broadway, Rabbi Israel Goldstein said: "Jews resent being made a football in politics just as Irish, Italians or any other group should resent it.

"In the present Mayoralty campaign there is not and cannot be a Jewish issue. Both candidates are men of proven American standards, so far as their personal attitudes are concerned.

"It is the cheapest and most un-American kind of pre-election 'politics' to either scare or cajole Jewish citizens as Jews."

Rabbi David de Sola Pool in the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Seventieth Street and Central Park West, said: "There is an unhappy dualism in much of our thinking about other peoples. On the one hand in the full spirit of America we lyrically proclaim that all men are born equal.

"On the other, we nourish prejudices against peoples of other color and cultural tradition. On the resolution of this conflict on the side of a religious recognition of human unity depends much of the future peace of America and of all mankind."

In Temple Ansche Chesed, 100th Street and West End Avenue, Rabbi Joseph Zeitlin, remarked: "Fundamentally faith teaches that before men and nations can free themselves from their burdens, they must envisage a new world, as yet untried, in which a moral order shall guarantee justice, liberty and permanent peace to all men."

Rabbi Jacob Katz in Montefiore Synagogue, Macy and Hewitt Places, the Bronx, counseled: "Let us so cleanse our individual social relations that no weeds can grow in our national economy.

"Let us so order our international relations on a basis of justice, that freedom will prevail and our social structure comprising a world community, made possible by science, will never be imperiled."

In Shaare Zedek Synagogue, 212 West Ninety-third Street, Rabbi Morris M. Goldberg, declaring self-perpetuation of democracy a fallacy, said: "Democracy must be replanted in the hearts of our children so that they will grow with the full understanding of the four freedoms, and with the deep knowledge of American principles and ideals."

Rabbi William F. Rosenblum in Temple Israel, 210 West Ninety-first Street, denounced the execution of French hostages by the Nazis as "wanton wholesale slaughter."

Jim Crowism—Empire Style

APR 8 1941

According to a recent issue of the Congressional Record, the Churchill government "requested that we [the United States] do not send any Negroes regardless of qualifications" to jobs now open in Trinidad.

The reason for this is plain. In America, Negro workers have become a part of the labor movement and have won many gains fighting side by side with their white fellow workers against the economic royalists. The Empire fears that the presence of these workers in Trinidad would demonstrate the advantages of trade union organization in improving the miserable plight of the Negro people in British colonies. The Negro people of Trinidad might be encouraged to talk back to the British lords for higher and equal pay and better working conditions. This in turn might inspire the Negro people in the slave pens of British South Africa.

Neither is it surprising that the Roosevelt Administration put up no fight against the jim-crow requests of its London war ally, since it maintains a national system of jim-crowism against the Negro people in civilian life as well as in the armed forces and in "defense" industries.

The fascist request of the Churchill government is a damning exposure of the kind of "democracy" the British imperialists are fighting for.

Intimidation In Georgia

Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia stated on Wednesday that if the Southern Association of Accredited Secondary Schools and Colleges drops the University System of Georgia from its accredited list, the salaries of all the professors in the system will be cut in half. Mr. Talmadge expressed the opinion that the professors themselves are the only persons who can cause the association to refuse to accredit the university system. The professors will have their salaries reduced if such action is taken because, said Mr. Talmadge, they "wouldn't be worth as much."

If Gov. Talmadge is trying to intimidate the accrediting committee of the Southern Association of Accredited Secondary Schools and Colleges he will discover that his blank attack is misdirected. Among the educators who have been instructed to inquire into the Georgia situation is Dr. Alex Guerry, former president of the University of Chattanooga, who is the executive head of the University of the South. Dr. Guerry and his colleagues are concerned solely with determining whether the professional and academic standards of the University of Georgia have been undermined or otherwise impaired by Gov. Talmadge's dismissal of educators whom he accused of advocating racial coeducation.

Even though he spoke facetiously, Gov. Talmadge's statement on Wednesday emphasizes the injury he has done the Georgia school system. If professors in schools which are not accredited are worth less in the matter of salaries than are professors in accredited schools, Mr. Talmadge will have to consider the fact that the usefulness of the professors was impaired by his own high-handed action. What is in effect his appeal to the professors to defend his own arbitrary measures and thereby save their salaries is an obvious insult to every one associated with the university system and to the people who supported it.—The Chattanooga Times.

TODAY'S PROFILE

By UNITED PRESS

Roscoe Conkling Simmons, regarded as one of the foremost living Negroes, has started what he describes as a speaking tour of Arkansas, Mississippi, and "all the training camps," on "the spirit of national defense."

"I am trying to instill patriotism into the hearts and minds of my people," Simmons said at the beginning of his campaign.

"The Congress handles the money problem, the President guides our foreign policy, and it is up to others to mold and instill the spirit of defense into the hearts of the people," he said.

Simmons said there had been little activity by foreign agents or Nazi sympathizers among the Negroes, adding that his audiences include both whites and Negroes, since he is widely known among both races.

"The Negro race is violently anti-Hitler," he said, "particularly on account of what Hitler said about them in 'Mein Kampf.' The race as a whole is divided on feeling toward Britain.

"We are intensely for America. We heartily support Mr Roosevelt's foreign policy, and I find many Negroes anxious to go to war and 'get it over with.'"

Simmons said his campaign is not sectional or racial, but for all classes and all political faiths. He said he hoped to visit every army camp in the country, much as he did during the World War.

Simmons, nephew of Booker T. Washington, was born in Mississippi and educated at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. He seconded the nomination of President Hoover in 1932 and has been a Chicago Republican leader for many years.

His tour of southern states will be interrupted for the Chicago rally, Sept. 7, after which he will return to Mississippi to continue his tour.

Simmons usually speaks in schools, churches and chapels, but often the crowds are so great the meetings are held in the open.

WANTED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—(ANP)—Uncle Sam needs men for his border patrol, provided, of course, they are not colored.

Gilbert Frasier, a member of Virginia Union university's first edition of the "dream team," took the examination for border patrolman. He passed all of the tests, physical and written, but when he went down for his oral test, the three men who interviewed him decided to flunk him. So, subsequently, some three weeks later, Mr. Frasier was politely notified by letter that he had failed to pass the oral test, which, according to Frasier, was no more than a 10-minute interview, covering salient points of his application blank.

The job pays $2,000 per annum to start, with yearly increments of $200 until a maximum is reached.

Border patrolmen are used on the Mexican and Canadian borders.

Letters to the Editor

Racial Problem

Editor The Telegraph:

I read almost every day letters in your letter column, about the race problem. Some of these letters are very brilliant and uplifting, and some are very, very foggy, and very depressive, but neither of these, the brilliant nor the foggy writers, offer a plan which will solve this weighty race problem. They just stand, and throw mud, mixed with slime at the gutter which stirs up strife and misunderstanding between the two races.

I wonder if either of these two types of writers saw the letter that was published in your letter column not so long ago, wherein I offered a sure cure for this age-old malady; if so, there were no comments, which goes to show that no one wants a remedy for this race ailment, but just something to beef about.

Although I went back six thousand years to prove that my plan would work, no one seems to think it worth while to began now with the colored race, and see if that race can be preserved for six thousand years to come. It is a known fact, if something is not done to preserve the colored race as the Crea[illegible] intended [black] there will be no black people within these United States in another one hundred fifty years hence. I believe that this will be a bit of food for thought, for both brilliant and foggy writers.

If Roosevelt Should Die

By L. BAYNARD WHITNEY

SUPPOSE PRESIDENT Roosevelt should soon die?

This thought smote me forcibly when the President's mother passed thru transition recently. If the President should die, the Negro would lose the most influential friend in modern history.

Of all U. S. President (not even excepting Teddy) Franklin D Roosevelt—and his good wife—have tried to do the most for our race. (Thereby increasing many fold the hatred of their enemies as well as alienating many friends.)

It is perfectly obvious that if FDR should pass away under the terrific strain of his war-burdered 3rd team in office, those who are against us would lose no time in trying to destroy their efforts and every advantage Negroes have gained during Roosevelt's New Deal Administration.

THE GREAT UNKNOWN

We do not know to what extent the President's successor, Henry A Wallace, would go to the bat for us.

Mr. Wallace is known to be a great citizen, a deeply religious man, even mystical with a strong sense of right and justice. He was personally "chosen" by FDR to be his running mate for the express purpose of prepetuating New Deal policies.

However, it would be a very wise thing for our leaders to begin NOW to "cultivate" Mr. Wallace, with a view toward assuring ourselves, as far as possible, not only that the gains we have made shall not be lost, but that there shall be an increase of justice and fair paly for us throughout the nation.

Nature's Great Lesson To Man

By ALICE HARRIS.

We all love the ancient rose and the lily. The rose, especially, has endeared itself to us as we watched it climbing on the garden walls of the humble cottage, sending forth its fragrance while wet with the morning dew, gladdening the hearts of the great and the humble. We have seen it clasped in the arms of our fair brides and entwined in the bright hair of dancing maidens. We have lovingly entwined it into wreaths to lay upon the graves of our beloved dead.

The lily, the fairest of flowers, blooms in the early spring to break the gloom of the sleeping winter. Each serves a purpose in its own way. Would the beauty and fragrance of the rose or the lily be enhanced by mixing them? I think not, but I do know that something we hold dear would be destroyed and in its place a strange flower would grow which was neither a rose nor a lily. These flowers have grown side by side for centuries, but have never yet been known to mix.

Should a goat be mated with a hog, would the goat be improved—or the hog? Never once have I heard of a cross of these animals, though for centuries they have roamed the woods and pastures together; likewise the tiger and the lion, the bear and the deer—all of these have remained separate and distinct animals throughout the centuries. The horse and the cow are both fine and useful animals. What good could come of mixing them. Each is fine and serves a purpose in his own way. There would be no point in mixing them, but chaos and disaster would be the result and animals are wise enough to sense this. Are human beings less wise than these animals?

God has made different nationalities of birds, flowers and animals, just as he has made different nationalities of people. He knew what he was doing. He did not intend in the beginning that these different races should mix and he does not intend that they shall now. There would be nothing gained and much would be lost by attempting to make a mixture of the races. Everything that is finest and best and all individuality would be gone, never to be regained. A terrible thing of chaos and confusion from which there would be no turning back would be the result.

The Chinese people are a fine people and have contributed much to civilization down through the ages. Yet nothing could possibly be gained by mixing of that race with the Anglo-Saxon races, and here again much, very much indeed, would be forever lost. Every race has its own good points, its peculiarities, its talents and its usefulness. Each race, however, can be happier to live its own life, learning whatever is good or worthwhile from other nations.

For a long time now the negro has lived in our midst. We have trusted them in our homes and with our children. They are the only race of people whom we trust to this extent. The negro was brought to this country by the white man; brought from the wilds of Africa as a savage and taught the white man's ways. He is indebted to the white man for everything that he is and everything that he has. He is fortunate, for had he not been brought here he might still be roaming in the jungles of Africa like many of his own race. In this regard, however, the white man has an obligation. He brought the negro here and must, in a way, be responsible for his welfare, since it would not be fair to see them starve amongst us.

We have sent out missionaries to China and Japan, spending millions on these people, who in turn have often showed only ingratitude. Japan now, regardless of the many missionaries we have sent and the money we have spent in their behalf, is trying to make war on us. The negro has remained here amongst us and has been, for the most part, very peaceful. Most of the trouble we have ever had with them was caused from outside interference; strangers who came from away somewhere, understanding little about the current conditions, and influenced them against the people who have been kindest to them. Not many negroes own property on which to pay taxes, yet they have good schools and colleges. They have their own places of amusement, shows, dance halls; their own churches. Right thinking Americans feel it is right that the negro should enjoy some of the good things America has to enjoy, for they have been helpful. They have helped to fight our wars. It is right that they should have comfortable homes and some of the conveniences enjoyed in America now. I would rather see money spent on the Amrican negro than on the Japanese or Chinese who later might "turn on us," as has happened in the past. (I refer, of course, to the "faithful" American negro.)

But no pure blooded, right thinking Americans, be they white or black, would think of mixing with any but their own kind. The right thinking negro, such as Dr. Holley, who made as fine a talk as has ever been made on the race subject—will voice a strong resentment at such a thought. Ask some of the good, wise old negroes what they think about such a thing. They will shake their wise old heads and say "such things can bear no good" and should not be thought of by the right kind of people. Only a certain type of person, who is either very ignorant in the facts of life or is working for his or her own selfish interests will advocate the destruction of races; for this is what it would ultimately be. Who wants a nation of half-breeds? The thought is obnoxious!

Let us all pull together for the happiness of our nation, the greatest nation on earth. Let us not corrupt this great nation where every race of people on earth has a chance, and some of about every race and nation of people have accumulated some wealth, little businesses of their own and many of them fame and wealth in this great America, proving, indeed, that all have an equal chance for their share of happiness.

When I was in the North I observed some negroes going to the churches and shows of the white people. They did not seem happy and free like our southern negroes, who go merrily along to their own shows, their own schools and colleges; their dance halls and other places of recreation.

Race Leadership In America Has Collapsed Into A State Of Moral And Spiritual Bankruptcy

The Negro race in America, has produced only three outstanding leaders; and is now leaderless, and drifting on the sea of difficulties, like a ship without a pilot or compass, to guide or direct its course. In religion, we have no Richard Henry Boyd, to pave the way for those, who love the Lord to go. In education there is no Booker T. Washington to standardize education, and prove the possibility of his race to educate and support itself. And in politics, we have no Fred Douglass to point out the equality of races, and prove to the world that the Negro is capable of self-government, and of helping other races to make the world a better place to live in. To day, we are as a race, leaderless and in the hands of an unfriendly receivership, irrevocably committed to the proposition, to reduce the race to a condition of moral and mental slavery, by depriving it of its Constitutional rights and privileges. This receivership, is tolerated and urged on by a mercenary pulpit, cheap politicians and a few vacillating college presidents; without vision enough to see the difference between a meal ticket and human liberty.

We repeat our charge; that the race is leaderless in every human activity, effecting its vital welfare. That a majority of those who pass as our leaders, are self-appointed, or picked by white folk, and are without vision for the redemption for us all; and are more interested in eating bread out of the hands of their white masters than they are in promoting the welfare of the race, whom they pretend to serve and represent. Search the record of those living today, and examine closely their achievements with an honest eye, anxious to find a trust worthy leader in church, state or politics, and report your findings. Then tell your race, who is the Richard Henry Boyd in religious achievement, and who is the Fred Douglass in politics and statesmanship. And is the Booker T. Washington in education or who is the T. Thomas Fortune, Chris Perry, or John H. Murphy, Sr., in journalism; who made Negro newspapers an institution. The race has not as yet produced a successor to these pioneers and Christian statesmen. It was not a question of dollars with these men, but principles, that would inspire to higher and nobler heights Negro posterity. They had souls in their bosoms, and only thought of money, to light the candle of hope in the hearts of Negro youth.

We have never thought of A. Phillip Randolph as a race leader. We have seldom agreed on any policy or procedure. We have always conceded him the right to be wrong if he choose to be; just as we have reserved the right as an individual to be right if we choose to be right; which has always been our choice. While we have wholly disagreed with Mr. Randolph, we have always been ready to fight to the death for him to have the privilege to say his say. We have said this; to have the opportunity to commend his leadership for the unselfish statesmanship he displayed in sticking to his gun, in his determination to march on Washington, for more jobs for his race, under the fire of the President, members of his cabinet and his wife; and a few Negroes holding petty jobs under his administration. Mr. Randolphs' act is bold, fearless and unprecedented in Negro leadership. When the President sends for a Negro leader and asks him to call off a pending movement; he sees something personally injurious to him and his administration. It is an affront to the President for a leader not to yield to his expressed will. But Mr. Randolph was man enough to place the burdens of his race above the threats and appeals of the President and his cabinet. The President asked for the "march on Washington for more jobs for Negroes"; as a protest against the discrimination of his administration against the race be cancelled. Mr. Randolph thinking more of the cause of his people than he feared the implied threats of the President, answered; the "march will go on." Mr. Randolph and his associates have done the race a great good. They have made the first step toward a new leadership for the race. They have laid the foundation for a manly, active and militant leadership that will not tremble when standing on its rights in the presence of a white man, simply because he is white. May the Randolphs, Whites, Imeses, Grangers, Lanes, Logans, Wilsons, Boyds and Powells live long to serve their God and their race. We hope a new race leadership is born.

Freedom, Justice And Equality Of Leadership Are The Things For Which Negroes Will Ever Contend

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3—Everywhere, throuhout the country, there is uniform acceptance of a patent fact—the time has now come for all of us to acknowledge that, for many months ahead, we shall be called upon to make many and great sacrifices for this America of ours if we are to preserve some of the liberties we have for so long a period ardently cherished, prized, and fought for.

The world is askew. Civilization, more definitely than from 1914 to 1918, faces blackout-destruction. The holocaust of war spreads. It promises to engulf every golden opportunity we have boasted that America provides, and permanently to extinguish that security and happiness, and that independence for the children of men for which we have been struggling since the founding fathers announced the American way of life—that of free enterprise with unusual opportunities and corresponding responsibilities and loyalties.

Often we have stumbled. Nearly as often, we have fallen by the wayside. Wholeheartedly, as a rule, we have striven to overcome the difficulties and barriers which have blocked our path except in those particulars involving racial prejudices, religious bigotry, and those petty assumptions of superiority not inherently true, not based on fact, not otherwise true.

OUR PRESENT TASK TO OVERCOME HURDLES

Our task of the intervening months, before we are drawn into the vortex of mass murder and destruction, must be directed toward overcoming the hurts visited upon minority groups of our citizenship to such measurable degree as will atone, in part at least, for some of the grievous wrongs of the past.

Somewhat belatedly, President Roosevelt gave some hint of his understanding of these obstacles to our people when recently he wrote the Office of Production Management that our defense preparations are being retarded on grounds "entirely related to efficiency and productivity."

These "grounds" are not creditable to those guilty of these malefactions for such they are in this period of threatened peril! They are a threat to our former self-sufficiency, and to every ideal of Americanism we have held in cherished reverence.

THE PRESIDENT'S WORDS. . . WHAT THEY MEAN

The President gave voice to a sentiment which has been repeated over and over again by the Negro Press and Negro leadership generally with respect to discriminations against Negroes:

> "No nation combating the increasing threat of totalitarianism can afford arbitrarily to exclude large segments of its population from its defense industries. Even more important is it for us to weaken our unity and morale by refusing at home the very things we are fighting abroad."

Further, the President said:

> "Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production. Industry must take the initiative in opening doors of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, national origin, religion or color. American workers, both organized and unorganized, must be prepared to welcome the general and much needed employment of fellow workers of all racial and nationally origins in defense industries."

In the above, Mr. Roosevelt uses the expression: "Our Government cannot countenance continued discrimination against American citizens in defense production." Is it any wonder that Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncement has been received by the Negro Press and Negro leadership with skepticism and lack- luster enthusiasm?

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO PROVE ITS SINCERITY

It was only a few weeks ago that an official of the Glen Martin Aircraft Company of Baltimore retorted, when urged to employ Negroes on defense production:

"Perhaps, if the Government would take the lead in solving this problem by employing Negroes, industry could feel free to follow the example."

Surely the President is not unimformed of the gross discriminations, the flagrant floutings of the Government's own Civil Service Commission right here in the Capital of the Nation by evasion and equivocation in denying employment in Government to certified individuals who have met the exacting requirements of competitive examinations.

If "Government cannot countenance discrimination in defense production," how can it challenge respect for its present emphasized sincerity when the gross abuses to which reference is made are continued day by day by Mr. Roosevelt's own subordinates and servitors?

This is no trick question. It is submitted with due deference and sincere respect. It is a question calling for a direct, unequivocal reply without reservation of any kind whatsoever. The Negro people need to know how genuinely sincere our Government is when their interests are involved.

A CRISIS IN DEMOCRACY

A. Phillip Randolph has written that our country now faces a crisis in democracy; that, to American Negroes, "it is the denial of jobs in Government defense projects, racial discrimination in Government departments, and widespread jim crowism in the Armed forces of the Nation. . . The Federal Government cannot with clear conscience call upon private industry and labor unions to abolish discrimination based upon race and color as long as it practices discrimination against Negro-Americans."

If Negroes, in loyalty to all that America has meant to them in the past, means to them now, and should mean to them in the New World Order to follow the perils of this time, continue eagerly persistent in the effort to serve their Government and their country, the will and might of the nation must be put forth to make democracy here in America not a catchphrase, or a long-deferred hope, but a living, vital, throbbing thing.

Fredom, justice, equality of citizenship—these are the things for which Negroes will ever contend. Our country can concede no less.

Sacrifices For All

THERE has been considerable agitation about democracy in this country. The world has been told that America will be its democratic saviour. A sort of understanding has been arrived at with certain other countries that our great nation will safeguard the four freedoms of the people throughout the world.

Little do the citizens of this country realize just what will be their sacrifices in assuring the realization of such promises. Little do they realize the moral and financial responsibility that will have to be consistently carried out. Little do they realize the commitments that have been made and the herculean tasks required to achieve them.

But before we can do very much about assuring anybody the four freedoms we must begin right here in this country to dispense them to the millions who have never known them. We must begin with the sharecroppers, both white and black; with the day laborer, with the peons, the stevedores, the red caps, and the other people in the lower income groups who have never known what democracy meant.

It is safe to say that of the thirteen million Negroes in this country, less than a tenth enjoy American democracy. A fertile field thus lies await for those who are desirous of spreading freedom from want and freedom from fear. Those who have taken up the task of following through a consistent course in guaranteeing freedom to American citizens first have more than once wondered about the Negroes. Some, of course, have taken the position that Negroes are not to share too freely in the "good things that are to come." Recent developments along the national industrial fronts bear us out on this point. Others have vehemently declared that unless the Negro is embraced in this "all out for democracy program" the whole idea is, in the words of Shakespeare, "like a fool, full of sound and fury and signifying nothing." Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, said as much at the NAACP convention last week when he told the delegates that the American people failed miserably in their promise to the Negroes during the last war. Said he: "No failure is worse than the failure we made when we failed to live up to the promises we made to the Negro after the World War. We promised the Negro that because of his patriotism we would get rid of the poll tax, to get rid of the discrimination shown in the use of funds to educate whites and Negroes and to get rid of Jim-Crowism. We failed on every count."

We submit that before our nation lies a fertile field for action toward democratizing our ideals. Should the country fail to treat its own citizens in a manner consistent with the ideals of democracy it is safe to say that its attempt to convert people of other countries of its sincerity of purpose and earnestness of effort will fall on deaf ears.

A Price to Pay

To The News and Courier:

Miss Thompson's "Ring of Freedom" movement would eliminate class distinction, leveling classes, creeds, races to the common level of a measure of efficiency. I trust you heard her appeal Sunday for members. She offers to send literature. Shall appreciate your giving space to the following.

C. H. STOKES.

Miss Dorothy Thompson,
Care Columbia Broadcasting System, New York City, N. Y.
Dear Miss Thompson:

It was with a great deal of admiration, and interest, that I listened to your far reaching and able address over the radio today.

Your earnest solicitation struck me as not only being the expression of an inspiration, but a most logical and practical panacea for a seemingly ethereal, academic problem, which I am quite convinced could be successfully worked out.

But, as one who has ever been in close contact with our "negro problem", I feel that there exists a basic, biological force at work which would, within the next fifty years, have eaten into the very vitals of our Caucasian blood.

As you know familiarity, in some instances, breeds contempt; in some, it effects a compromise of convictions, but after the sum total and final average has been arrived at, we find we have a streak of color flowing down our grandchildren's backs, or that a civil war will decide the issues.

I am with you 100 per cent as far as you have gone, but before we undertake any panacea for our present evils, we must look deeper, and further into the future.

If we must lose our caste, our heritage, our blood, it would be a price to pay which, for a state-of-peace designed to temper the strength of the undertow (at a time when it has so much to gain and nothing to lose) would lay the foundation for a condition, which, except for nondescript, and the non-Caucasian elements, we would sooner die than live under.

The Bible says that noble war is far more to desired than ignoble peace.

Many of us would be wholeheartedly with you, Miss Thompson, if you could work out a formula whereby the biological and social integrity of Americans — the white race — will not be sacrificed to a mongrel progeny in order that an expedient economic-way of life may be arrived at.

First Mississippi Governor In 60 Yrs. To Address Race

By ALVIN HALL

JACKSON, Miss. — (ANP) —Wars and rumors of wars have a peculiar method of bringing a people together. A striking example of this was shown last Wednesday when Gov. Paul B. Johnson of Mississippi became the first governor of Mississippi to speak to a group of Negroes in 60 years.

The occasion was the first meeting of the Negro Civilian Defense council at the Lanier high school where outstanding Negroes leaders from some 41 counties in Mississippi were present. The assembly was presided over by Col. Lea B. Robinson, state chairman of the Civilian Defense council.

In his opening remarks, Colonel Robinson stated that the support of the Negro in the defense program was not questioned, yet the state officials though it wise to call a state-wide meeting of the Negroes as had been done by the white some weeks before.

In introducing Governor Johnson to the body, Colonel Robinson stated that Gov. Johnson was a governor of the people of Mississippi as a unit and not as one looking for any special favors from any group regardless of race, creed, or color.

Governor Johnson, being under doctor's orders to refrain from public speaking, said a few words of the Negroes' progress in the last 75 years and asked the prayers and well wishes of the Negroes in Mississippi in order that he might live to carry out his solemn promise to govern the people of Mississippi as one "regardless to race, creed or color, or previous condition of servitude."

President W. H. Bell of Alcorn college then spoke, the theme of his speech being the Negro in the defense program. He gave historical examples of the Negro in other crises, and said that the Negro would as usual do his part in the present upheaval.

President Bell was loudly applauded when he stated that the dance band of Alcorn college had volunteered as a unit by special permission from the President of the United States.

HELPING THE NEGROES

Editor, The Journal: I read and hear a lot these days about our treatment of the Negroes among us. I realize to the fullest extent the opportunity that we have wasted. Our carelessness and lack of interest in the welfare of the Negro race, and I am glad that our people are waking up to a sense of their duty. We, as a more favored people, have allowed our colored neighbors to grow up in ignorance and superstition, but now they are realizing their need and demanding recognition. The longer the Negroes live among us the more they try to be like us and, therefore, the greater is our responsibility. I agree most heartily with our ministers and educators in their efforts to raise the standards of living, to increase their opportunities of education and most of all their desire to show them the real meaning of Christianity. We must try to help them in the future more than we have in the past, give them better schools, better churches, and show them how to reach a higher plane. These things I do desire for their good, and we must realize that it is for our good as well, but let us be very careful to teach them to keep their racial distinction, to elevate their own race as a race, separate and distinct from ours or other races.

Let's do all that we can for the comfort, the uplift, the good of our Negroes and the best thing we can give them is a desire to improve their race, as a race.

FIRST LADY THINKS WAGE CURB UNFAIR

NEW YORK, Oct. 27—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said Sunday night that wage control seemed unfair, and might be regarded as "involuntary bondage."

Declaring in a sponsored broadcast over an NBC network, that while prices were rising, hearings on the emergency price-control bill were being held in "leisurely fashion," the president's wife said:

"There is naturally an appeal made when prices are controlled to control wages, but it seems unfair on the whole. The thirteenth amendment . . . makes people doubt whether doing so might not be in certain instances classed as involuntary bondage.

"It would seem better, perhaps, to protect the worker from a rising cost of living not only through control of price on foodstuffs, but through some kind of rental control, and then appeal to his democratic patriotism for a voluntary stabilizing agreement, arrived at by the machinery instituted for collective bargaining."

To check inflation in the country, she recommended removing excess money by taxation or by selling defense bonds.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she had a letter from the Pacific Coast, tending to show that stories designed to arouse anti-Semitism and cause disunity in the United States were being circulated.

"My correspondent says," she asserted, "that in practically every city he has visited stories had been told to the effect that the largest Jewish-owned department stores had discharged many American workers in order to provide jobs for Jewish refugees. No story could tend to create disunity more rapidly. This is not true. The Germans circulate a story like this to create a dislike of the Jews."

Black Cabinet Ruffled By Segregation 'Powder Keg'

By Harry B. Webber

Around a table in one of Bordentown's assembly halls Saturday afternoon sat a group of men and one woman. The group numbered several men whom we include in the "Black Cabinet" that rules the destinies of 13,000,000 Negroes. It included Walter White of the NAACP, A. Philip Randolph of "March of Washington" fame, Judge William Hastie of Washington, Ira D. A. Reid, Hubert Delaney. Near them sat other members of the Cabinet, Channing Tobias of the YMCA, Dr. Charles Wesley of Howard University, Prof. W. R. Valentine of Bordentown, Max Yergen of the National Negro Congress, and others.

These men and perhaps a hundred or less others in the nation have arrived at the highest point possible in this peculiar American set-up. They head that world within a world which is the Negro population. They lead that isolated Negro mass which lives contiguous to, but rarely participates in the life of the American in this country. These are the men we speak of when we talk about "our national leaders." Several women also belong.

Saturday all were disturbed by the question which emanated from the audience:

"How can these leaders advance the cause of equality in the country when they are themselves heads of segregated set-ups?" It is a tough question. It certainly nettled many present. When Walter White was asked the question by Ira D. A. Reid, he asked annoyingly: "What question?". His answer was weak.

Segregation in American life was being discussed by these men although they featured a segregated YMCA gathering meeting in a segregated school located in a segregated state which is part of a segregated nation. A certain hopelessness over the whole issue fell across the room as the big question was discussed.

It was like a powder keg and the match which set off the discussion was Warren Banner's statement on the segregated school question. "I look on it from the economic side," he said. "Pittsburgh has only three teachers under a mixed system while Philadelphia has many under a segregated system."

Hubert Delaney then started his customary advertisement of New York conditions: "In New York we rose from a few teachers to near 300 under mixed conditions," he said. He did not add that New York is not New Jersey and New York is not Georgia.

A certain helplessness seized the speakers on this question. Dr. Charles Wesley asked what could be done in a community to break down the color bar in all things. No one ever really answered the question. In fact the audience could just as well have discussed it because the experts were mostly at sea. The wiser experts said little, knowing whatever they said would be inadequate. Most of them floundered.

Channing Tobias, however, plunged into the discussion in the end and gave the thought which was probably agreed upon by the cabinet.

"While working for the ideal of no segregation we cannot afford to destroy those institutions which are virtually racially separate," he said. "And this does not mean that I approve segregation."

Distressing part of the whole affair was that no one would realistically discuss the separate school issue. One visitor from Louisville assailed the speakers' "arm chair philosophy on segregation" and branded it impractical.

No one pointed out the fact that there is a difference between voluntary and involuntary segregation. No one spoke of the feasability or otherwise of a complete Black Economy based on the idea of a general boycott of white enterprise in favor of black enterprise.

No one admitted that segregation was growing, not reducing. Walter White did assail President Patterson of Tuskeegee for fostering a segregated air unit.

It was and is a tough question. The group should get credit for throwing the discussion onto the floor. One tires of hearing such speakers waste other peoples time talking about the many fine things they did in their daily job last week. We tire of their everlasting use of empty words which mean nothing but yet which audiences, somehow, applaud. We are even tired of audiences listening with patience to speakers who give them only a long string of big words which have no possible practicality, and are only strung together like empty platitudes to keep people asleep on real issues.

Often I think it would be better if our panel speakers kept quiet and listened to the audience argue. At least they would then know how ordinary people feel and think. Then they would not forever say and do things which are so far out of line with what people want them to say.

It took the audience Saturday to make the panel speakers get down to earth. When they got down to earth they found the earth hard and unfamiliar and distressing. They were undressed before their public. Some argued like schoolboys after the session. It was all very disillusioning, but nevertheless, interesting because real.

Be A Governor, Don Quixote!

WEEK AFTER WEEK now The Statesman which grows yellower with each printing, hurls its printer's ink against a sector of our population who are not in a position to reply with vigor and effectiveness.

With each succeeding issue, the personal and political organ of the Governor of Georgia is attacking, belittling and crying out against the Negro, as though he were a polluted, harmful, desecrating animal out to harm, destroy and befoul the countryside.

In bolder type than the ordinary on his front page this week, he speaks of "buck Negro" and gives over just about one-half of the entire page to slurs, attacks and tirades against the darker people in our midst.

What is the reason for all this week-after-week abuse heaped upon the heads of those who are our cooks, maids, porters, nurses, messengers, janitors, waiters, chauffeurs and other servants?

What have they done to deserve this vicious and malignant word-beating and criticism? Are they fomenting revolutions, race riots, plots, threats and the like?

Are our barns being burned down, our cattle stolen, our homes robbed and set fire?

Or do we live in peace with these people, side by side in our own way, following the plan that we ourselves have said was best? You would not think so by reading the trash, tripe and rot now being carried in the so-called Statesman.

* * * *

Are these colored people such terrible beings, after all? Were they created by the Devil or by the God of creation?

They go to church, and we always heard they are the most religious s well as most eloquent and musical race in the world.

They are hard, earnest workers, and but for their labor in the fields, on the highways and some other places, the South would not have built as rapidly as it has.

They have made it possible for the Southern people to have more leisure, especially in the home, and build a greater culture. It has been said that considerable culture exists only where cheap labor is found in abundance: whether that be true or not, the South has benefited through a certain drudgery being removed.

But we never knew the agency of such removal was so horrible as Governor Talmadge's "Statesman" declares.

Why we have even let one of these terrible beings cook for us, and did not get poisoned. We have even come to regard her as a sort of "part of the family"—but this must be sacrilege indeed to the fearful heart of Mr. Talmadge—or shall we say, political heart (if politics always has a heart)?

We even went so far as to let some of them nurse our children; O what bad judgment!

We trusted them with as much as a twenty-dollar bill to go to the store. Isn't it strange that they ever came back? But they did.

* * * *

Where are all these terrible, mean, ugly-hearted, dark-minded, ferocious and deadly black people that the political organ is screaming alarm about?

We must find them, and quickly ,or our Georgia will be destroyed! (Our Governor's Georgia!)

We must not go to sleep tonight until these dangerous human spiders have been chained and imprisoned!

Truly, the Boogey Man is about to get us; the goblins have climbed up on the roof and are peering in at our window; the vampires have swooped out of the superstitious ages of history to swirl over our beds ready to pounce upon us; the imps and demons of the Bottomless Pit have embodied themselves in our cooks, maids, nurses, porters, teachers, doctors and others of the darker race and we are in terrible danger! Or are we?

* * * *

Grow up, Mr. Talmadge, grow up!

Close your nursery-rhyme book and get out of the nursery!

Shut behind you the door of the playroom where you read the tales of ghosts and "haints" and get back to the business of being Governor!

The Great God Jim Crow

THE MOST ILLOGICAL, unreasonable, hypocritical and nonsensical thing in American life is the great God James Crow. Truthfully he can boast more worshippers than the Lord Jesus Christ, for there are many professing to be Christians who do not find it difficult to also pay homage to their idol 'Jim.'

No single thing contributes quite so much national and racial disunity as does this hapless fellow, within whose shadow falls those other twins of dissension, discrimination and prejudice.

Have you ever sat down and tried to ascribe a reason to some of the customs of "keeping the races separate" prevalent in various communities? And these practices are by no means limited to purely Southern localities.

MACKAY

UTTERLY RIDICULOUS

Some are so ridiculous, if it were not for the tragically humiliating effect they have upon a whole race, they would be funny.

In Atlanta Negroes are allowed to enter street cars through the front door with other passengers but under city ordinance are forbidden to make their exit that way. No matter how near the front of the car you are seated, if your face is black, you must walk the length of the car and depart through the rear door. Are there any laws of logic that could be applied to this peculiar procedure to make it have reason?

The Fulton County (Ga.) Courthouse in the same city, erected with taxpayers money and dedicated to the proposition of meting impartial justice to all, has four elevators.

One of these elevators bears the sign, "For Colored Only." Yet, Negro witnesses and others who have business to transact on the upper floors of the building oftimes cannot find room on this lone car dedicated to the questionable ideals of Mr. James Crow; so crowded is it with white passengers, who do not believe in signs.

NEGROES REBUFFED

Negroes, however, who seek to ride the three other elevators are loudly rebuffed and embarrassed by the plainly hostile white operators.

The most humorous worship of the God Jim Crow was observed the other day by the writer, while watching a crew of workmen repairing a stretch of track. Conveniently placed on the repair truck was a water barrel.

One side of the barrel was painted white, the other black. I learned there was nothing in the barrel's interior to divide the water. Yet Negro workmen under the asinine ruling of Jim Crow must draw their drinking water from the spigot on the side painted black, while white workmen drank the same water, but drew it from the side painted white.

THE ARMY FAILS TOO

And if you thank that is silly, a young man employed at the Fourth Corps Area quartermaster depot told the writer of a practice that even surpassed the above in idiocy.

How far some officers of the United States Army have fallen beneath the siren call of this strange god, Jim Crow, was divulged by this young, intelligent worker, who asked this very puzzled writer for a possible reason.

It seems that the quatermaster's office at Atlanta provides buckets of water for thirsty workmen and each bucket has two dippers, one for white, another for colored—thereby satisfying the duo-racial requirements of Jim Crow. But the joker here is that workmen of both races dip and drink from the same bucket.

Equally as silly to this writer's way of thinking is the ruling of the American Red Cross that no blood of Negroes can be used for deposit in the "blood banks" being built up for transfusions in the event this country enters the war.

'PSYCHOLOGICAL' REASONS

Army and Navy Medical officers, according to Red Cross officials, are responsible for the ruling barring for "psychological" reasons the acceptance of any blood from Negro donors, though wide appeal is being made for persons to donate this precious life's fluid.

The "psychological reason," of course, is just another and more subtle way of stating this widespread deference to James Crow. Inconsistent is the plan to use this "white" blood for transfusion for Negro soldiers, while at the same time holding it terribly wrong to use "Negro blood" for white transfusions.

And just as inconsistent is this entire business of Jim Crow. One just can't ascribe any rhyme or reason for it.

Though its workings are for the most part stupid and illogical, one who all his life has been a victim of it, cannot fail to see the sinister motive for its creation and maintenance.

Clearly it is an asinine and clumsy, yet extremely effective design of the majority group to embarrass, humiliate and harrass the less fortunate and often politically powerless minority.

Born in the morass of discrimination and raised in the distorted atmosphere of prejudice, the great god Jim Crow today is unquestionably the chief bottleneck in the path of national unity and security.

The quicker its utterly senseless practices are removed from the American scene, the sooner can America settle down to its great task of proving to the remainder of a rapidly disbelieving world that democracy is the practical, workable and only hope of life.

In the Wind

A NEW CAMPAIGN to create pro-Hitler sentiment among American Negroes has been started in New York's Harlem. Its leader is Harry Frederick, a veteran Harlem soap-boxer. The Amsterdam News, New York's largest Negro newspaper, carried a signed article by Frederick on October 11. "Few of us Negroes," he wrote, "realized that ten years ago German was also like Harlem, everybody owning it but the natives. Germans were gouged economically and politically just like we are today, but Hitler changed that. What has a Negro to gain in this war but agony, pain, and death for no other cause than to build stronger chains around his neck? Because of this so-called 'Beast of Berlin' the world is undergoing a revolution that will place the black man on top."

What Is True Story?

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—No man can know less than I about life in Russia, both before and since the revolution, but there are millions of other Americans who know as little and therefore I suggest that we, who are prattling so much about religious freedom there, should be told what really were the causes of the long blackout.

The Russian, we are told, are deeply religious as a people but we were told also that under the Czar they were ignorant, loutish and docile victims of exploitation and superstitutions. Their clergy, by all accounts that came to us in those days, were not faithful to their sacred responsibilities and, if this version be true, were largely responsible for the decline of religious practice, although, apparently, not the obliteration of religious faith. I wish some of those authorities who have been taking part in the recent discussion would frankly go into that phase of the question because, if the restoration of religious freedom means only the revival of such a system, that obviously is a project in which Americans will not want to involve themselves.

Monopoly Not Freedom

Moreover, religious monopoly is not religious freedom, although freedom is commonly said to exist in countries which protect and subsidize one official or favored religion or sect to the exclusion of others. Religion apparently is thoroughly at home under the dictatorial form of government, provided that the dictator tolerates one or more religions, and we of the United States have no mission to assist in the restoration of religious freedom or monopoly under any dictator.

That religion will outlast Hitler and Stalin and will revive in Germany and Russia after these little men have vanished, no mind can doubt. But there is a distinction between religious faiths and the properties and personnel of a church, as a well-known Catholic priest reminded me some time ago in urging that men should not permit the failures and misdeeds of erring clergymen to drive them to apostasy.

Yet clergymen have a terrible responsibility and are guilty of a terrible wrong when they undermine the confidence of people in their government by giving aid and comfort to dishonest public officers. We have areas in the United States in which men of the church have openly sided with corruptioneers or with the rich and powerful, and it is a fact which would be laughable if it were not so solemn that any man who attempted to preach and practice Christianity would be scorned in any Christian American neighborhood. There is neither black belt nor ghetto in heaven but the Christian American can't bring himself to practice the brotherhood of man on earth.

Cited Georgia

In Georgia, under the present state administration, Jesus Christ, Himself, doubtless would be lynched for stirring up the Negroes with false notions of equality and the same Georgia Governor who lately averted the calamity of equal learning for white and black would not be happy sitting on a cloud beside a Negro field hand. The church-going suburban snobs who so proudly exclude Hebrews from the boredom of their locker-room smut-sessions after golf will be physically ill when they find the Cohens right next door up yonder but they will be no more at ease in hell where the zoning ordinance again is set at naught. Yet all, or most, such Americans believe themselves to be Christians and I dare say that most of us have felt pretty indignant at the Communists for scoffing at our choosy brotherhood operating under the sign of the cross while they have mingled white, black and yellow, Gentile and Semite apparently without the slightest race-consciousness under the hammer and sickle.

We know why religion fell in Spain because it has been admitted that the people were oppressed and exploited under the eyes of churchmen who failed in their solemn responsibility to correct these words. Yet, when Franco won and his massacres were going, religion was restored by force with never a note of regret or apology by those whose negligence had caused the disaster. If religion fell for the same reason in Russia certainly there should be some open admission on the fault and some attempt to assure the world that the clergy will now serve the people, not the masters, in the name of Christ.

But meanwhile, in this country before we undertake to enter the export trade, it would be well to examine our own understanding and practice of Christianity which has nothing to do with the shape of one's nose, the size of one's feet or the color of one's pelt.

White Man's Burden

Editor The Telegraph:

Through the centuries of history the Negro has been subservient. God or nature created him with instincts, laxities and idiosyncracies that have distinguished him from all men of the earth since his beginning. The founders of the American government did not consider him the equal of the white man, as a hundred subsequent years of his slavery proves; and the Civil war, emancipation, the years of his freedom and education and all the laws of the land have not made him equal.

But the years of his freedom and education have made of the Negro the greatest burden ever put on the white man's back in any land . . . filling chain gangs by as high as 10 to one of the whites, and tainting something like 50 per cent of the Negroes with syphilis and a high rate of consumption; scattering these diseases even among the whites.

And, but for the Negro the South could all but abolish criminal courts, close up eight out of every 10 penal institution, turn three-fourths of its jails into recreation centers, skeletonize its police forces and reduce taxation to a shadow of the all-time and increasing high. But for the Negro murder in the nation would not have increased 15 per cent during the first three months of this year. By the records, 75 years of freedom and education with increasing earnings have not made the Negro healthier, or a better and more lawabiding citizen. Today the most lawabiding Negroes will be found in rural communities with less school facilities, where the Negro works from sun to sun for a living.

One wonder what would happen in the great state of California, where 200,000 Japanese have created such disturbance that California would bar the Japs from owning real estate, if three or four million Negroes moved into the state? The Jap is a better worker and more law-abiding than the Negro; there are less racial differences. Yet, California has loathed the Jap for years. And one wonders if the prudish heart of New England would warm up to the intolerant and narrow-minded white South, if New England's population was doubled by the influx of Negroes?

The Negro, as a Negro, has the helping hand of the white South, but as an equal, his way can lead only to strife. The Negroes of the South have earned more and lived better than the menials of any other nation; have been better off than 60 per cent of the world's people. Those thoughtless souls who sponsor equality, are the creators of racial prejudices, discord and hardships for the Negro.

Letters to the E

False Pride

Editor The Telegraph:

What I would like to know is the meaning of the word superior and also inferior? What makes which and which makes what? Color of skin or moral principals? So much is said of the American Negro being in his place and the way I see it every other day in the daily paper is subjected under the "white man." How about the red man, yellow man, brown man or even the ape man? To whom should they be subject?

Because we are not members of the white race is there any reason why so many colored people should suffer so many ignorant and inhuman insults about this and that—especially in regards to "his place?" God made us all, regardless of what our color may be.

Did He not bestow upon each and every one his color and even his size of stature? Did Christ say on any occasion that any man should be buckled down and humiliated by any particular race or color. He may have, but so far I have read nothing of that intent in the Bible.

Why shouldn't colored people have college education? We in the South don't advocate attending Mercer or Wesleyan with the white people. We have universities of our own and people of the colored race are capable of doing anything that any other race can accomplish, physically, mentally, spiritually or any other "ly." So what?

Who, with any common sense except some one that is not thinking in terms of national unity which our president has just found necessary to emphasize, has thought of the fact that no chain is stronger than its weakest link? Are we not all Americans, fighting for the same principles of government?

Did not the hands of the Negro guide the plow's edge that broke American soil? Did not the hands of Negro men dig deep into the bowels of this continent to help bring forth its vast national resources that we now possess?

Into America's making has gone not only our sweat and brawn and brain but our blood as well.

In the final analysis there is a comforting thought—that there are more good, white American people that are considerate and that consider colored people as being human and not a dumb brute without a soul, than there are of those who hold false pride —which goeth before destruction.

Let us remember that God's will shall be done—not ours.

SENTIMENT GROWING

President Roosevelt is at the peak of popularity with the public. On top of that, the ratio of public support for his foreign policies, always high, is higher than it has been since the outbreak of war in Europe. America trusts the President and is pretty well united in the belief that other things must wait until the menace of Hitlerism is crushed finally and forever.

That public sentiment is shifting more than ever to the President's support is beyond dispute. The signs are manifold. There was the action taken by the American Legion convention and the disaffection of Senator Capper of Kansas, and Rep. Dirksen of Illinois, both Republicans, from the ranks of the isolationists.

What accounts for this new swing in sentiment? First, of course, is the ever growing conviction that the President stands head and shoulders above his contemporaries in understanding world events. Every development in Europe and the Orient proves that he has been right, everlastingly right, since the beginning of the great conflict.

The second reason is equally important—the confusion, the muddy thinking, and the petty nonsense of the men who presumed to lead America along the path of isolation. The longer the war goes on, the smaller these men shrink in stature. They can't agree among themselves.

Col. Lindbergh told his fellow countrymen that "even if America entered the war," it is improbable that the Allied Powers could invade the continent and whip the Axis powers. In other words, England is done for, so stay out of it.

Mr. Herbert Hoover wants to keep hands off for another reason. He says "a cold survey" shows that Hitler is sure to be defeated even without an Axis rout on the continent. He thinks Hitler is done for. That certainly is a cold survey. He and Col. Lindbergh reached the same conclusion by methods of reasoning as far apart as the two poles.

Senator Gerald Nye turned a neat profit over the past several years by lecturing the public on the iniquity of war. The burden of his argument was that wicked Wall Street, anxious to protect its loans to the Allies, conspired to get the United States into the first World War. He brandished the Wall Street bogey, and incidentally Hollywood, for a time in the present crisis. Then he recalled that Wall Street has no direct financial stake this time because Uncle Sam is doing the lending. Wall Street, in fact, may lose a great deal through heavier taxes like the rest of us.

So Senator Nye detoured. He tossed in the hated racial issue in the hope of arousing public passions and prejudices. The sorry business backfired so he is now engaged in telling the public, at least those few who will listen, that his opponents dragged in the racial issue. Col. Lindbergh tried the racial stuff, rather gingerly, but he also found it too hot to handle.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, that wordy and voluble statesman, has retreated into a shell of silence, a trying circumstance for him. Two years ago he thought it was a "phony war" but now he knows differently. Rep. Ham Fish is still carrying the torch and the public greets him with customary indifference. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the ablest of the isolationists, has reduced his efforts to petty sniping at Administration policies.

The isolationists have been overwhelmed in the rushing torrent of history. Their silly antics have augmented public confidence in the wisdom and safety of President Roosevelt's leadership.

Negro And White Students Fight In Mich.

DETROIT, Mich.—State police were called out at Lincoln High School at Ferndale, Thursday to prevent further violence between white and Negro students after one boy had been seriously stabbed and several others injured in an interracial incident.

The school has an enrollment of 1,700 students, approximately 75 of whom are Negroes. Trouble started when two white and two Negro youths had a fight after school. Soon there was mass fighting during which Branson V. Gamber, 17, was hospitalized after being cut, and Harold Wright, the school's halfback on the football team, suffered a broken nose.

Exploitation Of Women Is Blasted By Ark. President

OCT 28 1941

Dr. Watson In Strong Address At Kansas City

OCT 28 1941

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(SNS)—A powerful and determined voice resounded in the Second Baptist Church here Sunday when Dr. J B. Watson, president of Arkansas State College pleaded the cause of the financially and socially underprivileged Negro girls who are being victimized by unscrupulous people.

Dr. Watson spoke to a very impressive rally in behalf of the Big Sisters' Home, a philanthropic institution in Kansas City for the education and uplift of underprivileged young women.

Tracing the case of exploited womanhood in historic perspective, the distinguished educator exposed the ill treatment to which women have been subjected continually in the past. He blasted the terrific exploitation which Negro women have experienced in the past and are experiencing today because of their financially and socially underprivileged position.

"That the race people themselves are keeping ahead in this scheme of exploitation is most deplorable," said Dr. Watson. In his opinion, the subject is one of extreme importance to us all of today. The time has now come when men and women of vision and Christian Charity must act in order that throughout these United States, underprivileged Negro girls will obtain a better chance for education, employment, and respectable living.

Dr. Watson substantiated his plea by referring to the moral and spiritual foundations on which christianity is built up. He pointed to the attitude of Christ, to the humble and lowly, how Jesus came "seeking and saving that which was lost," and how He strongly denounced the attitude of the Pharasees, Scribes and other vested interests which kept down and trod upon the rumble and the lowly.

The speaker complimented Dr. John E. Perry and his co-workers for the splendid service they were rendering to young women through such institutions as the Big Sisters Home in Kansas City.

Pursuit Of Democracy

AMERICA DIVIDED IN THREE CAMPS ON RACE PROBLEM; URGE MILITANT LEADERSHIP

BY MARJORIE MCKENZIE

ALL America is divided into three camps on the problem of the Negro's role as a citizen. First, there are those who believe that race relations are doomed to an ever-recurrent impasse; that two dissimilar peoples are insoluble. They hold to the theory that the irresistible force of Negro life and the immovable object that is white prejudice will remain in static opposition to each other. In this camp are strange bunk-mates. They are the poor whites and the rich whites of the traditional South as well as the poor Negroes whom they have taught the inertia of despair. Together, they are known as the Defeatists—the defenders of the status quo. They include the politicians who create the diabolical frame-work of separatism and Jim-Crow; they include, as well, the Negro leaders who are permitted positions of limited power in order to sell us short.

Miss McKenzie

PROFESS IGNORANCE

In the second camp, are those who clasp hopefully to their bosoms the belief that the problem is capable of being politely ignored most of the time. Here will be found the majority of white Americans in the North and West who profess ignorance on the Negro question and by refusing to act, tacitly approve the manoeuvers of the opposite camp.

Their allies in indifference are the self-styled "upper class" Negroes who have achieved economic independence and cultural competence in a tight little world of their own. These two groups comprise the Escapists—the fellow-travelers of the status quo. They are greatly to be feared in spite of their tolerant irresponsibility towards the Negro masses, for as Rabindranath Tagore has said, "The world suffers most from the disinterested tyranny of its well-wishers."

CAMP three is the camp of the liberal, old and new. In it are the men and women who have enlisted in the all-out fight to create and preserve democracy. They have finished with compromise and debate. They include ever-increasing numbers of whites who, at last, have come to believe that Truth in government, as in all its forms, is a perfect thing. They understand that a repudiation of race prejudice is an investment in the future. In this camp are the Negroes who courageously have denounced the old leadership that brought only dishonor. This is the camp of the Revolutionaries—the enemies of the status quo.

STAND UNITED

All three camps are bi-racial. The Negro masses are Defeatist; the Negro elite are Escapist. Herein lies the task of Revolutionaries. They must invade the citadels of defeatism and escapism and bring all the Negro people under one leadership. No lasting nor significant progress can be made until we stand united and speak with one voice.

THE Revolutionaries must work out a tactic. They must send volunteers into the other camps to teach new faith and arouse intelligent leadership. Accompanying this propaganda work there must be Panzer divisions of social action to penetrate the boundaries of custom and precedent. There are notable and heartening examples of what this technique can accomplish. In the field of education, we have an effective Revolutionary in Mordecai Johnson, who has made of Howard University an institution that defies the handicap of segregation.

WAR OF IDEAS

In law, we have such daring thinkers as Charles H. Houston, who, frequently and skillfully, has over come the philosophies of the opposing camps before the Supreme Court of the United States.

THERE are other Revolutionaries, but they are too few, too scattered, too disorganized. We must close the ranks. The entire world is at civil war. This is not a war of guns and ships and men alone, but of ideas. The is chaos and revolution.

Only revolutionary thinking can deal with the issues involved. America has got to relinquish her defective democracy for totalitarian rule or substitute a democracy that is honest, universal, and that will work. There are Deeatist and Escapist camps in every area of the public life. For the moment, the searchlight is on the field of labor and race relations.

As a matter of strategy, those of us who have been compromising with the Defeatists and dawdling with the Escapists, must transfer our allegiance to one camp—the camp of the Revolutionaries. For this one camp is the proving ground of the new Democracy.

WEEK-END C-H-A-T-S

By JAMES A. HAMLETT Jr.

THE NEGRO RACE is in the midst of what might be termed a second reconstruction period in American history. I believe that it can be safely said that the Negro race has done more in the last eighteen months through coordinated strength and mass action to better his economic and industrial condition than at any period in our history.

The results are the story which cannot be missed by even the most casual thinking citizen. Surely, in the most remote community of this nation it is bound to be known that certain definite changes relative to the status of the American Negro are taking place. Those changes are coming about as a result of social, political and economic pressure that causes the human pendulum of self-preservation to swing in whatever direction it is best to survive.

America must be in real danger because of certain changes now taking place in regard to the American Negro. Whenever things are moving along smoothly it is hard to get the ear of the oppressor, but when the oppressor is oppressed he is able to understand the problems of the oppressed. And it is then and there that he is willing to deal.

America has become conscious more and more every day of the fact that democracy cannot live under the present setup which we have in this country. Just this week the President of the United States spoke out in very positive language against discrimination being shown the American Negro in the defense program. The President ordered that such be stopped in order that America might have the desired unity necessary to build up a strong national defense.

THROUGH MASS ACTION the Negro has gotten the ear of the President of the United States. Through pressure and mass organization the Negro is getting more consideration than ever before. But there is a great deal more to be accomplished which must take place within our own group. The day has come that our people must realize the value of organization and working together in order to safeguard our economy. Enforced laws will make an individual give you your rights and respect you but there is no man-made law that can make human beings love you and respect you as a human being worthy of consideration.

Such attitudes are built upon what a race contributes to a nation and from the status a race occupies in a nation. We must realize more as a race of people that we must support our own institutions and our own leaders if we expect to have a strong defense to safeguard the privileges and rights given to us by the government. There is no such thing as independence in America today and especially among Negroes. Every Negro who lives by bread and meat depends upon somebody for that bread and meat. A large number of Negroes must work in white industries and for white people. They must work for institutions and people who have their own money invested. The record will show only a few instances where Negroes have money invested. They have very little control over such corporations as railroads, packing industries, steel corporations and other similar corporations, but yet a large number of Negroes are employed. Some work under favorable conditions and some work under unfavorable conditions. Some work for good wages and some are underpaid. The Negroes who work at these industries are the economic backbone or foundation of the Negro race.

THOSE WHO CALL THEMSELVES the independent class must depend upon these working people to make their living. They do not have to compete with the white man in the employment lines and get the pay check windows and pay the union offices. They receive their money from services rendered in professional lines and business lines. But in many cases we find many of them who would rather ride around in fine cars giving elaborate parties and boasting of their independence rather than giving a little bit of service in behalf of the working man who makes it possible for them to ride around in fine cars and live like kings and queens. The Negro who has the support of the working man and who is able to become so-called independent should ever be on the firing line to help solve and help fight the probems that the working man cannot solve because he is dependent upon institutions and business concerns for his living where Negroes do not even have one dime invested. And when he supports a Negro in a community who makes that Negro independent, that Negro owes it to that people to join in with the leadership and whatever organizations that are trying to do something to solve the problems of the masses.

Much work has been done and much has been accomplished in our behalf in the last eighteen months, but we have reached a point where there must be some tightening of the reins with our group. The time has come when the undesirables must be set aside and give room to those who desire to do something. "The race is not to the swift nor the strong but to those who hold out to the end."

CHANGE THE WORLD

Negro Oppression Is a National Mental Affliction

By MIKE GOLD

"MIKE GOLD apologizes for the absence of social contact between Negro and white by saying that social pressure stands in the way, one person fears what his landlord will say, another fears his relatives, etc. . . . But these are very poor excuses," writes indignantly the educational director of the Nat Turner Branch of the Communist Party in Lower Harlem, "and they certainly will not help the fight for equal rights.

"We must make it part of our daily struggles to demand full social rights for Negroes. We have a right to invite anyone we please to our homes and no landlord can stop us. It is our duty as trade unionists and Communists to educate people. We must put our theory into practice."

Miss Bobbie Patrick, whose poem in the Daily Worker was the prime mover in this discussion, seems to be as riled by the tone of my column.

"I think you are almost defending those very tendencies that the Party is determined to uproot," she says. "The fear and timidity that shrink before social pressure will never help to break down social discrimination. Is it any tougher for whites than for Negroes? We, too, have friends, parents and even landlords who try to intimidate us for associating with white friends. But we must resist such pressure, just as we resist all the petty-bourgeois tendencies.

"There are already people of the two races who live and work together, freely and sincerely. Why? Because they have struggled, evolved, rooted all the petty bourgeois world out of their minds. Comrade Gold, as a favorite writer, you should point out petty bourgeois weaknesses so they can be corrected. Don't defend them, EXPOSE them."

I wish it were as simple as all that. But the terrible race oppression in America demands more than the customary muckraking and exposure for its solution. We have exposed and exposed. We have fought and even won many a historic battle for Negro rights—Gastonia, Scottsboro, and others too numerous to mention.

True, it has been an "inching-along" process, but has shown some results. There is an improvement in this war period I believe, over that of the last war, when Negro veterans in uniform were insulted and even lynched in many southern cities.

But the nightmare is not ended by any means. And one cannot wait until it is solved as the Russians solved it. We must live in the meantime; and fight for the daily small local gains, that over a long period of time, sometimes total up into a new atmospheric change.

As I re-read my original comment, I find that all that I was saying was that Negro and white fraternizing isn't a simple process. One even finds some Communists, certainly people who do not lack courage, ready to risk their lives for liberty in a crisis, who are timid and unsure of themselves when it comes to making a personal effort toward breaking down the color line.

They aren't scared of the big efforts; it is the little daily effort. This is a psychological state of mind that reminds one of the timidity of newly released slaves, who still feel like slaves, and have to be encouraged and heartened to exercise their new rights.

What I was trying to indicate was that more than courage was needed for this problem. We must first thoroughly understand the condition. Then we must have tact, patience and ingenuity in treating it.

I believe the comrades who criticized me have over-simplified. You cannot handle this delicate psychological situation as you would a strike, a fight against food profiteers, or a street corner meeting.

It is something like the religious problem; even more obscure, deeply rooted and complex, I should say. The races have been taught not only to hate each other, but to fear each other. It is something that is started in childhood; and every psychologist knows how tough it is to erase these complexes formed in childhood.

No, it is wrong to disguise such difficulties of a problem from ourselves. Only by accepting and understanding the difficulties will we be able to encourage others to find some courage in meeting them. Abstract slogans aren't enough. We must know how to apply the slogans in daily life. We must find a hundred easy ways by which Negro and white can learn to know each other, like each other, be at ease with one another.

Basically, race prejudice is an economic problem. On the surface, however, it appears as a mental problem; the anti-Negro feeling in America is actually a national mental disease, as serious as the Nazi pathology. Communists are Americans who are on the road to recovery from this mental disease. But many are still convalescents; and you have to treat them as such, patiently but firmly, like a good doctor, until they can walk on their own feet.

Fight against all manifestations of race chauvinism. Fight, also, for a daily bettering of social relations between the races. This takes a different technique; and I hope we can all learn it soon.

RACE PREJUDICE ON THE SURFACE WILL NOT ABATE THE SIN – THE ROOT OF THE EVIL MUST BE CUT

The term, "The American way of life," is a popular accord, in the United States of America; used by both the white man and the Negro, as a slogan to excite the people; while the demagog covers the principles of human liberty for all, without regard to race, color or religion with propaganda. The white man uses the slogan because he thinks of white folks only, when he is talking about the American way of life; and the Negro is not in his mind. The Negro uses the slogan because the term is pleasant and sweet to his ear. The educated Negro likes pretty phrases and beautiful language, with no thought of what the word means to him. The Negro uses the term because the white man uses it, without the knowledge of what the slogan means to the white man, and what it means to him. Seventy-five per cent of white Americans do not recognize black Americans as part of the conscience, character and wealth of the nation. The destiny of the nation is figured out by the white man exclusive of the 13,000,000 black people, whom the Constitution of our country guarantees equality of rights, privileges and opportunities, without regard to race or color. In many places in our country, the Negro is denied the right to live, vote or hold property. Shot dead in open court; lynched by mobs of white men.

The Negro constitutes a peculiar species of the economy of our national welfare. He will vote for the man of another race, who will rape his wife or daughter; steal his vote and lynch him in the dark; deny his child a decent education and, cast him into physical slavery, and the Negro will not raise his voice where his persecutors and murderers can hear it. The over-educated Negro leader is a cowardly appeaser, who works on the surface to take care of himself, at the expense of his race. He never strikes at the root of the evil. He promises the white folks, that he will keep the masses of the Negroes quiet if they will take care of him. Put his name in a white paper sometimes, when he writes about religion; good Negroes and domestic servants. This class of Negro leaders, never write anything about economic or political rights of their race. They never denounce jim-crowism or racial discrimination. They never raise their voices for skilled jobs for their race or political jobs; all they talk about, is religion, domestic servants, janitors and scrub-women. Going back to the farm where there are no houses to live in; schools for their children and where their race is thrown into peonage on contract law for debt.

Economic progress, industrial efficiency and reliability, must in the fitness of things; precede political control, or even large participation in public affairs. But no form of government ought to long exist, that denies any class of its citizens a voice in the control of any government that the law makes them a part of. No government is just without the consent of the people it governs. Taxation without representation, is tyrannical and obnoxious to all decent people. Negro leaders ought to learn that the top is not secure, unless the foundation of the structure, is sound and safe. The only way to decrease race prejudice, is economic and industrial progress. We must become sellers of what the world wants, and not all buyers of consumption of wealth for the production of wealth. We must become sellers of what the world wants, and not all buyers. Religious and economic independence, will abate the man's prejudice to the Negro. The Negro will soon obtain the majority of the things he wants if he will work faithfully on the foundation of the things he wants if he will work faithfully on the foundation of real forts on the surface.

Negro has lost more in rights, privileges and opportunities to make a living during the years of the Roosevelt administration at Washington, than he lost under all the Presidents that preceded the present administration, since the death of President Lincoln. The trend of the present administration, to make America a white man's country, in theory and in practice. The Negro leader is too dumb to see the hand writing on the wall. No man is so blind, as the fool who will not see what his eyes see and behold.

DIXIE Highlights

NAACP And Civic League Should Have The Stimulant We Need

JAN 26 1941

By ROBERT M. RATCLIFFE

LAST WEEK WE SAW A man of our race get on the witness stand in a superior court and attempt to prove his good character by informing the judge and jury that on one occasion the county in which he is a tax-payer saw fit to use him as a juror.

Now that statement would have gone a long way in helping to prove the man a good citizen. That is, if he had not been a colored man.

Certainly, he must have been ignorant of some existing facts. Perhaps he didn't know the names of colored tax-payers are separated from names of white tax-payers and that the names of only the whites are called for jury service in county courts down here in Dixie.

Surely the gentleman of our race did not know only an accident could have made it possible for him to be called for jury service. His name might have been mixed with the whites or they didn't know he was colored. It was a slip, anyway you take it.

He never knew because he did not make an effort to serve. He explained he was sick at the time and excused by the court. Which surely did not hurt anybody's feelings.

Making that statement in a county court was one of the biggest mistakes he ever made. He soon found it out, too.

When one of the prosecuting attorneys addressed the jury, he laughed at the colored brother. The lawyer turned to the 12 white jurors and asked them to imagine, if they pleased, this Negro man talking about serving on your juries, passing on cases involving white people, protecting your rights and your children.

We remember not so far back when two other men of our race received notices to serve as jurors for one week at the county courthouse. They were farmers, living deep in the rurals, and no one had gone to the trouble of finding out if they were colored or white.

It would have been better, we think, if they had asked the judge to excuse them that Monday morning when they reported for duty. But they didn't. Whenever their panel was called to the box, they walked behind the rails and took a seat same as the whites.

Usually, a prosecuting attorney seldom excuses any juror. But whenever one of the colored jurors stood up to give his address and occupation, the prosecuting attorney would say, very indifferently, "Excused."

Maybe, the two farmers considered it a good time for a vacation as well as making some easy money. They pay jurors, you know, whether they see active service or not.

Negroes can and may serve on these juries in southern counties. The U. S. Supreme Court has ruled on it.

'Tis true, the average Negro is indifferent about the whole thing. Some don't give a hoot if they never serve on a jury.

But they must be convinced that they must get what is due them. Yes, we all have got to be urged on.

And who can do that better than our efficient Civic Leagues and local branches of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People?

We are forever being told what we gotta do and what we oughta do, but unless our big organizations take it upon themselves to make test cases, we are going to continue listening to those things we gotta and oughta do.

We need a stimulant. Our NAACP's and Civic Leagues should have it.

Advises His Rac

Editor The Telegraph:

A word of advice to the colored people, my race, the Negroes of the South:

Through the plans of God and our government, the colored people have the greatest opportunity presented to them now on the farms than has ever been presented to them, and I want to advise them to grasp this golden opportunity before it is too late.

Go back to the farm where you can raise and have plenty of fresh good food to eat and live happy; where you can get your houses free, gardens and water free, where you can raise good children and serve God.

Sin, vice and laziness are destroying the Negro race everywhere. The chain-gang and penitentiaries are crowded with them.

Jobs are scare in small cities. Farm production is much needed, and prices are good in war time. The government farm housing project offers you anything you want; will sell you a home, rent you a farm, let you have money, stock and give you forty years to pay for it. Look how they are trying to help us. Giving us rental money, our old people's pensions, good schools, free books, paying the teachers, adult schools, clinics, doctors and medicine, fruits of all kind free to our school children.

Wake up and get on the job and help them and yourself. Fred Douglas and Booker T. Washington said once in a lecture to the colored people that if they wanted to be recognized as a race they must serve God, marry and raise good families, be good trustworthy, truthful, honest citizens and work, be economical, have money and buy a home. Bishop Y. W. Bell and Dr. A. S. Clarke, two of the foremost race leaders of the South, in a lecture to the colored people this year advised them to work, be thrifty, economize and live good citizens, and the white race will surely help you.

Yours for peace and safety of all races.

'Native Son'

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—I am one Negro citizen of Richmond who appreciates your editorial on "Negroes Under the Nazis" in The Times-Dispatch, April 7.

While I deplore the conditions under which many Negroes and also many whites, for that matter, live in the North and South, I fully agree with you and can say the Negro has no better friends in the North than here in the South.

I lived in Pennsylvania for 10 years working, and when I had the chance to come back home to work, it was a glad day for me.

The Nazis will never help the Negro, but will do all they can to cause trouble for us all. I have always been afraid to trust anybody that promises to do too much.

I say to put your trust in the Lord, and depend on the friends you know, because there are some things you can't buy.

A Democracy's Second Table

FEB 1 1941

As this is being written young men in droves are saddling their careers and ambitions to a round-about horse because their national system involves the freedom and equality of all peoples. At the same time millions of youthful minds are shrouded in frustration because the future they survey is steeped in a revolutionary chaos as bottomless and inescapable as doom.

One does not have to study the anthropologists, Radin and Jean Finot to discover that the theory of superiority of race and classes is a myth. Great races rise and fall inevitably. Wars and revolutions that overthrow them prove that no class or nation however rich and powerful it may be, can stay at the top of the Wheel of History. There has not been a single exception in five thousand years.

Right now America is wallowing haplessly in the crucible that marks her as the Laughing Star of all that is civilization and progress. Wtih Democracy on trial for its very life, threatened by the iron tread of Militarism, it is needless to say to what extent the facts of its principles must be guarded if we would hazard any guess that our national system is taking a prudent header for the void of destruction. There never was a time in the recesses of our nation's history when its rooted structure showed itself less fragile to the winds of world disintegration and avarice than at present.

Yet for all her apparent alarm, amid the strident turmoil and unrest born of an increasing influx of alien propaganda, sabotage and the thunderous betarade of a war class-loving America still finds itself a generous and tidy example for effecting the orderly precepts of democracy while at the same time venting its racial vehmence upon thousands of Negro youths who beg their right as citizens to share in its defense.

Last week, three hundred Chicago Negro flyers pledged themselves to a movement to enlist in the Royal Canadian air force. These youths, who have two years of college and physical qualifications needed to become cadets in the air corps, "are disgusted with the broken promises that the personnel of the army would be maintained on a proportionate population basis." They charge "the administration has made nothing but empty gestures. Only twenty boys so far have been accepted to use the fine Waco training plane which was given to the Harlem airport. The men are not paid the $75.00 a month received by cadets at other fields and do not receive the proper equipment, medical care, board or lodging." One of these youths finished third last year in a flying course conducted by the civil aeronautics bureau at the University of Mirnesota.

These three hundred Negroes may not achieve the ultimate ambition of the 15 or 20 million whom they represent but it must be said that these youths possessed of the same heritage of individualism as other Americans, will not be easily turned away. They are now offering piety on the side of the democracies but it should be remembered, nonetheless, that in this same tumbril rests the soil in which the germs of subversion thrive best and it is the identical putrid stuff that dictatorships are made of.

Yes, America should chuck the Fiat Luxers and the Betterment Buddies who howl the glories of democracy from platforms and town halls throughout our "nation Indivisible" until the nations garments have been adjusted from the skin out. Only then can we even think of achieving a national unity and the restoration of peace in a world whose body politic is already prostrate with racial bigotry and the oppression of minorities.

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON SAYS HE IS FRIEND OF NEGRO, IN AN APOLOGY

FEB 28 1941

Promises to Stop Telling Watermelon and Razor Stories If They Are No Longer Relished.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (ANP)—When the Scripps-Howard newspapers published Gen. Hugh Johnson's story on the promotion of Gen. Davis, a number of readers of the cain papers waxed indignant and wrote letters to various papers to express their indignation. That the letters may have had the desired effect is reflected in a latter occurrence whereby Gen. Johnson sought to impress his readers with the valor and courage of Negro troops under the actual conditions of hand to hand combat.

But his editors saw fit to eliminate the story from the column and upon the column's publication, Gen. Johnson sought the opinion of the Associated Negro Press representative and Walter White of the N. A. A. C. P., as to whether the column as written contained any objectionable matter.

Having told the general that the story was not becoming to illustrate his point, although it was a well known yarn, the general wrote a reply, parts of which are quoted herewith:

"This is to confirm the correctness of your advice to me when I asked you whether a Negro-dialect story I had proposed to put in my column would be offensive to our colored people. I had thought the contrary to be the case, because it emphasized the war heroism of Negro soldiers. But, as I advised you, I also consulted Walter White. You will be interested in the pertinent paragraph of his reply.

Mr. White said: "I thought it an excellent story. There are some colored people however, who would object to it because it perpetuates the sterotype of all Negroes carrying razors, shooting dice, eating watermellon and chicken, and strumming banjos happily in the moonlight."

Further, Gen. Johnson writes:

"As you perhaps know, as the press of your people has frequently remarked, and as I think my conduct has repeatedly proved—especially in N. R. A., W. P. A., in New York City and in the conduct of my column which in several cases as the exploitation of red caps has crusaded for Negro rights—I regard our Negroes as American citizens in respect of whom I take pride and feel a duty to protect rather than humiliate."

FEB 28 1941

"N. R. A., did more to improve the condition of colored wage earners, especially in the South, than any earlier Act of government since our beginnings. When I took over the W. P. A. in New York, there was no Negro representation on the federal relief staff and the rule of distribution of aid as between the races, was to keep it 'in proportion to their relative population.' Since the Negroes overwhelmingly are the greater sufferers from unemployment; I changed that to 'in proportion to the relative degree of unemployment;' created a Negro advisory board and appointed the son of my old friend and comrade, Col. Charles Young, as advisor of my staff."

The reason behind the deletions in Gen. nhoJson'esolum CMFW—— Gen. Johnson's columns are enigmatical, but it is evident that some pressure has been brought to bear on the editorial department of the syndicate handling his columns and in defense of his attitude, Gen. Johnson has expressed himself

Harlem Rally Asks Release Of Anti-Fascists

FEB

Release of all imprisoned anti-fascists was urged by a mass meeting Monday night at Renaissance Casino, Harlem, called to protest the internment of W. A. Domingo by Jamaica secret police upon his arrival in the British West Indies late last month.

JUL 1 1941

Domingo, a British subject residing here for more than 30 years, had been invited by N. W. Manley, K.C., head of the People's National Party of Jamaica, to return to the West Indies and "help organize and educate the people to be ready in advance for the things promised them by the British government."

He was arrested before he could leave the steamer and is now held in a concentration camp, according to speakers at the meeting.

Demands were also made for the freedom of Luis Carlos Prestes of Brazil and of Earl Browder.

A. J. Isserman, representing the Council for Pan American Democracy, stressed the Browder case and said there can be no successful fight against "Hitlerism or Nazism if we are stifled by these evils here at home."

Southern White Woman Scores Dixie Attitude

JUL 6 1941

BLUE RIDGE, N. South American Government Hostility Due To Snubs Given Latin-American Girl From Finishing School In U. S. A.

JAN 24 1941

NOTE: The following article is by Jay Franklin, a writer of the Seattle Star. Every South American country is more than fifty per cent dark people and one country is more than 90% dark. They have a high rating of intelligence. They believe in practicing the virtues they preach. They do not demand an eye for an eye but seem bent on giving a snub for a snub and a slur for a slur. They seem to think this democracy of ours needs an emersion or renovation.

"Here is one instance of the damage that has been done to our cause by the unlovely survival of slavery and reconstruction in our public life. Some time ago a beautiful charming and highly cultured Latin-American girl was sent to a finishing school in the United States.

"Of Spanish ancestry, she had a touch of colored blood in her veins—whether Moorish, Indian or Negro does not matter. During her visit in this country she was snubbed or otherwise made to feel that the Americans regarded her as belinging to an inferior race.

"Years passed. The girl returned to her home south of our border and in due course of time married a rising young politician. She retained a sense of burning resentment at the treatment she had received in the north.

Today, her husband is the president of one of the republics to the south, one of the countries whose friendship is necessary to us for strategic as well as sentimental reasons.

SNUB FOR SNUB, SLUR FOR SLUR

"He has embarked on a policy of marked hostility to the United States, paying back snub for snub, slur for slur, on the American representative at his country's capital. He threatens to make common cause with the axis powers. Jim Crowe is coming home to roost in the Capitol of the United States, because the color line has alienated a powerful politician whose friendship we need and whose good will would be valuable to us in this time of crisis.

"Even today, with the fate of democracy at stake, the South will not consent to the passage of an anti-lynching bill and the spokesmen for southern interests refuse to enlarge the franchise by repeal of the poll tax for fear that thereby Negroes will be allowed to vote.

AMERICA MUSH PRACTICE DEMOCRACY

"If America is going to rest its case against Hitlerism on the principle of democracy, we should begin to practice democracy, by establishing social democracy, political democracy and economic democracy. JAN 24 1941

"And if we value the friendship of our good neighbors to the south, we had better get rid of Jim Crowe or else Jim Crowe will help get rid of us in all those nations of the Western hemisphere where the color line has not been drawn and where racial discrimination is a national issue.

The Passing Year

The end of 1940 finds civilization at the cross-roads of destiny attempting to stem a course that apparently leads to the brink of ruin. In the brief period of 12 months we find that world politics has like a viper turned upon itself, bent upon the destruction of all that humanity holds dear. Hell from the skies hourly is hurled upon all of the cultural shrines of 2000 years, while the people who created this Frankenstein spend frightful nights in caves polluted with stench and disease. JAN 4 1941

One is amazed and dazed when he surveys all that the past year has erupted from the guts of coveteousness. France, England, Poland, Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands, nations having had control and guidance of millions of subject people, lie in ruins. Might has over night turned to fright and frailty.

Black Dispatch readers may get some idea of the chaotic condition to which we refer when it is pointed out the only place today where France is free lies in Africa. England has turned her guns on the French fleet and French air-planes made in America now bomb the English country side and helped to wreck Coventry.

The evil consequences that followed the mad rush to loot subject peoples in a dollar made world are exposed in the fact that Hitler's panzer divisions swiftly moved across the European continent in American trucks, French tanks and manned with British guns. In spite of this terrible venal experience America today sells vital crude oil products to Japan while in the same moment trembling in mortal fear of the bombs falling from the skies on the Burma road, out of Japanese airships powered by American gasoline.

Power politics has carried bloodshed and suffering to the countries of darker people. Today England and Italy paralize Egypt with their dictatorships, while Japan stands like a dog on lesh seeking to wrest the East Indies from the Dutch. Russia growls at Germany, while the so-called democratic nations send missions to the land of the Soviets attempting to establish friendship with a hitherto social and political pariah. While all this is going on two thirds of Europe's population is starving.

Dorothy Thompson, noted commentator, in a recent statement said the "first shot fired" in Europe "heralded the end of an epoch. Briefly put, that was the epoch of capitalism nationalism and democracy".

And the President of the United States inadvertently states the case of darker peoples everywhere, when in his

Testifying in behalf of a bill to prohibit discrimination against persons because of race, creed or color on defense projects or in awarding government jobs, Mr. Miller said many of the largest corporations in the nation required that personnel be "white, Christian only" and so stated on application blanks given state employment agencies with requests for suppying workers.

He also said that the National Youth Administration in California stipulated in connection with a voca[illegible]al course in aviation that Jews, Mexicans and others were not eligible because they would not be able to obtain jobs in the industry.

Herbert Agar Assails Treatment of Negro

Houston, Tex., June 25——(AP)—Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, took the American people to task for their treatment of the Negroes in a speech last night at the opening session of the 32nd annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colord people.

"That is not a war that is being waged over there," he said. "It is a revolution against a decent way of life. We have contributed as much as any other race to make this revolution possible by refusing to live up to promises we have made.

"We promised the Negro after the World War that because of his patriotism we would get rid of the poll tax, of discrimination in education, of Jim Crowism. We failed in every count."

Sunday night attack upon Hitler declared "..... a gang of outlaws surround your community and on threat of extermination make you pay tribute to save your own skins".

Thus at the end of 1940 we find confusion, chaos, terror and violence the flower of 2000 years of so-called culture and civiliation.

z

In the United States the re-election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt was the most outstanding event of the year. The wrecking of foolish traditionalism with respect to a third term is indicatory of growing liberalism that in the next decade will find expression on many fronts.

JAN 4 1941

We believe that this developing liberalism means the destruction of old political parties with their narrow prejudiced traditions regarding Negro participation, and the development of alignments definitely separating labor from capital. The CIO movement definitely trends in this direction, and it is in this struggle Negro and white toilers are beginning to see their problems as mutual, identical and the same.

This type of unity between white and black toilers means the end of poll tax laws, lynching and other forms of regional unbalance, and in its stead the growth of a real democracy. Opportunity will then be given to study the many ills resulting from farm tentantry, illiteracy, civil liberties, home ownership, housing and health.

Peace-time conscription inaugurated by the present administration will mean much to black America. It is essential and necessary in a strife torn world, but in addition it offers an opportunity for the broadening of the reach and vision of Negro youth. At the end of this period of training Negro youth will have become more sophisticated and less provincical. Just as the world war ended in the great exodus from the Southland this conscription period will open the eyes of thousands. It will in fact mean an exodus of spirit.

The current draft exposes fully the amount and character of discrimination extant in the American army. It is this yardstick by which we may note the distance we actually are from real democracy. No more grevious crime could be charged against a social order. The American black man stands in 1940 at the door of American democracy asking this question "Is it fair to train one citizen better than another in the defense of his country?"

Not until the American government has accepted the black man in the air the army and the navy, on equal footing with other citizens, will this nation show intelligent and democratic approach to the issues of the present day. Is it not inconsistent to say that the nations of the earth should organize an inter-national brotherhood to preserve peace, when right here in America we have not rid our environment of such anti-social organizations as the Ku Klux, Christian Fronts and Bunds? However much we may seek to ignore it America in her attitude towards Negroes follows the same evil pattern which in its essence has led the world to this terrible moment.

Norway and the Netherlands are said to have swarmed with thousands of spies, sabotuers and traitors. The recent mysterious explosions in American munitions plants indicate a serious problem faces our way of life.

Labor unions placing premium on white faces and ignoring the black worker are now faced with the task of sifting the foreign born population for taints of dis-loyalty

While all of this is going on hungry black men, whose devotion and loyalty to the flag has never been questioned, may be tardily rewarded, Civil liberties are in great danger today as white folk suddenly lose confidence in one another and start unreasonable witch-hunts. While this is unfortunate it may develop that in this hour of crisis our vital industries may secure 100% protection through the employment of Negroes previously jim crowed and ignored by subversive groups.

There is danger also that world crisis may end with the United States in control of a large colonial empire in the West Indies. The naval bases secured in the Caribbean may be the entering wedge to ownership of the Bahamas, Jamaica, Haiti, Dominican Republic and Cuba. The unusual interest of the State Department in the East Indies and the movement of our naval forces in that direction can mean that eventually in a struggle with the Japs the American flag may float in New Guinea, Borneo, Batavia and Sumatra.

Unquestionably the manning of military bases upon alien soil is froth with danger. For instance if Hitler were to conquer Britain and consider the West Indies as a part of the loot, we would have no alternative other than to fight, and the fight would surround the issue regarding whether the United States or Germany were going to control the Caribbean countries.

Expansion of United States colonial control into the Lesser and Greater Antilles may furnish an outlet for the newly elevated Brigadier General Ben J. Davis, and the separate regiments being today suggested by a large number of white and colored leaders. The president has already dispatched a Negro federal judge to the Virgin Islands. Perhaps army prejudice could be temporarily placated in the event a Negro regiment commanded by Negro officers were sent to police a section of this hemisphere not populated by white people.

ARMY'S ONLY ALL-COLORED ARTILLERY REGIMENT DRAWS HIGH PRAISE

JAN 11 1941

Nelson M. Shepard of The Star's reportorial staff recently returned from an Army conducted tour of posts in the South and Southwest. In this article he describes the Indian and Negro troops, the only individual units of their kind, that are training at the old artillery post of Fort Sill.

By Nelson M. Shepard

Modern Indian warriors in the olive drab uniform of the American doughboy--grandsons of the fierce tribesmen who once ruled the Western plains—are training now as infantrymen at Fort Sill, Okla., shoulder to shoulder with stalwart grandsons of early white pioneers.

One of the newest outfits in the Regular Army is the 349th Field Artillery Regiment, composed of Negroes, and like the Indians, with white officers. This regiment which will be followed by a considerable number of other Negro units to give the race proportionate representation in the expansion program of the Army, was organized at Camp Dix, N. J., November 2, 1917. It served in the A. E. F. during the World War, being engaged in the Marbache (Lorraine) sector from October 11 to the November armistice of 1918. The regiment was disbanded at Camp Dix after the war.

Last August the 349th was revived with a nucleus of about 150 Negro soldiers from the 9th and 10th Cavalry; the 24th and 25th Infantry. It is the only Negro artillery regiment set up in peacetime. A small detachment from the Field Artillery school helped in the training.

Within a month 1,100 recruits were assembled, most of them from the cotton fields of Texas and Oklahoma. Of the 77 officers, 57 of them were Reserves, many with only a few weeks' training.

Today these recruits, one of the finest looking and best drilled outfits to be seen on a tour of Southwestern posts, are proud of their distinctive role in the United States Army. They are husky men, eager to learn, amenable to discipline. They are beginning to operate the 155-millimeter howitzers of the regiment with the precision of well-trained artillerymen.

The regiment made a fine appearance as it passed in review. It consists of six batteries of four guns each. Each gun was pulled by a 10-ton Diesel tractor.

The man who fired the last gun of the 349th Regiment in France was recalled to service when the new regiment was organized at Fort Sill and fired its first shot. He is Master Sergt. Hensen Outley, a quiet, unassuming and highly trained soldier of the old Army.

After the war, Sergt. Outley left the Army and from 1925 to 1931 he served as military adviser to Liberia, the African republic, through a treaty arrangement. While on an extended leave from Liberia in 1929, he visited Germany. There he became a member of the Reich air police, with 1,500 hours of flying to his credit. This was before Hitler's rise to control at a time when Germany was evading the spirit of the Versailles Treaty by building up its air force and army. Only then they were called air police and military police.

Sergt. Outley returned to this country during the start of the depression and to the Army a few months ago, he said, "because he wanted a job and soldiering is to his liking."

The Crew Takes Charge Without Mutiny When the Captain Loses His Mind

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

FEB 10 1941

The public schools of England, originally intended for the underprivileged, have been for generations the exclusive schools of the well-born. Only the best are admitted, and only the best of these survive. Boys can't bluff or cheat their way through.

This system, whatever its faults, developed the ablest and best-trained men in England—which means the best in the world. Because they are most fit, and because old grads help young grads to find a place, public school men control the government, the army, the navy, and the church.

But now there is something new under the sun, and England is becoming a socialist democracy.

Recently a lieutenant colonel broke into print with the assertion that only public school men were qualified to lead and control men in the armed forces. His superiors promptly punished him and he was dismissed from his post.

Thousands of smart boys who are sons of commoners are being trained as officers. It is the beginning of the end for aristocracy and its privileges.

Why were the commoners given a chance? Was there a shortage of men? Had the commoners developed new ability? Was it the influence of Russia's Communism?

The explanation is much simpler. The aristocrats failed. Still the bravest, coolest and best-trained of men, they became arrogant, complacent and stupid and led Britain to the brink of utter ruin.

A century ago, Boston was dominated by Yankees—a superior breed, keenly intelligent, shrewd, industrious and highly skilled.

The inpouring Irish were untrained peasants, tolerated but scorned. When employers advertised for helpers, their ads often ended with the words, "no Irish."

Now the Irish control the city. And again the explanation is simple.

FEB 10 1941

The Yankees failed. They failed to stick together and they failed to have large families, while the Irish were both clannish and prolific.

In the share-cropper belt, the Negroes are straining every resource to educate their children, while the illiterate whites are content to raise theirs in ignorance. There is only one ending to that system.

If you wish to know the kind of America your children and grandchildren will inherit, observe which kind of people is now doing its utmost and which has quit trying.

You and your kind inherited America. If some other crowd is now taking over, it is simply and solely because you are failing.

A Southern Negro's Plea

Southerners too often forget that Negro ignorance and inefficiency hurt the white South hardly less than the Negro South. Even self-interest demands that we do more for Negro schools, health work, farm and home agents, vocational training, etc.

The Progressive Farmer presents a letter from a thoughtful Negro, S. B. Thomas of Georgia, who presents the truth from the point of view of his own race:

"In 'A Platform for Rural Progress,' you were thoughtful enough to ask for a fairer deal for Negroes. I want to thank you for mentioning us.

"We compose a large percentage of the population of the South. There can be no permanent prosperity in the Southern States with us idle, unskilled and unlettered. Neglect of us by you all as to our health, our education, our home life and our employment has been paid for many times by the South. We are just what you make us, an asset or a liability. We cannot be the right kind of citizens without education. We cannot make progress unless we get sympathetic aid for our white friends.

"My people have been exploited by your people, and it is time that your attention be turned to spending enough money on us to make us a contributor to Southern wealth, rather than a drain on it. We want white friends who will not only show tolerance, but who will take active interest in our well being."

It is with justifiable pride that Lawrence County can point at this time to two fine accomplishments in major projects begun at the end of the past year—the Red Cross Roll Call and the Annual Christmas Seal Sale. Both of these drives were admirably planned and excellently carried out. The results of each speak for themselves, and also speak for the great spirit of generous sympathy that imbues the hearts of the contributors to these worthy causes.

Lease-Lend Debate Verges on Filibuster

By RALPH SMITH

The Atlanta Journal Bureau,
Mayflower Hotel,
Washington, D. C., March 3.

ASSURANCES to the contrary notwithstanding, isolationists of the Senate apparently have launched a filibuster against the lease-lend-aid-to-Britain bill. Their evasiveness lends color to this impression, which is supported further by "incriminating" implications—repetitious speeches, for example, by senators who have heretofore exhausted their information and knowledge, meanwhile straining their vocal chords and abusing the patience of their colleagues.

There is Bob Reynolds, of North Carolina, "100 per cent American" globetrotter, set and ready with the manuscript for five more hours of spread-eagle oratory, and Burt Wheeler, of Montana, top-hole administration hater, primed for another long-winded address after having held the floor for three days. And Gerald Nye, Big If-man of the Senate and beau of the chautauqua platform, prepared to resume where he left off last week. A handful of unnamed senators, in addition, are counted on for "fill-ins" in case the Bigger Berthas exhaust their ammunition, or foul their voices.

Yes, as Senator Russell suggests, evidences point unmistakably to a filibuster, although the flag-wavers deny they are embarked upon an attempt to block the legislative process by abusing the freedom of unrestricted and unlimited speech in the Senate.

The attitude of the little group of Willful Men would be ludicrous if the situation were less serious. Frothing with "righteousness," they protest they are not, in fact, filibustering and in the next breath blusteringly they threaten to filibuster if any effort whatsoever is made to expedite consideration of the legislation by lengthening the daily sessions of the Senate.

Dick Russell, in this connection, observes, and with truth, that a filibuster against the lease-lend measure can be smashed and without resort to cloture. It can be smothered by a few continuous sessions of the Senate, he suggests.

"Instead of recessing or adjourning overnight, let the Senate remain continuously on the job for 48 or 60 hours and the obstructionists will listen to reason," says Russell.

Cloture Seldom Invoked

The so-called cloture rule of the Senate makes it possible for a group of one-fifth of the membership to file a motion to close the debate on a pending bill or resolution. The motion isn't debatable, but its passage requires a two-thirds majority of those present and voting.

The rule was adopted during the second term of President Wilson, on motion of Senator Martin, of Virginia, the Democratic leader. It was approved four days after Wilson's second inauguration, by a vote of 76 to 3.

Four months later, in July, the rule was invoked for the first time, on motion of Senator Chamberlain and 21 colleagues to close debate on the National Security Act. Rather than test the sentiment of the Senate the opposition wilted and suspended debate.

A month late, Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, filed a cloture motion, bearing the signature of 59 senators, to close debate on the war revenue bill. Again the opponents wilted and suspended further discussion.

First cloture really came on motion of Senator Gilbert Hitchcock, of Nebraska, over ratification of the so-called German Treaty. Cloture was ordered by a vote of 78 to 16.

On two different occasions the Senate declined to invoke cloture to defeat the filibuster of Southern Democrats against the antilynching bill.

But when it came to setting up the prohibition bureau, under the Coolidge administration, the Senate voted cloture overwhelmingly.

Senate Filibusters Common

The Senate has been the scene of many famous filibusters. A hundred years ago, for instance, just after the Whigs came into power, the Senate talked for a week over a motion to oust the Senate printer, whose name at the moment escapes me and is immaterial, anyhow.

Again in 1841, the fight over the bill to establish the Bank of the United States provoked a filibuster of two weeks. Five years later the admission of Oregon to statehood caused a filibuster that continued for two months.

The Force Bill filibuster of 1891 continued for forty days, and the Silver Purchase Act of 1893 was discussed for two months.

During the Wilson administration, Panama Canal tolls brought on a filibuster, and so, too, did legislation establishing the Trade Commission and amending the Sherman Antitrust Law.

The ship subsidy and ship purchase bills were filibustered.

Some Notable Filibusterers

A filibuster that is even measurably successful usually requires the services of probably a dozen senators, relieving one another and resorting to occasional quorum calls. There have been, however, several one-man filibusters, such, for example, as Theodore Burton's singlehanded fight against the Rivers and Harbors Bill of 1914. The Ohioan held the floor for 12 hours and ten minutes, relieved only by a quorum call now and then.

The elder LaFollette blasted the Vreeland-Aldrich currency bill for 18 hours and 25 minutes, 'way back yonder in 1908. He had help, however—frequent interruptions and numerous roll calls.

Allen Ellender, of Louisiana, and his senatorial predecessor, Huey Long, are famed in Senate lore for their filibusters. Ellender established some sort of a record a couple of years ago, speaking about—well, I forget what he spoke about. . . . And the Kingfish held the floor for 15 hours and 35 minutes in June, 1935, blocking legislation extending NRA until he got what he was after.

Americans All

MAR 1 1941

Many thousands of our Negro fellow-citizens must feel pride and satisfaction in the observance of Negro History Week, which comes to a close tomorrow. Those of other racial stocks may feel pride and satisfaction, too. The news of the 1940 choices for the honor roll of Race Relations, announced by Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick of the Schomberg Collection of Negro Literature in the New York Public Library, was broadcast not only here but in England. It told the story of an American democracy in which there is at least an earnest attempt to do justice to racial and religious minorities. We make our mistakes. Justic Hugo L. Black, once a member of the Ku Klux Klan, had the honor of being recognized this year for decisions in which he upheld the civil liberties of the colored race. Other designations included Professor Einstein; Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis; Jack Benny, whose Negro character 'Rochester" upholds the dignity as well as the humor of the Negro race; that valiant fighter, Henry Armstrong, and Dorothy Maynor, one of the most gifted of our women singers.

We may not yet have reached the stage when all that is asked concerning an American citizen is how well and how conscientiously he has made his contribution to the public welfare or the public entertainment. When that time does come, "race relations" will be less important. But we can at least say to all the world that we are learning to honor creative ability, intelligence and public service with less and less emphasis on the racial stream from which they come.

Ralph McGill Attacks Laxity Of Democracy

MILLEDGEVILLE, Jan. 25 — The greatest threat facing American Democracy comes from the American people, Ralph McGill executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution, asserted today in an address before the fifth annual institute of human relations now in progress at the Georgia State College for Women.

"All the little groups of Nazis, Communists, saboteurs, and malcontents are just pikers," he said. "The idea that this country is in danger from Communism is plain silly. There is some danger of Fascism, far more than Communism. The real fifth columnists are ourselves when we are careless of our government."

McGill attacked laxity of Democracy in Georgia.

"In the long record of our Georgia governors there are too many instances of men who have nullified the action of the courts, used force ruthlessly, violated our liberties and our constitution, and in other ways done damage to our Democracy. It is from the inertia of our people that our greatest danger comes."

McGill pointed out that Fascist countries are active, alive and are not weak. To combat them will require "a great effort for national unity on our part."

The editor declared that he believed in all possible aid to Great Britain, stating flatly that he believed the only way to completely defeat Adolf Hitler will be for the United States to get on boats and go get him. He agreed with a question asked by a member of the audience to the effect that this nation will have to send soldiers to Europe if England is to win the war.

McGill pointed out that "we are engaged in a great effort to build an Army and a Navy that will continue regardless of the war in Europe." This is a costly project he said, pointing out that the weekly payroll at one camp in Macon alone is $250,000.

The institute will close Sunday with two talks by Dr. Sankey Blanton, pastor of the First Baptist church of Wilmington, N. C.

MAR 23 1941

COLORED AND JEWISH RADICALS

Rabbi Edward Israel, of Baltimore, spoke of an editorial in a colored newspaper advising Hitler to keep his 450,000 Jews, for to dump them here would lower our economic standards through competition.

Such sentiments were expressed in the Afro recently but not in an editorial. Rabbi Israel should solve its own unemploy- columnist does not necessarily speak the views of his newspaper. Nor do we see anything unusual in the view that the United States should solve its own unemployment problem before it admits any new immigrants. It is a view that is quite common albeit selfish.

Rabbi Israel also condemns colored people who, he says, shout aloud against the Jew, as Hitler does, on the theory that it might possibly help alleviate "the Negro problem."

It is most unfortunate that radicals among colored people or Jews should be taken seriously.

Colored people who rail against Jews are no better than Jewish department store owners who, yielding to race prejudice, put up a color bar saying "Colored people stay out."

The better element of the Jewish people does not approve these Jewish exponents of race prejudice. And we hasten to add that we do not appreciate the occasional but petulant voices on our side which seek to fan the fires of racial intolerance.

But we live in America, where press and speech are free. We do not muzzle those who are in error, but patiently set up our loudspeaker as close to theirs as we can and broadcast the plain facts.

We have found out by experience that the people, hearing both sides, will eventually choose that which is right.

The Negro Problem

AN AUTOMOBILE containing seven Negroes crashed through the side of a bridge and went into Yellow Jacket Creek, four miles north of LaGrange, at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Charlie Poythress was pinned between the wrecked car and a post of the bridge. His fellow passengers could not release him. Along came two troopers of the Georgia State Patrol. They could not free him.

One of the troopers, G. W. Goss, got into the water to support Poythress and save him from drowning while his partner, Lee Dillingham, went for help. For one hour and a half Trooper Goss stood in the torrent, water up to his neck, holding up the head of the injured man. Eventually a truck equipped with chains pulled the car so the victim might be liberated. He died a few hours later from loss of blood.

Trooper Goss told the LaGrange Daily News: "I talked to him on every subject under the sun, to try to take his mind off his injuries. . . . I wish that Negro had lived. He had as much courage as any man I ever saw."

There is only one Negro problem between the brave and the honest of the two races. That is the problem of mutual assistance in a difficult and sometimes cruel world.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

"I WENT MYSELF" Well, sir, I sort of liked the way in which Major Trammell Scott told of the Roosevelt haters who are busy being disloyal to their country.

When the hearing on Wheeler's petition for use of the auditorium was completed, this group rushed down to the railing, their jowls shaking in what they conceived to be righteous anger:

"You are the sort of man who took our boys away in the last war," they said.

"I didn't take anyone," said the major, "I went myself."

The major added a little bit more. He told them he thought that in this day and time persons who weren't loyal to their country were not worth a dime a dozen.

The major wasn't talking double talk.

He was one of the boys that went.

It is curious how this hatred of the President persists. You will find it behind a number of things. You will find hatred of the President behind some of the forces and actions in the state government. You will find it motivating even some of the county politicians.

They just can't get over it. The man beat them every year. He stands for humanity. He has destroyed more special privileges than any president we've ever had. Those who live by special privilege hate him with an intensity so great it will not permit them to be loyal to their country merely because he is its president.

His price estimate was a little high, though. I seriously doubt if they are worth a dime a dozen.

A MAGNIFICENT JOB Mr. Roosevelt has done a magnificent job of keeping us out of war. Mr. Wendell Willkie, who is a very real patriot, would have had us in long ago. Mr. Roosevelt has done a really magnificent job. Yet the people who insist they don't want war hate him just the same.

His sources of information are, of course, the best. He is aware of the very real danger the European situation involves. The nation isn't. We still go along trying to have our cake and eat it, too. We have to prepare realistically and not half-heartedly. The need for unity is paramount. Yet we see state politicians and national politicians, because they hate Roosevelt, doing all they can to create disunity.

They snap and snarl at his heels, but he goes ahead. The people are with him. The spiteful minorities make a lot of noise and do their share of harm. But he goes ahead, doing one of the finest jobs this nation has ever had done for it.

Plainer than ever now is the fact that all the arguments against a third term were specious and unfounded. We had to have this third term. The nation needed Roosevelt.

The major said to those who shouted at him:

"Your kind are a dime a dozen. God help this country if there are many more like you."

There aren't many more, major. The people are wise to them. They always are to be found on the front row and on the wrong side of every question. Mr. Roosevelt is going to see us through.

ROAD TO MOSCOW In New York some wit has them laughing with:

"You take the Lwow road, and I'll take the Heil road, and I'll be in Moscow a-fore ye."

No one knows much about that war except that Germany is winning. The victory pace is not as speedy as it has been in the past. The real news of it is hidden by the censorship maintained by both nations.

It must be that Germany is paying a terrific toll in men and materials. This invasion is costly. It is the first war that has cost them anything. All this adds up as help for England and for this nation.

The immediate effect is good. Both the murdering nations are taking punishment. England is getting respite. The factories of this nation are gaining momentum.

By Christmas we should be able to make a Christmas gift to England in the form of planes and weapons which will turn the tide of the war. It is a question of whether the world can wait it out. A Hitler victory by August would find him in a strategic position to demand a peace.

We shall hear then, from the various groups whom Major Scott has so ably evaluated. It is perfectly astounding how those groups admire Hitler and his book, "Mein Kampf." They very much would like to be in control of this country as he is in control of Germany so they could satisfy their sadistic impulses to persecute all who disagree with them.

It is discouraging. But we'll come through.

Now and then I agree with a Negro yard man who said, of Mr. Roosevelt:

"It sho seems that the Lawd done set an angel on his shoulder to tell him what to do."

Whites And Blacks Can Go To Same Jails

MARION PORTER, in a feature article on Kentucky's Negro Educational Conditions, discusses the Day Law which stopped White and Colored students from going to Berea College and stopped all future co-education of the races under the same roof, made a good point. She says: "Any student, White or Colored, attending such a school shall be fined $50 a day. The exception to the ruling is that both Negroes and Whites may be placed in the same penal institution." Isn't that a joke? Negroes and Whites can't go to the same schools by law, and by custom, which is often stronger than law, they can't go to the same churches, except Catholics, same Y. M. C. A.'s, same Y. W. C. A.'s, yet they can and do and must go to the same jails, same public hospitals (where White doctors serve Black men), and to the same crazy asylums. All this so-called racial superiority is a joke. Whites and Blacks are friends when let alone. We have seen poor Whites borrow sugar and bread from Colored neighbors and vice versa. We have seen White and Colored men stand at the bar and drink and eat and nothing is thought of it until a Mr. Day or a Governor Talmadge comes along.

Cassius M. Clay, a really great Kentuckian, and Rev. John G. Fee established Berea College for the education of both races about 1856. Everything went along fine,, the races got along agreeably and pleasantly and profitably until a Mr. Day, member of the Legislature, came along and saw White and Colored students on the same platform receiving diplomas. That made Mr. Day sick and he succeeded in getting the Day Law forbidding such things passed in 1904.

The article carries a picture of Miss Mary E. Merritt, superintendent of the Red Cross Hospital, who left Berea in 1903, before the Day Law went into effect. Miss Merritt is quoted as saying Negro and white students helped each other with lessons and that she and two white girls always worked Latin lessons together. In other words, White students were satisfied with Berea and Negro students until Mr. Day came along and stirred up a mess of race-prejudice.

Yet, it is a joke — intelligent, self-respecting Colored boys and girls can't go to the same schools and colleges as whites. But Negroes and Whites can and do and must go to the same jails and penitentiaries and the same electric chairs.

TWO SOLDIERS PROTEST MP'S 'NIGGER'; SHOT

English Subject Arrested For Giving Voice To His Objections

TAMPA, Fla. — (ANP) — Because a soldier objected to being called "nigger" by a white M.P. (military policeman), two Negro selectees were shot and placed under arrest in a mob at the corner of Scott and Central streets last Tuesday night as a crowd looked on.

When an English subject, here on a boat, called "don't fight among yourselves, fight the Germans and Italians" he was arrested but later released.

The soldier was sitting at a bar when the M. P. entered and ordered:

"Nigger, get up from there."

When he objected to the epithet, he was placed under arrest. Another soldier asked the M. P. not to strike the first soldier and he was likewise arrested.

As a crowd gathered, still other uniformed men came up and were told what had happened. One approached the M. P. and questioned him about the "nigger" statement. Two policemen were standing by looking on.

An argument developed between this uniformed man and the M. P., during which the soldier drew a knife. The M. P. reached for his gun and another M. P. came up. In the resultant tussle this soldier was shot.

Meantime another soldier leaped on the second M. P., seizing him around the throat. He also was shot, but ran through the crowd as far as the vicinity of Bethel Baptist church, where he collapsed. Back in the crowd the selectee with the knife was finally overpowered. The M. Ps. then held the crowd at bay with their guns as they removed their prisoners.

By MIKE GOLD

"Why don't we raise a Foreigr Legion here, for service against Red Russia?" is a question asked ever so naively by "Ray Moss," in the column, "Letters From the People" (July 14th, in the N. Y. Daily News.")

It is said that these "letters from the people" are mostly phony. They are said to be concocted en bloc by brass checklings under the eye of Rueben Maury, part-time editorialist for the "News" and "Collier's Weekly."

Let us forget little "Ray," then the ectoplasm, and speak directly to her producer, Rueben Maury. Rueben, you have struck a good idea with your prolific buckshot brain But why are you so modest? Who is better qualified than yourself to organize this Foreign Legion?

Surely, thousands of Christian Fronters, Coughlinites and Bundists would leap to your bugle-call. Pelley and his anti-Semite Liberators would rally to your side. You could enlist a wealth of army experts for the military details, Colonel Lindbergh, General Moseley, and some of those anonymous U. S. Army officers rooting for Hitler and predicting a smashup for Russia since the first day of the invasion.

The State Department could also furnish a quota of appeasement experts, the sly sneaks who are so successfully shipping food, gasoline and munitions to America's enemies, Petain, Franco and Japan.

For rabble-rousers and atrocity-mongers you could muster a corps of the slickest fakers—Jan Valtin, Isaac Don Levine, Eugene Lyons, Ben Gitlow, etc., etc.

Lead, and they will follow, mon General (maybe). Do not worry over the finances of such an expedition. Millions of loyal Americans will rush forward with nickels and dimes to send you across. They will buy your Legion good food and warm blankets—pay high subsidies and give you every comfort.

All they will ask in return is that you actually lead your "Foreign Legion" to the far-off banks of the Dneiper, where Russian tanks and planes can get at your crew.

I do not need the backing of a Gallup poll on this, but can assure you that 99 and nine-tenths per cent of the American people will think it cheap at any price to thus eliminate the "Legion." It's like draining a cesspool; its really a pleasure.

Hitler will welcome you with open arms. He needs all possible help. His Dutch, Belgian, French and Norwegian Foreign Legions haven't fighting as well as he hoped.

Fearlessly enough, they marched into one of the battles on the Rumanian front last week, armed with the Protocols of Zion, and shouting "Heil Hitler! Democracy shtunkt!"

The fighting was some five miles away. The day was hot, and they stopped in a field for cocktails and a series of martial photographs. Just then, three Russians brutally attacked the volunteers. One actually shot at these Foreign Legionnaires with a tommy-gun, and the other two peasants closed in with curious three-pronged bayonets afterward believed to have resembled pitchforks, an illegal weapon that has been outlawed along with dum-dum bullets by the Hague convention.

Caught in a trap, as it were, forced into premature battle, at a moment when their thoughts were not on war, but on photographs and letters to the "Daily News" and "Social Justice," the fascist Legion and its general staff decided to beat a strategic retreat.

They beat it very rapidly, breaking the Italian record made at Guadalajara. They reached the highway with light losses. There they found a passing taxicab which safely returned them to their Fuehrer in Berlin. For them the war was over. For you, and your bold crew, Rueben, it can now begin. You can take over where they left off—you and those "ten trains of Italian troops" Mussolini has been sending daily, via the tracks of the propaganda bureau.

The conquerors of Ethiopia, and the regiment that won such imposing battles on the Dies Committee witness stand! Surely such a peerless combination can win this war against Russia, England and China—and who knows, the United States? "It will all be over in three weeks!"

Rueben, the pie-card legion has already won some mighty pretty battles against the United States. They are veterans all in the war against democracy.

That was a classic battle along Broadway, the winter their squads ganged up, forty to one, and beat up people with "Jewish" (and Greek, Italian, ~~French, Bulgarian~~) faces.

Or the nights they fearlessly put on nightshirts and terrorized the Negro quarters of half a dozen southern towns.

Or the blueprints their brave Bundist soldiers have stolen in such vast quantities from the arms and plane factories of their enemy, the United States.

Or the helpful and disciplined witnesses their soldiers have made for Martin Dies, the Rapp-Coudert and other committees to terrorize and demoralize American democracy.

Or the books and articles the legion's intelligentsia has produced in wagonloads, proving that Hitler was an angel compared to Stalin, and that the Russian army did not exist.

Yes, Rueben, they have almost conquered America for fascism with all these tactics.

But the battle will be lost if Hitler now is vanquished. If now the chain of history is pulled hard enough, Hitler will float off into the sewers of oblivion, and all bright and beautiful hopes for an anti-Semitic Nazi America will go along with him.

"Why don't we raise a Foreign Legion here, for service against Red Russia?" pipes up sweet and pure little "Ray Moss," in the ghostly letter-column.

Yes, why don't they raise one? It is no longer a matter of choice; it is a necessity. And if this American riffraff proves no more numerous or better fighters than the fascist volunteers of other lands, Hitler can always find jobs for them on his radio.

He needs a few more Lord Haw Haws. His DNB news service is not impressing Americans. The suspicion grows here that Goebbels is not always truthful. Dies Committee witnesses are more skilled in creating a resemblance to truth. Every American newspaper, including the liberal weekies, once believed in them like Gospel. Hitler could use a whole legion of these technicians for his "holy crusade." Boy, how he needs a Dies Committee or something!

U.S. Ponders Air Bases for Liberia

(By ANP)

WASHINGTON

Contrary to President Roosevelt's declaration that he had no intention of sending more American armed forces overseas now, reports circulating last week revealed that the United States is seriously considering building an American naval and air base at Liberia, W. Africa.

The information that Liberia is under consideration came from an administration conference report. Administration officials refuse to discuss the matter, but indications are that Liberia has been considered as an alternative to French Dakar, seizure of which has been deemed too risky.

Liberia is considered of vital importance now because of its strategic position, just below Dakar and opposite the Brazil coast.

"Chat" Recalled

In his May 27 fireside chat, the President intimated that he would seize the Portuguese Azores, Cape Verde Islands and Dakar in order to forestall occupation by the Nazis if Hitler should invade Spain and Portugal.

Occupancy of such outposts by the Nazis, the President said, would be a threat to the safety of the United States.

Liberia, founded in 1820 under auspices of American societies interested in establishing a colony of freed American slaves, was granted independence in 1847, but is still an American protectorate.

Because of close relations with the United States, Liberia is said to be favorable to the building of military posts.

Liberia Anti-Nazi

Dr. John H. Furbay, white, former acting president of the College of West Africa, Monrovia, in an interview recently, declared that sentiment in Liberia is strongly anti-Nazi.

Several months ago, Dr. Furbay said, revolution broke out in Liberia when some educated natives with a German-educated leader tried to assassinate the President and seize the reins of government.

The USS Omaha, sent from European waters, arrived just in time to support the government. The revolutionists were arrested and sent to the first concentration camp ever established in Liberia.

Nazi Agents Active

Further discussing the recent revolution attempt, Dr. Furbay, who has kept in close touch with friends and conditions in Liberia since he left there two years ago, declared:

"Twenty-five thousand American colored people rule two million natives. Conflict between the two uneven groups is always smouldering. Lately it has been fanned by Nazi agents who have been into every corner of the republic as traders, anthropologists and in other forms of work."

Freetown Suggested

Army and navy experts are declared to be of the opinion that it would take not only a strong naval force but fewer than 30,000 men to reduce and occupy Dakar. In the case of Liberia, the undertaking would be merely that of constructing a base, once the arrangements were made.

Another suggested site of an American naval and air base in Africa is Freetown in British Sierra Leone.

One American in ten is a Negro. The Negro American, like Americans of other racial strains, wishes to share the privileges of democracy and to do his part with other citizens in defending democracy. The National Urban League, reporting for 1940, finds that some progress, but not enough, has been made toward realizing both these aspirations. The league, which has the backing of some distinguished Southerners, asks only for the Negro "an opportunity to share in our national life in keeping with his training and ability," and "that he have a chance to train himself so that his real capacity may be developed."

This ideal obviously hasn't as yet been realized. The Negro hasn't been allowed to contribute to the defense effort, either in the armed services or in private positions, in proportion to his numbers and his abilities. There have been, and are, many obstacles in the form of ingrained habits, attitudes and prejudices to keep him out. These obstacles will not vanish overnight. The league can only report that they have been in small part diminished, and that we are nearer to democracy in this respect than we were when the league was organized thirty years ago.

Enlightened Americans, especially in the strategic areas of the South, can do much to hasten progress toward wider opportunities for the colored race.

Physically, the white man is closer to the ape than the Negro. The ape and the white man have these things in common: thin lips, straight hair, and hairy bodies. The unpolluted Negro has thick lips, kinky hair, and little hair on his body. Yet the Negro does his silliest to ape the white man who is the closest relative of the ape.

Madame Walker and Madame Malone made a million bucks straightening the kinks of Negroes with hair superior to the white man's. For years I've been trying to think up a formular to whiten black skins. Such a prescription would bring me in a billion bucks. Then I could make some big contributions to the NAACP, the Negro National Congress, the Urban League, and the Negro Alliance.

Whenever you hear Negroes singing "I Shall Be Like Him," they mean that some day they'll be white. There are Negroes who are dumb enough to believe that a white skin means the solution of all earthly problems. The white man, through everlasting propaganda, has made the blacks and browns and near-whites believe that achievement and salvation lie in whiteness.

GOD AND THE DEVIL

A wise man said: "Every man paints God in his own image."

There's something to that. Therefore, the white man paints God white. The Africans have black gods. Dr. Carter G. Woodson and Dr. Alain Locke can tell us about that. But when the Sambos and Aunt Hagars become "civilized," they get a white God. They also get a black Devil. When I was a boy, the black Devil scared me and I got "religion."

Now, the white man pictures all angels as white. On the other hand, all imps of the Devil are black. In fact, everything that's bad in the universe is black—according to the Bilbo whites and Uncle Tom blacks.

Hell is black, in spite of the flames that should light it up. Negro mothers tell innocent children that "the black, evil spirit" will get them. Some ghosts are white, but they put on white so that you can see them in the darkness! You know the ghosts are black, because only evil spirits come back—and all evil spirits are black!

Having made God white, the Caucasian proceeded to stigmatize blackness. He did it so well that whiteness became a badge of superiority. When the slave said Master, he saw a white man. When a native in India says Sahib, he means an Englishman. When I use the term American, people see a white face. Virtue is white. Sin and evil are black. When I say slave, everybody sees Sambo and his wooly head. Yet there were white slaves in America. On the stage, a villain is usually dark. In American fiction, a Red is generally a dark, foreign-looking person. The same is true in the movies. A dark deed is engineered by a dark villain. Gangsters must be dark persons. Genuinely white individuals don't commit dark crimes! I know a friend who couldn't act as a pallbearer because he didn't have a dark suit!

THE EVIL OF BLACKNESS

I had an aunt who was a good woman. But she believed that black persons are evil. Dirty Negroes are always worse than dirty white folk! And they always have a worse ordor! I've heard Negro aristocrats say that. They were duped and doped!

You mustn't let a black cat cross your path! It means seven years bad luck. A black "professor" ran off and left me one night when he saw a black cat. If a blackbird perches on your roof, it means death! Of course, death is also black. Anything bad is dark. Black is immoral, wicked, mournful, calamitous. So, thought even Shakespeare, the white Englishman.

Let us turn back. It was on April 14, 1360. It was so cold that many men in the army of Edward III died from exposure while laying siege to Paris. So that day was called Black Monday. During the reign of George I some of the wise boys blacked their faces to hunt deer. The King passed the Black Act, and many of them landed in jail. In England, the cattle raised for slaughter are called black cattle; the white are dairy animals! Of course, pirates used the black flag. In the fourteenth century, a terrible plague spread over Asia and Europe; although it came from yellow China, it was called the Black Death!

If a member of a white family goes wrong, he is called a black sheep. It seems that, while a black sheep is still a sheep, he's different from a white sheep. That differentness means he's evil. The Black Belt is like War—Hell! The whites at Greenville, Texas, put up a sign: THE BLACKEST LAND AND THE WHITEST PEOPLE. The only black thing that you don't have to apologize for is black gold—the oil the Big Boys need for their war machines.

IMPROVING THE NEGRO RACE

How shall we save the Negro? We can do that by improving the Race. How shall we improve the Race? By having near-white children. The average Negro mother feels that a calamity has come upon the family if she brings a black daughter into the world! I saw a black girl pass the house, and a Negro woman assured me that she was ruined!

MAR 29 1941

From the pictures of Negro women in Negro newspapers, I'm sure there are no black women in America. Society leaders are near-white. There are no black women in Negro colleges, for "Miss Chittling Switch College" and "Miss Freedom College" are queens who're near-white. No good-looking Negro women have kinky hair. Negro doctors businessmen and professors marry (accidentally) high-yellow women. Chorus girls are (accidentally) high yellows.

Even black women speak of improving Sambo's Race by marrying yellow men. Ain't it the truth? Brownskins are flattered when you tell them they look Spanish, Hindu, Italian, Japanese—anything but African. Society matrons invite me to "A Night in Spain." Why couldn't it be "A Night in Africa"?

Yet the blacks and yellows and browns assure me that they're proud to be Negroes! They urge me in this column to speak for the Race. They tell me to butt my wooly head against the white man's barriers of racial prejudice. Yet, every hand, I'm confronted with the Color Lines within the Color Line! Because my hair is wooly and kinky, as God made it, they tell me my hair is "bad." Who in the hell says straight hair is "good"? The white man, of course! And his Uncle Tom Negroes! I've got Caucasian blood in my veins, but I'm ashamed to tell you how it got there!

"2,000,000 French; 13,000,000 Negro

"1,000,000 each Finns, Lithuanian, Greek."

In addition, according to the same authority, we are:

"2,000,000 Anglican-Episcopalian

"40,000,000 Evangelical Protestant

"1,000,000 Greek Catholic

"4,500,000 Jew

"Two-thirds of a million Mormon

"One-tenth of a million Quaker

"22,000,000 Roman Catholic

"One and one-half million Christian Scientists."

These figures give us some idea of the racial and religious mixture that makes up the people of the United States. It stresses the importance of racial and religious tolerance. This is an obligation which rests upon all Americans, regardless of the group to which they belong. It must be practiced by minorities as well as majorities, which is a fact often overlooked.

A Southern White Youth Writes On Democracy

(EDITOR'S NOTE—The following appeared in the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, a white newspaper, and is an expression of the white youth on "What Americanism means").

"NEXT TO THE NEWS

"By Alfred Mynders

"Herbert McArthur, 16, cadet colonel and vice-president of the senior class at Chattanooga High High School, wins the first prize in the American Legion auxiliary and Chickamaugua chapter, D. A. R., essay contest on "What Americanism Means to Me".

"Barbara Gill, 4505 Alabama avenue, wins first prize in the art contest.

"Mrs. John F. Crabtree, Americanism chairman of the American Legion auxiliary, has forwarded the prize essays and art to the American magazine, where they will have a chance to win $1,000 prizes and free trips to New York for winners and their sponsors.

The conductor of this column was judge in the essay contest.

Mr. Frank Baisden, of the University of Chattanooga, was judge in the art contest.

"Herbert McArthur's prize-winning essay, in somewhat shorter form than finally entered is the national competition, follows:

APR 11 1941

"What Americanism Means to Me

"By Herbert McArthur

"God has blessed America!

"Ours is a land of heritage, a land of union, and a land of creativeness. It must take from its heritage the blessing of understanding, from its union it must take its energy and elasticity, and from its creativeness a diligent present and a consummate future.

"But American youth is growing up in a world full of hate, of greed, of treachery, of broken promises In our time the struggle between truth and falsehood, between the hard way and the easy way has ceased to be an abstract, and has become a literal reality.

"America is being mobilized today. Vigilant men all over this country have realized that a diligent present includes preparedness to withstand aggression and that a consummate future requires that this mobilization be the strengthening of our government instead of interruption of it. In the revival of "back to the Middle Ages' serfdom, which we call fascism, we will be absorbed unless we can prove that liberty is not, as Karl Marx said, merely an aphorism used by the bourgeoise in its bid for power, and a veneer for capitalism in its worst aspect—its exploitation of natural and human resources. We must prove that personal, selfdisciplined liberty is the ultimate significance of all existence.

"Americanism is that individual belief that every human being has within himself the potential and realizable ability to recognize, protect, share and invigorate the Truth that is the cosmic mind of God indentifiable in every blade of grass and recognized in every fellow-feeling.

"This means that the Negro, the German, the Greek and the Japanese are essentially and basically identical in origin, potential ability and motives. This means that underlying all life and existence is a reason for being that is manifest in the two fundamentals of process and principles, which have been twisted and molded by man into a thousand varied and opposed creeds, doctrines and philosophies. This splitting has come about through the combined action of geography, ignorance, prejudice, greed and its handmaid jealousiy.

"The American colonies were first to catch the force of a new unifying spirit. If the democracy we have fashioned with this spirit is valid, then the raging of power and the gnawing of evil will serve only to unify us the more. The test of our strength, the proving of our ideals—the culmination and confirmation of Americanism is that it be so harmonious to the will of God and the evident forces of nature, God's hand, that He will acknowledge it and cause us to recognize it, not as a newer and stronger form of selfish nationalism, but as an integral part of and a testing ground for the unconditional, universal friendship and planned peace that is to be.

"For the results of the belief that the ultimate aim of a nation should be to dominate through economic pressure, military ascendancy and intellectual advantage, consider the Germany of today. We cannot argue that the conditions provocative of the growth of Hitler are unique to Germany We must realize that unless democracy is capable of curing known evils by peaceful change, these necessary changes will be made by violence, encouraged to rise within or battering in from without.

If we can canceive of peaceful chaange and universal kinship as the proving of democratic principles, then we can conceive of de mocracy as failing in its final purpose unless it is willing to for get the clamor of isolationists and appeasers that it pass by like the priest and the Levite, leaving oppressed mankind to the mercy of the robbers.

"America is no more free and offers no more personal liberty than it offered to the last lynched Negro, there is no more freedom than is guaranteed to the least of its people. There is no democracy as long as any human being anywhere is denied fundamental rights; no man is fully free while any man is in chains.

"America must shoulder its heritage; it must confirm its union by facing with a resolute spirit the future that Providence has prepared for it. In honesty, constancy and understanding let us go forward in the true fellowship of friends to the destiny that is peace and happiness.

U. S. Bars Nancy Cunard, Friend Of Race

Noted English Woman, Writer On Negro Problems, Can't Land

WASHINGTON, (ANP)—State department officials were vague in their explanations on Saturday morning as to why they refused admission to this country to Nancy Cunard, white, famous scion of one of England's oldest families, writer, traveler and representative of the Associated Negro Press in Paris.

Saturday morning the chief of the visa department of the state department, studying the incident, declared she was "not admissable under the immigration laws."

Pushed for a further explanation of the particular thing which made Miss Cunard inadmissable, the young official declared that "further information could be had only by writing the state department."

APPLIED FOR VISA

It would seem that Miss Cunard, 45, applied for a visa to visit the United States last May while sojourning in Barbados, British West Indies.

For a number of years, Miss Cunard interested herself in the mistreatment of Negroes, not only by her own government, but by the United States governments and devoted considerable of her time and writing to pointing out these defects. Only recently, she made an extended tour of the West Indies, writing effective and pointed articles on conditions as she saw them."

For the past few weeks Miss Cunard had been living at Barbados, British West Indies, as the guest of her cousin, Sir Edward Cunard, who is secretary to the governor of the island.

WROTE ON NEGRO

Her dispatches from Barbados, Trinidad and other islands in the West Indies, as well as from Central and South America, have appeared in the Negro press in recent months and performed the service of letting readers know the race problems and reactions to the present war by colored people in those areas.

When the war started in 1939 Miss Cunard was stationed in France and she remained in and around Paris as long as it was expedient. As a special correspondent for this newspaper, she wrote many interesting and highly informative articles after leaving France and while sailing down the coast of Africa on her way to South America.

"Traditions Of Loyalty Bind Us To Unknown Destiny"--Scott

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 24.—As this column has indicated so many times recently, war is near at hand. Its inevitability is now an accepted fact. No longer are arguments concerned with whether we shall enter the conflict, but rather with how soon we shall do so.

We have come a long, long way from August, September, and October, 1940. It was during those fretful days that anxious mothers and fathers were being assured that they need have no fears about their sons having to participate in foreign wars.

Every feverish activity of these days, practically every broadside from the White House, every pressure upon Congress, is to relax the guarantees of the legislation of the Selective Service Act which provided one year's service by selectees, National Guardsmen and Reservists. Further, that the ban be lifted so that these men may be sent beyond the borders of the Western Hemisphere.

With the near approach of war, despite the President's assurances, every American—black, white, or what not; every Protestant, Catholic, Jew—all of us who cherish the ideals of our country and are jealous of those liberties and freedoms guaranteed by our Federal Constitution (guarantees we hope finally to achieve in this country) find ourselves bound by traditions of loyalty and courage to accept whatever destiny lies ahead of us.

UNITED PURPOSES

Our purposes are, and must be, united. While so united, no element of our population should be made to feel that acts of bigotry and intolerance, racial prejudices and intolerable discriminations, are to be forced upon it; that its contribution to the well-being and the safety of the nation is to be negligibly regarded, and that its place in the sun of American privilege and opportunity is to be circumscribed and hedged about with restrictions and indignities not visited upon other elements of our common citizenship.

Specifically, of course, reference is here made to the 13,000,000 colored people of the United States.

While building our organization for democratic defense, we have opportunity to advance far beyond the boundaries of the present; certainly far beyond the boundaries set for Negro veterans who served in the last World War, and Negro civilians generally.

The let-down from the high preachments for which we were supposed to be fighting in 1917 and 1918 came as a startling surprise. During all the years since there has remained tragic disillusionment and baffling bewilderment.

BETTER THINGS EXPECTED

Why it should have been so still remains a question unanswered. If, as it now appears, destiny is again to carry us into another World Conflict, better things will be expected.

As Senator Carter Glass' Fight for Freedom Committee has declared, the American Negro was beguiled with brave promises of inter-racial justice to be realized after the last World War, the vanity of which was recognized when the perils of war had passed. These brave promises were forgotten.

It is no idle demand of American Negroes, even as we help save this thing called democracy from the blight of Naziism—government, industry, our common citizenship—that all of us shall stand united to build it more perfectly at home.

It is sinister mockery, hypocrisy, for us to be striving for the spread of democratic principles for the welfare of peoples abroad while denying them to our own citizens here at home.

What Is 'Social Equality' and Who Ever Had It?

'Brown America' Is Damnable Idea

Fill Up Country With Mulattoes

God Manifests His Opposition In Many Ways

—By W. T. Anderson—

WE HAVE HAD a "right smar talk recently about soci equality. Just what social equali is or what it means, I hav nev been able to understan I don believe there is any such thin By implication it means, presum ably, that one person shall b forced to associate with anothe whether it is agreeable to bot parties or not. And just how ar just who is going to bring tha about? I have seen a great mar people in my time with whom would like to associate, but the didn't appear agreeable, so dropped the matter. I neve thought about taking it to cou or any other place.

IF WE ARE DISCUSSING or ad vocating the indiscriminate in termingling of the Caucasian an Negro races, in churches, school hotels, restaurants, etc., that another matter. This intermin gling may be a means of bringin about mixing of the blood in th races, through intermarriage, et

If that is the plan of those wh want "social equality," it is damnable proposal, and our Crea tor is evidently as much agains it as are the self-respecting whit and colored people of the South Groups of individuals in every species and every variety ar bound together in racial pride an help, that races shall advance a races, because in that way the can make greatest progress, an so can the world. To mix race defeats Divinity's plan and pur pose.

Apparently our Creator set u the law of the survival of the fit test as a means by which to mak the world and everything in i build and progress—and whateve was unfruitful and lazy and indif ferent didn't progress, and some thing else of divine origin go ahead and crowded out the leas fit and indolent.

And by reason of the fact tha every one of the species—vegetable and animal—keeps itself aloof and apart from all other varieties, does not interbreed of its own volition, is proof in plenty that it was the Divine intent. Go into the wilds, and observe the thousands of different kinds of vegetation and animal and bird life to be found there, and each one true to his own markings and peculiarities through one generation after another. In animal life God fixed it through the sex nerve so species and varieties would remain true to their kind beyond the thousandth generation.

I HAVE NEVER SEEN a Negro in the South who manifested any desire to mix up with white people in his association. In fact, the most uncomfortable Negro to be found is one who is thrown with white people and cannot get away from them. The Negro wants to be with his own kind. For 20 years I have had an attractive 2-room apartment back of my home, built for servants, with bath, electric lights, heat, constant hot water, etc., rent free—and not in that entire time have I ever had application or suggestion from our servants as to occupying it. They have walked two to three miles to Negro sections, to get to their homes for which they pay rent.

Practically all the Negroes who want "social equality" or intermarriage have gone North. It is up there they meet a few of John Brown's descendants who fill them up with all the stuff about "social equality," and it is these John Browns who have raised money and organized all kinds of associations to invade the South and upset the apple-cart by proposing that Southern white people get on the same plane as these long-haired, hook-nosed meddlers and reformers who have raised hell all over the world, wherever their blood was found. If mixing and mingling of the races in the South is such a desirable thing, according to Dr. Embree, in his "Brown America," why the segregated Harlems in New York, Detroit, Chicago and other places with large Negro populations?

THE SOUTHERN Negro's attitude in relation to associating with the white man and what the Negro thinks of such white people, is aptly portrayed in the old story of a white couple from Boston who came down South right after the Civil war. They found an old Negro woman out in the country sitting in front of her cabin—or her old Marster's cabin—smoking her pipe as contentedly as though "freedom had not been give out."

"Mammy Johnson," said the Bostonians, "we came down to meet you and see how you were getting along. We want you to come up to Boston and visit us. We will furnish expense money."

Details were arranged, and Aunt Mary took off for Boston. She was given the company bedroom in the white folks mansion, given a seat at the white folks' table, taken for carriage rides, introduced at teas given in her honor . . . One fine morning after Mrs. Johnson was seated at the breakfast table, the host wanted to ascertain how he was getting along in giving Mrs. Johnson a glimpse of the new life.

"Well, Mrs. Johnson," he said, "how do you like the treatment the white people are giving you in Boston? Down South they never showed you such nice attention, did they—giving you the company bedroom, carriage rides, teas, and having you at the dinner table with the family? You never saw anything like this down South, did you?"

"Naw, sir," said Aunt Mary. "My ole marster was a gentleman. He never let no Negro sleep in his house or set down to his table."

THERE ARE VERY FEW Southern white people but who want the Negro to progress as a race, to become self-sustaining, and will help him in every way possible, within his sphere. Southern white people long ago recognized the fact that whatever the Negro lacked of making a living for himself, the white man had to supply it. So it is an economic necessity as well as a human urge of the white people that the Negro be given his chance, be educated and trained in arts and crafts, in the ways of citizenship and democracy. The Negro has made great progress under this plan, and gradually and as rapidly as it could be done the hatred and villainy that was planted in the two races after the Civil War by the scalawag and carpet-bagger and camp-follower that came with and behind the Federal army into this sorely stricken section has been eliminated.

DR. EDWIN R. EMBREE, president of the Rosenwald Fund, Chicago, wrote a book called "Brown America." In the very title of that book the suggestion is apparent that this section shall be changed into mulatto people, hybrids, through intermarriage and promiscuous mixing, association. And God Almighty is against that as much as are the Southern white people and the Southern Negro. God stops it by deterioration of the mixed kind—they are less hardy, are more vulnerable to disease, reproduce to a less degree, and in many instances reproduction is stopped entirely—the mule, for instance.

IT IS EXTREMELY unfortunate that the Negro has to be brought into the white man's squabbles. The intelligent Southern Negro does his best to keep out of all kinds of disputes between the white people, and to make progress by adapting himself to his environment, by philosophically accepting things that are and make the most of them, that he may achieve most toward his goal, which nobody understands and strives for more than he.

He knows Rome wasn't built in a day, and he has seen through many hundreds of years that the Negro has accomplished more with his plan or practice than any other race on earth in a similar period of time.

If he could receive the largesse and bounty of Northern philanthropists who undoubtedly have good intentions but little comprehension of the task, and the Negro be allowed to proceed in his own way, everything would come out all right in its own good time—the Negro of and for his kind and the white of and for his kind, each co-operating understandingly and sympathetically in his own sphere as a race, and not mixing up as individuals.

But Dr. Embree and others of his mind are like the elephant that insisted on co-operating with the hen in hatching her eggs. While the hen was away getting food, the elephant sat down on her nest to keep the eggs warm for her, with the easily-imagined result.

The Negro had rather have kindness and justice than all the social equality this side of kingdom come.

No Tolerance Until We Do Our Part

Negroes have made great headway in their efforts to share the work, but they have yet to do their part in creating the goodwill which must prevail between fellow workers. Union after union is admitting Negroes to membership, and employers are training them—two incontrovertible evidences that white opinion is swinging away from its wellnigh universal race prejudice. The time is ripe for good will, which like a suspension bridge is built the stronger and quicker when started from both shores at once.

While Negroes were waging an unavailing battle against custom, it was natural for them to whip up their flagging spirits with wild denunciations. But the litigant has won his verdict. Employment without discrimination is the national policy. The problem has changed. Our request for employment having been granted, the time has come for us to make ourselves welcome in industry.

Hate is a poor investment. It has not paid the whites in their dealings with us, and it will not pay us in our dealings with them. Life is too cooperative for that. We both do best when we realize that we are interdependent, and that mutual helpfulness butters more parsnips than savage competition.

A teacher in an elementary school tells how the children of her class were angry that a white boy came to that school bringing a message. That is the type of thing which the Negro home, the Negro church and the Negro school must correct. A white man is no more to be blamed for being white than is a Negro for being black! Tolerance, like a sheet of paper, has to have two sides. We know from bitter experience how unkind race prejudice is. Let us take steps at once to destroy race prejudice within us.

Employers know well how production suffers when workers "cross lift" each other. They said as much when they refused to hire Negroes because whites objected. Now when whites are not objecting as they formerly did, it is for Negroes to improve race relations the faster by showing themselves the likable people they had to be to withstand the pressure proscription put upon them as slaves and as free men.

BUCK PASSING

It has often been said that the Negro race is easy to fool. From the way some people of the other race treat our people, it apparently is an accepted fact among them. Just as the other group accuses us of being easy to fool they are being accused of being the greatest buck passers in the world.

In our local community some forms of defense discrimination have existed since the beginning. The Negroes united under the leadership of the NAACP sought to rectify some of those evils by working them out with their white friends and leaders. Committees have been appointed and from time to time waited on this group and that group, this executive and that executive, this individual and that individual, etc., and yet in most cases the only answer brought back is 'Let us discuss this matter in confidence and give us time to work it out. Any demonstration on the part of your people in the form of mass meetings and parades will place us in a position where we cannot solve this matter as quickly as possible." The Negro committee comes back and makes its report and we wait and we wait and still nothing is done. We go back and register more complaints and still nothing is done. The buck is passed to someone else's shoulder. In the matter of our local defense training at both the old Sumner and the new high school, the buck has been passed back and forth so much until somebody's shoulder should be worn out by now.

And we feel that it is high time that the Board of Education come right out and admit they uphold the segregation policies now being practiced in the defense training, and that it cannot be stopped, or get busy and work something out and stop passing the buck. There is no excuse for discrimination existing at the old Sumner high school where the Negroes are huddled off in one class separated from the whites. And there is no need for retarding the progress of those at the new Sumner who are taking refresher courses by not furnishing them proper equipment. Governor Ratner once said "that if the Negro is good enough to die for his country, he is good enough to be respected as a citizen." And as we are in the emidst of training to stop Hitlerism and Naziism when the time comes bullets will make no discrimination because bullets know no color line. Bullets will kill a white man and bullets will kill a Negro man. If we are to fight and defend our country as American citizens on the same battle field as the white man, then why can't they train and make preparations to build implements of warfare with the white man. At the old Sumner high school we believe that it is safe to say that the jim crow set-up originates with the head and not a desire on the part of white students. It has been proven in the past that in most cases all discrimination and jim crowism originates with a few old fossils who head up the show and pass the buck back and forth to different sources. We think that the Board of Education in Kansas City, Kansas, has done enough buck passing on the defense jim crowism in Kansas City and the Negro citizens should put it down in their day book that there will be another election in the spring of 1943.

Damns Democracy For Failures

To the Editor:

Nearly all presidents and professors of Negro colleges and universities, and nearly all Negro preachers and Negro newspapers have jumped on the bandwagon and become war-mongers, kidding themselves into the belief that if they save England they will be rendering the world a great service for democracy.

It is time therefore to take stock of some of the things that are going on, for it was just recently that Dr. Walter Livingston Wright, preaching a baccalaureate sermon to the students of Lincoln University, (Pa.) went out of his way to urge Negroes to stand by the U. S., which is a democracy.

It is amusing to know how Christianity and democracy are used in these days. The Christian Church to which Dr. Wright belongs has always been on the side of the strong and against the weak.

Interest Too Sudden

Dr. Wright must have been hibernating when Italy was raping and ravaging little Abyssinia.

It is strange how super-annuated white preachers have the courage to tell Negroes in the face of the hell they have been and still are catching, that they are to be patriotic, and give up their all for a country which has plundered them for over 200 years as slaves and still withholds nearly all of the rights which other people have for the asking.

I am not a fifth columnist because the white people say I cannot be and not white. However, I have all the [illegible] qualities, for I personally don't give a damn what happens to democracy.

University Of North Carolina Professor Condemns Treatment Of Negroes In U. S.

"The Negro Has Been Exploited, Mistreated and Subjugated Ever Since He Came To North America," Says Dr. Howell.

APR 5 - 1941

BUIE'S CREEK, N. C., April 3—(ANP) — Speaking before the student-body at Campbell college Thursday on "Inter-racial Relations in North Carolina," Dr. A. C. Howell of the University of North Carolina English faculty, condemned the treatment of Negroes in the United States.

"'Forgive us our trespasses' would be a good text for my thoughts," began Dr. Howell. "The Negro has been exploited, mistreated, and subjugated ever since he came to North America," he continued. "And now the sins of the fathers are being visited upon the children of the third and fourth generations."

APR 5 - 1941

"Nearly four times as much is spent on a white child's schooling in this State as on a Negro child's," he suggested as one cause for existing racial conditions. "But improvements are apparent. There are more Negro college students today than were enrolled in the elementary schools for Negroes about 25 years ago."

V Stands for Vassal

The American Negro cannot close his eyes to the muddled world situation with its conflicting philosophies and ideologies. This, in spite of the fact, he has been a submerged element and systematically denied most of his civil and political rights. Yet he is affected by, and therefore concerned with, the fortunes and misfortunes of this country.

In the present world crisis, the American Negro, based on a survey made by the Star-News, rather generally favors American aid to Great Britain and her Allies. He takes this position, as we see it, because he has hope and faith in the future of this country, and of the ultimate triumph of right and justice here over lynching, proscription, peonage, disfranchisement and the like.

In an effort to stiffen the resistance of the subjected people in the occupied countries of Europe, Prime Minister Churchill instituted a psychological campaign known as the V drive, with V symbolizing Victory. We want to contribute our share to the campaign, but before we will be able to see clearly the V, for Victory campaign, we must eliminate the V for Vassal campaign.

Council On Americanism Urges President To Act In Strikes

Asserting that unless all defense industry strikes immediately cease totalitarianism will not be stopped, the Memphis Council on Americanism in a telegram to President Roosevelt yesterday urged application of the rule of conscription to either unco-operative industry or labor and reminded him that the people of the United States look to him for forthright leadership.

Instead of national unity, the Council asserted that there exists a condition of national apathy and disgrace and called upon the President to use the "vast power and influence" of his office to bring strike stoppage.

The telegram, signed by representatives of member organizations, follows:

"Unless all defense industry strikes immediately cease, totalitarianism will not be stopped. The Nation expects you to use the vast power and influence of your office to achieve strike stoppage without further irreparable loss.

IS THERE A "NEGRO PROBLEM"

MAY 22 1941

By Ruth Taylor

Read the papers carefully today and somewhere, in some connection, you will find the words "Negro problem."

Little incidents are played up. Whenever a Negro commits a crime—his being a Negro is stressed—and so the ball grows. Discrimination, injustice, and a gradual fanning of the flames have kept it growing.

What is back of this raising of the cry—Negro problem? Who is fanning the fires of hatred and blind and senseless race prejudice? Who is it that benefits by the application of the slogan "Divine—and conquer?"

Negroes in America are citizens of the United States—subject to the same Constitution as other citizens, entitled to the same rights, and responsible for the same obligations. That is the law of the land—regardless of how selfish and self-interested individuals may interpret it.

The existing status of Negroes is one for both races to change. The totalitarian states have solved it by relegating the Negro to a state of lowest inferiority. They believe in driving him all the way down. Faulty though the application of democratic principles may be, unjust and unfair though many of the restrictions and discriminations are, the trend of our democracy is to raise the Negro to the full statures of citizenship. Consider the gains that have been made over the years. Negroes have gained their rights far more rapidly than the women of the nation did theirs.

The larger responsibility for the solution of the problem lies with the majority but what is needed is a common denominator by which both groups can live in the same country and respect the rights of both—honoring the individual as a man.

There are ways in which Negroes may greatly aid in bringing a better ter day in race relations. Let them strive to stand out and be counted as individuals. Let them show by every act and word that they are citizens in full cooperation with their government. Let them publicize the good their leaders have done and do—even more than the injustices done them. George Washington Carver has done much for Negro advancement by being the man that he is.

Let every Negro count himself as an American—and live up to that high standard in every way. By the force of his own initiative and integrity—he can compel the respect and acceptance he desires and the equality as a citizen that is his under the Constitution.

MAY 1941

Judge Jo[illegible]. Goldstein summarily excused a talesman in a robbery trial in General Sessions yesterlay and ordered his name stricken from the jur ypanel for all time when the talesman, in reply to a question by one of the lawyers, said he would not believe the word of a Negro in any circumstances against that of a white man.

"Where do you come from?" asked the Court.

"Florida," replied the talesman, Leo J. Goodwin of 355 West Twenty-second Street, manager of a sightseeing bus concern.

"I appreciate your frankness," Judge Goldstein told him, "but the jury panel is no place for you. A juror always shoul dbe fair and impartial."

Soon after that the jury was completed for the trial of John Lee, 33 years old, a Negro, charged with the theft of a gold watch and a dime from Jeremiah Haggerty of 542 West 124th Street in the hold-up of a bus at Madison Avenue and 124th Street last Feb. 7.

Colored Americans Determined To Secure All Citizenship Rights

"I AM AN AMERICAN DAY" was celebrated on Sunday by countless thousands in cities and towns from coast to coast. Flags waved, orators talked and the crowds roared their approval.

It is great to be an American. There is no question about that. American citizenship denotes freedom of speech, freedom to work and live, and freedom to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience.

American citizenship gives everyone the privilege to protest and work to attain those rights if they are denied. And no oppressed group which possesses that great gift of American citizenship should accept an inferior status complacently. To do so is not to be an American.

Proudly we wave the flag. Proudly we march to war. Proudly we give our brain and brawn to the necessary defense industries. And proudly do we proclaim our citizenship. Proudly do we shout from the housetops, "I am an American." And with heads erect and stout hearts we denounce those who insist that our citizenship is less than theirs.

"I am an American", yes, an American who is willing to assume all the obligations entailed and will work and fight to attain the blessings which go with being an American.

Race Leadership In America Has Collapsed Into A State Of Moral And Spiritual Bankruptcy

The Negro race in America, has produced only three outstanding leaders, and is now leaderless, and drifting on the sea of difficulties, like a ship without a pilot or compass, to guide or direct its course. In religion, we have no Richard Henry Boyd, to pave the way for those, who love the Lord to go. In education, there is no Booker T. Washington to standardize education, and prove the possibility of his race to educate and support itself. And in politics, we have no Fred Douglass to point out the equality of races, and prove to the world that the Negro is capable of self-government, and of helping other races to make the world a better place to live in. To day, we are as a race, leaderless and in the hands of an unfriendly receivership, irrevocably committed to the proposition, to reduce the race to a condition of moral and mental slavery; by depriving it of its Constitutional rights and privileges. This receivership, is tolerated and urged on by a mercenary pulpit, cheap politicians and a few vacillating college presidents; without vision enough to see the difference between a meal ticket and human liberty.

We repeat our charge; that the race is leaderless in every human activity, effecting its vital welfare. That a majority of those who pass as our leaders, are self-appointed, or picked by white folk, and are without vision for the redemption for us all; and are more interested in eating bread out of the hands of their white masters than they are in promoting the welfare of the race, whom they pretend to serve and represent. Search the record of those living today, and examine closely their achievements with an honest eye, anxious to find a trust worthy leader in church, state or politics; and report your findings. Then tell your race, who is the Richard Henry Boyd in religious achievement, and who is the Fred Douglass in politics and statesmanship. And is the Booker T. Washington in education or who is the T. Thomas Fortune, Chris Perry, or John H. Murphy, Sr., in journalism; who made Negro newspapers an institution. The race has not as yet produced a successor to these pioneers and Christian statesmen. It was not a question of dollars with these men, but principles, that would inspire to higher and nobler heights Negro posterity. They had souls in their bosoms, and only thought of money, to light the candle of hope in the hearts of Negro youth.

We have never thought of A. Phillip Randolph as a race leader. We have seldom agreed on any policy or procedure. We have always conceded him the right to be wrong if he choose to be; just as we have reserved the right as an individual to be right if we choose to be right; which has always been our choice. While we have wholly disagreed with Mr. Randolph, we have always been ready to fight to the death for him to have the privilege to say his say. We have said this; to have the opportunity to commend his leadership for the unselfish statesmanship he displayed in sticking to his gun, in his determination to march on Washington, for more jobs for his race, under the fire of the President, members of his cabinet and his wife; and a few Negroes holding petty jobs under his administration. Mr. Randolphs' act is bold, fearless and unprecedented in Negro leadership. When the President sends for a Negro leader and asks him to call off a pending movement; he sees something personally injurious to him and his administration. It is an affront to the President for a leader not to yield to his expressed will. But Mr. Randolph was man enough to place the burdens of his race above the

Asserting that unless all defense industry strikes immediately cease totalitarianism will not be stopped, the Memphis Council on Americanism in a telegram to President Roosevelt yesterday urged application of the rule of conscription to either unco-operative industry or labor and reminded him that the people of the United States look to him for forthright leadership.

Instead of national unity, the Council asserted that there exists a condition of national apathy and disgrace and called upon the President to use the "vast power and influence" of his office to bring strike stoppage.

The telegram, signed by representatives of member organizations, follows:

"Unless all defense industry strikes immediately cease, totalitarianism will not be stopped. The Nation expects you to use the vast power and influence of your office to achieve strike stoppage without further irreparable loss.

IS THERE A "NEGRO PROBLEM"

By Ruth Taylor

Read the papers carefully today and somewhere, in some connection, you will find the words "Negro problem."

MAY 22 1941

Little incidents are played up. Whenever a Negro commits a crime—his being a Negro is stressed—and so the ball grows. Discrimination, injustice, and a gradual fanning of the flames have kept it growing.

What is back of this raising of the cry—Negro problem? Who is fanning the fires of hatred and blind and senseless race prejudice? Who is it that benefits by the application of the slogan "Divine—and conquer?"

Negroes in America are citizens of the United States—subject to the same Constitution as other citizens, entitled to the same rights, and responsible for the same obligations. That is the law of the land—regardless of how selfish and self-interested individuals may interpret it.

The existing status of Negroes is one for both races to change. The totalitarian states have solved it by relegating the Negro to a state of lowest inferiority. They believe in driving him all the way down. Faulty though the application of democratic principles may be, unjust and unfair though many of the restrictions and discriminations are, the trend of our democracy is to raise the Negro to the full statures of citizenship. Consider the gains that have been made over the years. Negroes have gained their rights far more rapidly than the women of the nation did theirs.

The larger responsibility for the solution of the problem lies with the majority but what is needed is a common denominator by which both groups can live in the same country and respect the rights of both—honoring the individual as a man.

There are ways in which Negroes may greatly aid in bringing a better ter day in race relations. Let them strive to stand out and be counted as individuals. Let them show by every act and word that they are citizens in full cooperation with their government. Let them publicize the good their leaders have done and do—even more than the injustices done them. George Washington Carver has done much for Negro advancement by being the man that he is.

Let every Negro count himself as an American—and live up to that high standard in every way. By the force of his own initiative and integrity—he can compel the respect and acceptance he desires and the equality as a citizen that is his under the Constitution.

RACE BIAS UP IN COURT

Judge John A. Colosten summarily excused a talesman in a robbery trial in General Sessions yesterlay and ordered his name stricken from the jur ypanel for all time when the talesman, in reply to a question by one of the lawyers, said he would not believe the word of a Negro in any circumstances against that of a white man.

"Where do you come from?" asked the Court.

"I appreciate your frankness," Judge Goldstein told him, "but the jury panel is no place for you. A juror always shoul dbe fair and impartial."

Soon after that the jury was completed for the trial of John Lee, 33 years old, a Negro, charged with the theft of a gold watch and a dime from Jeremiah Haggerty of 542 West 124th Street in the hold-up of a bus at Madison Avenue and 124th Street last Feb. 7.

Colored Americans Determined To Secure All Citizenship Rights

"I AM AN AMERICAN DAY" was celebrated on Sunday by countless thousands in cities and towns from coast to coast. Flags waved, orators talked and the crowds roared their approval.

It is great to be an American. There is no question about that. American citizenship denotes freedom of speech, freedom to work and live, and freedom to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience.

American citizenship gives everyone the privilege to protest and work to attain those rights if they are denied. And no oppressed group which possesses that great gift of American citizenship should accept an inferior status complacently. To do so is not to be an American.

Proudly we wave the flag. Proudly we march to war. Proudly we give our brain and brawn to the necessary defense industries. And proudly do we proclaim our citizenship. Proudly do we shout from the housetops, "I am an American." And with heads erect and stout hearts we denounce those who insist that our citizenship is less than theirs.

"I am an American", yes, an American who is willing to assume all the obligations entailed and will work and fight to attain the blessings which go with being an American.

Race Leadership In America Has Collapsed Into A State Of Moral And Spiritual Bankruptcy

The Negro race in America, has produced only three outstanding leaders, and is now leaderless, and drifting on the sea of difficulties like a ship without a pilot or compass, to guide or direct its course. In religion, we have no Richard Henry Boyd, to pave the way for those, who love the Lord to go. In education, there is no Booker T. Negroes Should Speak; Officials Should Hear

POLAND ground into the dust, Norway captured, Denmark and Holland overrun, Belgium and France conquered, Rumania, Bulgaria, Spain and Yugoslavia seduced into acquiescence, a century of change made on the map of Europe in a few months!

Against this blitzkrieg America is preparing a defense. It has called in its leading industrialists, and its factories are beating ploughshares into arms. But the officials who make the policies that superrule all these defense preparations are elder statesmen, patriots undoubtedly, but men inhibited by the practices of American politics.

Germany's will to conquer caused it to strike out boldly in new ways. We await their attack neither prepared materially, nor ready mentally. We are short of being champions of democracy. We have lip democracy where we need honest convictions and consistent practices to be spiritually fit to fight against Nazism, which is whole-souled, whatever its manufacturing the tools of war, but we are still far faults.

This is an era of change. Witness our last three national elections. But still in this hour when they appeal frantically for every American to do his duty, government officials continue segregation, and even bar Negroes from the civil and military activities upon which national defense depends.

There is not a man in office or out of it who dares defend curtailment of the nation's man power at this time. There is not a man of sense but knows that this segregation and limitation, especially with Negroes proffering loyalty, kills the spirit and cripples the hand of one tenth of the population of the United States.

Since we believe Mr. Secretary Stimson of the army and Mr. Secretary Knox of the navy mean well by our country, it must be that they do not see that they imperil America! Therefore they must be told in terms so forceful that they will drop discrimination before it is too late!

Remembering the protest Negroes raised during the World war against unfair and undemocratic treatment, this administration has put several of our men in posts that give them confidential relations with officials in key positions:

DR. ROBERT C. WEAVER
Administrative Assistant in the Labor Division, National Defense Council.
JUDGE WILLIAM HASTIE,
Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War
LT. LAWRENCE A. OXLEY,
Administrative Assistant, U. S. Employment Service.
MRS. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE,
National Youth Administration.
DeA REID,
Coordinator, Social Security Administration
JOSE CALIVER,
Education
CHARLE ELL JOHNSON,
Selective Service System

The appointment of these persons is a step in the right direction. Two things remain to be done: 1. They should speak out. 2. The officials should hear and heed them. With the example of prostrate France right before our eyes, destroyed by its weakness within, this country should hasten to rid itself of its sham democracy while it yet has time! America needs every man, and it needs him at his best!

MAR 7 - 1941

White men in public life have the habit of saying "I know Negroes." It is a handy excuse for refusing to learn anything new about them. But this is not politics where Negroes are shoved about like pawns with no thought of their welfare. It is in the interest of all Americans that Negroes have a stake in democracy, because only when they have, can they do their best to defend it!

Defense Insurance

MAR 28 1941

Negroes have no connections with any of the nations now under the thumb of Hitler. That goes for our brethren born in the West Indies as well as those of American birth. Since sabotage of American aid to Britain is going on already and American defense is bound to be attacked, their employment is logical.

From facts given in a recent magazine article, it now appears that the half of German control over the lives of people living in the United States has not been told. Through pretending to give aid to the stricken, the Reich has garnered in millions of dollars by means of fake aid societies. But that is minor.

The real danger to America from Germany comes through the control which the Nazis have over the Scandinavians, the Czechs, the French, the Dutch, the Belgians and the others. The American relatives of these unfortunate people know all too well that they will suffer, if the Reich's desires are not met. Information which will lead to the destruction of ships at sea, direct damage to machines, strikes, fires, defeatism and all the other interference that Nazi cunning can devise will be the price of a mother or father, sister or brother being spared.

No use saying our naturalized citizens will all stand loyal under that pressure. In America the beautiful daughter marries the villain to keep papa from being ruined in business. If that happens where only money is at stake, how much more will it happen when obedience can save the loved one from torture. We repeat,—American industry should hire Negroes not only without discrimination, but even with preference, to save itself from German sabotage.

Let's Break Down Prejudice

By E. B. HENDERSON

EVERY now and then we hear someone say, "prejudice is getting worse in America." Yet no time was ever more propitious for winning tolerance. The difficulty is that there are too many completely "inferiorized" Negroes, the "appeasers and defeatists" in positions of leadership today.

MAR 29 1941

Under the New Deal many educated Negroes have been employed as racial mediators. Some of them who were fighters before have since valiantly sought to protect the interests of Negroes; others have been completely muzzled.

A lot of them have been less effective in achieving status for the race than were those old-line political appointees of past administrations whom they criticized. They drew a good salary, but their jobs might just as well be held by members of other racial groups, for all the good they do.

Some of them are positive deterrents to racial programs in government. They shy away from real problems and fritter away their time making studies. An evidence of the timidity which encompasses many Negro employees in relatively secure tenure is seen in the failure to attend bi-racial meetings, interracial dinners or mixed athletic competitions, or to speak on any but "safe" or non-controversial subjects.

REDUCE RACIAL BARRIERS

Many liberal social workers and the so-called radical fringe of young people are trying to make democracy work by reducing racial barriers. Some Negroes are too timid to eat with white people in the various hostelries. They rationalize their inferiority feeling by declining to go where they are not otherwise allowed to attend. Yet they are often invited to, and attend public meetings in private homes of their race where they are not invited as personal friends.

One of the best ways to break down racial prejudice is by mingling with people who have prejudices and who are unused to and who have few contacts with Negroes. Negroes should attend and participate in all interracial luncheons and dinner meetings to which they are invited. Our intelligentsia should also frequent interracial sport contests and encourage these events.

It was heartening to see Walter White and Bill Hastie and others at the Bruin-Brewers basketball game. Too many white people know well only Negroes of the Uncle Tom type. If our better classes shrink from meetings because of timidity, the race suffers by this lack.

NO SEPARATE SCHOOLS

Eventually if we keep this up, we will be accustomed to being seen in theatres, stores, lunch counters and other places where today we find ourselves unwanted and barred. Someday, the Supreme Court, since Reynolds is gone, is going to make unconstutional these obstacles to civil liberties. Some day there will be no separate schools.

MAR 29 1941

Let us not be mourning the spread of prejudice. Let's help break down these undemocratic practices of segregation. Let us help the liberals and true believers in Christ and democracy. The time to begin this battle will never be earlier, nor more strategically sounder than now. Every successful attack upon Jim Crowism is a battle won in the war for Democracy and national unity.

Help Fight Our Own Cause

MAR 29 1941

Partly because of the depression and partly because they feel Negroes are sufficiently advanced to provide for their own welfare, many of the white philanthropists who, in years gone by, contributed heavily to Negro education and advancement, have either curtailed or cut off their donations entirely. This means that the burden of supporting his cause has fallen directly on the shoulders of the Negro himself. It is our opinion that he ought to assume the task with dignity, courage and enthusiasm.

We have, from time to time, called attention to the various organizations, whose energies are directed toward improving the conditions of the race, and who depend upon public support for their existence.

Negroes have never hesitated to call on these organizations when help was needed, but unfortunately they have never quite adequately rallied to their assistance during money raising campaigns and membership drives.

Just now the New York Urban League is about to launch a drive for funds. From its recent published annual report, it would seem to us that it deserves the support of the public.

Among the accomplishments of the league during 1940, as reported in the 22nd annual report, were: 18,000 persons assisted in securing jobs, care of convalescents and camp scholarships. Along with other agencies, the New York Urban League has come to be regarded as one of the very worthwhile social organizations in the community. Its work for adequate relief, better health facilities and housing facilities, more and better jobs, and the integration of the Negro into all phases of community life. has been noteworthy.

The Negro and Democracy

As World War II becomes daily more complex, so too does the role of the Negro throughout the world in the present conflict become more puzzling. In the U.S. a thousand-and-one committees, with high-sounding titles, are set up to "Aid in the Battle for Democracy," to "War Against Fascism and Dictatorship" —to do this and that for the benefit of Britain. Whosoever raises his voice against immediate and complete surrender to the war hysteria now gripping the country is villified and smeared.

Insofar as the white peoples are concerned, we have no quarrel with this attitude. Undoubtedly, life for the whites is easier and more pleasant under the superficial "democratic" setup of the British type than under the harsh regimentation of a Hitler or a Stalin.

White political demagogues must blush when they seek to enlist Negro aid in a war "against racial intolerance and oppression." In the U. Munition plants, aircraft factories, and ship yards close their doors firmly in the face of Negro workers. The U.S. Navy still maintains and practices a race prejudice as intolerant as any in the world.

While the white press screams about "Defending world democracy," the U.S. Naval Academy refuses to allow the Annapolis lacrosse team to play Harvard until a Negro, son of a Harvard graduate and a brilliant player on the Harvard lacrosse team, was being barred from competition. This, however, is no isolated example of white intolerance— or, for that matter, elsewhere around the world wherever white powers rule.

Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla

I Am a "Jim Crow" American

May 18, the "I Am an American" program will be staged at the municipal auditorium, Oklahoma City. The affair will be in the form of a citizenship recognition day, when those youths who have reached the age of 21, and subject to the draft, will be given orientation. Patriotic addresses will be delivered. The plans extend to giving recognition even to those aliens who have completed citizenship requirements during the past year.

But this appeal to the patriotism of the people does not up to this moment include Negro youth just reaching the 21st milestone in their lives. Although black boys just entering the precincts of manhood, will soon be snatched from their homes into military camps and may within the year be converted into cannon fodder on foreign soil, the first impress upon their adult thinking is to be that they are a "Jim Crow" unit in the country where they were born.

We talk about national unity, but no Fifth Column conceived of could do more towards orienting Negro youth toward disloyalty than such an act. We are moved to make this statement because last week we were approached by one of the guiding spirits of the "I Am an American" program, and requested to suggest how Negro youth could be integrated into the program, without "creating any trouble among the whites."

The white lady who discussed this matter with the writer was fair-minded enough to say that she believed Negro and white youth should attend this patriotic function together, but, said she, "I am in the minority. There is a large number of my people who feel that one of two things will have to be done. We will have to arrange to separate the Negro and white boys in the auditorium, or we will have to arrange for a separate meeting."

We told our visitor that in our judgment a patriotic meeting should be attended by all Americans, at the same time and in the same place. We told our visitor that to talk of national unity but in the same breath make arrangements for separation in a moment when love and devotion for the flag is given expression, is stupid and silly.

And then we went into another phase of the subject regarding which few white people in control centers in America seem to be paying any attention. We told our white visitor that those people in America who persist in maintaining unfair standards, and give open expression to race prejudice, are placing too great a burden and strain upon Negro leadership.

During the first world war twenty years ago, thousands of young Negroes, at the outset of the conflict, announced they were not going to fight. They asked, "Why should I fight for the right of the voice of men to be heard in foreign governments when my voice is ignored in my native land?"; they asked, "Why should I fight for the physical safety of other people when I am lynched, and my relatives will be lynched while I am on the battle front?"; they asked, "Why should I battle for liberties none of which I enjoy?"

It was clear-eyed, visionful Negro leadership recognizing right and responsibility is cumulative and heaped together, that called the masses of Negroes into schoolhouses, lodge halls and churches, convincing them that two wrongs do not make right, and that this is our country and the Stars and Stripes is the American Negro's flag, regardless to units of citizens who think differently. It was Negro leadership that threw the Negro soldier into the military establishment, patriotic, in spite of Jim Crow, the mob and disfranchisement.

But twenty years ago there was no well organized Fifth Column in America. Today, with France subjugated and England tottering on her knees, people everywhere all over America can see men with white faces many of whom openly express love for, and interest in totalitarian forms. Just a few weeks ago this writer was in a government building. The night before hell had fallen from the skies on London. As we peered through the window where we were doing business with an employe of the government, we expressed our horror of what was happening.

Looking cautiously from one side to another to see if anyone was near, this employe of the government, with a white face, leaned over and whispered, "Yes, I'm glad of what is happening. I hope England will be whipped to her knees. I want Germany to win."

The man speaking to this writer was an American citizen. He spoke faultless English. He is a government employe. He is not alone by himself, but countless other white Americans are disaffected, dissatisfied and subversive. We have related this story in order to point out the grave danger that threatens, and the terrible load placed on the shoulders of Negro leadership in this hour, when treason is in the air.

Twenty years ago it was possible to properly guide Negro masses, but today with the men with white faces, many of them next door neighbors to Negroes they have known for years, talking treason, a menacing situation develops.. Negro leadership has another and more serious problem. If revolution and uprisings come in this country, the Negro is the largest minority group. It is foolish to assume that overtures will not be made to black citizens, Jim Crowed, lynched and set completely outside the social order.

The "I Am an American" committee, with its silly, stupid plans to segregate Negroes in a patriotic meeting, is contributing quite largely to the burden Negro leadership must carry. Everyone wants peace, tranquility and happiness, and what shall be the answer of the Negro leader when the masses become innoculated with the thought that some other form or social order may more quickly achieve their objectives?

I am an American. All the lime in my bones came from the soil of this nation. Father and mother are buried in this hallowed environment and the tender recollections of my childhood are treasured under the Stars and Stripes. It is useless for anyone to attempt to subvert my devotion from the vale of memories that reach back half a century, but this is not the picture one must draw of youth fighting for a place in the rising sun—youth that dares, and is willing to take a chance out on the plains of adventure.

Age is content with reminiscences, but vibrant youth is impatient and will fight, and this is the vexationus problem and trouble thrown into the lap of Negro leadership by those who offer lip service to patriotism, but who in actuality are intolerants who would destroy democratic processes and the realities of brotherhood.

Gentlemen: I received the inclosed invitation which I must decline for the reason that I chance to be a Christian of color and, according to your Mr. Spyker, and probably yourselves, white Christians? should have no dealings with colored Christians.

If our army and navy were not at this time so illy prepared I might have accepted your invitation, for I know it would be necessary to call them out in order that I might be able to avail myself of the facilities your invitation offers.

On second thought probably the POSSE COMITATUS might suffice, because in racial antipathy in this community, your Mr. Spyker occupies an evil eminence all his own.

But after all, the weather is hot and I am busy getting ready for a little vacation, so, for the time being, I shall leave you Christians to enjoy the delectable luxury of your racial hatred.

Yours truly,
JOS. E. BOWMAN.

VAST THRONG JAMS THE MALL TO CHEER AMERICAN DAY FETE

City's Greatest Patriotic Rally Draws Estimated 750,000 to Reaffirm Loyalty to U. S.

ICKES PLEADS FOR BRITAIN

Mayor Tells 'Adolf, Benito and Joe' That 'We Are Not Afraid to Defend Institutions'

By BYRON DARNTON

Along with the rest of the country New York City celebrated "I Am an American Day" yesterday. Locally the big attraction was on the Mall at Central Park, where hundreds of thousands of persons attended a mass meeting, officially designated as the greatest patriotic gathering the city has ever seen.

It was a double-message mass meeting. There were the usual serious speakers, who reminded their hearers that we live in dangerous times. And there were representatives of the lighter side of American life — lustry, shouting singers and comedians—who demonstrated most satisfactorily that to be an American is not merely a matter of grave responsibility but is also a lot of fun.

Bill Robinson, the Negro tap dancer, promised, for instance, that if Hitler ever started for Harlem he personally would guarantee that he'd never get past Yankee Stadium.

Eddie Cantor, his banjo eyes popping at the size of the crowd that spread before him, remarked that he hadn't seen so many people "since Ida's relatives came to live with us"—Ida being his wife, and the joke being a sure-fire producer of American laughs for several generations.

Mayor Has Busy Day

Mayor La Guardia grinned and sweated through a most enjoyable afternoon that included a speech, a spell as master of ceremonies and a couple of turns as leader of the band. One of the numbers he led was a Sousa march, and each time he heard the cymbals—and as it was Sousa, that was often—he laughed in utter glee. Then, with complete seriousness, he introduced Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, of Italian extraction like himself, as Carlo Poletti. The Mayor almost fell off the platform at that one.

By Nazi standards the mass meeting was a flop. Except for a few bands and some children's groups, nobody marched to it. Entering the park en route to the area of the Mall, where the ceremonies were held, people broke across barriers of benches and shockingly walked on the grass.

Those who found places in the 35,000 seats on the Mall crossed legs or slumped spinelessly, as they wished. There was scarcely an acre of uniforms, and they were police or veterans of the last war.

And there was some typically American disrespect for the amenities. Thus, when Bishop William T. Manning read the invocation, and those near the platform arose, there were shouts of "Sit down!" from backbenchers whose view was impaired. The amenities won, and the crowd stood.

Applause throughout the afternoon was frequent and loud—Eddie Cantor and Kate Smith got as big hands as anybody, and bigger ones than the serious speakers—but by any Nazi standards the expressions of approval would have been most inadequate. There were no chorused hurrahs to match even an inferior performance at the Kroll Opera House in Berlin.

100,000 at Chicago Fete

In Chicago the day was celebrated by a meeting at Soldiers Field, attended by an estimated 100,000 persons. William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, the principal speaker, said that unless there was a stop to the "infamous practice" of bombing open cities and killing women and children "we will all be back living in holes in the ground."

In Washington speakers at several meetings and on radio programs observed the day, directing their remarks to the 300,000 aliens who have been naturalized in the last year and the more than 2,000,000 young Americans who became voters. Among the speakers were Vice President Wallace, Solicitor General Francis Biddle, Representative Sam Rayburn, Attorney General Robert A. Jackson and Justice Justin Miller of the United States Court of Appeals.

"I Am An American Day"

Sunday, May 18, has been designated by the President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, as "I AM AN AMERICAN DAY" throughout the nation.

The observance of this particular day is especially dedicated to those new citizens who have recently become of legal voting age; to those foreign-born who have just become naturalized Americans—and to all the other 130 millions who believe that citizenship in these United States of America is their most sacred possession.

About fourteen millions of America's most loyal citizens who dearly cherish AMERICA'S IDEALS OF LIBERTY AND JUSTICE TO ALL will resolve again with all the passion of their hearts, that the IDEALS OF DEMOCRACY on which this great Nation was founded shall survive forever—and never suffer by their thought or act.

Inspired with patriotic fervor and thrilled at the sight of waving flags, WE, TOO, WILL AGAIN PROUDLY REPEAT THE AMERICAN CREED:

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people, whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable, established on those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrifced their lives and fortunes.

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies."

THEN—no matter in which part of the great broad country one may be—some incident will send us to our knees to pray and utter in silence that other AMERICAN CREED:

"I, too, Sing America
I am the darker brother
They send me to eat in the kitchen
When company comes
But I laugh
And eat well
And grow strong.
To-morrow
I'll sit at the table
When company comes
Nobody'll dare
Say to me
"Eat in the kitchen"
Then.
Besides, they'll see how beautiful I am
And be ashamed.

I, TOO, AM AMERICA.

Fight for Negro Rights—A Fight for Democracy

New York, N. Y.

Editor, Daily Worker:

Enclosed please find copy of a letter I sent to the Chicago Defender:

"I read your editorial in the Defender recently in which you express approval of the views of Rev. Harold Kingsley expressed in his letter to your paper dealing with the war and Negro people. Certainly there is need for clarity on this issue. For that reason I feel impelled to answer the 'progressive and learned' (as you call him) Dr. Kingsley.

"The worthy Doctor's major premise that 'it is sound wisdom that we fight both these battles at the same time—the battle for full citizenship and the battle for the ideal of America as presented in our foreign policy by President Roosevelt.' Is the 'learned and progressive' minister so naive as not to see that the battle for full citizenship of the Negro people is a battle against the Roosevelt foreign policy and its supporters. Is he so blind that he cannot see that Mr. Roosevelt and his foreign policy finds among its most hearty and consistent supporters the 'economic royalist' and the Southern Bourbon who wield the lynch rope around the necks of the Negro people.

"A fight for full citizenship, practical in its implications, including the right to work, decent housing, buoyant, health, freedom of person and from discrimination, is a fight against these people. The Roosevelt foreign policy receives its most consistent support from the chief enemies of the Negro people. Let the 'learned and progressive' Doctor look at the record of the poll tax Congressmen on every 'Roosevelt policy' that drives the country deeper and deeper into the war.

"Negroes are against the war. They have learned their lesson of 1917, even though privilege and philanthropy has many a henchman to whip up the war drums like the 'learned and progressive' Doctor. Negroes want real democracy, jobs and freedom. To get that they are learning that they have to fight against the Roosevelt foreign policies, Wall Street and Southern lynchers that they represent, the chief barriers that must be eliminated before Negroes will have full citizenship. Hence a fight against the war is a fight for Negro rights, a fight for democracy."

SPEAKING FOR ALL NEGROES

The other night a Negro speaking on a radio program with several prominent white people declared that Negroes are all behind the defense program and for aid to Britain.

Many Negroes are getting sick and tired of certain Negroes setting themselves up as spokesmen for the entire Negro group.

No Negro can speak for all the colored people in the United States, because there is as wide a variety of opinions among colored Americans as among white Americans.

There are Negroes in favor of the national defense program and there are Negroes who are not.

There are Negroes who favor aiding Britain and there are Negroes who would be jubilant if Britain fell under the Nazi onslaughts.

There are Negroes in favor of segregation and a policy of general appeasement and there are those who are not.

Nobody has taken a poll of Negro opinion to determine what Negroes think about anything, and until this is done it is impossible for anybody to truthfully state what Negroes think.

It would be a good policy if Negroes who are called upon to speak would speak for themselves, and not for thirteen million other citizens.

Unanimity of opinion is characteristic of barbarians.

It is no flattery of colored people for anybody to assert or imply that there are not wide differences of opinion among them on every imaginable question of the day.

2,000 NEGROES AT MASS MEET

Approximately 2,000 Negroes yesterday afternoon attended a mass meeting held by the Religious Public Service association at the Armory-Auditorium.

Speaker was Col. T. L. Kirkpatrick, whose subject was "Americanism." Col. Kirkpatrick urged his listeners to be good citizens, make every effort to reduce crime, and co-operate with the police department and city administration.

A. W. Davis, secretary of the association, was in charge of the meeting. The meeting began at 12 o'clock with religious services conducted by Rev. G. W. Moore. A number of prominent Negro citizens also addressed the assemblage.

The Religious Public Service association was organized to encourage thrift among local Negroes, to help solve racial problems, and to assist domestic workers in obtaining better jobs.

"WHAT CONSTITUTES AN AMERICAN?"

THE ABOVE QUESTION was asked by Hon. Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the Department of the Interior, as he addressed the 675,000 people in the "I Am An American Day" celebration in Central Park, New York, Sunday, May 18. Answering his own question, Secretary Ickes said:

An American is one who will sacrince property, ease and security in order that he and his children may retain the rights of free men. An American is one in whose heart is engraved the immortal second sentence of the Declaration of Independence."

Mr. Ickes by this definition, proves again that he has an eloquent as well as a sharp tongue, but to most people his definition of an American is an ideal to be attained at some remote future. The rights and perogatives guaranteed under the Declaration of Independence and our Constitution are limited, in their minds, to those Americans who happen to be of the Caucasian race. Until such a time as there is no reservation, mental or otherwise, as to the correctness of the above definition, our democracy will only appear as hypocrisy to the other nations of the world.

Howard Trustee Says Race Only Wants Opportunity

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Howard Univeristy trustee and a member of the faculty at the University of North Carolina, stated in a radio address delivered recently, that the main thing the Negro wants from America is an opportunity which is not based on race or color.

According to the professor, the attitude of the Negro is "Give me an opportunity to make a decent living, to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and I will take care of myself."

"In these critical times when our paramount aim is the defense of our democracy and our American way of life, we must be a united people," Dr. Johnson said, "Our 13,000,000 colored citizens are in many respects the most loyal and dyed-in-the-wool Americans in our whole nation. We have always had their loyalty and we must continue to have it, but the only way to keep it is to deserve it."

The professor also stated that many white people have a way of saying "Oh, I know the Negro. You can't tell me anything about Negroes. I've known them all my life." But he pointed out further that he is of the opinion that the average white person knows very little about Negroes.

"If we were asked to name five Negroes, other than prize fighters and jazz orchestra leaders, who have achieved distinction in American life, I doubt if many of us could do it. No, I am afraid that what the average person means when he says that he knows the Negro is that he knows a few "Negro stories", and that he has a lot of threadbare notions about the racial characteristics of the Negro. I believe that our ideas about colored Americans and our relations with them would be more intelligent if we were better informed."

REMARKABLE ACHIEVEMENTS

The University of North Carolina professor told his radio audience that it would take a large volume to record the achievements of Negroes in various fields.

"Suffice it to say that their achievements are no longer confined to music and pugilism, but extend into many fields, such as poetry, fiction, drama, painting, sculpture, mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, aeronautics, architecture, law, medicine, biology, theology and religion. Yes, the Negro has made remarkable progress—in fact, the most remarkable progress that any group of people has ever made under similiar conditions."

In speaking of the Negro's handicaps, he stated:

"Social customs, race prejudices, and even the labor unions have operated to keep the Negro out of the skilled trades and white-collar jobs and even to displace Negroes from some of their traditional occupations, such as janitor work and hotel work."

"In the courtroom we have a way of dealing much too leniently with a Negro who harms another Negro, thus encouraging a disrespect for law and a feeling that life is cheap if it happens to be a Negro life.

"Where Do We Stand In National Emergency?" Asks Emmett Scott

MAR 1 1941

Deplores Attitude of Those Who Think Minorities Should Be Satisfied With Patch-Quilt Democracy In Face of Peril.

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—"Where Do We Stand At This Time?", is a pertinent inquiry, as emergency preparations feverishly go forward to meet any and all contingencies that may arise affecting the well-being of the country and ourselves as the largest racial, minority group in the United States.

For many months now we have been registering protests against the legalization and imposition of the jim-crow status being forced upon colored citizens by various and sundry agencies of our government through jaundiced-eyed officials who are carrying their prejudices and race-discriminatory notions into National Defense efforts.

OTHER RACIAL GROUPS ESCAPE THIS HUMILIATION

Other racial groups are escaping this humiliation. No one is talking of setting up Greek, or Irish, or Jewish, or German, or Indian, or Italian, or Swedish, or Danish air-squadrons, combat units, or other emergency military groups. This humiliation is reserved for the Negro group on the assumption apparently that nothing can be done about it.

Also, in defense preparations in industry, the hard and fast lines of racial discrimination are being tightened and serve to deny to one group, almost alone, the full privileges and opportunities of employment, and disappoint its eager willingness to make patriotic contribution toward that readiness so necessary if we are to be ready for THE DAY.

DISHEARTENING, DISCOURAGING

All of this would not be so disheartening and discouraging if it were not in an atmosphere of hypocritical pretense that we are practicing the formulas of enlightened democracy in America, and preparing to maintain it throughout the world.

Estelle Sternberger, executive director of World Peaceways, New York, in a recent broadcast, paid her respects to that mistaken sense of patriotism which is proposing and enforcing a surrender of fundamental, democratic practices "in the interest of national efficiency and unity."

Unhappily and unfortunately, even among ourselves, there are those who are covertly, subtly and insinuatingly suggesting that we abandon our protests, take what is coming to us, and complain not.

This observer recently wrote that our house has not been set in order any more than it was in 1917 when we went forth to make the world safe for democracy, and that, the usual and continuing disabilities from which colored men and women suffer are not being abated or ameli

CITIZENS' DESIRE COMPLETE DEMOCRACY

In contrast to those among us, and all others who take exception to these all-too-true statements, it is refreshing to note that substantial elements of our citizenship are in no way hesitant in expressing the same opinions—that this democracy of ours is not the thing it is usually cracked-up to be, and that the call of the hour is to meet the responsibilities of the hour by according to oppressed and suppressed minorities in America that justice and freedom and equality we are all but ready to go to war for the benefit of other nations—and to meet these responsibilities NOW.

Complete reply to such carping critics is to be found in the address made in New York City last week by John C. Winant, recently designated as American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, when he said:

"We could not expect—and we cannot expect—that a citizen with no share in the benefits of democracy will give his faith and his life for the empty promises of democracy."

MAR 1 1941

In the interest of the preservation of our civilization, our national unity, and our national security, the discriminations and prejudices now retarding the progress of democracy in America should be abandoned.

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

National Unity

FEB 28 1941

Our President continues to call on the people for National Unity. Oneness of purpose and solidarity of action; to meet what his Excellency is pleased to call menaces threatening the overthrow of world democracy; and in substance, offers America to the world as the only arsenal to save democracy, a form of government that never has existed in truth or fact. He makes this call to his people, in teeth of the open fact that his administration at Washington encourages and acquisces in a policy of segregation and discrimination that defeast 13,000,000 of his home folks of the freedom he asks for oppressed people outside of America. If it is the aim of democracy our President is talking about for the Jews in Germany and the oppressed in other lands beyond the seas, why doesn't he move to give 13,000,000 Negroes in his homeland the same freedom of speech, freedom of press, and opportunity to work on our National Defense Program and to fight for their country along side of white soldiers in the Army and Navy?

Charity begins at home, though the ruling authority in America does not seem to recognize these principles of just government. Democracy has proven a myth all over the world; it has not as yet found an arsenal for its preservation, and never will until men learn to be just to one another. Democracy has always failed when the crisis came to its people, and cried to its people, we cannot protect ourselves; give us the power of the dictator and we can survive. Power thus granted temporarily to rulers of the people by the people never returned to the people; and democracy becomes permanently totalitarianism. We listen to the appeals of the President with patience and moderation; but we have a reasonable doubt of the sincerity of any appeal for national unity; that ignores and does not include 13,000,000 of its citizens in its national defense program because they are black, despite the fact that they are loyal citizens and taxpayers in common with white citizens.

Total defense and all out aid to Britain means the best that all the people have to spare. Not white people, red people or black people, but all of the people. President Lincoln said: Government of the people; by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth. Jefferson said of democracy: God created all men equal and entitled to certain unalienable rights; and that there was no just government without the consent of the governed. He meant everybody that was governed by those in charge of the government, had to have their consent before the rulers would have the rights to rule over them. He did not mean that governors, presidents or whatnots could control either Negroes or white folks without their consent, or having a voice in selecting those chosen to rule or govern. Neither Jefferson nor Lincoln meant that when a crisis or emergency arose, that white men would do all the fighting; get all the work and control all labor projects to the exclusion of the Negro, and that the Negro would receive nothing in the line of [illegible] jobs as a white man needed a job. Neither did they mean that one set of men should organize and monopolize all public services, but that all the people according to qualifications should enjoy equal participation in whatever services or benefits the government provided for a livelihood for its citizens. We all are entitled to free speech, free press, a free ballot and a fair count of the votes placed in the ballot box, with every man represented by a person of his choice, that he might receive justice and equality at the ballot box. No country can be free or righteous until its citizens are just and fair to one another. The President's effort and expenditure of the taxpayer's money to give Jews and others in foreign lands freedom and protection, and at the same time denying these rights and privileges to his people at home, will not take well with the Creator that made all men equal, nor the Constitution of our country that offers an equality of rights and opportunity to all its citizens without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude.

COLORED MINISTER OFFERS GOOD ADVICE

Editor Constitution: A word of advice to the colored people, my race, the Negroes of the south:

Through the plans of God and our government, the colored people have the greatest opportunity presented to them now on the farms that has ever been presented to them, and I want to advise them to grasp this golden opportunity before it is too late.

Go back to the farm where you can raise and have plenty of fresh good food to eat and live happy; where you can get your houses free, gardens and water free, where you can raise good children and serve God.

Sin, vice and laziness are destroying the Negro race everywhere. The chaingang and penitentiaries are crowded with them.

Jobs are scarce in small cities. Farm production is much needed, and prices are good in war time. The government Farm Housing Project offers you anything you want. Will sell you a home, rent you a farm, let you have money, stock and give you 40 years to pay for it. Look how they are trying to help us. Giving us rental money, our old people's pension, good schools, free books, paying the teachers, adult schools, clinics, doctors and medicine. Fruits of all kind free to our school children.

Wake up and get on the job and help them and yourself. Fred Douglas and Booker T. Washington said once in a lecture to the colored people that if they wanted to be recognized as a race they must serve God, marry and raise good families, be good, trustworthy, truthful, honest citizens and work, be economical, save money and buy a home. Bishop Y. W. Bell and Dr. A. S. Clarke, two of the foremost race leaders of the south, in a lecture to the colored people this year advises them to work, be thrifty, economize and live good citizens, and the white race will surely help you.

Yours for peace and safety of all races.

The Negro's Course In the Crisis

BY WALTER LIVINGSTON WRIGHT
President, Lincoln (Pa.) University

(From baccalaureate address, June 1, at Lincoln University, Chester County, Pa., founded in 1854, the oldest institution in the United States for the higher education of Negro young men.)

The world is one. We shall best attain our desire at home in a world that moves toward the same ideals. In a world that denies righteous purposes of life and exalts their opposition, we cannot advance even if we survive. We shall do little to save democracy abroad if we neglect it at home. If we disclaim our interest in its survival elsewhere, we run the risk that in the face of organized might we lose the liberty we have so hardly won.

We, in America, are no longer a new nation as in former years. We inherit conditions and problems that have come down to us through three hundred years. Antagonisms have developed similar to those across the seas.

Racially we live in two worlds in America. We breathe the same air and eat the same food, yet the two races are far apart. What shall be done to bridge the gap? There is advice on every hand. Whom shall we follow?

TWO WORLDS IN U. S.

On the white side of the line few give thought to the racial situation. In general they assume the continuance of things as they are. We separate at every possible point and little attention is paid to the life the Negro faces. To us it is a thing apart, while to the Negro it affects his whole existence. He lives largely in a world circumscribed for him by the other race.

Inevitably he wants change. How should it be brought about, and how shall its beneficence be assured? Can he assume that the change necessarily means improvement? Things are not satisfactory. The temptation is to assume that any change will be for the better.

NEW SITUATIONS

From time to time new situations necessitate action. A crusade sweeps over the earth. The sword is red with human blood. The wealth of the world is poured out for implements of war. Men battle on land, sea, and air.

We in America sit on the sidelines. We are told on the one part that it is the siren's call luring us to the destruction of the life and ideals we have built up if we turn aside from our own life busy with the problems that press for solution within our own borders.

The nation as a whole, however, moves hesitatingly with slow measured steps into the belief that if we sit by and allow the new way of life to prevail in the rest of the world we shall not be bothered with our vexing problems, that there will be new controls partly from without and perhaps more from within if the Nazi way becomes the dominating, the successful way in the world.

VARIOUS POLICIES

The Negro has his own viewpoints as he tries to see his way through the dimly lighted future. His leaders advocate vitally different policies from which he must choose.

Some advocate a general movement with prevailing American sentiment, insisting that the Negro is first of all American, and that the most vital thing for him is that America should retain her freedom of action; that in the emergency the Negro should appeal first as a loyal American, with insistence on fair and equal treatment, but with no threat of disloyalty if these pleas are disregarded.

LEADERS DIFFER

A second leadership would reverse this order, insisting that justice to the Negro should precede his support of the defense of America, and the nation's danger is his opportunity—that his loyalty should be only to a democracy that gives him his full rights.

A third starts with the premise that, with the possible exception of America and Russia, all governments alike are bad, so far as the Negro is concerned, and therefore the present world struggle has little interest for him. Fascism and Nazism are bad, but so is British rule.

LITTLE CHOICE

All badnesses are alike. Imperialisms, British, German, or American, differ little. One or the other does not matter so far as the Negro's future is concerned.

JUN 14 1941

On the one side there is the statement from one leader in the public press that this was the opportune time because the government was most vulnerable and needed the Negro and all other citizens; that Negroes in order to secure their rights should embarrass the government in the same manner that the government has embarrassed them; that Negroes should use the same tactics against the government to attain their citizenship rights as organized laborers are using to obtain higher wages.

RACE WANTS TO SERVE

The other view is expressed by a Negro journal: "In America fourteen million Negoes march to offer their services to America, which despite its imperfections, is still the last outpost to constitutional freedom for all mankind in the civilized world. Throughout the nation a great minority surges forth in search of an opportunity to serve, without malice or grudge. All it seeks is a place in the productive schemes of a land long loved."

The student hears all these voices. Which shall he heed? Certainly he should follow neither without earnest effort to get the facts. Are all imperialisms alike? Do British, German, Italian, American control in Africa and the Islands mean the same thing so that there is no choice?

Excluding America, where he is nominally at least a member of the mother country, he is elsewhere a member of a colonial possession with the hope of ultimately gaining self-rule and control in areas historically his, and where his numbers exceed all other groups. With the two hopes ahead of ultimate independence and meanwhile a beneficent rule that will lead through educational and other development to this end, does he really see as much hope under one rule as another.

ALL NATIONS SIMILAR

If there is no difference, the world struggle is one he may well pass by. If not, it is surely the part of wisdom to aid the most favorable. British and American principles expresed and exemplified for good or ill in practice are open to his study, as are those of the Nazi and Fascist. Both have dealt and are dealing with minority groups, and their methods are known to all that have the will to investigate.

Turning to the United States, what course is wise? Loyalty and patriotic service with loyal pressure for recognition, or this only on condition that certain essential rights under the Constitution are granted before that service is rendered; or thirdly, cooperation with groups at home and abroad which see the Negro's future in an overthrow of existing forms of government, and the nation's present stress a favorable opportunity to bring this about?

CHOICE DOUBTFUL

The choice lies largely between the first two, and the individual will form his own conclusion either from careful study or emotionally following some appealing leader.

JUN 14 1941

What of the signs of promise under present skies granting a continuance of the existing way of life? What is the increasing effect of education where private philanthropy and state and national appropriation have brought educational opportunity?

The student will find mingled encouragement and discouragement. May I call your attention to some of the things that seem encouraging to one who believes that injustice to any man injures more in the long run him who gives than him who suffers; that the ultimate judgment of the white man in America may be based on the measure of justice he meets out to the other race he brought here: that in America the issue is "all men up, sir," or all down, to be succeeded by a better and wiser civilization.

ABILITY RECOGNIZED

The Negro's ability is being recognized as never before. In literature, science, music, and art the day is past when he attracts surprised attention from his racial origin.

With trained minds of both races and a fuller recognition of Christian principles, one may surely hope for progress as the problem becomes more that of the wider relationship of man to man, and the national problem is merged in that of mankind in general where the future existence of all seems to depend on the gradual diminution of hatred, malice, ill will, jealousy and seeking of self.

Beating Jim Crow

"I LOVE America but I do not love the poll tax, lynching, Jim-Crowism, job discrimination, unequal education, and oppression." In that statement by Roscoe Dunjee, militant Negro editor of the Oklahoma City Black Dispatch, is the briefest summary of the problems tackled by the Houston convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Within each category of things we "do not love" is a multitude of related problems taken up by the 300 delegates. There is not only the poll-tax denial of vote, for example, but the "white primary." There is not only night lynching but murder in open court. And besides the problems that press most heavily on Negroes there are those common to all oppressed people, black and white—the whole fight for jobs and wages, the right to organize, civil liberties. To the delegates these issues are, of course, anything but new; it was the NAACP's thirty-second annual convention, and the issues existed before the organization was born. But at this meeting, in the Jim Crow state of Martin Dies, were reflected the progress, the strength that comes from long years of working together for common advancement.

JUN 8 1941

A victory for all Negroes came during the course of the convention, with President Roosevelt's executive order against job discrimination in defense industries. The order is to be backed by a five-man enforcement board which must certainly include representatives of the Negro people. This, however, does not mark the end of the long campaign to abolish job discrimination. Negroes well know that no enforcement agency will be sufficient unless it is made, through pressure from the people, to function in accordance with its purpose. Surely the President's order was no real reason for A. Phillip Randolph, Negro Social Democrat, to call off the planned job march on Washington. This arbitrary action weakens the strongest weapon in the fight for Negro job equality—the weapon of demand and protest by which Negroes won the presidential decree in the first place.

The Negro Is Stereotyped

DAVID H. BRADFORD, of Kentucky State College, who writes a weekly column for the Courier-Journal, protested last week the fact that in the minds of many White people the Negro is stereotyped as a lazy, careless, inefficient, carefree individual. To many Whites that is the picture of the whole Negro Race despite evidences to the contrary to be found on every hand. Motion pictures have had a lot to do with keeping the happy-go-lucky, carefree Negro as THE NEGRO. The only virtue motion pictures allot to the Negro is a dog-like fidelity to his white people. Writers like Octavius Roy Cohen in the Saturday Evening Post and Roark Bradford in Collier's also help maintain this stereotype of what the Negro is supposed to be—lazy, shiftless, crapshooting, chicken-stealing, happy-go-lucky in the most serious trouble.

Books aud stories and pictures pay no attention—or very litttle—to the intelligent, upstanding, self-respecting Negro. He must be an Uncle Tom of the 1850's or they can't use him. So we are handicapped by this stereotype that is fixed in the minds of many whites—even intelligent whites. Talk of white business men advertising in Negro papers and immediately they visualize the whole Race as composed of some, dirty, unclean and foul Negroes they have contacted. White politicians are almost as bad. They want little or nothing to do with the intelligent, clean, serious-minded Negroes. They prefer to deal with the clowns and underworld of the Race and the pity is try to convince themselves all Negroes are alike.

Sunday's Courier-Journal Magazine had a full page of a busy day for Mayor Scholtz and apropos of nothing told a story of a big, half drunk Negro approaching the Mayor's car and asking His Honor for a dollar. All the rest of the article of how the Mayor's day is taken up was lost in that one story and no doubt many white readers pictured all Negroes of that type.

But white people know better despite their desire to picture the Negro as a good-for-nothing. They know there are great Negro men and women—inventors, artists, authors, orators, educators, artisans, laborers. They know that often the porters on trains, the waiters in dining-rooms, the bellboys in hotels, the butlers and maids in their homes—often have more education, more intelligence, more commonsense, more ability, more class and more character than the people they serve. Because men and women are Black, doors of opportunity are shut in their faces despite ability or character. White people know this and if they have the Negro stereotyped as "a lazy, careless, inefficient, wasteful, without a sense of responsibility" individual, as Mr. Bradford thinks, then it is willful and wishful thinking on their part. And it is a poor alibi for employers to turn Negroes down in defense work or in ordinary, everyday labor.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST

The Chicago Tribune in a recent survey indicates that the Negroes of Harlem are more anxious to fight for this country against the German menace than are the whites of New York. This is all the more amazing when we consider that the largest city in America is the haven for the thousands of refugees from Hitlerian tyranny and that it is the greatest Jewish city in the world, supposedly ready to engage in the struggle alongside the British Empire and the Soviet at the drop of the proverbial hat.

Like "Sammie the Skunk" in Countee Cullen's "Lost Zoo," the Negro must formulate his protest against the discrimination contemplated against him by the other animals invited by Noah to join him in his little excursion on the Ark. White Americans of every European extraction are perfectly willing to enjoy the fruits of the enormous defense boom but are more than anxious to keep "Sammie the Skunk" on the outside of the American Ark.

How much more impressive, therefore, is this patriotism of the American Negro who in spite of the extraordinary discriminations practiced against him at this time is more anxious than his Hebrew or Russo-American brother to shoulder arms against the Great Dictator. To one who knows the Negro of the United States, however, this is an old story and works every time. "If you will just be patient and quiet during the emergency—we will adjust your claims after the emergency is over," has been the refrain ever since the Negro became a citizen of this republic.

It is time the Negro stopped kidding himself and realized that effective protest during emergency is infinitely more productive of results than ten times the effort during the periods of comparative normalcy. It is most important that the Negro become more earnest than he has ever been. It is time he dropped the satisfied air and bestirred himself to participate as never before in the affairs and the wealth of America and her Four Freedoms. We have had none; we will fight if we have some; nor will mere promises suffice. "Sammie the Skunk" has learned his lesson, we hope, and now that he knows how "to sit down with elegant company," he too wishes a cabin on the American Ark before the storm breaks overhead.

WALTER CHIVERS SAYS:

Some Types Of Southern Negro Leadership

By WALTER R. CHIVERS

THESE ARE TROUBLOUS times in which we live. That is putting it mildly. Minority groups both political and racial are being sorely tried. The mettle of these people is undergoing the severest tests to which human beings have ever been subjected. If these people are to maintain status they must have leadership born of the present crisis. They must support this leadership.

AUG 18 1941

The tragedy of the situation in the Old South is the refusal of a sizable minority of upper class Negroes to recognize such leadership. It is developing The soil which forms its basis is the "common people". These leaders then are "common people." They have become leaders of the masses because the "upper class" Negroes have refused to "see' the identity between themselves and the common people.

CHIVERS

GAP IS CREATED

The social forces which have created the "upper class" Negroes such as education, position, "white connections," luck, have made such a gap between them and the common people as to generate within them a feeling of social superiority. I fear that the self-adulation placed upon themselves by too many members of this "privileged" Negro group has convinced them definitely that they do not belong inseparably to the masses.

The evidence supporting this statement may be found in the customary way that the "appointed" leaders lecture to the masses, prescribe for them, and blame them for the ills suffered by the upper classes. These "leaders" refuse to work with the "common folk" or to recognize that they have anything to contribute to better race relations, for instance, out of their life-experiences.

The leadership, however, that is developing effectively is evolving out of the common sufferings of the masses of Negroes. As I write I can see in action fearless, courageous intelligent (even though unschooled) Negroes rising up to become fighting labor leaders. They can do it because they are part of it. They have the feel of the exploitation. The lives of themselves, the future of their children are all tied up in the cause for which they are fighting.

MUST UNDERSTAND PROBLEMS

Regardless of how sincere a man or woman may be they can not become effective leaders of people to whose problems they are not sympathetically attuned. This is practically the same as saying that true leadership comes from members of various groups and classes, thereby becoming group or class leadership. In the true sense of the word there is no such thing as race leadership or nation-wide leadership.

The recent display of noisy, bawling "leadership" shown by several Negroes in Atlanta over the recent political flare-up which unfortunately and regrettably involved education and the race issue is a clear demonstration of the misleadership that must happen when the classes appoint themselves to lead the masses.

These folk have a strong inclination for mass meeting, resolving and dissolving. They mass meet too soon after a crisis to have time for careful analysis, reflection and solid planning. Sometimes I believe they fear such action because it might mean that one of these several "leaders" will not be featured at the mass meeting. These folk are not leaders of the masses but rank individualists. They react spontaneously to any possible racial crisis in keeping with "personal" ideas of "saving the race".

LABOR NOT CONSULTED

Who ever heard of such Negro leaders calling in representatives of Negro unskilled labor, domestic servants, skilled labor for a serious conference before the mass meeting is called. They are afraid of such a conference. They fear that those who really suffer might go farther than resolutions of "filing committee reports for information". The difference in the several types of leaders is that one has something to "lose" and the others have not.

Negroes Rallied To United Defense

The international danger America faces were pointed out last night by Dr. O. E. Rice, pastor of the First Methodist Church, who spoke to a meeting of negro leaders of Montgomery at the St. John A. M. E. Church.

He reiterated that "united we stand, divided we fall." "Now is the time to exercise common sense...We don't want any rabble-rousers who go around stirring up prejudices...We must keep our hearts and loyalties for American democracy...This country is facing dangerous times," he declared.

Dr. Rice asserted that "if you cannot find racial justice under the American flag then you will not find it anywhere else...This is no time to raise racial antagonisms."

Walter Knabe, assistant city attorney, also addressed the meeting, pointing out the liberties Americans enjoy.

Colored speakers at the meeting were the Rev. J. S. Brookings, presiding elder and the Rev. J. M. Dawkins pastor of the St. John A. M. E. Church.

Charge City Schools Use Anti-Negro Texts

AUG 17 1941

By Ann Rivington

Shocking evidences of white chauvinism in American history textbooks now being used in New York City public schools are exposed in a report just completed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Forty-five texts now commonly used in both elementary and secondary schools form the basis for this report, according to which New York City school children—when they are taught anything at all about the Negro people—are subjected to texts marred by untrue statements and outright slanders.

The report's summary states, in surprisingly restrained terms, considering the nature of its findings: "Although no two authors selected or arranged their details in exactly the same way, there is, however, relatively general agreement on the treatment of the Negro in American history textbooks. . . ."

"A few authors do not even mention the Negro after the Reconstruction Period. Characteristics are overwhelmingly those of unfavorable description, and are usually attributed to the group as a whole. Illustrations emphasize field work during slavery. All of the authors do not offer reference on Negro life and history. . . ."

The summary concludes, "To the writers of textbooks in American history, the Negro figures, for the most part, as a passive factor in their own welfare."

A frequent slander found in the texts by the NAACP report is the old one that Negroes are inferior mentally, "childlike," or "simple."

This same author, according to the report, describes John Brown's famous raid as "the foolhardy scheme of an extremist," and constantly refers to Negroes as "illiterate." Discussing the Reconstruction Period, he says, "Many expected emancipation to place them on a level with their former masters. . . . Former slaveholders naturally resented the freedman's assumption of equality."

SLAVERY AS "UTOPIA"

Eugene A. Colligan and Maxwell F. Littwin, in "The Birth of Our Nation," a history text for Junior High School children, describe the horrors of slavery as a utopia for the Negro slaves: "Although the Negro worked hard, he was generally happy and contented. His simple and childlike nature was easily satisfied. As long as he had clothing, food and shelter, he wanted little else."

Especially vicious are the attacks in nearly all of these books on the Negro people under Reconstruction. Harold U. Faulkner and Tyler Kepner, in a Senior High School text, "America, Its History and Its People," states that the newly-freed Negro slaves had "a swagger born of childish ignorance and the expectancy of a life of ease."

Willis M. and Ruth West, in "The Story of Our Country," used in this city's Junior High Schools, declare darkly that "many" of the freed men "enjoyed freedom in strange and alarming ways," and add, as an excuse for incitements by the Ku Klux Klan, "Southern whites feared disorders from the lawless bands of ex-slaves roaming about their homes."

One of the vilest flights of imagination in all the texts reviewed appears in a book entitled "How the U.S. Became a World Power," by Giles. A passage in this book, meant for the "education" of Negro and white public school children in democratic New York City, describes a session of the South Carolina Legislature under Reconstruction in the following scandalous terms:

"We enter the House where Moses, the Speaker, looks down upon the members, mostly black or brown. . . . Some pompous in glossy, threadbare black frock coats, some in rough, soiled costumes of the field, others in stub jackets and rough woollen comforters worn tight-fitting around the neck to conceal lack of linen. . . . Chuckles, guffaws, the noisy cracking of peanuts and harsh voices disturb the dignity of the scene."

Such chauvinistic propaganda as this is more akin to the rantings of Hitler and Goebbels than to the democratic education which American citizens have a right to demand for their children.

LABOR NOT CONSULTED

Who ever heard of such Negro leaders calling in representatives of Negro unskilled labor, domestic servants, skilled labor for a serious conference before the mass meeting is called. They are afraid of such a conference. They fear that those who really suffer might go farther than resolutions of "filing committee reports for information". The difference in the several types of leaders is that one has something to "lose" and the others have not.

Negroes Rallied To United Defense

The international danger America faces were pointed out last night by Dr. O. E. Rice, pastor of the First Methodist Church, who spoke to a meeting of negro leaders of Montgomery at the St. John A. M. E. Church.

He reiterated that "united we stand, divided we fall." "Now is the time to exercise common sense...We don't want any rabble-rousers who go around stirring up prejudices...We must keep our hearts and loyalties for American democracy...This country is facing dangerous times," he declared.

Dr. Rice asserted that "if you cannot find racial justice under the American flag then you will not find it anywhere else...This is no time to raise racial antagonisms."

Walter Knabe, assistant city attorney, also addressed the meeting, pointing out the liberties Americans enjoy.

Colored speakers at the meeting were the Rev. J. S. Brookings, presiding elder and the Rev. J. M. Dawkins pastor of the St. John A. M. E. Church.

Charge City Schools Use Anti-Negro Texts

AUG 17 1941

By Ann Rivington

Shocking evidences of white chauvinism in American history textbooks now being used in New York City public schools are exposed in a report just completed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Forty-five texts now commonly used in both elementary and secondary schools form the basis for this report, according to which New York City school children—when they are taught anything at all about the Negro people—are subjected to texts marred by untrue statements and outright slanders.

The report's summary states, in surprisingly restrained terms, considering the nature of its findings: "Although no two authors selected or arranged their details in exactly the same way, there is, however, relatively general agreement on the treatment of the Negro in American history textbooks. . . ."

"A few authors do not even mention the Negro after the Reconstruction Period. Characteristics are overwhelmingly those of unfavorable description, and are usually attributed to the group as a whole. Illustrations emphasize field work during slavery. All of the authors do not offer reference on Negro life and history. . . ."

The summary concludes, "To the writers of textbooks in American history, the Negro figures, for the most part, as a passive factor in American development and in their own welfare."

A frequent slander found in the texts by the NAACP report is the old one that Negroes are inferior mentally, "childlike," or "simple."

This same author, according to the report, describes John Brown's famous raid as "the foolhardy scheme of an extremist," and constantly refers to Negroes as "illiterate." Discussing the Reconstruction Period, he says, "Many expected emancipation to place them on a level with their former masters. . . . Former slaveholders naturally resented the freedman's assumption of equality."

SLAVERY AS "UTOPIA"

Eugene A. Colligan and Maxwell F. Littwin, in "The Birth of Our Nation," a history text for Junior High School children, describe the horrors of slavery as a utopia for the Negro slaves: "Although the Negro worked hard, he was generally happy and contented. His simple and childlike nature was easily satisfied. As long as he had clothing, food and shelter, he wanted little else."

Especially vicious are the attacks in nearly all of these books on the Negro people under Reconstruction. Harold U. Faulkner and Tyler Kepner, in a Senior High School text, "America, Its History and Its People," states that the newly-freed Negro slaves had "a swagger born of childish ignorance and the expectancy of a life of ease."

Willis M. and Ruth West, in "The Story of Our Country," used in this city's Junior High Schools, declare darkly that "many" of the freed men "enjoyed freedom in strange and alarming ways," and add, as an excuse for incitements by the Ku Klux Klan, "Southern whites feared disorders from the lawless bands of ex-slaves roaming about their homes."

One of the vilest flights of imagination in all the texts reviewed appears in a book entitled "How the U.S. Became a World Power," by Giles. A passage in this book, meant for the "education" of Negro and white public school children in democratic New York City, describes a session of the South Carolina Legislature under Reconstruction in the following scandalous terms:

"We enter the House where Moses, the Speaker, looks down upon the members, mostly black or brown. . . . Some pompous in glossy, threadbare black frock coats, some in rough, soiled costumes of the field, others in stub jackets and rough woollen comforters worn tight-fitting around the neck to conceal lack of linen. . . . Chuckles, guffaws, the noisy cracking of peanuts and harsh voices disturb the dignity of the scene."

Such chauvinistic propaganda as this is more akin to the rantings of Hitler and Goebbels than to the democratic education which American citizens have a right to demand for their children.

Who Said 'Politics'?

SEP 1 - 1941

The current issue of The Statesman reproduces from The Columbia News, published at Harlen, a story which throws a world of light on the sinister influences behind the movement to bring about racial equality. It supports the contention this newspaper has always made that the Negro question is but one manifestation of this general purpose to destroy the American system of government.

Interwoven with this radical infiltration is the great game of politics as played by the New Deal in half a dozen states where the Negro vote is practically the balance of power.

When men like that glorified ward-heeler, Senator Joe Guffey, of Pennsylvania, read that Governor Talmadge is "playing politics" with the schools and colleges of Georgia he must have laughed so loud you could hear him a mile.

The plain truth of the matter is that Governor Talmadge, in preserving the traditional attitude of the South towards the Negro is rendering invaluable service by frustrating the most colossal system of political chicanery that every corruoted an electoral system.

SEP 1 - 1941

The Columbia News cites chapter and verse for the statement that in the summer of 1936 a great "religious" encampment was held at Blue Ridge, N. C. More than 40 university students were present from Georgia and other Southern states.

The meeting was presided over by a Georgia youth who has gained an unenviable notoriety as a radical leader since that time.

According to our Columbia contemporary, a resolution was introduced to invite Negro boys and girls to attend the conference in the following summer. Colored girls were to share rooms with white girls and Negro boys with white boys.

This Georgia youth warmly advocated the adoption of this resolution.

Quoting another Georgia youth who was present at this convention, The Columbia News says: "Nothing came of the movement, because it was found to be in conflict with the laws of North Carolina, but the flower of the white youth of the South," as represented in that convention "were willing."

SEP 1 - 1941

This Georgia boy was so indoctrinated with radical teachings that he later became president of the National Youth Congress, which has been exposed beyond question as one of the most active "fellow travelers' of the Communist party in the United States.

It was this youth who was removed from the visitors' gallery of the United States senate for creating "a vocal disturbance" in opposition to the lend-lease bill.

A Negro girl from Atlanta was induced to make application for admission to the University of Georgia, according to the Columbia News. But finally "the radicals decided to make a test case in Missouri—where the Negro vote is a tremendous factor—and certain Negroes applied for admission to the school of journalism and the law school of the university of that state.

SEP 1 - 1941

The show-down finally came on the Negro's demand for admission to the law school and in due course came a decision from the Supreme Court of the United States upholding the Negro's right. The court held, in substance, that where a law course was set up as part of the university system equal facilities must be provided for Negroes. Thus the university was confronted with the alternative of mingling the races in the law school classes or building a separate school for Negroes alone.

These same radical influences have been behind the challenge to election laws in Texas, Louisiana and other states.

The simple facts recited by The Columbia News expose to the source of much of this movement, a combination of radicalism and ward politics, in which the welfare of the Negro is the last thing under consideration.

Rights And Minorities

People speak of the rights of minorities as if all minorities are alike and, what is still more important, as if all rights are alike. We have, for example, a very well-known American minority which rejects the whole art and science of medicine. Its members believe in healing through faith. They are minoritarians who indulge in no subversive activities, draw no pay from a foreign government, never dream of plotting the overthrow of the American government.

But how far do their rights run against the community? To promulgate their doctrines of healing by word of mouth and in print? Yes. To put their principles of healing into practice? With limitations. From time to time the law steps in to deal with parents who have allowed a child to die for lack of medical attendance. It would certainly be very odd to see a member of this particular faith at the head of the Department of Health or hold any important office in the municipal health service.

* * * *

The point is elementary, but it is all the time being overlooked. There is a gradation of rights. Our aliens are a very large minority. Their rights include protection in the elementary rights of life, liberty and property, but they have no right to vote. There are citizens, mostly women, who have the right to vote but have not the right, in certain cases, to hold office. There are citizens enjoying the right to hold office but not until after a certain age.

AUG 8 1941

There is a small American minority called the Communist party. Its sole doctrine and concern is the promotion of the interests of Soviet Russia. Of this there cannot be the slightest shadow of a doubt in the mind of any straight-thinking person, after the tragi-comic somersaults of Communist and near-Communist organizations during the last two years in an effort to keep up with the Communist party line in Russia.

Even so, our Communists who are citizens have the right to vote and run for office, for only in a few places has the Communist party been outlawed. For the most part the American people have been chary about pronouncing technical sentences of outlawry against political minorities. Does that mean that a Communist has the "right" to be appointed to office? Public opinion has been speaking out very definitely for the negative.—"Topics", in The New York Times.

Tide of Fortune for Negroes

By NAT Q. HENDERSON

When our great President made an appeal to all America on behalf of the nations of Europe being crushed under the iron heels of dictators he had no ears more responsive than those of negroes.

AUG 10 1941

Their conduct in all the wars in which this country was engaged, while they were even yet slaves, fully warrants this statement.

They feel the urge as all true Americans to do and dare much for the oppressed of other lands.

Houston Post

They stand ready and willing without any reservation whatever to bear arms and give their humble lives in any of the four corners of earth to uphold the honor of their native land.

Houston Tex.

Some one has said there is a tide in the affairs of men if taken at flood leads on to success.

Who knows but that a flood tide for negroes of these United States may be bound up in the world's present crisis if they will follow the footsteps of their forefathers.

Their forefathers' conduct during the Civil war won the admiration of the world. Brought to them friends where and when they needed friends most.

AUG 10 1941

This friendship is largely responsible for the progress in education and home ownership made by the race in the short span of 76 years. A record without any parallel in the history of mankind.

The writer would not seek to minimize the obstacles in the negroes' path.

The spirit that pervaded the Colored National Baptist Congress of Young People that met in this city in June this year gave evidence that this great church organization realized that the race had an opportuntiy to strengthen its cause in the public heart by endorsing every act of our President.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which also met in this city last June was equally as enthusiastic in its endorsement of President Roosevelt's entire course in this world crisis and counselled that much good was in store for the race through its patriotism shown in every portion of our country.

Every man, woman and child of these United States faces a direct personal challenge to do with their might their bit to lift the stifling gloom of dictators from off the face of the earth.

Would Overthrow The White Race

AUG 10 1941

SAN DIEGO, Cal. — Because he advocated the uniting of the Negroes and Japanese to help overthrow the white race, John K. Larremore, an Indian-Negro, has been convicted and now faces a sentence of ten years in prison. Larremore, who claims to be Doctor of Metaphysics, was arrested June 30 after two United States sailors reported that they heard him discussing plans to overthrow the white race. Sentence was withheld by the United States District Judge following the conviction by the jury.

THE STAGE IS SET

A famous military authority once remarked that "War is the extension of diplomacy," while another soldier declared that "Peace is only the interval between wars."

The United States is not yet formally at war but its diplomacy is undoubtedly leading to it, and we may as well be prepared for it.

AUG 2 1941

The aiding of one side and the hampering of the other, the "freezing" of funds of all Axis and Axis-dominated or invaded countries, the suspension of all foreign trade except with British territories and Latin America, the banishment of Axis consuls, the occupation of Iceland, the aggressive action toward Japan and the talk of occupying African bases with or without permission—all these actions have definitely set the stage for war.

It will not, can not, be long before actual shooting starts.

While the Senate Military Affairs Committee has put its foot down on the sending of draftees and National Guardsmen outside the Western Hemisphere, this may actually prove meaningless so far as its implied purpose is concerned, if and when hostilities begin.

The immediate effect of these steps into war should be an improvement in the status of Negroes in the United States, because this country, faced with the toughest conflict in its history, is not going to quibble too much about color lines at a time like this.

Negroes will be integrated into industry and the various armed services and this process will be accelerated with the intensification of the world struggle.

Efforts will of course be made by reactionary elements to maintain the old social strata and economic discrimination, but Negroes can get what they want if they continue to fight against the color bar.

Recent history has proved beyond doubt that divided nations cannot survive; that victory in total war demands unity in total effort.

There can, of course, be no effective unity unless barriers are razed and the spirit of equality is unhampered.

AUG 9 1941

Karl Marx wrote that "Force is the midwife of progress," and while we who have been traditional victims of force may view war with apprehension, there is likelihood that we shall come out of this war with definitely important social and economic gains, as we have from each previous one.

Psychologists' Findings on Racial Differences Revealed

By the Rev. John Evans.

The question of racial differences or the inferiority of Negroes to others has at last been made the subject of careful psychological research. Findings thus far announced show that the differences existing are limited to the matter of opportunity and background.

AUG 10 1941

Herman G. Canady, professor of psychology at West Virginia State college, and chairman of the department of psychology of the American Teachers' association, in a recent paper declares that where studies have been made in various localities, Negro youth performance shows no inferiority to that of white youth. Moreover, Prof. Canady points to findings of army testers who discovered that Negro recruits from the north were superior, not only to Negroes from the south, but in some cases, actually superior as a group to white soldiers from the southern states.

The problem of psychological differences between the races has always been one of keen interest to the psychologist. Outworn and forgotten racial theories are being revived in an attempt to rationalize political, economic, and social actions and policies. Several industries, aircraft plants in particular, have refused to employ Negroes either because "they are not as intelligent as white workers," or they "lack mechanical aptitude," or both.

Contrary to popular opinion, tests measure, not native capacity, but ability as developed by environment and education. A low score does not indicate defective stock or irremovable racial handicaps, but chiefly lack of opportunity and training. Hence the folly of the present talk about Negroes lacking mechanical aptitude or being innately inferior to white people. This is pernicious propaganda and represents the sort of campaign Hitler carried on against the Jews in Germany to get their jobs and wealth for his followers.

At the 1938 meeting of the American Anthropological association a resolution was unanimously adopted in part as follows: "Anthropology provides no scientific basis for discrimination against any people on the ground of racial inferiority, religious affiliation, or linguistic heritage."

The position of American anthropology and white specialists in racial psychology is thus clearly stated. It is that psychologists have not ascertained whether differences in mental or mechanical ability exist among the races or man. More specifically, the position would be that it is at present wholly unknown whether there are differences in intelligence or mechanical aptitude as related to race. However, slavery, segregation, discrimination and three centuries of anti-Negro propaganda thru every avenue of information has set Negroes apart from their white compatriots and given them certain psychological and sociological problems and group characteristics not possessed by the surrounding white people.

Thus, the only conclusion that can be drawn at this time from the mass of available data is that there is no adequate scientific proof of fundamental Negro-white differences in intelligence or mechanical aptitudes and that those differences which are found are due to lack of opportunity, training, and other environmental factors.

By M. ASHBY JONES.

THE STORY OF A PREJUDICE.

Hebrew history was haunted by the prophetic promise of the coming of a divinely sent leader who would restore the glory of Israel's past and fulfill her dreams for the future. He was called the Messiah. In the light of this hope is revealed two of the most charming figures in the national story. They were two brothers who were familiar with the sentiments, traditions and prophesies of their people. They had studied together and dreamed and prayed together for the coming of this national hero who was to restore the glory of their nation.

How they must have searched the face of every teacher who challenged the attention of people and listened with tense expectation to the voice of every Rabbi, for the fulfillment of their hopes. Then one day Nathaniel was stretched beneath the shade of a fig tree dreaming of the Coming One, when Phillip startles him with the exultant shout: "We have found Him—the One told of by Moses and the Prophets." With what alacrity Nathaniel leaps to his feet with the question, "Who?" Then comes the bitter disappointment in the reply: "Jesus of Nazareth." The light goes out of his face and the joy out of his voice, as in bitter disappointment, he utters the name in contempt: Nazareth. "Can any good come out of Nazareth?"

They had so often discussed the coming of the Messiah, the place and circumstances of his birth, and determined beyond any question that he could not come from such a place as Nazareth. Nazareth was prejudged as a place which could not produce a Messiah. It is necessary that we should rear standards by which we are to test truths and judge persons, otherwise we could never move forward. But when these standards are inflexible and our judgments are irreversible—when the mind is closed to new evidence—it is a prejudice which imprisons the mind.

A Good Juryman.

An overwhelming portion of the injustices of life are caused by prejudices. When a man is examined for the jury he is asked, can you give the accused a fair trail? Have you made up your mind before hearing the evidence? How necessary for each one of us when a person or an idea is presented before the bar of our judgment, that we ask the same question—can you give a fair trial? Is your mind closed? Often it is true that you may have fairly condemned some people who belong to a certain group—a race, a religion, a political party—but you make the false generalization that all of that group are to be condemned. Or equally unjust is the judgment, that because the group itself is to be condemned therefore each member is to be condemned without a hearing.

This attitude gives the conscienceless demagogue the power to use us to the hurt of others and ourselves. Knowing popular prejudices he does not have to prove specific charges against his opponent, but in order to damn him in public opinion, he needs only raise the suspicion that he belongs to a certain party, nationality, or race. He often succeeds in closing the minds of his public to all reasonable evidence by the insinuation of a name or a phrase. We in the south are particularly susceptible to this method of attack. We have built a wall of sectional consciousness around us in defense against alien and foreign ideas and customs. It is not necessary for a demagogue to prove that someone is guilty of trying to destroy some of our sacred standards in order to have him condemned, but he needs only to taint him with some prejudicial phrase, or smear him with association with some suspected alien group.

The Closed Mind.

After all, the deepest danger of a prejudice is not the injustice we do others, but the hurt we do ourselves. I repeat, the essence of a prejudice is not to be found in the fact that one has formed a judgment, but that it is fixed and final—the mind is closed. A closed mind is a prison. The mind is closed against certain races, creeds, schools, and places, so that nothing which is beautiful, good, or true, which comes from these sources can ever enter. Thus one limits the range of his mind and the reach of his soul so that he is, indeed, a prisoner within the circled walls of his prejudices.

This was so terribly true of the little town of Nazareth. All of Palestine rang with the fame of the words of Jesus, but when He came back to His native village, they said: "Is not this the carpenter's son? Whence hath he any wonderful works?" And in this atmosphere of skeptical prejudice, the spirit of this young Nazarene was paralyzed, and the record says: "He could do no wonderful works in their midst." And just here is the deadly danger which threatens our beloved state. If we build a wall of prejudice around Georgia, shutting out the light which may come from the four quarters of the world, we will create an atmosphere in which to rear our children, which will paralyze their spirits. "They can do no wonderful works in Nazareth."

THE "BACK TO AFRICA" MOVEMENT

THE BIG STORY of the week is an announcement that a group of New York Negroes is sponsoring a public meeting in Harlem to present Senator Theodore Bilbo of Mississippi, who will discuss his bill, now before Congress, for the return of American born Negroes to Africa. It's news to us because we never believed that any group of Negroes, knowing the attitude of Senator Bilbo on the race question, would listen or want to hear anything he has to say.

The Senator from Mississippi does not represent the Negroes of his own state, and does not attempt to hide the fact that he is opposed to Negroes exercising the right of franchise and other citizenship rights guaranteed them under the constitution. He considers the Emancipation Proclamation the biggest mistake any President ever made and would solve the race problem by deporting all Negroes to Africa. It therefore follows that Senator Bilbo is against the recent executive order of the President, barring discrimination because of race in defense industries. He favors the poll tax and "grandfather" clause and similar undemocratic laws.

We don't think the Senator's bill has much chance of passage and hope that the proposed meeting here will be so poorly attended that he will not be able to make political capital of it by pointing out that a large percentage of Negroes are in favor of the movement as evidenced by the attendance at this and other meetings he is planning in other Negro communities throughout the country.

Approval of the "back to Africa" movement is an admission that this is a "white man's country," and a surrender of the constitutional rights guaranteed us by the constitution. Many races contributed to the building of America and if over 300 years of residence and toil mean anything, it means that this is our home and we are entitled to share all the benefits enjoyed by other racial groups.

Senator Bilbo quotse extensively from the writings of Thomas Jefferson and other American statesmen to bear out his theory that the best solution of the race problem is the resettlement of American Negroes in Africa. He also boasted in a speech, delivered before Congress on April 24, 1939 that he had the signatures of 2,500,000 Negroes who had expressed a wish to leave this country. But the Senator gives a hint of why these Negroes signed the petition when included in the bill the provision that:

"The federal government appropriate a billion dollars to begin with to resettle these people in their native land. That is a very small consideration when we think that what the Negro race has contributed to this nation from the time the Negroes were in slavery even up to the present time, and it is small consideration when we consider what the Congress is year after year appropriating to carry several million of our American citizens on the relief rolls."

There are many shiftless Negroes who will sign most anything if they see in it an opportunity of getting some money, and the picture of a billion dollars to be distributed among the Negroes who voluntary return to their fatherland was evidently the bait that helped in securing the signatures.

Regarding the position taken by Thomas Jefferson and Daniel Webster, who held that two races, equally free, cannot live in the same government, has been proved false in the years that have elapsed since the statement was made. The French Canadians are still essentially French even though they have lived under English rule for more than a hundred years; Hebrews live a separate life and cling to their racial characteristics in the midst of other civilizations, and although the Negroes have more than redoubled their numbers since the Civil War there are proportionately less mixing of the races today than in the era just prior to that war.

The assumption that America is a "white man's" country is the error in the reasoning of the early American statesmen, as it is in Senator Bilbo's. The so-called Nordic races have no more claim to this country than have the Negroes; the Spanish or the Portugese.

Race Purity

Editor The Telegraph:

I am tired, and thousands of our people are tired, of listening to controversies and reading articles in newspapers about the race problem, which can be solved so very, very easily, if the leaders of both races will get together and talk common sense, instead of letting politics and politicians ruin everything that may be put before them that may help to solve this great problem.

I am going to offer a plan that will absolutely solve this race problem, based on another race which has shown to the world that what I am about to say here has already been done, and the colored race can do the very same thing and will do it if they only will quit listening to misleading politicians and do something for themselves, led by their own common-sense leaders.

I base the solving of this great problem on a race of people for whom I have the most profound regard. The most outstanding of these is the will to preserve their race. The Jews have preserved their race on down through the ages for more than 6,000 years. They still are Jews. The Almighty Creator intended that they should preserve their race and they have done so.

The Negro race can do that very same thing, preserve the colored race, as the Almighty Creator intended they should be colored or else they would not have been created black.

In this great nation of ours, where people are priviliged to live in towns and cities and are allowed to make their own laws and have their own schools and churches, this all could be done by the colored race. All the great funds which are donated for their welfare could be used to help them to get started on their way to preserve their race as the Jews have preserved their race down through the ages. I have lighted a torch, and I pass it on to Moses Lightfoot [colored] hoping he may grasp it firmly and carry it onward and be a second Booker T. Washington to his people.

Negro History

Editor The Telegraph:

I wish to comment on the reply to my letter of August 20, by Mr. T. M. Jones of Finleyson, Georgia.

In my letter I criticized Governof Talmadge for his recent actions regarding Negro education in Georgia.

Mr. Jones was quite frank in expressing his opinion of the Negro, saying that the Negro's duty here is not to pursue a college education, but rather to serve as a stooge for the white man and "obey orders from some white man."

It is not my intention to change Mr. Jones' attitude toward the Negro or any other race of people, for it would be useless. I merely want to outline briefly a possible cause for such an attitude.

Lack of understanding of the Negro is a major factor which leads the white man to thinking that the Negro is an insignificant creature. And he doesn't hesitate to treat him so.

This misunderstanding may be attributed to mis-education. If more white people would study Negro history and note his contribution to this civilization there would be no doubt in their minds as to the possibilities of this minority group. They would no longer look upon it as being inferior. If white children were not deprived of this information through one-sided prejudiced text books they would grow up with a different attitude toward their black playmates. There would be little, if any, race clashes and riots.

If white parents would cease to instill into the minds of their children such superstitutions as were handed down to them by their slave-holding ancestors, unfavorable relationship between the two races would be far removed, and the barbaric practice of lynching would be abolished.

Indeed, the Negro possesses a history which is worthy of recognition by all other races. He has been, and still is, an asset to this country whether the white man realizes it or not. He has evidently done something else more important than grin in the white man's face and reply "yes sur, boss."

I would suggest that Mr. Jones become more broadminded in respect to human races by making a careful and extensive study of them before issuing such weak statements without foundation, or before forming a definite conclusion and putting them in a special "class."

White Man's Burden

Editor The Telegraph:

Through the centuries of history the Negro has been subservient. God or nature created him with instincts, laxities and idiosyncracies that have distinguished him from all men of the earth since his beginning. The founders of the American government did not consider him the equal of the white man, as a hundred subsequent years of his slavery proves; and the Civil war emancipation, the years of his freedom and education and all the laws of the land have not made him equal.

But the years of his freedom and education have made of the Negro the greatest burden ever put on the white man's back in any land . . . filling chain gangs by as high as 10 to one of the whites, and tainting something like 50 per cent of the Negroes with syphilis and a high rate of consumption; scattering these diseases even among the whites.

And, but for the Negro, the South could all but abolish criminal courts, close up eight out of every 10 penal institution, turn three-fourths of its jails into recreation centers, skeletonize its police forces and reduce taxation to a shadow of the all-time and increasing high. But for the Negro, murder in the nation would not have increased 15 per cent during the first three months of this year. By the records, 75 years of freedom and education with increasing earnings have not made the Negro healthier, or a better and more lawabiding citizen. Today the most lawabiding Negroes will be found in rural communities with less school facilities, where the Negro works from sun to sun for a living.

One wonder what would happen in the great state of California, where 200,000 Japanese have created such disturbance that California would bar the Japs from owning real estate, if three or four million Negroes moved into the state? The Jap is a better worker and more law-abiding than the Negro; there are less racial differences. Yet, California has loathed the Jap for years. And one wonders if the prudish heart of New England would warm up to the intolerant and narrow-minded white South, if New England's population was doubled by the influx of Negroes?

The Negro, as a Negro, has the helping hand of the white South, but as an equal, his way can lead only to strife. The Negroes of the South have earned more and lived better than the menials of any other nation; have been better off than 60 per cent of the world's people. Those thoughtless souls who sponsor equality, are the creators of racial prejudices, discord and hardships for the Negro.

Yankees to Blame

Editor The Telegraph:

I have a few words to say and a few questions to ask concerning the Negro question.

Why in the name of common sense does any white person want to degrade himself by putting himself down with the black race? Surely God knew His business when He put each nationality in a separate country, unmixed, and placed the Negro in Africa. But unfortunately a low-class of Yankees brought and sold the Negro to the South like so many animals and then in later years because the South was prospering the North declared war on the South in order to turn the enslaved Negroes into free people. I say the Yankees are to blame more than the Negro race for bringing them here in the first place.

God said He made male and female of every living thing and saw that it was good; and everything after its kind. Now those people that are teaching and are upholding mixed races ought to be sent back to Africa where they could enjoy a good Negro companion.

In regard to Emily Hearn of Dublin and Mrs. Williams of Abbeville, if they think Negroes are equal to them, they ought to know but we pure Anglo-Saxon people of blood and principle know that to be untrue.

The love of money put the Negro here and for the love of money they are trying to drag down the white supremacy in the South. But as long as we have a governor with the sense and the backbone to go ahead with what is right we are not uneasy about what Cocking, Pittman and McCain can do . . . or the Atlanta Slop-Bucket . . . that is the name the late Thomas E. Watson gave the Atlanta Constitution. You can always take the reverse of what that paper says and you will always be right.

I have believed for the past 40 years it is against all the democratic principles of our country . . ye know the tree by the fruit it bears.

I reckon those white skinned women who love the Negro so well might be able to get themselves a colored companion.

Oh, if we had a man in the White House with the principles and knowledge that we have in the governor's chair in Georgia what a change would be in 30 days. There would be ten million or more saved a day.

Well, we are not going to have mixed schools in the South. There are plenty of people who do not write to the paper that are solidly against it. No Brown America in Georgia. Yours for a better democracy than we have now.

Books In Georgia

Thé most valuable source book in evistence about the South is "Southern Regions of the United States," by Howard W. Odum. It is not a book which could expect wide reading. A large part of it is composed of tables and charts, lists and maps. Some have found it dull reading, but every respectable student of Southern problems has found it indispensable.

It has been banned in Talmadge's Georgia.

There it has been put on a list of 23 books which have been proscribed in Georgia grade and high schools by the State School Board, which is composed of the Governor's puppets, on the grounds that these books are "subversive or opposed to Southern views on the Negro question and evolution."

The comparison with Nazi Germany's book burnings is obvious. Much closer to home, however, is the long adverse effect on the South of the suppression of books which seemed to the old South to teach improper views about slavery. When free speech was suppressed in behalf of that old economic interest in slaves the South began a period of intellectual stagnation which probably did the South as much harm as slavery itself. In books the South has not advanced far enough out of that old stagnation yet to risk such a resumption of it as Talmadge is trying to start in Georgia.

Movie Probers Squabble Over Racial Issue

No Confirmation Found For Tobey's Charge Against British

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Amid a confusion of shouted charges and counter-charges witnesses told the Senate movie investigating committee today that persons of German, Jewish or South Irish ancestry were not wanted as employes at the British purchasing agency here.

Senator McFarland (D), Arizona, promptly denounced their testimony as "hearsay," deplored the injection of a "racial prejudice" issue into the hearings and said it was done to "insinuate against one of our great fellow countries. SEP 27 1941

Early in the day, McFarland read into the committee record letters from R. E. Campbell, acting British ambassador, denying Tobey's statements made yesterday by Tobey that the purchasing agency bars Jews, South Irish and Germans from its employment.

The principal witness was Charlotte Pairo Oehmann of the Boyd Secretarial School, which, she said, had sent the agency many employes. It was "true," she testified, that the school did not even send to the agency any young people of those extractions and that "such a policy" had been adopted at the "request of some one" in the purchasing office.

She made this statement in response to a question put by Senator Tobey (R), New Hampshire, but when McFarland cross-examined her, she testified that no one at the purchasing agency had told her directly that such was the case. SEP 27 1941

Nevertheless, she insisted that the agency wanted information as to whether prospective employes were of those ancestries.

The witness, known professionally, she said, as "Miss Black," and attired in black, was preceded by an employe of the school, Mrs. Penny Todd Adams, who said that in supplying the purchasing agency with 15 messengers recently, she had been told to inquire whether the applicants were of German, Jewish or South Irish ancestry.

When McFarland persisted in denouncing what he called the injection of racial issues into the hearing, Tobey, who had brought the matter up, pointed at Wendel L. Willkie, counsel for the motion picture industry, and said that he had injected the racial issue on the opening day of the hearing. SEP 27 1941

Willkie promptly interrupted the proceedings to roar:

"Senator Tobey, that's amusing. I'll suggest that I lend you Darryl Zanuck to put on a real comedy."

Zanuck had been on the stand earlier in the day in the subcommittee's hearings to determine whether there should be an investigation of charges that the motion picture industry has been turning out propaganda movies designed to lead this country into the war.

In addition to Miss Oehmann and Mrs. Adams, one of Senator Tobey's secretaries, Robert T. Heureaux, testified that he had brought the matter to the senator's attention originally. He is a neighbor of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, he said, and got the story originally from them.

Nye Denies Prejudice As to Races

SEP 27 1941

NEW YORK, [AP] — Senator Gerald P. Nye [R-ND], Monday night accused Wendell L. Willkie and interventionists of "dragging into this war controversy that cheap, wholly unAmerican issue called Anti-Semitism."

Speaking before an American First Committee rally in Brooklyn, guarded by 423 policemen, the isolationist senator said that "this attempt to paint the cause of non-intervention as an anti-Semitic cause has been about the meanest, smallest, rat-like thing that I have ever experienced in my contact with American politics."

"No one has contributed to the dragging of this red-herring into this controversy so largely as has one Wendell Willkie—the "me too" man of the 1940 presidential campaign—the man who helped arrange things so that there could be no chance in that presidential campaign for the American people to voice themselves clearly and openly in this issue of intervention," Nye said. "Mr. Willkie has done his utmost to smear the cause of non-intervention with this anti-Semitic stick.

HITS PREJUDICE

"Racial prejudice has brought to Europe consequences we cannot escape seeing. If we are going to adopt racial prejudice in our American thinking and planning we only contribute to the bringing of that experience, which has befallen others, to our own country.

"The interventionists are doing the gravest kind of injustice to their country and especially to those of the Jewish faith when they persist in dragging this red-herring into the controversy. First, with a view to blinding people to the real issues and challenges confronting us today and second, with a view to dividing and breaking up the non-intervention front."

Nye said he knew by reason of close and intimate contact that "there is not a shred of anti-Semitic spirit in the mind and heart of Charles A. Lindbergh or of Senator Burton K. Wheeler.

"In the meanwhile let no non-interventionist, let no America firster be misled or deceived by the Wendell Willkies into believing that they are associated with anything so completely unAmerican as is anti-Semitism."

Debt to the Negro

Editor The Telegraph:

The Bible speaks of having the poor with us always. We the Afro-American Negroes feel poor in spirit sometimes because we are talked about by other nations. While they talk we bend our knees to God. If we didn't do this we would be as a lost gobbler in a wide open field.

Some hands have done us an injustice during our stay in America, but these same hands have driven us to Jesus. Negroes have cleared your wooded forest, dug gold from your rich mines, cultivated your plantations, and helped to make the South the greatest cotton market in the world. SEP 26 1941

If President Monroe could arise on the scene, he would tell you the boots that were worn by him on his inauguration were made by a Negro bootmaker. A Negro mechanic laid the tiling in the home of Thomas Jefferson. President George Washington appointed Benjamin Benneker, a Negro astronomer, to help plan the city of Washington, D. C. A Negro named Matzelinger invented a machine on which boots and shoes could be shaped. George Washington Carver, scientist, made the sweet potato and peanut crop valuable by producing 300 products from the peanut, 185 from the potato. Some of these products are axil greese, flour, candy, face powder, ink and road building material. Negro labor has helped to build America. SEP 26 1941

The Negro has taught you to laugh at a hard life in this unfriendly world. The Negro works and sings in the rain like the birds who take every day for Sunday, leaning on God. The Negro laughs at trouble and lives one day at a time, thanks God for that day and says he may not need any thing for tomorrow, hence he is happy. Claude McKay, Countee Cullen, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Phyllis Wheatly, and Langston Hughes, all Negroes, have made a large contribution in the gift of literature. All through the years of toil and struggle the Negroes have clung to the gift of fun-making in order to live more peacefully with another nation in America. By the Negro's example America is richer for this gift.

With all that has been said about the Negro in former years, right now you are eating ham, eggs, hot buck wheat cakes, syrup, toast, biscuits, waffles, chicken, hot rolls, barbecue, stake, lemon pies, and food of all descriptions prepared by Negro hands. Your children are being nursed, your clothes being laundered by Negro hands.

Negroes have shed rich blood, running through their black bodies to make America safe for something white. Negroes promise to show this spirit of loyalty at any time to make America safe. The half has never been told about the many good characteristics of the Negro. If he has accomplished so much good, away from Africa, his native home uneducated and got other nations wearing shoes, what do you suppose he will do if you help to educate him during his stay in your country?

The Negro did all this inventing feeling one-half his time, like a motherless child. If he did that with a depressed feeling, imagine the good he can do if you loose him and let him go to higher heights in the educational realm. Not among colleges for white people but just fix up Georgia Baptist College in East Macon and put it in Grade A for your Macon Negroes especially, and it will come back bread cast on the water, but not the same bread. It will come back a chicken sandwich. There is so much good in the worst of us until the Negro deserves being put on trial for more inventions.

Will you help him by making every knock a boost? The Negro declares he is on his way to God's heaven. I know every body talking about heaven is not going there, but the Negro's bended knee to God I believe he is going. So how will nations manage flying with wings touching against a Negro's wing and long white robe?

We may as well live in union because the same dirt that covers up a Negro is used to cover every nation.

Watchman, tell us of the night. It is too far spent already, living in glass houses and still throwing stones. The Negro is a valuable asset, from the governor's mansion in Atlanta to Jordan river, thank our governor for our public school books.

Negro's Rights

Editor The Telegraph:

Sometimes I wonder what the President means when he says, "we're all Americans . . . education for all," et cetera. Does he mean white people only or colored and white? I was just thinking of T. M. Jones, who is so down on the Negro race, and who wants to dish out so many orders. I am under the impression that this is a free country and that one is not obligated to take orders from any one, except a superior officer in the service, regardless of color.

The idea of not wanting the Negroes to attend college is simply absurd.

If we are all Americans and are to live, fight and die as Americans then why shouldn't all enjoy the same American creed which was established upon these principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity . . . principles which white as well as colored people fought to preserve.

And why is it that other races come to America and enjoy those rights and the Negro, who has labored since he was brought to America, is denied them? The white race should desire rather that the Negro race should be educated, intelligent and ambitious because it certainly is to the advantage of the country as a whole. How can it be possible for a human being to attain his full stature of greatness when he attempts to hold another race in subjection?

Boss Crump Kills Tennessee Franchise Bill

JA

JAN 20 1941

Southern Organizations Push Drive Despite Senate Action

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 19.—Defying the corrupt Boss Crump political machine which yesterday killed a bill in the State Senate to abolish the poll tax, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare today speeded a statewide campaign to restore free suffrage in Tennessee.

In the face of demands for repeal of the poll tax from the Tennessee CIO, the AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods, the League of Women Voters and numerous other organizations, the Crump-controlled legislature effected a coup by refusing to allow public hearings on the repeal bill. Less than an hour was allowed for discussion of the bill, which was supported by every leading newspaper in the state.

As the legislators voted on the poll tax repeal measure, strawbosses of the Crump machine circulated about the room giving instructions to those members who appeared shaky. The vote was 21 to 11 against the bill.

Speaking in support of his poll tax repeal Senator White declared: "The senate is supposed to represent the people of Tennessee— fairly, honestly and loyally. And it has been estimated that between 80 and 95 per cent of the people in this state want the poll tax repealed. So why dont we do it? Then we would have a real majority rule and not a minority one as at the present time."

JAN 20 1941

MOCKING DEMOCRACY

"We're just kidding ourselves," he continued, "if we think we have a true democracy when we put a tax on voting. And if we continue to trample the people like this we will cause them to be blinded to democracy and the decent thing in life."

"Heaven help you," he concluded, "when you get back home and run for office again after breaking a campaign promise on such a vital issue."

Speaking against the repeal bill a member of the Crump bloc declared, "if a fellow isn't good enough to pay $2 regardless of who he is, than he should not be allowed that great American privilege of voting."

Immediately after the Senate vote killing the poll tax repeal bill, representatives of more than thirty civic and labor organizations met to map out plans to defeat at the polls every legislator who voted against restoring the suffrage to the people.

Guest speaker at the meeting, Jennings Perry, editorial writer of the Nashville Tennessean, declared that it was now clear that we must go out into the counties and precincts and organize the people to pay the poll tax one more time in order to elect men to office who would kill the iniquitous tax. "If this doesn't work," he concluded, "a second American revolution will be necessary to bring us freedom."

Opening gun in the Southern Conference fight to repeal the poll tax and to protect civil liberties in Tennessee was a letter sent to clergymen throughout the State calling on them to preach on "The Poll Tax as a Moral Issue." Labor, civic and women's organizations are being asked to enlist in the campaign.

Memphis Reign of Terror May Be Investigated

JAN 4 1941

NEW YORK CITY—United States Attorney General Robert Jackson was asked by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to bring the forces of the Justice Department to bear in an investigation of the open terror being meted out to Negroes in Memphis, Tennessee, by politicians and the local police force of Memphis.

The complete text of a telegram signed by Walter White and sent to Jackson recently by the association follows:

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People protests vigorously against abrogation of fredom of press by Chief of Police of Memphis, Tennessee, who has called in two Negro editors and threatened them if they did not print the kind of news matter and editorials to which he could give his approval regarding general racial situations in the United States. According to widely circulated news stories Negro business men in Memphis are being harassed by police and a score of more prominent Memphis Negro citizens have been threatened with being driven out of town. A threat of machine gun warfare is said to have been made by police Chief Boyle. It is alleged that this entire situation has grown out of the fact that some Memphis Negro citizens in the last election chose to support the candidate not favored by the political boss, Ed Crump. We believe the situation is grave and calls for immediate investigation and vigorous action by the Department of Justice in all its phases particularly the threat against the freedom of the press."

Reveal These Trouble Makers

Someone, with motives not hard to guess, circulated a report among Memphis negroes that police had banned certain types of clothing. The report spread until it was actually affecting the business of merchants who complained to Mayor Chandler. The Police Department, in turn, was placed in a position of either dignifying a ridiculous report by denying it, or ignoring it and coincidentally taking a chance on the spreading of further agitation. That is what it is—agitation. If it had represented a single, isolated incident, it might have been ignored, but it didn't. Its immediate predecessor was a widespread report that negroes would not be permitted to witness the Spirit of Christmas parade —that the parade was not for them and they were not wanted.

Intelligent negro leaders know better, of course. Unfortunately, all do not take the trouble to think through reports of that type and before they can be checked the damage has been done. We have this suggestion to make—that in the future wher reports of similar nature are heard that thinking negroes report them immediately to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the Sterick Building, or to Police Headquarters. Both bureaus are open 24 hours a day for just such purposes. The earlier such reports are made the easier it will be to trace them to their subversive source.

To Be No "Bleached South"

A gentleman recently returned to Charleston after many years absence has remarked that the negroes seem to be blacker than they used to be. He was particularly struck by seeing very few mulatto children along the country roads.

If his observations are warranted by the facts, it may point to an unexpected solution of a question of tremendous importance to the South and to the whole United States.

History shows that in every country, such as Egypt, where there has been an infiltration of negro blood, the people have deteriorated in strength, and have eventually lost their place among the nations of the Earth. It has been feared by many that this country in the long run would absorb all the negroes and in the course of the centuries would become peopled by a mongrel race like some of our Latin Americans.

If so-called "race prejudice", both on the part of the negroes and on the part of the Southern whites, is going to result in the absorption by the darker people of the mulattoes in this part of the country, it may be that in the course of years we shall have two pure races, one black and one white, living side by side in harmony and mutual understanding, and that it will be in our sister states of the North, where this prejudice is decried, that the people will be looked upon with suspicion as having had "a touch of the tar brush".

Minority Treatment A Cause For Crisis Says Hampton Prexy

DEC 29 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—President Malcolm S. McLean of Hampton Institute said that if there is a major underlying cause for the present crisis, it is the misunderstanding and mistreatment of our minority groups in the world.

In a statement released October 21, in connection with National "Americans All" Week, the Hampton Institute educator said:

"America must learn with breathless rapidiy to enfold, absorb and make use of, and profit by all her minorities, her foreign-born, her Jews, her Negroes, her people of Mexican, Spanish, Japanese, Chinese, European and other Asiatic descent."

Memphis Citizens Ask For Aid From The President To Maintain American Rights

Howard Lee Writes Letter To Roosevelt For Immediate Action

JAN 4 1941

Race Riot Is Looming

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare today requested "immediate intervention of federal authorities and the Department of Justice to maintain order and elementary American rights in Memphis."

In a letter to President Roosevelt. Howard Lee. Conference Secretary, charged that "a race riot situation is being fanned by the authorities of Memphis . . . in a systematic campaign of intimidation against the Negro citizens because some of them dared to vote for a presidential candidate other than one dictated to them by Ed Crump."

Dear Mr. President:

During the past several weeks a systematic campaign of intimidation against the Negro people of Memphis has been carried on by Ed H. Crump, the political dictator and tyrant of that city. During the presidential campaign, some Negro leaders in Memphis dared to express their elementary American right to vote for a presidential candidate other than one dictated to them by Ed Crump.

(1) In retaliation the police department has, under a guise of a "drive against crime," stationed policemen in front of the business establishment of Dr. J. B. Martin These policemen have searched prospective customers entering this and other establishments and otherwise conducted themselves in such a way as to effectively drive J. B. Martin and other Negro business men out of business.

(2) A score or more of prominent Negro citizens have been identified and threatened with being run out of town by Police Commissioner Joe Boyle. Negro newspaper editors are being harassed and likewise threatened with similar treatment if they do not cease printing news articles and editorials concerning the situation in Memphis.

(3) Negro citizens are being arrested by the scores on the charges of "loitering," etc.

(4) On clearly segregated Jim Crow street cars, Negro citizens are being provoked, apparently to incite some action as a pretext for wholesale violence on the part of the police.

(5) Authorities in Memphis have announced that enough submachine guns are on hand to care for the "situation." This is in keeping with the tradition of shooting Negro citizens in Memphis at the hands of the police.

(6) Leaders of an interracial religious conference have decided to cancel a meeting scheduled for Memphis December 27-31 because of "reliable" evidence that a build-up is being made for a race riot to intimidate the Negro population and to discredit and terrorize the groups doing constructive work, especially the C. I. O.

These conditions do evidence that a race riot situation is being fanned by the authorities of Memphis, including Ed H. Crump. As to what reasons lie behind this series of arrests, threats and intimidations, we are not clear. We do know that Police Commissioner Joe Boyle has stated, as reported in the Memphis Press Scimitar of December 11, 1940: "We have a large Negro population. Many who have come to Memphis from the farms would be better off to return to them, for there isn't enough work for the unskilled labor now in Memphis."

Mr. Crump is apparently fearful that the abolition of the poll tax system in the South will bring a measure of freedom and independence to the citizens of Memphis and make it more difficult for his machine to attempt to herd the voters to the polls to vote for his candidates. He is evidently determined to stamp out any movement for independence in Memphis.

On behalf of the Firestone Rubber Company, E. H. Crump and the city administration of Memphis are inciting race prejudice and intimidation of Negro people in order to violate the federal labor laws and prevent organization in Memphis by the Congress of Industrial Organization.

By these means Ed Crump and the city administration of Memphis which he controls, are seeking to establish an "efficient dictatorship" which could be used as a pattern to undermine democracy in other parts of the United States, especially in the South.

This situation in Memphis calls for the immediate intervention of federal authorities and the Department of Justice to maintain order and elementary American rights in Memphis. We expect that you will use your high authority to intervene in Memphis to maintain order and preserve peace and liberty for the people of Memphis.

Communism and the Negroes

An Associated Press disatch quotes Chairman Martin Dies of the House un-American activities committee as saying that the Communist arty in the South had made very little headway in what he termed efforts to stir up "racial hatred" among the negroes. He charged that paid agents of the Soviet government were spreading Communistic propaganda in the Southern States, especially among the negroes. But, he added:

"It is a tribute to the negroes, that they have withstood for the most part the work of these agents." He declared there was less subversive activity prevailent in the South than any other part of the nation, despite the use of "paid" Communistic agents.

There are two good reasons for the above. The South is the least non-American section of the country, her population being composed largely of either native-born, straight-out Americans or their direct descendants; and the negroes of the South as a rule being better satisfied with their condition and treatment than are the negroes of the North Any Southern negro, who behaves himself, works and attends to his business without meddling in politics, is sure of plenty of work and a living among congenial surroundings.

When the mealy-mouthed politciians from the North talks to negroes about their place in politics, their equal social rights and privileges, it is then that the trouble begins and the negro alienates himself from his best friends, the white people of the South. Communism has no chance among a satisfied people.

'White Only'

Are you native, white, reliable, and intelligent?

If you are, there may be a job for you in the war industries. If you are native, black, reliable, and intelligent there is none. National policy has been established: the great corporations which are receiving billions of dollars in orders for war in "defense of democracy" have adopted Jim Crow as their own.

Proof? Millions of Negro workers are unemployed. Millions are trying to find work in plants now producing aircraft, machine tools, motors, steel, ships—building cantonments, roads, making uniforms.

In Henry R. Luce's weekly magazine Time, issue of November 25, a full page advertisemen. of the United Gas Line Co. invited industrialists to build new plants in the gulf states of Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Alabama, and Florida. Labor, said the ad, was available . . . "native, white, reliable, intelligent." The inference is plain that Negro labor is unreliable and unintelligent. The National Urban League, which acts as an agency for obtaining jobs for Negroes, protested to Time to United Gas Pipe, to the National Association of Manufacturers, and to the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Only the Chamber of Commerce replied. It evasively declared that it could not discuss the policy of a member organization. JAN 25 1941

NATIONAL JIM CROW

Jim Crow polcy is not sectional in scope. Giant industries of the North which are receiving war order largesse from the administration deny jobs to Negroes in East, North, and West as well as South. No war industry jobs are open to Negroes in New York City, according to organizations which are seeking to defend the Negroes' right to work. In New York City the case load of Negroes on relief has risen from 21 percent in 1937 to 25 percent in 1940—depite a drop in the number of white workers on relief. No Negro works in the aircraft, aircraft equipment, ship-building, chemical, munitions, machine tool, motor, steel and iron, and other war industries of the East unless he accepts heavy, unskilled, stevedore jobs. There has been no decrease in Negro unemployment in the Pittsburgh area, although the steel mills are working at 98 percent of capacity. Except where CIO contracts provide against discrimination in motors and aircraft—as at Vultee—very few jobs are open to Negroes in Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle.

RACE ISSUE SCORED IN HAWAII STEVEDORE PLAN

APR 24 1941

General Short Blamed For Raising Question

NEW YORK CITY—(S N S)—A protest against the injection of the race issue into a plan by the War department to send a labor battalion to Honolulu, T.H., was voiced in a letter to Secretary of War Stimson by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP protested against a statement of Lt. General Walter Short which seemed to emphasize and express regret for the proposed plan of the War department to send 600 members of a Negro labor battalion to Honolulu to handle Army and Navy cargo.

The NAACP cited clippings from Honolulu newspapers indicating that civic organizations had taken the cue from Lt. General Short and had filed protests on the basis of race.

Union labor representatives in Honolulu, however, were reported in Honolulu papers as issuing the following statement:

"It should be clear that we resent the explanation of Lt. General Walter Short, commanding the Hawaiian department of the Army, for its implications that our protest is because Negro laborers are the soldiers involved. Our protest has no racial connotation whatsoever; it is against all forced or militarized labd. The general seems to say that he is sorry it is necessary to bring Negro workers. If workers are needed we would welcome Negroes as we would all races, creeds and colors."

Is There A "Negro Problem"

By RUTH TAYLOR

MAY 13 1941

Read the papers carefully today and somewhere, in some connection, you will find the words "Negro problem."

Little incidents are played up. Whenever a Negro commits a crime—his being a Negro is stressed—and so the ball grows. Discrimination, injustice, and a gradual fanning of the flames have kept it growing.

What is back of this raising of the cry—Negro problem? Who is fanning the fires of hatred and blind and senseless race prejudice? Who is it that benefits by the application of the slogan "Divide—and conquer"?

Negroes in America are citizens of the United States—subject to the same Constitution as other citizens, entitled to the same right, and responsible for the same obligations. That is the law of the land—regardless of how selfish and self-interested individuals may interpret it.

The existing status of Negroes is one for both races to change. The totalitarian states have solved it by relegating the Negro to a state of lowest inferiority. They believe in driving him all the way down. Faulty though the application of democratic principles may be unjust and unfair though many of the restrictions and discriminations are, the trend of our democracy is to raise the Negro to the full stature of citizenship. Consider the gains that have been made over the years. Negroes have gained their rights far more rapidly than the women of the nation did theirs.

The larger responsibility for the solution of the problem lies with the majority but what is needed is a common denominator by which both groups can live in the same country and respect the rights of both—honoring the individual as a man.

There are ways in which Negroes may greatly aid in bringing a better day in race relations. Let them strive to sttand out and be counted as individuals. Let them show by every act and word that they are citizens in full cooperation with their government. Let them publicize the good their leaders have done and do—even more than the injustices done them. George Washington Carver has done much for Negro advancement by being the man that he is.

Let every Negro count himself as an American—and live up to that high standard in every way. By the force of his own intitiative and integrity—he can compel the respect and acceptance he desires and the equality as a citizen that is his under the Constitution.

Nazis and Communists Preferred Over Negro On U. S. Troop Ship

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

A few weeks ago, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican leader in the U.S. House of Representatives, and chairman of the Republican National Committee, called upon Republicans in Industry and in Politics to help widen opportunities for the employment of Colored citizens without discrimination and, also, to see that greater opportunities and recognition are provided for them in public service.

Last week, in a discussion of the utterly mad carnival of ghastly mass murder and destruction now going on between nations, he realistically pointed out the menacing dangers and potentialities that may affect this country, especially the youth of the land.

These young people, he said, are entitled to a chance to be educated, to get positions in which there is an opportunity to advance, a chance not only to live but also to be happy while living, to enjoy the advantages and comforts of life, and to contribute their share toward making this a better land to live in.

In calling for complete unity for strong national defense so as to strengthen the security of the American people, he emphasized the fact that this could only come through honest cooperation and fair-dealing on the part of the Roosevelt Administration. Particularly, he spoke out against "giving any one group in our country special consideration over any other group."

MAY 10 1941

The Negro's Complaint

Right here is where the complaint of the Negro people becomes pertinent. The catalogue of injustices to which they have been subjected is a continuing and lengthening one. No one in the Roosevelt Administration, it seems, gives a hoot, or seriously considers their claims to equal justice and fair-play.

During these trying days, when thoughtful men and women of the country are deeply concerned with respect to a sustained, inspired and stirred morale, and full support of all Governmest efforts in defense preparation by all elements of our country's population, it is discouraging, day by day, to note that practically nothing of a definitely affirmative sharacter is being done by the Roosevelt Administration to cure the evils of which Negro newspapers, Negro leaders and Negro organizatioins, and many whites as well, have complained, and are continuing to complain.

As Chairman Martin declared:

"All groups are expected to pay the taxes for defense; all groups are required to send men into the draft; all groups are expected to fight and, if necessary, to die for the country. All groups should have an equal chance for work."

The Army, Nazis and Communists

Let's take the United States Army. It is reported that ,in taking over ships as troop transports, it is now engaged in weeding out men in civilian crews suspected of being Nazis and Communists. Already, it has been learned, there has been a "purge" on one large troop-ship, the SS Washington, recently taken over by the Army from the U. S. Lines. After an investigation of the sailing crew, 70 men were discharged. No one knows how many remain.

In one case, it was found, a Communist employee sent a telegram to Earl Browder, after the latter's conviction, praising him as a great leader of American working classes. The message was sent to Browder, it is stated, "from a Government-owned and operated ship whose crew is being paid with Federal-Government funds."

And, during all this period, Secretary of the Navy Knox is still declaring: "No Negroes will be employed except as mess-men"—as scullions, and waiters and personal servants for officers. And the Army is following suit on these troop-ships.

No traitorous group of black men has ever disgraced the Army uniform, and the same holds for the Navy during the period, years before the Roosevelt Administration, when they could aspire to and efficiently serve with distinction and with high and deserved praise.

MAY 10 1941

Is it too much to ask a country, oriled and striving to preserve the principles of Americansm, to have more consideration for loyal, efficient black men than for the tainted, alien, transmission belts of Naziism, Facism and Communism now incorporated in Army and Navy personnel?

Glaring Discrimination

With such glaring instances of discriminations, as here described, what incentive is there for wholehearted and enthusiastic support of a program shot thorugh with prejudices, suspicions, hatreds—based on color distinction, with out regard to character, efficiency, or loyalty?

These prejudices are not in industry and the Army and Navy only. Colored stenographers and others who have successfully passed Civil Service examinations for technical and higher positions are constantly being turned down and shuttled around and denied positions to which they are certified by Federal bureaucrats practically each week of the year.

Sydney Hillman is issuing weasel- word manifestos, with no teeth in them, while the merry-go-round of dodging and evasion continues to deny opportunities to Colored applicants for employment in defense programs work which the Federal Government is putting up its Billions of Doliars.

Washington, the Capital of the Nation, the Citadel of Power, reeks with this sort of thing. How are we to preserve and perpetuate our form of Government, while denying and defying the precepts and principles of the Federal Constitution, the Bill of Rights, and all that Freedom and Democracy mean and stand for?

Democracy, Half Slave, Half Free, No Match For Totalitarian Forces

MAY 8 - 1941

GOVERNOR JAMES, speaking before the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, pointed out that "up to April first Pennsylvania had been awarded a billion dollars worth of contracts. The United States total is more than thirteen and a half billion dollars."

Then he asks this significant question: "These are vast sums of money. But do they guarantee our security? They do not!"

"Would a hundred billion dollars of defense orders guarantee our security? It would not. NOTHING WILL GUARANTEE OUR SECURITY BUT THE ACTUAL PHYSICAL MEANS OF DEFENSE IN THE HANDS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY OF THE UNITED STATES."

Governor James is absolutely correct as far as he goes. But how are the actual physical means of defense to get in the hands of the Army and Navy? MEN AND WOMEN MUST PRODUCE THEM. But there are some people more interested in WHO will produce the defense materials than in the ACTUAL PRODUCTION.

If America is threatened, and those in high office claim that there is great danger, then all hands, black and white, should be put to work at once.

MAY 8 - 1941

A young colored architectural draftsman with years of experience was turned down when he answered an advertisement urging men so trained to apply for jobs. The personnel manager refused to hire him because of his color. The builders are engaged in erecting a building for a defense project. The attitude appears to be that if colored workmen are necessary to complete the structure on schedule, rather than employ them, delay the building.

But since dollars, even billions of them, are not sufficient to defend America successfully, neither are munitions of war in the hands of the Army and Navy equal to the task. America needs unity. There must be one great common cause with all free men giving not only of their material resources but of their spirit and heart.

Nations crumble and fall not only for the lack of preparedness in bombs, guns, tanks and battleships but because of internal dissatisfaction. It has happened before and it can happen again — free men fighting for a great cause can, with inferior equipment, beat the "stuffings" out of a mechanically perfect Army.

The great trouble in the present conflict is not alone that Hitler has a perfect war machine, but those who are opposing him are not so sure what they are fighting for.

When the rulers of America say that we are fighting for democracy, there are those who doubt the statement. Organized labor woud never strike if the leaders were positive that their way of life was seriously threatened. If they tied up war industries and at the same time believed that their security was in jeopardy, they would be fools.

Colored Americans are not so sure that the democracy for which Great Britain is fighting includes the colored peoples of the world. The history of the British Empire proves the opposite.

And here in America colored citizens must even fight their government for an opportunity to fight for their country.

MAY 8 - 1941

Despite Hitler's victories, in face of the great successes of the German army, this newspaper believes the United States of America can defeat him any time it makes up its mind to turn loose the full force of democracy. This must include things spiritual as well as material.

It may sound foolish in face of what is happening in 1941 to say that men with their hearts in their jobs can produce more and fight harder than men who do not have their souls in their job. But we believe it with all of our soul and heart. Give Americans their full and equal opportunity and even though the gates of hell come against them the enemy will be crushed.

But democracy can not combat the evil forces of the world half slave and half free.

Pie in the Sky

AS IN the spring of 1917, the Negro people are being wooed with promises of a golden future in return for sacrifice on the battlefield. To 12,000,000 Negroes, Jim Crowed in the army, segregated in decaying tenements, denied job opportunities and civil rights, the sudden talk of "democracy" has a particularly hollow sound. In no area of American life is there such a gap between the facts and the pretenses of this war. The function of the sixty merchants of alibis who signed a statement last week in behalf of Negroes in defense industries is to bridge this gap with glittering words.

The release of this statement, and its wide publicity in the press, indicates the terrific pressure from both the Negro and white masses which the war leaders must somehow deflect. Yet how clumsy is the technique, how blatant the hypocrisy. For example, Marshall Field, one of the signers, is himself the scion of a family which refuses to employ Negroes in its large Chicago store. Mr. Field's newspaper, PM, forgets to note this fact in its uncontrollable hysteria. Similarly, the New York Times and Herald Tribune, which hailed the statement as evidence of an era of good feeling, omitted the news that not a single member of their own editorial and reporting staffs is a Negro. Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase of New York University, another signatory, will have difficulty explaining how he reconciles his fine phrases with the discrimination against Negro athletes in his university and the recent suspension of seven students for protesting such discrimination. Among the other signers were two publishers of Southern Jim Crow newspapers, the president of a university which bars admission to Negro students, and the champion of intolerance in the AFL, Matthew Woll.

Few will be deceived by phrases this time. There is a deepening appreciation of the fact that Jim Crowism is imbedded in the very fabric of capitalist relations. While every effort should be made to bring about equality of job opportunities in the defense industries, and in other trades and professions, it should never for a moment be forgotten that the powers thrusting us deeper into the war are the very ones which created and seek to perpetuate the oppression of Negroes and national minorities.

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II

Ever since this column began criticizing Walter White, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, for using this crisis to stir up the black man against the white in course of otherwise proper protests against discrimination in defense jobs, we have received bitter and abusive letters from certain Negroes along with a blessedly larger number of approving ones. And ever since, more recently, we began taking cracks at Gov. Talmadge for agitating the white man against the black at a time like this, we have had equally bitter letters from certain white men, including several who in spite of their literacy seemed totally unaware of the fact that we had written much more against White than against the Georgia governor. In such a crossfire it was pleasant to read in a recent issue of The Weekly Review (for Negroes) the following comment in the editor's name: "Neither Mr. Talmadge with all his Hitlerism nor Walter White with all his vengeance can ever move me to surrender my light and determination to do unto all people as I would have them do unto me."

300 Negro Flyers May Join Canadian Air Force

CHICAGO (ANP)—According to A. L. Foster, executive secretary of the Chicago Urban League, approximately 300 Chicago youths who have the required two years college training and the physical quadifications for acceptance as flying cadets in the army are seriously considering enlistment in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Already several of the young men have made plans to go to Canada. One, who finished third in a flying course at the University of Minnesota, has been approached by the British consul here with an offer that he accept full expenses to the nearest Canadian recruiting station, Foster said.

"Our boys have grown mistrustful of the administration,' he said. "Too many promises made just before election time still remain unfilled".

The Urban League head referred to President Roosevelt's announcement last October 9 that, as part of his expanded defense setup, he would maintain the strength of the Negro personnel of the army on a proportionate population basis; establish Negro organizations in each major branch of the service; accelerate the training of Negroes as pilots, mechanics, and technicians in aviation, and form Negro aviation units.

"The administration has made nothing but empty gestures thus far," said Foster. "In an attempt to pacify us it gave us a fine Waco training plane at the Harlem airport. (The Civil Aeronautics Bureau and the army air corps jointly conduct a special flight instruction project for Negroes there). This is the same type of training plane used at the flying fields for white boys. We appreciate having it. But thus far only 20 boys have been accepted to use it.

And even then the boys accepted for this special project undergo many hardships, Foster said. They do not receive the $75 monthly paid to flying cadets at other fields, they are not supplied with uniforms or other flying equipment, and they are deprived of the advantages of medical and dental attention, board, and lodging, he said.

"All of the boys at the Harlem air field wear the same flying suit," he said. "Training flights are delayed while one boy takes off an outfit and another one gets into it".

The large percentage of Negroes on Chicago's relief rolls was cited as the best argument for accepting more youths at the recruiting offices. The Chicago Relief Administration reported Thursday that 27 per cent of the city's Negro population is on relief, compared with 3 per cent of the white population.

A WHITE MAN'S COUNTRY

The challenge that America is a white man's country has been thrown in the face of the Negro by the white South since President Lincoln freed the slaves January 1, 1863. And since the New Deal under the leadership of President Roosevelt has used every power of his administration to make this challenge a fact, why not the Negro accept the challenge and make the most of it? By every rule of just and honest government, the United States of America is the land of the free and the home of the brave, and the Negro recognizes no taint of race or color on the title of his homeland. He yields to no man or race, what he bought with his blood, tears and heart-rending sacrifice and suffering, without an uncompromising struggle unto death. The fight that all liberty loving Negroes are going to make to preserve the freedom and rights that Lincoln gave them, and the Constitution of the United States vouchsafed unto them forever, will never cease until the white man confesses by deed and action that the United States of America is owned by every American citizen, whether he is law-abiding or not, and race, color nor previous condition of servitude cuts no figure in the galaxy of what men do.

The present administration at Washington has been just as determined to make our country a white man's country as it has been wasteful and extravagant in spending the taxpayers' money, to no avail except to keep control of the government in New Deal hands. It is the duty of every individual to defend his country right or wrong when danger from without or within, threatens its overthrow. But when the constituted authority tells a part of the citizens, that the government will neither use them for service, or consent you in the army and navy as part of the combating force of the nations; such a government tells you that the country belongs to those who are permitted to fight to protect the flag and those who are not permitted to fight, have no part or title to the land of the free and the home of the brave. By this action your government tells you that this is a white man's country and we have no part in it. The Federal Constitution and its amendments to the contrary notwithstanding. When your government tells you through its constituted authority, that it is not the policy of its administration to integrate Negroes into the regular army, your government means, you are no part of its man power, and you are not expected to fight for a white man's country. When the head of the government tells you that it favors laws to protect your life and property from the fury of the mob, but cannot do it because the white South objects to it; and I need the South to carry out the policies of my administration; your government tells you again that this is a white man's country, and that you have no right that a white man objects to having. This policy plainly tells the Negro that he is in a white man's country and that he has no country, yet he is taxed without representation to support a white man's country.

Every time a Negro is discriminated against, segregated or disfranchised, he is told that this is a white man's country, and that the Negro is simply here by the tolerance of the white man. You have the right to fight for your own country because God and the Constitution gave you as much title to this country as they gave the white man. On relief we do not receive aid as a right but as an object of charity by the white man. The white man does not see relief to the Negro as a care of the government, but as a gift from him to a inferior class of people, entitled only to what a white man gives the Negro as a favor. White men of us look upon relief as a blessing, it is a means of taking the spirit of manhood and inspiratio

Negro People Oppose Jim Crow

NEW YORK, April 14.—The Negro people of America, together with thousands of their fellow Americans, workers in coal, auto, steel, and in the ranks of organized youth, have, in increasing numbers, boldly challenged the right of the Roosevelt government to establish Jim Crowism as a National Policy in the armed forces, the job life and the political life of the country," according to a declaration issued by the American Peoples Meeting held here at Mecca Temple, Sunday, April 6.

The declaration, a million copies of which will be circulated throughout the country within the next fortnight, represents the expression of five thousand delegates, including 600 Negro delegates, from forty-three states, who met here last week, under the auspices of the American Peace Mobilization, to "take the steps to mobilize the people for peace, liberty and the common welfare."

"Neither German Fascism nor British imperialism can bring a just peace to subjugated peoples of Europe, Ireland, India, Asia and Africa," the declaration said. "Our goal for ourselves and for the peoples of the world is a democratic people's peace.

White Man's Pattern

The Kinston Free Press records a remark, made by its aging janitor emeritus, advising a younger janitor which was overheard in the paper's press room:

"Don't follow the white man—follow the Lord."

The editor of The Free Press feels that there "was food for thought in the admonition, at least." Most Southern white men will agree. Obviously in the eyes of this religious old Negro no human, white or black, is a sufficiently satisfactory model. But where there is a tendency on the part of Negroes to emulate the behavior of white people, the white man has a duty to recognize how often and how far he does fall short of being even a satisfactory human leader. The faults of the Negro are often discussed, sometimes with sharpness, oftener with amusement, in regions where there are large Negro populations. But there is nothing amusing about the frequent failure of the white man to set a pattern which aspiring Negroes might wisely follow.

"Don't follow the white man—follow the Lord," is a statement based on the old Negro's strong religious faith. It is also a statement based on practical wisdom which deserves at least as much attention from the white people as from the colored people beside them.

SOUTHERNER IN LINE FOR HIGH COURT POSITION

NAACP Cites Anti-Negro Record of South Carolina Senator

FEB 1 1941

NEW YORK—A long and bitter fight, reminiscent of the campaign waged against Judge John J. Parker, that kept the North Carolina jurist off the United States Supreme Court in 1930, will be conducted against Senator James Byrnes, if President Roosevelt nominates the South Carolina representative to fill the post left vacant by retiring Justice James C. McReynolds, officials of the NAACP said this week.

The announcement came on the heels of newspaper reports from Washington indicating that Senator Byrnes, one of the President's chief aides in the fight to pass the lease-lend bill, had the inside track on the appointment, and quoting the President as saying that he had already chosen the man who would succeed McReynolds, although he did not intend to make known the name for several weeks.

At the same time the association made public a telegram sent to Roosevelt Saturday, January 25, in which reasons for the opposition to Byrnes were stated. These reasons were summed up with the statement that Byrnes "has been absolutely consistent in opposing any and every effort to give to Negro citizens the protection of the United States Constitution."

Fights Lynch Bill

Byrnes has consistently fought passage of the federal Anti-lynching bill, the statement said.

In 1935, as chairman of the Senate audit and control committee, he refused to permit consideration of the appropriation of $7,500 to investigate fourteen lynchings that had taken place since May 1, when the Senate filibuster halted action on the then pending Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill.

Byrnes did this despite the fact that the Senate Judiciary Committee had reported out favorably a resolution offered by Senator Frederick Van Nuys calling for the investigation, and authorizing the expenditure of $7,500 to conduct it.

NAACP officials pointed out that it is not without significance that the three Senators who are pressing Roosevelt to name Byrnes: Carter Glass, of Va.; Harrison, of Miss., and Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, are without exception, opponents of federal anti-lynching legislation.

Senator Glass, the NAACP officials said, is the father of disfranchisement laws for Negroes in Virginia, about which he has frequently boasted.

Urges Mass Protest

The association urged organizations and citizens to send telegrams, post cards and letters to President Roosevelt at once, urging him not to nominate Byrnes for the Supreme Court post.

The complete text of the association's program to Roosevelt follows:

"We very sincerely hope that newspaper reports are incorrect that you are seriously considering the nomination of Senator James F. Byrnes as a member of United States Supreme Court to succeed Mr. Justice McReynolds. Senator Byrnes' record has been absolutely consistent in opposing any and every effort to give to Negro citizens the protection of the United States Constitution. The United Supreme Court has been the one tribunal to which minorities have been able to appeal in defense of their citizenship rights. One holding the views which Senator Byrnes has espoused on the floor of the United States Senate and elsewhere jeojardizes democracy at a time when we must put forth every effort to safeguard and extend it. We urge that Senator Byrnes or any other person sharing his views not be considered for this high post."

James Crow and Uncle Tom

FEB 1 1941

As long as Mr. James Crow walks the length and breadth of these United States of America, Uncle Tom will skulk in his shadow. Seventy-five years of education have not stamped out the species. The crop may show some decrease, but the ignorance and servility continue typical.

And so we had a jim crow inaugural concert. The righteous indignation of those colored citizens who do their own thinking and usually think straight denounced those of both races who arranged the concert. Their protest did not alter the plans for the first separate inaugural entertainment which the government has ever sponsored for colored citizens.

But that protest did bring about the modification of the previously announced line of march of the inaugural parade. As quiet as the Democrats have tried to keep it, it has leaked out that on just the day before the inauguration, the Recorder of Deeds was invited to occupy one of the three official cars which virtually led the parade. As far as we have been able to learn not a single daily or weekly mentioned the participation of Dr. Thompkins and his family. His name had not appeared previously in the lists released to the press. Did the enterprising reporters covering the parade remain ignorant as to the identity of the occupants of that third Lincoln Zephyr? Or did the inaugural committee suggest the suppression of that very significant news item for a very special reason?

Maybe protests of intelligent colored leaders are not in vain. But maybe it is not good politics to let them know that. Maybe that is why the Recorder's presence in the parade drew no comment via press or radio.

But to return to the subject of the protest. The incident revealed some of our most prominent citizens in a strange, new light. "We accept separate schools," they say. "So why not a separate concert?"

Thus they yield to the very feeling of inferiority which the separate school system is intended to breed and nurture to full growth. That is the only excuse for a dual school system. The existence of that system was the basis for denial of Constitution Hall and Central High School to Marian Anderson. When the school board declared against that concert on the ground that it was a commercial affair and, there, the school rules would not permit it, facts were found at variance with the rule. There was another contention that schools could not be used by groups composed of both races. Facts gave the lie to that argument. Then the opposition fell back on the dual school system as the reason to deny use of Central. In a lenghty legalistic report the D.A.R. president upheld the DAR ban for the same reason—local practice.

If then our leading citizens contend that because we accept the separate schools which are set up by law, we must complacently accept discrimination and segregation elsewhere, why don't some of the gentlemen propose that the N.A.A.C.P. and kindred organizations shut up shop?

RACE RELATIONS IN CAPITAL SAID TO BE UNHEALTHY

MAR 8 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(ANP)— Casual observances in the capital reveal a situation unhealthy in the extreme as far as racial relations go. The general opinion is that discrimination is practiced in the governmental departments against Negroes only—which in viey of recent revelations, has proved a fallacy. There is a strong anti-Semitic current alive in Washington with the Jews catching plenty of the same treatment accorded Negroes.

An administrative official in one of the bigger bureaus here in an interview said:

"Not only do Negroes bear the burden of discriminatory practices, but the Jews in my department are also under continual fire. Southerners accuse me of being partial to the Jewish workers. They claim the Jewish workers are held on longer than others. This is true because of the high efficiency rating the Jewish workers achieve.

"One Southern woman told me she did not want to sit in a wing of the building where she could look out of the window to see Negro clerks at work.

MAR 8 1941

"Another refused to enter the building because of Jews and Negroes.

"So you can see it is not a pleasant task to administer the affairs of a department like this where you have thousands of workers of various nationalities, races, creeds and colors."

And in other departments, the same thing persists. Although open opposition to the Negro is practises, the subtle undercurrent uses the Negro question to get over its hatred of the Jews especially in one department where there is a large number of the latter working in the higher brackets.

The average Southerner working in the government accepts the job as a routine matter and goes about his duties in a manner to which he has been accustomed in his native environment. But with others, the job becomes something live and keen interest is taken in it, making other slower workers seem like slouches. This, and the ambitions to rise in to non-whites and non-Christians in the service, have proven hinderances the departments and officials, as well as workers, have permitted this condition to grow until it is reaching alarming proportions in the various departments.

'MINORITY GROUPS SHOULD PONDER PRIVILEGES OF CITIZENSHIP,' SCOTT

OCT 4 1941

Taking a Cue from the Jews, Negroes Are Not Renouncing Citizen Rights—Some Congressmen Spread Seeds of Disunity.

By EMMET. J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.—Two notable sentences appear in the recent Message issued by the American Jewish Congress to its co-religionists:

That, "American Jews intend to stand four-square for the defense of the American way of life whatever the consequence may be" . . . and,

That, "American Jews will neither be bribed nor blackmailed into renouncing their just and equal status as citizens of the United States" . . .

Another minority group in the United States can well afford to ponder the second of these pronouncements.

As for the first, Negroes have always defended the American way of life as defined in the Constitution of the United States and the Bill of Rights.

ALWAYS FOUGHT FOR AMERICA

From Revolutionary days, they have fought for the defense of America in every war of the Republic, down to and through World War No. 1, and are equally loyal and devoted to the best interests of the nation as it stands on the brink of World War, No. II. Of this there is no dispute in any well-informed circle.

During all the years which have followed the adoption by the Congress of the United States of the Civil War Amendments to the Constitution, conferring freedom and citizenship upon the Negro people, they have been the victims of an organized conspiracy to deny them that human freedom to which, as citizens they are entitled.

ACTS OF INTOLERANCE

These reflections are prompted by widespread acts of intolerance against racial groups in many parts of our country. So strong have they become that the Council Against Intolerance In America is sponsoring a nationwide celebration, marking the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights, which is presumed to underlie the cornerstone upon which American principles of freetom, tolerance and equality rest.

As the Council sugests: We need to stress the duties that Americans have in upholding the principles which this document (The Bill of Rights) enunciates . . . It is not enough to give lip-service to the principles contained therein . . . We must fight, particularly in these perilous times, to carry them out.

Letters to the Editor

Debt to the Negro

Editor The Telegraph:

The Bible speaks of having the poor with us always. We the Afro-American Negroes feel poor in spirit sometimes because we are talked about by other nations. While they talk we bend our knees to God. If we didn't do this we would be as a lost gobbler in a wide open field.

Some hands have done us an injustice during our stay in America, but these same hands have driven us to Jesus. Negroes have cleared your wooded forest, dug gold from your rich mines, cultivated your plantations, and helped to make the South the greatest cotton market in the world.

If President Monroe could arise on the scene, he would tell you the boots that were worn by him on his inauguration were made by a Negro bootmaker. A Negro mechanic laid the tiling in the home of Thomas Jefferson. President George Washington appointed Benjamin Benneker, a Negro astronomer, to help plan the city of Washington, D. C. A Negro named Matzelinger invented a machine on which boots and shoes could be shaped. George Washington Carver, scientist, made the sweet potato and peanut crop valuable by producing 300 products from the peanut, 185 from the potato. Some of these products are axil greese, flour, candy, face powder, ink and road building material. Negro labor has helped to build America.

The Negro has taught you to laugh at a hard life in this unfriendly world. The Negro works and sings in the rain like the birds who take every day for Sunday, leaning on God. The Negro laughs at trouble and, lives one day at a time, thanks God for that day and says he may not need any thing for tomorrow, hence he is happy. Claude McKay, Countee Cullen, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Phyllis Wheatly, and Langston Hughes, all Negroes, have made a large contribution in the gift of literature. All through the years of toil and struggle the Negroes have clung to the gift of funmaking in order to live more peacefully with another nation in America. By the Negro's example America is richer for this gift.

With all that has been said about the Negro in former years right now you are eating ham eggs, hot buck wheat cakes, syrup toast, biscuits, waffles, chicken hot rolls, barbecue, stake, lemon pies, and food of all descriptions prepared by Negro hands. Your children are being nursed, your clothes being laundered by Negro hands.

Negroes have shed rich blood running through their black bodies to make America safe for something white. Negroes promise to show this spirit of loyalty at any time to make America safe. The half has never been told about the many good characteristics of the Negro. If he has accomplished so much good, away from Africa, his native home uneducated and got other nations wearing shoes, what do you suppose he will do if you help to educate him during his stay in your country?

The Negro did all this inventing feeling one-half his time, like a motherless child. If he did that with a depressed feeling, imagine the good he can do if you loose him and let him go to higher heights in the educational realm. Not among colleges for white people but just fix up Georgia Baptist College in East Macon and put it in Grade A for your Macon Negroes especially, and it will come back bread cast on the water, but not the same bread. It will come back a chicken sandwich. There is so much good in the worst of us until the Negro deserves being put on trial for more inventions.

Will you help him by making every knock a boost? The Negro declares he is on his way to God's heaven. I know every body talking about heaven is not going there, but the Negro's bended knee to God I believe he is going. So how will nations manage flying with wings touching against a Negro's wing and long white robe?

We may as well live in union because the same dirt that covers up a Negro is used to cover every nation.

Watchman, tell us of the night. It is too far spent already, living in glass houses and still throwing stones. The Negro is a valuable asset, from the governor's mansion in Atlanta to Jordan river, thank our governor for our public school books.

In His Place

Editor The Telegraph:

Pooh to Margaret Roberts, who seems to be a senior in some Georgia college. She said that she was white but it is hard to believe that a white woman could defend a Negro so devoutly.

I have traveled over the entire United States and Georgia is the only state I have been in that keeps the Negro race in its place so effectively. I hope that Georgia will never follow the example that some states have set.

The only good Negroes are the ones that are under the white man's management.

I just can't imagine sitting by a Negro in school or church. Can you Miss Thompson? I was in California during 1938 and when I first arrived there I noticed that the white and colored people mixed freely. I went to a show the first week out there and presently a big black Negro came in and sat beside me.

I asked him if he wasn't out of place—he looked at me as if he thought I was crazy. I left.

I think our governor is a very wise and thoughtful man. May the Negroes always stay in the fields of Georgia.

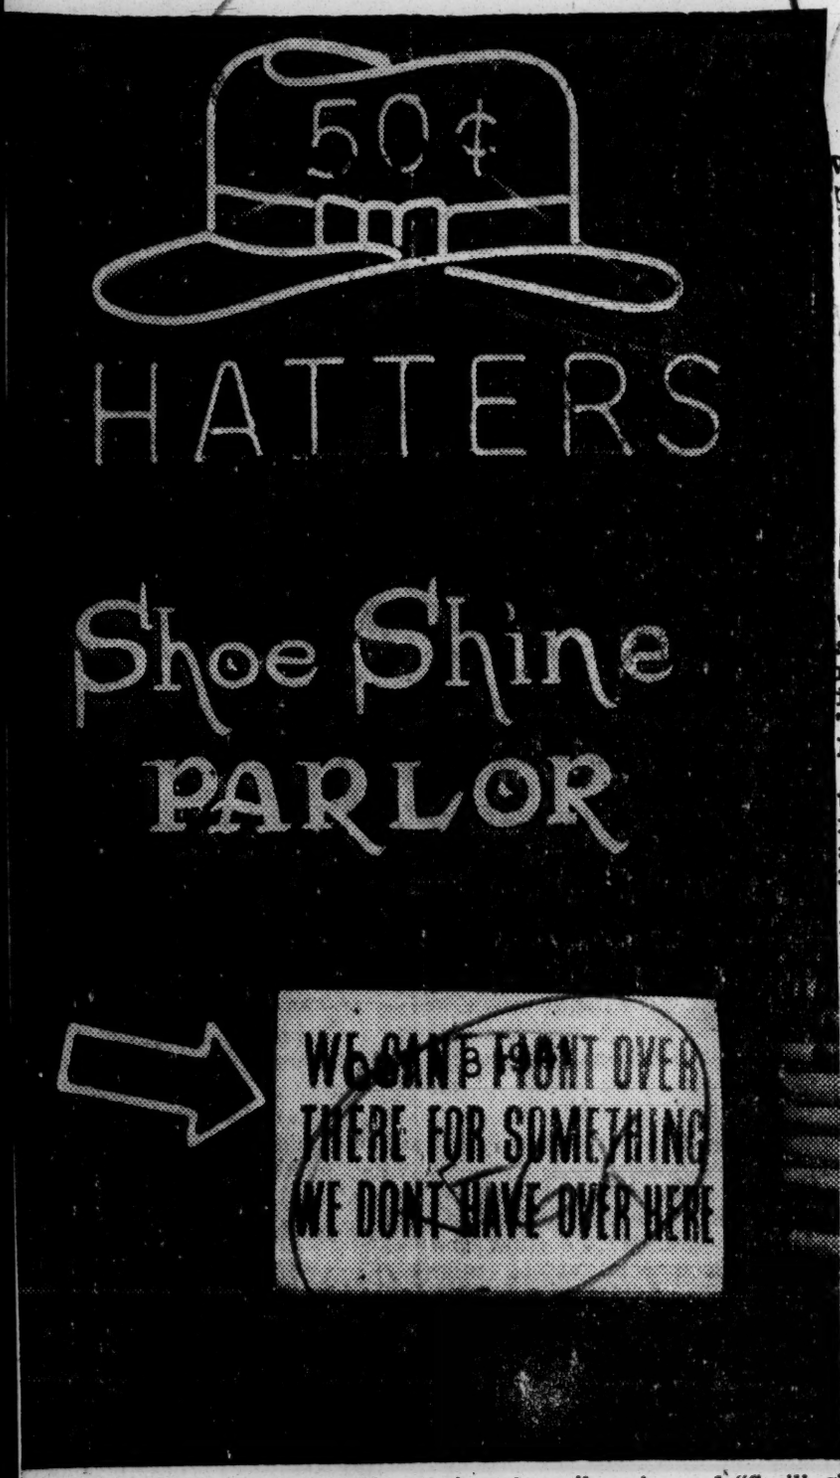
WANTS DEMOCRACY HERE



For over three months people passing the tailor shop of "Smiling" Al James, 12 East 35th street, have noticed a sign in the window which says: "We can't fight over there for something we don't have over here." This statement is the unexpressed thought of almost every Negro who is called upon to serve in the army. Mr. James is subject to call by his draft board and states that the words of his sign will be on his tongue when he is called.

Expert Testimony.

The committee states its finding is based on expert medical testimony.

Further, the report states, a case was found where a patient was subjected to an avoidable and unnecessary second major operation immediately following the first. The patient survived, "fortunately," according to the report.

The committee declared two of the physicians involved were offered an opportunity to explain and justify the methods used, but refused.

Also it is stated that the committee extended a general invitation to all involved to be heard, but only two who were subpoenaed appeared.

Retaliation Charged.

Other charges are:

That the hospital's medical board discriminated against members of the Lincoln Hospital Alumni Assn. in promotions and appointments, and employed punitive tactics in dismissing five alumni "who rendered a signal public service in exposing these conditions."

That Dr. Edward J. Davin, director of obstetrics and gynecology at the institution, permitted his "personal prejudices" to disrupt the gynecological service of the hospital. (At a hearing June 11 Dr. Davin denied anti-Semitic feeling was responsible for failure to promote Jewish interns.)

That Dr. S. S. Goldwater, former Commissioner of Hospitals, avoided responsibility for the conduct of the medical board while commissioner, and hindered the inquiry by refusing to permit access to what he termed "private case records" of the hospital.

Charge Poor Neglected.

That the indigent sick of the Bronx have been prevented from obtaining the best possible physicians because of discrimination.

That the institution's clinics have been mismanaged.

The committee recommended reorganization of the hospital's medical board—which it called unfit to administer the affairs of a municipal institution—and also the staff. It urged appointment by the Commissioner of Hospitals of a committee of reputable Bronx physicians to recommend appointments to the new board.

The committee was headed by Councilman Louis Cohen, Bronx Democrat and a former deputy commissioner of hospitals. Other members were Councilmen Walter R. Hart and John M. Christensen of Brooklyn, Alfred E. Smith, Jr., of Manhattan, and Frederick Schick of Richmond.

Nazism Next Door

By GORDON B. HANCOCK
(ANP Feature Writer)

When Lindburgh sets upon the Jews he is coming dangerously near the Negroes. Nazism thrives on race hatreds and well might the Negroes tremble when the race persecution comes to the Jews, for then is it next door to the Negroes.

Only a fortuitous circumstance saved the Negroes from great persecution when Ku Klux Klan was directed wholly against Negroes the revised form of the movement included Jews, Catholics and Negroes, and therein was the Negroes' salvation. Had the Klan not mistakenly lined up against these other two elements in their nation, great would have been the tribulation of Negroes. But the Jews and Catholics could take care of themselves and incidentally they took care of the Negroes.

It is most fortunate for Negroes that the Nazism in this country is making its initial racial assault on the Jews; and we only hope that the Catholics will come next as this will give the Negroes a breathing spell. Lindbergh has indirectly mitigated any wrath Nazism may be inclined to mete out to the Negro race; and there is such wrath, though latent, it is potent; and we must not deceive ourselves on this point. When the attack on the Jews comes, it brings trouble next door to the Negroes of the country.

We may as well be warned that unless Hitlerism is defeated great tribulation awaits our haidpressed race. For every reason Negroes had for fighting in past wards, there are many reasons for fighting in this one The threat against the Negro is more dire than ever and with the possibility of a world-wide conquest, those minority groups that are subjugated until they are annihilated. That is to say, if Nazism wins world-wide dominion with its persecution complex, minority groups will be doomed perhaps unto their final extermination.

The democratic and Christian ideology has been the only redeeming hope of the interracial situation throughout the world. When democracy perishes from the earth the hopes and fortunes of the darker race will also perish. Then will Christianity be so emasculated that it cannot function in saving appressed groups.

Today we have a press in this nation that has a conscience; under Nazism the press would have none. Today the Negro can make his protest vocal; under Nazism his voice of protest would be silenced. Today the Negro's dark outlook gives hope of a brighter tomorrow; under Nazism there would be no tomorrow. One of the most disquieting symptoms of this whole situation here in the United States is the sympathetic way in which Lindberghism is treated. For over three months people passing the tailor shop of "Smiling" Al James, 12 East 35th street, have noticed a sign in the window which says: "We can't fight over there for something we don't have over here." This statement is the crystallized thought of almost every Negro who is called upon to serve in the army. Mr. James is subject to call by his draft board and states that the words of his sign will be on his tongue when he is called.

Which of These Types Best Describes You?

Dr. Channing Tobias, National YMCA Secretary, Classifies Us and Asks Which Type America Will Heed; No National Unity With Double Standard, He Says

By DR. CHANNING H. TOBIAS
National Secretary, YMCA

MAR 2 2 1941

There are four types of colored persons from which America may make choice today as the one to whom America will take heed.

The first is that type who comes fawning, bending obsequiously, and lying about conditions and what is in his own heart because he believes that is the thing to do to get what he wants.

The second is a rapidly vanishing type, sometimes bewailed and bemoaned for his passing because he is lovable, but, nevertheless, a type overcome by conditions, over-awed by what he sees, into believing himself inferior.

Then there is the ultra-radical type who does not expect what he asks to be granted and would be disappointed if it were granted because it would then deprive him of the one thing for which he lives, namely, agitation for agitation's sake.

Here's Fourth Type

Then there is a fourth type who will co-operate, but only on the basis of self-respect and truth, and who will not lie about conditions and what is in his own heart. It is that last man to whom America would do well to listen today.

I want to quote a word from an article that appeared in a recent issue of a popular magazine on this question of national unity. "We might as well be frank. This country will not achieve national unity, certainly not the kind we want in a democracy, by the easy and relatively painless way of making speeches about it."

Of course, we can simulate the appearance of solidarity by merely turning loose upon the public enough speakers chanting in unison to fill the air and the newspapers with synthetic programs. Mass meetings serve some purpose in calling attention to the end that we seek. They cannot give us the reality. What is it that we seek?

It is, I think, a climate for the spirit that will be as free and sunny, as yielding and invigorating as a day in early spring. A climate in which men may grow strong in themsleves and in the race. From strong and free nations come strong and free men just as a great forest is not a mass of weak, starved and stunted trees but one in which all the trees have grown large and strong.

You Can't Have Both

Once I heard a notable address on racial prejudice by the great Dr. Thomas Glover of Cambridge University in which he said this: "You may have race prejudice if you want it or you may have Christ if you want Him, but you cannot have both." It may seem like over-simplification of the issue but I think it is equally to the point to say that we may have a double standard of education in America if we want it, or we may have national unity if we want it but we cannot have both.

Really, I believe that if the members of the United States Senate that filibustered the anti-lynching bill out of existence could have been exposed to the thought of the people of other nations of the world, out of sheer respect for their nation, to say nothing of what it would have meant to us, they would have voted the law outlawing mob violence.

I recall an incident quite vivid to me concerning the late Maharajah of India. Four years ago when I was in his city in India he honored me with an interview of half an hour in his palace. I shall never forget that occasion.

What About Lynching?

He met me at the door, after I had gone up four floors on a private elevator, met me at his audience chamber door and escorted me in. No sooner had he taken his seat and turned to me to make an introductory remark than this question came from him. "Have you people in America no way to organize to protect yourselves against the savage crime of lynching?"

That was the beginning of a half-hour interview. Wherever I went in the Orient and had interviews with newspapermen—that was in practically every country visited—invariably this question would arise. It wasn't because they were critical of America. Most of them looked to America for hope and light and leading, and rejoice in the great achievements of America in the field of engineering and other sciences in which we excel, but they simply could not harmonize the crime of lynching with the spirit of a country like America.

Blot Out Mob Violence

So I say that in order that our national unity may mean something to the rest of the world, we owe it to ourselves to blot out mob violence. And then, of course, it will serve to remove fear from the hearts of millions of people and release them to the work of national defense.

Regarding the industries that are now engaged in national defense, not only is it the just thing to give colored people the opportunity to participate in the work of the various factories now engaged in the construction of defense material, but I would add that it is safe to use colored people in national defense.

No black Jim Jenkins or Tom Jones or Henry Smith has ever et off a fuse in a factory or in n armory for purposes of sabo-ge and destruction.

I would hate to think that America would want to continue to witness what it has been witnessing in recent weeks before awakening to the fact that was recognized in the last war at the very beginning when the first separate battalion of the District of Columbia at the very time that war was declared was the battalion called to guard the White House for the simple reason that there was not a shadow of suspicion resting upon the loyalty of any single member of that battalion.

Remove racial discrimination from government. It's bad enough to have to endure it when it is privately imposed, but it breaks the morale of the people completely to have their government discriminate against them.

U.S. Must Take Stand

It is impossible to achieve hemisphere unity without taking a firm stand on racial discrimination in our own United States government.

Reference has been made already to the fact that South America and the West Indies are predominantly non-white, that the defense bases purchased from Great Britain are predominately populated by non-white people, and I ask if it is not in line with sound reason for the cultivation of hemisphere unity to pay as much attention to bringing about these adjustments within our own government as it is to send our emissaries from time to time to South America and to the West Indies?

It seems to me just as important to give deliberate time and attention to bringing about these adjustments in relationships here at home not only for the effect that it will have on the morale of colored people themselves here in America but for the effect that it may have on the non-white populations of the other parts of the Western Hemisphere, who will have large questions in their minds about the sincerity of American approaches to them as long as it comes with this stigma on its hands.

Must Hear 13,000,000

America cannot afford to ignore the claims of 13,000,000 colored people because they are a minority group. What would have been the cour followed by the British Empire several decades ago if it could have foreseen then as it clearly sees now the strategic position that Ireland occupies in the battle of Britain? It may well turn out that wha Ireland decides to do within the next few weeks or months may determine the issue of the war.

In all that I have said, there has been no intention to intimate any threat of disloyalty, even if America failed to do these things. But I do say that it will make a tremendous difference in the spirit in which that loyalty is expressed whether or not America does make these adjustments. Charlie Chaplin, in his most recent picture, "The Great Dictator," has been criticized by some of the dramatic writers because he turned to a serious discourse at the close of the picture. I

What Is Segregation?

MAY 10 1941

"Segregation is the special American means of branding Colored Americans as the inferiors of inferiors in public status.

"When the white South found itself confronted with the federal status of equality for Colored people, the former slaves—equality of citizenship, of freedom, of franchise rights, backed by the national government—it selected the denial of presence and of service in places opened for public patronage as the one great way to brand Colored people as having been a slave race and make them forever the scorn of civil society.

Mothers Throughout U. S. to Demonstrate for Peace Sunday

"The best gift I could get this Mothers' Day would be a guarantee that my boy wouldn't have to go to war." That's the way one New York mother worded her answer to the question: "What does this Mothers' Day mean to you?" asked by an American Peace Mobilization staff photographer.

MAY 10 1941

Mothers all over America, alarmed by the war drive of the administration, as emphasized by Secretary Stimson's call for convoys, agree with her. APM officials stated that reports coming into the APM office indicate American mothers are determined that there shall be no AEF, no convoys.

They are rallying on this Mothers' Day, May 11, in cities from coast to coast. In Washington, a delegation of mothers from the eastern states are planning Mothers' Day services; in Boston, an anti-convoy rally will be held on historic Boston Common.

In New York, women representing the warring and subjugated nations, will speak at a mass meeting; in Milwaukee, mothers will march on a picket line; in Cleveland and Detroit thousands will turn out in a Mothers' Day Peace parade.

MRS. SARAH MARKHAM (Leader in the Women's Auxiliary of the Transport Workers Union): To me, Mother's Day this year is the saddest in twenty years. Just when our boys get out of school, they're rushed away to camp. First they talked about one year. Now they're talking about convoys. The President said convoys mean shooting and shooting means war. If we let them convoy, our boys will soon be going to war.

MRS. ELEASE OSBORNE (Second Vice President of the Domestic Workers Union): My mother wants peace on Mother's Day, and so do I. So far as she and I are concerned, we're ready to send our boys to fight for democracy any time—right here in America. There's been enough heartache for mothers in the world so far. Why can't we get together and put a stop to it now? I surely hope we can do it this time.

Mrs. DORA JONES (Executive Secretary of the Domestic Workers Union): Mother's Day this year is the most important one of all, especially for Negro women. In the last war we sent our boys over, thinking we would get democracy for our people. We got the same old segregation instead. Now we're busy trying to see that the same thing won't happen to our people again. That's why I'm in the APM.

MRS. NETTIE R. BRENNER (of the Manhattan Council for Civil Rights): Every mother wants to keep America out of the war and her boy at her side. My boy is eighteen years old, and soon the Government will be trying to draft the boys eighteen years old. The best present I could get this Mother's Day is a guarantee that my boy won't be sent to war. I make sure of that by getting people into the American Peace Mobilization.

MRS. BOBBIE PATRICK (Member of the Domestic Workers' Union, poet, student at the Writers' School of the League of American Writers): This Mother's Day is quite a confusing one. Mothers never know if their boys will be with them the next day or off in a camp miles from home or maybe even in a ship bound for some foreign country. I think all mothers need to be organized to stop this war.

MRS. JULIA CHURCH KOLAR (Member of Descendents of the American Revolution, prominent in the American Labor Party): I lived through the last war; it's tragic that I've seen war year after year since then. We've got to protest against this war. The way to protest is through the American Peace Mobilization, the strongest force in America against this war. If the Administration had listened to what the people say, this would be a happier Mother's Day.

Latest evidence of race prejudice in the American army developed last week when Miss Wanda Douglass, Baltimore, answering a call of the American Red Cross Medical Service for "blood donations" to be preserved for army use, was turned down because Miss Douglass is a Negro.

When Miss Douglass presented herself she was refused with the explanation that white donors were the only ones who were being accepted. When questioned about the matter, Dr. William DeKline, head of the Medical Service Bureau, said that the army's surgeon general and the corresponding medical officer in the navy had issued instructions stating that only the blood of white people was to be collected. There is a "psychological barrier" involved, Dr. DeKline said, which made the rule feasible.

Despite this ridiculous ruling science has many times determined that there is not only no difference between the blood of black and white people, but there is no difference between the blood of human beings and that in lower animal life.

We suppose there are still many prominent Southerners who "according to the lie they tell," sucked a black mammy's tit, but this same assinine crowd stampede at the idea of a blood transfusion coming from a black body. The Black Dispatch is not fully advised as to the fundamental difference between milk and blood.

But, if our memory serves us right the blood is only canal fluid through which vital substances are passed to build animal tissue. $n other words, milk builds human tissue and becomes a definite part of the structure of an individual. Blood is only a fluid carrier of tissue building substances. Our silly "tit suckers" find themselves in a very untenable position when they admit for centuries their flesh and bones were constructed out of substances coming from a BLACK mammy's breast while in the same breath objecting to the use of black plasma which does not in actuality enter into tissue building.

We suppose there were some yellow and brown tits our noted white people sucked, but all whom we have heard proudly discuss this sacred matter have loudly proclaimed the tit they sucked was black.

Black mammy's tit was all right but the blood of black mammy's son and daughter is all wrong. It should be kept in mind that not even white blood is accepted by the army unless it has been proved through many tests to be pure. Negro blood is turned down simply because it comes from a black hide.

A million mullatoes, however, scattered all over the South, put to route the sincerity of those who talk about separation of white and black blood. The difference between the army procedure when blood is purified, stored and canned, and the alley procedure, when mullatoes are being spawned, is vested in the fact that in the alley no account is taken of impurities of the blood when the mullatoes come to life in the environment of lust.

In Oklahoma white lawmakers have converted the Indian into a legal white person. No account has been taken of the fact that the Indian almost from the moment that the black man came to American shores has been fusing his blood with the Negro. Thomas Jefferson said before he died that there was not a Pawmunkey Indian in Virginia who was not mixed with black blood.

In Oklahoma for a half century before statehood, Choctaws, Seminoles, Creeks and Chickasaws intermarried freely with the blacks. Even though this is true, when white encroachment began in the Indian country whites quickly saw the property advantage coming through intermarriage with rich Indians. In 1907, when statehood came, there was much lamentation and gnashing of teeth among non-whites when laws were passed prohibiting Indians and black to intermarry. It is said that around Atoka public meetings were held by blacks and Indians denouncing this legal bar to a relationship which had been going on for more than a century.

This writer has a fi[illegible] who has been lost in the white race for twenty-[illegible] and [illegible] first cousin's son has also been swallowe[illegible]ite race. Similarly, there are tens of thousa[illegible]f-white human beings, who because they wan[illegible]er ,opportunity, emolument and privilege, have stepp[illegible] over into the white race. In fact we read an article writ[illegible]n several years ago by a West Coast white writer in which the allegation was made that ten thousand mullato Negroes step over into the white race and become lost every year.

who lives now in California, recently told this writer that every day she reads in the newspapers of Los Angeles about activities of a certain "white" family she named while talking. This family is one of the most socially prominent on the West Coast. This family has the same quantum of black blood as the girl from Ponca City. This girl's father came to Kansas in 1849; the brother of her father went to California in the gold rush of 1849. The brother who went to California cut his family bridges behind him and is today classified as white. The brother at Ponca City stayed with that portion of his blood classified at black.

All over America those who can think two jumps ahead of a land terrapin know that amalgamation of a low, immoral, unclean, syphiletic nature rages and festers in black and white life. People only wink at this horrible condition and cast knowing, uplifted eyes as they pass, but when army science decides to separate the plasma from the blood cells, skims, purifies and cans the capillary substances of black folk, these same imbibers of black mammy's tit nourishment get terribly excited. They refuse to give such blood transfusion to a dying white soldier. What fools we mortals be!

The Telegram's Sly Defense of Anti-Semitism

SEP 20 1941

In an editorial pretending to attack the anti-Semitism of Lindbergh and Nye, the World-Telegram actually condemns the people for opposing anti-Semitism.

The Ku Klux Klan was the "harvest of the Civil War" and not of the slave-owners who wanted to keep the Negro people in bondage, according to the Telegram the other day. Likewise, anti-Semitism and racial hatred are just "by-products of the war." Thus such Nazi-minded appeasers as Lindbergh and Nye are relieved of all responsibility for the promotion of this Hitler poison against the country.

Further, the Telegram says:

"Others have joined in, and still others, opposed (to anti-Semitism—Ed.), have taken up the fight. It follows that all that remains necessary is to hurl TNT back and forth for a short while—and we will have the explosion."

In other words, the American people who have shouted their revulsion and denunciation of Lindbergh and Nye are equally guilty because they fight anti-Semitism. The Telegram is here following the most insidious form of anti-Semitism, by saying that this scourge is due to the fact that the Jewish people and other democratic citizens fight it.

The necessity for fighting anti-Semitism lies upon every American who loathes Hitlerism and who wants to defeat this America First tactic of splitting national unity. That is why the Telegram editorial does not mention that anti-Semitism is used by Hitler to weaken all his intended victims. The Telegram is an appeaser newspaper, as are the Daily News and the Hearst press.

Anti-Semitism violates the Bill of Rights and other laws of the land. It is the duty of the Senate to stop the scandalous racial incitements of the so-called movie "probers." Those Senators like Nye who ape this dangerous Goebbels doctrine should be impeached.

Southern Educators To Fight Racial Misconception Evils

Propose Six-Point Program For Ridding South Of Racial Misconceptions.

BLUE RIDGE, N. C., Sept. 18.—(ANP)—A group of 100 educators, representing every state in the south except Georgia, in attendance, at the Conference of Education for Southern Citizenship which ended last Sunday, instituted a six-point proposal for the promotion of better understanding between whites and Negroes in southern schools.

The recommendations made were: That every important college in the south carry a special course of study on race problems; that this subject be dealt with objectively also in college course in sociology, social problems, that it be treated constructively in college and public school teaching of geography, history, civics, literature, music; that programs and materials on adult education be expanded to include a broader understanding of positive racial relations; school libraries seek to provide books and supplementary materials necessary for such study; that teachers' colleges make every effort to prepare teachers in training for wise and effective work along these lines with the millions of future citizens who will be committed to their charge.

The conference was sponsored by the Conference on Education and Race Relations, and saw heads of departments of teachers colleges and representatives of state departments of education present. Among these were Dr. Arthur Raper, author, sociologist and resaerch worker for the government, Atlanta; who charged that Negroes are discriminated against in the making and administering of laws, and that the police system in the south is often used to protect the existing feudal system.

Speaking on the subject of "The Negro and the Law," Dr. Raper stated that the function of the race line in the United States is to provide a wholesale way of enforcing permanent class restrictions, in violation of the democratic principles upon which the country is founded. He averred that discriminiation against Negroes begins with the laws themselves, that there was discrimination in the administering of the laws, and that other pressures were applied in addition to and in spite of the laws.

From facts gathered recently by him for the Carnegie foundation, he told of police chiefs in southern towns in which investigations were carried on, who boasted of the fact that they were helping to curb potential criminals by the practice of policemen helping children across the street on their way to school. Although police saw the benefits of making friends with white children, they seldom carried out the practice of helping Negro children. Arrests are not made on basis of justice alone. The desire for fines, prestige of the arrested person, the politics—all determine arrests of Negroes. Patrolmen are expected to keep up their weekly quota of arrests for the sake of revenue brought in, he said.

PHILODEMIC COUNCIL TO FOSTER UNITY

An organization of Gentiles, Negroes and Jews formed for the purpose of creating better relations between various racial groups recently went into formal organization at the International House. The group is called the Philodemic Council.

The group, composed of members from the Chicago City-Wide Forum, the Sinai Seniors which is a group of young people of the Jewish faith between the ages of 21 and 35; and members of the First Presbyterian church of Chicago, is studying two projects to carry out its purpose. One project will be a play to be given in the form of a court trial in which the "Trial of Prejudice" will be the subject. Authorities in various fields will serve as expert witnesses to "prosecute" prejudice and intolerance. Another project is under investigation to give assistance to one of the community houses on the South Side.

The Philodemic Council consists of thirty members.

The Interracial Fellowship of Philadelphia is a group similar to the Philodemic Council but is much older. It consists of 100 members fifty of which are Negroes and twenty-five Gentiles and a like number of persons of the Jewish faith.

Vice President Defends Negro

Wallace Denounces Intolerance In Fordham Talk

Vice President Henry A. Wallace Tuesday night raised his voice on behalf of the Negro, when he denounced racial intolerance at the hundredth anniversary dinner of Fordham University at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria.

In the course of his speech, which was believed to be aimed at the address of Charles A. Lindbergh at Des Moines last weekend in which the flier charged the Jew among other groups as heading the nation into a shooting war, Vice President Wallace said:

"No true Christian can speak bitterly against the Jew, the Negro or the yellow man." He also said that the faith of Americans that they lived in a land "chosen for a high destiny of service," was "totally different from believing in the inherent superiority of one race over all other races, and one scientific godless culture over all other cultures."

It is said to be a significant and noteworthy act on the part of the American Vice President in mentioning the Negro among those so-called racial minorities which should not be maligned. Ever since the Lindbergh statement branding the Jews, the British and Washington Administration leaders as war-mongers, several prominent persons have denounced the former colonel for raising the race issue, but not a single one of them mentioned the Negro, who, traditionally, suffers most from racial intolerance and discrimination within the borders of the American Commonwealth.

Letters to the Editor

Political Gag

Editor The Telegraph:

With all due consideration, I am hoping the race question won't be a political gag always. I remember when so much was stirred up about the noted Negro educator, Booker T. Washington, dining at the White House.

We have the Negro here to stay, and the time is almost here when, if we get a real day's work, we must hire a Negro to do it.

As to social equality—that is, eating and sleeping together—it is a long, long ways off. Our Southern Negro doesn't want to mix with whites—the best class of them don't, and if they did they would go somewhere else to do so.

Now, as to Brown America. It may come, but there's no inclination in that direction down here in the piney woods, wiregrass section.

We deal with the Negro in the way he should be dealt with, but we haven't had a lynching in several years. Let us hope the political bees will discontinue harping on the Negro question.

I was on a bus recently between Cordele and Moultrie and when I went in a well-dressed Kentucky woman was back of the driver—my favorite place. Well, I went on back and the whole back part was loaded with Negroes.

I came on back to the aforementioned place and in an apologizing tone remarked: "Well, the seats behind are either beside a Negro or are full and I am a Georgia cracker and have my way and those around me do likewise," so I sat down beside her. She said: "I am so glad my Master didn't put my soul in a black skin. I'll git beside them." She asked me if we didn't think there would be Negroes in Heaven? I saw I was in for a Christian reproof so I arose and offered to let her go back in the back with the precious darling little black angels if she wished.

Let all who want to associate with them, but I am not if I have to stay alone and if all the cheapskate whites do so, I'll still believe in white supremacy and won't forget the bloody struggle that caused my foreparents financial ruin. My grandfather whipped a Negro woman after he returned from the war and, of course, he ran for his life. My grandmother was carried to Hawkinsville to jail, and later on he was murdered by a traitor. Part of Sherman's army robbed his home of all that was of any value. They stole the fowls, cows and took fresh horses and left the worthless ones. Could anyone with any human element expect me to like the Negro after they caused all this?

We have separate churches, baseball games and all phases of life has the Negro in it but only the poor white trash so much discussed by noted people ever spend any time around the Negroes' homes, churches, schools, baseball games, etc.

They have their place to fill. We have ours, and let us fill ours so elegantly, gracefully and steadfastly they won't have any room to doubt our veracity in anything we do.

If the political, spiritual and educational agitators will let the Negro question alone we can manage it much more easily. We are going to deal fairly and justly with the Negroes among ourselves, but the Negro must be dealt with as the cause demands, and we who have been raised with them know it is true that: "A little learning is a dangerous thing. Drink deep or taste not of the Pierian Spring." And this applies to a Negro exactly. For once they get a smart idea of race equality they can't stay down in Wilcox county with it. They must go North or somewhere and they know it.

SHADES OF GEORGIA

That the North has a negro problem as well as the South is the opinion of Jonathan Daniels writing recently for one of the nation's leading magazines. We had thought that this was one problem unique to the South, since the negro population of the North was not sufficiently large to create a problem that could not be solved without publicity.

More than that, Mr. Daniels names Connecticut, that sophisticated state in the East, as the Georgia of the North, and compares conditions in New Haven with those in the backwoods of Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, North Cartlina, and Virginia. At least, there is some virtue in not being alone.

A portion of the Daniels statement will interest Southern readers:

"I have traveled over Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, and in the backwoods of North Carolina and Virginia,' he said, 'and have seen the deplorable Negro homes there. But when I came to New Haven I was amazed to see terrible homes for Negroes here too. I inquired what Negroes pay for such 'homes' and felt that one of the cleverest pieces of robbery that has ever been perperated upon a people was the rent asked for these old fire-traps.'

"The shepherd in the land where 'the grass is green ant the hills are soft and round' went on: 'Who cares how Negroes live! That seems to be the attitude of most people. As to a living wage for Negroes, apparently no one wants them to have enough money to better their conditions. Everyone knows that Negroes are paid less than any other racial group. But when the cost of living rises, they must pay just as much as anyone else. It is sad, but many regard Connecticut as the Georgia of the North as far as Negroes are concerned.'

"It is a long way from Georgia to Connecticut and not all the roads are planted with grass and trees But the Negroes have been coming for a long time. The Reverend Mr. Foster's church was established in 1820. Ed Whitney was living in New Haven then. He had already been to Georgia and tightened the ties of slavery with his machine. Mr. Foster's church must have been one of the first havens for the escaped. They could shout hallelujah for freedom at the top of their lungs till the hallelujahs came back resounding from all Connecticut's little hills. That was when the road on which Negroes came to the North and to freedom ran underground. Now it has four lanes, and shrubs and spruce trees and grass are prettily planted beside it. A Negro can run on it as fast as a taxpayer. And if he has any wind left at the end of his journey he can sing hallelujah still in the A. M. E. Zion Church

"Within the sound of any such singing it seems to me that Connecticut itself might begin to contrast a tax policy designed to catch millionaires with its inability or unwillingness to provide decent living conditions for Negroes Such a conflict in state attitudes of promise to some and performance to others may not be the American dream but too often has seemed the American plan."

Things even up. In 1933, business men said to the government: "Only you can save us." Now the government says it to business men.

A fashionable resort is a place where you can live as cheaply as you do at home, provided you are a native.

Negroes Under the Nazis

THOSE of our Negro friends who are trying to make it appear that the Negro is no better treated in the United States than he would be under the Nazis, get a deserved rebuke from the editors of the Nation in the April 5 issue. Commenting upon a letter to the magazine from GEORGE S. SCHUYLER, a leader among the Negro intellectuals, the editors of this magazine which constantly champions Negro rights, say:

"What strikes us . . . is how a responsible Negro . . . can permit himself to draw such dangerously misleading parallels. If the 'American plan for Negroes' were anything like the Nazi plan. . . . MR. SCHUYLER would be in no position to complain about it in American magazines, nor would any editor dare to publish his complaint. It seems too bad that the unquestioned ill-treatment of Negroes in this country should drive men like MR. SCHUYLER to equate it with a far greater evil."

The current issue of the Crisis, organ of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, contains an editorial which also promulgates the thesis that the Nazi attitude toward the Negro is similar to the American attitude. There are various reasons for regarding the thesis as absurd, one of which could be the series of articles recently published in the Pittsburgh Courier from R. WALTER MERGUSON, a Negro who has lived in France for many years. These articles declare that more than 500,000 black troops in the French Army have been murdered by the Nazis, and that "at no time in the history of the world have so many men . . . been murdered in so short a time." We cannot vouch for this report, of course, and it sounds fantastic, on its face, but the fact that it is published in one of the foremost Negro newspapers should impress the Crisis with the thought that the total number of Negroes lynched in the United States since 1882 is 3,404. That is 3,404 too many, of course, but it is very different from the slaying of half a million in less than a year—the horrible crime which the correspondent of the Pittsburgh paper charges against the Nazis.

It is interesting to note, too, that JONATHAN DANIELS, in the April 5 Nation, quotes a prominent New Haven Negro as saying:

"I have traveled over Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, and in the backwoods of North Carolina and Virginia, and I have seen the deplorable Negro homes there. But when I came to New Haven I was amazed to see terrible homes for Negroes here, too. I inquired what Negroes pay for such 'homes,' and felt that one of the cleverest pieces of robbery that has ever been perpetrated upon a people was the rent asked for these old firetraps."

Again, we say, the fact that this happens in the North doesn't make it right. It does throw light on the reliability of those Northerners who create the impression that the only sins committed against the Negroes are committed below the Potomac. And even though such facts as these should cause some soul-searching on the part of Americans, they are far from validating the thesis that the Negroes of this country would be just as fortunately situated under a Nazi regime.

The Negro's Part

To the Editor of THE BANNER:

Mr. Claude J. Bell's letter in Wednesday's Forum was highly inspirational, complimentary and hopeful for we Negroes. It expresses the attitude of the majority of our honest, right-thinking white friends.

The Negro's future in America and America's future with the Negro, especially in these critical times, is a major issue. It is being met with facts as real as the issue itself. As evidence, the one-hour radio program Sunday afternoon in behalf of the Negro in national defense, the commendable attitude of leading, influntial white citizens toward us and our government doing it's best under existing conditions to put us in positions of trust and responsibility in the government and national defense.

We realize these things can't be done overnight, therefore we are patient and have faith in the fact that every God-fearing, righteous white man and woman is doing his or her part to give us our chance to show our loyal and devoted gratitude and appreciation by doing our bit in helping run the Government we reverence and defend the country we love.

Now, more than ever, America is using her opportunity to set an example for this bewildered world by showing how effective and constructive democracy can be even where a minority race is involved. We, as that minority race are proud to show the world how sweet is the American way of life.

JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II —Immense strides have been made by the Negro in America. Some of the biggest ones have been made in recent yars. Others are even now in process. With all the poverty, discrimination and injustice, the Negro in America is better off and lives in better premise than anywhere else in the world. Especially is he better off than he or any of the rest of us can hope to be if Hitler is permitted to put England down and to dominate this world's way of life. The average Negro responds to these facts in spite of what white agitators say and what Negro agitators want him to do. There is as much patriotism per capita among the Negro people of the South as among the white— and that, take it from Doctor Gallup, is a lot of patriotism.

APR 17 1941

AUSTIN, Tex. (ANP) — At a meeting of the Texas Legislature Monday, the house investigating committee submitted a report in which it asked that department of welfare workers be instructed that it is not necessary in interviewing Negroes to call them 'Mr. and Mrs.'

APR 17 1941

Claiming that a white relief worker had so addressed some of his clients in Fort Worth, this committee suggested that such treatment was making Negroes "uppity", and that it should be stopped. The report was tabled for further study by the legislature.

Story Plot

APR 23 1941

There's a ton or so of food for thought in a classified adv. in the Albany Herald:

"WANTED — Colored boy to teach playboy how to plow."

You would-be writers who can't think up a plot for a story, what's the matter with that?

APR 23 1941

Who is that "playboy?" Son of a farmer who'd rather drive a roadster from juke to juke than tackle a furrow?

Graduate of an agricultural college who prefers writing poetry to wielding a hoe? Young subversionist who thinks Communism has something on the ball, say what you will?

I don't know. But there's a lot of meat in that little classified adv.:

"WANTED — Colored boy to teach playboy how to plow."

APR 23 1941

George Hitt, bedridden for years from arthritis, contributes a few paragraphs to his home-town paper, the Toccoa Record. This is one of them: APR 23 1941

"Toccoa is sure growing—the other day two fellows up on the corner passing the time of day as it was too wet to plow, were watching traffic. One, after spitting tobacco juice in the gutter, turned to his neighbor and remarked, 'I'll declare, it's a gettin' more like New York ever' day!'"

All Dressed Up.

Negro boy rode up to our house the other evening to deliver a carton of cigarets. He was on a motorcycle.

APR 23 1941

I think he, and not his boss, the druggist, owns the motor bike. Because it was decorated like nothing since Solomon's temple.

It had 11 lights and three horns and brass knobs and a beaverboard windshield and mudguards and a cutout which would announce its arrival for three miles away.

I liked that. Pride of ownership. If this boy had owned a yacht he'd have dressed it up in correct style. If he'd owned a 12-cylinder roadster it would have had everything on it that could be bought—in installments.

But he didn't own a yacht or a roadster. All he had was a third-hand motorcycle. But he loved it and dressed it up. And why not?

EQUALITY WHERE?

MAY 2 - 1941

By Pearl S. Buck

We have twelve million Americans of African origin who are depressed economically and socially even though they may have the vote, and who, merely because of their race, are barred from equality with other Americans. They are not a subject people as India is—they do not live in another country across the sea. They live in this country and are a part of it, they speak our common language, they belong here. Yet how can we blame them if when we cry liberty and equality, they ask, Whose liberty? Equality, where?

Southern 'Democracy'

In these days when the United States Government is spending billions of dollars (extracted in taxes from all of the people of this country), to aid the so-called "democracies of Europe" in their resistance against Nazi and Fascist aggression and heinousness, we have the amazing anachronism of ten States of the Union petitioning, by way of an intervening procedure in a pending case, the United States Supreme Court to deny to dark-skinned American citizens their constitutional rights in the matter of accommodations on passenger trains!

These ten States are: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia—States which up to this day have had only the mere semblance of democracy and democracy's connotations of liberty and justice. These are States which for more than two hundred and fifty years held dark-skinned human beings in a ruthless slavery, depriving them not only of their liberty but also robbing them of the fruits of their endless toil, and waged a four-years' rebellion against the Government of the United States of America in a futile effort to perpetuate that slavery!

They are States which today deprive dark-skinned citizens of our so-called "democracy" of their suffrage rights, of justice in their State courts, of the right to work for a living, of the right to live in decency, and that impose on dark-skinned and loyal citizens all kinds of restrictions of their rights as citizens!

They are States whose representatives in the August Senate of the United States of America have repeatedly said, by way of filibuster, that it is all right and democratic to murder, by mob action, dark-skinned American citizens and to rob them of the enfranchisement which has cost this country so frightfully in blood and treasure!

Now these ten States brazenly enter the United States Supreme Court to intimidate its judges to decide that discriminative laws and customs of their States "were enacted for the purpose of promoting the welfare, comfort, peace, and safety of the people of both races." Ye gods!

What a diabolically preposterous proposition in this year of Our Lord 1941, and nearly 165 years since this country's democratic Declaration of Independence from the tyranny of the same Great Britain which our Government is at present straining every possible power (short of war), to save from Nazi and Fascist menace!

Will the judges in this Temple of Justice — which bears on the columnar-supported pediment above its portals the sublime legend: "Equal Justice Before the Law" — yield to the demands of these dictator States, whose representatives in the United States Congress only a short time since were vehement in denouncing any "packing" of the United States Supreme Court? Will they?

Ed Lawson Refutes Hutchins' Speech

NEW YORK, N. Y.—(SNS)—Speaking on a nation-wide network broadcast emanating from New York on Thursday night, Edward Lawson, managing editor of OPPORTUNITY Magazine, pointedly refuted the implication contained in a speech made by Dr. Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago over the same network the week before, that Negroes and members of other minority groups are not whole-heartedly behind the national defense program.

"As we struggle for our own complete emancipation from the forces of darkness and destruction, we remember that the people of Great Britain likewise struggle to maintain the freedom that they won at so great a cost," Mr. Lawson said. "And because we believe the cause of democracy is indivisible, we support them now with all our hearts."

ONE OF FIVE SPEAKERS

Mr. Lawson was one of five speakers on the program, which was especially arranged by the National Broadcasting Company Among others who spoke were Maury Maverick, Mayor of San Antonio, Texas; Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Dorothy Overlock, executive secretary of the Student Defenders of Democracy, and Beatrice Martin, of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

Mr. Lawson prefaced his remarks by saying that Negroes know, better than members of any other minority group, that a more perfect democracy can and must be built right here in America.

"But we know too," he added, "that if the fires of racial oppression and hatred which have swept over Europe with such devastating effect in the past few years ever reach the shores of this our native land, whatever hope we have for the attainment of full status here, whatever faith we hold in the promise of the future, must soon disintegrate."

PRAISES FIRST LADY

"But let us not forget," he went on, "that it was an official of the democratic United States government, and the wife of its President, who arranged for Miss Anderson to sing on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, before an audience of 75,000 Negro and white Americans. And on the evening before the President's third inauguration, a quartet of Negro singers did appear in Constitution Hall. That was democratic progress within one year."

American Negroes know fascism at first hand, Mr Lawson said, because they have seen it practiced right here in America by groups whose primary purpose was "to keep the Negro in his place"

"We are not blind to discrimination," he concluded. "We everlastingly oppose it, and we glory in our right to do so. We resent the segregated status that is so often forced upon us. We are fighting it, and glad that we can fight. We know that even in the current great defense program we are the last to be considered when a job is to be done. But we are seeking economic justice in the knowledge that our pleas will not go unheard.

"In other words, we realize that insofar as we are concerned, our American brand of democracy has its shortcomings. But we feel that even such imperfect democracy is far better than any way of life under a totalitarian regime."

The Negro And National Defense

FEB 5 1941

FLINT, Mich.—(SNS)—Much has been said about the Negro in National Defense, but few facts have been published portraying his plight. The NAACP, in its efforts to have the Negro completely integrated into every phase of the defense program, needs the aid of an enlightened public. Sunday, January 26, has been designated as a day of nation-wide meetings to present the facts from pulpits, rostrums, and in public meetings. The Association sets down in this brief manner a few of the discriminatory facts uncovered by its investigations and interviews.

THE NAVY

"After many years of experience the policy of not enlisting men of the colored race for any branch of the naval service except the messmen's branch, was adopted to meet the best interests of general ship efficiency."

C. W. Nimitz, Chief of Bureau Navy Dept., Bureau of Navigation.

Several Negro mess attendants who wrote letters complaining about the discriminatory tactics practiced against them by Navy officials were dishonorably discharged by the Navy Department.

No Negro has ever been graduated from Annapolis and only two Negroes during the past seventy years have been permitted to enter it.

FEB 5 1941

THE ARMY

"The War Department will provide training for Negro officers if proper progress of such individuals is shown." What is meant by "proper progress" is not known.

Negro volunteers are taken only for service in Negro regiments. No Negro has ever served either as an officer or as an enlisted man in the Marine Corps.

During the past thirty years one Negro has been graduated from West Point. At present there are five Negro officers in the regular army, three of them are chaplains and two are combat officers.

There are five hundred Negro officers in the Army Reserve. Up to the middle of September not one of these Reserve Officers had been called for service or training.

Negro regiments of the regular army are employed chiefly as grooms and horse attendants for officers and cadets at West Point or various forts.

THE AIR CORPS

Typical letters sent to Negro applicants for the Air Corps are as follows:

"Applications from colored persons for flying cadet appointments or for enlistment in the Air Corps are not being accepted."

"Your interest in flying is appreciated and your application has been recorded for further consideration in the event facilities become available for training of colored flying cadet officers."

Last year the airport at Glenview, Ill., was designated as a training spot for Negroes in the Army Air Corps, but not a single Negro has been enlisted in the Army Air Corps and sent to Glenview for this training. A few Negro students have been given the most elementary training in aviation by the Civilian Aeronautics Board at five Negro colleges but none has been permitted to enlist for further training in the air corps.

SELECTIVE SERVICE

"The Act says there is to be no discrimination. But the Act also says that no man may come into the Army who is not acceptable to the Army. What good will it do us to take men to an induction place if the Army will not take them—I regret this state, but unfortunately, the Army gets the final say. What we are doing of course, is simply transferring discrimination from everyday life into the Army. Men who make up the Army staff have the same ideas as they did before they went into the Army."

General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Administration.

NATIONAL DEFENSE JOBS

Very little evidence is at hand to prove that Negroes are being given jobs either in army arsenals or in the thousands of industrial plants which have been given large contracts for National Defense.

Negro carpenters are being refused employment on construction projects now going forward at Fort Dix, N. J., Ft. Riley, Kan., and Ft. Lee, Va., and Negro skilled and unskilled workers are barred from working at the United States government air fields now under construction in three cities in Florida.

Very acute is the situation in the Boeing Aircraft Plant in Seattle, Wash., where it was recently revealed that a large number of Nazi Bundists are not only employed but occupy strategic positions in the plant, while Negroes, whatever their qualifications, are denied jobs in the plant because of the attitude of the plant management.

Westinghouse has government contracts for radio apparatus totaling over eight million dollars. In its Baltimore plant, 800 persons are employed, but of this normally three are Negroes. They are laborers and porters, No skilled Negroes are hired. But there is no ban on the employment of Negroes, according to the company.

The Virginia Engineering Company at Norfolk has contracts for more than thirteen million dollars. It employs 1,500 persons, of which perhaps 500 are Negroes. All of them are unskilled laborers.

Glenn R. Martin and Company in Baltimore, employs more than 10,000 workers, most of them on government orders, but has never employed a Negro.

Negroes have been turned away from the Colt Arms Company, of Hartford, Conn., with the assertion, "We are not hiring any Negroes today."

In Cleveland, neither General Motors nor the White Motor Company, both of which are working on government contracts, employs Negroes.

These facts can be multiplied many, many times. The Association merely lists here a few examples of the more flagrant instances of discrimination and segregation in the nation's defense program.

N. B.—Branches may make additional copies of the memorandum for complete community distribution.

A Challenge to Mississippi

SPEAKING ON the National Defense program at Lanier High school last Thursday night, Major Campbell Johnson, U. S. Army, Executive Assistant to the Director of Selective Service (Draft), Washington, D. C., in words spoken without rancor or passion, made a great and significant challenge to the State of Mississippi.

After pointing to the equal division of the white and colored people of the state, a situation existing only in the State of Mississippi, he said, that Mississippi could lead the way, and show to America and the world a realistic demonstration of the working of the democratic ideals and principles which the nation is now preparing to defend by giving a larger share of the jobs and opportunities being created by the National Defense and Industrial preparedness program to its Negro citizens.

Let no person raise the question of social equality here, because Major Johnson's challenge was made in his firm belief that what he was talking about can be effected to the great moral and spiritual good of Mississippi and of the whole nation within the framework of the philosophy of the great Negro educator Booker T. Washington printed at the top of this page.

Major Johnson has made his challenge. only Mississippi can answer.

Chairman Is Selected For Service Unit

Mrs. Warren King will head the Service Bureau of Greenville Girl Scout organization during the present year, having been appointed chairman of that bureau by Mrs. Jack Keys, chairman of the program committee.

A number of new activities are being lined up for the service bureau. The purpose of this work is to serve organizations in the city and it is felt that when the new activities get under way, residents of the city will become increasingly conscious of the work which is being done by Girl Scouts in the city.

Because there are many things, often discarded in the home that would be of use to others, the beginning of 1941 finds the Scouts particularly interested in collecting certain articles.

Bundles for Britain need shoes to send to England, especially children's and women's shoes, so the girls will undertake collecting these. Brownie Scouts are being asked to collect tinfoil for Shrine hospital, as well as newspapers, along with their big sisters the Scouts, for the County Public health department. Some shut-ins can use cloth scraps to make quilts, and the ends of men's ties to make cushions, so the Scouts will be glad to collect these and distribute them to the places requested. Magazines will be collected and distributed to the jail, county home, negro and charity wards in the hospitals. Until the girls are organized to make these collections, if anyone has a supply which they would like to have called for, please telephone the Scout office, 671, or Mrs. King, 4538.

Colored Draftee Named By Warren Draft Board

The Warren county draft board has selected Herman Lee Shockley as the colored draftee for the second call for persons to undergo military training for one year under the national selective service act.

Richard Etta Solomon has been selected as Shockley's alternate, who will go in his stead in the event illness prevents, or in the event Shockley is rejected for physical disability after arriving at camp for examination.

The selection of Shockley makes two from the colored race called to service from Warren county. Thirteen white men are now in camp from this county, making a ratio of 13 to 2 between the two races at the present time.

Fixing the Blame

Editor The Telegraph:

Please publish the following open letter to Collier's Weekly:

There are plenty of intelligent white people in Georgia, and intelligent Negroes, too [which you fail to mention] — more than plenty to see through the despicable propaganda machine of The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal in their campaigns to discredit Gov. Eugene Talmadge in the state of Georgia.

You and 47 states are tragically misguided in believing whatever these two newspapers report as the true happenings in this state.

It embarrassed me and others of the intelligent white people of Georgia to see Collier's stick her neck out so far — the Collier's which is usually so erudite and so sure.

But, in a way you don't know of your open letter was 98 per cent correct. Your error lies in placing the dirty work [and it was not very gentlemanly the way you did it] at the feet of Talmadge. It is not Governor Talmadge who is our shame. Our shame is the "great and noble" newspapers, The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal. They are responsible for putting on the wires the propaganda, the lies, which have caused you to believe of us the things you believe.

If Governor Talmadge is "an unattractive little sourpuss who is making us look foolish" it is The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal who have made him the goat and made him appear to you that way.

Dr. Pittman and Dean Cocking were fired for more reasons than "race equality." C. E. Gregory of The Journal dug that one up. In Georgia we, to date, as a majority believe that boss still has the right to hire and fire. No great inhuman injustice was done the two gentlemen. They simply lost out, that's all. And in refusing to accept defeat gracefully have brought much disfavor on Georgia and her educational system.

You perhaps haven't been told by your esteemed informers—nor has the rest of the United States which depends on reports off Atlanta wires—how Talmadge has paid teachers their back salaries up to the last dime [some three and four years overdue]. Nor did they tell you of the dummy "equalization fund" unearthed by the new "Talmadge controlled" board of education at their first meeting in July. Had you heard about that? Have you read any of the books banned from school libraries? No, you believe your informers.

The present Georgia board of regents and the Georgia board of education are to you a group of "jelly fish and swamp rabbits controlled by a sourpuss." You believe it, for the Atlanta Goebbels told you so.

"Sourpuss" here in Georgia is a name we give a poor loser who keeps crying long after the spanking has ended. But you are all mixed up. Talamdge didn't lose. He won. He didn't get spanked. He did the spanking. And Talmadge isn't crying. He's laughing.

How the intelligent white people of Georgia are laughing at Collier's for swallowing hook, line and sinker the Atlanta Goebbels' bait!

You are so right, though. You should feel sorry for Georgia. Her biggest city, Atlanta, hasn't a free press any more.

By MERCER COOK

When colored people are referred to as "d——" and "p——" by prejudiced whites who never knew any better, the situation is bad enough. But that they should be so attacked by a man who has sought a haven in this country from Nazi persecution, seems almost incredible.

In the February issue of Harpers Magazine, a German refugee who writes under the name of E. B. Ashton has published a story called "Entente Cordiale." It is a tale of two young refugees, one English and the other French, who have come to live with an American family.

The two boys detest each other; the English lad considers the Frenchmen "quitters" and "Nazis," while the French youth feels that the British left their allies in the lurch.

Fear "Black Menace"

One day, however, they are waiting in a parked car on a side street in Harlem. Some colored children crowd around the automobile and an argument ensues. In the face of this supposed "black menace," the two refugees become reconciled.

More important, therefore, than the disparaging appellations which Mr. Ashton applies to the young Harlemites is the damnable philosphy that white men—whether they be English, French, Americans, or Nazis—must form a solid front before the "rising tide of color."

Perhaps this was not the idea which Mr. Ashton meant to convey, but it is certainly implied in his story.

It is truly amazing how quickly some refugees pick up American prejudices and forget that they, too, were once members of persecuted minority!

A newspaper account telling about a Nazi decree requiring the registration of all Jews in Holland should furnish food for thought to the people of this country who mistreat minority groups, particularly the Negroes in America. The news story reads in part:

JAN 1 7 1941

"All Jews must register within six weeks in an official 'list of populations' under a decree issued by the German commissioner for The Netherlands. Persons having only one Jewish grandparent will be classified as Jews, the decree held, and a grandparent who belonged to a Jewish congregation will be regarded as a full-blooded Jew. Failure to register will be punishable by fines and imprisonment up to five years. At Amsterdam, where there are more Jews than in any other Netherlands city, the registration period will be extended to 12 weeks."

The purpose of the listing is in order that no Jew wil escape the discrimination and mistreatment that will be placed upon this group by the Nazis.

In America the Negroes have a similar classification That is, some states hold that you are a "Negro" if there is one-sixteenth of Negro blood in your veins. We see little difference, if any, between the Fascists in Europe and the Fascists in America when it come to racial prejudices and racial discriminations which affect the Negroes. Those who are ready to condemn the Nazi way should look about themselves and see what is being done in their own front yards.

A Challenge to Mississippi

SPEAKING ON the National Defense program at Lanier High school last Thursday night, Major Campbell Johnson, U. S. Army, Executive Assistant to the Director of Selective Service (Draft), Washington, D. C., in words spoken without rancor or passion, made a great and significant challenge to the State of Mississippi.

After pointing to the equal division of the white and colored people of the state, a situation existing only in the State of Mississippi, he said, that Mississippi could lead the way, and show to America and the world a realistic demonstration of the working of the democratic ideals and principles which the nation is now preparing to defend by giving a larger share of the jobs and opportunities being created by the National Defense and Industrial preparedness program to its Negro citizens.

Let no person raise the question of social equality here, because Major Johnson's challenge was made in his firm belief that what he was talking about can be effected to the great moral and spiritual good of Mississippi and of the whole nation within the framework of the philosophy of the great Negro educator Booker T. Washington printed at the top of this page.

Major Johnson has made his challenge, only Mississippi can answer.

Chairman Is Selected For Service Unit

Mrs. Warren King will head the Service Bureau of Greenville Girl Scout organization during the present year, having been appointed chairman of that bureau by Mrs. Jack Keys, chairman of the program committee.

A number of new activities are being lined up for the service bureau. The purpose of this work is to serve organizations in the city and it is felt that when the new activities get under way, residents of the city will become increasingly conscious of the work which is being done by Girl Scouts in the city.

Because there are many things, often discarded in the home that would be of use to others, the beginning of 1941 finds the Scouts particularly interested in collecting certain articles.

Bundles for Britain need shoes to send to England, especially children's and women's shoes, so the girls will undertake collecting these. Brownie Scouts are being asked to collect tinfoil for Shrine hospital, as well as newspapers, along with their big sisters the Scouts, for the County Public health department. Some shut-ins can use cloth scraps to make quilts, and the ends of men's ties to make cushions, so the Scouts will be glad to collect these and distribute them to the places requested. Magazines will be collected and distributed to the jail, county home, negro and charity wards in the hospitals. Until the girls are organized to make these collections, if anyone has a supply which they would like to have called for, please telephone the Scout office, 671, or Mrs. King, 4538.

Colored Draftee Named By Warren Draft Board

The Warren county draft board has selected Herman Lee Shockley as the colored draftee for the second call for persons to undergo military training for one year under the national selective service act.

Richard Etta Solomon has been selected as Shockley's alternate, who will go in his stead in the event illness prevents, or in the event Shockley is rejected for physical disability after arriving at camp for examination.

The selection of Shockley makes two from the colored race called to service from Warren county. Thirteen white men are now in camp from this county, making a ratio of 13 to 2 between the two races at the present time.

DON'T INSULT JEWS

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

MORE STRENGTH IN NUMBERS OF DOLLARS THAN NUMBERS OF PEOPLE

WHEN Colonel Lindbergh stated a few days ago that the Roosevelt administration, the British and the Jews were seeking to catapault this nation into war, he caused a tirade of criticism to be unleashed against him. What he said about the British and the Administration was not the provoking issue, but because the "Lone Eagle" had the brazen effrontery and the bold audacity to specify the Jews, he stirred up a hornet's nest. Lindbergh is now being bitterly reviled, severely castigated and held up to the world by pulpit, public forum and press in opprobium and contempt. What he had previously enunciated about "white supremacy," "white ramparts," and "white fronts" elicited no widespread disapproval while his contemptous disregard for the many millions of colored Americans aroused little indignation. We outnumber the Jews in this country almost four to one, then, why do our interests carry so little weight and why is such little respect given for our tender consideration?

Mr. Bibb

WE ARE INSULTED WITH IMPUNITY

While we outnumber the Jews in this country by more than four to one, they outnumber us in inconceivable proportion in wealth. True enough, there is STRENGTH in numbers, but there is also unlimited POWER in money. We have a great number of people, while the Jews carry far more weight than ours. Gentiles can say anything they want to about us with impunity and without fear of reprisal. They cannot do that to the Jews.

THE Jews have power. Wendell Willkie, the "barefoot" boy from Indiana, who, in his Hoosier drawl, once said: "Money is power," is now objecting to the introduction of racial issues in the Movie Propaganda Probe. He has said nothing since his ill-fated Presidential campaign against our pathetic plight in the Army, Navy and war-time industries. He has taken a stand for the Jews for they have wealth and money. Such is a glowing tribute to the "almighty dollar."

WE ARE A WASTREL PEOPLE

Colored people are now "blowing in" almost everything that they earn in peacock struting. In the black belts, they have become the constituents of "Cafe Society." They guzzle their beer, sip their cocktails and gulp their liquor in every "friendly tavern" in the land. Indeed, they are "swanky" in their social affairs, lavish in their "entertaining," and prodigal in wasting their substance. They have no wealth and therefore can be insulted and booted without sympathy or concern. Lamentable and depressing, indeed, is the jolting realization that we are doing with the returns from new-found jobs exactly as we did in the past. The colored people in America have wasted the fortunes that they earned in the hotels, "on the road," and with the "private families." We have been a wanton, wastrel people, diametrically different from the Jews.

WE fully appreciate that the Jews are members of the white race, and that the economic barriers that bar us do not hinder them. But we also know that when four and a half million people who are reviled because of history and religion can garner such wealth and marshal such tremendous power, that indeed is a terrible reflection upon the colored people with millions more. In money, there is power. The long-range program for the American colored man must be the acquisition of wealth. Frugality, rigid economy, and careful budgeting will aid with what we are already receiving and will lay the foundation for building up. The Jewish people will be driven to help by just such people as Lindbergh, but they too must be clear in their thinking.

WE MUST HAVE MONEY

The Jewish people should not be beguiled and lulled into false security by the public condemnation of Colonel Lindbergh's dictum. They will be compelled to face the grim reality that there is a rising tide of anti-Semitism in America, and that there are countless thousands who say under their breath that Hitler is right, even though they dare not express their inner thoughts. They must be realistic enough in their thinking to know that bigotry, intolerance and hypocrisy are the tools of prejudice and racial animosities. The hatred for them, while it may seem dormant, is seething throughout this land. It is checked in eruption only by the might and power of money. WE MUST HAVE IT to check the hatreds against us.

D.C. Whites Form Volunteer Corps Aimed at Negroes

WASHINGTON. Sept. 25 — (ANP)— Nearby Virginia through its governor, James H. Price has officially disapproved the organization in Fairfax county, adjacent to the district, of a so-called volunteer police force whose members carry pickax handles to keep Washington refugees moving "in event of a bombing or race riot at the capital."

With a white membership, the group was recently organized and had attempted to enlist memberships from the farmers and business men in the county.

Gov. Price declared the organization unnecessary and potentially dangerous, further stating that in the event the regular police and enforcement officers needed supplementing, it should come from appropriate public agencies.

The "commander" of the group states that he has about 200 white men in various units in towns near Washington, and he thought the courts could be persuaded to grant authority for the organization known as the "White Hands," to carry firearms.

The Public Forum

The President has submitted to the Office of Education a request for the study of plans to originate public assemblies by developing a nation-wide program in which the people should be encouraged to gather freely in public assemblies together and discuss their common problems.

It is acknowledged that the plan works out an expression of the traditional independence and freedom of our public schools system. And that this freedom of action must be preserved because only through this sort of freedom can the nation expect that the judgment of the people will be soundly based upon a clear understanding of the rights of the other man and their verdict be based upon a just and fair consideration of the law and the evidence to sustain these rights.

It is desired that this program should make provision for integrating the project with that of the public schools and should become a factual part of the work of those schools with the idea that the people can be encouraged to assemble in such public places and freely discuss their local problems as a part of their education for citizenship.

Therefore this plan, as proposed by the President, is recognized to work out an expression of the traditional independence and freedom of our public school system through its preservation of that freedom of action only through which can this nation expect the judgment of its people to be soundly based, and it must be confessed with greater emphasis that such forums, if not interrupted by thoughtless actions or destroyed by insidious spirits, will do much toward giving the other races a much broader understanding of the life and times of our own race.

Nor, if its effectiveness is to be far reaching, should these forums be limited to implication in the public school system only, but should rather become a component part of a general civic system which should be as much a part of citizenship as the privilege of becoming an elector.

It would work out so well in giving all peoples a better acquaintance with their neighbors, and probably result in minimizing the friction which the present situation seems to suffer from, and bring about a delightful situation in which all races in this country would enjoy that right of public assembly and discussion which now seems to be claimed by a select few.

Having still in mind the result of an attempt of some of our race at Elaine, Arkansas, to assemble publicly for the very purpose, when hundreds were willed for attempting to discuss their forlorn situation, our race is awaiting with anxiety for the development of some sort of a plan which will gradually unfold that freedom of assembly and that freedom of speech as can be most effectively adapted to this especial situation in the South.

BRITISH HISTORIAN ASSAILS COLOR BAR

(By Our London Correspondent)

LONDON (censored) Sept. 25—"When the historian of the future looks for examples of the worst result of the capitalist system of society, where avarice allied with racial pride and domination showed least signs of shame, where the common people were most despised and poorest, where the law was least regarded and loyalty least possible, he will point to South Africa and Kenya."

In these words, Dr. Norman Leys, the English Colonial authority sums up the race and color problem under British Colonial administration in Africa.

Dr. Leys, a former government medical officer in East Africa, is the author of several books dealing with the treatment of the native races in Kenya colony, the British possession next door to Abyssinia.

In a book published here this week, entitled: "The Color Bar In East Africa," Dr. Leys says that in East Africa the British insures the education of all white children at the cost of L.23 per head per annum. Such education is provided in well-equipped school buildings, board free up to university standard. The black children, however, receive no free education. African parents must pay fees out of an average annual income of L.3.

Education for natives finishes at Standard VI. The average cost to the government is L.6 per child per annum!

The majority of African children attend schools conducted by missionaries where the chief subject taught is religion. The majority of African graduates from such schools, reach a standard of education English children of ten and under receive. Dr. Leys assert that the black children who do not reach standard III frequently forget to read, write and count after leaving school.

Lindbergh is Leaning

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH put a strange quirk in the case of the non-interventionists when he told the nation that the Jews were one of the groups interested in catapulting this country into war. He has just about split that movement in two and has embarrassed a number of people who sincerely believe that our foreign policy is not designated to establish or maintain peace.

The nation now knows that Lindbergh is a dangerous man. He is dangerous because he has anti-semetic leanings that bespeak his fascist sympathies. His sincerity toward keeping this country out of war as an end in itself cannot be subjected to a test without revealing a deceptive and manifestly false attitude.

If the cause of the isolationists must go on it must be without the flyer who scorned the Negro that found his dead child and whose decorations from the German government is paying to fascist tendencies good dividends.

He is sowing seeds of hate. He is advocating the things that America hopes to avoid. He is bringing to our shores the very ideologies that we are preparing to combat He is the symbol of intolerance.

Experience has shown that it is probably a good thing to have a non-interventionist movement to guard our steps toward entering the European conflict. That movement cannot benefit by any speeches or support from Lindbergh. He will only disgrace its cause and divert it to a tool for the totalitarian influence that is rapidly attracting the attention of a good many people in this country.

Lindbergh is not only leaning toward fascism but he is, from all appearances, a leader of fascism in America.

Negro Rights and The Appeasers

OCT 3 1941

• J. Finley Wilson, leader of the Elks, largest Negro fraternal organization in the country, has made a stirring condemnation of Charles Lindbergh for his fascist attack upon the Jewish people.

The Negro fraternal leader declared that Lindbergh's anti-Semitism proves him to be an "enemy of all oppressed people, including our own colored people who are the farthest down."

While assailing discrimination against the Negro and upholding assistance to all nations fighting Hitlerism, Mr. Wilson said: "I cannot, at a time like this, do anything that will give aid and comfort to the twin brutes of Europe: Hitler and Mussolini, by dropping a monkey wrench into the President's machinery for national defense."

Mr. Wilson's statement focuses attention upon the sentiment of the Negro people, their hatred of Hitlerism and appeasement, their desire that jim-crowism be abolished that they may contribute fully to their country's security.

Pres. Roosevelt has issued executive orders against job discrimination in industry and government service. But too little has been done to give them effect. Moreover, jim-crowism is still rife in the armed forces. Employers who practice discrimination must be dealt with as sabotaging defense.

The failure to enact the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax bills, the failure to take appropriate action with reference to such tinhorn Hitlers as Gov. Talmadge amount to concessions to the appeasers. The America First outfit already makes demagogic use of these concessions in order to attack national unity against Hitler. The elimination of racial discrimination from defense and our national life is an inseparable part of the fight against Hitler and his friends in the United States.

Marshall Field Insults Negroes

Marshall Field and company carried an advertisement in the Chicago Tribune Tuesday whose only excuse for being was that it held the colored race up to scorn and ridicule and was calculated to degrade it in the eyes of that store's wealthy customers and the Tribune readers.

The ad was for women's shoes. It showed a caricature of a colored person with a black face and white lips that portrayed the Uncle Tommish look and in the role of a shoe shine boy.

Except for to foster prejudice and racial intolerance, which that store has a reputation for doing, the picture of the Negro bootblack was just about as appropriate for the ad as a head-lettuce is in a malted milk.

Marshall Field and company is said to have manifested its intolerance through the years by its anti-Negro tactics toward colored patrons. It does not have to stoop to this type of race-baiting, underhand, kotowing, caricaturizing to carry on its alleged poisonous propaganda.

Besides, the "World's Greatest Newspaper" should have been too big to have run the advertisement.

"REFORM SCHOOL" TERM FAILED WITH TALMADGE

Editor, Constitution: Not so long ago the people of Georgia sent Eugene Talmadge to political reform school for a period of four years and when he was running for Governor last year, many of his ardent supporters claimed the "reformatory" had done its work and that Gene was a changed man. They said he would be content to be just a good Governor and would not be meddling in matters that did not concern his office but, true to the old proverb, the leopard cannot "change its spots," Mr. Talmadge is again at his old tricks of trying to boss everything and everybody.

It seems now that he has realized some of his doings is not as good politics as he had thought and is trying to get back in the good graces of the people by announcing that he is going to educate every boy and girl in Georgia, black and white. Yes, the Governor has found the plank for his platform on which to again ride into office, but if the Governor had eyes of clear vision, he would discover there is a number of knot holes in his newly found plank. Even his friends know he does not mean what he is saying. One of them told the writer the Governor was just "joking" and that he really is not going to try to educate all of the boys and girls of the state.

We are strongly of the opinion our friend is correct and therefore the Governor's platform next year is going to be a "joke." Yes, a huge joke. But the governorship of Georgia is no joke and when voting time again rolls around, as it surely will, we believe the people will not be content merely to send him back to "reform school" but will put political shackles on him and send him back to Sugar creek for the balance of his "natural life."

OUR NATIONAL CULTURE

MAR 22 1941

The Negro's part in the development of our national culture has often been minimized or treated in a comic vein. This is due in part to peculiar economic circumstances that have cast the Negro in the Amos N' Andy role, and in part to a systematic distortion of historical facts by white historians.

This ignorance of the fundamental cultural contributions of the American black man is not only greatly responsible for unfortunate misgivings but also for much of the prejudice and segregation which plague the Negro today.

The announcement given out this week by United States Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker, of a series of educational radio programs designed to portray the role Negroes have played in American education, art, science and industry, is indeed very encouraging news. MAR 22 1941

What is still more encouraging is the fact that the radio series, financed by a Rosenwald Foundation grant, is being prepared under the supervision of one of the ablest scholars in the field of Negro education—Dr. Ambrose Caliver, former dean at Fisk university. Were such an undertaking left either in incompetent hands or to unscrupulous commentators, its basic purpose would be defeated.

We agree with the U. S. Commissioner of Education when he said that this "is a most important undertaking of the U. S. office of education in behalf of all Negroes who have had a part in the development of our national culture." MAR 22 1941

Commenting further on this new venture, Dr. Studebaker said:

"We shall do our utmost to report accurate and full information about constructive activities and accomplishments of Negroes in this radio series.

"Much of this information is not available in textbooks and in general reading matter, yet it is the type of information that could help to improve race relations and aid in solving many problems of majority and minority groups."

If this program is properly carried out—we entertain no doubt on that score—it should advance by more than one peg the national unity which has been prayed for with such fervency and which is undeniably essential to the defense of America in the critical days that lie ahead.

HUTCHINS TELLS AMERICA'S LOSS IF WE GO TO WAR

MAR 31 1941

Sees Peril to Liberty in Participation.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

The American people are even more overwhelmingly against our entrance into the war than they were a year ago, Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, declared yesterday in an address which was broadcast over W-G-N and the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system.

He spoke at the regular Sunday morning service in Rockefeller Memorial chapel on the university campus.

Dr. Hutchins' speech was his second warning to the nation against "suicide" by drifting into war. Shortly before the passage of the so-called lease-lend bill he broke his eight years silence on other than educational subjects to appeal for the bill's defeat. Yesterday's address was entitled, "The Proposition Is Peace."

Power Not Yet Lost.

Passage of the lend-lease bill, he asserted yesterday, conferred no mandate upon President Roosevelt to take this country into war. But he pointed out that the President now calls for "total victory" over "the enemy." In view of the President's repeated pledges to keep out of war, perhaps these remarks were for foreign consumption, Dr. Hutchins assumed.

We stand on the brink of war, but we have not lost the power to decide against it, he said. There is time for a last "look around" before we plunge into the abyss.

If Roosevelt believes that the people want war, he is mistaken, Dr. Hutchins said. The election did not give the people a chance to express themselves on the issue of war or peace, because both parties and both Presidential candidates declared for peace, he reminded his hearers.

Cites Showing by Poll.

The Gallup poll showed 10 days ago that 83 per cent of the people would vote to stay out of the war—a higher percentage than a year ago. On the other hand, if the President's most recent words are accepted at their face value we should fight now, Dr. Hutchins said.

There is no basis for hoping that the Axis will go down in total defeat without complete American participation in the overseas conflict, he warned. MAR 31 1941

"The country wants to defend itself, aid Britain, and stay out of war," Dr. Hutchins said. "We have been told over and over again that we could do just that.

No Mandate for War.

"During the hearings and debates on the lease-lend bill, man after man announced that this was a bill to keep the country out of war. Mr. Willkie said that was why he was for it. Senator George, who led the fight for the bill, said that was why he was for it.

"The passage of this bill gave the President no mandate for war. The people want peace.

"If we go to war, what are we going to war for? Mr. Roosevelt tells us we are to save 'the democracies.' The democracies are, presumably, England, China, Greece, and possibly Turkey.

Lists the Dictatorships.

"Turkey is a dictatorship. Greece is a dictatorship. China is a dictatorship. As to England, in 1928 Mr. Anthony Eden, now foreign secretary, speaking in behalf of a bill extending the suffrage, felt it necessary to say to the house of commons, 'We have not got democratic government in this country today; we never have had it and I venture to suggest to the members opposite that we shall never have it. What we have done, in all the progress of reform and evolution of politics, is to broaden the basis of our oligarchy.'

"There can be no doubt that the people of this country prefer the government of Britain to the government of its allies or its enemies. Britain is a constitutional state and has been the inspiration of many constitutional states. We prefer the governments of China, Greece, and Turkey to those of the axis. MAR 31 1941

"But we cannot use the word democracy to describe every country that is or may be at war with the axis. If Russia is attacked by Germany, will she be welcomed into the choir of the democracies?

"If we go to war, what are we going to war for? The British propose to defeat the axis. What they propose to do then they do not say. They have repeatedly refused to say. Yet the United States is entitled to know. MAR 31 1941

"Are we to rush to arms every time the British empire is in danger? If so, we are entitled to know what the future policy of the British empire is to be. Are we to put down every tyrant that arises in Europe? If so, we are entitled to know what is to be done to keep each tyrant from being worse than the last.

Asks What Roosevelt Means.

"If we go to war, what are we going to war for? The only specific statement the President has made on the course we are to pursue after the war is found in two sentences in his last speech. He said, 'We believe that any nationality, no matter how small, has the inherent right to its own nationhood.' To the same effect he said, 'There never has been, there isn't now, and there never will be any race of people fit to serve as masters over their fellow men.'

"Do these statements imply the restoration of prewar boundaries in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Memel, Danzig, Poland, France, China, and Rumania? Is this undertaking to be world-wide? If so, how do we induce Russia to restore the prewar boundaries of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Finland, and Poland?

Boundaries Fall Apart.

"If we succeed in reëstablishing these boundaries, how do we know they will last? The boundaries we helped lay down the last time fell apart in 20 years. And we tried to lay them down on the same principle that the President proposes now: The principle of self-determination.

"And what do we do about the countries which were victims of aggression before 1939? What do we do about Hong Kong, the Malay States, the Dutch East Indies, French Indo-China, Africa, and, above all, India?

"If there never has been, isn't now, and never will be any race of people fit to serve as masters over their fellow men, how can we tolerate the mastery of the white race over our brown, yellow, and black fellow men thruout the world?

The Four Freedoms.

"If we go to war, what are we going to war for? We are stirred, but not enlightened, by the great phrase—the four freedoms—which the President has used as the general statement of our aim. Freedom of worship, freedom of speech, freedom from want, and freedom from fear—if we go to war, we go to establish these four freedoms everywhere.

"The President cannot literally mean that we are to fight on till the four freedoms ring everywhere. If we are to be responsible for the four freedoms everywhere, we must force the four freedoms upon people who might prefer to do without them rather than accept them from the armed missionaries of the United States. MAR 31 1941

"This new imperialism, this revised conception of the white man's burden, this modern version of America's manifest destiny, is a repudiation of the Presidential teaching that there never has been, isn't now, and never will be any race of people fit to serve as masters over their fellow men.

Other Perils for Freedom.

"Of course, we must extend the four freedoms to our 'allies' as well as to our 'enemies.' We must see to it that British possessions thruout the world have them. The hopes held out to India during the last war, disappointed after it, and now held out again, must be fulfilled. China, Greece, and Turkey must reform, too. In the Latin-American countries we shall have no easy task. Few of them have the four freedoms now. From Mexico to Patagonia we must send our legions to convert our good neighbors by force of arms.

"The President cannot mean this, for it is a program of perpetual war, war in Latin-America, war in the far east, war in the South seas, and even war with Britain.

The Steps After War.

"Mr. Roosevelt must mean that by defeating the axis we shall rid the world of those governments at present most aggressive in their attack on the four freedoms. During or after the war, we shall have to figure out the next steps: How to establish and maintain governments that believe in the four freedoms. The first step is war. Here, then, is the real issue. Is the path to war the path to freedom?

"Total war for total victory against totalitarian states can best be conducted by totalitarian states. The reason is simple. A totalitarian state will be more effective in war than any other kind of state.

"A democratic state is organized for the happiness of its citizens. But their happiness cannot be considered in total war. Every one of them must become a cog in the military machine. If the United States is to proceed thru total war to total victory over totalitarian states, it must become totalitarian, too.

What We Want—And Get.

"Is total war, then, the path to freedom? We seek freedom from want, and we impoverish ourselves. We seek freedom from fear, and we terrorize ourselves. We seek freedom of worship and freedom of speech, and we suppress them.

"And when total victory has been won, will the totalitarian administration end? We may find a clew in England. A responsible member of the British cabinet, Sir Archibald Sinclair, publicly supports a proposal that there shall be no elections in England for three years after the war. The reason is clear. Poverty and disillusionment will make democracy dangerous. MAR 31 1941

"What will be America's fate after a long, hard, and bloody war? In times of peace we have had 10 million unemployed; we shall have at least that many again.

No Resources for Butter.

"We shall have an enormous debt. Repudiation and inflation may rid us of that—and at the same time of the middle class. Having exhausted our resources in getting guns, we shall have none for butter, houses, relief, social security, or education.

"We shall have want and fear, and may have the kind of freedom proclaimed by one of Napoleon's marshals to the German towns. He said, 'My friends, I bring you perfect liberty. But be prudent. I shoot the first man who stirs.'

"Lord Halifax on Tuesday said that Hitler could never invade England. If he can never invade England, he can never conquer the Western Hemisphere. We in America have a chance to save democracy if we build our defenses and stay at peace. If we enter upon total war to total victory, we shall lose that chance, even if we win the victory."

The War on Capitalism.

Dr. Hutchins warned that there are modern American nihilists who want war for its catastrophe, because they believe that then capitalism will be destroyed.

"I think it fairly certain that capitalism will not survive American participation in this war," the educator prophesied. "And since it is the vehicle of the materialism that has brought us to our present pass, I am not altogether sure that it deserves to. But experience after the last war in Germany, Italy, and Russia does not suggest that catastrophe is the road to something better.

"The trouble with the doctrine of progress thru catastrophe is that you can be sure of the catastrophe, but not of the progress. So of war as the path to freedom. You can be certain of the war. The freedom is another matter. MAR 31 1941

How Freedoms Are Lost.

"If we enter this war, we shall lose what we have of the four freedoms. We shall lose the hope of realizing them. What we have, in this country, is hope. War, for this country, is a counsel of despair. It is a confession of failure. It is national suicide.

"We have far surpassed most other nations in our advance toward the four freedoms. We and we alone have the hope of realizing them. We must bravely and hopefully face the task of realizing them. We must show the world a nation which practices the four freedoms. This is America's destiny."

Dr. Hutchins, who served overseas in the world war, asserted that there is no reason for the belief that a wise peace will follow the present conflict.

Fear and Ignorance in Treaties.

"Fear and ignorance wrote the last peace," he said. "The fear of the French and British, the ignorance of all the nations. From this fear and ignorance sprang a peace that made this war inevitable. There is no less fear, and certainly no less ignorance, today."

We must be childishly naïve to suppose that our national ills will disappear if the Nazis are overthrown and the British empire preserved, he asserted. MAR 31 1941

"If we go to war, and preserve the British empire, and crush the Germans, our fundamental problems will remain," he said. "We do not face our fundamental problems by going to war; we evade them. We do not make a just and lasting peace by writing into another treaty the fear, ignorance, and confusion that have marred our efforts to build a democratic community at home. If we would change the face of the earth we must first change our own hearts.

The Purpose of Society.

"It is our task to work out a new order in America, not, like Hitler's, based on slavery and degradation, but based on the premise that society exists to promote the happiness of its members and that happiness consists in the development of the highest powers of men.

"The good life and the just society —not the luxurious life or the powerful state—these are the goals toward which America must strive.

"It is America's destiny to reach these goals. It is her duty to the world to struggle toward them. The war to which humanity calls America is the war against poverty, disease, ignorance, and injustice. We must win this war in America now.

"The Proposition Is Peace."

"To win this war we must have peace. Edmund Burke said to the house of commons. 'Judging of what you are by what you ought to be, I persuaded myself that you would not reject a reasonable proposition because it had nothing but its reason to recommend it. The proposition is peace.' MAR 31 1941

"The proposition has nothing but its reason to recommend it. The war to total victory over poverty, disease, ignorance, and injustice has none of the glamor and draws few of the cheers that accompany a war of mutual extermination.

"But tho tyrants may be put down, tyranny cannot be destroyed by airplanes and tanks. Tyranny can be destroyed only by creating a civilization in which people will not suffer so much that they will trade their liberties for the pitiful security which the tyrant offers. MAR 31 1941

Tells America's Task.

"The war to create this civilization is our war. We must take advantage of every day we have left to build a democracy which will command the faith of our people, and which, by the light of its example, will restore the democratic faith to the people of the world.

"America has been called the arsenal of democracy. It has been called the larder of democracy. Let us make it the home of democracy. This is America's destiny."

The Nation's First Line Defense

APR 19 1941

A satisfied and grateful people—feeling that they have received in fullness the benefit and protection of the country can be depended upon as loyal patriots.

It has been shown conclusively in the mechanized system of warfare, nations must look to the ends of training armies to meet the ends of technical operation of modern equipment. The powerful weapon designed in keeping with an electrical age calls for trained minds and hands. No longer the drilling of men on the field, teaching them a few signs and commands comprise the training of soldiers.

Therefore it will be seen that the nation's first line of defense is the fundamental training of the individual.

A survey of many of our training camps for soldiers would indicate that we have neglected the basic foundation of our whole process. We find in large numbers men without sufficient educational qualification to take up the technical training necessary of the mastery of modernized and mechanized fighting equipment. In many instances we have neglected our people in peace time by failing them in educational facilities.

During a recent tour in some sections of the south we find the rural schools which have only four months already closed. Such a condition robs the rural child of fully one half of his school term. Many of the men we have now in military training will feel keenly the terrible handicap incumbent upon them as they strive to master the expensive and technical equipment placed in their hands for preparation for the defense of this country.

May in the future the nation do justice to its first line of defense—the education of its people.

"JIM CROW" IS DYING

MAY 2 - 1941

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States Supreme Court, on Monday of this week, implemented the plainly-worded 14th amendment to the Constitution with a decision which holds that this Amendment means exactly what it says.

This decision also debunks the theory of ever so many supposedly intelligent people who hold that States can make and enforce laws which violate the plain provisions of the Constitution and do so under the blessings of State Rights. State Rights, in the manner these "rights" were supposed to operate, have been null and void since the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution were adopted. The nation merely has been waiting for the Supreme Court to say so.

MAY 2 - 1941

The Constitution of the United States says "We the people" and not "We the states." The Constitution is the supreme law of the land and the Federal Government is the supreme authority of this Republic.

It seems silly that any state would enforce a rule which permitted its petty officers to board trains and make passengers give up first class accomodations, for which they had paid, and accept second class accomodations. And yet that is what was done in the case of Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell.

We believe the epoch-making decision will be applauded by a majority of the people of the South. This is because a majority of the people of the South are as liberal-minded as the people of any other section. Unfortunately for the majority of the South their government is in the hands of a reactionary element, for the most part. But there is evidence that the majority is taking steps to bring about its emancipation, and the Supreme Court ruling just announced contributes notably to the crusade Southern liberals are carrying on.

British Agency In America Uses Hitler Policy Against Jews, Negroes and Catholics!

MAR 20 1941

According to thoroughly reliable information which has reached In Fact, the British Purchasing Commission, engaged in buying $10,000,000,000 worth of munitions in the U. S. for a war against Hitler, uses Hitler's theories in its own office.

MAR 20 1941

On January 25, 1941 the British Purchasing Commission applied for three statistical typists at the Lafayette Street office of the NY State Employment Service, which is run by the NY Division of Placement and Unemployment Insurance. That office could not fill the order, so an order blank was sent to all State Employment Service branches.

The reason for the difficulty in filling the order was that the British Purchasing Commission did not want the first statistical typist who came along. It wanted only statistical typists who were white, Christian, of English, Scotch, Welsh or Ulster Irish descent. "W X" in the order blank signifies "White and Christian". The asterisks mean "Absolutely." The arrogance of the stipulation "Ulster Irish," which excludes several million Irish Catholics after excluding virtually everybody else in NY, is Hitlerian. MAR 20 1941

In Fact is not surprised that the British Purchasing Commission, composed of representatives of British banks and big business, should be prejudiced against certain sections of the American people. More surprising is the fact that the State Employment Service, maintained by payroll taxes levied on all working people covered by Social Security, without respect to "race," color or nationality should cater to this Nazi prejudice.

PREJUDICE OFFICIALLY ENCOURAGED !

Investigation shows that this instance is not unusual. IN FACT has in its possession several dozen order blanks similar to the one reproduced above, on which "Personal Description" is followed by the designations "W*, X*, Outstanding Type*," "Good Type*," "Citizen*, Presentable—Refined." On the application blank used by the Employment Service are several cryptic initials: "S M W—W N O—C J P." These mean: "Single, Married, Widower; White, Negro, Oriental; Catholic, Protestant, Jew." Since most employers, unlike the British Purchasing Commission, do not discriminate between Catholics and Protestants, the last initials in effect mean Jew or Christian.

This is not denied by the State Employment Service, which responds to inquiries from IN FACT with the following statements: "It's entirely the employers' fault;" "Sometimes we get request from Jews for Jewish employees;" "You can't legislate discrimination out of existence." The Labor Welfare Council, a NY organization for the protection and extension of social security legislation, wrote to Frieda S. Miller, Industrial Commissioner of the NY Dept. of Labor: MAR 20 1941

"It has been brought to our attention, by members of our organization and others, that the State Employment Service is a party to the vicious practice of discrimination in employment because of race, color or religious belief. The following firms have placed requests with the Employment Service for white, Christian help only: Metal Manufacturing Division, Mack Trucking International, Brewster Aeronautical, Sperry Gyroscope, Ford In-

Sees Fascism Looming in the Deep South

MAY 5 - 1941

Workers Correspondence Dept.:

I am writing you again about the conditions in the deep south. Great preparation has been made in South Carolina for war. The ruling class as I see it is on the straight road to fascism. MAY 5 - 1941

Every day the state is driving closer and closer to war. Great preparation is being made at the navy yard. Charleston, it looks like to me is in for a long struggle. My people, the Negroes are not getting anything out of the war plan. Down here the whites get all the best jobs and the Negroes get the worst.

Negroes Reject Jim Crow Fete In New Orleans

MAY 12 1941

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, May 11.—Racial discrimination suffered a heavy blow in this Southern city last week when Negro citizens had refused to participate in a jim-crow "I Am an American" celebration.

In a mass meeting at Albert Wicker Junior High School last Monday, the Negroes voted not to participate in the celebration unless all citizens were admitted on an equal basis. MAY 12 1941

Under tentative plans of the pro-war forces backing the celebration, the whites are to hold their meeting at the Municipal Auditorium while Negroes are to be shunted off into the Xavier University Stadium.

strument. MAR 20 1941

"The Division of Placement, in designating personnel for these firms, employs in code the symbol 'X' for Christian. . . . This practice has been vigorously condemned by responsible government officials, when engaged in by private, profit-seeking agencies. . . The labor movement and the pubic will not countenance 'competition' by a public agency in a contest to determine the degree of discrimination that each can practice against the unemployed."

Miss Miller replied:

"This is a problem which has my sincere interest and sympathy. . . . It is almost unanimously felt that to have the State Employment Service refuse to recognize existing employer preferences and refuse to accept orders from employers on the basis of those preferences in race or religion would only serve to drive employers away from the Employment Service and would in no way minimize discriminatory practices. . . .

It is a fact that most non-union firms in the New York area, as Miss Miller recognizes, discriminate against Jews and Negroes. Whether a state agency should encourage them in this discrimination is another matter. MAR 20 1941

"Since the war started there has been an enormous increase in "Christian Only" ads in Help Wanted columns, notably in the New York Times. Many employment agencies specify further: "Anglo-Saxon." This is due to the nature of the war boom, which has so far affected only defense industries. Defense industries as a whole do not hire Negroes or Jews, although the cost of U. S. rearmament comes out of the pockets of all Americans. In the absence of legislation denying defense contracts to companies discriminating against racial groups, this is their legal privilege. But like other aspects of the war boom, it throws light on the democratic pretensions of American big business. It was noted last week in testimony before the New York Legislature that six of the ten members of Gov. Lehman's State Defense Council were heads of firms discriminating against Jews and Negroes: General Electric, Niagara Hudson Power, Sperry Corp., New York Central R. R., Lehman Bros., Eastman Kodak. The American Peace Mobilization threw a mass picket line around the Sperry Gyroscope plant in Brooklyn, which employs no Negroes."

America Should Match Negro Loyalty With Justice, Fair Play

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—America has been described as a fountain of human hopes and individual opportunity.

It is presumed to nurture the hopes and aspirations of the humblest man, woman and child, and to provide opportunities for growth materially, culturally and spiritually.

How far short it has failed in its duty and responsibility in this regard is the measure of its neglect of its largest minority group.

HOPES SHATTERED

Its hopes are suppressed, stunted, ignored, shattered by a race tradition which seeks to reduce it to a status of permanent inferiority.

Opportunities for advancement are grudgingly given. The aspiration to emerge from the class pattern is met with premeditated discouragement. In many sections of our country these aspirations are thwarted with a brutal and unashamed frankness which belies the tradiitons of democracy, and every precedent of lbierty and equality.

HOW IGNORED

In other sections, professedly fairer, the group is consistently ignored as though it were not a part of the body politic, and as though it has no inherent right to the enjoyment of privileges and opportunities freely accorded others. MAR 22 1941

The bar sinister of race and color consigns it to negligible participation in the affairs of government, city, state and nation, and in the common pursuits of our enlightened citizenship.

CANNOT CONTINUE

These things should not be. They cannot continue if America is to realize its manifest desitny and rise to the supreme heights of that grandeur so beautifully painted in song and story by our orators and writers, and our historical novelists.

To catalogue these ills is to recite endless, unenviable pages of American history. They are known to every intelligent man and woman in this country, and even to school children who, in too many instances are being trained in schools of intolerance which disgrace our Americanism, and contribute to national disunity at a time when every act and utterance should be attuned to the harmonies of national unity and ational security.

TIME FOR UNITY

Concretely: At this time, of all times, when our loins are girded about with determination to resist the encroachment of every "ism" except Americanism, our country is not only beset with subversive activities, directed by sabateurs and alien groups, but also by a hardened species of bigotry which is denying to this Negro group a fair chance and opportunity to cooperate patriotically in those programs of preparedness which have first call upon our energies and our best intelligence.

Effort after effort fails to break down the walls of prejudice and industrial tradition. Billions of dollars are being spent, and are to be spent, in idustry for tanks and planes and ships, and the numberless instruments of modern warfare. There are desperate shortages of skilled labor and bottle-necks are choking the life out of our hurried preparations in defense industry. MAR 22 1941

Government money is financing all or most of this preparation, and yet government is as powerless to cure these conditions as it is to regulate labor unions, and their reckless charging of abnormal fees for the privilege of working on defense projects.

An overwhelming sense of justice and fair play should submerge these practices especially at a time when Negro youth and Negro effort are being conscripted in the army. MAR 22 1941

Negro loyalty is no new thing. It has always been laid on the altar of national peril. It will respond now as in the long years from the founding of the Republic.

Such spirit and loyalty should be matched by a great government with equal magnanimity of spirit and justice and fair play.

Hall for Negroes?

To The News and Courier:

Several persons have posed the question to me, "Will colored people be permitted to use the county hall?" Having no authority to answer this question, I am taking the liberty to raise it to the community in general. I do this because I feel that the persons entrusted with the authority to rent the county hall would be aided in arriving at a decision on this matter, if they knew the sentiment of the community.

I am requesting, then, that all persons who are interested in this matter express their reaction, one way or the other, to Mr. E. H. Robinson.

Personally, I would like to feel that raising this question were unnecessary. This opinion is held in light of the many occasions on which we have been guests of clubs and associations that have sponsored concerts, plays, dances, and lectures at the township auditorium in Columbia and the city auditorium in Savannah.

I would like to feel that no longer must a lack of auditorium space necessitate our having to travel to Columbia to see and hear Roland Hayes. Then, too, I would like to feel that we are now in a position to have all music lovers among our group in Charleston delighted by appearances of Marian Anderson, Dorothy Maynor, Paul Robeson, et al.

"I AM AN AMERICAN"

By RUTH TAYLOR

On May 18, by virtue of a proclamation of the president of the United States, we celebrate "I Am An American" Day.

To those young men and women who for the first time take on the full obligation of citizenship in a democracy it is a day of solemn implication. For those mature men and women who have foresworn their allegiance to the old, to give their full measure of loyalty to our own democracy, it is a day of prayful thanksgiving. And for those of us who have long been able to proudly proclaim "I Am An American" it is an opportunity for a rededication to the idels and principles upon which this country was founded and which through travail and trouble it has tried to learn to express.

There are many scoffers who say that our democracy is a mockery—because it is not complete—because in spite of its boasts of life and liberty for all, it has discriminated in many instances against groups of its citizenry—and because it has not given equal opportunity to all. Certainly our democracy is not perfect, but a democracy, being composed if individuals, is a living, growing thing, and it has progressed and is still progressing steadily. Despite any defects, the American form of of democracy still offers to everyone a greater measure of freedom and opportunity than any other country on earth.

But "I Am An American" Day is not a day on which to discuss what democracy has or has not done for tis citizens. Democracy is composed of its citizens, and it is up to them as individuals to live up to the ideals of their country and so to raise the standard of the country as a whole.

When we say, "I Am An American" we make it an individual matter. It becomes an individual right and an individual obligation. And for the duties involved in such a proclimation we can do no better thing than to turn back for our instructions to the epistle of Paul to the Romans, when he counselled them:

"Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brothery love; in honour preferring one another; * * * rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer; * * * Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits. Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sikht of all men * * * Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

'I AM AN AMERICAN DAY'

By LLEWELLYN L. LEWIS

MAY 11 1941

President Roosevelt has designated Saturday, May 18, as "I AM AN AMERICAN DAY," when all good Americans are urged to gather together, express their pride in and loyalty to their NATIVE LAND, and it is of the utmost importance that Americans of African descent, American Negroes, Colored Americans or whatever we may call ourselves should join heartily in the celebrations all over the country and stress the fact that WE ARE AMERICANS above all other considerations.

It is true that we have been absolutely despoiled of some of our basic rights in some parts of the U. S. and in many other parts our basic rights have been greatly restricted but the many injustices, segregations and degradations we have endured cannot blot out the obvious fact that this is OUR NATIVE LAND and WE ARE AMERICANS BY BIRTH. Our group has a larger percentage of NATIVE BORN citizens than any other, except the aboriginals—the American Indians. Every other group has large percentages of naturalized citizens, while in our group the number is small. Practically all of us, Americans of African descent, Americans of Negro descent or Colored Americans are NATIVE BORN and have an inherent right to participate in all of the duties of citizenship and to share all of its responsibilities and benefits on bases of absolute equality with every other group of American citizens.

We are not a "minority" as many people wish to classify us but belong to the great MAJORITY OF NATIVE BORN AMERICANS. If we ever hope to enjoy all of the rights and privileges of American citizenship we must always classify ourselves as AMERICANS. In this connection it would be well to use Colored American instead of colored, American Negro instead of Negro alone.

Relative to our rights as citizens and our full participation in every phase of Amreican life, Robert W. Bagnall, LL.D., a distinguished member of our group has this to say in a recent issue of the Philadelphia Tribune:

"Colored Americans must unite on a program and persistently and insistently demand that they be integrated into every part of the fabric of American life for which they are fitted.

"I Am An American"

By RUTH TAYLOR

MAY 7 1941

"I AM AN AMERICAN" DAY

The celebration of "I Am An American" Day which is to be held throughout the nation, Sunday, May 18, carries a special appeal to us, because, like many other coined phrases, it appeals to our imagination. Somehow we think that if all the people of America will on this particular day, emphasize what it means to be an American citizen, such a concerted action would broaden our concept of the phrase, "an American citizen." The citizen enjoys a distinctive and peculiar right in his country—a right which the alien does not enjoy. But all citizens are supposed to enjoy the same rights with special privileges to none.

In America, citizenship is not based upon race, creed or color, and the words "I Am An American" can only mean "I am an American citizen," not a half citizen. Aliens enjoy a limited citizenship but the citizens have full rights.

In this day of celebration we wish to speak for the American Negro youths who are just reaching their majority. They represent one-tenth of that vast majority which is becoming of voting age. These youths have grievances against their government. They complain that they are denied the rights of citizenship under this, our boasted democracy. They knock at the doors of industries but are denied entrance. They argue that they are American citizens but the industries say no. Over in another section the Negro youths knock at the doors of the institutions of learning that they may be better prepared to serve their country, but the answer from within is, no. They apply to the army, the navy and to the other departments of the armed forces of the United States for admittance, but the voice from within says no. Disillusioned, these youths appeal to Uncle Sam, the President and the Congress of the United States for protection of their rights as "American citizens," but Uncle Sam disclaims the power to change these conditions, saying his arms are too short to reach their case. Thus the youths of our race are asking why all this celebration about "I Am An American" when it doesn't mean them? They are wont to ask what they have done or failed to do that they must be deprived of these rights as citizens. They say "We were born here; we have no hyphens in our names; our fathers never betrayed the American Flag; they were loyal to every trust imposed in them. They felled the forests, dug the ditches and built the railroads that have made this nation great. They have descended into the bowels of the earth and delivered the coal that has moved the factories of the nation and made this the greatest industrial center of all the world. Our fathers did all these things—then why can't we, as their children, enjoy all of the rights of American citizens? What is it that we have done or what is it we have not done?"

The above are some of the facts that should be considered by the "I Am An American" Day celebrants. If it doesn't mean every "I", surely it doesn't mean one. "I Am An American" doesn't mean the little "I" or the big "you" or a special class, but it means "I".

LET THE PEOPLE SPEAK ON WAR

The fact that the United States is in the midst of a great defense program is no longer news. All American citizens and the rest of the world know that we are making preparations to defend ourselves against the aggression of the European dictators.

We all are aware of where our country stands in this war situation. The President of the United States in one of his fireside chats declared our nation as an arsenal for democracy. Since that time he has been granted the power to act under what is called unlimited national emergency. In his recent fireside chat the President virtually put our country in a state of war. Since his fireside chat of more than a week ago considerable comment has been made both pro and con. In other words the opinion of the people has been divided among two groups —the isolationists and the interventionists. The isolationists cling to the theory that the United States should not enter into any European war and they seek to support their argument by some of the previous speeches made by the President during the last campaign. The interventionists cling to the theory that day by day developments make it necessary that the United States not sit idly by and wait until the enemy strikes but should make hay while the sun shines. These two views are held by a small group of leaders of our nation. One group thinking that our country should go to war and the other thinking that our country should not.

The one hundred and thirty million people in the United States have not expressed their opinion about it and no one is in position to know just how they feel about it because millions and millions will perhaps never express themselves either pro or con. They will be submissive and loyal to the laws and their government because they have always had confidence that those who run our government will not mislead them into pitfalls of eternal destruction. It may sound absurd, but it would at least be democratic for our government to allow the people to vote on this question of the United States entering into the war. However, we know that such powers belong to Congress. But in view of the fact that so many irregularities have crept into our constitutional form of government in order to tide us over and meet the emergencies we believe that giving one hundred and thirty milllon people the opportunity to speak is just as important an emergency as any we have experienced in the past. After all, it is the people who must fight the battle if America should enter the war. And since America is in the midst of a rearmament program to save the democracies of the world it would seem but fair to practice what we seek to save. The people of the United States make up our democracy. As to how the people would vote no one knows, but we could at least get an expression that would answer certain definite questions in regard to some of the many obstacles which are causing disunity. We would at least find out if the people are war-minded.

JUN 6 1941

The Chicago Tribune, in its June 2nd issue, in an editorial under the caption: "The Aftermath of the Fireside Chat", said this in referring to the President's speech:

> "The speech didn't click. People who had been keeping their heads did not lose them. People who were not for war did not change their minds. A sense of failure may have led to the subsequent drive to frighten the people."

We don't know just how the Tribune is able to reach such conclusions about how the people feel but a vote would answer such questions.

Some of the most prominent questions being raised by leaders and even among the rank and file of colored people are: Will a war be a way out? Will a war really solve the world conflict? Will, after Hitler is defeated, some one else rise twenty or thirty years hence and try to conquer the world with some silly social doctrine? Will a war wipe out and amend the great economic and human losses which the American people have endured during the past few years in which they experienced a period of depression and economic stagnation?

Colored people seem to be interested in what the future will mean to their economic, social and political welfare in the event this nation should go to war. The price that must be paid to win a war is of very little significance to them. All they ask for is fair play and a chance to defend America. Their past record in times of war speaks for itself. The Negro has always been loyal and he is just as loyal today. The Negro is more loyal to the government than the government is to him. And the lack of interest the government shows in him has not in any way caused him to want to turn traitor commit sabotage or join the ranks of the fifth columnists. He is willing and ready to shoulder arms in all branches of the war department and die for his country.

'AMERICA'S HANDLING OF NEGRO PROBLEM IS VIOLATION OF DEMOCRACY'--MAC LEAN

HAMPTON Institute, Va.—Stating that "the whole American process of handling its Negro problem is a fundamental violation of both democracy and intellectual freedom," Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton institute, told 200 professors and college deans in New York that "this system is an enormous wastage of human resources, a wastage that no nation, certainly no decracy, can afford."

Speaking under the auspices of the American Committee on Democracy and Intellectual Freedom at the Columbia University Men's Faculty Club, Dr. MacLean told his audience what he had learned of "Negro Higher Education" in his first eight months as president of Hampton Institute.

South A Problem

With these fresh impressions of an old campaigner in a new field of action and the research and daily exploration of the general field of Negro higher education as his background, the Hampton president declared that the South was the Number One Economic Problem of the nation, because "it has wasted many of its physical resources and spent so much energy 'keeping the Negro in his place' instead of managing and developing both its physical and human resources, both white and Negro."

The dam that holds the Negro back today is made up of many masses of materials, he said. First is that attitudinal complex of prejudice and fear arising from the "high visibility" of a dark skin in a largely light colored world of human animals.

Blasting the "strange beliefs and fantasies" that have arisen because of the differences in pigmentation among humans, Dr. MacLean said that the whole body of research on the Negro by scholars of both races, winds up with these conclusions in regard to mental ability:

No Mental Differences

"That experimentation to date has neither demonstrated that there are any inherent mental differences between American Negroes and American whites, that Negroes of very superior intelligence emerge when environmental conditions are propitious, that differences in intelligence are a matter of individual rather than racial differences, and that any program looking towards the development of the American Negro must be based on the assumption that the race is fully capable in mental ability, of assuming a position of equality in the social order."

Negro colleges, even now, do more cooperative planning and working together than do the white, he continued, and "if they continue this trend, they will lead rather than follow the white institutions of higher education."

Raising the question as to how the economically poorest section of the country, the poorest states in the Union can possibly afford the costs of an expensive duplication of plant and staff in a dual system, the Hampton Institute president and former director of the University of Minnesota's General College said that in this dual system the Negro scanted badly.

Must Struggle

"He gets far less money per student and by racial proportion from all sources. He gets fewer buildings and has to struggle harder and argue or plead longer. He has to employ fewer staff at usually lower salaries."

And in face of the fact that large plants and staff in white Southern colleges and universities are already available and uncrowded, higher education in the South is moving farther and farther away from the economic and educational efficiencies of cooperation, consolidation, and united action, because of race prejudice alone, was his belief.

Point by point, Dr. MacLean told his audience of the problems the Negro college faces today. In selection of students they cannot afford to make the thousands of mistakes made yearly by most higher institutions. And he urged that educators not be fooled in selection by too narrow criteria, such as high academic ability.

Curricula Important

In planning and replanning the curricula for Negro higher education, the majority of colleges and universities must not be imitated, but studies must be based upon the direct, realistic, present and future needs of Negro students and American democratic society's needs and use for them. Negro colleges "can by no means afford the luxury of indulging in the oft-times silly four-cornered battle over liberal arts versus professional versus general versus vocational education and whether one is higher and the other secondary."

Each off these is a proper and needed facet of total education for all young men and women, he believes, and he urged that the selection of administrative and teaching staffs, the problems of their ranking, salaries, and tenures be perfected to a higher degree in Negro colleges than in higher education in general, because they deal with a minority and are poor.

The educators heard Hampton's president say that placement and follow-up of alumni are of paramount importance in the Negro colleges, and field men should be attached to groups of institutions whose job it is to explore continuously society's job market for the college graduate.

Organized follow-up programs must be instituted, and the alumni should be pulled back to the colleges for brief refresher courses or given extension and in-service training for self-improvement, not only in their job life, but in their personal, home and family, social and civic life as well.

One statement that evoked much comment was his plea for a "two-way flow" of teaching personnel. Dr. McLean feels that, because of the extraodinary contribution that many Negroes have to make to Northern white college and university students, these colleges would profit greatly by employing Negro professors.

"I can visualizes totalitarian administrators cringing in horror from such a proposal, but in democracy it makes the most obvious common sense." He further suggested that the Negro colleges invite more white teachers to take leave of absence to lecture and give classes, and that the white universities and colleges reciprocate.

In closing, he urged the assembled educators to read President Horace Mann Bond's work on "Negro Education" and browse through the yearbooks of "The Journal of Negro Education" in order to gain an increasingly satisfying insight into the inner meanings of both Democracy and Intellectual Freedom.

THE COLOR CASTE SYSTEM

A color or racial caste system seems to be an integral part of every Fascist system whether it be British, German, Italian or American, and deemed necessary as an instrument for unifying the nation on a racial basis.

The British and American white people long antedated the Italians and Germans in establishing systems based on the theory of a superior race dominating and exploiting supposedly inferior races, and it is noteworthy that in both the British and American imperial systems the colored people are deprived of any real political influence.

American Negroes outside the South possess the vote but only because their numbers are so small that its possession can make no difference in the functioning of the system.

More important than the vote, however, is the vast system of machine technology through which the civilization functions and without which it would have of necessity to radically change its form to some agrarian feudalism.

Those who master and control the technique and secrets of the intricate machine technology will always dominate the state because they hold the key to its continued existence.

These people are primarily the engineers, technicians, chemists, metalurgists, electrical engineers, machinists, tool makers, etc., and they, in turn, are controlled by those who own the natural resources and the industrial plants in which the technologists work.

The Negro in America

THE FOLLOWING ARTICLE FROM "THE SUN" CONTAINS FACTS THAT WILL INTEREST OUR READERS:

America has a great colour problem in the twelve million Negroes who constitute such a large and generally inarticulate section of its population. Recently the English magazine, "Picture Post," devoted some space in a special "America" issue to this problem. In the belief that this information will be of interest to many of our readers we here a[illegible] ot their article.

As Picture Post says: The Negroes have freedom but scant equality. They are the least fortunate section of the American democracy. Now, under Roosevelt, their prospects have begun to brighten." But to judge from the facts that the paper gives, it will be a long, long time before the majority of the Negro population achieves a satisfactory level of existence.

In a section which extends from the State of Virginia to the State of Texas more than fifty per cent of the population is Coloured. In America, it should be remembered, the term "Coloured" is used in speaking of the Negro generally. In this belt, then, are eight million Negroes, and it is here that their plight is most serious. For, as Picture Post says: "The economic and social discrimination of this region represents the most complete denial of democray in the Western hemisphere." Here the system known as "share-cropping" is still working. About two million white and black families are tenants on land which they work, and then pay for the privilege with the bulk of their crop. As a result, the living conditions of thousands of Negroes in the South has sunk to almost sub-human levels. FEB 1 1941

Professors Illiterate?

Says Picture Post: "The Negro has been to the reactionary southern politician what the Jew has been to Hitler." The unfortunate Negro has been used as a means to ride to politi cal power on the issue of 'White supremacy.' Although the Constitution allows the Negro an equal voice in political matters, yet in the South he has never been allowed to vote. Not so very many years ago it was the Klu Klux Klan and similar organisations which were used to intimidate those Negroes who showed any inclination to make use of the vote which the law of the country allowed them. Nowadays there are more subtle restrictions which are none the less effective. In eight states the Negro is expected to pay a poll tax of about seven shillings before he is able to vote. Well, we ourselves here know how hard seven shillings are to come by. It is not to be wondered at that the seven shillings are very rarely forthcoming. Then in other cases, the Negro has to pass a "literacy" test, and here again, says Picture Post, Negro college professors have been known to fail when their white examiners wished them to!

"New Deal" Suppresses Race Hatred

Among the poor white farmers of the Southern States is found a parallel with this country. Reduced in their standards of living to a level which is akin to that of the Negro, these whites are persuaded by unscrupulous politicians to vent their hatred on the Coloured man. Listen to what Picture Post has to say about this:....."No poor white is so miserable that he cannot console himself with the thought that the colour of his skin makes him superior to the black man. His emotions. twisted from childhood by race hatred, make the average Southern White easily movable to defend 'White Supremacy' especially when the politicians present the 'menace of Africanisation' too vividly during election campaigns."

President Roosevelt's "New Deal" has opened the way for advancement to the Negro in America. For the first time they are admitted to the benefits of education, health and social services. The Government also assists in raising their standards of living, and various Negro organisations are now raising their voices to demand the rights which the constitution of the country allows, but which prejudice has withheld.

Larger or Equal

Under the auspices of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, a nation[illegible] citizens' committee has issued a statement signed by sixty representative citizens of the North and South urging "the larger employment of colored Americans in defense industries."

We are always suspicious of those people, who in one way, qualify our participation in American life.

Sometimes they use the expression "proportionate share." Others just talk about a "larger" share. An increase of one per cent, of course, would be larger than it is at present.

If the Phelps-Stokes Fund is sending out any further announcements, we can wish that it would so change them as to have their sixty citizens urge full participation on the same basis as other citizens.

We need no special attention and should just like to walk in and make ourselves at home.

CIVIL RIGHTS NOT SOCIAL RIGHTS

When a colored man is in the same room or in the same carriage with white people, as a servant, there is no talk of social equality, but if he is there as a man and a gentleman, he is an offense.

What makes the difference? It is not color, for his color is unchanged. MAY 17 1941

The whole essence of the thing is in its purpose to degrade and stamp out the liberties of the race. It is the old spirit of slavery and nothing else.

To say that because a man rides in the same car with another, he is therefore socially equal, is one of the wildest absurdities.—FREDERICK DOUGLASS.

Dixie Race Views Scored by Editor

JUN 1 3 1941

"Although we critcize the Germans for their racial prejudice, we think it is all right for Southerners to have the same attitude toward the Negro," declared Miss Lillian Smith of Clayton, Ga., editor of the North Georgia Review.

"In the South we have the most churches—and the most murders. We Southerners still think it is good business to take more out of the soil than we put in, and take more out of the people than we give back."

NO SALE- YET

The Negro is not sold on the boast that there are some Old World democracies which he should give his life to preserve. That he even is not sold on these United States being a democracy is pretty generally known by white people who are able to see the reasons why the Negro should not be sold.

JUN 13 1941

These reasons could not be and have not been better stated during the present "emergency" than by a white writer, Tom O'Connor, in the daily newspaper PM of New York. Recently Mr. O'Connor wrote as follows:

"We might as well face the facts.

"The Negro people are not sold on this war. They aren't sold on fighting Fascism abroad. They aren't sold on going into the Army, or paying higher taxes, or doing anything else to save democracies.

"To them the democracies are the "democracies"—with a sneer implicit in quotation marks. They don't like Hitler. They don't like Fascism.

" 'But', they say, 'why should we fight? Things couldn't be much worse.'

"And why do they say this, feel this within themselves?

"Because we have made them feel it. Because we have given them so small a share of democracy that very word is mockery. Because we have beaten them, crushed them, ignored their needs, laughed at their hurts, treated their wounds with acid of bigotry and prejudice.

"Now, in a time of national crisis, do we recognize our mistakes, try to correct them?

"We don't. We haven't yet. We have thrown the Negro people a few sops, half-heartedly; nothing more. We still won't let them build our airplanes, won't give them any share of the gravy in the defense boom. We still won't let them in at Annapolis, or into the Navy at all except as menials. We are with seeming reluctance taking a few into the Army, even training a few airmen . . . but in strictly segregated units, the very concept of which is an insult to the Negro.

"Will all this win the fight against Fascism? Will it advance the cause of democracy, to isolate a tenth of the nation much as Hitler has isolated the Jews?

"What are we going to do about it?

Chickens Home to Roost

FEB 28 1941

One of the radio entertainments that has a nation-wide audience, a quiz originally broadcast from New York, has gone a-touring. Recently it has come from southern cities like Memphis and New Orleans. In New York it was common for several persons at each session to answer all seven questions asked them and receive the maximum award of $64. But in these southern cities, so few make a good showing that the interrogator drops hints to help them and at that bemoans the fact that winners are few and far between. Yet these southerners, by their occupations given, seem to be of the same level as the more successful New Yorkers.

There is food for thought in this disclosure. In a democracy, for any citizen to be less qualified by reason of knowledge or interest in public affairs than another is to weaken the system. It has long been known that education in the South—for whites as well as for the neglected Negro—is not up to the northern standard. Even with the money stripped from Negro education, the amount put into white schools in that section does not measure up. Now from the failure to equal New Yorkers in answers to questions which call for only a reasonable knowledge of day to day events, it appears that southerners lack interest as well as schooling.

There is no question about these persons trying to make correct answers. Equally there is evidence of the disappointment of the sponsor of this quiz at their failure. Without meaning to do so, both parties have turned the light on a situation that should give cause for alarm. Southerners are spoiled. They do not realize that their best is not good enough. Laws and the custom of keeping the black half of their citizenry from competing with them have made them think themselves better than they are.

These are not days when progress can take its own good time. Hitler from the outside and Roosevelt from within are making us aware that a new social order impends. For either our American public must be intelligent and interested. It is hardly likely that the South will see in its inability to measure up in a radio quiz evidence of its general backwardness, but it is there, a symptom to be heeded.

Chickens come home to roost. Originally the purpose of southerners was to hold back the blacks. By law and by custom they erected every barrier possible to their progress. Now comes the disclosure that today as always, the man who would keep another down must stay down himself to hold him.

SURVEY REVEALS PLIGHT OF RACE

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This survey of Grand Rapids is published because it shows conditions Negroes face not only in this Michigan city but in all urban communities throughout the country.)

By JOHN R. WILLIAMS

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 27. — Sometime back when a group of ministers here were discussing plans for the liquidation of mortgages on the various Negro church properties in this city, the question of the economic status of local Negroes arose. The fact that the Negro's economic condition was precarious, was admitted.

An Inter-racial Committee of the Council of Social Agencies was formed and an invitation was extended to the National Urban League to send a representative here to study the situation. That was done, and the survey made provides interesting, and in some instances, startling information, true not only of Grand Rapids but of other cities as well.

It was found that the Negro population of this city increased about 150 per cent between 1920 and 1930 and about 25 per cent between 1930 and 1940. Most of the Negroes who have migrated here came in quest of employment, although in a few isolated cases, some came for educational and health purposes. The Urban League investigator took 310 Negro families and based his survey upon them.

BARRED FROM SKILLED TRADES

It was shown that the Negroes of this city live, for the most part, in the First, Second and Third wards and that more than 60 per cent of them work as unskilled laborers or domestic servants. It was shown also that there is a persistent resistance against Negroes entering skilled employment positions or what is commonly called, "white collar" jobs, such as clerical and professional positions.

For instance, the city of Grand Rapids employs approximately 1,343 persons, only ten of whom are colored, including one detective, one patrolman, one janitor, one clerk, five skilled laborers, and one unskilled, in positions other than those controlled by the Board of Education. The Board employs 1,187 persons, one of which is a Negro janitor. There are no Negro teachers employed here, although the Negroes are making a desperate effort to have the city let down the bars to members of their group in the teaching profession.

There are about eight private and municipal hospitals in Grand Rapids employing approximately 750 persons, only ten or 12 of whom are Negroes. The Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations employ more than 100 persons, only three of whom are colored. There are four large life insurance companies doing business here which employ approximately 150 persons, none of whom are colored, although more than 65 per cent of the Negroes living here are insured in some one of those companies.

Coming now to the industrial concerns in this city, there are approximately 12,500 persons employed in about 40 local industrial concerns, but only 36 or 37 of this number are Negroes. In 24 of the larger local mercantile firms, there are employed approximately 8,000 persons of whom only 15 are Negroes.

Negroes are employed more generously in hotels than in any other local businesses, and the ratio between colored and white employees in this bracket is considerably closer.

THE SAME OLD BUGABOO

It is readily seen that in order for the status of the Negro to be lifted, he must be given fairer recognition in the industrial concerns. That brings us face to face with one of the toughest obstacles that the Negro must surmount here and in other cities.

It is a fact so certain that it becomes a problem—a problem that deals with capital and organized labor. Most factory owners declare that they have no objections to Negroes but that organized labor will not permit Negroes to be employed; on the other hand organized labor, especially the CIO, declares that Negroes would be accepted if only the plants would employ them.

Not much deference can be given these inconsistencies here, because Grand Rapids is not a union-controlled town, therefore the unions in themselves are not a great barrier.

The naked truth is that the one big bugaboo that stands in the way of Negro happiness and Negro security in Grand Rapids is the same bugaboo that has arrayed itself against the Negro in other parts of the state and nation — race prejudice.

Race prejudice, though not as conspicuous in Grand Rapids as in some other places, is here. Here it is exercised in much the same fashion as it is exercised in New England. It meets the colored citizen more definitely when he seeks to earn than when he seeks to spend. Be that as it may, it is the same viper, and it leaves the same sting—embarrassment, insecurity, and unhappiness.

Democracy In U. S. Depends On Negro

GREENSBORO, N. C.—If the United States is to be the great bulwark of democracy in an otherwise world of dictators, it must extend full democratic benefits and privileges to the more than 12,000,000 Negroes within its borders, declared Dr. Sherwood Eddy, of New York City, distinguished authority on social, economic and religious topics, in an address at A. and T. College last week. Dr. Eddy spoke on "The United States and the World Crisis".

JAN 30 1941

The treatment of Negroes throughout the country is a sore spot on democracy's record, he said. They are required to live in ghettos, are segregated against in all lines of endeavor, and cannot equally share benefits and privileges normally accorded other minority groups.

Probe Textbooks For History Of Negro

NEW YORK, March (ANP)—Two separate studies of history textbooks used in the local school system and their treatment of the Negro are nearing completion, it has been learned from reliable sources. These studies are being made by a committee for the N. A. A. C. P. and a committee for the New York chapter, Association for the study of Negro Life and History.

Added significance is given to these studies in view of other surveys made into school textbooks reports on which have provoked considerable public controversy. Most prominent is the report of Dr. Ralph Robey of Columbia university in which it was charged that doctrines alien to the American way were being injected into books and therefore taught to children. This particular study, financed by the National Manufacturers association, drew so much criticism that the association immediately attempted to disassociate itself from the project.

As one of the committee members explained, the object of the two surveys now in process is to determine the extent of racial bais evident in the textbooks, with particular stress upon, the Negro.

Among the members of the N. A. A. C. P. committee are Rev. Wm. Lloyd Imes, St. James Presbyterian Church; Roy Wilkins the Association's assistant executive secretary; Dr. Laurence D. Reddick, curator of Schemburg Collection, Assistance, is also being given by Dr. Marie Carpenter who has done considerable work in this field, it was said.

The work in behalf of the New York chapter is being handled by Dr. Reddick, Miss Melva Price, Harcourt Tymes and several other teachers, both colored and white, in the Harlem area.

Tennessee People Will Knuckle Down To Building TCF

MAR 20 1941

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE WILL MEET TO ACT ON ORGANIZATIONAL PLANS FOR THE STATE

MAR 20 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—The Tennessee Commonwealth Federation, whose aim is to smash political machine domination in this state behind the slogan "Restore Majority Rule", this week end knuckles down to the job of getting its message to every small farm, shop and mine from the Mississippi to the great Smokies.

The executive committee of the TCF meets here Sunday to act upon these main points.

1. To map an extensive state-wide organization campaign.

MAR 20 1941

2. To complete the formation of a state executive committee, extending it to include wider representation of farmers.

3. To set up a state Commonwealth Council, a broad policy-making body whose job it will be to guide the drive to put political power back in the hands of the people of Tennessee.

4. Financing, under which the problem of providing adequate means to support the campaign of the TCF and at the same time making cost per member so low that the full control of the TCF will always remain in the hands of the people will be worked out.

BOSS CONTROL

Hollis V. Reid, veteran foe of machine rule in Tennessee and legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who is chairman of the TCF, stresses the fact that the question of boss control and that of the right to vote are really identical in this state, as elsewhere in the South.

Unlike some Southern states, Tennessee has a fairly sizable Republican party in the eastern part of the state. But it too is completely under the domination of machine rule, and where the interests of the people are at stake never hesitates to make an alliance with the powerful Democratic party machine of Boss Crump in Memphis to defeat the people.

"It has often happened," Mr. Reid said a few days ago, "that when we Democrats have gone to work in East Tennessee to get rid of a particularly rotten Republican we elect a Democrat who turns out to be just as bad or worse."

After the spectacle of the last session of the Tennessee Legislature, in which a machine-made governor rammed through a whole batch of bills to hamstring labor and gag rising popular opposition to Bosses Crump and McKellar, the Tennessee Commonwealth Federation sprang to life as a real grass roots expression of disgust and determination to recapture for the people real control of their political institutions.

"But," said Mr. Reid, "as long as the minority of the people elect our officials this condition will continue. In the last election, with a hotly contested presidential camgpaign, we find that only 27 per cent of our qualified voters voted."

The main point of attack, therefore, of the TCF against machine rule is the campaign to repeal the poll tax.

The TCF has established headquarters at Room 1018 Cotton States Building, Nashville. It urges all Tennesseans interested in its program to communicate with its secretary, Mrs. Ruth Cutler, and extends this invitation to southerners in other states whose problems are similar and feel that the TCF's activity points a solution of their own problems.

Advice to Negro

To The News and Courier:

I notice the editor of this paper has been criticised by several writers, both white and colored, with regard to his comments on the negro question, but I don't feel that we should blame the negro so much for that, for, as we all know, there was a political table spread several years ago. Of course, it was spread mainly for the Northern negroes, but our Southern negroes are feasting from the same table.

This negro table was spread with promises by shrewd politicians. First, we will do all we can to pass the anti-lynch law. Second, we will do all we can to promote social equality so that the races may mingle together in hotels, barber-shops, cafes, and schools, and soon we will also see that negro students are accepted in the universities of the South.

We will have negroes appointed to government positions, and army officers and so on. We will lend every effort possible to do away with the Jim Crow law, so that you colored gentlemen with your claw-hammer coats and beaver hats will not have to be disturbed and humiliated by moving around when the train or bus comes to the Mason and Dixon line.

There are many other dishes on this table, but I will not take up your space with any more. Who spread this table? From what I can learn the Democratic party did most of it; the same party that elected Wade Hampton, the same party that the Red Shirts belonged to; the same party that elected and supported all of our leading statesmen of the South.

Now, just a few words with regard to our white critics. One of the writers seems to be a very intelligent man. He has taken the editor up on a remark he made about the way to a negro child's head was through his stomach. It seems to me this man would be too big a man to notice a little thing like this. From the way he quotes Scripture it seems to me he might be a preacher. If he is a Godly man I am ready to pull my hat off to him but I don't want any of you to tell him my opinion of just an ordinary parson.

There was another writer, who defended the negroes. He said he belonged to the so-called white race, and I am forced to believe he is, for he said so and I have no reason to doubt him. He didn't give his name and address and I don't blame him for that, for if I were to accuse a white man concerning a negro I wouldn't want anybody to know my name and address.

I would like to offer our Southern negroes a piece of advice: If ever a white man pats you on the back and loves you up, beware of him.

NEIGHBOR WORTH HAVING

A very excellent family of the Sardis church community ,because of the illness of one of their children, became tremendously anxious and, to be sure, came to an immediate realization of the fact they had to have some assistance, someone to bring the head of the family to town for a physician and medicine, and it fell to an industrious, law-abiding, church-going negro to meet the emergency, and it is needless to say he did it with the greatest pleasure. A good darkey makes a good neighbor.

More Justice Due U. S. Minorities, Speaker Declares

ATLANTA (AP) — This nation falls far short of the goal of real democracy when measured by the standard of justice shown certain minorities, R. B. Eleazer of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation asserted today.

This is especially true when the treatment of the Negro is considered, said the commission's educational director in an Emory University chapel address.

Genuine concern for the welfare of the Negro, he observed, "far from violating the traditions of the old South, is in complete harmony with the best of those traditions x x x which put to shame the neglect, injustice and hostility so common today."

It was Stonewall Jackson, he recalled, who taught a Sunday School class of slaves at First Presbyterian church in Lexington, Va.; it was General Robert E. Lee who, after the war, twice dispersed mobs threatening Negroes.

Specifically, Eleazer said the Negro today "suffers from widespread political disfranchisement, taxation without representation, marked discrimination in distribution of public benefits, economic exploitation amounting sometimes to peonage and practical slavery, and inadequate legal protection, all supported by a caste system that contradicts everything that democracy stands for."

Experiments Show That Chemical Can Turn Negro White

Special To The News-Sentinel

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—A chemical which in many cases causes the skins of Negroes to turn white has been found by the United States Public Health Service in a series of experiments over nearly two years.

The social implications of this discovery, should it lead to commercial use of such a product, are obvious. Health officials are reluctant to discuss it in commercial terms.

It is pointed out that before there could be any general application of the principle there would have to be carefully controlled experimentation over a substantial part of a lifetime.

Loss of skin color, or depigmentation, has been traced to an antioxidant called monobenzyl ether of hydroquinone, which heretofore has been used in rubber to retard oxidation. The discovery resulted from depigmentation which occurred among Negro and white employes of a Midwest tannery who wore rubber gloves containing two-tenths of one per cent of this chemical. Restoration of color eventually occurs, but very slowly.

The experimentation has been carried on and directed by Dr. Louis Schwartz, medical director of the Public Health Service.

White Spots Appear

THE interest of the Public Health Service in its experimentation, officials said, was only to find out what had caused the unusual skin condition and to inform the manufacturers of the rubber gloves not to use the chemical further.

But experiments are being made by feeding quantities of the chemical to certain animals in an effort to determine its effect over an entire body. In the cases of the tannery workers depigmentation occurred only where the rubber gloves were in contact with the skin.

The tannery workers began to complain in September, 1938, that white spots were appearing on forearm and hand areas covered by the rubber gloves furnished them by the factory. The workmen were said to have been wearing a heavy gauntlet type of rubber glove with curved fingers.

In some instances most of the skin covered by the gloves became depigmented; in others it was only spotted with areas of leukoderma, or skin-whitening. A few developed leukoderma on parts of the body not covered by the gloves but which could have been touched by them.

ferred the matter to the Public Health Service on May 16, 1939. About the same time representatives of the glove manufacturer consulted the Public Health Service's Office of Dermatoses Investigations.

About a month later another tannery reported that Negro and white workers had depigmentation in areas covered by the rubber gauntlets (in white workers depigmentation sometimes caused skin to become whiter). Since the first two reports similar reports came from other industries using the rubber gloves of the same manufacturer.

At a second tannery 16 workers were found with leukoderma on parts touched by the rubber gloves purchased from the same rubber company as in the case of the first tannery.

While Public Health officials were reluctant to discuss general application of the chemical, a report by Dr. Schwartz comments that "the possibility of using anti-oxidants for the depigmentation of hyperpigmented areas of the skin (spots) is suggested."

RACE PROBLEM IS DISCUSSED

Dr. J. S. N. Tross Speaks on Question at Dilworth Methodist Church.

Dr. J. S. N. Tross, divisional secretary of the American Bible society, last night gave another of his series of talks on inter-racial conditions to the young people's group at the Dilworth Methodist church.

His subject was "Race Relations, Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow."

He stated that the world yesterday had lied and misrepresented life and things to the generation of today. "It told us that color and force and blood were symbols of one's right and fitness to live," he said.

"Man's experiences today have discovered this to be a lie and a vulgar deception, and we are challenged today, white and black alike, not only to meet this lie and defy it, but also to defeat it and utterly destroy it."

Referring to the songs sung by the Johnson C. Smith quarter at the meeting, Dr. Tross asked his audience: "Did you see any color in the melody and harmony of those songs?"

With reference to the unity of the races tomorrow, the minister said, "There is no need for regimentation, there is need for mobilization of men and things in our national defense program, but the greater need is the regimentation and mobilization of the hearts and souls and spirits of men. We must bring men into our laboratories to dissect them and to analyze them to find what things are true and beautiful and the good in them regardless of race or color or creed."

Dr. Tross concluded by saying: "Proclamations of emancipation do not necessarily make men free; men are free only when they can go prospecting for human unity, for human brotherhood, when the human spirit can go forth unhampered by prejudices, by scorn, by hate, and by other vicious barriers and restrictions.

"Let us not forget that white men and black men will find the unity and fellowship and good will for which the world yearns today when unitedly we can proclaim that discipline by force is nothing, discipline by love is everything."

WOULD EXPORT NEGROES.

To the Editor: Pleas allow me space in your paper to say a few words in reply to your editorial in Friday's issue of The News and Observer captioned "Good Neighbors or Bad."

In your editorial you said: "It is difficult to understand the opposition of rural citizens of Lenoir County to the creation of a Negro NYA agricultural training center in the county on the ground of the possible proximity of the Negro project to white communities." You advocate things for one class but you do not advocate them for another class. If someone suggested locating a Negro institution on Hillsboro Street or in the midst of Hayes Barton, it wouldn't be difficult for you to understand the opposition. If the attempt was made to locate a Negro institution in a fashionable community of North Carolina, a howl would be made that would be heard from Murphey to Manteo.

Negro coddlers are always complaining because they think the Negro doesn't get his rights. They say very little about the Negro's duties and responsibilities. You know, or you should know, when the white race spend millions of dollars to educate the Negroes they are preparing tools to be used against themselves. Do you read Negro publications? If you do not, I advise you to read them and enlighten yourself.

I agree with you, that not only North Carolina but the whole South is pulled down by poverty, and it will continue in poverty as long as one-third of our population are Negroes.

I advocate the United States government sending the Negro out of this country, and do it quickly. There are millions more who advocate the same thing.

Negroes Hear Address On Democracy's Growth

An interesting address on the growth of democracy, and the many factors which make the democratic form of govrenment the best for protection of all citizens, was delivered by Dr. Clanton W. Williams of the University of Alabama faculty last night before the Vagabond Club, a civic group of young negfo teachers, and business and professional men.

Dr. Williams traced the growth of democracy in the United States and in other nations, and cited the advancements made in all lines of human endeavor by proper application of the democratic principles. The professor's talk was enthusiastically heard by an overflow audience at the Van Hoose auditorium.

"Dear sir," writes a colored friend, W. S. Hamilton, of Woodward, "I read everything that you write. In the (This Morning) most everyone who can read, read what you write but there are not so very many who can get what you are driving at a few weeks ago when you wrote, (or rather) someone asked you, would this war be the time to put the Negro down, or would it be the time for the Negro to come into his own? Now here it goes (or rather) here is is—we, the Negro only ask these few things: To be allowed to serve this great country, that we helped to make. We want it to stay a free place to live; we want our white boys and black boys to stop hating one another, for if war should come they are the ones who will have to fight. If they hate now, they will hate when the time comes to fight for each other. So this talk of putting us down, and of us coming into our own we are not thinking of either. All we are thinking of now is helping keep this country free.—Let us not let what happened to France happen to our good country." Amen and amen!

"We cannot create a world civilization without finding an adequate solution to the problem of racial relationships," Dr. Charles W. Helsley, pastor of East Congregational church said Sunday afternoon in addressing the eighth annual Inter-Race Good Will rally at A. M. E. Community church, James ave. and Logan st., SE.

"When we face a solution of the race problem, we face the fact that approximately one-third of the world's population is white, almost a second third is yellow, while a little more than a third is black or brown," Dr. Helsley reminded his audience. "This tells us that two-thirds of mankind are colored. So we must solve the problem of racial relationships before we can create a world civilization."

QUOTES AUTHOR

Dr. Helsley quoted H. G. Wells as saying: "There is no more evil thing in this present world than race prejudice. It is the worst single thing in life now. It justifies and holds together more baseness, cruelty and abomination than any other sort of error in the world."

"Until the days of the American and French revolutions, there was little if any racial feeling anywhere in the world," the speaker continued. "According to Lord Bryce, 'no people was ever prouder than the Romans, nor with better reason, that in the fullness of their strength, when they held themselves called by fate to rule the world, they showed little contempt for their provincial subjects and no racial aversion'.

"Today in America we are struggling against an almost incalculable and unbelievable race prejudice," Dr. Helsley said. "This prejudice bursts forth in lawlessness and mob violence. Since 1885 we have put to death, by lynching and mob violence, more than 4,000 people, or an average of two a week. No other nation in the world has such a disgraceful record. Lynching is never practiced in Europe. It is unknown in South America or Asia."

ILLITERACY DECREASES

Progress of the Negro since the Civil war, even in the face of terrific handicaps, was mentioned by Dr. Helsley, who said that home ownership among Negroes has increased from 12,000 to 650,000; farms operated by them from 20,000 to 1,000,000, and business enterprises from 2,000 to more than 165,000. Churches have increased from 700 to 45,000, he added, and illiteracy has decreased from 80 to 10 per cent.

Dr. Helsley commented that in his opinion the chief cause of racial misunderstanding is the feeling of superiority on the part of the white race. "Yet scientific studies have shown," he said, "that there is no such thing as racial superiority. It just happens that economic and historic development have favored the white race. At the recent General Council of Congregational churches the most outstanding personalities present were from China, Japan and Africa."

"During the last 20 years a new attitude is developing in this country," the speaker said. "A new spirit at the same time is spreading all over the world, demanding an equal and rightful place for every race in the brotherhood of man.

BUT ONE SOLUTION

"There is but one solution to this problem. That is the application of the principles of Jesus to all men alike, irrespective of race or color. Who serves My Father as a Son is surely kin to me'."

Other speakers at the meeting were Abe Dembinsky and George Smith. The A. M. E. church chorus sang Negro spirituals and other vocal and instrumental numbers were on the program.

Would Set Up "Reconstruction"

One time a citizen walking down the "big road" found another citizen belaboring a dog with a fence rail. "What are you doing that for?", said First Citizen. "Don't you know that dog's been dead three days?" "Yes", Second Citizen answered. "I know it but I just want to teach him that there's a hereafter."

In South Carolina the Republican party has been dead sixty-four years, and no one observes any substantial signs of its return to life in the near future. Whosoever would belabor it is entitled to his entertainment.

So far as questions peculiar to the South are concerned, Democrats and Republicans have amalgamated in the North. Both parties vote for anti-lynching bills. The White House is now open at times to the colored people for tea.

To The News and Courier, the auguries are plain that a drive is in progress throughout the country, among the Northern politicians of all complexions, to break down not only the political, but the social barriers between the races in the Southern states. Among the Northern people are a few exceptions. James Wadsworth, Jr., former senator and now representative, of New York, is now the best Northern representative of the South's friends in congress. He is a Republican. The late Senator Borah, Republican, was a brilliant and unfaltering defender of state rights.

It is within the probabilities that before half a dozen years have passed the Southern states will be forced to resort to independent political action, to elect congressmen tied to neither of the two major parties, and presidential electors who will use their power in the most effective way they can to stop the insidious effort now going on in the ranks of both Northern parties to restore "Reconstruction".

Congressman Tells of Difficulties Facing Negroes

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(ANP)— One of the finest statements yet entered in the Congressional Record was that sponsored by Congressman Thomas H. Eliot of Massachusetts, which set forth in no uncertain terms the difficulties facing the Negro in the United States today and the unfairness of the entire set up as far as the Negro is concerned. Congressman Eliot, who was a classmate of Dr. Weaver's at Harvard, is a former members of the NAACP and is extremely interested in anything which has to do with the progress of Negroes

"I believe this one of the finest statements ever made said the Congressman" and I believe we are on the right track. While I don't know what specific measures can be taken to rectify this situation, I feel that the educational campaign being carried on is moving in the right direction."

Signatories of the statement, included some of the best known personages in the United States, both white and colored and numbered some 50 persons recruited from educational, religious, manufacturing, civic, social and business fields, white and colored alike. Prominent Negroes signing the statement included Elmer A. Carter of the New York State Department of Labor; Bishop John A. Gregg, department of race relations, Federal Council of Churches, Kansas City, Kan.; Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University; Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, Tuskegee Institute; A. Philip Randolph, international president, International Brotherhood of Sleepng Car Porters; C. C. Spaulding, president, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, as well as outstanding whites who feel the need for some change in the condition confronting the American Negro.

In his presentation before the house, Mr. Eliot said:

"Mr. Speaker, a very fine committee of outstanding citizens has come froward with a demand that in our defense program, there shall be no discrimination against members of the colored race.

"There has been experience in industry in the past and right now showing that colored men can do skilled jobs just as well as white men, but despite that fact, there are today many companies which refuse to hire Negro workers for skilled jobs.

"There are millions of Negro Americans. They are good citizens. As a nation, we must see to it that they are not oppressed and suppressed. The country needs the work that they can do."

The statement of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries and the members of the committee was then given.

AM I AN AMERICAN?

TRENTON, N. J.—(SNS)—

I REVERSE the popular quotation—"I Am An American"—and asked a question. Many of my people refuse to accept this fact because of the peculiar racial discriminations and inequalities under which we live. As long as we, or any other group, let it remain a part of our being that we are not American then indeed we are not.

The Constitution of the United States lays down the law to the effect that "all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens thereof." There are certain racial groups that cannot even become naturalized as citizens but persons of African descent, born in any other country, can be naturalized in the United States United States. There are some colored races more highly favored, from a standpoint of social and business relations by the main body of the people of this country such as Chinese, Japanese and East Indians who cannot become citizens of the United States: but from away back to the Civil War days, it has been recognized that this country is the land of the whites and the blacks, and there is no disposition on the part of the white people who are in power to change this law. Even the Indian, the great American Indian, is denied citizenship in many parts of the country but every since General Sherman, closely following the great civil war, said: "The colored man has put his hand in the cartridge box so he should be allowed to put it in the ballot box," though the gallantry of our forefathers in those critical days, you and I have been Americans, and we must continue to trust upon it until we have every American privilege.

There have been times in our history when it was said than an Irishman could not get justice in any of the courts of Boston; and the same was very nearly the truth with regard to their lot in other communities; they suffered racial discrimination somewhat as we do. But every American of Irish descent was taught to say and believe—I am an American! And today the Irish are chief among the ruling element in America.

Within very recent times the Jews were under a heavy ban of racial and religious discrimination; they were refused jobs and positions on that account alone, which drove so many of them into the professions and business. But the Jews insisted and held to the theme that. . . I am an American; and today with less than half the population strength of the Negro American, he holds the post of governor of the greatest state of the Union; another sits on the bench of the United States Supreme Court; they dominate the legal and medical professions; hold most important positions in government and in business.

The Italian group just a few years ago, found it difficult to rise up to places of importance in America; they did not speak the language; their children were refused many jobs and positions because of their race. But they have also caught onto the magic words . . I am an American. With this phrase in sight and despite opposition from older clans they have insisted upon enjoying American rights and privileges, so that now an American of Italian descent is mayor of the biggest and most important city in the United States; another is mayor of San Francisco, on the other side of the continent, and still another rules New Orleans, situated on the Gulf of Mexico.

The Negro American group is fast learning what it means to be an American. It calls for Christianity first, for no person can be a good American who is not a Christian, in the religious sense of the term. One must be insistent and persistent, the latter being a distinctive Negro characteristic. Now, if you and you, and you, will go forth and say, and mean, and reiterate that I AM AN AMERICAN—before many years have passed away, there will be nothing of the good things of American life denied you, for American living and American opportunities are for those who are indeed Americans.

All this week and all following weeks—I AM AN AMERICAN.

How An Ex-Slave Feels On "I Am An American Day"

By MAJOR R. R. WRIGHT
(On Goodwill Forum over WPEN)

America has just celebrated "I AM AN AMERICAN" day. This celebration meant much to me. I was born a slave without any privileges of an American citizen. There were but few months between the date of by birth and the announcement of the famous "Dred Scott Decision", in which it was alleged that Chief Justice Taney, of the U. S. Supreme Court, declared that the "black man has no rights which the white man was bound to respect."

To add to that series of unfortunate conditions which predicted slavery, my grandmother was captured and separated as a child from her alleged African kingly father and brought to America and placed in slavery.

Thus, all of my background was made up of said slave conditions. All of this is merely typical of what happened to the whole of the great minority race whose freedom was announced only 78 years ago.

Happy to be Citizens

Today, we are American citizens, charged with all of the duties of aiding in the building of the defense of our government. We are happy to be American citizens.

In the language of the late President William McKinley, which language is verified by American history, "No Negro has ever betrayed our country, and when and wherever given an opportunity and entrusted with the American flag, he has brought it back in victory or reported to God the reason why."

The presence here tonight in our Goodwill Broadcast Studio, of this fine military array of Negro Army officers, Colonel Howard C. Gilbert, commander of the 372nd Regiment; Lt. Colonel Alexander Davis, executive officer of the regiment; Lt. James Hillard, intelligence officer; Lt. Geo. J. Cole, colonel's aid, should thoroughly convince anyone that the Negro soldier is as competent and loyal and ready and willing to defend America as any other American citizen.

Hence, there occurs to me now and did occur to me on "I AM AN AMERICAN" day, the following questions: "Has America been as true to the Negro as the Negro has been true to America?" "Is America willing today to grant to the Negro the same economic and political privileges which are given to any other American citizens?"

I regret to admit, nonetheless, that the loyalty of the Negro to our American Republic has not been reciprocated by a large number of the majority citizens of the United States. Just a few days ago, while the Germans were bombing London, there were in the city of Dallas, in the home of a former Vice-President of the United States, certain white citizens who were bombing the homes of colored homeowners.

Under the draft today, every colored boy who becomes 21 years of age, becomes subject to the call to fight for the freedom of democracy. Will these colored boys be forced at the end of this war to say what they were compelled to say at the end of the last war:

"Why should I fight for the rights of other men to be heard and granted the four freedoms in foreign countries, when my voice is ignored in my own native land?" Or, "Why should I fight for the physical safety of other people when my own relatives are unsafe in parts of my own country and may be discriminated against or lynched while I am on the battle front?"

These are the thoughts which came to me on "I AM AN AMERICAN DAY" and which the American people should carefully consider when another "I AM AN AMERICAN" day comes around.

GOD Gless America; may she soon emerge from this war stronger and better prepared to guarantee to every loyal American citizen, without regard to race or color, equal safety and fairplay in the pursuit of livelihood and happiness.

WHITE MINISTER FLAYS COLOR BAR

Retiring Moderator Of Presbyterian Church Wants Masks Torn From Christian Religion So More Spirit Of The Christ May Reign. Says Plight Of Negro Is Dangerous To Our Democracy

One of the highlights of the 153rd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church which was held in St. Louis week was the address delivered by the retiring moderator William Lindsay Young, D.D., president of Park College, Parkville, Mo.

This address was delivered at the interracial meeting which was held at the City Auditorium Sunday afternoon, May 25.

Excerpts from Dr. Young's address:

"The Color Line A Noose"

"———we are slow to see that life loses much of its deepest satisfaction when we harbor attitudes of ill-will. To hate men and women just because they happen to belong to another race not only hurts those to whom antipathy is directed but it does damage to the soul of the one who hates.

"These are days when all are fearful for the survival of democracy as the American way of life. We are shortsighted, however, if we think that all the foes of democracy are beyond our national boundary lines. Within our own land, far behind any foreign battlefront, are forces that beat steadily against the foundations of our dearly bought liberties

"There are millions of Negroes in our country, most of whom are constantly harassed because of racial discriminations in quest of a job. They cannot clerk in our stores, run our street cars, operate our buses, or hold public office. At the bottom of the tragic plight of the Negro is racial antipathy. Born of this antipathy is their economic insecurity and economic insecurity is a very real danger to democracy. All of which means, .. we are to survive and grow as a democracy, we must eliminate ill-will between races.

"———irrespective of our color, whether it be black, white, brown or yellow, we all come from the one Creator. Note that the only differences in the three is in the realm of the exterior, the color of the skin. Whether we come from Europe, Africa, or America, God is the Father of all and loves all equally with an everlasting love.

"What can we do to bring about better relations between different races? . . . . It would seem to me that we will move toward the solution of our problems if we set out to find areas where we can learn by experience to better understood and appreciate each other . . . By thus sharing in mutual quests for the common good we would tend to outgrow that harmful pattern of thinking which divides people into two racial groups.

"A community is an organism which is healthy, happy and strong as a whole, or it is unhealthy, unhappy and weak. We cannot be half right and half wrong in our interracial relationships any more than we can be half slave and half free.

"It might be wholesome if those of us who are white would remind ourselves from time to time that as a race we are in the minority. There are more colored people in this world than there are whites.

"I hold that no man should have to wear a mask in any society where the spirit of Christ is in any sense alive. There is only one way to rip off that mask and that is to get rid of the conditions that produced it. The words uttered through our General Assembly of last year concerning minorities of race and creed bear repeating here. ———

Statement of the General Assembly made in May 1940

"In the name of God, who is no respecter of persons, and in the name of Christ, who is a brother to all classes and races, we assert that members of such minorities have a worth equal to that of the members of majority groups. We stand opposed to all claims of racial superiority. With the whole Christian world we are shocked by the intense suffering of millions caused by the application of the unchristian concept of inferiority of blood. We declare anew our determined allegiance to the Christian principle that all men are of one blood, all members of the same family of God, and urge the Church to employ all its spiritual resources against the unspeakable cruelty that flows from race prejudices and antipathies. We recognize that our common life has been enriched by contributions from not one but many racial groups and express appreciation for the part all have played in the development of our American democracy."

Dr. Young closed his address by repeating a well-known hymn.

In Christ there is no East or West
In Him no South or North
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth

Join hands then, brothers of the faith
What'er your race may be
Who serves my Father as a son
Is surely kin to me.

In the language of the late President William McKinley, which language is verified by American history, "No Negro has ever betrayed our country, and when and wherever given an opportunity and entrusted with the American flag, he has brought it back in victory or reported to God the reason why."

The presence here tonight in our Goodwill Broadcast Studio, of this fine military array of Negro Army officers, Colonel Howard C. Gilbert, commander of the 372nd Regiment; Lt. Colonel Alexander Davis, executive officer of the regiment; Lt. James Hillard, intelligence officer; Lt. Geo. J. Cole, colonel's aid, should thoroughly convince anyone that the Negro soldier is as competent and loyal and ready and willing to defend America as any other American citizen.

Hence, there occurs to me now and did occur to me on "I AM AN AMERICAN" day, the following questions: "Has America been as true to the Negro as the Negro has been true to America?" "Is America willing today to grant to the Negro the same economic and political privileges which are given to any other American citizens?"

I regret to admit, sometimes, that the loyalty of the Negro to our American Republic has not been reciprocated by a large number of the majority citizens of the United States. Just a few days ago, while the Germans were bombing London, there were in the city of Dallas, in the home of a former Vice-President of the United States, certain white citizens who were bombing the homes of colored homeowners.

Under the draft today, every colored boy who becomes 21 years of age, becomes subject to the call to fight for the freedom of democracy. Will these colored boys be forced at the end of this war to say what they were compelled to say at the end of the last war:

"Why should I fight for the rights of other men to be heard and granted the four freedoms in foreign countries, when my voice is ignored in my own native land?" Or, "Why should I fight for the physical safety of other people when my own relatives are unsafe in parts of my own country and may be discriminated against or lynched while I am on the battle front?"

These are the thoughts which came to me on "I AM AN AMERICAN DAY" and which the American people should carefully consider when another "I AM AN AMERICAN" day comes around.

GOD Gless America; may she soon emerge from this war stronger and better prepared to guarantee to every loyal American citizen, without regard to race or color, equal safety and fairplay in the pursuit of livelihood and happiness.

WHITE MINISTER FLAYS COLOR BAR

Retiring Moderator Of Presbyterian Church Wants Masks Torn From Christian Religion So More Spirit Of The Christ May Reign. Says Plight Of Negro Is Dangerous To Our Democracy

MAY 30 1941

One of the highlights of the 153rd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church which was held in St. Louis week was the address delivered by the retiring moderator William Lindsay Young, D.D., president of Park College, Parkville, Mo.

This address was delivered at the interracial meeting which was held at the City Auditorium Sunday afternoon, May 25.

Excerpts from Dr. Young's address:

MAY 30 1941

"The Color Line A Noose"

"———we are slow to see that life loses much of its deepest satisfaction when we harbor attitudes of ill-will. To hate men and women just because they happen to belong to another race not only hurts those to whom antipathy is directed but it does damage to the soul of the one who hates.

"These are days when all are fearful for the survival of democracy as the American way of life. We are shortsighted, however, if we think that all the foes of democracy are beyond our national boundary lines. Within our own land, far behind any foreign battlefront, are forces that beat steadily against the foundations of our dearly bought liberties

"There are millions of Negroes in our country, most of whom are constantly harassed because of racial discriminations in quest of a job. They cannot clerk in our stores, run our street cars, operate our buses, or hold public office. At the bottom of the tragic plight of the Negro is racial antipathy. Born of this antipathy is their economic insecurity and economic insecurity is a very real danger to democracy. All of which means, — we are to survive and grow as a democracy, we must eliminate ill-will between races.

"———irrespective of our color, whether it be black, white, brown or yellow, we all come from the one Creator. Note that the only differences in the three is in the realm of the exterior, the color of the skin. Whether we come from Europe, Africa, or America, God is the Father of all and loves all equally with an everlasting love.

"What can we do to bring about better relations between different races? . . . . It would seem to me that we will move toward the solution of our problems if we set out to find areas where we can learn by experience to better understood and appreciate each other . . . By thus sharing in mutual quests for the common good we would tend to outgrow that harmful pattern of thinking which divides people into two racial groups.

"A community is an organism which is healthy, happy and strong as a whole, or it is unhealthy, unhappy and weak. We cannot be half right and half wrong in our interracial relationships any more than we can be half slave and half free.

"It might be wholesome if those of us who are white would remind ourselves from time to time that as a race we are in the minority. There are more colored people in this world than there are whites.

MAY 30 1941

"I hold that no man should have to wear a mask in a society where the spirit of Christ is in any sense alive. There is only one way to rip off that mask and that is to get rid of the conditions that produced it. The words uttered through our General Assembly of last year concerning minorities of race and creed bear repeating here. ———

Statement of the General Assembly made in May 1940

"In the name of God, who is no respecter of persons, and in the name of Christ, who is a brother to all classes and races, we assert that members of such minorities have a worth equal to that of the members of majority groups. We stand opposed to all claims of racial superiority. With the whole Christian world we are shocked by the intense suffering of millions caused by the application of the unchristian concept of inferiority of blood. We declare anew our determined allegiance to the Christian principle that all men are of one blood, all members of the same family of God, and urge the Church to employ all its spiritual resources against the unspeakable cruelty that flows from race prejudices and antipathies. We recognize that our common life has been enriched by contributions from not one but many racial groups and express appreciation for the part all have played in the development of our American democracy."

MAY 30 1941

Dr. Young closed his address by repeating a well-known hymn.

In Christ there is no East or West
In Him no South or North
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth

Join hands then, brothers of the faith
What'er your race may be
Who serves my Father as a son
Is surely kin to me.

We Are Americans, Too!

For the past 76 years some sections of this country have been busy trying to continue through economic control the system that existed before the Emancipation Proclamation. Eery concievable means of keeping the Negro mentally, socially and economically inferior has been invoked—sometimes subtle, sometimes brazen.

The refusal to provide adequate educational facilities and cultural outlets has stifled the Negro's ambition in many quarters; a well-planned propaganda campaign has tended to dwarft his mentality, and the systematic barring of the Negro from worthwhile employment has kept him in virtual economic slavery. Such a program has bred the Ku Klux Klan, the Black Legion, the Christian Front, the Lynchers' rope, Jim Crow unions, Segregation, Discrimination and a hundred and one other evils which have torn this country asunder and turned it into a nation of "divided people" hardly less vicious than it was before chattel slavery was abolished.

In the face of tremendous odds the American Negro has pushed forward in practicaly every field of human endeavor to gain an enviable standing among other Americans. Despite terrific opposition he has achieved vast successes in the sciences and the arts; his inventive genius has been marvelous, his cultural advancement has been substantial, and economically he is just now beginning to show signs of coming into his own. But it has been on the economic front—backbone of all accomplishments—that the Negro has found the stiffest opposition.

Right now the United States is begging for experienced and skilled craftsmen to carry on the nation's defense needs. On every hand there is a appeal for help even to the point of recalling to the plants "over-age" men who have been retired. Meanwhile, thousands of well-trained and thoroughly equipped Negro technicians stand or sit by idle eager to serve their country by doing whatever job is offered them.

There is danger ahead for this country, from whom a large number can be drawn for the jobs. This reservoir ought to be tapped. tI seems to us that the first total emergency President Roosevelt ought to declare should be one that would call for an "all-out" attack on Jim Crowism, and the abandonment of the "Old Order." The integration of Negroes into the American set-up, in fact, must become a reality. Negroes cannot yet understand all the fan fare displayed over persons with newly acquired citizenship, some of whom occupy high places in our national life, while they, who have borne the brunt of the work through sweat and blood, to build this country, are denied even a good job much less many social privileges. For his own protection Uncle Sam ought to avail himself of his Negro labor. Furthermore, while he is engendering internal dissension by his unfair treatment to more than one-tenth of his "nephews and nieces" he may be meanwhile jeopardizing his own position as a power among nations of the world.

"I'M AN AMERICAN" TO BE MORE THAN SONG TOMORROW

Chicago Patriots to Live Role at Big Rally.

"I Am An American" day will be celebrated tomorrow afternoon in Soldier's field with entertainment and speeches. The event is designed as a patriotic festival which does not take sides in the peace versus war issue.

William S. Knudsen, co-director of the defense super-agency, the Office of Production Management [OPM], is scheduled to speak. His speech will be broadcast exclusively by Mutual stations at 3 p. m. At 7 p. m. a recording of the address will be heard over WMAQ.

MAY 17 1941

Other speakers will include Gov. Green, Mayor Kelly, and representatives of several religious denominations. Sunday night Gov. Green and members of the legislature will leave for Camp Forrest at Tullahoma, Tenn., where a review will be staged for them by army troops who formerly comprised the Illinois National Guard.

Citizenship Group Aiding.

One of the organizations coöperating in "I Am An American" day is the Illinois Citizenship conference, which includes representatives of many civic groups interested in improving citizenship standards. Attorney Charles B. Elder, the chairman, said the organization had sponsored an amendment transferring Citizenship day from October to the third Sunday in May.

"Hundreds of new voters who have within the last year reached the age of 21 or been naturalized will attend Sunday's program," Elder said. "We had intended to give them our pledge for new voters, but we have been told that it will be impossible to do this because of the multiplicity of other ceremonies. Originally our organization alone had the permit to use Soldiers' field on May 18, but we canceled it when we decided we lacked time for adequate preparations."

Famous Stars to Appear.

Entertainment features will be contributed by Helen Hayes, starring here in "Twelfth Night"; Pat O'Brien, motion picture actor; Ethel Waters, appearing in "Cabin in the Sky"; Jan Kiepura, opera singer; John Boles and his Sixteen Commanders, a male chorus, and other stars.

Also engaged for the event are Paul Whiteman and his orchestra and a Chicago Federation of Musicians' band of 40 men. Drum and bugle corps and drill teams of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars are scheduled to perform, as are national groups in native costume.

Choirs on the program include the Bohemian singing society "Lyra," the Ukranian combined choirs of 100 voices, the Lithuanian Pirmyn chorus of 100, and the 50 singers in the Chicago Urban league's "Sharps and Flats" section.

JUST TO REMIND YOU

By E. I. R.

On May 18th, by virtue of a proclamation by the President of the United States, we celebrate

"I Am An Amrican Day"

"We honor the American Flag, symbol of our American heritage. The right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in a free nation."

I am an American; I yield to no man in my love for America, though I am a Negro.

I am an American, but I have to fight for a right to fight for America as other Americans because I am a Negro.

I am an American but I cannot enlist in the United States Marine Corps.

I am an American, but I cannot enlist in the Naval service only as a cook, a messman or a kitchen scullion.

MAY 16 1941

I am an American but I cannot volunteer or if I am drafted, must be sent only where there is a Negro regiment.

I am an American, but the Boeing Air plant and the labor unions will not permit the very plants which hold contracts for millions of dollars for the building or government defense needs to employ me.

I am an American but I am denied insurance for my automobile.

I am an American but the news papers of this city carry advertisements that Negroes are restricted in certain residential districts.

A am an American but as a skilled worker I am denied membership in labor unions.

I am an American but they dynamite a Negro's home in Seattle.

I am an American, but I cannot vote in the Southern democratic primaries.

MAY 16 1941

I am an American but the D. A. R. will not permit even Marian Anderson to sing in their hall.

I am an American but can find employment only as a menial.

I am an American, but Congress steadfastly refuses to pass any anti-lynch bill.

I am an American but democracy in America means hypocrisy.

I am an American but will permit no man to question my loyalty to my government.

I am an American but Negroes breed no Benedict Arnolds.

I AM AN AMERICAN, BUT I AM A NEGRO.

Report Nazis Preparing Film To Arouse Negroes

MAY 31 1941

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 29—(ANP)—Official Washington is disturbed over reports that the Nazis are preparing a special film intended to arouse the Negroes against the government and hamper defense efforts, it became known here this week. Federal officials are without statutory authority to stop such a llm although it is classed as "an overt attack on the United States."

The Nazis have already started showing in America the film, "Victory in the West," and plan soon to release "The Irish Tragedy" and "The Eternal Jew". The presentation of such films follows the Nazi technique when the undermining of a nation is contemplated as was the procedure followed in Czecho Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Holland and the Balkans.

Is There A "Negro Problem'

READ the papers carefully today and somewhere, in some connection, you will find the words "Negro problem".

Little incidents are played up. Whenever a Negro commist a crime his being a Negro is stressed, and so the ball grows. Discrimination injustice and a fanning of the flames have kept it growing.

What is back of this raising o the cry - Negro problem? Who is fanning the fires of hatred and blind and senseless race prejudice? Who is it that benefits by the application of the slogan "Divide—and conquer"?

Negroes in America are citizens of the United States—subjects to the same Constitution as other citizens entitled to the same rights, and responsible for the same obligations. That is tho law of the land—regardless of how selfish and self-interested individuals may interpretit.

The existing status of Negroes is one for both races to change The totalitarian states have solved it by relegating the Negro to a state of lowest inferiority. They believe in driving him all the way down. Faulty though the application of democratic principles may be, unjust and unfair though many of the restrictions and discriminations are the trend of our democracy is to raise the Negro to the full stature citizenship. Consider the gains that have been made over the years Negroes have gained their rights far more rapidly than the women of the nation did theirs.

The larger responsibility for the solution of them problem lies with the majority but what is needed is a common denominator by which both groups can live in the same country and respects the rights of both—honoring the individual as a man.

There are ways in which Negroes may greatly aid bringing a better day in race relations. Let tehm strive to stand out and be counted as individuals. Let them show by every act and word that they are citizens in full cooperation with their government. Let them publicize the good their leaders have done and do—even more than the injustices done them. George Washington Carver has done much for Negro advancement by being the man that he is.

Let every Negro count himself ai an American—and live up to that high stendard in every way. By the force of his own initiative and intergritty—he can compel the respect and acceptance he desire and the equality as a citizen that is his under the Constitution.

Confirming Senator Byrnes

The reversal by the supreme court of the United States of the conviction of murder of a negro in Birmingham, Alabama, on the ground that he was subjected to a "third degree" and that negroes were excluded from the jury that tried him, is another of the heaping evidences that the federal government is taking from the states their right to administer their own criminal laws. The federal government seems resolved upon this course, and the court, as at present constituted, is a New Deal court. The great cities dominate the United States, and in those cities the negroes are numerous and sometimes have the balance of power in elections. A large proportion of them are on relief, a much larger proportion than of white people; which is to say that they are dependents on the federal treasury. "The negroes are now in control of the Democratic party," said James F. Byrnes of South Carolina on the floor of the senate in January, 1938. Numerous incidents are confirming Senator Byrnes in that statement. In short, we are now enjoying a government in the creation and maintenance of which negro reliefers are an important factor. That is the kind of govment that the majority of the people vote for. In South Carolina, the white people vote for it almost unanimously.

SINCE THEY ARE HERE

Since the negroes are here, and unless something mircaulous happens to change their minds, they are to stay here, most of them willing to stay in their places and work, from all worthy sources, they shall be happy to receive just such encouragement that will make them larger contributors to our National Defense program, by the production of more food and feedstuff, with which to meet the physical demands of the people at home and abroad. In Walton county we have lots of colored folk who are ambitious, thorough-going, and who know how to grow abundantly the things it takes to "keep soul and body together." White men, by a sympathetic interest, will be heard by every negro in Walton county, once he lets it be known that on him the safety of our beloved country depends and, in addition thereto, boosts him. No person on this earth is more susceptible to or appreciative of flattery than the industrious, law-abiding darkey.

MY DAY: Irrigation Is Solution To Navajo Problem

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—I asked Mr. John Collier, of the Office of Indian Affairs, to come in late yesterday afternoon to tell me something about the Navajo situation, about which I wrote in my column a few days ago.

It appears that the land on the reservation, in 81 years, has completely changed because of overgrazing. What was once meadow land with plenty of water and beautiful grass, is now practically desert. The wooded slopes have disappeared, floods wash away the top soil and the grass no longer exists. It is quite evident that, in order to bring it back, there must be a drastic curtailment of cattle, wild horses, goats and sheep.

This means that a people, whose average cash income is only about $120 a year, must either go on relief, which they want at all costs to avoid, or starve to death. The only other solution seems to be the possibility of carrying through an irrigation project which will allow them to irrigate enough land so they can raise crops to feed their cattle at certain times, and also to grow some cash crops if the difficulty of transportation can be overcome.

The decision on the irrigation is, of course, up to congress. At the present time, I can quite understand the argument against putting money into anything which can be set aside to be done when the defense period is over. Still, if congress decides that this is necessary, it seems to me that they have a joint responsibility with the Office of Indian Affairs to devise some means by which these naturally independent American citizens can earn their living and not feel dependent upon the government for a chance merely to survive.

Here is another problem which has come to me. You know and I know how bitterly the Negro people are ditsurbed over their inability to participate in national defense, or to obtain employment in defense industries. Here again there are many difficulties and complications. But there is just one little item into which I think all of us could look in our respective communities.

In New York City there are 2,845 Negro youth workers on NYA, of whom 1,245 are girls. This group comprises 15.6 per cent of the program in New York City. There is no discrimination in training and it is open to all girls. It has been found that the Negro girls are fitted to take training in as many different fields as the white girls, but in New York City and the state the greatest number of employment opportunities for Negro girls are in domestic service.

The next employment opportunties lie in the operation of power sewing machines, because the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union allows no race discrimination. In all the other fields of training, employment opportunities for Negro girls as against white girls are extremely limited.

This living in a democracy is a problem, isn't it?

MEAN MEN

THEY DOUBLE-CROSSED, ROBBED AND CHEATED THEIR OWN PEOPLE

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

"ONE OF the meanest men that I ever met was a black man; he was a Negro slaveholder, and he kept only the company of white men." These startling words were spoken by the Honorable Selma Martin before the Paris Anti-Slavery Society in 1867. Martin was a colored orator of conviction, refinement and ability. Very few of us know that any members of our race held slaves in this country although it is common knowledge that slavery abounded in Africa and in fact it still exists among our so-called brothers living on the dark continent.

Mr. Bibb

We know that many Negroes fought to keep themselves and their brothers in slavery and that the treachery of our people led to the death of Denmark Vesey, who in 1822, 35 years before Nat Turner's uprising, led an insurrection against slavery.

BREATHING PAUSE

Some of the meanest men that we have met have also been members of our own race. Many of them and others of kindred spirit are with us now and it would perhaps serve an enlightening purpose to turn the spotlight upon them and give the whites a breathing pause.

TWO OF the most craven characters that I have ever known were described as "black capitalists." They built up their important businesses with "other people's" money, money that was subscribed to them upon the catchy and captivating appeal of "sacrificial support of Negro business." They fleeced their best friends, took advantage of every fiduciary relationship, they exploited and cheated those who trusted them and they built up for themselves treasures on earth. They paid paltry wages for long hours of work.

PENNY-PINCHERS

Like Scrooge and Marley, they pinched every penny and domineered all who came under their clutches. Miserly, they lived, until the day of reckoning came and when it did their castles crumbled because they were built on sand. In their train they left misery, anguish, poverty and, still more tragic, they almost destroyed the faith of their followers in the integrity of business built up by black people. They were mean men.

I HAVE met mean men in politics who were catapulted to power by the great hordes of common people who hoped to gain a place in the sun for themselves and their fellows. These mean, political men immediately set out to perpetuate themselves in office. They grabbed all the spoils for themselves and their families. They steadfastly guarded the doors of the white bosses and prevented their constituents from getting in to see and protest to the powers behind the throne. These men were supinely selfish. They snatched and grabbed everything that they could garner for themselves. They disillusioned their followers and left them sad and embittered.

BLABBED EVERYTHING

I have met the oily, slick and smooth "race-problem hustlers" who have been stool-pigeons and spies for antagonistic whites. These mean people blabbed everything that they could find out to defeat the interests of their own flesh and blood. They have been modern Pharisees and their whited sepulchers have been filled with our bones. They are with us now, these measly traitors who hold nothing in the race too sacred to place on the auction block. They are enrolled with the meanest men of our times.

MEAN inded are those calloused creatures who have entered into conspiracies and combines to raise the rents in our benighted areas and yet it is well known that these practices have been followed in almost all of our large cities. Our own people have aided and abetted in peeking rents in our districts and caused us to pay a 'color tax" on a place to live.

FOSTERED JIM-CROW

Unspeakably mean are those who have sought to crate jim-crow institutions in northern districts such as schools and hospitals in order that their relatives could get jobs. A grat portion of the evils and iniquities that are foisted upon us have been inspired and promoted by mean men.

THEIR inhumaness and their ingratitude has brought sorrow, poverty and despair upon us in too many instances. Their "Inhumanity to man has made countless thousands mourn." Mean, cruel, cold-blooded characters of our race have struck their poisoned daggers into the backs of their own blood brothers. I regret having met these sordid souls.

JIM-CROWISM As A NATIONAL POLICY

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

The issue of jim-crowism as a national policy was dramatically kept to the fore during the last Presidential campaign. Its sinister and ugly significance was exposed. Its benumbing influence in tending to reconcile 13,000,000 colored men, women and children to its baleful effects in the present, and in the long future, was pointed out.

It was shown that the jim-crow unit in government employment is a device invented by New Dealism to deny colored persons full and free opportunity to achieve a career in the federal service of the government as well as to prevent them from having any significant or policy-making activity. The net result is practically to eliminate them from all professional and skilled service under the federal government.

This stigma by the Roosevelt administration is reserved for colored Americans alone. No such units have been established for other racial groups in the federal service. This is the scandal of Washington and of the nation.

The policy is so vindictively mean and vicious that one of the candidates for the Presidency, Wendell Willkie, in his first speech of the campaign, mentioned it, first of all, as an issue to be met.

He said: "If elected, I will see to it that jim-crow departments in the federal government and in the divisions which the New Deal has created by executive decree are eliminated . . . and that colored citizens shall be appointed to any branch for which they are qualified."

GESTURES OF MITIGATION

Some few gestures toward mitigation were made by Mr. Roosevelt during the hectic campaign, but the issue was not squarely met. The few sops dished out momentarily quieted certain elements of the Negro group, but not the intelligent, thinking elements that recognized the wrong and injustices of the whole jim-crow program.

Now comes the American Peoples Meeting, which recently met in New York City, with 5,000 representatives present from 43 states, challenging, as reported by National Negro Congress headquarters, "the right of the Roosevelt government to establish jim-crowism as a national policy in the armed services, the job life, and the political life of the country."

This un-American policy, nurtured and promoted by the Roosevelt administration in federal employment, has found its way into defense industries now manufacturing the implements which are to constitute "the arsenal of democracy."

ALIEN SABOTAGE

Henry Wallace, Vice President of the United States, was moved to indignation in an address in the South last week when he declared that alien sabotage is interfering with the production of arms, forgetting and overlooking the apparent and well designed policy of the administration, industry and labor to hire and coddle aliens in industrial employments while callously refusing opportunities to able, skilled, eager willing and suffering Negro citizens who have a real stake in this government of ours—the only one they have known and supported by arms, by taxes, and by long-continued loyalty.

Why these intolerant proscriptions are permitted to continue is beyond comprehension. They are inexplicable and discouraging.

NAME-CALLING AND BLAME-PLACING

The time has arrived for name-calling and blame-placing. It all "heads back" to the Roosevelt administration. The Negro press has pictured William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the Office of Production Management, serving directly under the President, as being adamant in refusing to crack-down on those plants which have been awarded millions upon millions in defense contracts which specifically interdict discrimination in employment on account of race, creed, color, or sex.

And all of this while plaintive cries are being publicized calling attention to serious shortages in man-power in defense industry.

Ironically, one of the loudest of these cries is from the naval occupational adviser to the Maritime Commission, which has called a conference in Washington on April 28 ,to discuss present and impending shortages.

And, in the meantime, Secretary Knox and naval officials are being kept busy writing letters advising that no Negroes will or can be employed in the navy "for the good of the service."

MAY 10 1941

UPHOLDING AN UNHOLY TRADITION

It is a fair conclusion that these gentry would much rather uphold the unholy tradition that Negroes shall only serve as mess-men in the navy than open the doors of opportunity to this group of citizens for training as firemen and engineers in the transport service and other branches where they would quickly qualify to meet whatever the exacting requirements may be.

It is no longer a secret that government officials are greatly and visibly disturbed because of the large numbers of Communists, aliens and saboteurs now employed in the federal service, and in industry who are threatening general strikes of one kind and another.

But they are not disturbed enough to throw overboard the ancient prejudices which effectually bar men of loyal blood and tradition who love America and who would efficiently serve the needs of the nation if only granted the privilege and opportunity.

Nazis and Communists Have First Call Over Negroes On Army Troop-Ships

By Emmett J. Scott

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A few weeks ago, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican Leader in the U. S. House of Representatives, and Chairman of the Republican National Committee, called upon Republicans in Industry and in Politics to help widen opportunities for the employment of Colored citizens without discrimination and, also, to see that greater opportunities and recognition are provided for them in public service.

Last week, in a discussion of the utterly mad carnival of ghastly mass murder and destruction now going on between nations, he realistically pointed out the menacing dangers and potentialities that may affect this country, especially the youth of the land.

These young people, he said, are entitled to a chance to be educated, to get positions in which there is an opportunity to advance, a chance not only to live but also to be happy while living, to enjoy the advantages and comforts of life, and to contribute their share toward making this a better land to live in.

In calling for complete unity for strong national defense so as to strengthen the security of the American people, he emphasized the fact that this could only come through honest cooperation and fair-dealing on the part of the Roosevelt Administration. Particularly, he spoke out against "giving any one group in our country special consideration over any other group."

The Negro's Complaint

Right here is where the complaint of the Negro people becomes pertinent. The catalogue of injustices to which they have been subjected is a continuing and lengthening one. No one in the Roosevelt Administration, it seems, gives a hoot, or seriously considers their claims to equal justice and fair-play.

During these trying days, when thoughtful men and women of the country are deeply concerned with respect to a sustained, inspired and stirred morale, and full support of all Government efforts in defense preparation by all elements of our country's population, it is discouraging, day by day, to note that practically nothing of a definitely affirmative character is being done by the Roosevelt Administration to cure the evils of which Negro newspapers, Negro leaders and Negro organizations, and many Whites as well, have complained, and are continuing to complain.

As Chairman Martin declared:

"All groups are expected to pay the taxes for defense; all groups are required to send men into the draft; all groups are expected to fight and, if necessary, to die for the country. All groups should have an equal chance for work."

MAY 22 1941

The Army, Navy and Communists

Let's take the United States Army. It is reported that, in taking over ships as troop transports, it is now engaged in weeding out men in civilian crews suspected of being Nazis and Communists. Already, it has been learned, there has been a "purge" on one large troop-ship, the SS Washington, recently taken over by the Army from the U. S. Lines. After an investigation of the sailing crew, 70 men were discharged. No one knows how many remain.

In one case, it was found, a Communist employee sent a telegram to Earl Browder, after the latter's conviction, praising him as a great leader of American working classes. The message was sent to Browder, it is stated, from a Government-owned and operated ship whose crew is being paid with Federal-Government funds."

And, during all this period, Secretary of the Navy Knox is still declaring: "No Negroes will be employed except as mess-men"—as scullions, and waiters and personal servants for officers. And the Army is following suit on these troop-ships.

No traitorous group of black men has ever disgraced the Army uniform, and the same holds for the Navy during the period, years before the Roosevelt Administration, when they could aspire to and efficiently serve with distinction and with high and deserved praise.

Is it too much to ask a country, periled and striving to preserve the principles of Americanism, to have more consideration for loyal, efficient black men than for tainted, alien, transmission belts of Naziism, Facism and Communism now incorporated in Army and Navy personnel?

Glaring Instances of Discrimination

With such glaring instances of discrimination, as here described, what incentive is there for whole-hearted and enthusiastic support of a program shot through with prejudices, suspicious, hatreds—based on color distinction, without regard to character, efficiency, or loyalty?

These prejudices are not confined to industry and the Army and Navy only. Colored stenographers and others who have successfully passed Civil Service examinations for technical and higher positions are constantly being turned down and shuttled around and denied positions to which they are certified by Federal bureaucrats practically each week of the year.

Sydney Hillman is issuing weasel-word manifestos, with no teeth in them, while the merry-go-round of dodging and evasion continues to deny opportunities to Colored applicants for employment in defense programs for which the Federal Government is putting up its Billions of Dollars.

Washington, the Capital of the Nation, the Citadel of Power, reeks with this sort of thing. How are we to preserve and perpetuate our form of Government, while denying and defying the precepts and principles of the Federal Constitution, the Bill of Rights, and all that Freedom and Democracy mean and stand for?

The National Offense

THESE ARE STRANGE times in which we live. So as the nation prepares for National Defense, let's speak a word concerning the National Offense. Which, in case you don't know, happens to be the systematic denial of equal opportunities to the Negro.

JUN 6/10/41

Three-fourths of the world at war. Britain, last of the democracies, with her back making imprints into the proverbial wall. Hostile and heavily armed nations all around. From Dies to Winchell the cry goes up that this country is fairly polluted with Fifth Columnists, many of whom are in high places. Isolationists, America Firsts, strikers, saboteurs and just plain rebels all howling opposition to the President's program of unity. Yet through it all, this of all countries still harbors and cultivates a race question. Our nation shudders at the horrors of Hitler; yarns when a hapless Negro falls in the hands of a mob. Declares that equality and justice were intended for all men; acts as if the Negro wasn't included in the "new order".

JUN 10 1941

There are seven states which deny the Negro the right to vote. Large scale discrimination goes on in the army, navy and air corps. The tax-supported Naval Academy refuses to play against a Harvard lacrosse player. Aside from knowing the job, the only other requisite for securing employment in the nation's large industrial concerns holding defense contracts is that of being white.

Yes, these are truly strange times. And as the nation goes forth with National Defense primarily designed to save democracy abroad, let's take a look at our National Offense and perfect democracy at home.

Tail Lights For Negroes!

PALM BEACH, Fla., June 5—A Solomon in Disguise would be a true appelation for C. A. Bunkley, a white motorist who is deeply conscious of an obligation to Negro pedestrians. The wise Mr. Bunkley has suggested to Mayor W. H. Hitt and the City Commissioners that as a protective measure Negroes be forced to wear tail lights in night traffic.

Said Mr. Bunkley, "Many times these Negroes are very dark in color and wear dark clothes and it is hard if not impossible to see them. Kindly pass an ordinance making them use a tail light."

The Commissioners took no action on the proposal at their meeting last Tuesday.

Negro Vital Link In Our Democracy Asserts Powell

FEB 11 1941

RICHMOND, Va. — (SNS) — Speaking at forty-second Founder's Day celebration at Virginia Union University last Friday Dr. A. Clayton Powell, Jr, declared that the future of western society and more specifically, of our democracy lies in the solution of the Negro problem from the point of view of the Negro as a human being for "whatever the fire of democracy is allowed to die out in Negro communities. Its chances of being a blazing torch in any other community are null and void."

Beginning his address with observations on present world condition, Dr. Powell stated that "twentieth century civilization with all of its customs, traditions, institutions, mores, and concepts.... is in eminent danger of being shoved back culturally and morally five thousands years.

"It is impossible for us worship blindly at the altar of progress culture, and civilization when we see such glaring evidence around us that all these have become the masters of men and are only relative into time....Upon the basis of technological advancement, western culture prided itself as history's greatest civilization, but I believe upon the basis of technological advancement that western culture will go down to an inglorious defeat."

DEMOCRACY A MYTH

The speaker pointed out that as far as the Negro is concerned western society has definitely subjected him to a lower plane. Pure democracy has been a myth. He stated that "for centuries, democracies have been raising their proud heads, crying about liberties of men, fraternity, equality brotherhod — at the same time they confined thirteen million Negroes to perpetual serfdom here within the borders of this great land . . . Man created in God's image annot be crushed anywhere in the world without eventually crushing every other group in the world that belongs to the have-nots. The crying need is for THE RESTORATION TO THE INDIVIDUAL OF HIS SUPREME WORTH AS A HUMAN BEING.'

Emphasizing the fact that the black man's destiny can be shaped for the next century in the present crisis, Dr. Powell proposed that four steps be taken. The Negro church must be established as a mass bass, we must have radically sincere leadership, militancy based upon the power of non-violence and an implicit faith in a new order."

Ending his address with a hopeful outlook, Dr. Powell declared that "upon the surface, many times down through the ages, the cause of progress and of human enlightenment seems to have been lost, the waters troubled by those who wanted to rule the world for themselves. BUT, ever and anon, beneath the surface, the Eternal One has moved the tides of life with unfailing accuracy and minute precision. We must not despair. We may die and go down to totalitarian grave, but one day there will rise out of the embers of this world order—a new one."

NEGRO PROBLEM.

To the Editor: A letter by J. W. Stroud, which appeared in The Forum on January 30, openly advocates the "exportation" of the American Negro. The writer of that letter seems quite ready to have the United States abandon its democratic tradition, scrap the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, and utterly renounce the lofty ideals of the Declaration of Independence. The writer of that letter seems to have forgotten that the Declaration of Independence asserts that "all men are created equal;" the Constitution of the United States, even before the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments, recognized each Negro slave as three-fifths of a "person" for purposes of determining state representation in the national Congress.

That writer also seems to have forgotten the enormous amount of slave labor that went into the conquest, settlement and development of the vast wilderness which early settlers found here; the vaunted wealth of the Colonial South was largely the product of slave labor. Can it be that Mr. Stroud has forgotten that the Negro came here through no fault of his own; it was the white man who sought him in his native land, overcame him by force or trickery, and brought him to America to slavery. Some of the viciousness of those earlier years have in the course of history been largely overcome. Surely there can be no thoughtful American who would add further to these inhumanities; surely no reasonable person can blame the Negro, who has through his labor produced so much of the wealth of the South, for the poverty of the region as a whole.

Dr. Howard W. Odum of the University of North Carolina, in that monumental and authoritative survey, "Southern Regions of the United States," focuses attention on three challenging facts: (1) the South is a region of potential abundance and actual waste; (2) it is a region of rich but immature culture, and (3) there is a general deficiency in science, skills, technology and organization. "Exporting" the Negro will not cure these ills.

Isn't it about time for "Southerners of the Old School" to stop using the "Negro problem" as an excuse for the cultural and economic deprivations of the South? Isn't it about time that all of the people of the South set themselves to find, filter, focus and face the real facts in the situation? The problem of poverty in the midst of abundance, the problem of undeveloped minds, unskilled hands, and a lack of enlightened initiative and social vision—these are very real and important problems, too.

NEGRO PROBLEM.

To the Editor: Please allow me space to answer J. W. Stroud, of Richmond, on "Would Export Negroes." I can easily see why the people of Lenoir County do not want a Negro NYA project in a white community. For the same reason I can see why an intelligent Negro community would not want a white project of its kind set up in its midst. Many students who come to such projects for training would not know just how to behave in a community populated by members of another race. Therefore, some trouble would ensue that would be very embarrassing to the trainers and members of the community who wished to work for a better cultural understanding between the two races.

For the past 20 years I have seen and appreciate a courageous effort made by distinguished white leaders and educators to educate men of color (Indian and Negro) to a sense of better human understanding, and the kind of whites I mention understand that they are not making a tool to slash their own throats, but a tool that will play a great part in future human progress.

This is demonstrated by the fact that today we see them working side by side in all fields of science—chemistry, industry and agriculture—each one satisfied so far as race is concerned. Therefore, I do not believe that the South is pulled down by poverty because one-third of the population is Negro. "Together we stand, divided we fall" applies to all mankind, and when we do unto all men as we would they should do unto us, we will not see any reason for sending out one race and leaving the other here. For, after all, let my refere remember that this land was once inhabited my redskins and was taken by conquerors at the point of a gun.

THE NFW NEGRO

Dear Editor: The new position of the Negro is not a matter of "rights." It is not a matter of argument. It is a fact. They have entered new fields of economic and political life. They are earning their living in ways priorily denied them; they are sharing in the responsibilities of the community and government in ways once thought impossible. Argument as to the right and wrong of their new position in America today, does not alter the fact that it is here to stay, and that it is a matter to be reckoned with in any attempt to understand the complex origination of modern life.

We, of the younger generation cannot know wholly the barriers of custom and tradition, which they had to break down before they attained this new position. We cannot fully realize the origination of the old society, where their position was so different than it is today.

And yet, youth is conscious that they are faced with a hundred new problems, which are the legacy from those old traditions and are striving to re-create in their minds a picture of the old society and the share that the Negro had in it. They are trying to understand the revolt from the old conditions. They are coming to know the vigorous personalities who are leading this revolt. They are trying to understand the principles and the programs of the movement as it is being developed, why people fight over the questions of Negro rights, hardly noticing the change that is taking place in economic life. Youth is finding out what work the Negro is doing today, what influences they have, what movements they are engaged in, to what degree they are planning group service. And with this information in hand, they are weighing intelligently, and finding it—GOOD!

Most important of all: Youth recognizes of the coming years that the Negro will not quietly follow, but will [illegible] upon free and genuine recognition by their fellow men, and acclaims this right of them to the fullest degree that they are able to command. — Larry King, Box 22548, Represa, Calif.

Young Refugees Expose Nazi's Race Discrimatory Practices

Colored Women Sterilized and Made to S erve as Prostitutes for Soldiers—Shunted Around to Various Prison Camps— Colored World War Ace's Children Come to America After Hitler Takes Father's Business.

FEB 1 5 1941

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—(ANP)—To those readers of Hitler's "Mein Kampf," familiar with his conception of the way members of the "black races" should be treated, reports of the atrocities to which Negroes are being subjected in Nazi-dominated Paris come as no surprise.

In the fun-loving city which American Negroes had formerly regarded as a veritable haven for the oppressed, Hitler's theories have been put into practice, and the fourteen colored refugees who arrived here Monday had terrible tales to tell.

It was revealed that colored women are sterilized and then shunted around to various prison camps in occupied France, where they serve as prostitutes for prisoners and guards. The children remain behind to work as domestics for German and French military authorities; those not old enough to work are given just enough food to keep them alive.

Among the pasengers were the two daughters of Eugene Bullard, only colored aviator to serve in the last war, Jacqueline and Lolita, who told their father that the family's $50,000 gymnasium and restaurant had been taken over by a young German who had been living in Paris before the war, and who turned out to be one of Hitler's fifth columnists. The girls, who were born in France and spoke no English, said: "When we ventured out into the streets, the Germans would laugh at us and call us animals."

Mrs. Arabelle Middleton, formerly of Washington, revealed that she had been forced to leave her 10-year-old son behind with white friends who promised to take care of him "until I am able to get him out."

The Negro Is On His Own

It has been a busy and eventful year, working on the editorial desk during 1940. So many things have happened. Moreover, many things have become apparent as we have watched the trend of events in the political, social and economic phases of American life.

One thing is certain: from now on we believe the American Negro is on his own. Ever since the Reconstruction Days, the Negro has followed an odd type of leadership; a leadership designed to keep him in a form of slavery—mental and spiritual—that controlled his efforts and action almost as completely as did chattel slavery before the Emancipation Proclamation.

This leadership began in the church, out of which grew Negro fraternal organizations, business and schools. Most of these were influential in helping to bring the Negro into full stature as an American citizen, but they were the beginning. Negroes, in those days, believed as religiously in the inferiority of their position as the white man believed in the superiority of his. Both were wrong, but under the force of well-planned propaganda, their minds were conditioned for the sole purpose of economic and political exploitation.

But, down through the years the Negro has grown wiser. By the hardest way he has gained a higher educational status, and has learned many of the tricks of his white brother. Now, there is a complete change in the thinking of the Negro. He no longer believes he is inferior to anyone; he is convinced a man must be judged by his deeds rather than by the color of his skin or the texture of his hair.

But as the Negro has thus gone through this transition and has begun to make new demands, a noticeable decrease has occurred in the aid he previously received from white philanthropists. There is every indication that the decrease will continue which will more and more throw the burden of supporting his own cause directly on the shoulders of the Negro himself.

The suffering of the Negro under the uninformed and weak-kneed leadership who controlled his destiny up to the past few years was borne heroically. His mistakes and shortcomings must be excused because his leaders didn't have the education, training and experience to lead him otherwise. But today is a diffirent story. The Negro in America to our way of thinking, has become of age. He has attained high rank in the arts, sciences, business, politics, diplomacy and economics e is prepared to furnish his people e right type of leadership. The nislers and mountebanks must be hurled to the wolves.

The Negro is now on his own. he help, advice and assistance he sed to get from sympathetic whites e on the wane. This is a new day. hat the Negro amounts to in this untry from now on is going to de- nd on his own leadership. And it s got to be sound. The days of gging and beseeching are over.

Colored and Jewish Radicals

Rabbi Edward Israel, of Baltimore, spoke of an editorial in a colored newspaper advising Hitler to keep his 450,000 Jews, for to dump them here would lower our economic standards through competition.

Such sentiments were expressed in the AFRO recently but not in an editorial. Rabbi Israel should know that a newspaper columnist does not necessarily speak the views of his newspaper. Nor do we see anything unusual in the view that the United States should solve its own unemployment problem before it admits any new immigrants. It is a view that is quite common albeit selfish.

Rabbi Israel also condemns colored people who, he says, shout aloud against the Jew, as Hitler does, on the theory that it might possibly help alleviate "the Negro problem."

It is most unfortunate that radicals among colored people or Jews should be taken seriously.

Colored people who rail against Jews are no better than Jewish department-store owners who, yielding to race prejudice, put up a color bar saying "Colored people stay out."

The better element of the Jewish people does not approve these Jewish exponents of race prejudice. And we hasten to add that we do not appreciate the occasional but blatant voices on our side which seek to fan the fires of racial intolerance.

But we live in America, where press and speech are free. We do not muzzle those who are in error, but patiently set up our loudspeaker as close to theirs as we can and broadcast the plain facts.

We have found out by experience that the people, hearing both sides, will eventually choose that which is right.

Good Neighbors?

YOUR UNCLE SAM, knowing that an effective defense of America means a defense of the entire Western Hemisphere, ever since Hitler began marching, has been making friendly overtures to those nations to the South of us.

Every boat sailing the Caribbean and Latin-American trade routes that arrives at New York unloads more and more "visitors" from those countries whose friendship arrogant Americans under thhe bayonet policy of past presidents have so foolishly scorned.

Now under President Roosevelt and as a result of the trend of events abroad, the United States drops the old "dollar diplomacy" of Harding-Coolidge-Hoover regime and substitutes the more sensible "Good Neighbor" program.

MACKAY

However in its program to bring about this badly needed hemispheric solidarity, our state department continues to overlook one of the most effective ways of creating goodwill between this nation and the Latin-American republics.

Totally ignored for some unexplained reason are the possibilities of cementing firm friendship between these nations through the large Negro populations that reside both here and to the South of us.

Actually it was the prejudiced attitude of Americans toward darker-hued officials in these Latin-American countries that did so much to create suspicion and distrust of the United States.

AMERICANS DISPLAY PREJUDICE

Many Americans harboring prejudiced feelings toward all men of color visiting in Rio de Janeiro and other South American capitals make no effort whatsoever to conceal their disapproval of Negroes holding high positions in government. They sought to inaugurate their own pet ideas as to how Negroes should be treated. The result was naturally disastrous to a program of friendship.

It's just not human to develop a fondness for a bully who comes into your house, tries to tell you how you should run it, and plainly displays contempetuous scorn for those of your children, who chance to be of darker hue than the others.

Most puzzling to those watching America's move to cement friendship between nations in this hemisphere is the state department's attitude toward collaboration between Negroes of the various countries and the United States. From past actions, this is something those who design our foreign policy are decidedly against.

Large numbers of Negroes inhabit the Caribbean islands and a big majority of the Central and South American republics. In some of these countries they even outnumber persons of Caucasian extraction. They are black people and they are extremely interested in black people in all parts of the world.

PRESENT WARPED PICTURES

It has been no secret that for years there has been a studied effort to keep Negroes in South America from knowing too much about Negroes in the United States. Textbooks supplied by the United States to schools in South America tend to burlesque black Americans. Negroes in the states are pictured as half-civilized specimens of humanity that are to be religiously avoided.

And in like manner a warped picture is given the Negro American of his brother south of the equator. Spanish is virtually the universal language of the Latin republics. But just stop and think how many of our schools offer Spanish. Not many. Instead French is the foreign language most widely used in our high school and college curriculums. One wonders how many of us have been aware that there is a design to this; and that design is to keep the black peoples of North and South America as widely apart as possible.

How our state department keeps up this determination not to permit dark-hued visitors from South America to get near their blood brothers here was told last week by a Negro worker in that unit of our government.

Speaking of the influx of dusky visitors from "South of the Border," this worker says: "They come in, darker than usual, bulbous noses, want to visit certain sights in this country. I know they are regarded as Negroes, and they have every indication of being colored folk, but not in the state department.

NEGROES ARE AVOIDED

"Brother, they are herded off so fast it isn't even funny. The officials bow and scrape to them, and take them on certain carefully arranged itineraries, where they are sure not to come in contact or conflict with any colored folk. I'm willing to bet you that all of the South Americans of Negro mixed blood and Negro extraction, not one of them knows there is such a thing as Howard University—unles they accidentally slipped up on it. The state folk see that they meet none of those Negroes, nor any others of consequence."

The writer believes this is an extremely short-sighted policy. Closer collaboration between the black peoples of the two hemispheres is as necessary as closer ties between the white peoples, if real unity is to be achieved.

Dr. L. D. Reddick of the New York Public library, now on tour of Haiti, discloses that there is a great hunger in that black republic for news, books and literature about Negro Americans. Not a single Negro newspaper reaches that country. No doubt there is a similar desire on the part of black peoples inhabiting other Central and South American republics.

Dr. Reddick made a brilliant suggestion, that would go a long way toward defeating our state department's puzzling policy anent Negroes. He writes: "It would be a worthy public service if the leading Negro newspapers of the United States would send copies of each issue to the leading newspapers, libraries and schools of Haiti." This could be extended to include those of every nation "South of the Border."

American History Records As Great All Who Advocated Justice For Negro

A FEW MONTHS BACK there was the expectation that a colored man would be made a captain in the local Police Department.

What has happened? We understand that one or more colored police officers are qualified. If that is true, why do those in authority hesitate? Is there something sacred about a police captain? Is that old stupid argument about the "time not being ripe" going to be brought forward again?

Here is something that the Republican leadership in Philadelphia should consider carefully. The old idea about losing an election because of fair treatment to colored citizens has been knocked into a cocked hat. In fact, just the opposite has been proven in the past few years.

No Mayor in the United States has given colored citizens the type of jobs or so many as La Guardia, of New York City. Instead of injuring him, La Guardia looms bigger on the political horizon than any living American except President Roosevelt.

Mayor La Guardia is popular with all types of voters and if he decides to run for re-election tomorrow he will be re-elected.

It is not in keeping with the facts to say that first-rate appointments of colored citizens injure a candidate or a political party. President Roosevelt has broken all precedents in giving out certain kinds of jobs to colored people and he was elected for a third term.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt resigned from the Daughters of the American Revolution because of that organization's attitude toward Marian Anderson. She has taken an exceptionally strong position against racial prejudice. She is perhaps the strongest and most popular living woman in the world.

History records as great all those who advocated justice for the oppressed colored Americans. How then can anyone believe that he or she will lose caste by giving a square deal to colored Americans. This belief is based on stupid thinking. It is not justified by the facts of history.

Another case, which shows how silly is the thinking of those who feel that fair treatment of colored people will injure them politically or in business, is the Horn and Hardart Baking Company. Horn and Hardart feeds more people than any other restaurant in Philadelphia. They accept colored patrons and employ large numbers of colored workers. Their business is bigger than any similar one in Philadelphia. There are other examples which prove this point.

However, suffice it to say that in politics, business or civic welfare those who advocate and practice a square deal toward colored citizens gain rather than lose prestige.

If the present Lamberton administration is wise, it will appoint a colored police captain forthwith and those who are in command of the Republican Party will get busy and give colored voters a square deal.

Such a policy will do two things: (1) It will help the Republican Party win; (2) it will keep faith with those dead who created the party on the principle of justice and freedom for all men.

Criticising the President

"We're all split up over here on the Negro question, but I'm going to make these folk, trying to keep Negroes out of the army and other defense work, stop their Jim Crow tactics. We'll whip you as soon as I get the labor crowd straightened out and all the Fifth Columnists rounded up."

This is the sort of radio speech President Roosevelt should have made, according to the position taken by the number of Negro leaders over the nation, commenting this week on the front page of the Black Dispatch, in connection with President Roosevelt's Tuesday night fireside chat.

The Black Dispatch is very definitely committed to the view that President Roosevelt should issue an emphatic statement placing his disapproval upon racial discrimination in the national defense program. That statement, however, should be issued to the nation and not to the world, and certainly not to Hitler and the enemies of democracy.

If we understand what we read in the public print, President Roosevelt was on a world radio hookup during the course of his last broadcast. If we have full grasp upon the significance of that talk, we get the notion that President Roosevelt was attempting to convince Hitler a united America is determined to suppress his brutal despotism and oppressions.

Hitler knows enough already about disunity in this country without the president of the United States broadcasting information regarding many ugly conditions and difficulties vexing American life, and the president would be put in the position of a foolish man rushing into the street threatening to whip a passerby if, and when he has subdued his belligerent children. Such a suggestion is preposterous and does not make sense.

It is written in the Bible, "There is a time to all things." Certainly, if we prepare for an "all out" program of defense the president of the United States is going to get on the air or the ground and tell the stupid, silly American people that democracy should begin at home and spread abroad. It will be remembered the Apostles asked Christ at one time to designate the place where they should start preaching, and the Lowly Nazarene turned to them saying, "Begin at Jerusalem."

Roosevelt should say the same thing to the American people, democracy must begin in the United States and not in Germany, but would it not have been terrible and heartrending to the poor, bombed, terror stricken people in London, Cardiff and Coventry if as they listened in on the radio the other night, there fell from the lips of the president of the United States frightful talk about our inability to get together over here? We take it that the president wanted to hearten the British people. He wanted to issue a statement that would build their faith and keep them fighting until America could send them vital war materials.

The Black Dispatch has joined in every struggle that would advance the cause of America and black people. We are fighting Jim Crow, segregation, the mob and disfranchisement. There is not a single denial of constitutional rights we do not protest now just as sternly and firmly as ever, but we do not join with anyone who assumes that the American Negro's troubles are the only problems of the world. Such is the view of those who insist that racial difficulties of internal nature should have bobbed up in the president's last fireside chat.

Those inclined to interpret the speech of the president have indicated President Roosevelt actually declared war on Germany. If this is true is it not silly to feel that he should at the same time call attention of the enemy to our internal weaknesses?

Negro leaders are not alone in their censure. Among many of the white industrialists of the nation there is criticism that the president should have lambasted unions, and strikers in the defense industries. We think the President of the United States should draft and conscript skilled labor just at this time. Costly, and perhaps subversive stoppage of vital defense projects should instantly cease, but we do not in any wise feel that President Roosevelt should have utilized his time on a world radio hookup making such announcement of his intentions.

We think the President of the United States did a fine job stabilizing the morale of the valliant fighting Britons. We think the President performed an excellent task stabbing fear into the calloused heart of Hitler, and we think the president took a strategic step in declaring an unlimited emergency, for now he stands upon solid ground where he can tell the foolish few of this nation racial discrimination must cease in defense industry, and he can tell labor unions that in preparing for war he will not permit venality to override patriotism.

SAME OLD STUFF

Republicans or Democrats needing a boy good at writing the "come on" clauses of party platforms should lose no time in signing up the fellow who is on the staff of "The Fight for Freedom Committee," the organization which has succeeded in rounding up an Episcopal Bishop as its chairman, in an endeavor to persuade Christians to believe that one can be a good Christian and a good war-monger at the same time.

The prospective platform-writer of the committee did his stuff in a big advertisement carried in Negro newspapers last week.

Here is what he said:

"During the last war we made brave promises of inter-racial justice—after the war would be over. The promises were forgotten. Today we must prove as we march towards war that we mean to advance freedom for ALL men in America.

The Fight for Freedom Committee has heartily endorsed the statement signed by Governor Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia and sixty other distinguished citizens protesting discriminations against Negroes in defense industries. Our statement of principles begins: 'The fight for freedom is not only a fight AGAINST Hitler but a fight FOR true democracy.'

After having put this little splinter in their platform, the "Fight for Freedom" group, then calls upon Negroes to sign a message and send it to the President urging him to proclaim a "national emergency," which we understand to be the way you go about getting into war without letting congress have any say about it. The committee, as was to be expected, also calls on Negroes to help in a more tangible way. It says, "A contribution in any amount will help."

To make the "come on" still more enticing to Negroes, the literature of the committee carries among its 150 sponsors the names of President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University and A Philip Randolph, the head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. That just goes to prove that the gullibility of Negroes, classed as beng of our "intelligentsia," is even more pronounced than that of the common people.

Of course, Professor Clement, like Professor Conant, president of Harvard University, who is also a sponsor, is not going to do any more fighting and dying in the war he asks President Roosevelt to start than any of the other big wigs of the "Fight for Freedom Committee." The fighting and dying they expect will be done by the buck privates and the top sergeants.

But read again the hint in the committee's platform, where it confesses that nothing ever came of the promise to accord Negroes democracy after participating in the other World War, fought to keep the Kaiser from invading the United States! Read again the veiled promise that if Negroes will agree to go over this time and keep Hitler from invading this country, there will be cakes and ale for blacks in an abundance equal to that given whites!

In the meantime, however, let us not try to suppress the ringing challenge in our ears, put there by Senator Burton K. Wheeler:

"We want freedom from lynching in Florida before we go to Europe to provide freedom for Europeans."

Union Of English-Speaking World

JAN 11 1941

BY DOROTHY THOMPSON

The other day I got a furious telegram from a gentleman who accused me of having advocated an English-speaking union, and indicated that he thereby thought me a British agent. I have advocated an English-speaking union, and I hope to be able some time to see it more effectively advocated than it is at present. I anticipate opposition to it in Great Britain quite as much as in America, and I am not a British agent. My advocacy is wholly based in reason, and on a view of what seems to me to be the most likely developments in the world as a result of the war.

First of all, I believe that language not race, is the primary tie between peoples. I believe that language creates a type of mind, and that the white world, at least, is not importantly divided into races, but into types and language groups. Even Hitler, whose anthropological ideas are, to say the least, confused, mixes up race and language. When he says "Aryan" he actually uses a word deriving from a linguistic not a racial grouping, and when he speaks of the "union of all Germans," he means simply anyone who natively speaks the German language except Jews. The Baltic Germans and the Wendish Germans are more different racially from the Celtic Austrians of the Salzkammergut than the latter are from whole groups of Frenchmen and British Celts.

The former, the Baltic Germans and a large part of the Prussians have a strong Slavic strain, and show it in the physical type. The Czechs and the Prussians are racially very similar. The English, racially anyhow, are a mixture—of Teutons and Normans and Mediterranean races.

People are the way they think, and except for mathematicians and musicians people think in words. And even musicians and mathematicians communicate with each other and with the rest of the world through words. Einstein doesn't greet his housekeeper with an equation.

The extent to which I understand the mind of Germany is not the extent to which I have German blood; it is the extent to which I understand the difference between "Ehre" and "Honor," between "Stimmung" and "Atmosphere," between "kitsch" and "tripe." And the difference is a great deal wider than the difference between "lift" and "elevator."

Shakespeare may have been an Irishman, as the Irish, with very persuasive logic, claim, but he certainly wasn't a German, as the Germans sometimes claim with no logic at all. On the other hand, Goethe was a German, and although he is the most universal of all Germans, no one really understands him who reads him in English translation, for there is no translation that completely transmits the nostalgic emotion and the melody of "Kennst du das Land wo die Citronen bluehen" or "Selig wer sich von der Welt, ohne Hass verschlieest."

As long as a language lasts a people lasts, and the endurance of language is one of the most fascinating phenomena of this world. One hundred and fifty years of partition and oppression could not obliterate the Polish language.

Mussolini sent German schoolteachers to the Lipari islands for teaching Tyrolean children the German A B C's—does anyone remember this, any more? But when he and Hitler got together and Mussolini decided to let the Germans—Germans because they spoke German; there wasn't any other test—be "repatriated" to Germany, although they had lived for countless generations in the same mountains—the children all spoke German as their "mother" tongue. The Italian was just school language.

When we wish to indicate that we get on well with anyone, we say, "He speaks my language." The emotional content of the mind of a people, as well as the intellectual, is molded by the words they hear as children. "Ueber alle Gipfel ist Ruh," or "A la tres chere. A la tres belle" do not invoke in the average American as much emotion as even "Twinkle, twinkle, little star." And it is not the fault of the Germans that Mr. Werner Krauss, reciting the most moving lines of Schiller, cannot awaken the feeling among us that Mr. Evans can invoke with "This Happy Breed of Men; this little world."

It isn't a British plot, though the gentleman who telegraphed me seems to think so. The British have spread their language throughout the earth, by being perennially fed up with Britain. This country was founded and its independence fought for by men of pure English blood and purer English language who didn't like the government in the old country—and wrote a Declaration of Independence and a Constitution that have all the stigmata of English thought. Our moral political literature from Jefferson to Lincoln to Roosevelt is Miltonian and Cromwellian—not Lutheran.

Trade, also, follows language. Probably the prime reason why the bulk of our foreign trade is with the English-speaking world is because traveling salesmen can bargain in it.

Col. Lindbergh can speak about union with Canada, but, although he advocates a "Western Hemisphere" policy, he does not speak of union with Central and South America. Why? Because below the Rio Grande we don't speak the same lingo.

The tendency of the twentieth century is toward the creation of larger and larger political and economic units. Hitler's "new order" is in this direction. The probable outcome of the war, whoever wins it, will be a greater unification of the European continent, although I do not think that in any case it will be Hitler's concept of Germany in the role of ancient Rome. After all, Caesar conquering Gaul, and from there everything in sight, was on the whole overrunning and absorbing peoples of vastly inferior culture. The French, Dutch, Scandinavians, Belgians, etc., are at least as civilized and advanced as the Germans.

But Britain, mother of our language and of our institutions, is off the coast of Europe but not really of it. Britain is a green isle in the sea, the British world is on the peninsulas of the oceans, and we, since the cutting of the Panama Canal, are the great island.

I do not know why my correspondent, who, I gather, belongs to America First or some other isolationist group, should think me an unpatriotic American to dream of a union one fine day of the whole English-speaking world. For it is crystal clear which organization of men would dominate it. Its center would be here in the spot of greatest military and naval security and industrial and technological power.

Of the 200,000,000 English-speaking people of the world, nearly three-fourths of them live in North America today.

Hitler wants to take the British Empire, carve it to bits, throw the neck and wings around to his satellites and keep the breast and giblets for himself.

Why not decide to keep the English-speaking world together in some sort of free federation? What's treasonable about such an idea? Is Hitler going to be the only person in the world allowed to dream dreams and see visions?

It's a good old American Saturday Evening Post story about the boy who left home and came back with a fortune and invited the old folks to live in his house. We owe them something: a rebellious spirit, a deathless attachment to freedom and the greatest and richest language on earth.

And maybe I'm prejudiced. But I have a hunch that this is exactly what is going to happen.

We sing "God Save the King" to the words "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and we can all compromise on "God Bless America," with a few more stars in Old Glory.

RACE HATRED LAW UPHELD IN JERSEY

Bund Demurrers Overruled and Kunze and 8 Others Are Automatically Convicted

SENTENCING ON JAN. 31

JAN 8 - 1942

Maximum Penalty 3 Years in Jail, $5,000 Fine—Keegan, Lawyer, to Stand Trial

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NEWTON, N. J., Jan. 7—Common Pleas Judge John C. Losey of Sussex County upheld today the constitutionality of New Jersey's "race hatred" statutes, under which ten German-American Bund leaders and associates, including National Bundesfuehrer G. William Kunze, were indicated last October.

In a decision read in the courthouse, Judge Losey said the "police power" of a State permitted the Legislature to enact laws "to promote the order, safety, health, morals and general welfare of society" and "to protect its citizens."

Judge Losey set Jan. 31 at 10 A. M. for sentencing the nine men who filed demurrers to the indictments, thereby not denying the charges. With their demurrers overruled in the decision today, they are placed automatically in the category of being convicted. Wilbur V. Keegan of West New York, an attorney for the bund, was not included among those who filed the demurrers, having previously declared he would stand trial "on the merits of the facts." The maximum sentence is three yars in prison and $5,000 fine.

The statutes, the first of which were enacted in 1935 and which had never before been tsteed in a court case, prohibit inciting racial or religious hatred by speeches or by permitting such speeches to be made. The bund leaders were arrested last Summer at Camp Nordland near here, and subsequently indicted for making or permitting the making of speeches inciting hatred "against persons of the Jewish religion."

The constitutionality of the law was challenged by the bund on the ground that it infringed the rights of free speech. The demurrers were filed in November charging that the indictments "did not set forth or charge the defendants with the commission of a crime," that the alleged acts were not violations of the statutes and that the statutes were "in contravention of the provisions" of the New Jersey and United States Constitutions.

In over-ruling the demurrers, Judge Losey said that he was "of the opinion that the indictments sufficiently charge the defendants with violations of the statutes."

"A speech which in any way incites, consoles, promotes or advocates hatred, abuse, violence, or hostility against persons by reason of race does not appear to be fair, just, right or reasonable, and naturally tends to provoke or incite others to break the peace . . ." the court said. "It does not appear arbitrary or unreasonable for the Legislature to make it an offense. It appears to be a reasonable, preventive measure.

"In the exercise of police powers the State has wide discretion in determining its own public policy and what measures are necessary for its own protection and properly to promote safety, peace and good order of its people . . . the Legislature is primarily the judge of the necessity of a law."

Free speech, he concluded, was "never intended to constitute an absolute license to speak or publish anything one pleases."

John Winans of Plainfield, counsel for the bund, after hearing the decision, said an appeal would be taken.

Advocates Of "All Aid To Britain Short Of War" Argue Illogically

JAN 30 1941

TWO MEN are walking down the street. They are attacked by a big man with a club. The attacker has blood in his eyes. He is a fanatical killer. He strikes number one man and proceeds to beat him severely. Number two man understands that as soon as number one is crushed, the killer will attack him.

What should number two man do? Would he stand with folded arms advising his friend what to do? Would he shout words of cheer to give his companion encouragement? If he were not a fool he would jump in and join his friend, clearly understanding that their common enemy could only be beaten by their joint enterprise.

The American people are being told by high officials of their government that Great Britain is their first line of defense; that the British navy is their only defense in the Atlantic Ocean; that if Great Britain is defeated, Germany and the Axis powers will turn with full force on the United States.

These spokesmen want the American people to believe these statements. Yet these same officials advise that we should give Great Britain all aid short of war. That does not make sense. It is not logical.

If the safety of the United States depends upon Great Britain in the present war, then the only intelligent thing for the United State to do is to join with Britain NOW to defeat Hitler.

That proposition is so clear that anyone can see it. There is something cockeyed about the argument that the safety of the United States is dependent upon a British victory, when those who make it refuse to do the only thing sensible people would do if they believed it.

Why should America wait for Germany to defeat Britain if its own safety will thereby be jeopardized? Why should America permit Britain or any other nation to defend it?

If the advocates of "all aid for Britain short of war" are sincere when they claim that they are doing it because the safety of the United States depends upon Britain's victory, they must advocate America giving all aid to Britain including war. Any other position is cowardly and silly if in truth Great Britain is defending the United States and our safety depends upon a British victory.

"AMERICA AND THE WAR"

American democracy was subjected to a clinical examination when Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, the scholarly president of the University of Chicago, stated in his now famous radio speech of last week that we have barely begun to grasp the meaning of justice, democracy, the moral order, and the supremacy of human rights.

Summed up, President Hutchins' arguments about "America and the War" amount to this: America should devote its intellectual, moral and physical energy to the all-important task of making democracy work here at home before attempting to regulate political and social action abroad.

His vigorous inquiry into the four freedoms in this country should give politicians, reactionaries and hypocrites who fulminate about American democracy, something to think about. Says Dr. Hutchins:

"We do have freedom to say what everybody else is saying and freedom of worship if we do not take our religion too seriously. But teachers who do not conform to the established canons of social thought lose their jobs. People who are called 'radicals' have mysterious difficulties in renting halls. Labor organizers sometimes get beaten up and ridden out of town on a rail. Norman Thomas had some troubles in Jersey City. And the Daughters of the American Revolution refused to let Marian Anderson sing in the national capital in a building called Constitution Hall.

"If," he says, "we regard these exceptions as minor, reflecting the attitude of the more backward and illiterate parts of the country, what are we to say of freedom from want and freedom from fear? What of the moral order and justice and the supremacy of human rights? What of democracy in the United States?

"Words like these have no meaning unless we believe in human dignity. Human dignity means that every man is an end in himself. No man can be exploited by another. Think of these things and then think of the sharecroppers, the Okies, the Negroes, the slum-dwellers, the downtrodden and the oppressed for gain. They have neither freedom from want nor freedom from fear. They hardly know they are living in a moral order or in a democracy where justice and human rights are supreme."

The speech was remarkable not only for its unassailable logic but also for the candor and the fearlessness of the man who delivered it. The glaring imperfections and obvious weaknesses of our social and political order are often glossed over by those whose very position, influence and thought should hasten the promotion and extension of true democratic principles.

As a rule men in high places use abstract and opaque language when they have an opportunity to pass judgment on American democracy. And when they attain clarity of expression, they do so by a process of generalization that enables them to omit direct reference to the Negro. The black man is seldom included in the context of the thesis of democracy.

President Hutchins is the first great national figure to have the sagacity and the courage to place in clear terms the case of American Negroes along with other forgotten men before the bar of public opinion. This he does at a time when the country is going hysterical about national unity and defense.

We trust that others of equal influence will not hesitate to take up this challenge. For, segregation, discrimination and lynchings cannot continue to be a piece of the pattern called "democracy."

Says Negroes Behind Policy Of British Aid

FEB 8 1941

NEW YORK. — Speaking on a nation-wide NBC network broadcast emanating from New York on Thursday night, Edward Lawson, managing editor of Opportunity Magazine, pointedly refuted the implication contained in a speech made by Dr. Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago over the same network the week before, that Negroes and members of other minority groups are not whole-heartedly behind the national defense program.

"As we struggle for our own complete emancipation from the forces of darkness and destruction, we remember that the people of Great Britain likewise struggle to maintain the freedom that they won at so great a cost," Mr. Lawson said. "And because we believe the cause of democracy is indivisible, we support them now with all our hearts."

Mr. Lawson was one of five speakers on the program, which was especially arranged by the National Broadcasting Company. Among others who spoke were Maury Maverick, mayor of San Antonio, Texas; Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Dorothy Overlock, executive secretary of the Student Defenders of Democracy; and Beatrice Martin, of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

MISSISSIPPI NEGROES TO BACK DEMOCRACY

Statewide Organization Is Being Formed

Special to The Commercial Appeal

GREENWOOD, Miss., July 1.—Mississippi negroes are organizing to combat subversive ideas and to offset undemocratic propaganda. A. J. Topps, Greenwood negro leader, has received a charter from the Mississippi Secretary of State for an organization to be known as The Southern Crusaders. The organization, which is a nonprofit and nonsharing corporation, carries the indorsement of Greenwood's officials and civic leaders.

Topps, a former insurance representative, is now devoting his entire time to organizing chapters over the state, where his former business activities give him a large acquaintance.

The detailed purposes as outlined in the organization papers include: promoting better relationship between races, the curtailment of crime, the furtherance of the cotton use campaign, the improvement of health conditions, instruction in the real meaning and benefits of democracy and the Christian religion.

The idea for the organization came after Topps had heard many of his acquaintances repeating Nazi or Communist propaganda which he felt sure had been taught them by persons working against the welfare of the country.

The Horizon

THE SOUTH PRESENTS MANY PROBLEMS TO NEGRO TRAVELERS

BY P. L. PRATTIS

ANYBODY who can travel in the South and escape the insults and inconvenience incident to being colored is Houdini, Thurston and all the other wizards of magic rolled into one. You may seek to elude them, but they catch up with you, stare you in the face and leer at you. You meet some southern whites who are decent and courteous human beings. You find some places in the South much better than some places in Pennsylvania. But you can never tell in advance who the good person is or where the good place is. You must forever be on your guard.

Mr. Prattis

During my current visit through the southern states, I have deliberately sought to avoid any incident, not because of a lack of either physical or moral courage, but because I felt the job being done was too important to be jeopardized by personal incident. At times that has meant, on long trips, that I and the man traveling with me, have had to go hungry. It has also meant that the calls of nature have had to be ignored during hundreds of miles of traveling by automobile. On one occasion, we were forced to drive 800 miles in one day because we could not be sure that we could find sleeping accommodations anywhere within that 800-mile journey. The entire trip was within the state of Texas.

ASKED TO TAKE OFF HAT

One Sunday morning our schedule required us to leave El Paso, Texas, at 4 o'clock in the morning for a 512-mile trip to Brownwood, Texas. There was no place in El Paso where two colored men could eat at that time in the morning. There was no place to pick up a lunch to carry on the road. So we drove 125 miles to Van Horn, a small town in a sparsely populated section. We reached Van Horn at 6 o'clock.

WE PURCHASED gasoline and asked the attendant if there were a place in town where we might buy something to eat. He appeared to be a Mexican and told us of a cafe where it would be all right to go. Even on his word, however, we did not propose to enter the cafe and sit down. We decided to ask for some sandwiches to take out. I entered the cafe and stood up. A waitress, bearing a glass of water, approached. At the same time, another woman, who appeared to be the proprietor, hastily left a booth where she had been talking to two men, and walked belligerently toward me. I thought she was going to ask me what I wanted. Instead, she blurted:

"You mought take your hat off!"

I did not at first understand and asked her to repeat. Again, she said:

"You mought take your hat off!"

WHITES KEPT HATS ON

I had gone into the restaurant for something to eat, not to wear my hat. I looked around the establishment and saw white men wearing their hats, just as most, or all, men do when seated at counters or when standing in restaurants. But, no, I was a Negro and must be kept in my place at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. That was part of her reasoning, I suppose.

BUT THERE was probably another factor, more invidious. In that section of the country, there are a great many Mexicans, mostly aliens or non-citizens. It is not too easy to tell some brown-skinned Negroes from Mexicans. The hair of some Negroes distinguishes them from Mexicans. I am quite sure that had I had the right kind of hair this surly woman would have been puzzled what to do. My hair identified me as a Negro.

The point of this is that even now, with our country threatened from without and most sensible Americans striving in every way for unity, here was an American woman who will make money while men are dying, who would deny a hungry Negro American food and would serve a foreigner of the same color. Every black boy who is called upon to sacrifice his life will be doing so just as much for the protection of that woman and others like her as he will be for the members of his own race. In fact, he will be doing more for her because in guarding the "freedoms" we are supposed to die for, we are protecting something which she and her kind have and which we do not have.

It is tragic and, sometimes, amusing. In Houston, Texas, I heard this amusing side. A very fair colored woman told me of a trip which she made as a young bride to visit her husband in New York. She traveled white. She was, and is, a pretty girl and in the Pullman which was to be her home for three days, she met an elderly white couple who took to her. In fact, they adopted her as their traveling daughter. The old white gentleman would help her put her shoes on. The old white woman helped to dress her. They simply idolized their pretty "daughter."

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

One day the subject of Negroes came up. They were strongly anti-Negro. They didn't like the [illegible] a Negro, didn't want any [illegible] them.

"Wouldn't it be terrible to have a n——r sleeping in the berth above you," the white man asked his wife.

She agreed that would be the TERROR of TERRORS.

BUT JUST the same the next morning, the old white gentleman helped his fair and pretty Negro "daughter" to get her shoes on and the old lady helped her to slip her dress on before they all three went into the diner together.

WE COLORED PEOPLE are witnessing a mighty PECULIAR paradox.

We are seeing Uncle Sam, armed with a multiplicity of modern weapons and fortified with courage and conviction, CHALLENGING the dictators and aggressors of the Old World who are out to destroy freedom, fairplay, EQUALITY and democracy.

The hitherto peaceful old gentleman is rushing to the RESCUE of embattled Britain and her colonial possessions and throwing down the gauge of BATTLE to mighty Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan.

The world waits breathlessly as Uncle Sam, in defense of the DEMOCRATIC way of life, feverishly prepares to inject himself into the titanic struggle abroad.

Undaunted by threats of blitzkrieg, he is getting ready to kick down the door of the Old World to destroy the evils of RACE PREJUDICE, persecution and ENSLAVEMENT.

Fearless of the consequences, Uncle Sam is girded for all-out battle in order that FREEDOM may live again in Finland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Poland, Greece and China.

One and one-half million of Uncle Sam's nephews are now in UNIFORM.

HALF of the annual INCOME of Uncle Sam is being spent getting the weapons, munitions and equipment for the fray.

The Government has MOBILIZED BUSINESS as never before and regimented it for maximum production of what is needed to make VICTORY certain.

Organized labor is being called upon to give up its traditional right to strike in the name of PATRIOTISM and national defense so that there may be no delay in PRODUCTION and distribution of the sinews of war.

Prodigious efforts are being made to mould PUBLIC OPINION to acquiescence in the program of foreign war.

Even the schools and churches are enlisted in the drive for UNANIMITY OF OPINION.

Congress has invested the President with unprecedented powers to make certain the saving of democracy in the OLD WORLD.

To colored people in this country there seems something very PARADOXICAL in risking national independence in a war to save democracy ABROAD when Uncle Sam refuses to do anything to safeguard democracy AT HOME.

They think that, as American citizens, they have as much RIGHT to equality, freedom and FAIRPLAY as the Greeks, the French or the Dutch, and they cannot understand Uncle Sam's BRAVERY in challenging all of the powerful dictators abroad contrasted with his COWARDICE about challenging dictatorship at home.

Before FOREIGN race prejudice he bristles BELLIGERENTLY.

Before DOMESTIC race prejudice he cowers CRAVENLY.

He yields to race prejudice in the NAVY which dooms all Negroes to domestic labor; in the MARINE CORPS which bars all Negroes; in the ARMY which segregates all Negroes; in the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS which everywhere separate and discriminate on basis of color.

He surrenders to race prejudice in big business and labor unions, even though it imperils NATIONAL DEFENSE.

He condones DISFRANCHISEMENT, racial pollution laws and general segregation and DISCRIMINATION based on color, even though it DESTROYS the very national unity he seeks.

It seems so STRANGE that Uncle Sam is so eager to fight evil ABROAD and so reluctant to fight the same evil AT HOME.

The Savannah Morning News, some days ago, came up with this entertaining bit of editorializing: "A little exchange of pleasantries has been going on between the Atlantian, the spicy magazine published by the inmates of the Atlanta penitentiary, and Hitler's Voelkische Beobachter. The Atlanta prisoners make certain articles useful in national defense. Three months ago they posted an uncomplimentary cartoon of Hitler in their shops. Production was reported to have jumped more than 25 per cent. News of this went to Germany. The Voelkische Beobachter thus railed at Atlantians: "In the name of culture and civilization, negroes and immigrants, deserters and Palestine Jews have been called in against us. But the mobilization of penitentiary inmates against Hitler remained for the American President to discover." The Atlantian replied in its current issue: "Imagine Them calling US thieves and murderers!....No wonder they look upon us through the slightly biased squint with which the big-timer naturally views the small-timer. For once we're on the right side of the fence, even if it does enclose us." The Atlanta prisoners have scored a bull's-eye in the second round of the verbal bout.

WE COLORED PEOPLE are witnessing a mighty PECULIAR paradox.

We are seeing Uncle Sam, armed with a multiplicity of modern weapons and fortified with courage and conviction, CHALLENGING the dictators and aggressors of the Old World who are out to destroy freedom, fairplay, EQUALITY and democracy.

The hitherto peaceful old gentleman is rushing to the RESCUE of embattled Britain and her colonial possessions and throwing down the gauge of BATTLE to mighty Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan.

The world waits breathlessly as Uncle Sam, in defense of the DEMOCRATIC way of life, feverishly prepares to inject himself into the titanic struggle abroad.

Undaunted by threats of blitzkrieg, he is getting ready to kick down the door of the Old World to destroy the evils of RACE PREJUDICE, persecution and ENSLAVEMENT.

Fearless of the consequences, Uncle Sam is girded for all-out battle in order that FREEDOM may live again in Finland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Poland, Greece and China.

One and one-half million of Uncle Sam's nephews are now in UNIFORM.

HALF of the annual INCOME of Uncle Sam is being spent getting the weapons, munitions and equipment for the fray.

The Government has MOBILIZED BUSINESS as never before and regimented it for maximum production of what is needed to make VICTORY certain.

Organized labor is being called upon to give up its traditional right to strike in the name of PATRIOTISM and national defense so that there may be no delay in PRODUCTION and distribution of the sinews of war.

Prodigious efforts are being made to mould PUBLIC OPINION to acquiescence in the program of foreign war.

Even the schools and churches are enlisted in the drive for UNANIMITY OF OPINION.

Congress has invested the President with unprecedented powers to make certain the saving of democracy in the OLD WORLD.

To colored people in this country there seems something very PARADOXICAL in risking national independence in a war to save democracy ABROAD when Uncle Sam refuses to do anything to safeguard democracy AT HOME.

They think that, as American citizens, they have as much RIGHT to equality, freedom and FAIRPLAY as the Greeks, the French or the Dutch, and they cannot understand Uncle Sam's BRAVERY in challenging all of the powerful dictators abroad contrasted with his COWARDICE about challenging dictatorship at home.

Before FOREIGN race prejudice he bristles BELLIGERENTLY.

Before DOMESTIC race prejudice he cowers CRAVENLY.

He yields to race prejudice in the NAVY which dooms all Negroes to domestic labor; in the MARINE CORPS which bars all Negroes; in the ARMY which segregates all Negroes; in the GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS which everywhere separate and discriminate on basis of color.

He surrenders to race prejudice in big business and labor unions, even though it imperils NATIONAL DEFENSE.

He condones DISFRANCHISEMENT, racial pollution laws and general segregation and DISCRIMINATION based on color, even though it DESTROYS the very national unity he seeks.

It seems so STRANGE that Uncle Sam is so eager to fight evil ABROAD and so reluctant to fight the same evil AT HOME.

The Savannah Morning News, some days ago, came up with this entertaining bit of editorializing: "A little exchange of pleasantries has been going on between the Atlantian, the spicy magazine published by the inmates of the Atlanta penitentiary, and Hitler's Voelkische Beobachter. The Atlanta prisoners make certain articles useful in national defense. Three months ago they posted an uncomplimentary cartoon of Hitler in their shops. Production was reported to have jumped more than 25 per cent. News of this went to Germany. The Voelkische Beobachter thus railed at Atlantians: "In the name of culture and civilization, negroes and immigrants, deserters and Palestine Jews have been called in against us. But the mobilization of penitentiary inmates against Hitler remained for the American President to discover." The Atlantian replied in its current issue: "Imagine Them calling US thieves and murderers!....No wonder they look upon us through the slightly biased squint with which the big-timer naturally views the small-timer. For once we're on the right side of the fence, even if it does enclose us." The Atlanta prisoners have scored a bull's-eye in the second round of the verbal bout.

Catholic Leader Advises Race to Develop Infinite Abilities Lying Dormant

OCT 7 1941

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 11—Father John LaFarge, S. J., of New York City, nationally known Catholic leader and crusader for intelligent and liberal understanding between American racial groups urged Lincoln University students to "develop the infinite capacities lying dormant" in them, in an address delivered Thursday, October 9, in Page Auditorium. Father LaFarge's address was the highlight of the local Catholic Week activities.

Suggest Wise Choice

"The Family", Father LaForge maintained, "is the starting point in the solution of the problem." We must solve the needs of the individual family, and in doing this we shall have solved the problems of the individual and of the community. "The speaker suggested as a fundamental step in arriving at such a solution the provision of "vital space" for the family by "returning the ownership of the land to the poor people." Applying his argument directly to the Negro and his problems, Father La Farge said, "It would be a calamity if the Negro should be soley agricultural; but it would be an even more terrible calamity if the Negro allows himself to be entirely dissociated from the land of the United States."

Criticizing the tendency to concentrate on some narrow phase of the activities by which a living can be earned, Father LaFarge advocated that the Negro takes a broader view of the situation and secure for himself "a balanced economic life" in which Agriculture, Industry and Professions each would have its proper place. To realize this balance the speaker held, the Negro must do three things: 1) Restore agriculture to its place in his economic life; 2) Move labor ;and 3) develop the innate abilities which individuals in the racial group.

Lauds St. Louisan

Of interracial relations, Father LaFarge said: "Some people say that the time is not ripe to talk of race relations; I say that the time is over-ripe. The same principles that entitle the Negro to an equitable share of the land entitle him to interracial justice. Freedom of the land, interracial justice both spring from the same source: the dignity of Man as given him by God Almighty."

In the course of his talk, Father LaFarge lauded a member of the Lincoln faculty Mr. Hazel McDaniel Teabeau of the English department, who was responsible for the founding of the "Interracial Review", national Catholic publication, of which Father LaFarge is sponsor. The widely-known interracial organ grew out of Mrs. Teabeau's work in her parish in St. Louis, several years ago.

Father LaFarge, who is renowned as a writer and a student of sociology, is on the editorial saff oft "America", one of the leading Catholic magazines of opinion. He has been instrumental in having textbooks written, published and adapted for use in universities which are designed to bring about racial understanding.

"Unanimously Rejected"

Last week student leaders from the University of Georgia talked with Gov. Eugene Talmadge. OCT 22 1941

Those student leaders asked that "political independence" be granted the Board of Regents by removing the newly appointed members who were placed on the board in order to insure for the governor the removal of the university's Dean Cocking.

The governor told these young Americans that to grant such independence by removing from office his most recent appointees would be "politically inexpedient."

Gov. Talmadge then presented what, in truth, was the most despicable statement he has yet made—and he has made some very outrageous statements.

The governor recommended that if the students wanted to keep the University System from being wiped from the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, they might "march" on the Southern Association when it meets in Atlanta next month to review the Georgia case.

When informed by their leaders that such advice had been given them, the students unanimously rejected the governor's proposal. Instead they planned more action to bring pressure on the governor. It is interesting to note that such action as is planned by these students is quite in keeping with democratic procedure.

So much that is derogatory might be said about Gov. Talmadge's latest action and conduct in this case. It is, however, far more pleasant to commend the students of the University of Georgia on their determintion to oppose the governor in the particular actions concerning the University System and to encourage them to continue their practice of using democratic methods of influencing—or trying to influence—the governor. They have, thus far, been wise beyond their years.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

When Marion Anderson, the great Negro contralto, sang in Washington, before her sat a blind girl. After the singing was over, this blind girl expressed a desire to shake her hand and this was arranged by her companion. As she grasped the hand of Marion Anderson she said, "O that God would give me sight to see her face just for a moment." Her companion thoughtlessly said, "That does not matter, she is only black." "No" said the blind girl, "She never could have been only anything." That blind girl saw with no eyes, more than her companion could see with eyes. It is the teaching of Christ to see more in people than can be seen with the eye. There are none who are so blind as those who willfully refuse to see. It matters not about color if there is a great soul within.

When the British soldiers were in great danger at Dunkerque, a minister saw a little boy come into his church and kneel at the altar and pray a long time. As the lad arose the minister asked. "Do you often come here to pray?" The boy replied that he had been there four times within the last five days. The minister suspected that he had a relative in the army and asked, "Have you some one fighting in Dunkerque?" Yes, replied the boy, "My Daddy. But he got home today and I came this time to thank God that he had answered my prayers." There were ten Lepers healed but only one came to say, "Thank You Jesus." How many times have you put yourself to as much effort to thank God, as you have to petition Him?

In Shanghai there is an old Chinese who owns and keeps a very fine residence. Some call him foolish and eccentric. This old man already has more room in his house than three families could occupy, but he is all the time adding new rooms and making it larger. Some one asked him why he did this and his repiy was, "If I stop building on this house I will die." That old Chinese had the true philosophy of life. We see this universal law working all about us. The tree that grows in the forest, as long as it continues to grow, it lives, but the moment that it ceases to grow it dies. When our bodies no longer build new tissues and cells, then the body dies. We must build day after day, or we must soon die. Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "Build thee more stately mansions O my soul, As the swift seasons roll. Leave thy low vaulted past." Build and keep on building the soul.

The dogs were chasing a little rabbit and it came near me and crouched on the ground. Its attention was so directed toward the dogs on its track until it did not know that I was near until I held it in my hands. Then it surged for its liberty, but my grip was secure. I could hear and feel the heart of that little rabbit as it throbbed with fright. It was afraid of me, but I was saving its life. Sometimes we are running here and there all excited over the uncertainties of life. God reaches down his great hand and picks us up. Doubtless He can hear our heart throb. We surge for our liberty, but God's hold on us is secure. He knows what is best. We We may be afraid but God is saving our lives. Present illness may seem to be cruel, but that may be God's plan to lift us over some future calamity. Jesus said, "It is I, be not afraid."

When he was a young minister, Stanley E. Jones, was one day resting under an apple tree. He was holding a revival and he was heartsick because no results had been evident. The apple tree turned into a Juniper tree to the young praecher as he lamented over his failure. Then he heard a voice say to him, "Stanley, look up." He saw that he was under the apple tree and that above him were hundreds of large apples hanging on every branch of the tree. The tree started talking to the minister, "There you are all down in the dumps because you do not bear fruit. Look at me. I am well rooted in this rich soil and I do not worry about producing fruit. All I have to do is to keep contact with the soil and the fruit comes of itself." Then Stanley Jones said that he became ashamed of himself and never after that did he worry about results. He said that he was tremendously concerned about keeping himself well rooted into God's rich soil.

We Write Our Side

Another man, this time a South Carolinian, is about to write a book, on order of a foreign publishing house, about the South. The leaves in Vallambrosa were few compared to books and magazine articles on this subject.

The South has many sores, and the sore of one child, when he shows it with pride, interests all other children though they be grown up. The South being "The nation's Economic Problem Number One," the home of lynching, the former habitat of human slavery, it especially interests the Americans at this time, when so many of them are disposed to sell themselves into slavery to government in order that they may not be without social security.

Numbers of Southern boys and girls are making sweet profits by writing books and articles about the sores of the South and the "thrilling" part of it all is that the foreigners never grow weary of reading them. Encouraged by this we here and now write our book and offer it to all the foreign publishers and readers. It consists of a single chapter in history and was told to us three days ago by a young friend. Here it is:

About forty-five years ago the late Dr. Henry B. Horlbeck, of the "rebel" generation, was city health officer of Charleston and in the city hall at that time was a negro who did certain small chores. He was an able-bodied fellow, but in a railroad or other accident had lost both legs. Here one is minded of another:

"For Witherington my heart is woe
That ever he slain should be,
For when his legs were both cut off
He knelt and fought on his knee."

The negro fellow had better luck, he got well and sound, and, being a good negro, was given the job which kept him from begging on the streets. (This was in the barbarous age before "welfare" and "humanitarianism" became epidemic.)

One day a visitor from foreign parts called on Dr. Horlbeck to talk about the slums and the miseries, especially of the Southern colored folk. The man was a scientist, an ideological uplifter, and Dr. Horlbeck, who was himself a practical psychiatrist, at once perceived that he was suffering from an acute horror-struck complex as to the Southern negro question.

As the conversation proceeded, the negro man stumped in with a message for the doctor.

The visitor turned ashen and said:

"Oh, Doctor, what a pitiable case. How did the poor creature lose his legs?"

"I amputated them," said the doctor. "I cut them off so that he could dust under the tables and desks."

Since the foregoing was written and set in type, another version of the story has come to The News and Courier. Dr. Robert Wilson, president of the South Carolina medical college, had it from his father, the late Reverend Dr. Robert Wilson. Dr. Wilson related that Colonel Wade Hampton, father of Governor and General Wade Hampton, one of the largest slave owners of the South, owned a negro who had lost his legs. The negroes were then slaves. A pious Abolitionist saw the crippled man and inquired of Colonel Hampton the cause of his misfortune. Colonel Hampton, a great hearted gentleman, saw into the suffering mind of the Abolitionist and said to him the same thing that has been attributed to Dr. Horlbeck.

DO 4 FREEDOMS INCLUDE NEGRO? SENATOR ASKED

OCT 1 5 1941

Chicagoan Seeks View of Alabama New Dealer.

William E. King, member of the Illinois Industrial commission, former state senator and leader of Chicago Negroes, yesterday called upon Sen. Lister Hill [D., Ala.] to say whether he believes the four freedoms should apply to Negroes in Alabama, as well as to the population of Europe.

Sen. Hill, participating in a radio debate Sunday night, defended President Roosevelt's foreign policy, spoke of the "futile fetish of neutrality," and said that neutrality "is a dream that has passed—a hope that has perished."

Asks for Expression.

In his letter to the senator, King asked him to state his position toward anti-lynching legislation, equality for Negroes at the ballot box, Jim Crow cars, and other forms of segregation.

His letter follows:

"I was one of the thousands who listened Sunday night to the American Forum of the Air. On that occasion you spoke in opposition to Wayland Brooks, senator from my own state, Illinois. You spoke as a champion of the present national administration, its principles and policies—policies such as the four freedoms.

"Freedom of speech and expression! Freedom of worship! Freedom from want! Freedom from fear!

"'Everywhere in the world' was the language used on Jan. 6 of this year when these four freedoms were proclaimed to the congress of the United States.

"Does That Mean South?"

"Everywhere? In your mind does that mean in the south as well as in the north? In Alabama as well as in Europe and in Asia? Does it mean the same freedoms for every man, be he black or white? Does it mean equal rights for all American citizens?

"If your answer is in the affirmative—as it surely must be—then what are you willing to do toward curing conditions in Alabama which conflict with these ideals? What about equality at the ballot box? Jim Crow cars? Segregation?

"The records show that within your own lifetime there have been nearly 300 lynchings in the state of Alabama. At almost every session of congress of which you have been a member there have been efforts to pass anti-lynching legislation. Just what part you played in such matters is not clear here. The records are not easily accessible.

"What was your position on the question of federal intervention to end an evil that some states seem unwilling or unable to meet? What will be your attitude on this broad principle of humanity when again this question is presented?

Millions Denied Ballot.

"In the present world crisis, one of America's greatest perils lies not beyond our shores but within our own borders. Millions of good Americans arrayed against Hitler and his allies are taxed without representation in government—denied the ballot!

"The vital question of national unity in the defense of democracy is brought uppermost by the authorization in Washington of segregation and discrimination in the army and navy, in military camps and training schools. Negro soldiers are intimidated, terrorized, and assaulted in southern communities.

"The problem that tears at the hearts of millions of Negroes is how they can be inspired to shed their blood, give their lives if need be, to preserve a system that forces them to battle for the privilege to fight in defense of democracy.

Threat to Morale.

"Such unfair, inhuman treatment as that to which Negro troops are being subjected by other citizens of the democracy to which they belong threatens not only to blast the morale of the armed forces of the United States but also to create anew the very conditions which we, thru the four freedoms, pledge ourselves to destroy.

"I am writing to you, not for any selfish purpose of my own, but in the interests of my people. I was born and reared in the south but to my adopted state in the north I have given my best. I have served on both the house of representatives and the

Jewish Writer Flays Jews For Discrimination

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30—Maurice Kesner, brilliant journalist of the Jewish Daily Voice of California, in his column, "Facing Facts," last week had the following to say, in part, concerning racial minority discrimination:

"Despite the fact that discrimination against the Negro is more flagrant than against the Jew, it is not more real or more destructive to the American ideal. But so far as the Jew is concerned, even though discrimination has always been directed against him, he must eternally make it his business to extirpate injustice wherever and whenever it may be found.

SECURITY OF ALL MINORITIES PERILED

"The Jew cannot proclaim on the one hand—when HE is being discriminated against—that to discriminate against ANY minority is to discriminate against ALL minorities, and then fail to apply this maxim when the principal victim happens to be another minority. The cold fact, so clearly proven in the history of our times, and self-utilized by our Jewish leaders, is beyond debate: when ANY minority is discriminated against, the security of all minorities is in peril! To attempt to evade this issue through devious and diverse forms of rationalization will bring catastrophe down upon all.

"It is the Jewish purpose in being not to be at peace whenever man of whatever color is divided from his fellow-man. ONE HUMANITY is the Jewish imperative and must again become the Jewish striving if we are to survive as a people, for the moral forces of survival are the determining forces!"

America, from the Government down, should stop trying to "kid" the Negro as well as itself about democracy in this country. It can at least be fair to itself, if nothing more. Better housing conditions, playgrounds and other social features may be all right as pleasant nostrums for some of the Negro's ills. But his real needs are the opportunity and right to work, live and die as a human being.

TELLS TEACHERS CIVIL WAR DID NOT FREE NEGRO

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 19—(ANP)— More than 5,000 school teachers attending the 73rd annual convention of Arkansas Education association, white, which opened here last Friday, heard Dr. Morris Mitchell of Teachers' college, Florence, Ala., discuss the importance of education in a democracy and inadequacy of training and educating all races for the protection of the country's ideals.

In speaking to the gathering, Dr. Mitchell contended the question of whether the United States is going across the water to protect ideals at home is before administrators. Deploring wars, the educator argued that the Civil war accomplished "almost nothing" and pointed out that after 70 years, "we are not having to buy the Negro's freedom by lending him money to buy land. That war did not free the Negro because he is still a slave of ignorance, poverty and suspicion." He citied for an example that far more loans were made to whites for purchases of farms than to Negroes.

Uncle Ralph got a letter last week from a college man connected with the University of Virginia which proves that you never find all of the coons up one tree.

"I very much appreciate your remarks of June 17," he says. "It seems to me that we have made a mistake in supposing that the school books are to be discarded because they are old. It may be because I am growing old, but I do think that the presumption should be in favor of the good old bits of literature that were found in McGuffey's readers and others like them."

And he had some good, sound common sense. "I do not approve of the attempt of certain authors of text books to use our text books as vehicles for socialistic and communistic doctrines."

And he continues: "I further do not approve of persons who have little or no practical experience in dealing with the negro race setting themselves up to know more about race relations than the Southern people have learned in all their long experience.. Indeed, I am inclined to believe that the best way to solve the so-called race problem is to let it alone. It is hard for me to restrain my temper when I pick up a paper and see something about the doings of an inter-racial committee. When there are some ten million negroes in the United States who, in the course of each twenty-four hours, must have several million contacts with white people, it seems to me to be utterly ridiculuous for any small group to sit down and try to solve those relations according to some formula, the exceptions to which may outnumber the cases where the formula would work.

"The race relation zealots overlook the simple fact that they are accentuating race consciousness. The same thing holds for some negro papers. In actual practice the editors and publishers of those negro papers are living by stirring up race consciousness, if not race hatred. So far as my observation goes, both north and south, white folks and negroes manage to work out their relations with comparatively little friction when they are let alone by the agitators."

Uncle Ralph saw a photograph of a group of our professors up at the University of Georgia seated around the dinner table with a bunch of negroes. If they had as much sense as this man of the University of Virginia such a thing would not happen.

The singular thing about it is: negroes do not respect such white people. A few of the so-called "high class" negroes will "palavor" around, half-heartedly, with these "reformers" but a sensible negro knoes better and will not have anything to do with them.

Sometime ago Uncle Ralph suggested that these folks who just can not separate themselves from the negroes, and the so-called negro problem, ought to apply for honorary membership in the negro race—the negroes would turn down most of the applications.

We have some crazy things in our schools down here in Georgia, but the craziest is this: to hire a "Professor of Race Relations" from a place where the people knew absolutely nothing about negroes and bring him down here to tell Georgia boys and girls about them.

Once upon a time some men came upon an old chap who had, from all appearances, seen better days. His shoes were without any heels and his breeches were patched. He had no hat and it looked as though when one shirt wore out he simply put another one over it. But he seemed to be in deep thought.

"Men," he said after they had engaged him in conversation, "I used to be a Professor of Race Relations. I had good clothes then, and plenty of foundation money. My wife dressed fine and entertained her friends. I had plenty of food, fine place to live, and everything. Here I am, dirty and ragged and half starved.

"I'm just a-mined," he continued thoughtfully, "to swallow my pride and go back to it."

While I am always happy to have friends, acquaintances or strangers to 'phone me at home about anything that interests them, I cannot help being peeved about people who call after I've been asleep a couple of hours and decline to identify themselves. Sometimes, I fear, I am not Chesterfieldian under such circumstances.

It would seem to a plain citizen, brought up to refrain from eating peas off his knifeblade and to remove his shoes before going to bed, that it is but common courtesy to explain: "This is Bill Blevins" or "Mary Jinks," as the case may be. I am sure neither would enter a person's home or office and launch into a conversation without introduction.

My most annoying visitors by 'phone call up, evidently from a hotel room, after losing all idea of what time it is. The telephone does not transmit odors, so I can't tell whether they've had rye or bourbon—or corn.

Sometimes they speak in glowing terms of my humble efforts, in which case I'll listen at length. Sometimes they are sore on something I wrote—and I can take that. It's difference of opinion which makes horse races popular. And sometimes they insist on blaming me for something Westbrook Pegler wrote in a fevered moment or because the women's department got somebody's initials wrong. It is in vain that I try to explain I do not own or control this estimable newspaper, that I do not set the type, I do not pass on Mr. Pegler's copy, and that I really don't know the inside story about what's going on in Russia.

And Stay White

Controversy and confusion of the kind ...ing the Georgia university can be stopped, for good and all, by a simple and unqualified declaration of the leaders of the negroes and their Northern white friends, the Rosenwald Fund, the various "Foundations," that they don't want mixed racial colleges and schools in the South, that they do not look to the eventual destruction of social barriers, that they consent to the Southern white people's resolution that the two races must have complete separation with equal justice.

That is the declaration that they don't make and they won't make.

The white South looks on and observes the unremitting and insidious American negro movement to demolish separation of the races in the South, and the white South is alarmed and on guard.

The white South witnesses the attempts of negro students, the money furnished them in the North, to break into Southern colleges with assistance of the federal courts.

The white South is not blind to the trend of federal court decisions to shatter the walls that separate white and negro life.

Southern white men of good conscience and good will have done and are doing everything possible to improve the negro's lot, to punish lynchers, to give the negroes good schools and fair treatment in every way—always with separation.

If these Northern negro leaders, the "foundations" and their white allies of the "intellectuals" are in agreement with this position of the white South they do not say it, and they leave Southerners to infer that they are not.

White Southerners cannot and do not ignore the gnawing campaign that is carried on by these people. They are well aware that if they should carry their point in the schools and colleges they would turn to invasion of segregration in industry, that they would demand admission of negroes into Southern cotton mills and mill villages.

The whole question is vexing and difficult. We well know the burden that negro schooling places on Southern white shoulders but we know as well that the white people are willing to carry it. They need assurance that the organized Northern negro movement has not the purpose to undermine and destroy the integrity of the white South, and that assurance is denied them.

The denial is the bottom cause of the controversy in Georgia, and it will not be obscured by the prattle about "academic freedom", however it lead to imprudent and sometimes inexcusable incidents.

Rather the white people of the South would have no colleges, no schools, than mixed colleges, mixed schools.

The Northern "liberals", white and colored, have got to accept this position of the white South or to make war against it.

Without racial separation white people cannot live in the South and stay white.

Negro Children Pall-Bearers at Burial of White Boy in South Who Died to Save His Drowning Pal

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 4.—Young Tom White was buried yesterday. Six Negro children were his pall bearers, an unprecedented event in this locality. For this nine-year-old hero gave his life that a Negro playmate might live, and thus discredited and disproved the fostered prejudices of race hatred.

Tom and "J. D." came from a working class neighborhood where Negro and white workers live side by side. They had been playmates for a long time. One day this week they were playing along the Kanawha River bank. Heat was oppressive and there were no playgrounds in their neighborhood. Tom and "J. D." were chucking rocks at a floating can, when several older boys came along. A twelve-year-old white boy began to tease and bully them; when "J. D." answered back the older boy shoved him into the river. Tom did not wait to consider that he could not swim, that he might drown—he only knew that "J. D." needed help. He leaped into the water and tried to grasp his Negro playmate.

When help finally came, the Negro lad was brought ashore and revived, but it was too late when young Tom's body was recovered. His parents' wish that Negro children attend him at his funeral should give pause to those who seek to divide the people.

If these Northern Negro leaders, the "foundations" and their white allies of the "intellectuals" are in agreement with this position of the white South they do not say it, and they leave Southerners to infer they are not. We well know the burden that Negro schooling places on Southern white shoulders, but we know as well that the white people are willing to carry it. They need assurance that the organized Northern Negro movement has not the purpose to undermine and destroy the integrity of the white South, and that assurance is denied them.

The denial is the bottom cause of the controversy in Georgia, and it will not be obscured by the prattle about "academic freedom," however it lead to imprudent and sometimes inexcusable incidents.

Rather the white people of the South would have no colleges, no schools, than mixed colleges, mixed schools.

The Northern "liberals," white and colored, have got to accept this position of the white South or to make war against it.

Whitout racial separation white people cannot live in the South and stay white.—Charleston News and Courier

UNAMERICANIZED AMERICANS

From Washington came an announcement the other day that $14,000,000 had been made available for a vast expansion of the Americanization instruction program to facilitate the naturalization of an estimated 5,000,000 aliens.

Commenting on the appropriation, Works Projects Administrator Howard O. Hunter said:

"So large a block of noncitizens who, in theory at least, owe allegiance to foreign countries, is a political menace in a time of national emergency. Those who do not understand our language, our Constitution and our form of government are most easily made the dupes of foreign propagandists."

We wonder if some of that money might not be used for instructing some of the Southern representatives in Congress who understand neither the Constitution nor our form of government. These men are a political menace not only in time of national emergency, but at all times. They speak a language wholly foreign to representative constitutional government. Left to them democracy in theory and practice would never be exercised toward the Negro.

While their attitude is exasperating, to say the least, it represents the point of view of a large number of southerners who would welcome Fascism in the United States rather than allow the Negro to enjoy his citizenship rights. These are the people who need instruction in true Americanism and democracy. In so far as they do not understand our Constitution and our political form of government, they are aliens who constitute a more dangerous menace to the national security of this country than any transplanted noncitizens.

In His Place

Editor The Telegraph:

Pooh to Margaret Roberts, who seems to be a senior in some Georgia college. She said that she was white but it is hard to believe that a white woman could defend a Negro so devoutly.

I have traveled over the entire United States and Georgia is the only state I have been in that keeps the Negro race in its place so effectively. I hope that Georgia will never follow the example that some states have set.

The only good Negroes are the ones that are under the white man's management.

I just can't imagine sitting by a Negro in school or church. Can you Miss Thompson? I was in California during 1938 and when I first arrived there I noticed that the white and colored people mixed freely. I went to a show the first week out there and presently a big black Negro came in and sat beside me.

I asked him if he wasn't out of place—he looked at me as if he thought I was crazy. I left.

I think our governor is a very wise and thoughtful man. May the Negroes always stay in the fields of Georgia.

RACIAL BROADMINDEDNESS

To the Editor The News:

In the Tuesday, Aug. 5, edition of The News I was very pleased to see the picture of Princess Fatima Massaquoi and the accompanying article concerning her stay in America. The princess is a most charming and highly educated young woman and it is a pleasure to talk with one who knows so much about the present international situation. We can really "see" Hitler's Germany through the eyes of this woman of noble birth who has studied and worked in that country.

We have heard so much in the past year about the "American way of life" and cries of "Long live democracy." The American Negro can truly believe in and fight for these principles of democracy and freedom when we can read unbiased and democratic newspaper write-ups about a Negro such as the one that appeared in your Aug. 5 edition.

As long as such racial broadmindedness prevails in America, and we remain "one nation indivisible," no Hitler or Mussolini that Europe can produce will ever conquer our beloved America! CLARICE M. CHAMBLISS.

Racial Issues

Editor The Telegraph:

More and more evidences that certain key figures now in America are using racial groups of people in efforts to increase the agitation to throw this nation into complete confusion over national and world issues is cropping up everywhere.

Some of these key figures are also key figures in American journalism and they are using the press as a powerful means of outward expression to stir up racial conflict in America.

Negroes and persons of other racial groups especially people of Balkan descent are being organized in separate groups to carry on their campaigns of forcing pressure upon President Roosevelt and the Congress. These groups are being supported editorially in certain newspapers throughout the land.

If anyone objects to the campaign, they are ranked as prejudiced or anti-alien, and a number of groups allied with this movement to undermine America immediately take up the cudgel of intolerance and verbally heave hot coals in the direction of those who see the sinister evil behind that movement.

Tired of Negro Issue

Editor, The Telegraph:

The Negro question has burned down and I am sorry it has kindled again. First, I think it is a scandal on our paper that such envy and strife has been in our paper.

I say our editor is responsible for a great portion of this confusion, for some white people don't welcome any boasting and criticism from a Negro. It is a pity, but we had a paper to read that wouldn't carry some chat that a Negro has had to say.

Facts You Won't Face

Not long ago The News and Courier printed a letter from Walter White, colored, secretary of the National Society for the Advancement of the Colored People, and said that it and all respectable white people of the South were eager that equal and exact justice be extended to the negroes in the courts, in legislation, in every field. Then The News and Courier commented that Southern friends of the negroes were embarrassed by the refusal of the negro leaders to affirm publicly, unqualifiedly, that they were not seeking mixed racial schools and colleges, that they were not endeavoring to bring about mingling of the races, that their efforts were for the advancement of their race in separation from the white people.

Were Secretary White and his associates to repudiate the suggestion that they are striving to inveigle or to compel the whites to adopt their race as a part of their own, the way would be cleared for constantly improving racial relations. (But White would probably lose his job.)

To this invitation has been no response. None was expected. The weight of the evidence is that the national leaders of the negroes are resolved to break down barriers separating the races. They do not look for early success, but their plan of campaign is revealed in such words as these from a speech of White to negroes in Kansas City last week:

"America is not yet scared enough (referring to the war crisis) to give up racial hatred and hypocrisy, to have the democratic way of life so far as the negro is concerned . . . Stop being afraid of your shadows. Do everything to sting and lash the conscience of America: be ready for court action, if denied national defense training in your community. . . . Organized labor must come forth with clean hands. If the unions continue to be unjust, it may be necessary to ask congress for limitations on their activities."

Note the words, "Ask congress for limitations" on labor unions. They are spoken in exultant confidence that the negroes can bulldoze congress. Perhaps they can.

The balance of power in the Northern cities by which the negro vote is dictating to the national Democratic party was in the mind of this colored orator.

White knows, and we know, you Southern politicians and voters know too, however you won't admit it even to yourselves, that not since General Grant was president and "Thad" Stevens was leader in congress, has negro influence been nearly so powerful in Washington as it is now.

No man knows it better than Senator James F. Byrnes who, in the filibuster by which the anti-lynching bill was halted in 1938, declared that "negroes are now in control of the Democratic party."

For this administration, this Walter White whiplash, you South Carolinians are voting—and the miserable little jobs and subsidies remain with you.

No one in South Carolina is in the way of negro progress. No one is preventing negroes from registering and voting.

Seventy-five years, three generations, they have had freedom. Thousands of them are drawing good wages. There is probably more cash money in circulation among South Carolina negroes now than was among white people in 1895, when cotton was fetching six cents and white people were building cotton mills.

Nothing prevents the Southern negroes from organizing corporations, hotels, banks, setting up their own stores and dozens of kinds of shops.

White people seldom allow "race prejudice" to stop them from hiring a responsible negro contractor. We have had dealings with them, and they were satisfactory.

If negroes object to "jim crow" laws, they can jim crow the white people. They can be exclusive. Therein is the weakness of their case, the Walter White case. They and he don't want to be exclusive. They want to tack on and get in. White would have his race taken in by the whites, does not trust them to stand on their feet, to carve their own fortunes. Who thinks that 8,000,000 Japanese, were they in the South, would care whether white political parties accepted them or not? They would be an independent people, contemptuous of the white man's schools and colleges because they would have schools and colleges of their own.

White does not represent the mass of the negroes. But he is a professional instigator. He means well, but he is damaging the interests of Southern negroes.

The negro question is not acute in the North because the negro colonies in cities are surrounded by overwhelming numbers of whites.

In the South every hamlet has its Harlem. So has every neighborhood.

Here the problem is a problem of numbers.

They say The News and Courier is an alarmist, is excited about this question. Most of your politicians will tell you that. Directly or indirectly they are sucking their substance [illegible] the Roosevelt "Democratic" party.

You are being sold out, you white Southerners. The national negro campaign, shrewdly, relentlessly, tirelessly conducted, has for its objectives more than voting in Democratic primaries. (The negroes can vote in general elections and can have their own primaries; no one is hindering them). The capture of your colleges, then your common schools, your hotels and restaurants, their conversion into mixed institutions, are the goal. If it were not so, Walter White and his lieutenants would deny it in language that you can understand.

The objectives are the breaking down of all that separates the two races, and implied is the admission that as a separate race the negroes cannot win their way.

No member of congress from South Carolina can say on the floor of the senate or the house what The News and Courier is saying without the surrender of influence at the White House and in the Eddie Flynn and Harlemite national Democratic party; without the loss of jobs and allotments.

The South is in the bag and the Southerners are blindfolded and gagged by and with their own consent.

"The determination of America must not be obstructed by war profiteering. It must not be obstructed by unnecessary strikes of workers, by short-sighted management, or by deliberate sabotage . . ."

This passage from the president's speech last Saturday night reads smoothly and without interruption. But those who heard the speech will remember that there was interruption long and loud. The interruption came after the part about obstruction "by unnecessary strikes of workers." No other words of the speech had such profound and obviously heartfelt applause. We believe that the people of America are in a mood to make the same interruption with similar applause. We believe our labor friends will do well to take note. They have in the White House the greatest friend they ever had there. They have an administration whose devotion to unionism and collective bargaining has been proved under fire. Nothing in the present scene or circumstance suggests that their cause is so lonely or left out that they must serve it at risk of the defense program. Everything in the present scene and circumstance suggests that they themselves can do their cause irreparable injury by giving a public appearance of caring more for it than for the country in which they are so free to serve it.

That there should have been labor disputes at a time like this was inevitable. That as many of the disputes which end in strikes may be management's fault as labor's is something the public may be overlooking. That the general fear of labor troubles at a critical time like this be giving individual strikes a news value greater than would ordinarily go to them and thus creating a false impression of nation-wide striking is quite likely. But the facts remain that the number of strikes has increased startlingly since the first of the year, that some of the labor demands or objectives have seemed to the public trifling indeed, that public tendency to blame labor rather than management for strikes is increased by a public feeling that labor is too well befriended by the Roosevelt administration to be justified in operations based on a fear of getting less than its due unless strikes are called.

The greater fact remains, too, that even though those who look upon this war crisis as a shining opportunity to improve the status of their particular group or class are objecting strenuously when anybody cries moratorium on these bitter domestic struggles, the American public has the moratorium psychology. It is not going to give its sympathy to efforts for improvement of anybody's relative position by use of the war crisis, and the defense needs, whether it be the position of the Negro in relation to the white man, the South against the North, or union labor against management. For efforts to hold relative positions, we believe the public has every sympathy. We believe it sympathizes with the determination of labor that its wages must go up enough to hold place with rising profits and prices. We believe it sympathizes, too, with the plight of the Southern farmer as a result of what has happened to his already sorry relative position because of the war's effects upon cotton and tobacco. But we are more certain each day that public sympathy is going to be disastrously lost to two of these groups—to union labor and the Negro—unless they are careful to give no appearance of thinking this war a shining opportunity to improve (not merely hold) their place. To look upon the war as such an opportunity would be not only poor patriotism but poor strategy on their parts.

We do not accuse union labor of such a point of view. But we are certain that it needs to guard against such a point of view. We are certain, too, that it needs to lean backwards a little against such a point of view to be saved from losses it might otherwise suffer at the hands of implacably-opposing and wildly - alarming David Lawrences in the other camp.

Advertisers who crowd radio news programs so irritatingly with their talk that the public is prejudiced against their product rather than drawn to it waste their money no more surely than do certain types of outdoor advertisers, according to Secretary Leroy F. Hill, of the Alabama Motorists Association, who noted our recent comments here. "The standards of public acceptance," he thinks, "are much higher today than some advertising mediums seem to realize. Signs nailed to trees, painted on picturesque rocks, stuck up anywhere and everywhere along the highways, are an outstanding example of stupid advertising that more than defeats its purpose. . . . Before long now Spring will come in a burst of beauty. Nature will do her utmost to make every turn of the road a new vista of loveliness and will probably succeed unless the view is marred or cut off by an offensive advertising sign. The desecration of highway beauty is enough to make a motorist swear never to buy the product advertised."

THE COLOR CASTE SYSTEM

A color or racial caste system seems to be an integral part of every Fascist system whether it be British, German, Italian or American, and deemed necessary as an instrument for unifying the nation on a racial basis.

The British and American white people long antedated the Italians and Germans in establishing systems based on the theory of a superior race dominating and exploiting supposedly inferior races, and it is noteworthy that in both the British and American imperial systems the colored people are deprived of any real political influence.

American Negroes outside the South possess the vote but only because their numbers are so small that its possession can make no difference in the functioning of the system.

More important than the vote, however, is the vast system of machine technology through which the civilization functions and without which it would have of necessity to radically change its form to some agrarian feudalism.

Those who master and control the technique and secrets of the intricate machine technology will always dominate the state because they hold the key to its continued existence.

These people are primarily the engineers, technicians, chemists, metalurgists, electrical engineers, machinists, tool makers, etc., and they, in turn, are controlled by those who own the natural resources and the industrial plants in which the technologists work.

The Negro's Future

To the Editor of THE BANNER:

I am glad to see that Dr. B. O. Duggan strongly favors increased opportunities for Negroes. Most of the graduates of Fisk University and the A&I State College become useful citizens. We badly need more of that class.

I remember well when Negroes were freed from slavery. They were all ignorant and at the bottom of the ladder. Fortunately the former owners of most of them allowed them to remain on their plantations as share croppers which insured them small incomes.

When free schools were opened, less than seventy years ago, the terms were short, salaries of teachers very low, and old buildings used for school houses. During the last seventy years Negroes have made rapid progress.

A few Negroes including Booker T. Washington and Dr. George W. Carver, both born in slavery, secured diplomas from colleges, earned by almost superhuman efforts. Today Washington is highly regarded as an educator and Carver as a chemist.

Our city has produced at least one Negro who became widely noted. He was J. C. Napier, well known to many older citizens of Nashville. With proper training other Negroes will win records in coming years. Let's help them.

Dempster Praised For Appreciation Of Negroes

Editor, Knoxville Journal:

Allow me to inform you in a most humble manner how much I enjoy reading "Like It Or Not" by Mr. George Dempster. It has been my privilege to know Mr. Dempster for about 15 years and personally I consider that a short time, to know such a likeable character and public-spirited citizen.

In reading his columns there are hundreds of things that I might refer to, but I am only going to comment upon what I consider a masterpiece. That is the article that appeared in The Knoxville Journal Monday, March 24, 1941. I don't believe anyone who reads "Like It Or Not" and knows Mr. Dempster could fail to appreciate his fair-mindedness towards all people, regardless of race, creed or color.

In my humble opinion he has been unusually fair in calling attention to some of the worthwhile achievmeents of the Negro. I firmly believe that the Negroes of Knoxville and East Tennessee are deeply grateful to Mr. Dempster for the splendid bouquets that are scattered along the way about the Negro concert series that are brought to Knoxville by P. H. Henderson, especially that famous radio group, Wings Over Jordan.

To my mind this concert series not only adds to the cultural life of the Knoxville Negroes, but to the whites as well.

And most of all I think Mr. Dempster's pen is serving as a photograph of racial good-will. If every newspaper throughout these United States of America could carry an article similar to the one in Monday's paper, there would be a still greater number of Negroes volunteering in Uncle Sam's Army.

EDWARD C. FREEMAN.

PS—Not having that article before me, I almost forgot to call your attention to the fact that the praise given some of our older, as well as good citizens, during their lifetime, will serve to stimulate the Negro youths of today to do something worthwhile, that they, too, may take their place alongside the Canslers, Hendersons, Bradleys Greens and others not referred to by your gifted, courageous and fair-minded unselfish penman.—E. The Outside Interferers

The negroes in South Carolina are not responsible for the program of the man Carpenter in Washington. The negroes and the white people of South Carolina are getting on in a friendly and satisfactory way.

The News and Courier has pleasure in commending the behavior of the negro people in South Carolina and if any of their leaders and spokesmen are giving trouble we do not hear of it.

As for separation, both races seem to favor it. The negroes naturally flock together and they tend to seek residence in negro districts. They are not driven from white districts. They go voluntarily to streets and localities where they have their own societies, where they live their own lives. That is why The News and Courier warns against action by public authorities that would threaten these relations, as, for example, the making of a recreation center for white soldiers and sailors too close to a negro settlement.

Many of the negroes in South Carolina are prospering. One sees them neatly and well dressed in the streets. As a race their self-respect is steadily improving. The gravest negro problem is within the negro population, apart from the white—there is too much fighting and knifing in the sorrier negro streets and alleys.

No one is preventing negroes from voting. They can hold their own primaries if they wish. Under present conditions the retention of the separate and exclusive white primary is necessary. Without it we should have the filthy political conditions of Northern cities where corrupt white politicians brazenly corrupt the negroes at election time.

Politically, the "negro question" is Northern, and Northern politicians want to spread over the South the troubles they are having at home.

These white manipulators of the Northern negro voters, segregated in great cities, are of the same kind from which the carpetbaggers came to the South in "Reconstruction", and more of them now are Democratic than Republican.

Were the exclusive white primary abolished, the carpetbaggers would be upon us in hordes and the scalawags would be twenty times as many as they were in 1870, the officer-holders in the South having been multiplied by twenty since then.

NEGRO EDUCATOR'S VIEW

George Archibald, superintendent of our Negro school, this city, under the heading "Looking Through Glasses With Lenses From Calvary," brings to the attention of our people a rehearsal of some of the things that this journal has insisted should be done, for some time. That our city, one of the very finest in the entire country, has neglected the provision of a drinking place for the darkies somewhere in a convenient place, and failed in the matter of providing them with a rest room or public toilet, has gevn room for some comment, if not criticism. Steve Morrow, colored, one of Walton's most substantial and yet a very humble negro, sometime ago wrote something for this paper in which he insisted that it would be tremendously to Monroe's advantage as a trading center, if these conveniences were made possible.

Negro Not Different From Other Races, Says Lawyer

When Minority Group Dispels Inferiority Complex Progress Will Be Made, Porter Asserts

APR 9 1941

ROGERSVILLE, Tenn.— "The Negro is not fundamentally different to the Caucasian Race, and the sooner the minority racial group dispels the idea of an inferiority, just so soon will the racial group rise in the estimation of other races, and catch definite step with progress," Attorney W. L. Porter, editor of the East Tennessee News, Knoxville, declared in an address delivered before students and faculty of Swift Memorial College.

APR 9 1941

The address was arranged under direction of the Forum Club of the college, of which Mrs. I. M. Wynne is the originator.

"Thomas Edison made his contribution to science in equal proportion to the phenominal discoveries of George W. Carver. The colors of skin and texture of hair of these two great scientists were definiately the opposite, yet, to have placed them behind a screen and judged their accomplishments by comparison, as would have been utterly impossible to determine which was white and which was black," Attorney Porter declared, as he added, "hundreds of other similar examples could be offered showing the differences from the standpoint of race is nil."

The speaker stated that Negroes educated under favorable environment and adequate facilities, the same as white students, have not only shown up equal in mentality, but in certain instances have surpassed their white competitors in examinations.

NEGRO PHILOSOPHY

When he was serving as rector of St. John's Episcopal church here and endearing himself to the people of all walks of life in Decatur, Rev. Peter M. Dennis was active in many undertakings but collecting negro dialect stories was not among them.

Since going to Dothan, he seems to have added a new role for we find him quoted in The Eufaula Tribune, as narrator of the following story supposed to have been told by a negro acquaintance:

"Religion is sorta lak elec-shuns," negro explained, "God has one vote, de debbil has one vote and man has one vote—en whichever way man votes—dat's a majority!"

JUSTICE.

To the Editor: If it is desired that the South return to the racial strife and hate that was evident in the early post-Civil War days, Mrs. Alma Cone's letter which appeared in the Forum Wednesday should prove very helpful.

It seems that the question of whether the officer was right in his treatment of a U. S. citizen has been changed to: Is anything wrong that a white man does to a Negro? Mrs. Cone states that "there are still a few Southerners who do not think Negroes their equal." I would like to ask: Is there anything egotistic about merely asking to be let alone? Is it fair for an officer to arrest one person at the request of another person, when that officer does not know the reason for such an arrest? I disagree with Mrs. Cone in implying that the matter is a racial issue. It is: Are we civilized enough to rise above color line and see that justice is done?

RACIAL BARRIERS

It was a sad day for the world when the builders of the Tower of Babel were suddenly affected with a deluge of many tongues. Or so, it seems to us. And it was a sad day when, instead of one race, tongue and color, there came the divergent races.

Racial antagonisms are difficult to overcome. Racial customs, habits and beliefs are likewise with difficulty brought into harmony. But after all, Providence in these antagonistaic elements provides the antagonistic elements that are of the greatest challenge to those who would right the world's ills and bring "equal rights to all, special privileges to none."

FRIENDS GROUP ASKS EQUALITY FOR ALL RACES
Deplores Racial Hatred As Threat To Democracy In Nation

Racial discrimination was termed a "threat to our democracy" on Friday at the Arch Street Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends.

Pleading for racial equality, the Committee on Race Relations in its annual report declared that:

"Negroes are not the only victims of racial discrimination, but they bear the brunt more heavily than other races," the report said.

"Even churches in some parts of the country are guilty of race discrimination, and all over the United States it is more difficult for Negroes to get an education than it is for whites.

"Many kinds of work, not skilled, are closed to qualified persons because of color. That naturally results in a high rate of unemployment among Negroes, and provides a ready argument for those who would make capital of democracy's failure to provide for all classes.

"Members of the Society of Friends are "inescapably a part of the world and should not be inactive because of t the lack of a perfect course of human action," the Peace Committee reported.

The Peace Committee, in its report, found that "We obviously have fallen far short of that which was required" in influencing world events.

ANOTHER WAR WILL COST NEGROES BIG SUM, SAYS SCHUYLER

NEW YORK, April 14 (ANP)—Pointing to statements of senate finance committeeman George (D Ga.) and Taft (R. Ohio), agreeing that income taxes will be doubled next year, George E. Schuyler, chairman of the Negro Against War committee, charged that Negroes were being hardest hit by war costs. "Negroes have so little income," he asserted, "and so many jobless relatives to support, that taxation bears more heavily upon them than any other single group in the country. To boost the present income tax levy from 4 per cent to 8 per cent thus imposes a severe hardship upon employed Negroes with fair salaries."

It has been estimated by Sen. Taft that five billion dollars of additional revenue must be raised by taxation to help pay in part the huge armaments bill. There is accordingly increasing talk in Washington about a federal sales tax. Schuyler feels that this will be a severe chop at the low wage groups who have "the biggest families and thus make the most purchases."

"Already," he declared, "war profiteering is skyrocketing prices of necessities, coffee, for example, having gone up 85 per cent in the past year, although there is a world surplus. Food, textiles and building materials have also increased in price although there is a great surplus in the country.

"Negroes are being harder hit because they are not getting jobs making armaments, munitions, planes, and military equipment. Yet they and poor white folks are paying heaviest for the war."

Schuyler sees a tripling of prices "when this country openly enters the war, and Roosevelt's Fascist policies outlaw strikes, the workers' only remedy.

UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

By E. WASHINGTON RHODES

IMPRESSIONS OF THE SOUTH

MAY 1 - 1941

OBSERVATIONS on my way South to speak at the reunion of students of a little Presbyterian school which I attended in 1908: John Drew of Darby was driving. After going at the rate of 60 to 70 miles an hour for a long period of time one gets accustomed to the speed. That is responsible for many drivers not realizing how fast they are going. Seventy miles an hour appears to be fifty after two or three hours. Below Richmond, Virginia, there are few towns of any size. After Raleigh, North Carolina, there are no towns which cause delay because of traffic and red lights. That is the reason why so much better time can be made in the South than the congested North.

RHODES

There are exceptionally good roads all the way down. The average width of United States highway number one is three lanes all the way to South Carolina. It is six cars wide in many spots. There is a peach of road between Washington and Richmond. South Carolina roads are the straightest. But this advantage becomes dangerous because the roads are narrow and the shoulders are soft. If an automobile hits one of these shoulders at a high rate of speed, the occupants will be either in heaven or hell. Signs posted on the trees read: "Tomorrow you may be in heaven or hell."

MAY 1 - 1941

White and colored workers are constantly repairing highways. There seems to be little difference in the type of employment. At some points, white men hold the slow down signals and at others colored men wave the red flag. White men and colored operate the road machines and the concrete mixers. Both shovel dirt and handle picks. And for the first time in my life I saw about 100 men on the chain gang with watchmen holding loaded double barrel shotguns ready to shoot at the drop of a hat. The men were all white. They don't mix them on the chain gang.

Colored people are improving their homes. When I was a boy, few people in Camden, S. C., had bath rooms or inside toilets. Now most of them do. About one-fourth of the area of Main Street in that town is owned by colored business and professional men. That, I believe, is a world record. People in the country are painting their houses and barns; at least this is what I saw from the highway. In former years century-old houses never had a coat of paint. That was one of the reasons for the terrible looking houses. Paint adds new life to even a shack.

Washington, D. C., is the most congested city in America. One must inch along at a snail's pace in the nation's capital. Automobiles are there from every state in America. One gets the idea that war clouds are hanging heavy. Soldiers training in many camps. Barracks springing up like mushrooms. The same kind of activity which prevailed during the last World War.

MAY 1 - 1941

Home again after a hurried 1200-mile trip through the section of America which could be the world's paradise, were it not for certain rotten prejudices based on color. By the way, be sure to fill your gas tanks before leaving Washington on your next trip South, because gasoline which costs 14 cents in Washington costs 22 cents in South Carolina.

"GOD'S COUNTRY."

To the Editor: Is the Negro as good as the white man? If he is not, then does not the white man degrade himself when he goes into the ring with the Negro? And therefore does not the white man deserve to get busted on the nose when he does it? But then, on the other hand, suppose the Negro is as good as the white man, then where is the point to all of this yelling for the Negro's blood? And especially when the Negro has conducted himself as a gentleman and with becoming modesty at all times.

Some years ago one of those arrogant, proud, cruel, Satanic beasts known as Germans, came over here and beat up a poor, inoffensive Negro, and Congress cut such a caper over it that it makes me think it wouldn't be any matter if those same Germans were to bomb —— out of this same Congress.

The Lord has blessed us as a nation until we have gotten into the habit of boasting. But when I think of the late chain letter craze, whereby we were all going to get rich, and of the Mars broadcast scare, and of the daily highway slaughter, not to mention the frenzy to get one poor little Negro man whipped by a white man, and other things too numerous to mention, I say when I think of all of these things, I am amazed and astonished at the goodness and mercy of the Lord in permitting such a people to encumber His beautiful world.

I sincerely hope that Hitler's hordes of Satan are never allowed to reach this country (God's country), but I believe our best defense is not guns, tanks, planes, etc. While these are good, and I say let there be no let-up along this line, I also say that our most important line of defense is to make this God's country, not in name only but in deed and in truth.

Let us get on our knees and stay there till we pray through. Let us restore God to first place in our lives and in the nation. Let us believe him and hold on to him till he blesses us so good that we won't even hate Hitler any more. Then if we don't hate him should we trust him? Never. Give God all the glory and have no confidence in the flesh and dictators.

NEGROES TO PAY FOR WHITE WAR

Washington, (NNS)—As the House Ways and Means Committee continues debates on the new tax program for raising defense funds, all signs point to the fact that once again the poor people—and therefore Negroes—will bear the heaviest burden. It was taken for granted that those in the upper-income brackets would bitterly fight against any proposal that would hit the wealthy in the only place it hurts—the pocket. But now the middle-class group, making incomes from $2,000 to $5,000 a year are also loudly protesting any additional income tax boost, and are loudly advocating an all-inclusive sales tax.

THERE IS A VAST DIFFERENCE IN THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT AND IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF GOVERNMENT

The citizen can be both proud and loyal to his government; of which he is part and parcel; and hate its administration, in the hands of men, who manipulate it, for selfish and dictatorial purposes. It is not disloyal to country, or lack of patriotism in the heart of the citizen, who object to the policy of men in charge of our form of government, who use it for the promotion of selfish ulterior purposes; and who are quick to denounce all men, who have the moral courage and stamina to differ from them, and expose their propaganda. Men should be morally certain, that they are right, before they go ahead and brand all other men, as traitors to their government; when they have the lives, rights and property of those they condemn in their hands. There are neither excuse, or reparation for error; not even honest error, if there is such an article. If you take an individual's life, peace and happiness away from him, you cannot restore either. But you filch from the person, that which does not enrichen you, but makes the individual poor indeed.

Let us illustrate the point. The Negro is a native born American citizen; and under the Constitution, Bill of Rights and under every law of right and justice, he is entitled to every right, privilege and opportunity, any other citizen enjoys. He has proven his love of country and loyalty to the flag, by giving his life and blood on the battlefield, whenever his country required his services. He has made this supreme sacrifice uncomplainingly. Must he be charged with disloyalty to his government, by those, whom he honestly differs from; and who fought to destroy the Union, while he fought to preserve the Union? Must he be threatened with the loss of what few privileges, rights and opportunities he has, because of love for his country, he walks out in the open, and says to his President: Mr. President, "we want to do our part on our defense program, along with other citizens, but we cannot do that, unless you cut out race discrimination on the defense program. We stand upon the right of petition, set out in the Federal Constitution. We petition your Excellency to issue an executive order, proclaiming to the office of Production of Management, that all discrimination in defense programs, and every other Government service must cease, and all future contracts must carry this provision." This is the letter and spirit of our form of government. Our form of Government, is composed of native born and naturalized citizens; and not of races. The individual is the unit and not the race.

Abuse and vituperation against those, who differ from us, have never been accepted by an honest public sentiment as decent argument won a case, or established the truth. Noise nor temper is no proof of sincerity or patriotism. Honest men always look with suspicion on the fellow, who sees wrong in everybody except himself. Everybody is wrong but "me." This character usually has a trick up his sleeve; that will fall out before the public in time to betray the propagandists. This brings us down to the genius of our Form of Government. Free speech, free press, free religion and the right of public assembly in the time of peace; secure from molestation. When Lindberg, Senator Wheeler and all others, who agree with them, express their views on the war situation and suggests that the principles of democracy for which we fight, are already lost; they have the perfect right to do so freely, and unmolested by the President or any other American citizen or authority. The President has neither the right nor authority to call those, who criticise his war policies, copperheads because they do not see things as he does. The President is preaching the gospel of democracy to the world; and he cannot continue to consistently deny the application of the principles of democracy, to home folks, because they differ from him on questions of administration of public affairs.

The President as a private citizen, has the same right to criticise individuals as individuals have to criticise him; but he has no right to officially denounce and call other citizens hard names, because they do not swallow his policies, lock, stock, and barrel. He is as much the servant of those, who disagree with him, as he is the servant of those, who agree with him, and which he praises to the very top. For the President to take any other attitude, would be to sanction totalitarianism for the world, rather than making democracy safe for the world.

Pittman Hearing Here Excites Keen Interest in South Georgia

UNDER FIRE—The Board of Regents in a meeting here tomorrow will decide the fate of Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia State Teachers' College of Statesboro.

Teachers College President Welcomes Chance to Answer Critics.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

STATESBORO, Ga., July 12.—The keenest interest is manifested in Statesboro, Bulloch county and surrounding territory in the hearing to be held by the board of regents in Atlanta Monday for Dr. Marvin S. Pittman. A number of citizens from this area will attend.

When seen here today, Dr. Pittman said, "I am pleased to have an opportunity to tell the regents and the public at large of the operations of the Georgia Teachers' College and my connection with it. The many letters which I have received reveal the fact that the hearing is not a matter which concerns me alone, or Statesboro and Bulloch county, but all who are interested in the public education in Georgia are concerned."

Answers Charge.

Asked about the charge that he "had been too active in partisan politics," Dr. Pittman replied, "I am willing to have that and any other charges which may be made against me answered by the good citizens of this community. The regents and the public also, I think, want to know the facts in the case and that is the purpose of the hearing as I understand it."

"How did the charges originally arise?" he was asked. To which he replied, "Well, the man who administers any public institution and does his duty is sure to make some enemies and critics. I have not been an exception. These persons, I do not know who they are, who do not know the facts, have been misinformed and the charges have grown out of these misrepresentations. I trust and believe they will be cleared up at the hearing Monday."

Reared in Mississippi.

"What about the charge that you are a foreigner?" he was asked.

"For 200 years," the black-haired educator replied, "my people have lived in the deep south. My grandfather was a slave owner; my father and his three brothers were Confederate soldiers; I grew up in Mississippi, which is even more southern in its attitude, if possible, than Georgia. Unfortunately I was not born in Georgia, but fortunately much of the Georgia spirit was born in me."

In answer to the question, "In the event you are not reappointed as president of the Georgia Teachers College what would you do?" Dr. Pittman replied, "My reappointment as president of the college is not the matter of chief concern, but the proper settlement of the issue involved is of major importance to me, to the entire teaching profession, and to the public at large."

PITTMAN'S FATHER FOUGHT FOR SOUTH

Descendant of an English family residing in this country since 1700, Dr. Pittman is the son of the late John Wesley Pittman, farmer and minister of the Methodist Episcopal church.

His mother was Ellen Bradford, daughter of George Washington Bradford, farmer and Presbyterian minister whose forebears were among Pilgrims who landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620.

His father and three of his uncles were soldiers of the Confederacy. One of his uncles was killed and his father and both other uncles were wounded, but continued in the service until the surrender.

His family, in the great migrations of the early 1800s left their North Carolina home and went westward through Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. Many of his blood kin are Georgians, and a sister was born in Atlanta.

Graduate of Millsaps, a Methodist college at Jackson, Miss., Dr. Pittman was parish superintendent of schools in Louisiana, taught history at Louisiana Normal College and was president of the Louisiana State Teachers' Association in 1912. From 1912 to 1918 he was director of teachers institutes and rural education of Oregon Normal School. He later took graduate work at Columbia, served as director of rural education and teacher training at Michigan State Normal, and became president of the Georgia State Teachers' College in 1934 at the invitation of the Board of Regents of the University System. In spite of appropriations decreasing from $72,491 in 1931 to $53,839 in 1940, during his tenure the school has more than doubled in physical plant, number of students, number of teachers and number of graduates.

Distinguished in the field of rural education, he has also created the outstanding department of industrial arts in the south, and the school under his presidency has been recognized by the National Association of Teachers' Colleges and the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary schools. He is also author of many important textbooks in the educational field.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

BASTILLE DAY Remember very well going out through the narrow old streets of Paris to the place where the bastille had stood.

I thought of the mobs that had stormed down those streets—the ragged, hungry, oppressed people who were beginning the first explosive drama in the overthrow of their King who had kept them in misery.

At the place itself there was quiet. An old woman with a mole on her chin sat by her flower stand. It is a poor section of the city. There were small shops, a bistro or two, a few carts, a few trucks.

There is nothing left of the bastille. A heavy black line in the pavement outlines the base and the bastions of that great pile of stone and bars in the dungeons of which innocent men lived out starved lives, their hearts eaten out with bitterness.

I stood there and wondered how many groans had been heard in the streets about that great prison. I wondered how it must have looked that day when the mob stormed it and the commandant hesitated until it was too late.

The bastille was no ordinary prison. Charles Dickens had a picture of it in his book, "The Tale of Two Cities." It was a prison in which the despot of France and his smaller but equally despotic henchmen hid their mistakes.

It was difficult, standing there that peaceful day watching the old woman with the mole sprinkle water on her flowers. That one day there had been such a prison as the bastille and such a cruel, heartless government as ruled in its day.

There was no sign of it, no old bit of masonry, no rubble—just a black, heavy line in the pavement of the square outlining where it stood.

Today is Bastille Day, but there will not be any Bastille Day celebration in Paris today. At least I assume not. Ordinarily it is to the French what the Fourth of July is to us.

TODAY IN ATLANTA Today the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia is to meet and go through the motions of a trial.

One can feel a lot of sympathy for the members of that board. By no stretch of imagination can they awake this morning and view the day with any prospect of pleasure. They are honorable men caught in a political snare.

The Governor of the state announced long days ago what their verdict will be. They know that in a previous hearing the defendant was cleared. They know that for two weeks the most vicious campaign of attempted bribery, intimidation and falsehood has been carried on by various persons interested in the hue and cry against the defendant.

They know the defendant has not been shown any of the so-called evidence against him. They know he won't be shown it. They know that no matter if no conclusive evidence is shown they still will be expected to vote the defendant guilty. They can't be happy about it. They know that others of the board were dismissed because they would not affirm a guilt not proved. Today they are called to affirm what the Governor has declared.

I know of nothing more ironic than the official union of Austria with Germany. The announcement of it, and then, two days later, a solemn but farcical plebiscite in which the people where given a chance to affirm what already had been done.

The Governor said so days ago.

Today the regents meet—it is a futile, empty, meaningless meeting.

THE LATE HUEY LONG I would like again to ask that the people retain their common sense and view this problem in its real light.

It is not a pretty story. The story of attempted bribery, efforts to bribe a Negro to rob a house, efforts to have a picture faked, a Negro taken to a place which was said to be the Ku Klux Klan headquarters, a pistol put in front of him and a paper given him to sign.

No jury in the nation would listen to any such evidence.

I cannot believe it will be presented today—yet, they have been out gathering it.

In Atlanta even the Ku Klux Klan was disgusted with it and denied having a chapter in Athens and denied any sympathy with the movement.

The late Huey Long liked that sort of smearing. He did not halt at charging some person he was trying to get rid of with advocating social equality with Negroes. He blandly let fall charges of Negro blood.

It is odd how the pattern of dictatorship always is the same. It begins by calling the newspapers names. The newspapers are attacked as liars. The newspapers are damned in every speech. Then follows the personal smearing—the cruel, ruthless charges. Huey knew the game. Huey followed, and improved the pattern. It is easy to see every move.

I don't think Georgia likes this. I think it makes Georgians wince to have this sort of rotten thing be done to any man. He hasn't had a fair deal. He won't get one. He won't get a fair hearing. He can't when the verdict is announced before the hearing. Georgia people like to see fair treatment given every man.

I don't think Georgians—farmers, workers, teachers, clerks, bankers, or anyone else, will like the slimy trail left by the gatherers of so-called "evidence."

It's Bastille Day. The bastille is gone. One of these days we will look back at this sordid chapter in the destruction of the integrity of our University System and find that the only signs of it left is a black mark in our memories.

Negro Economic Leadership

THE GREATEST TEACHER and leader of all times said "man cannot live by bread alone." We live in a hustling age which does not take time to deny that philosophy but which by precept and example teaches that bread is of great if not paramount importance if we are to live at all. All our leadership therefore has been put to the economic test. We think of a preacher of the "gospel" even as successful if he collects large amounts of money at his church, has a fine financial organization and maintains an excellent "credit rating." A physician whose real business is to heal the sick and whose success should be measured by the expensive car he drives and the type of home he owns. The school teacher and the college professor are judged by their material success rather than by what they have been able to achieve in the way of passing on the torch of knowledge or inspiring the everlasting souls of youth.

All the above is mostly wrong. We do need economic leadership. We should look to our business men and be able to find it. Too often our business men are not shining examples of success in the economic field. Perhaps one reason for this is that quite a few of our business men have missed their calling. Economic leadership for the Negro, "a poor race in a rich country" as Doctor W. E. B. DuBois once described us, requires a high order of intelligence and very thorough training in business technique and above all business integrity or character.

We Gotta Get Togethah

WHA SHOULD ah go to wah? Ah ain't mad at nobody. Hitler ain't nevah done nothin' to me. Wha don' Hitler and Roosevelt fight it out togethah if they's mad.

Dan, a young Negro WPA worker was scrubbing the long hallway.

It isn't a question of whether you're mad at anybody or not I answered. If the big boys who run the government decide you have to go, you'll go, whether you want to or not.

Well, ah don' wanna go, and besides, them Germans sual couldn't treat man race o' people no worse than we's treated now! Just look at me! Heah ah am on the WPA—ah don' wan' no WPA—ah wants a job. In a couple months dey's gonna kick me off the WPA—then what ah'm gonna do?

Ah been lookin' fo a job all the time, and you know what? Ah can't even buy a job—yeah! Ah even tried to buy me a job—ah went to one of them employment agencies, and they met me at the doah, and they say 'We ain' got nothin' fo' you,' Mah race o' people ain' even allowed to go in most of de places, even to LOOK fo' work—dey don' even wan' us in dere.

AN ANOTHAH thing, he continued. We's suppose' to be free Americans—we's born here in the United States, and we's suppose to have equal opportunity—an' those people what comes from England n Germany n Russia n France n Italy n Greece, and all ovah de worl'—dey's allowed to go anywhere they wanna an' get a good job—but we ain' even got the chance to go hardly any place to look for a job. An' in de south, dey's even worse off then we is heah.

I know it, I said. In the south they can't even ride in the same street car.

An anothah thing, continued Dan. We ain' even allowed to go in a restauran' an get us a cup o' coffee. Ah goes in a restauran' an' ah ask fo' a cup o' coffee. An' de man he says, 'Yo' wanna take it out wid ya? An' ah says no sah, ah'd like to have it heah' 'if yo' all don' mind, An' he says, 'well, you'll have to take it out wid ya.' An' den ah walks out of de restauran' 'cause ah don' lahk to stan' out on de street an drink de coffee.

I KNOW how they treat the Negroes in restaurants. I said. Not long ago, I was in a restaurant on the south side with some friends, and we noticed that coffee was 10c on the menu. Being in an ordinary restaurant we asked why coffee was so much, and the waiter said, 'It's only a nickel, we put 10c on the menu to keep the niggers out.

Yeah, said Dan. An' we supposs' to be equal... de constitution say so. Why dey call us niggah?

Well, Dan, I said. Nigger is a word used to show contempt for Negroes, to make Negroes feel inferior, to justify making Negroes live in filthy slums or rotten shacks, to keep them from association with white people except to do the dirtiest work at the lowest pay.

Yeah, ah suah wish ah could get revenge on all de white race! exlaimed Dan. Ah wish ah could show dem ah's just as good as dey is.

To get revenge wouldn't help anything, Dan, I said. It would only make things worse, because you'd get in more trouble than you are in now.... And besides all white people aren't your enemy.

Who is mah enemy den? demanded Dan.

THE BOSSES, Dan. The small majority that owns the whole world and makes folks like you and me work for them. These bosses are afraid of us workers. So they divide us up by sowing race hatred among us. They're responsible for some workers calling other workers wops, hunyaks, polacks, dumb swedes and all the rest of it. They're responsible for all the misery that Jewish people are made to suffer. And they're at the bottom of this nigger and Jim Crow business.

What will, den? demandad Dan.

When the white workers and the Negro workers and all the other workers understand that the bosses are at the bottom of this racial hatred and discrimination and UNITE to take away the factories and the mines and the mills from the bosses and run them to feed and clothe everybody, black or white. Then there won't be any bosses to spread race hatred, there wont be any niggers and dagoes and sheenies. There'll be workers and there'll be equality.

I guess I was carried away by what I was saying. Dan seemed impressed.

Ah guess we gotta get togethah, he said. Yeah. We gotta get togethah.

Mis-Quoted On 'Cat Burglar' Statement, Says Veteran Jurist

By JOHN A. SAUNDERS

The Hon. Harry S. McDevitt, resident judge of Common Pleas Court No. 1, does not like the idea of being charged with making a statement which might be interpreted as one that condones or endorses the lynching of Negroes.

He has been accused of making such an un-American assertion, but in a statement to the TRIBUNE on Tuesday, the veteran jurist emphatically denied certain portions of a statement attributed to him in an article which appeared in a daily newspaper last Friday.

The article, which purportedly quoted Judge McDevitt, inferred that he condoned lynching and mob violence when he sentenced North Philadelphia's notorious "Cat Burglar" to from 50 to 100 years in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Denies Quotation

The article quoted the jurist as stating:

"This is the most inhuman, beastly cycle of conduct I have ever listened to. If you were south of the Mason-Dixon line, a trial would not be necessary. You ought to be in a cage."

Admitted Saying

Judge McDevitt admitted saying some of the things with which he has been charged, but claims that by failing to quote his full statement, the person responsible for the article gave the reading public the wrong impression of his true feelings.

"What I really said was this," he continued:

"This is the most inhuman, beastly cycle of conduct I have ever listened to. If you were south of the Mason-Dixon line, in one of those backwood States where they have no regard for law and order, a trial would not be necessary. You are fortunate to be in a State where the people are intelligent and believe in law and order."

However, the article has given rise to much conjecture on the part of both white and colored citizens and organizations as to the judge's true thoughts and feelings concerning the vile, infamous and criminal practice of lynching colored Americans in certain sections of the South.

Organization to Act

The Philadelphia Council of the National Negro Congress is said to be drafting a protest to be sent to Judge McDevitt, and the Philadelphia Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People took steps expected to culminate in similar action at a meeting at the YWCA, 1005 Catharine street, Tuesday night.

The notorious "Cat Burglar" perpetrated a wave of terror which resulted in 48 armed robberies and the raping of a number of socially prominent women at the point of a gun.

He gave his name as Isaiah Smith, 20, of 21st street near Susquehanna avenue. He and Arthur Clisby, 18, of 19th street near Berks, pleaded guilty to 48 indictments charging robbery and criminal assault. Clisby received a sentence of from 40 to 80 years.

Women Witnesses

Judge McDevitt's courtroom was packed and jammed with witnesses when the "Cat" and members of his gang were sentenced. There were a number of women appearing as witnesses. All said they were either beaten, robbed or assaulted by Smith and Clisby.

Three other members of the gang pleaded guilty and were sentenced. Davis Williams, 32, of Norris street near 23rd, Smith's step-father, pleaded guilty to pawning loot for the gang. He was sentenced to from 7½ to 15 years.

Samuel Taggert, 34, and Timothy Dooley, 40, both of Mervine street near Susquehanna avenue, pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods. They received six months.

Fred Jacobs, 15, of 18th street near Montgomery avenue, was not arraigned with the rest of the gang, but will be tried in Juvenile Court.

Colored Youths Get Chance in Canada

MAR 29 1941

MONTREAL.—(ANP)—Dr. K. I. Melville, colored assistant professor of pharmacology of McGill University Medical School, recently stated that Canada's defense industries are training and absorbing colored youths as fast as they qualify and apply.

A number of them have already been assigned to the Vickers Aircraft and the Fairchild Aircraft and the munitions industry which is expected to reach its peak by summer will take many more he stated.

Thus war conditions have resulted in definite progressive steps being made by the colored Canadian. Already a factor in the army, he is participating as skilled artisans and technicians and is becoming an integral part of Canada's defense.

BEST DARKIES REVOLT

Here in Monroe we have lots of negroes who are firm believers in the observance of the laws of the land, who, as we see them, stands for morals, clean living, and who are devout church folk and rigidly condemn the law infractionists and are sincere in the belief that they should be punished. One of our oldest, most dependable darkies remarked to us a few days ago "that when members of my race so far forget themselves as to fight, knock one another in the head, knife and shoot each other, the cloud of their violations could not do otherwise than settle down upon the innocent—those who are endeavoring with all their strength of body, mind and heart to preserve the peace and good order of the community." Is he right or wrong?

Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla

IS THE 5th COLUMN MARCHING IN?

MAR 1 1941

Last week in our city edition, and this week in our National, we published an article telling of Klan endorsement given the Little Oklahoma Dies Committee. Although the Klan without warning, scattered a folder all around the Capitol one day during the recent investigation of the Oklahoma Federation For Constitutional Rights, the pamphlets were as scarce as hen teeth when this writer started out the next day to capture one.

The reason for the sudden disappearance of the Ku Klux leaflet rests in the fact that the Little Dies Committee did not want the public to see the close relationship. The order went out to "scoop 'em up and spade 'em in".

But we have published a verbatum copy of the leaflet and any one who desires may come to the Black Dispatch office to peruse same. We have it here in black and white, signed "Oklahoma Realm Office of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Oklahoma City, Phone 8-9128".

It will be recalled that last summer the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan held a joint picnic and rally with German Bundists in New Jersey. Time magazine carried a story regarding this union picnic, and it was later said by a German Bundist that the Klan was the only organization in America which the German Bund had been able to penetrate.

To add weight to this evidence we have the testimony of Congressman Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, who in a speech February 18th, this year, said the Dies Committee, created for the purpose of investigating un-American activities has been flirting with the Silver Shirts, the Christian Front and other facist organizations. And that Joseph P. Kamp, former editor of the Fascist Magazine "The Awakener" is now writing publicity stuff for the Dies Committee.

Despite the fanfare that has surrounded members of the Dies committee and the staff in their investigation of Nazi and Fascist agents and movements in the past 12 omnths, I submit that the record shows little of substantial accomplishment in this regard. I submit, further, that the records do not disclose what I consider a thorough investigation of many notorious organizations whose methods and objectives give grounds for classifying them as disrupting influences in these crucial days when the unity of our people is paramount.

So pronounced are the purposes of such organizations to sow the seeds of discord widespread throughout the country that actions of these organizations arouse justified suspicion that they are definitely sympathetic to Nazi and Fascist aims, if they are not actually agents of the Nazis. The effect of their operation under the cloak of patriotism is certainly what the Quislings and Lavals of this country seek to achieve.

The most recent product of an organization of this type has recently been mailed to every member of this body and to each Member of the Senate. My esteemed colleague the gentleman from the State of Washington (Mr. Coffee) mentioned this organization briefly a few days ago on the floor of this House. I refer to the Constitutional Educational League and the pamphlet The Dies Committee and the Fifth Column, written by Joseph P. Kamp, head of the organization. No effort so far as I know, has ever been made by the Dies committee to investigate the record of Mr. Kamp or from what source he derives his support. Quite the contrary: there is every indication that Mr. Kamp and the Dies committee staff are in close collaboration. Mr. Kamp is known to have frequented the offices of the committee for quite a period some weeks prior to the appearance of this scurrilous document—a document aimed at the President, at Mrs. Roosevelt, at Attorney General Jackson, and other high officials of the Government. And yet the record of this Mr. Kamp smells to high heaven of un-American activities, activities calculated to breed class and race hatred of the most virulent and disruptive sort.

Until 1937 Kamp was executive editor and publisher of the Fascist magazine, The Awakener, one of whose staff writers was Lawrence Dennis, an avowed Fascist and contributor to Dr. Frederick Auhagen's Nazi Today's Challenge. When Kamp's magazine discontinued publication he wrote to one of his followers that the work would be carried on by the Constitutional Educational League.

One of Kamp's principal activities has been distribution of anti-Semitic literature throughout the country, cooperating with William Dudley Pelley of the Silver Shirts, among others. Two of the documents he has assisted in giving circulation are the so-called Benjamin Franklin letter attacking the Jews, a letter notorious as a forgery, and a pamphlet entitled, "Why Are the Jews Persecuted for Their Religion"?

Praise for Kamp and his work has come from James True, well-known anti-Semitic head of the Industrial Control Reports. Kamp's publication have been distributed widely by such avowed pro-Hitlerites as Allen Zoll, of the American Patriots, Inc.; John Cecil of the National Conference Board; and John B. Snow, of the League for Constitutional Government.

These and other facts on Kamp and the Constitutional Educational League, Inc., are to be found in various issues of The Hour, an authoritative confidental news letter devoted to exposing Nazi, anti-Semetic, and similar "fifth column" activities and individauls, whose board of editorial consultants include such well-known writers and historians as Wythe Williams, Hendrik Van Loon, Leland Stowe, and Prof. F. L. Schuman, of Williams College.

In my opinion, the Department of Justice should investigate this matter, because I think there has been an illegal use of the mails.

Do you recall the story of ancient Rome. It is said that Nero occupied his time fiddling while the city, that sat on seven hills, was burning. Here we have sabotuers prevelant everywhere, and yet men supposed to offer leadership to the nation flirt with fascism. The men who do this are lacking in vision, or worse still, "fifth columnists", openly betraying their country to the enemy.

Dorothy Thompson sometime ago wrote a very revealing article on a fascist coup, which this noted woman feels is eminent in this country. Miss Thompson hates fascism, but this brillant, alert writer has an awareness of the blundering traitorous conduct of those in power. STANDING THE STORM

Years ago when the shackles of slavery were still upon the limbs of our foreparents while enduring an oppressive iniquitous system of economic exploitation, brutalising and dehumanising, by faith they looked forward to the day of freedom, and sang: "We'll stand the storm, it wont be long, We'll anchor bye and bye." After two centuries and a half the day of freedom dawned. They kept the faith.

Behind us now are seventy odd years of freedom. We have known the terror of Night riders, terrorists, and the diabolical Ku Klux Klan. We have been driven from the polls, denied the manhood rights of simple justice and American citizenship. We have felt about our necks the tightening noose of the lynchers' rope. Our flesh has been scorched, and seared at the stake. Our children have been denied a just distribution of educational funds, yet we have paid our pro rata of taxes, like other citizens. Injustice rears its hydra head even now when the fate of the country is being endangered. The eating cancer from within is more deadly than totalitarianism from abroad.

APR 17 1941

The nation in preparing for war discriminates against one-tenth of its citizenry solely because of color. Negroes are compelled to fight for a chance to fight to save America for democrats who themselves need to be saved from themselves. Negroes saved the union once. They may have to save it again. In the meantime they sing: "We'll stand the storm, it wont be long, we'll anchor bye and bye."

IS THE 5th COLUMN MARCHING IN?

Last week in our city edition, and this week in our National, we published an article telling of Klan endorsement given the Little Oklahoma Dies Committee. Although the Klan without warning, scattered a folder all around the Capitol one day during the recent investigation of the Oklahoma Federation For Constitutional Rights, the pamphlets were as scarce as hen teeth when this writer started out the next day to capture one.

The reason for the sudden disappearance of the Ku Klux leaflet rests in the fact that the Little Dies Committee did not want the public to see the close relationship. The order went out to "scoop 'em up and spade 'em in".

But we have published a verbatum copy of the leaflet and any one who desires may come to the Black Dispatch office to peruse same. We have it here in black and white, signed "Oklahoma Realm Office of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Oklahoma City, Phone 8-9128".

It will be recalled that last summer the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan held a joint picnic and rally with German Bundists in New Jersey. Time magazine carried a story regarding this union picnic, and it was later said by a German Bundist that the Klan was the only organization in America which the German Bund had been able to penetrate.

To add weight to this evidence we have the testimony of Congressman Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, who in a speech February 18th, this year, said the Dies Committee, created for the purpose of investigating un-American activities has been flirting with the Silver Shirts, the Christian Front and other facist organizations. And that Joseph P. Kamp, former editor of the Fascist Magazine "The Awakener", is now writing publicity stuff for the Dies Committee.

Despite the fanfare that has surrounded members of the Dies committee and the staff in their investigation of Nazi and Fascist agents and movements in the past 12 omnths, I submit that the record shows little of substantial accomplishment in this regard. I submit, further, that the records do not disclose what I consider a thorough investigation of many notorious organizations whose methods and objectives give grounds for classifying them as disrupting influences in these crucial days when the unity of our people is paramount.

So pronounced are the purposes of such organizations to sow the seeds of discord widespread throughout the country that actions of these organizations arouse justified suspicion that they are definitely sympathetic to Nazi and Fascist aims, if they are not actually agents of the Nazis. The effect of their operation under the cloak of patriotism is certainly what the Quislings and Lavals of this country seek to achieve.

The most recent product of an organization of this type has recently been mailed to every member of this body and to each Member of the Senate. My esteemed colleague the gentleman from the State of Washington (Mr. Coffee) mentioned this organization briefly a few days ago on the floor of this House. I refer to the Constitutional Educational League and the pamphlet The Dies Committee and the Fifth Column, written by Joseph P. Kamp, head of the organization. No effort so far as I know, has ever been made by the Dies committee to investigate the record of Mr. Kamp or from what source he derives his support. Quite the contrary: there is every indication that Mr. Kamp and the Dies committee staff are in close collaboration. Mr. Kamp is known to have frequented the offices of the committee for quite a period some weeks prior to the appearance of this scurrilous document—a document aimed at the President, at Mrs. Roosevelt, at Attorney General Jackson, and other high officials of the Government. And yet the record of this Mr. Kamp smells to high heaven of un-American activities, activities calculated to breed class and race hatred of the most virulent and disruptive sort.

Until 1937 Kamp was executive editor and publisher of the Fascist magazine, The Awakener, one of whose staff writers was Lawrence Dennis, an avowed Fascist and contributor to Dr. Frederick Auhagen's Nazi Today's Challenge. When Kamp's magazine discontinued publication he wrote to one of his followers that the work would be carried on by the Constitutional Educational League.

One of Kamp's principal activities has been distribution of anti-Semitic literature throughout the country, cooperating with William Dudley Pelley of the Silver Shirts, among others. Two of the documents he has assisted in giving circulation are the so-called Benjamin Franklin letter attacking the Jews, a letter notorious as a forgery, and a pamphlet entitled, "Why Are the Jews Persecuted for Their Religion"?

Praise for Kamp and his work has come from James True, well-known anti-Semitic head of the Industrial Control Reports. Kamp's publication have been distributed widely by such avowed pro-Hitlerites as Allen Zoll, of the American Patriots, Inc.; John Cecil of the National Conference Board; and John B. Snow, of the League for Constitutional Government.

These and other facts on Kamp and the Constitutional Educational League, Inc., are to be found in various issues of The Hour, an authoritative confidental news letter devoted to exposing Nazi, anti-Semetic, and similar "fifth column" activities and individauls, whose board of editorial consultants include such well-known writers and historians as Wythe Williams, Hendrik Van Loon, Leland Stowe, and Prof. F. L. Schuman, of Williams College.

In my opinion, the Department of Justice should investigate this matter, because I think there has been an illegal use of the mails.

Do you recall the story of ancient Rome. It is said that Nero occupied his time fiddling while the city, that sat on seven hills, was burning. Here we have sabotuers prevelant everywhere, and yet men supposed to offer leadership to the nation flirt with fascism. The men who do this are lacking in vision, or worse still, "fifth columnists", openly betraying their country to the enemy.

RENEW SUPPORT OF ORGANIZATIONS, LAWSON INSISTS

By EDWARD LAWSON
Managing Editor, Opportunity Magazine

Strange how quickly values change these crucial days. Not so long ago thousands of persons of both races felt—whether they said so or not—that many of the institutions which the Negro had created for his betterment over a period of 75 years were on the BRINK OF FAILURE.

This was the way their logic ran:

The world is MOVING. We are in a NEW ERA. And the main feature of that New Era is that GOVERNMENT is TAKING OVER.

GOVERNMENT is going to give us JOBS.

GOVERNMENT is going to guarantee our CIVIL RIGHTS.

GOVERNMENT is going to build us HOUSES.

GOVERNMENT is going to grant us what we need for SECURITY.

GOVERNMENT is going, eventually, to wipe out all DISCRIMINATION, SEGREGATION, and ECONOMIC INEQUALITY.

Certainly they had some reason to think that way.

NEW DEAL SET PACE IN SOCIAL THINKING

No national administration had ever gone so far ahead in its SOCIAL THINKING and its WILLINGNESS TO COPE WITH THE PROBLEMS OF THE UNDERPRIVILEGED as had the NEW DEAL. No administration had ever seemed to have GREATER CONCERN for the condition of the Negro in our national life. No administration had ever TALKED SO MUCH about raising him to a position of full MANHOOD in our democratic system.

The NEW DEAL was so FRESH in its outlook and so UNABASHED in its apparent efforts to improve the Negro's situation that for a time it almost totally disarmed those who had worked so hard toward the same end for so many weary years.

ORGANIZATIONS SEEMED USELESS

They began to wonder:

If GOVERNMENT, through the WPA, the NYA, the Employment Service, and all its other agencies, is going to give us JOBS, why do we need such an organization as the URBAN LEAGUE?

If GOVERNMENT, by means of legislation, is going to guarantee our CIVIL RIGHTS, why do we need such an organization as the N.A.A.C.P.?

If GOVERNMENT, through its Federal Housing Administration and its U.S. Housing Administration, is going to build us decent homes, why do we need such groups as TENANTS' LEAGUES?

If GOVERNMENT, through its Federal Security System, is going to give us SOCIAL SECURITY, why do we need our FRATERNAL GROUPS and our BUSINESS ASSOCIATIONS?

In short, if GOVERNMENT is working with all its vast resources actually to wipe out DISCRIMINATION, SEGREGATION, and INEQUALITY, why do we need ANY racial or interracial organizations?

GOVERNMENT WAS TAKING CARE OF THINGS

After thinking hard—but perhaps not hard enough—about these things, they began to express themselves thus on the subject:

"The URBAN LEAGUE is no longer of much use; GOVERNMENT has TAKEN OVER the tremendous task of finding Negroes WORK."

"The N.A.A.C.P. is getting nowhere fast; the GOVERNMENT is way out ahead of it in the fight for CIVIL RIGHTS."

That attitude was fast becoming widespread, say a year or two ago.

Since then—and you may have noticed it—there's been a sudden and tremendous SHIFT.

SYMPATHETIC YESTERDAY, HOSTILE TODAY

A GOVERNMENT that yesterday was SYMPATHETIC to the Negro's plea for a SQUARE DEAL today is ADAMANT and even HOSTILE. Many of its social principles have, for the time at least, been SHELVED to make way for what we optimistically brand DEFENSE.

The NEW DEAL has moved over to make way for the ARMY. And NATIONAL UNITY, the Army argues, allows for no dissenting voice.

Every Negro knows what that means if he takes the time to think about it.

It means that unless we put up a STIFF FIGHT, we'll soon be RIGHT BACK WHERE WE STARTED FROM. Exclusion from DEFENSE JOBS logically will lead to exclusion from post-defense INDUSTRY. Curtailment of our hard-won CIVIL RIGHTS in the present emergency might NEVER END when the emergency is over. Acceptance of IMPROPER HOUSING by Negroes rushed to defense projects could lead us to condone the breeding of NEW SLUMS and Negro GHETTOES. And so right down the line.

NEED FULL STRENGTH OF RACIAL UNITY

It's obvious that we can't fight these things as INDIVIDUALS. We need ORGANIZATION. We need the FULL STRENGTH of RACIAL UNITY now as never before.

Our existing organizations—and particularly the full-time ones like the Urban League and the N.A.A.C.P.—have the advantage of many years of SUCCESSFUL SERVICE in the fields for which they were created. They are geared for quick and effective ACTION. The betterment of the NEGRO is far closer to their hearts than it ever was to the NEW DEAL'S.

They are ready and willing to INTENSIFY the FIGHT for us that they carried on so valiantly, even when we were in the mood to PUT THEM ON THE SHELF because it seemed as though their functions were dwindling as GOVERNMENT moved in.

But we must, in turn, renew our INTEREST in, and wholehearted SUPPORT of, these groups.

And RIGHT NOW, when we need them more than we ever did before, is as good a time as any to BEGIN.

The News and Courier comments at length upon the stay of execution granted Joe Vernon, colored, in Alabama by U. S. Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter in response to frantic appeals by Leon A. Ransom, counsel for the Advancement of the Colored People. We know nothing of Vernon's case except that he was convicted of murder and sentenced to die last week, nor would the eminent Justice Frankfurter except for the fact that Vernon is colored and represents a large and influential group of voters. This occurrence may mark the beginning of a regular procedure in every capital case in the South from now on in which the defendant happens to be colored. The sovereignty of our Southern States, the dignity of our courts, local self-government—all threaten to be swept aside by this Association for the Advancement of Colored People that can simply scare the wits out of the powers that be at Washington when they think of the Hitler-like power that Walter White wields over eleven or twelve million Afro-American citizens, who experience has shown can easily be induced to vote as a unit, and when they do so exercise a profound influence on the result.

Is The North Retreating?

THE South is still fighting the Civil War. It is doing it in a most subtle and undermining way. The creation and perpetuation of prejudice against the Negro race is its chief weapon. If our democracy is infiltrated with fifth columnists, hordes may be found in the South. For it is the southern white man and the ideas that he possesses and scatters throughout the nation that prevent the working of the democratic process in this country. For it is obvious that for the white people in most parts of this country democracy is working. Even in the South a white man enjoys a certain amount of democracy where, through that enjoyment, a colored man may not benefit. Of course, if the lawmakers of the South think that to extend democracy to the poor white will mean that Negroes may benefit they do not extend it.

The Civil War was fought and the South came out second best. The yankees saw to that. The northerners also saw to it that the Negroes were given such laws for their protection that was consistent with the highest enjoyment of citizenship in a democracy. They also helped the Negroes to see that the laws were enforced. Negroes became lawmakers in the various state legislatures. Twenty-one black Congressmen went to the nations capital. One Negro Supreme Court justice sat in the South Carolina highest tribunal to interpret laws. The Negroes, with the help of the carpet-baggers, really did well by themselves during the Reconstruction period.

But somewhere along the line the northerners lost interest. The things that they had fought for they no longer had the interest to maintain. The rights that they won they permit the South to ignore. They fought for equality and permit the South to practice inequality. They even permit southerners to dominate the policies of businesses of the North. If you doubt the veracity of this statement consult some of the managers of loop businesses who are lukewarm about serving Negroes and they will tell you, if you can gain their confidence, that they have customers who are from the South. They will tell you that out of deference to their feelings they respect their wishes.

The northerners fought for proportional representation in Congress in accordance to the number of citizens who vote but still permit the South to send 100 percent representation with 25% of its population voting.

After the Civil War it became the policy of the Federal government to give the Negro equality everywhere and in everything. But now that great body permits the southern army and navy officials to jim crow Negroes in the armed forces of the nation. When two Negroes from Chicago passed the Civil Service examination to become aeronautical technicians in Akron, Ohio, and went there to work they were told, after the officials at the airfield discovered their color, that they were sorry but a few men work there who are from the South and it might be against their desires to work alongside of Negroes. The men got their jobs but not until they flew to Washington and had the heat turned on by one of the senior senators.

The South is carrying on its campaign against the Negro. It is still fighting the ideals the North thought it won when Grant marched through Richmond. The Federal government is satisfied to permit southern ideas to sabotage the democratic process and the North is retreating. God Bless America!

T. B. Boyd, Jr., Delivers Eloquent Oration on Timely Text at A. & I. State College

MAR 14 1941

EDITOR'S NOTE: Theophilus B. Boyd, Jr., a sophomore at A. and I. State College, and a member of its History Study Club delivered an oration on "The Negro and the Constitution" at the College last week. The oration received flattering commendations from both students and teachers, and is published herewith on recommendation of Prof. Merle R. Eppse, noted teacher of history at State College.

The Negro And The Constitution

By THEOPHILUS B. BOYD, JR.

MAR 14 1941

If we take a look in the history of the Negro in America, we shall find that he was with Washington in the dark days of Valley Forge. It was Peter Salem who killed Major Pitcorin of the British Army at Bunker Hill. He also supported Oliver Perry in his battles on the lakes and stood with General Jackson at New Orleans.

One would not have to stop here to be convinced of the important part that the Negro has played in the development of his country's welfare. In my mind's eye, I could see Old Attucks standing there looking the English in the face and saying, 'Shoot if you care, but if I die I'll die fighting with all my heart and strength as long as it remains, for my country, America."

One could find without much trouble the fact that the Negro was one of the first to help explore this country. He also was there in time of greatest need, when this country was being threatened and its principles were at stake. He helped the country to obtain its freedom from England and helped in the establishment of independence. We can also see that without the active participation of the Negro in the Civil War in the 19th century the Union could not have been saved nor slavery destroyed.

In all these ways has the Negro showed his devotion to the glory and honor of the nation. His blood offering is not for himself, or for his race but for his country. 'Greater love has no man than this, that he lay down his life for his country." These records bear indisputable proof of the fact that the Negro had rightfully earned his place as a citizen long before and after the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation and Ratification of the Thirteenth Amendment that made it a part of the Constitution of American Government.

As a result of this Amendment to the Constitution by which the Negro obtained his freedom though not without the spilling of his own blood, we find the Negro of today demanding his rights as a citizen in the higher courts of the land. We also find him defending the laws of his country! Yes I repeat, his country for in the poem of James Weldon Johnson, the eminent poet of the 20th century, we find these words.

To gain the fruits that have been earned
To hold those fields that have been won,
Our arms have strained, our backs
have burned,
Bent low beneath a ruthless sun.

That banner which is now the type
Of victory on field and flood,
Remember its first crimson stripes?
Was died by Attucks willing blood.

And never yet has come the cry
When that fair flag has been assailed,
For men to do, for men to die,
That we have faltered or have failed.

We helped to bear it rent and torn,
Through many a hot breath battle breeze
Held in our hands it has been born
And planted far across the seas.

And never yet—A—haughty land.
Let us at least for this be praised—
Has one black treason guided hand
Ever against that flag been raised.

We the Negroes of America are proud of the brilliant records left by our illustrous ancestors who shed their precious blood upon this soil to secure the establishment of the principle upon which the Constitution of this marvelous land is founded, Liberty, Justice and Self-Government.

MAR 14 1941

They planted the seeds that bore the lucious fruit of freedom which we so sweetly now enjoy. Their hands first pulled the weeds, the thorns and thistles from the path which we now tread without the dangling chain of bondage about us. It is ours to bear aloft the torch they passed on to our hands, the torch of liberty kept burning by the oil of knowledge and heaven inspired wisdom.

May we turn those pages of history to the next chapter. The World's War. In this the Negro shouldered arms across the Atlantic and like men fought through the enemies line staining the ground with his blood and giving his life to save his country from ruin.

There on the battlefield of France face to face with death and danger, crawling through mud and mires, shells falling all about him. There claded in the uniform of his country he viewed himself in the mirrow of service, no more a weaklin, but a man, no more a servant but a ruler. No more does the Negro of this 20th century look to other races for leaders, teachers, instructors and advisers, but realizing his own power and fitness. The Negro is at last finding his rightful place in the scheme of life in America. In politics in certain instances he holds the balance of power by means of vote. In business his thrift and his integrity is beyond question.

These are some of the fruits whose healization have been made possible by the amendment of the Constitution which his loyal service helped to create, and with a just degree of pride and overwhelming joy we may say in the words of Dr. Johnson:

We stand erect and without fear,
And for our fores let this suffice
We've bought a rightful sonship here
And we have more than paid the price.

MAR 14 1941

To the Constitution we owe our allegance to be true and loyal citizens of America. And to us the Constitution owes its Liberty, Justice and Protection, as long as we remain within the shadow of its protecting wing. Within a thousand cities of the dead lie those whose heart in life beat with rapture as they marched ever forward in defence of the principle upon which the Constitution of America is founded and not the least among them are those of the aspiring race who gladly gave their lives that we might live as men.

May God keep us ever mindful of our duty as sons and daughters and lawful citizens of this our blood bough land and help us to prove ourselves worthy of the protection afforded us by that most sacred document for which our fathers fought, bled and died, "The Constitution of this our glorious United States of America."

The 'Jackson Whites'

MAR 14 1941

Far be it from this writer to stir up anything between the effete north and the squalid south. I'd rather let the American Mercury—July issue—do it. But I'll quote a woman writer named Frances Green about a group of people known locally as the "Jackson Whites" who live in the Ramapo mountains about 30 miles from Rockefeller Center.

"The 3,500 kidnaped English maids who were brought to Long Island in 1771 with the permission of George III and penned up for the delectation of the English soldiers stationed there, and all the riffraff of English, German, Negro, and Indian who deserted both armies during the Revolution are the ancestors of the Jackson Whites.

"These people live in filthy squalor in three-sided huts (the mountain forming a convenient fourth side), and prowl the mountains with shotgun which may take off the head of an innocent visitor without provocation. They have no marriage morals, but mate like birds of the air, and, consequently, the horrors of unmixed blood run rampant among them. Schooling is unheard of, and the Jackson Whites never heard of sanitation.

"Mystery surrounds their origin, though some historians have traced them to their dark beginnings in five counties and three continents. Some look like Indians, [redacted] like Negroes, and some have the fair skin and hair of the pure Anglo-Saxon. Intermarriage has "played hob" with the mentalities of these people. They are not dangerous on the whole—mostly just dull."

White America Ignorant Of Our Problems, Says Lawson

FEB 22 1941

By EDWARD LAWSON
(Managing Editor, Opportunity Magazine)

It seems to me that one of the most glaring deficiencies in the Negro's present drive for his proper place in the national defense picture is the lack of what social workers like to call "interpretation" of our problems to those who are in a position to do something tangible about it.

We haven't publicized our wants thoroughly enough among the right people, haven't cried out for a better break in a voice that sounded like it meant real business.

We haven't made the front pages of our daily papers with the story of the Negro and defense. We haven't plugged it on the radio. We haven't gotten it played up in big circulation magazines like Life and Liberty and Colliers. We haven't had it dramatized in movies or in plays.

In short, we haven't thrown our problem, yet, into the laps of those in a position to alleviate it—those millions of common everyday average Americans who work; who in the long run must eventually decide our fate.

True, the Negro papers have been full of news and editorials on defense. Negro orators have talked to Negro groups about it, Negro organizations have advised and helped their thousands of constituents to understand the defense program, what it implies and in what manner they may benefit by it.

MILLIONS HAVE NO CONCEPTION

But there are still millions of Americans who have no conception of the Negro's fight to take part in this nation's preparations to defend itself. They constitute the largest portion of our working population, and to me it seems that it is they who will in the last analysis will decide whether or not the Negro is to find his way into defense industry.

We've got to reach them with our message, and we will reach them neither through the Negro press, nor by mass meetings in Negro neighborhoods, nor through the influence of organizations which operate solusively within the race.

There are millions of Americans who would not believe you if you told them that Negroes are working now, successfully, in all but three or four of the hundreds of occupations listed by the Census Bureau.

SINGERS, DANCERS

There are millions of Americans who have never come in contact with a colored skilled or white-collar worker; who still believe that the Negro's only talent lies in singing, dancing, and shooting craps.

There are millions of Americans who don't know that Negroes are admitted to their Navy only as flunkies, and barred from the Marines entirely.

There are millions of Americans who have no idea that certain trade unions discriminate against Negroes and thereby bar them from employment.

There are millions of Americans who have no conception of the close interrelation between their own "little" men.

community and the nearby Negro neighborhood in terms of health, recreation, earning power and general well-being.

DON'T KNOW WE EXIST

In short, there are millions of Americans who go through life day after day and year after year and never know that the Negro exists.

And not until we get over to those "untouched" millions the message that Negro Americans are trained and capable and eager for the opportunities which American industry provides, will we see any real, important action.

As a whole, the American people are inclined to be fair and liberal, even generous, in their attitude toward the underdog, especially when they feel that there is merit in his case.

But they demand to be shown first that the underdog is really "under," and that they themselves will benefit by helping him.

The men who guide the destinies of England must have realized that, for their barrage of propaganda asking for our aid to Britain was a tremendous one, effective because it reached 'way down to our

NOW IS BEST TIME TO BEGIN

If America's Negroes ever are to integrate themselves effectively into American industry, they must stage a similar all-out campaign. And now, when defense has made expansion possible, is the best time to begin.

It is not impossible to get our story into the big circulation magagines; the Saturday Evening Post already has carried one brief article about the Negro's need for defense employment. But there are hundreds of magazines catering to as many different types of readers. Someone must, in some way, get the Negro's story into them.

It's not too difficult to get time on the radio, provided that one's subject is of general interest. But it's a safe bet that not one station in one hundred in America has even been approached to help in our campaign. It's time we started getting busy on them.

CAN MAKE HEADLINES IN DAILY PAPERS

It's even possible to make the headlines in our daily papers with the story of our struggle for training and for jobs. But first we've got to show the editors that there is a story, and that it's important to a large segment—and preferably not just a Negro segment—of his readers.

FEB 22 1941

A big-time publicity blitzkrieg like this, addressed to average fair-minded men and women everywhere throughout America and carried out intelligently by thousands of cooperating citizens and groups in every city, soon would put to shame our previous efforts to let those in control know where we stand, and why. It would get results, or nothing would.

It's high time we got started.

I'll do my part. Will you?

Life Day By Day

FEB 7 1941

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

Whether we like it or not, Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, gave us something grave to ponder when, in his recent radio speech, he told us we are committing suicide. Dr. Hutchins gave us the unvarnished truth when he asserted that not yet have we developed sufficient intellectual and spiritual character to comprehend justice, democracy, moral order, and the supremacy of human rights.

Dr. Hutchins is everlastingly right when he says that weakness in our own political integrity is our greatest foe. He illustrated what he meant by referring to the widespread corruption in our politics, reflected particularly in state and municipal governments. From our own misconception and misapplication of democracy, comes our greatest danger.

Dr. Hutchins takes the position that before we undertake to save the world we should first save ourselves from ourselves; we should make our theoretical democracy an actual democracy.

It is political greed and graft and trickery which permeates our nation and which held to our bosom, will eventually do to us what the asp did to Cleopatra.

FEB 7 1941

Desperately we need to take a different attitude toward our own country and toward the kind of government we say we believe in. Instead of tolerating the sham of undemocratic democracy, which is demonstrated a thousand times a day in the undemocratic conduct of politicians, we should prove that we are fit for democracy and that we know what democracy is, by demanding and getting the application of true democratic principles in all our public affairs.

We should put an end to tyrannical local ring rule and state machine rule, which are prostituting our democracy to selfish, prejudiced and partisan purposes.

Loins, Brother, Loins

The other day I heard an intelligent man make a language error which I never heard before: In reading a passage which said something about "gird your loins," he read it, "gird your lions." And it was not a slip of the tongue either, for several times he referred to the passage and each time he said "lions" instead of "loins."

Undoubtedly that man had many times seen and heard the word "loins;" yet he had never realized that it was not "lions."

There you have a striking instance of a man's having eyes, yet not seeing; and ears, yet not hearing.

Charges Made By Univ. Head Are Refuted

Editor Rebuts Chicago University President's Statement

FEB 6 1941

NEW YORK—Speaking on a nationwide NBC network broadcast emanating from New York on Thursday night, Edward Lawson, managing editor of Opportunity Magazine, pointedly refuted the implication contained in a speech made by Dr. Robert Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, over the same network the week before, that Negroes and members of other minority groups are not whole-heartedly behind the national defense program.

"As we struggle for our own complete emancipation from the forces of darkness and destruction, we remember that the people of Great Britain likewise struggle to maintain the freedom that they won at so great a cost," Mr. Lawson said. "And because we believe the cause of democracy is indivisible, we support them now with all our hearts."

Mr. Lawson was one of five speakers on the program, which was especially arranged by the National Broadcasting Company. Among others who spoke were Maury Maverick, Mayor of San Antonio, Texas; Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Dorothy Overlock, executive secretary of the Student Defenders of Democracy; and Beatrice Martin, of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

For Better Democracy

Mr. Lawson prefaced his remarks by saying that Negroes know, better than members of any other minority group, that a more perfect democracy can and must be built here in America.

"But we know, too," he added, "that if the fires of racial oppression and hatred which have swept over Europe with such devastating effect in the past few years ever reach the shores of this, our native land, whatever hope we have for the attainment of full status here, whatever faith we hold in the promise of the future, must soon disintegrate."

Points to "Democratic Process"

"But let us not forget," he went on, "that it was an official of the democratic United States government, and the wife of its President, who arranged for Miss Anderson to sing on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, before an audience of 75,000 Negro and white Americans. And on the evennig before the President's third inauguration, a quartet of Negro singers did appear in Constitution Hall. That was democratic progress within one year."

American Negroes know Fascism at first hand, Mr. Lawson said, because they have seen it practiced right here in America by groups whose primary purpose was "to keep the Negro in his place."

"We are not blind to discrimination," he concluded. "We everlastingly oppose it, and we glory in our right to do so. We resent the segregated status that is so often forced upon us. We are fighting it, and glad that we can fight. We know that even in the current great defense program we are the last to be considered when a job is to be done. But we are seeking economic justice in the knowledge that our pleas will not go unheard.

"In our words, we realize that insofar as we are concerned, our America brand of democracy has its shortcomings. But we feel that even such imperfect democracy is far better than any way of life under a totalitarian regime."

WEEK-END C-H-A-T-S

MAR 28 1941
By

JAMES A. HAMLETT Jr.

WE MUST PAY first-class fares and ride in smoky jim-crow cars on common carriers to reach points throughout these United States in order to carry on our program of education, business, industry and religion. For a little pleasure we must climb to the buzzard roost of theatres even in free Kansas in order to see a picture show. We must be subjected to prejudiced juries and courts of the land, all because we are black. We must go through all of this kind of segregation and jim-crowism to live in the United States and yet there are those who claim we have a democracy. We are marked with black skins and a social heritage that seems destined to keep us from enjoying our rights as citizens. Jim-crowism and segregation against the black man is a curse on the character of America.

It is here and it is something that cannct be wiped out overnight. There are thousands and thousands of people throughout the length and the breadth of this country who do not believe in such a policy but nevertheless it is a par of the American set-up. It has been worked into the folk-ways of American social customs and it is a regrettable curse that stares this nation in the face, especially at a time when there is need for national unity to fight off the threat of other countries to kill the principles of democracy.

JIM-CROWISM AND segregation are a downright curse on the character of the United States. They stand in the way of the practice of real democracy. Until this curse is wiped out democracy will be a mere ideal or goal sought, but never realized. There are many elements which bring about segregation and jim-crowism in our complex society of which many social thinkers, business executives and various society groups seek to use as justification for their existence, especially where the American Negro is concerned.

The Negro race is twelve million strong in the United States and constitutes one of the most concentrated American groups of all the different nationalities that go to make up the United States population. The American Negro perhaps does more than any other single American group to help keep the wheels of industry moving put into circulation more American dollars for the use of commodities, public utilities, transportation, building improvements and taxes.

In the face of all this we are jim-crowed and segregated for no other reason than that we are black folk with a slavery heritage. We are despised and looked upon by many as out-laws, people unfit to mingle with society and be respected as other human beings. We are huddled in the rear end of department stores at jim-crow lunch counters or the kitchen to eat our hot dogs and drink our pop out of paper cups. Members of our race in order to work in many cases must serve as stooges and henchmen for places that would jim-crow us and feed us like dogs, horses cows or any other dumb animal.

LIFE IS A BUSINESS proposition all the way through. And it seems to be a struggle for existence on the part of one group of men to dominate another group by their power, economics and influence. One group seems to strive to make serviceable to them all of the weaker elements of society in order that they might control government. For many years the black man paid little attention to earthly things. He did most of his living in the other world. He longed for the day to come when he would wear the long white robe and golden crown and golden slippers and be seated at the right hand of his Father in heaven and listen to the angels play his troubles away in a medley on the sweet harps. Experience and suffering in recent years have changed the Negro's attitude about life and now he looks at it as a business proposition. So today he stands at the door of justice knocking, fighting and asking that he be heard and that he be respected as a citizen and given an opportunity to achieve on the basis of merit, and that he be allowed to wear a long white robe and golden crown and golden slippers on this side of the river.

N. Y. TIMES CALLS FOR WIDER OPPORTUNITIES FOR NEGROES

NEW YORK. (NNS) — In a highly searching article, this week, the New York Times called for wider opportunities for Negroes to hasten progress into industry and to bring the country nearer democracy. This statement was contained in an editorial which follows:

"One American in every ten is a Negro. The Negro American, like Americans of other racial strains, wishes to share the privileges of democracy and to do his part with other citizens in defending democracy. The National Urban League, reporting for 1940, finds that some progess, but not enough, has been made toward realizing both these aspirations. The league, which has the backing of some distinguished Southerners, asks only for the Negro "an opportunity to share in our national life in keeping with his training and ability," and "that he have a chance to train himself so that his real capacity may be developed."

"This ideal obviously hasn't as yet been realized. The Negro hasn't been allowed to contribute to the defense effort, either in the armed services or in private positions, in proportion to his numbers and his abilities. There have been, and are, many obstacles in the form of ingrained habits, attitudes and prejudices to keep him out. These obstacles will not vanish overnight. The league can only report that they have been in small part diminished, and that we are nearer to democracy in this respect than we were when the league was organized 30 years ago.

"Enlightened Americans, especially in the strategic areas of the South, can do much to hasten progress toward wider opportunities for the colored race."

Most observers here, feel that the position taken by the Times is a distinct departure fro mthe run-of-the-mill attitude generally expressed by the white press. Its importance, among other things, is the fact that this great newspaper is the representative organ in the country, and for it to demand a place for the Negro in the National Defense program is going a long way in forming the popular mind regarding the race and its place in American life.

Already, the Times itself, has made strides in this direction by the occasional use of material written by Negroes. However, the more alert individuals feel that the Times should not only give lip-service to democracy, but with its great influence, lead the way by employing Negroes on its editorial staff.

MAKE PROPOSALS FOR NEGROES IN NEW WORLD ORDER

APR 12 1941

Plans for a "History of Alpha Phi Alpha in the Second World War," are being made by Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, according to a statement made this week by Dr. Rayford W. Logan, of Howard University, general president of the fraternity.

The work will be edited by the fraternity's historian, Dr. Charles H. Wesley, who recently retired from the presidency.

Dr. Wesley has written in the "History of Alpha Phi Alpha," a chapter on the first World War. In order to permit him to give a more comprehensive record of this crisis a questionnaire is being circulated among the entire fraternity membership.

The fraternity has also initiated steps to draw up definite proposals for the Negro in the New World Society. At the end of the first World War, Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois held the first Pan-African Congress in Paris which was followed by three others in various European capitals and in New York.

White scholars are already at work on their plans for a New World Society.

Must Make Own Plans

"But," Dr. Logan pointed out, "however sympathetic they may be, they cannot know the yearnings in our hearts. And however learned they may be, we can add to their store of knowledge."

As yet these white scholars have not accepted the cooperation of colored scholars. If, however, colored scientists can draft definite plans, they will have to be considered. Dr. Logan insisted.

The Shadow Of An Assertive Democracy

OUR TYPE OF government, with all its attendant faults, subterfuges, demagogic apostesies and otherwise departures from the real meaning and spirit of the Preamble, is responsible for what peace and whatever remains of free thought and righteous ideals existing in the world today. We are just now coming into the fullness of what we gained in our struggles of the first World War—strange as it may seem, it took a second such war to bring to us the realization of what we really accomplished. Woodrow Wilson, after his broken frame has been sleeping for a generation, is just beginning to loom as the great patriot who came as an apostle of civilization to his generation to lay down to the Old World the prophesy of what it is now enduring and to warn the New World of the underlying perils attendant when there is no spirit of national unity.

Impatient ones have complained all through the ages of the fault of our system, its failure to rid government of its vices, the opportunity afforded for the designer, the demagogue and enemies to free participation in every function of government by all the people, regardless to race, creed or previous condition of servitude.

We have come late to realize that democracy is progressing: that it could not achieve its vast objectives in a few centuries.

There are many people who profess the faith of democracy, who in fact do not want it. This class has never relished the broad principles of a government meant for and by all the people.

These principles, while not practiced in the fullest sense of the word, were of sufficient proportion to push our great government forward with the vast prestige that asserted itself at the Council of Mirrors, where the faulty Treaty of Versailles was put in operation.

Our government went on record as opposing the methods by which coercion enforced its will. From here we sowed the seed of another World War which has come to flourishing flower after these twenty-five years.

Democracy, or at least its intent, has again hurled the lamp of liberty across the dark waters where men have fought their brothers for hundreds of years. It is again that broad challenge to dictators and questionable governments and if the world is to be saved, it is plain that the panacea was founded by Washington and rededicated and saved by Lincoln and hurled forward by Theodore Roosevelt.

From the present struggle democracy will be helped in its striving for its real objectives. It will be encouraged and enforced by its magnificent power, made evident in its missions of the past and will say that such a system or attempt of system is worth inquiring into and saving. It will look about here at home and sweep the enemies of good government from before its own doors and fly up the flying colors of free government and government with and by the consent alone of the governed.

Democracy like the gospel is going to assert itself. Many of the nations fighting today for what we know as democracy, do not in reality want it. They do not understand it. There are those in our own country who do not want it and do not understand it. But it is coming. It must come in its fullness or its broad preambles must be here and now rejected.

God give us a land of free men, brave men, men that stand tall against the storm,
Men unafraid of their brother, be he black or white regardless of his form,—
And it shall flourish like the cedars of Lebanon in its pompious spread
And there shall never be a stone hurled—even when the humblest of its charge reaches his hand for his bread.

Uneducated Prejudice

Racial prejudice, a private right of all peoples, is an unfortunate by-product of man's evolution; but it is not confined to any one race of people, only. In America, for example, it is the prejudice among the white people which is placated on the highways for criticisms and consumption, but prejudice of an equal tenor abides among the colored people, perhaps more justified in that it has grown out of previous and current behavior of the white people, the majority race, towards the colored people.

The common feature of racial prejudice among all the races is that, it is the result of ignorance, misunderstanding and hatred. The average person can recall having despised some person because of his "looks" but later prized the friendship of that person after knowing him. This has happened within races. In a like manner all racial prejudices can be regarded—as the result of not knowing well the person despised.

A few years ago, in a town in Alabama, a distinguished Negro educator talked for an hour to an assemblage of colored and white educators, telling them how important it was to have Negro students study Negro History in addition to regular courses. When he had finished, a medium sized white country preacher arose, applauded the address for its fine grammar and intention. However, he said, the Negro knew enough of himself. It was the white people who did not know him and should be given the chance. Why not, he said, have Negro History taught in all the schools, white and colored?

The speaker did not reply but his countenance did. Here was the story in simple form: The southern white man insisted upon governing the colored man, prescribing his life and happiness. But the southern white man had not learned the history, life and ways of the colored man. His prejudices were uneducated.

BEN DAVIS TELLS HOW NEGROES CAN BANISH JIM CROW

BENJAMIN J. DAVIS, who as editor of the old Atlanta Independent, did pioneer work in the state of Georgia in emancipating his Race from many social and civic restrictions imposed through prejudicial enactments, is still fighting as bravely as ever with pen and voice in defense of the rights of his people. Mr. Davis is now editor of the National Baptist Union Review, published by Henry Allen Boyd in Nashville. What Mr. Davis had to say on the subject:

"The Only Remedy for Jim Crowing the Negro in the South" is of such potent value to the Negro throughout the nation that we take the liberty of reprinting it here for the purpose of giving his message wider circulation than it would ordinarily get in religious circles. His contribution on the subject is too important to be circumscribed by the limited boundaries of any one publication. Mr. Davis says as follows:

"Some years ago, when we edited and published the Atlanta Independent, we wrote a great deal about Jim Crowism, Jim Crow accommodation for Negroes and Jim Crow Negroes. Replying to our many criticisms and complaints against the practice and service, the late Charles R. Pendleton, editor of the Macon Telegraph, suggested this idea to us in the columns of his paper, which he ably edited until his death. Editor Pendleton said in part, and we quote: 'Ben Davis, the Atlanta Negro editor, writes well in the defense of his Race, but if he is weary of Jim Crowism for his Race; he must stop growing Jim Crow Niggers, and grow a better crop of Negroes. White men usually furnish their trade the class of goods it wants, and the Negro will always receive Jim Crow conditions as long as he is fool enough to accept them.'

"United States Senator E. W. Carmack, quoting from Editor Pendletons editorial in the Macon Telegraph said: 'Lower animals will not eat or accept what they do not want, but the Negro, accepting and paying for what he does not want, shows less intelligence than the lower class of animals when he accepts Jim Crowism when and where he is not compelled to do so."

"WE FULLY AGREE with the truth expressed years ago by these two great journalists, molders of public opinion. There is one complete estoppel to Jim Crowism in America, to the embarrassment of Negroes wherever the law does not inflict it upon them, and that one remedy is in the hands of the Negroes themselves. They can kill Jim Crowism they complain so much about if they will use this one remedy. They can use it effectively without offense to any race or man, if they had the manhood and self-respect to do so. That one and only remedy is to stay away from and boycott every place, church, school, business or person that segregates and discriminates against the Race or individuals of the Race. Where the law imposes Jim Crow regulations on the grounds of race or color, obey the law until you can change or repeal that law. In travel, schools and other conveniences, that the race cannot supply, and you must have or use these things, use them until we can provide them for ourselves.

"The Negro who complains about Jim Crowism and segregation, and voluntarily seeks and accepts these conditions is a Jim Crow product and is receiving what he wants and what he is only fit to have. Negroes are not compelled to slip in back doors of white hotels, theatres, restaurants, shows and eat meals handed to them over slop tubs from lunch counters; eat them in the streets in rain or sunshine like dogs, cats or rats. Our women are not compelled to buy shoes, gloves, hats, etc., from white merchants, where they are not allowed to try them on, but they do so because they are Jim Crow Negroes.

"Negroes are not compelled to trade in stores that have separate elevators for Negro and water fountains marked: 'For white only; colored people drink in the basements.' We are not compelled to buy rotten beef or pork from a white butcher and be afraid to take it back and complain about it.

"WHERE IS THE SELF-RESPECT of the college president, professor or physician who slips in side doors, climbs back steps to see a white moving picture, and when he gets ready to leave must stand aside with hat in hand until all the whites have cleared from the building? What's the difference between a taxicab driver or a common laborer, who refuses to be Jim Crowed by staying away from places where Jim Crow regulations are in force, and a Harvard graduate with a string of degrees trailing his name, who climbs up the back steps to see 'Gone With The Wind,' or hear the end man in a minstrel crack jokes and burlesque his Race? The common man is a self-respecting citizen, and the Harvard man is seeming rather than to be.

"A majority of the educated Negroes rather seem than to be, and they make up a large majority of the Jim Crow product of our Race by trying to get away from themselves. They bid for attention and recognition from white people that they do not want the majority of their Race to enjoy They prefer to be a third class white man rather than a first class, self-respecting Negro. The remedy for Jim Crowism and segregation is in the hands of the Race itself, and nobody can apply it unless we do so ourselves. The remedy is to stay away from all places that impose Jim Crow regulations upon us where it can be done wtihout violation of the law. If it is legally imposed, it is still morally wrong."

So declares Mr. Davis, who has written a scathing indictment especially against the "leading Negroes," more than against the ordinary citizens who generally object to segregation and are willing to pay the cost of fighting it.

In both North and South, the Negro at this time seems to be breeding a type of leaders who are compromising his rights away—leaders afraid to fight in behalf of the Negroes for fear of being termed "radical." Yet America became a nation through the acts of radicals. Patrick Henry, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Paine were all radicals, and would have been classed today as Communists. Leading Negroes are usually afraid to resort to law when they have been Jim Crowed, preferring to let the matter pass until some ordinary citizen takes issue and sues for his rights. That's the type Mr. Davis is talking about—that type is the Jim Crow product. That type of "misleader" will refer to Ben Davis is "radical."

Radicalism is a much abused word today. Any Negro who strenuously objects to his present station life and expresses his objection publicly, is termed radical, especially by the whites. Radicalism is the fountainhead of every forward movement. It is truly fortunate that Nature has planted within the minds of some men that restlessness and contempt for the conventional in business, science, religion, education and politics, which leads to all progress. In the average case it is not laziness that holds black man back from trying a new idea. It is fear. He is afraid to be radical. He is afraid that the idea will not prove sound and will carry him down to defeat We need more radicals. Then we will have less Jim Crow.

Social Barriers Lowered In Race

CHICAGO—(SNS)—Social barriers among Southern Negroes, which formerly made an "upper class" of light-skinned members of the race, today are breaking down under the impact of growing racial pride, and brown-kined Negroes tend to attain a higher rank than light-skined Negroes.

These recent changes in the class system of Southern Negroes were disclosed by Dr. W. Lloyd Warner, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, in "Deep South," published this week by the University of Chicago Press. The book reports an extensive social and anthropological study of a Southern city, conducted under the direction of Dr. Warner.

FOUR AID IN RESEARCH

Four social scientists participated in the research—Dr. Burleigh B. Gardner and his wife, Mary R. Gardner, who carried on the study from the point of view of the whites, and Dr. Allison Davis and his wife, Elizabeth Stubbs Davis, whose research was from the Negro point of view.

"One need no longer be olive, yellow, or white, or even brown with 'good hair' (i. e., hair similar to that of white), to be a member of the Negro upper class," Dr. Warner wrote. "The upper class today is largely a brown group, with Negroid types of hair.

"The emergence of this new upper class has been accompanied by an increase in caste solidarity (caste is defined as a non-intermarrying group), in 'race pride,' and in the development of segregated institutions. Although it is impossible, in our economic system, for the colored society to function successfully as a 'silid' or highly organized group, it has been possible for it to develop at least a dogma of caste solidarity.

TABOOS INCREASE

"The dogma and its related emotional patterns have been accompanied by strong taboos against the inter-marriage of whites and Negroes. A generation ago an individual's status was increased by his kindship to white persons of the middle or upper classes. Today both inter-marriage and illegitimacy are rather heavily tabooed in the colored upper and upper-middle classes."

In discussing the new criteria of upper class membership, Dr. Warner, whose research for ten years has dealt with class system in American life, pointed out that the most important questions asked about a person regarding his eligibility to move into the upper class are:

1. What has been his education?
2. Has he professional or semi-professional status?
3. Are his language, manner, and dress "polished?"

Dr. Warner also discussed the changes caused by modern industrialism in the Negro-white relationship of the South.

Manufacturing firms moving in from the North hire labor as cheaply as possible, he said, with the result that Negroes are employed to do the same type of labor as whites, and many even be preferred to white workers because they can be hired for a lower wage.

RACE WORKERS AIDED

This puts money into the hands of colored workers, producing a small class of Negroes on an economic leval above that of the lower-class khites, he said.

"In such a community, the white population must resort to terrorization continually in order to impress on the colored group that economic equality on the part of the latter is not real equality—that actually any white man, no matter how poor or illiterate, is above any colored man and must be treated with the appropriate deference.

"In the old plantation areas, on the other hand, where almost all of the colored people are families of owners or large landlords, the system of caste is almost 'perfect" economically and socially, and there is relatively little terrorization of the lower caste.

"When the castes are in economic competition, as laborers and tenants, however, violence and conflict seem to be at their height."

The Drift Of The Current

NOV 29 1941

By J. THOMAS NEWSOME

WHILE imperceptible changes are forever taking place in nature and in society, nothing short of an upheavel or revolution can break the old order in a day. Nations, like individuals comprising them, are creatures of habits and customs so deeply ingrained in the warp and wood of their very constitution as to defy a complete change overnight.

MR. NEWSOME

But because the old order must give way to a new state of things, there are those who impatiently demand that a complete uprooting of ancient landmarks should take place NOW!

There are others who counsel that we content ourselves with what we have and "cease complaining." History and experience, however, teach a different lesson. If the Past failed to yield us a fair compensation for what we suffered, then wisdom dictates that we insist that the Present give us a New Deal so that our Future may hold out at least the hope of social security.

OLD ORDER PASSING

Anyway we look at it, the old order is most certainly passing. Time was, and that not very distant, when it was considered outside the province of the government seriously to consider the social, economic and educational interest of the citizens of the individual states. Those vital questions were regarded as belonging almost exclusively to the states, the federal government standing by while a portion of the population of those commonwealths was mercilessly neglected.

NOV 29 1941

After the great war, a change rapidly took place in which the federal government assumed more than a passing interest in the welfare of the citizens everywhere. Came the unprecedented depression, when relief was necessary on a large scale to prevent widespread suffering and even starvation. The wealth of the entire nation was affected by economic disorders and the strong, in some instances against their will, were forced to bear some of the ills of the weak.

While the color question was always in evidence, economic and industrial disorders had grown so acute that the poor, without regard to race, had to look beyond their own localities for the means of subsistence. No political party dared to ignore entirely the cries of the distressed for the reason that to retain their hold upon the people, both parties were forced to simulate solicitude for the masses however much at heart they may have been inclined to leave them to shift for themselves.

QUESTION OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Everywhere now in the United States there is ever before those in office the large question of unemployment, relief and in some instances education. Finding the states unwilling in some instances and unable in others to bear the burden incident to the derangment in the old economic order, the federal government has more and more encroached, if this column may so say, upon what once was regarded as the exclusive prerogatives of the individual commonwealths comprising the federal government. Will there be a turning back from this policy? This column seriously doubts it.

EDUCATIONAL RESTRICTION and RACE HATRED were hit rather hard by a Methodist Conference, white, held up in Atlanta, Ga. a few days ago. The conference severely condemned the arousing of race prejudice and restriction of educational freedom. That there is found thirty-five ministers and laymen in the North Georgia meeting, is not only a wonder but an encouraging finding up in Georgia, one that should spread the nation over. They expressed their belief in the brotherhood of man. Thirty-five of them put their names to a resolution—a resolution so plainly worded, and in language that no one could misunderstand. We quote a paragraph from the resolution: Whereas, members of the North Georgia Conference believe in the brotherhood of man, and whereas we believe that the highest welfare of our state cannot be achieved. unless there exists harmony, peace, good-will, justice, mutual helpfulness between all classes, groups and races within our state: Be it resolved, that we express our deep sorrow when there is any attempt on the part of any individual in private or public to foment prejudice against any class, group and race." To us it is reasonable to contend that in a democracy like ours there should be one rule for all—all are citizens—equal citizens, and all should enjoy equal opportunities and privileges. This is needed for a strong nation, one that cannot be divided, that cannot be broken. If we would be a strong nation, and we should, we must make every man strong, capable of sharing equally the responsibilities of the citizens of that nation, all of them. The masses must be lifted, black along with white, for it is from the quarry of the common man that the status of a great nation must be cut. This point must not be forgotten, it must not be neglected, must not be overlooked. The masses are the hope of the future. The potentialities of sacrifice, which is essential to the preservation of a nation in time of trouble, through such as we now pass. This is no time to foster race hatred and prejudice. The spirit of the thirty-five ministers and laymen who sponsor the resolution in the North Georgia Conference, should permeate the hearts of every American. Lifting the whole nation above those too little for a great nation like ours. No man is responsible for his race identity.

The Paradox of Education

A young Negro professional man writes me as follows: "I have purchased and read Dusk of Dawn which is just what I needed to crystalize the concept of race herein developed. I have long suspected it but I am too young to have drawn it from my experience and have not been educated to gain it by scholarship. Furthermore the interpretation of historical data, revelant to the Negro, was a technique unknown to me until after graduation from college. I, therefore, very clearly understood your description of the final, if later, realization of the bonds between race, economics and politics. There are many in high places who still do not see it. All of this has caused me to doubt that a Negro can be best educated for his problem in life in a white school. I refer only to liberal arts colleges. . . . I am an A. B. and M. D., with three months' graduate work, all in white colleges. I have always felt that the very best education obtainable was not offered. . . . If I had been in your classes at Atlanta my whole life might have been changed. After reading Frederick Douglass' autobiography where ultimate solution is promised on the basis of a very exceptional life, and taking stock today to see how much of his prophecy has been realized; I was thoroughly disillusioned especially on the heels of inter-racial flare-up as a result of the defense program. I was disgusted, and felt what's the use for a black man, until I came to the solution the chapter Revolution in Dusk of Dawn. Here is definitely an open door if we can find men capable of using it."

There is no clear and final answer to this young man's dilemma but one thing we have got to face, and that is a persistent and exclusive education of colored American children in white schools not only will not solve our problems but will raise other and difficult problems. I was reminded this Summer of a daughter of a friend of mine who returned from a well-known New England college. My informant said "I am sorry for her. She is graduated now and has no friends."

On the other hand, there is no doubt that the average Negro college is more poorly equipped both in teaching force, library and laboratory facilities than the best white colleges and that consequently education there has more difficulties. But on the other hand, and this must never be forgotten: The spirit of manhood and womanhood, of pride of racial and individual accomplishment, cannot be found in white colleges, and those colored folk educated there in nearly all cases reveal their handicap in bitter criticism of their own people, basic ignorance of the Negro problem and exaggerated ideas of the eternal domination of the white race.

I do not for a moment advocate the withdrawal of Negro students from white colleges. On the contrary I believe they should press into them and take every advantage of their unparalleled offers for training. On the other hand, no Negro can be thoroughly educated for the life which he is to lead unless at least a part of his education is received in a well-equipped Negro school with Negro teachers. The time will come when this will not be true, but that will be long after all of us now reading and thinking are dead.

Georgia's Governor Is Compared To Hitler

TALLADEGA, Ala.—Vigorously attacking the interference of politicians in education, the president of Talladega College, in his report for the past academic year singles out Governor Talmadge of Georgia and an unnamed newspaper editor for special mention.

"This past summer," says Dr. Buell G. Gallagher in his report, "the red-gallused governor of the neighboring State of Georgia, a man principally distinguished for his appeal to prejudice and ignorance, packed the State Board of Regents with his own kept men, in order to force the dismissal of certain 'foreign' educators (i.e., non-Georgians) who were alleged to be less prejudiced and ignorant than he.

The action of the State Li-.. brary Board in banning a score of books is also taken as an indication that the educatiinal system of the State of Georgia appears to be on the way toward "insuring the purity of the doctrine as conceived by its politicians."

"Backed by biased opinion, and catering to racial prejudice, Governor Talmadge has openly and deliberately attacked the integrity of the University System of Georgia," Dr. Gallagher continues. "It cannot be said that an educational system, under such political control, is free. The one bright hope in the Georgia picture is the continuance of several private colleges which are not as readily amenable to political maneuvering."

FREE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

NOV 29 1941

Citing an editorial which appeared in a newspaper "published not far from Talladega College," and which raises the cry of white supremacy, the college president's report affirms that "if this type of thinking becomes widespread and vocal, it can turn into an Alabama counterpart of the gyrations of the Georgia governor. And in that event, the only institutions which are able to stand against the reactionary political and social pressures would be those which are so firmly rooted in the affections and understanding of believers in freedom and democracy that they had financial and moral strength to weather the storm."

NOV 29 1941

In his ninth year at Talladega College, Dr. Gallagher issues the report of 1940-41 under the title "Endowment by the Creator." His argument is that donors to the independent, private college "actually become creators who endow the Cause with life, liberty, and property." The Cause to which the educator refers is "the Cause of Christian democracy, of human brotherhood, of justice and fairness and tolerance and appreciation and understanding. It involves breaking down the hideous barriers of caste not to destroy Southern civilization, but to liberate it."

"There is a strange and appalling parallel between the racial doctrines and practices of men like Governor Talmadge and men like Adolf Hitler," says Dr. Gallagher. "It is no accident that Eugene Talmadge is cited in Die Bejegung, Nazi Student Publication, as 'obviously a very intelligent man.' United Press dispatches from Berlin on August 20, 1941, quoted the Nazi paper as saying that the Governor held himself 'too busy to read very much,' but that he had nevertheless 'read Hitler's Mein Kampf seven times.'

"In his military and political doctrines, Hitler may be more advanced than Talmadge," concedes the Alabama educator, "but Hitler's racial doctrines are mild when compared to the actualities of the racial caste structure which Southern democracy espouses."

Excoriating the American caste system, and citing the tragic differentials in opportunities as between Negroes and whites, Dr. Gallagher says, "In such a setting, the importance of the private college, free from political controls, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal, is one possible guarantee of an emerging degree of life, liberty, and property rights for the submerged caste. By its example and achievement, it stimulates the state controlled colleges, and in times of emergency it becomes the last stronghold of intellectual integrity.

"The private college in any state is a guarantee of the freedom of state schools as well; but this is particularly true of the college whose students are Negroes, in a section where racial caste attitudes tend frequently to dominate political practice."

PEARL BUCK ON "LIBERTY"

No more realistic, explicit and honest examination of the fundamental weaknesses of democracy has been made than that which was so eloquently outlined by Miss Pearl Buck in a recent radio talk given under the auspices of the Council for Democracy.

SEP 29 1941

Under the title 'Speaking of Liberty," the distinguished author of "The Good Earth" assailed racial inequalities and other social ills as being wholly incompatible with the logic of democracy. There is hardly any intelligent, freedom-loving American who is unaware of the contradictions between the theory and practice of American democracy. Not that there are inherent contradistinctions but that devious means and ways are conjured to escape the application of our doctrinal faith especially where the Negro is involved.

Miss Buck's utterances were remarkable not alone for bringing a fresh, healthy point of view to the concept of democracy, but more so for the courage she exhibited in stating in clear and understandable language what others have buried under a mountain of glittering generalities. She said:

"It is equality between the races—that is, until we see the end of race prejudice we shall not have democracy triumphant in the world."

Here is a point of view which doubtless is shared by a wholesome number of liberal thinkers. But, unlike Miss Buck, they have not dared to give currency to such an opinion publicly and definitively. That is not all. She went the whole length of America's trouble when she contended that:

". . . The fight for freedom can't be won until we recognize the fact that democracy in its true meaning involves not only lip-service to the doctrine that all men are created equal but a genuine change in our own attitude toward the colored American. That can be our peculiar contribution to the solution of a world problem.

At this critical juncture in world history when all manner of correctives for our sick-ness are suggested and cures are suggested for its many failures, in round-table discussions, in public forums, in the halls of Congress, there has not been a single instance in which the pathetic social change in America's attitude toward the black citizenry. In all the plight of the Negro has been mentioned.

gain it by scholarship. Furthermore the interpretation of historical data, revelant to the Negro, was a technique unknown to me until after graduation from college. I, therefore, very clearly understood your description of the final, if later, realization of the bonds between race, economics and politics. There are many in high places who still do not see it. All of this has caused me to doubt that a Negro can be best educated for his problem in life in a white school. I refer only to liberal arts colleges. . . . I am an A. B. and M. D., with three months' graduate work, all in white colleges. I have always felt that the very best education obtainable was not offered. . . . Wardship or Guardianship

By Selby D. B. Ngcobo, M.A., B.Econ.

In our first article we said that two thirds of the Red Indians were the wards of the United States and as such came under the special jurisdiction of the President and the Congress. We gave the historical reasons for the establishment of Government guardianship over the Red man, but we indicated that while as a beginning it might be justifiable to pass a people through a political nursery, guardianship or wardship it presented peculiar problems relating to the eventual status of the people affected and the steps by which they would arrive at that position. It will be realised that here there is room for differences of opinion on methods and final outcomes because human beings cannot be made exactly to a defined pattern. We found that the older Indian magistrates (Europeans) were inclined to be assimilationists while the newer ones were adaptations. Well, that is just another way of saying the older magistrates were in favour of a more or less rapid conversion of Red Indians to citizenship, while the younger are in favour of continuing wardship. Is there a conflict here?

NO DEFINITION OF WARDSHIP

I believe that it is possible to find a legal definition of wardship in case of law because there are specific issues relating to persons and property are involved. There is, however, no statutory definition of an Indian ward of the Government and apprently no entirely satisfactory and all-inclusive definition of Indian wardship, applicable to all cases, has ever been formulated. It is generally understood, however, what a ward Indian is:

(1) one who lives on a Federal Government reservation (location) and maintains tribal relations or

(2) one who has restricted property held in trust under Governmental control, whether or not he lives on a reservation or maintains tribal relations.

According to the 1930 census there were about 200,000 ward Indians scattered in the various states. Thus we see that wardship involves place of domicile and the property from which sustenance is derived. There is very extensive Government guardianship over the property of Red Indians, and it is proper that some of the details should be given here.

GUARDIANSHIP OVER PROPERTY

The bulk of the property of the Red Indians who are under Federal Government control and supervision consists of the following categories:

(1) Land belonging to the several tribes;

AUG 23 1941

(2) land which has been alloted in severalty to the Individual Indians who have been judged competent to manage their own affairs;

(3) lands alloted but still held in trust;

(4) tribal funds held in trust for the tribes by the Uniten States Government;

(5) Funds held in trust for Individual Indians;

[6] all other property held by Individual Red Indians.

In the main the above categories of property are similar to those held on behalf of Natives by South African Native trust.

Now this guadianship relates primarily to restrictions on property. These restrictions apply only to property secured to the Red Indians by the Government; they do not appl to property secured by him through his own efforts such as wages and property purchased through personal earnings and other personal goods. When an Indian is said to be "incompetent" or "non competent" that simply applies to his inability to look after his real property and not to his actual ability as an individual to order the affairs of his own life. Although there is thus effective guadianship over property the same applies to Indians as persons since they are so much tied by law and economic interests to the reservations. Let us now see whether this special status of the Red Indian is in accord with American citizenship.

INDIAN CITIZENSHIP

Since 1934 Indian Policy in the United States is to Indianise the Red Indians and by way of an elaboration of this policy the following quotation is relevant:

"To advance the Red Indians by building upon their own inheritance of culture, to enable them to work out the adjustment to modern civilisation so that they will become competent to manage their own affairs and Federal Government guardianship will become unnecessary."

The question has arisen whether it is not now necessary to do away with wardship or guardianship in order to enable Red Indians to become full American citizens. In this connection a famous decision of the United States Supreme Court gave us much food for hard thinking and here again let me quote you what the judges actually said:

"Citizenship is not incompatible existence or continued guardianship, and so may be conferred without completely emancipating the Indians placing them beyond the reach of Congressional regulations adopted for their protection."

The judges went on to say that their decision was in accord with the law as applied to Europeans. That law did not give unlimited control ever any property the title to which is vested in the citizenship nor does it preclude guardianship. Consider, for instance, the case of male minors and a woman citizen. Thus also a man who is already a citizen but has his property placed under an order of court does not cease to be a citizen.

CITIZENSHIP IN GENERAL

Does the above decision have special or general application? It would seem that it has implications of a more general character. A man can be a citizen and still have his property under guardianship. Further, he can be a citizen and still not vote.

Civil rights and political status are different. Although citizenship has been granted on a property basis in most States, legally there is no intrinsic connection between the two. Citizenship is an individual and political right conferred by the State upon any persons and on any basis it may choose. But title to land either in trust or in freehold is just a property right. It would appear, however, that citizenship as understood and interpreted by the law courts may be different from what it is within the political context. Politically a citizen is understood as one who is not a ward as long as there is guardianship over one's habitation and property, one is incapable of attaining full citizenship. American experience itself illustrates this. Consider the words of the Commissioner for Indian Affairs himself.

"By placing trust barriers around Indian property, we exempted his land from state and local taxation. In taking this action we subjected the Indian to possible discrimination on the part of the States which would have resulted in leaving him without health, care, education, roads, or any of the services which a State renders its people."

To prove these services it became necessary for the Federal Government to take the Indians under its protection. Thus a state of dependancy is created to an increasing measure.

PERMANENT WARDSHIP

Realising this position a fellow student of mine in the Race Relations Department wrote a thesis in which she showed that nursery treatment of a people tends to perpetuate itself. Firstly, because of possible dangers from others outside, the trustee becomes too much concerned with the welfare of his wards and hence develops an acute protectionist attitude. Secondly, that very protection tends to deny the wards those knocks and hurdles in life by and through which they can grow to manhood. Thirdly, the wards themselves come to believe that they can do nothing; all must be provided by the fatherly Government. The more the Government gives by way of rations, charity or assistance the more they get demoralised.

The United States Government has, however, declared that its policy is to get rid of Indian guardianship so that Indians can take their rightful place in American life. The coming generations will show how much is being accomplished towards that end.

As a South African Native I found much that was instructive and challenging in the position of Red Indians. I also realised that there were certain features where the United States Government could learn from South Africa. Our Native people are better off than the Red Indians because of the fact that they have to come out and work and thus participate and share in the national life and wealth.

NEGRO LAWYERS ACCLAIMED BEST FOR NEGRO CLIENTS BY TEACHER

OCT 31 1941

Dean of Lincoln University Law School Assails Theory of Judges Being Biased Toward Attorneys

By William E. Taylor, Dean Lincoln University School of Law

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30 (ANP)—If a person is accused of a serious crime, he is indicted by a white grand jury, prosecuted by a white lawyer and tried by a white judge and jury. A colored litigant in a civil case must look to a white judge or jury for justice. Should the colored litigant or defendant in a criminal proceeding be represented by a colored lawyer? Any Negro with common sense, average experience and fair understanding will agree that, other things being equal, Negro lawyers can best protect the interests of Negro litigants.

Some Negro litigants think that, since judge and jury are white, their lawyer should be white. They are especially of this view when accused of a crime or involved in a suit against a white person. But the lawyer is not on trial. No white judge or jury is dumb enough to consider a black man as white because his lawyer is white. A prejudiced white judge or jury remains prejudiced against a colored litigant tho the latter's lawyer is white; but such judge or jury will be less likely to be swayed by prejudice if a colored lawyer is in the case.

Any white person who has race prejudice will freely admit this fact to other white people. It is seldom, however, that a white judge or juror wishes a colored lawyer to know of his race prejudice. They will "lean over backwards" to convince the colored lawyer that they can be fair to his client. Besides, the colored lawyer usually knows the judges who are prejudiced against colored people and he will not try his cases before them. All of his life he has had to contend with race prejudice. He can detect it in places and under conditions which would not arouse the white lawyer's suspicion.

Except in a few rare instances, the white lawyers selected by colored litigants are not the leading lawyers of the community. They are usually the poorest available. Generally they are representing colored people, not because they like them, but rather because they cannot make a living representing white people. I have known colored people to be represented by white lawyers who were too prejudiced against colored people to walk with their colored clients. The client was usually sent ahead of the lawyer. How can such counsel secure "even handed justice" for his client?

The colored lawyer is interested not alone in the fees he collects. He is primarily interested in securing justice for colored people. He has a personal, a racial interest in his client's welfare. An injustice to his client is an injustice to him. It is this personal, this racial interest in his client's case which safeguards the Negro lawyer's Negro client.

There is an increasing and widespread evidence that thinking Negroes are coming to appreciate the tremendous advantage to them of lawyers of their own race. "It is significant," says P. L. Prattis, "that our heavyweight champion and his wife when separated by misunderstanding, each chose well-qualified lawyers of their own race to help them through their difficulty. Several wealthy Negroes in Detroit are now involved, along with prominent whites, in a grave court action. These Negroes have also chosen Negro lawyers to represent and defend them."

Jail Harlemite As Anti-Semite

Harry Frederick, 26, and author of several pamphlets concerning Adolph Hitler's friendship for colored people, began serving 60 days in the Workhouse this week after a hearing last Friday before Magistrate Aurelio in Harlem Court.

Fredericks was given the alternative of serving time or paying a $250 fine. He smilingly admitted that he couldn't pay the cash penalty.

Two others, Edgar Martin, 41, 100 West 119th St., and Randolph Wilson, 31, 59 East 128th St., received similar sentences when police testified that the trio had consistently attacked Jews while speaking to street gatherings in Harlem.

NOV 25 1941

Sergeant Marimon Moore, one of the city's few high ranking colored officers, arrested Fredericks and the others after warning them on several occasions to stop making anti-semitic speeches.

The Anti-Negro Campaign Is Resumed

NOV 22 1941

• On the occasion of two incidents of crime that happened to take place in Harlem, the newspapers have once more jumped to the attack with evident attempts to smear the entire Negro community.

These publications are trying hard to bolster the indefensible "crime wave" hysteria which did not take among thoughtful, fairminded citizens in New York. Crime, wherever it occurs, is to be sternly condemned. But the public—through labor and civic leaders—have rejected the prejudiced efforts of the newspapers to libel Harlem as a "criminal area." For Harlem is one of the most progressive communities in the city.

Crime is incident to all heavily-slummed areas, of which Harlem has more than its share. But the newspapers have consistently singled out Harlem, although Harlem is not the seat of the major crime centers of the city and although crimes are to be found in communities with much better living conditions than Harlem.

What is behind this campaign in the papers is pretty well revealed by an anonymous letter in the Herald Tribune yesterday. This was an outright Ku Klux document showing utter contempt for the struggles of the Negro people, describing them as "bad" and supporting "resentment" by "white people" against the whole community. This is an attempt to foment civil disorder and riots and in no sense reflects sentiments of the people of New York. It is regrettable that the Tribune published such Ku Kluxism, especially when that paper has editorially taken note of some of the basic ills inflicted upon the Harlem community.

Who was the author of the Tribune letter? For it is such anti-Negro policies as this, represented by powerful real estate interests and reactionary politicians, that constitute the roots of discrimination and ill-treatment of Harlem. Such insidious attempts to break up the growing unity of Negro and white against Hitler and for the welfare of the city should be energetically put down. We believe that they will be, and that the labor and progressive movement, in unity with the Negro people, will fight harder for the just demands of the Harlem community.

THE ONLY REMEDY FOR JIM-CROWING THE NEGRO IN THE SOUTH

Some years ago, when we edited and published The Atlanta Independent, we wrote a great deal about Jim-Crowism, Jim crow accommodation for Negroes and Jim-crow Negroes. Replying to our many criticisms and complaints against the practice and service, the late Charles R. Pendleton, the editor of The Macon Telegraph, suggested this idea to us in the columns of The Macon Telegraph, which he ably edited until his death. Editor Pendleton said in part, and we quote: "Ben Davis, the Atlanta Negro editor writes well in the defense of his race, but if he is weary of Jim-crowism for his race; he must stop growing Jim-crow niggers, and grow a better crop of Negroes. White men usually furnish their trade the class of goods it wants, and the Negro will always receive Jim-Crow conditions as long as he is fool enough to accept them." United States Senator E. W. Carmack, quoting from Editor Pendleton's editorial in The Macon Telegraph said, lower animals will not eat or accept what they do not want, but the Negro accepting and paying for what he does not want, shows less intelligence than the lower class of animals when he accepts Jim-crowism when and where he is not compelled to do so.

We fully agree with the truth expressed years ago, by these two great journalists, and molders of public opinion. There is one complete estoppel to Jim-crowism in America, to the embarrassment of Negroes wherever the law does not inflict it upon them, and that one remedy is in the hands of the Negroes themselves; and they can kill Jim-crowism they complain so much about, if they would use this one remedy. They can use it effectively without offense to any race or man, if they had the manhood and self-respect to do so. That one and only remedy is to stay away and boycott every place, church, school, business or persons that segregates and discriminates against the race or individuals of the race. Where the law imposes Jim-crow regulations on the grounds of race or color, obey the law until you can change or repeal the law. In travel, schools and other conveniences, that the race cannot supply, and you must have or use these things, use them until we can provide them for ourselves.

The Negro who complains about Jim-crowism and segregation, and voluntarily seeks and accepts these conditions is a Jim-crow product and is receiving what he wants and what he is only fit to have. Negroes are not compelled to slide in back doors of white hotels, theatres, restaurants, shows and eat meals handed to them over slop tubs from lunch counters; eat them in the streets in rain or sunshine like dogs, cats or rats; our women are not compelled to buy shoes, gloves, hats, etc., from white merchants, where they are not allowed to try them on, but they do so because they are Jim-crow Negroes. Negroes are not compelled to trade in stores that have separate elevators for Negroes and water fountains marked for whites only; Colored people drink in the basements. We are not compelled to buy rotten beef or pork from a white butcher and be afraid to take it back and complain about it.

Where is the self-respect of the college president, professor or physician who slips in side doors; climbs back steps to see a white picture, and when he gets ready to leave must stand aside with hat in hand until all the whites have cleared from the building? What's the difference between a taxi-cab driver or a common laborer, who refuses to be jim-crowed by staying away from places where Jim-crow regulations are in force, and a Harvard graduate with a string of degrees trailing his name, who climbs up the back steps to see "Gone With The Wind," or hear the end man in a minstrel crack jokes and burlesque his race? The common man is a self-respecting citizen and the Harvard man is seeming, rather than to be. A majority of the educated Negroes rather seem than to be, and they make up a large majority of the Jim-crow product of our race by trying to get away from themselves. They bid for attention and recognition from white people that they do not want the majority of their race to enjoy. They rather be a third class white man than to be a first class, self-respecting Negro. The remedy or cure for Jim-crowism and segregation is in the hands of the race itself, and nobody can apply it except we do it ourselves. The remedy is to stay away from all places that impose Jim-crow regulations upon us where it can be done without violation of the law. If it is legally imposed, it is still morally wrong.

Scott Says Race Question Baffles Defense Directors

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON

The ever present race problem is ever present here in Washington in practically all discussions having to do with the speed-up of defense production.

During the past summer the President created another alphabetical agency, SPAB (the Supply Priorities and Allocation Board), intended to bring orderly and coherent processes out of the overlapping and confusion which envelopes the program of war preparation.

Promise and Realization

In discussing this new proposal, the Providence Journal poses this question which brings in the race question: "What would the SPAB do with a case like this?":

"A ship carrying thousands of tons of supplies and 276 passengers for one of our new outposts is about to sail when one of her cooks falls ill. The union is called upon to send a substitute. It sends a colored cook.

"This white kitchen crew refuses to accept him and goes ashore. The union insists they go back to work. The captain, the owners of the ship, the Government whose goods and officials are to be transported, have nothing whatsoever to say about the matter.

Delay Costly

"The strike is prolonged for five days before the union officials can settle the thing. The cost of the delay runs into heavy figures.

"Meantime, winted approaches the outpost to which supplies are being sent. Perhaps that five days' delay may compel expected work to be deferred until next spring.

"This actual occurrence could hardly attract the attention of a great labor co-ordinating board, attached to the White House. It would be too trivial. But the defense program is shot full of trivialities like this."

Arnall Announces

Ellis Arnall on Saturday night announced his candidacy for the governorship of Georgia. Speaking over the radio, he outlined his platform, described the dangers faced by Georgians today and gave his proposed remedies for these unfortunate conditions.

Here in Georgia, said Mr. Arnall, "we have seen a replica of totalitarian tactics unfold. We see the Hitler pattern taking definite shape in our state government. We have seen ruthless and reckless abuse of gubernatorial power."

Sadly enough, these words from Georgia's attorney general are true. The present Governor has been given too great power under the law and he has used that power unscrupulously, unjustly, in attempt to further his own political ambitions. He has made the error that all men, given too much power, make, sooner or later. He has come to regard himself as greater than his job, greater than the faith and the service he owes to the state.

Georgia voters, at the state-wide primary next fall, will tell, by their ballots, whether or not they approve the highhanded methods used by Governor Talmadge. If they regard the freedom of their state from such dictatorial rule as Huey Long practiced in Louisiana, as Hitler practices in Germany, as of more value than the political aspirations of one man, they will so rebuke Talmadge at the polls that never again will any official dare to emulate his tactics.

Ellis Arnall is a worthy candidate for the high office to which he aspires. A native of Newnan, he was educated in this state, has lived his life in this state, is Georgian to his fingertips. He represents the finest type of earnest young Georgian, counting opportunity to serve his state of far higher value than any personal aggrandizement to be found in any office.

As attorney general he has made a splendid record and, under his direction, the department of law has widened the scope of its activities in ways that benefit the entire state.

The platform given in his speech of Saturday night is one to which all Georgians who have watched with growing alarm recent trends in state government, may say a heart-

Not only does he advocates steps which will make the University System forever free of political control, but he would likewise remove the common schools of the state, and the teachers, from political influences and pressure from any source.

He would strip the Governor's office of the pardoning and paroling power over criminals. He would divest the Governor of the right to appropriate the state's money, restoring this constitutional right to the general assembly. He would take away the governor's power to remove from office duly elected heads of state departments. He would provide for election by the general assembly of the state auditor, instead of permitting the Governor to appoint this official, as now. He would make it impossible for the Governor to arbitrarily strike from the budget, or the pay rolls, any state employe and would change the state budget commission, making the Governor, the president of the senate and the speaker of the house, its membership, with the state auditor and attorney general as financial and legal advisers respectively.

Finally, Mr. Arnall calls for complete and sincere co-operation with President Roosevelt and the national administration in this time of national crisis.

To such a platform all Georgians who love their state can gladly subscribe. Certainly there can be no Georgian familiar with all the circumstances of the recent subservience of the board of regents of the University System, who does not desire to remove forever any and all conditions which make such outrage possible.

Ellis Arnall has boldly and clearly outlined the sort of state government he believes Georgia should have. All Georgians should read his speech with care and then, when the time comes to vote, cast their ballots as conscience and intelligent appraisal of the issue dictate.

Georgia Editors Say:

ONLY ONE CANDIDATE CAN BEAT TALMADGE

(From The Gainesville News.)

With 1942, a political year, coming up there is already talk of this candidate and that making plans to enter the gubernatorial campaign. At this early date, Attorney General Ellis Arnall seems to be the most popular and the most likely one to enter the race, while Columbus Roberts and one or two more are seriously considering making the race against Governor Talmadge, who will, in all probability, run again for the four-year term which begins January 1, 1943.

While all is in the formative stage, the News wishes to voice a hope that has been expressed by hundreds of people in this section of Georgia, and that hope is that all prospective candidates opposing Talmadge can get together and by some sort of lineup or compromise decide on one man to make the race. Only one man can defeat the man who has discredited our University of Georgia, and about whom a national magazine saw fit to write an open letter to the people of Georgia urging them to unseat the man who is bringing discredit and humiliation to the "Empire State of the South."

Those who remember the hot race for senator between Talmadge and Senator Russell some years back will recall that Talmadge polled a total of over 150,000 popular votes and carried 88 counties, while Senator Russell polled something over 250,000 votes. Governor Talmadge still has that 150,000 votes today in his column. One candidate can poll the 250,000 other votes, but two, three or more candidates will split that number to where Talmadge will win with this 150,000 in a walk.

Race's Future Will Be Issue

NOV 25 1941

Efforts Made To Integrate Fact Into Educational Program

Determined efforts to integrate the "facts of the glorious past of the Negro now made available" by research scholars into the educational systems of the country, will be made at Columbus, Ohio, from October 31 through November 2, according to Dr. Carter G. Woodson of The Association for the Study of Negro Life and History.

The question, "Will the Negro continue satisfied to see himself left out of the picture of the past and excluded from the program for the future?" will be answered by Professor P. B. Schroeder of Hampton Institute, who will discuss "the problem and suggest what should be done to inculcate an appreciation for our racial culture."

The regional achievements of the Negro will be brought to light by Dr. R. C. Minor of Lincoln University, who will speak on the Negro in Columbus; Professor D. P. Lincoln of West Virginia State College, who is scheduled to give a "new idea of the past and present of the Negro in that mountain state;" and Dr. J. C. Carroll, of Attucks High School in Indianapolis, who will report his startling findings on the Underground Railroad in Indiana.

The conference will give serious attention also to Negro culture abroad as it bears upon the culture of the race in the United Staes. From Ohio State University comes Dr. J. S. Harris, who has just returned from his tour of research in Nigeria, Africa, and will bring a new thought as to the people who once developed and maintained kingdoms and empires on the shores of Africa. Dr. L. D. Turner, of Fish University, who for several years has investigated the influence of African speech on the language of America and has just returned from Brazil, where he has spent a year in a field study of the same influence, will also appear on the programs.

Professor James A. Porter of Howard University will bring to light not only new material but a philosophy with respect to the Negro in art in America; Dr. L. D. Reddick of the Schomburg Collection of the New York Public Library, will supplement this thought in an elaborate address on the picture of the Negro in the American Public Mind—how the Negro may or may not become a negligible factor in the thought of the world.

The conference will face also the unfinished task in writing the history of the Negro—or rather in rewriting the history of the Negro from materials which are scarcely known. Miss Ruth A. Fisher of the Library of Congress will tell about the valuable and untouched source of materials on the Negro found in the European archives, where up to this war she served as the American representative on the Historical Manuscript Commission of the Library of Congress. A. G. Lindsay, recently of the Historical Records Survey, one of those concerned with the compilation of the Calendar of the Frederick Douglass Papers, will speak on the recent discovery of the many thousands of such valuable materials on the Negro and how to reach them for research into the background of the race.

The conference will close with an afternoon session when Miss Hilda V. Grayson, field representative of the association, and Dr. Charles H. Wesley of Howard Universary will speak. Dr. Wesley will speak on the participation of Negro abolitionists in political parties, a thought which has come to this scholar as a result of his recent researches which have shown how largely the Negro figured in the anti-slavery struggle and how historians have failed to give those fearless reformers credit for the large contribution which they made to the emanci-

Texas Woman Hits Anti-Nego Discrimination

Dear Woman's Page Editor:

Here in the Southwest we appreciate your paper and its realistic attitude towards women. I'm sure I speak for many other white women when I say we resent the "protection of white womanhood" bunk of the politicians.

We know that women of any age or color cannot go about Southern cities alone without being accosted But by whom? By white ne'er-do-wells in glittering cars.

I have lived in various parts of the South for some years, and have met only the utmost courtesy from Negroes of whatever station. The increasing viciousness of attacks on Negroes makes me boil.

"White superiority" indeed! Can anything be superior which is shown in such inferior behavior? It is the dignity of the slandered, hard working Negro people which constantly amazes me.

If the politicians really wanted to protect womanhood, they would abolish the $10 weekly TOP WAGE in laundry and household employment FOR ALL WOMEN, the high rents for hovels and hot-box apartments, the 10-cent bus fares, the sales taxes on FOOD, the POLL TAX, and the taxes in addition to property and poll tax which folks in Arkansas, for example, are now having to pay to keep the supposedly PUBLIC schools open.

The South wants to organize. Black folks especially recognize the CIO as their great opportunity. Our need here is for FACTS, especially cheap pamphlets in simple language, on union methods, economis, labor in the United States and Negro History.

May I suggest to your readers to keep a stream of literature flowing to Southern contacts—Negro, white, poor and middle class? Send it in blank wrappers. All need to learn.

Labor can't move for without the South. Yet, to help the South wisely, we must listen to its own voices.

Former Memphians Sue Police Commissioner For $100,000; Charge He Damaged Business

Suit Recalls 1940 Political Difficulties

Plaintiffs Went To Chicago To Make New Start

OCT 14 1941

Elmer Atkinson, and his wife, the former Willa Cooke, filed a $100,000 law suit against Memphis Police Commissioner Joseph P. Boyle last week in a Chicago Circuit Court. Each of the plaintiffs asked for $50,000 damages which the bill asserts they sustained as the result of policing of their restaurant, billiard parlor, and taxi cab business at 327 Beale Avenue from October 25 to November 11, 1940, according to a press release by the Associated Press.

The suit was filed during the same week the police commissioner was attending the National Safety Council convention in Chicago last week. Mr. Boyle denied knowing anything about the case until his return to Memphis during the latter part of the week, however.

Virtually forced to close up their businesses. Elmer's Luncheonette, Stage Billiard Parlor, and the Stag Taxi Cab Company, as the result of the unprecedented police tactics, Mr. Atkinson and his wife left Memphis around the first of this year to "start all over in a more friendly atmosphere."

The Beale Street concerns, along with the South Memphis Drug Company at 907-9 Florida, was police day and night for more than three weeks. Customers, whites as well as colored, were searched upon entering these establishments and upon leaving. The search began during the heat of the presidential election campaign, and just a few days after the Republicans of Shelby County set up headquarters on Beale Street.

Dr. J. B. Martin, Sr., owner of the South Memphis Drug Company, asserted that his place was being policed because he had accepted the chairmanship of the Republican campaign organization and refused to call off a political rally for his party at Salem Baptist Church, Iowa and Florida. The rally was held on Monday night, October 28th. Memphis Drug Store went ur the police surveillance the previ Friday night. At the same ti the Stag poolroom was policed.

Commissioner Boyle in the pu statement, said that these places were trafficking narcot and this step was necessary break up a 'dope ring.' He cite thirteen-year-old conviction rec of Atkinson. Mr. Atkinson had ready been paroled and served w good behavior his probation period.

Executive Editor The Herald

SOUTHERNERS since ante-bellum days have regarded the negro as their particular responsibility and the Southern negro has been accustomed, too, to look to whites when he is in need, either in person or in his cultural endeavors and particularly in his religious organizations. They ask for donations for church and eleemosynary purposes and, through time-honored custom, expect to receive them.

One of the best appeals of this character I have seen in a long, long time is signed by the Rev. Louis H. Portlock, pastor of Trinity Colored Methodist Church (South), who has waged a hard struggle to keep alive the free employment agency operated by his church. The communication is being addressed to white friends of the church throughout the city. The salutation is "In God's presence and in the name of Jesus of Nazareth, peace." The letter then begins:

"Again, permit me to say, kind sir, I am one colored man in Miami who has a right to write you this letter. The reason is, when your forefathers fought with General Washington and General Jackson and General Lee in the wars past, my forefathers remained on your plantations to work and defend your families. We were glad we could be trusted to do this. My forefathers worshipped God in the galleries of your forefathers' churches until the Southern church set us aside in 1870 as the Colored Methodist Church.

"You may know now that we supply white people with colored servants free of charge and we do not charge the colored folks for the jobs, either—all a free service we are trying to render today to prevent crime and make Miami a safer place for all of its citizens.

"We are compelled at times to ask our white friends to help us carry on.

"Our building is not completed. We are trying to finish the interior. We believe you will do something to help us. We look to white people like you as our leaders and we are asking you to give us a donation at this time. We are loyal. We are of the Southern states. We can be trusted. We are at your service.

"Now may God bless you with long life and much happiness. Please make check payable to Trinity Colored Methodist Church (South), and forward to 2014 N. E. Fifth court."

I know of one Miami-born matron who responded to the letter with a check. There probably are many more. The appeal is a masterpiece.

THEY are still hunting for that elusive oil in Florida and one of the biggest of the recent concessions granted by the state (the Blanchard concession) will start a new search tomorrow in the submerged lands of Florida bay.

O. S. Petty, president of the Petty Geophysical Engineering Company of San Antonio, Texas, will reach here today and will go into the bayous and bays south of here with William G. Blanchard and his principal associate, J. L. McCord, Saturday to make a preliminary survey.

The Blanchard concession consists of some 7,000,000 acres of submerged land in the Gulf of Mexico, and including a large part of the Florida keys. It is, perhaps, the largest such concession ever granted in this country.

Mr. Petty's company is one of the most widely known in the field of oil exploration. He has been employed at various times by the largest oil companies in the world to explore the possibilities of potential fields in the far-flung corners of the earth, from China to Alaska and back again.

There are three scientific ways of determining whether or not there is a probability or possibility of oil bearing domes. Mr. Petty employs all three as a means of removing every human possible element of doubt.

The gravitational method has been in use for many years. The magnetic and the seismic methods are newer, but are said by some oil men to be more certain. The two last named are widely employed to map subsurface geological structures for various purposes besides oil.

The arrival of Mr. Petty shouldn't be regarded as an indication that Bill Blanchard is going to start digging holes all over Florida bay next week. This survey is a serious and scientific effort to determine whether or not there is any possibility of oil sufficiently strong to justify further expenditures in seeking it. So don't get too excited until the returns are in.

DR. A. F. KASPER ought to be qualified as our greatest football fan. He has just returned from a four weeks' vacation, during which he witnessed no less than 10 football games.

That required quite a bit of fast traveling, but Doc doesn't mind that—if there's a football game at the end of the trail. Incidentally, next time there's a vacancy on the stadium committee he'd be an ideal appointee.

PRESIDENT RICHARD WILDER of the Miami Beach Kennel club is due in town today and announcement may be expected any day of executive personnel of the track for the coming season.

Dope going the rounds is that A. J. Henderson will have the title of general manager, vacated by Frank Anderson after the end of last season. William Johnson, formerly a director of Tropical Park (before the recent sale), will be real boss of the Beach kennel club if what I hear is true.

Asks If The "Four Freedoms" Would Include Black People

OCT 22 1941

CHICAGO—(ANP)—Calling upon Senator Listel Hill (D., Ala.), Monday, William E. King, member of Illinois Industrial commission and former state senator, asked if Hill believed that the four freedoms should apply to Negroes in Alabama, as well as to the population of Europe.

Sen. Hill participated in a radio debate Sunday night and defended President Roosevelt's foreign policy. He spoke of the "futile fetish of neutrality," and said that neutrality "is a dream that has passed—a hope that has perished."

In a letter to the senator, King asked him to state his position toward anti-lynching legislation, equality for Negroes at the ballot box, jim crow cars, and other forms of segregation.

one of the thousands who listened Sunday night to the American Forum of the Air, when you spoke in opposition to Wayland Brooks, senator from my own state, Illinois. You spoke as a champion of the present national administration, its principles and policies — policies such as the four freedoms.

"'Everywhere in the world' was the language used. Everywhere? In your mind does that mean in the south as well as in the north? In Alabama as well as in Europe and in Asia? Does it mean the same freedoms for every man, be he black or white? Does it mean equal rights for all American citizens?"

King further asked, if Sen. Hill's answer to his questions were in the affirmative, what he was doing toward curing conditions in Alabama which conflicted with these ideals; toward equality at the ballot box, about jim crow cars and segregagation. In closing King cited his record of service in the interests of Negroes and asked that Sen. Hill present a factual record that would stand up along with his.

The news that J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of the I.B.P.O. Elks of the World, had resigned from the America First Committee came as a great surprise to this commentator. I had not known that he belonged to it, never having given the "Little Corporal" credit for possessing sufficient intelligence to join such an organization.

As his reason for resigning, the Boss Elk cites Colonel Lindbergh's "recent expressions * * * in connection with his attitude toward the Jewish people" as "not in keeping with the ideals of Americanism." Mr. Wilson then declares that he and his noble organization "cannot be drawn into giving aid and comfort to the twin brutes of Europe, Hitler and Mussolini, by speaking disparagingly of another race of people."

As usual, the "Little Corporal" and the New York Age (which fulsomely praised his action as "making amends for his mis-leadership in aligning his order with the America First Committee") are both wrong.

So far as I know, Lindbergh has not disparaged the Jewish people. He merely stated that the Jews, the British propagandists and the Administration were trying to get this country to fight Hitler. What is wrong about that? Wherein is the statement untrue? Wendell Willkie, as counsel for the movie propagandists before the Senate sub-committee investigating war propaganda, admitted that the movie industry was anti-Nazi and pro-British. While the movies are largely owned by Gentile Wall Street interests, who are heading up the effort to get this country into war to help perpetuate the British Empire on the backs of 500 million colored people, they are produced largely by Jews. The leading interventionist newspaper, the New York Times, is owned by Jews. And I have heard or read of no prominent Jew who is opposed to the United States aiding Britain and fighting Germany. Neither has anybody else.

It is therefore not unfair to state that Jewish leaders are working for U.S. entry into the war against Germany. This is greatly to their credit AS JEWS, because the Nazis have been persecuting the Jews almost as badly as the British have been persecuting the colored people. By the same token, American Negroes should be opposed to the United States aiding Britain, and with greater reason. If prominent Negroes in this country were truly representing colored people, and wanted to join some committee, they could do no better than join the America First Committee. Most intelligent Negroes would have favored the Roosevelt Administration fighting Italy to save Ethiopia instead of remaining blandly neutral while Ethiopians were butchered with the blessings of the British. I commend the Jewish leaders for getting any aid they can from any direction to fight the gravest menace their people have yet faced. It is not disparagement to state that they are doing so.

It is significant that America First critics singled out Lindbergh, Wheeler et al. to smear with the charge of anti-Semitism. This is a surefire device when you have no argument to offer. It camouflages intellectual poverty with racial emotionalism.

To say, as Wilson does, that racial prejudice is "not in keeping with the ideals of Americanism" is merely nonsense. It IS the American ideal, and every Negro knows it. It MUST be the American ideal because it is written into our laws and hallowed by custom and tradition. It is the everyday policy of our government, as Finley Wilson ought to know.

It is evident from the latest Gallup poll that a large percentage of the American people share the opinion of Lindbergh. It recently asked the question, "What persons or groups do you think are most active in trying to get us into war?" The selected group interrogated classed the groups in this order: (1) Roosevelt Administration and the Democratic Party; (2) Big Business, industrialists and profiteers; (3) British organizations and agents; (4) American organizations with pro-British sympathies; (5) the Jews. Groups 2 and 4 are actually the same, since the interventionist groups are financed by Group 2. No one has yet proved the Gallup poll wrong in appraising American public opinion.

NOV 8 1941

Lindbergh may be anti-Semitic, but the hypocrisy of his critics is shown by their failure to castigate him when he called for the defense of "white civilization" against "Asiatic hordes." Nothing was THEN said against him, not even by the Hon. J. Finley Wilson.

It is obvious that if Negroes are going to quit organizations because some white members have racial prejudice, they will have to quit them ALL!

Georgia Editors Say:

THE WINNER

(From The Eatonton Messenger)

Death was the winner in 43 Georgia traffic accidents during the month of September, according to a recent news release from State Patrol headquarters. Even so, the score this year was less than that of September, 1940, when 77 lives were lost.

Despite this decrease during the month of September, the total number of traffic fatalities for the first nine months of the year are 69 above the same period for 1940. No matter how you write this, Death is the winner.

No respector of sex, the Grim Reaper took 34 men and nine women. Despite the state administration, he leveled whites and blacks alike, taking 30 white people and 13 Negroes.

If the record were to end with September, we might feel that everything would work out. But it doesn't. October will also be a winning month, and November and December, and all months thereafter, until drivers and pedestrians learn to think, drive and walk logically and with due regard for the other fellow.

20 passengers, nine pedestrians, four bicyclists and one occupant of an animal-drawn vehicle. It's a gory record, and one that should be reduced. Constant vigilance is the only answer.

September's fatalities included nine drivers.

It is obvious that if Negroes are going to quit organizations because some white members have racial prejudice, they will have to quit them ALL!

Georgia Editors Say:

THE WINNER

(From The Eatonton Messenger)

Death was the winner in 43 Georgia traffic accidents during the month of September, according to a recent news release from State Patrol headquarters. Even so, the score this year was less than that of September, 1940, when 77 lives were lost.

Despite this decrease during the month of September, the total number of traffic fatalities for the first nine months of the year are 69 above the same period for 1940. No matter how you write this, Death is the winner.

No respector of sex, the Grim Reaper took 34 men and nine women. Despite the state administration, he leveled whites and blacks alike, taking 30 white people and 13 Negroes.

If the record were to end with September, we might feel that everything would work out. But it doesn't. October will also be a winning month, and November and December, and all months thereafter, until drivers and pedestrians learn to think, drive and walk logically. And with due regard for the other fellow.

September's fatalities included nine drivers, 20 passengers, nine pedestrians, four bicyclists and one occupant of an animal-drawn vehicle. It's a gory record, and one that should be reduced. Constant vigilance is the only answer.

Speaker Claims "Hitler Can't Stop God" Before Young People's Congress

Dr. W. O. Carrington Sees Democracy as the Only Political System that Permits Self-Government.

By WILLIAM H. FERRIS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9—Usually when Hitler is discussed, his shortcomings as an an individual are discussed. And sometimes when Negro columnists discuss the war, they seem in doubt as to whether the Germans would be kinder to the Africans than the English, if they—the Germans—should take over Africa.

But what these writers overlook is that something deeper than the personalities of Hitler and Mussolini are involved in the present war. Hitler represents a philosophy of life, which is at variance with Christianity, Democracy and what we call civilization. He would turn back the wheels of human progress.

He would turn back that upward surge of the human spirit, which was launched by Christianity, the Renaissance, the Protestant Reformation and the American Revolution, and which reached their sublimest expressions in the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Federal Constitution.

The question for the Negro to consider is: "If Hitler lays such a heavy hand upon the white people of Europe, whom he conquers, what would he do to the African and West Indian if he became their boss?"

DR. W. O. CARRINGTON SPEAKS

This line of thought was suggested by the address of Dr. W. O. Carrington on "Spiritual Self-Reliance and the Democratic Process" before the Young People's Congress of the Philadelphia and Baltimore Conference in Wesley A.M.E. Zion Church, Philadelphia, Rev. E. O. Cowan, pastor.

Dr. Carrington is pastor of the First A.M.E. Zion Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., and was formerly Dean of the Theological Seminary at Livingstone college, Salisbury, N. C. Dr. Carrington leaped into fame in the spring of 1926, when he preached on "The Philosophy of Job" before Bishop P. A. Wallace's New Jersey Conference in Paterson, N. J.

In his address, Dr. Carrington said:

"We live in a day when science, invention and discovery have put at our command wonderful reservoirs of power, and we think that we can get along without God. That is the danger of the modern age. We need God, and we can't get along without Him.

In the modern world, democracy has been having a hard time. Democracy won't work unless we work it. Christianity has not failed because we haven't worked it.

You could not talk of spiritual self-reliance and Fascism, Nationalist, Socialism, Nazism and Communism. In these countries, the State is everything, and man is but a part of a machine. Stalin and Mussolini and Hitler are the high priests and the individual does not count. The right to think, speak and write one's thoughts is taken away.

We see the machine-like effectiveness and efficiency of the totalitarian governments. The people are regimented. These governments are both strong and fragile. There is an inherent weakness in all forms of tyranny. They breed a discontent which frequently ends in revolution. They squeeze out the competent and leave nothing worthwhile. They crush men of brains and character.

The democratic way of life gives a free man a chance to develop himself. Democracy is more of an aspiration than a fact, more of an ideal than a reality.

In a democracy a man's life is his own responsibility. He can live his own life. That is the ideal of democracy.

We can't have a democracy as it ought to be if it is divorced from religion.

This is God's own world and if we will not work with God, we must reap the fruits of our own sowing.

Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin cannot stop the purposes of God."

Interracial Fellowship At Wesley

FEB 5 1941

Leaders from City, Vicinity to Join In Discussions

Leading Negro and white ministers from all over Atlanta and surrounding towns will meet tomorrow morning, Thursday, February 6, at 10 o'clock in the basement auditorium of Wesley Memorial M. E. Church, Ivy and Auburn avenue, in a joint fellowship meeting. Over 400 ministers have been invited to attend.

Hailed by many as one of the most significant ventures in race relations to take place in Atlanta in recent years, the meeting will feature Dr. Willis J. King, president of Gammon Theological Seminary Rev. Ryland Knight, pastor of Second Ponce de Leon Baptist church Rev. C. D. Hubert, pastor of Providence Baptist church; Rev. William G. Gardner, pastor of First Presbyterian church, and Rev. M. L King, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist church.

The meeting is being held in connection with Interracial Brotherhood Month which is promoted by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. On Sunday February 9, special services will be held in many churches in Atlanta in recognition of Race Relations Sunday. This day is observed nationally for the purpose of promoting better race relations in America.

The joint fellowship meeting was called by a committee of prominent Negro and white ministers working with the Atlanta Urban League. Those participating in plans for the occasion are: the Reverends D. D. Crawford, E. G. Mackay, Lester Rumble, John Tate. B. V. Thornton, M. L. King, C. A Talbert, J. C. Wright, W. R. Wilkes, D. T. Murray, Ryland Knight, D T. Babcock, E. H. Beard, and Father J. H. C. Bowden, and Miss Almita S. Robinson, Jesse O. Thomas and W. Y. Bell, Jr.

The meeting is open to religious workers and the interested public

THE TRUTH

Dear Editor: I've read several Negro newspapers and talked with some of my own folks since I wrote an article in reply to Walter's article that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of December 14. I have a idea that Mr. White would have done our people, and all working people a great favor, if he would have denounced war altogether. He would have been doing a great good for the American people if he had come out against lynching in America He would have done a thousand times better and would have saved a lot of his time in writing, if he had advocated better living, better schooling, and equal treatment economically speaking for the Negro.

JAN 2 5 1941

We know that this is "our country" too. We don't only want to die for it; we want to live for it likewise. Our fathers slaved to make it rich. Our fathers d o make it a united republic. So we want to live like the remainder of its citizens. Free, socially and economically. We want to live free from lynch law; free from terror; then we shall fight for the country, Mr. White.

Our people have proved to humanity that they are born fighters, but we want to live while we are alive. I am sure that the dead will take care of itself. It is not only the army that discriminates against its black citizens; it's the Democratic government itself. Now, if it didn't the anti-lynch bill would have been passed, or we wouldn't have any need for such a bill to protect our citizens from our citizens.

I'm only writing this again to disapprove of some of the bad ideas that the article, "It's Our Country Too," left out, and again it seemed that Mr. White was afraid to tell the truth.—William Mathrus, 673 E. Third South street, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Educator Asks If It Is Fair to Permit Sections Which Restrict Vote, to Dominate Congress and Other Federal Bureaus.

BY EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—In his keynote address at Hampton Institute, Virginia, opening the Conference on the Participation of the Negro in National Defense, November 25 last, Newbold Morris, president of the Council of the City of New York, pointedly emphasized a fact not usually and clearly understood.

He rejected the notion that "the dignity which marks the American citizen apart from his brothers who live in countries where the word freedom is unknown" requires that he shall be regarded as asking favors when he demands full recognition of this essential dignity, and, at the same time, full and free opportunity to share in all of the blessings and privileges of his citizenship.

With respect to national unity, he declared that it is to be achieved, not by tyranny and oppression of minority groups, but by assuring to them the same privileges, rights and opportunities as to majority groups.

THE AMERICAN CONCEPT

Acceptance of this concept of our Americanism would serve to cure many of the difficulties which now plague and annoy our government and our general citizenship as we prepare for threatened emergencies.

And yet, how easily we could overcome these trying conditions and situations if only there should prevail a united purpose to work together socially, governmentally, and co-operatively for the larger good of all elements of our population.

TOLERANCE AND UNDERSTANDING NEEDED

Respect, tolerance and mutual understanding are still elements necessary to bring about these ideals of democracy.

Bigotry and intolerance, class- and race-conscious prejudices must be subordinated. The so-called fighting champions of democracy are called upon to enlarge their horizons of vision, and recognize the immutable fact that justice and freedom and liberty are terms of mockery if they do not include the well-being of the humblest individual of our nation along with the more fortunate and privileged by reason of their wealth, or the color of their skin.

A controlled suffrage in a section where the percentage of the vote to the population is negligibly small in comparison with the rest of the country is bound to raise the question: "What Is Representative Democracy In America?"

THE SOUTH CONTROLS THE GOVERNMENT

Is it representative democracy for the South to control the government of the United States in filling the office of Vice-President for eight years as was true when Mr. Garner served from 1933 to 1941 When the Speakership was filled during the same period by incumbents from Alabama and Texas? When the chairmen of the most powerful committees of the Congress, in the Senate and the House, are representatives of South Carolina, Virginia, North Carolina, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Texas and Tennessee?

Are these observations invidious? Let us see. A study of the recent election returns just completed indicates that while Northern, Eastern and Western States polled a percentage of 53.4 of its population vote, taking Illinois as the highest, the others ranging from this figure down through the 50's and the 40's, South Carolina only turned out 5.2 per cent; Mississippi 8 per cent; Georgia, 10 per cent; Arkansas, 10.3 per cent; Alabama, 10.4 per cent; Virginia, 12.9 per cent; Louisiana, 15.7 per cent; Texas, 16.2 per cent; Tennessee, 17.9 per cent; North Carolina, 23.3 per cent, and Florida, the highest, 25.7 per cent.

A White Man's Country

That the United States of America is a white man's country; that it has been and always will be, is the proud and arrogant boast of the white South; and that the Negro has no rights that a white man is bound to respect. Either in law, equity or religion, the provisions of the Federal Constitution, to the contrary notwithstanding. Once upon a time this sentiment only existed below the Mason and Dixon line, but the white South in its uncompromising intolerance against the Negro has succeeded in pushing this phase of race prejudice across the line, and every section of our country, under the unwarranted power of the New Deal, has made the Government a party to the crime. The South controls the Executive Department of our Government, and both branches of Congress; and as a consequence of this cowardly surrender of the people's right to govern themselves, the entire nation has joined the South in maintaining the 'boast' that our country is a white man's country, and the Negro has no rights the white man is bound to respect. Every policy of the New Deal, in common with organized labor, leads to the exclusion of the Negro from the economic, industrial and political life of the nation, and the inclusion of every white man to cover every field of human endeavor. If the trend of human affairs in America does not point in this direction, which way does it point?

The most dangerous threat to the Negro's welfare in the nation's life, is economic; far more dangerous than the threat to suppress his ballot which has been successfully taken away from him. This is the stealthy conspiracy of the New Deal and organized labor to starve the Negro. He must eat, if he lives, and he cannot eat without a job to earn money with which to buy bread, and the other actual necessities of life. The Government has appropriated billions of dollars in money for our National Defense Program, and the Negro is practically excluded from every opportunity; this vast sum of money affords white men and women to earn an honest dollar to pay for their meat and bread and continue to live.

To take the Constitutional right from the Negro to vote, by subterfuge one after the other, says this is a white man's country, and Negroes have no right to participate in the government. When you tax him without representation, you say to him, this is a white man's government, and your tax is your rent for the white man's tolerance of your presence in his country. When union labor threatens industry with a strike if it gives Negroes a job with a living wage; organized labor says, this is a white man's country, and only white people are entitled to work in a white man's country; and to capsize it all, the Government comes along and says, it will not integrate Negroes into the Army and Navy, which means that this is a white man's country and Negroes are not expected to fight for it. What other definite conclusion could a sensible man come to but that there is a movement on hand to make America a white man's country. When you are segregated and jim-crowed in the government's service, on trains and in every other line of public convenience, what spells more emphatically that this is a white man's country, and Negroes must take with thanks whatever the white folks feel like giving them or nothing. The man who ordered you to take a back seat because of your race or color ought to leave a public place, must think that he owns the place, or has rights there that you have not or he would not endanger his life or invite bodily harm if he did not feel that he had authority to give your order because of his color or race.

The conclusion of the whole matter is this, the United States of America is a white man's country government, and controlled by white men and the Negro lives here by the tolerance or forbearance of the white man; the Federal Constitution and the Bill of Rights to the contrary notwithstanding.

On Harry Bridges

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—(AP) — Benjamin Gitlow, former general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, testified Tuesday plans for an independent negro republic in this country were drawn at a meeting of the Communist International in Moscow which he attended.

Gitlow was a government witness in the deportation trial of Harry Bridges, alien west coast labor leader.

"Naturally," Gitlow said, "anyone in the United States would know the carrying out of such a policy would lead to a most bloody cival war, particularly in the United States."

He said the policy called for creation of a negro nation in sections of the South where negroes outnumbered the white population

The time of forming the negro country, Gitlow testified, would be dependent upon the general revolution in America.

The edict of the international he said, was binding on American communists.

Gitlow told of the communist drive to get negro porters as members, and the party's support of the Nicaraguan revolution in the 1920s.

Gitlow linked the international labor defense with the party, testifying, "Every member of the Communist party automatically becomes a member of the I. L. D."

Previously he explained a member of the I. L. D. was not necessarily a communist. He expressed belief Congressman Vito Marcantonio of New York, American Labor party member, was chairman of the I. L. D.

The background of the Communist party was a prelude to the direct attack on Bridges by government attornevs.

BUND OFFICIALS ARE SENTENCED ON RACE HATRED

Time-Picayune

Nine Are Convicted for Violating New Jersey Legislation

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

New York, Jan. 31.—Nine German-American Bund officials, who defended themselves by attacking a law under which they were indicted in New Jersey for inciting and advocating race hatred, were sentenced today to an aggregate of 10½ years in prison at hard labor and to pay fines of $11,000.

The sentences were imposed on the men, eight of them bund members and the ninth a bund writer, by Sussex County Judge John C. Losey in Newton, N. J. He then released them in bail of $2000 each to permit an appeal to the state supreme court.

Among those sentenced to serve from 12 to 14 months in the state prison at Trenton and to pay a $1000 fine was Wilhelm Kunz, national head of the bund, who succeeded Fritz Kuhn in office after the latter was sent to Sing Sing for stealing bund funds. Similar sentences were imposed on the Rev. John C. Fitting, Richard Schiele, Paul Schaarschmidt, Carl Schiphorst and George Neupert, trustees of Camp Nordland, in Andover, and Leonard D. Clark, the bund's writer.

Sentences of from 12 to 14 months and fines of $2000 each were imposed on August Klapprott, the bund's Eastern regional director, and Matthias Kohler, New Jersey bund treasurer.

The nine men, together with the bund attorney, Wilbur V. Keegan, of Union City, were indicted because of speeches made on June 8, 1940, at Camp Nordland. The bill accused them of "advocating race hatred and hostility against people of the Jewish religion." In sentencing them today, Losey told the nine defendants that "it seems to be conceded that the purpose of the German-American Bund is to attain ascendancy over the Jews."

"The constitution of this nation guarantees freedom of worship," he added, "and there is no room in this country for anything contrary to this document."

Those sentenced today chose to attack the validity of the law they were accused of violating.

Judge Losey upheld the law, however, and then immediately imposed sentence.

Keegan's indictment is still pending, because he denied his guilt and asked for a trial. The trial was to start on February 5, but has been postponed because the attorney has started a federal court suit to have the law declared unconstitutional. A hearing on the suit will be held on February 14 before Federal Judge Guy L. Fake in Newark.

We Stand Corrected

JAN 7 1941

To New Masses: J. T. Carson is the better man for having rushed off his criticism of Mr. Webb's "It's Happened in Washington." (New Masses, November 19.) I reacted much more deeply to the Webb article than did Mr. Carson (if I am to judge by the tenor of his letter), but permitted the grass to grow under my feet while he took up the cudgels in defense of the nation's capital. I think, however, there is much more to be added to the Carson letter if the erroneous impression left by this article is to be corrected.

We can all agree that the "reactionary-jitters" do exist in Washington. But readers of New Masses know that in those parts of the United States where the terror has been greatest, the advanced section of humanity, in the forefront of the struggle against reaction, has not furled its banners and slunk away. Is Washington D. C. the exception? I was one of those who felt the sub-human brutality of the Washington police at that unforgettable Sunrise Service for Peace. It was my baptism in the meaning of terror and intimidation. One who has not had such a baptism can hardly grasp its full significance.

Did Washington stop holding mass meetings for peace after that? Such meetings followed in quick succession. Only a few weeks ago Theodore Dreiser addressed an open air peace rally. It was a raw, cold night and over 700 people, Negro and white, stood their ground for two solid hours. Of that mass many had had personal experience with the Sunrise Service. To the very end of the Dreiser meeting (which went off quite peacefully) many felt that at any moment there would be a repetition of police lawlessness or provocation by stooges. Yet there we stood in Lafayette Park, backed up by determination and a very effective amplifier.

Not all of the people's struggles in Washington take place with the fireworks that make a Roman holiday for journalists. Progressive men and women go about their small, daily tasks of leading the fight against the burdens which the war-bent administration seeks to impose on the people. These tasks taken separately do not make exciting news copy, but add it up and you have a significant contribution to the progressive forces of the United States.

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Three notable addresses were made here in Washington last week. Each sought to stress, and, more definitely, to define this thing we call democracy.

They each came from high quarters—from the President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and a high-ranking member of the United States Senate.

In substance and form and eloquence of statement, the three addresses rank high, very high.

Coming from such high quarters they deservedly challenged the attention of the country and the world. They dealt with the fundamental concepts of our democracy, and were surcharged with patriotic purpose and social vision.

They set forth ideas and ideals, which, if lived up to, would bring about in this country of ours, a Christian citizenship of this country, and our American statesmen, do not rise up, denounce, and expose present-day hypocrisies which are threatening the very foundations of true democracy.

Announce of sincerity of purpose to do away with these proscriptions will outweigh a ton of abstractions and pretense. It will hearten and encourage the 12,000,000 men, women and children of the Negro group in the United States, and contribute to that national unity so much needed and desired during these perilous days.

philosophy of living, a way of peace, and, in truth and in fact, a "government dedicated to the proposition that the rich and the poor alike stand upon common ground that each has equal rights as well as equal opportunities and that, each is entitled to the full protection of his government in the preservation of the priceless rights and privileges of citizenship."

Racial Prejudices and Bigotries

The realization of these ideals in America is at present prevented mainly by racial prejudices and bigotries. These prejudices and bigotries fall with threatening impact day by day, year in and year out, upon the hapless heads of the great masses of one particular group of our American citizenship—the Negro group.

Chief Justice Hughes spoke with unaccustomed bluntness when, in his address, calling for the improvement of human relations in America, he said, that "liberty cannot be preserved by majority rule unless the majority hold sacred basic individual rights regardless of race or creed", so that there may be an "abiding sense of human dignity and worth—and friendly cooperation in pursuit of common ideals of justice."

In further comment, and following up this thought, he emphasized the fact that "rancor and bigotry, racial animosity and intolerance are wholly incompatible with that cooperation because they undermine the very foundations of democratic effort."

The Consent of the Governed

In his address to the nation, Mr. Roosevelt referred to the totalitarian dictators as seeking to set up a "new order", and, by implication, spoke of our country as having a government "based upon the consent of the governed."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the third notable to speak during the week, declared that "'while we sympathize with the oppressed and persecuted peoples of the world, we realize that we have great problems at home; that one-third of our population is ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad. We have been told repeatedly," he said, "upon the highest authority that unless and until this situation is corrected our democracy is endangered."

The thesis of his remarks revolved around the sentiment that we should settle our own probems before we undertake to settle the problems of Asia, Africa, Australasia, South America and Europe. He declared that the best way to safeguard our independence and freedom in America is to set our own house in order.

Colored Americans Baffled and Confused

Colored Americans who have read these speeches, and hundreds of others like them, are baffled and confused. They know that thousands and thousands, yea millions, of their fellows are ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad in this rich country of ours, and that they remain so after years and years of Billion-Dollar spendings. They are kept from employment in industry with regular wages, and that their color alone condemns them to the lower and lowest levels of living.

They know that in some eleven States of our union, the so-called Solid-South, the principle of government by consent of the governed does not apply to them. They know that they are disfranchised and subjected to economic and racial repressions and oppressions and generally decitizenized.

Because of these things they know that a gnawing cancer is eating at the vitals of American democracy and that these things "undermine the very foundations of democratic effort."

A Call for Sincerity

They are baffled and confused, and view with extreme skepticism the prattlings of those who declaim so loudly and so eloquently as they pay tribute to the blessings of liberty, freedom and democracy in a republican form of government.

They wonder why the enlightened,

America Is Alarmed

MAY 3 - 1941

One of our white contemporaries, thoroughly wrought up over the growing crisis here and abroad, in bold headlines, the other day, said, "Hitler Rode to Power on Hoodlum Violence," then asked "Do We Have the Makings of Fascist Hoodlums Here?"

Under the above heading the news article went on to denounce the Ku Klux Klan, Black Lgion, Christian Front, American Bundists, Fifth Columnists and other enemies of our Democratic Way of life. It is regrettable that our powerful newspapers are just now getting around to declaring an "all out war" on these nefarious organizations. If their editors had been alert or even mildly interested they could have learned long ago of the terrorism spread by these groups throughout the years.

MAY 3 - 1941

Negro newspapers have cried out to high heaven against the mob rule and the pernicious practices of Black Legionnaires and other thugs and hoodlums. But their pleas went almost unheard, chiefly because the victims of these assaults for the most part were Negroes. At the time Negro editors argued that to ignore the injustices that were being heaped upon Negroes, would some day lead to similar injustices being visited upon other minorities. No one stopped to consider. The Negro was a minor figure, and nobody cared.

MAY 3 - 1941

It was the same in 1930 when the white bankers of Chicago could have saved the Binga State bank, but refused because it was "just a little Negro bank." Its collapse was the forerunner to the national banking crisis which plunged the whole nation into financial chaos. It was the same in 1935 when Mussolini invaded Ethiopia and a word from France and England could have saved the ancient empire. Following the collapse of Ethiopia, the world was plunged into a war which has put 14 nations under the Nazi heel and which threatens now to engulf the rest of the civilized world.

Irony Of A Democracy

Democracy, as it was meant to be in America, is a good thing—a thing for which men have suffered and died. It is intended to offer freedom, opportunity and privileges to all the people. It is unselfish, without bias or prejudice.

But American democracy has come to hold an ironical aspect for the colored minority. This aspect has assumed large proportions in the current program of national defense as it affects the the Negro citizen. Picture, if you can, the readiness, the eagerness of black men to do their share, even more than their share, to fight for their country. They want to be included in the factories, navy yards and armed forces of their country. But time and time again they are told "no place for Negroes" in this set up, in this company, in this project. At the same time other citizens are being retained and provided for; they are being accepted as skilled workers and agents in preparing the country. The Negro stands on the sideline, in the role of the slave, the one who will be called only to do the drudgery and fool's work. Yet, he accepts the challenge whenever it comes.

Without appealing to the beliefs of any race in connection with this condition all of us must agree it is an ironical feature of the kind of life America seeks to preserve. This, it would be, if it affected any group of people. It is the big corroding factor that works to destroy democracy of the people.

We have been told repeatedly," he said, "upon the highest authority that unless and until this situation is corrected our democracy is endangered."

The thesis of his remarks revolved around the sentiment that we should settle our own probems before we undertake to settle the problems of Asia, Africa, Australasia, South America and Europe. He declared that the best way to safeguard our independence and freedom in America is to set our own house in order.

Colored Americans Baffled and Confused

Colored Americans who have read these speeches, and hundreds of others like them, are baffled and confused. They know that thousands and thousands, yea millions, of their fellows are ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad in this rich country of ours, and that they remain so after years and years of Billion-Dollar spendings. They are kept from employment in industry with regular wages, and that their color alone condemns them to the lower and lowest levels of living.

They know that in some eleven States of our union, the so-called Solid-South, the principle of government by consent of the governed does not apply to them. They know that they are disfranchised and subjected to economic and racial repressions and oppressions and generally decitizenized.

Because of these things they know that a gnawing cancer is eating at the vitals of American democracy and that these things "undermine the very foundations of democratic effort."

A Call for Sincerity

They are baffled and confused, and view with extreme skepticism the prattlings of those who declaim so loudly and so eloquently as they pay tribute to the blessings of liberty, freedom and democracy in a republican form of government.

They wonder why the enlightened,

Irony Of A Democra[illegible]

JAN 10 1941

Democracy, as it was meant to be in America, is a good thing—a thing for which men have suffered and died. It is intended to offer freedom, opportunity and privileges to all the people. It is unselfish, without bias or prejudice.

But American democracy has come to hold an ironical aspect for the colored minority. This aspect has assumed large proportions in the current program of national defense as it affects the Negro citizen. Picture, if you can, the readiness, the eagerness of black men to do their share, even more than their share, to fight for their country. They want to be included in the factories, navy yards and armed forces of their country. But time and time again they are told "no place for Negroes" in this set up, in this company, in this project. At the same time other citizens are being retained and provided for; they are being accepted as skilled workers and agents in preparing the country. The Negro stands on the sideline, in the role of the slave, the one who will be called only to do the drudgery and fool's work. Yet, he accepts the challenge whenever it comes.

Without appealing to the beliefs of any race in connection with this condition all of us must agree it is an ironical feature of the kind of life America seeks to preserve. This, it would be, if it affected any group of people. It is the big corroding factor that works to destroy democracy of the people.

America Is Alarmed

MAY 3 - 1941

One of our white contemporaries, thoroughly wrought up over the growing crisis here and abroad, in bold headlines, the other day, said, "Hitler Rode to Power on Hoodlum Violence," then asked "Do We Have the Makings of Fascist Hoodlums Here?"

Under the above heading the news article went on to denounce the Ku Klux Klan, Black Lgion, Christian Front, American Bundists, Fifth Columnists and other enemies of our Democratic Way of life. It is regretable that our powerful newspapers are just now getting around to declaring an "all out war" on these nefarious organizations. If their editors had been alert or even mildly interested they could have learned long ago of the terrorism spread by these groups throughout the years.

MAY 3 - 1941

Negro newspapers have cried out to high heaven against the mob rule and the pernicious practices of Black Legionnaires and other thugs and hoodlums. But their pleas went almost unheard, chiefly because the victims of these assaults for the most part were Negroes. At the time Negro editors argued that to ignore the injustices that were being heaped upon Negroes, would some day lead to similar injustices being visited upon other minorities. No one stopped to consider. The Negro was a minor figure, and nobody cared.

MAY 3 - 1941

It was the same in 1930 when the white bankers of Chicago could have saved the Binga State bank, but refused because it was "just a little Negro bank." Its collapse was the forerunner to the national banking crisis which plunged the whole nation into financial chaos. It was the same in 1935 when Mussolini invaded Ethiopia and a word from France and England could have saved the ancient empire. Following the collapse of Ethiopia, the world was plunged into a war which has put 14 nations under the Nazi heel and which threatens now to engulf the

During 1940 Negro Proved to Be Surest Standard for Testing 'Justice N9 1941 to All' in the United States

New York—During 1940, the American Negro proved to be the surest standard for testing, in terms of concrete action, our government's oft repeated assertion that American democracy gives full justice to all citizens of the United States, according to a report made by Walter White at the annual meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, held here Monday, January 6.

Four Supreme Court Victories

On the credit side the N. A. A. C. P. secretary pointed to four decisions won before the United States Supreme Court, affecting the rights of Negro citizens. The first of these decisions, read by Justice Hugo L. Black, last February 12, denied the right of Florida courts to obtain confessions from four Negro youths, through torture, and termed conviction after such action, unconstitutional. The cases of Dave Canty, in Alabama, and Bob White in Texas, were also reversed on similar grounds. The fourth decision denied the right to persons to bar Negroes from buying or living on property in areas of a city restricted by agreement among property owners.

The association also won a notable case in its six-year fight to equalize the salaries of Negro and white teachers in southern and border states, when the U. S. Supreme Court refused to review a Circuit Court of Appeals decision denying the right of the Norfolk, Va., schoolboard to pay lower salaries to Negro teachers solely on the basis of color. This victory added $129,000 to the salaries of Negro teachers in Norfolk.

Pointing out that 1940 marked the most crucial period in our country's history, the N.A.A.C.P. executive secretary said it was nevertheless true that the Administration muffed a great opportunity to prove how democracy can work in times of stress to preserve civil liberties for 14,000,000 American Negroes who have suffered more than any other group in our country from the denial of even basic citizenship rights.

Chief among the happenings Mr. White listed was the failure of Congress to pass a federal anti-lynching law at a time when the majority of American citizens in the South as well as the North believe such a law should be passed. He declared this demonstrated that there are men in our Congress who are willing for Hitler to show us all that he has learned from this American crime before taking action to curb it.

During this period the Association was the first to report the adoption of a new technique adopted by vigilante mobs for covering up lynchings. The NAACP made public a report by one of its investigators, "Lynching Goes Underground."

SAYS "DEMOCRACY A MYTH IN RELATION TO NEGRO ASPIRATIONS"

JAN 4 - 1941 561

Findings, Resolutions and Conclusions Made During the Atlantic City Meeting—Find Many Evils Rampant, While the Church Fails To Act.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 — The seminar findings of the plenary sessions of the significant meetings of the Federal Council of Churches, the Home Missions Council of North America, the Foreign Missions Conference and other church bodies held at Hotel Dennis, Atlantic City marked a real advance of the churches of America in their attitude toward interracial brotherhood and democracy. The statements approved and sent down through the channels of these bodies to their 20,000,000 constituents follow in part:

"We need to recognize anew that the great need of a partly effective democracy is more and better democracy. . . Under a democracy people have the opportunity to grow morally and spiritually as they participate in their own economic organizations. We must extend democracy in government, industry, education and the life of the church itself.

"The poverty and helplessness besetting share-croppers and migrants are a cause for immediate Christian action. We call attention to the constituent denominations and their theological schools to the need for ministers trained for special service to these people. We commend especially to the churches the projects for placing religious demonstration workers in areas of the Cotton Belt now being sponsored by the Home Missions Council and the Federal Council of Churches.

"The basic social ideal of the Christian reliigon does not permit of discrimination. It is the duty of the Christian church to emphasize the oneness of the human family rather than separation. . . We deplore racial segregation in the program of national defense, more particularly the forms it takes with certain minority groups, having to do with labor conditions and recreational facilities. . . The churches should urge that there be no discrimination in chaplaincy services or in the social and recreational activities within and surrounding the various army camps. Interracial understanding and education in Christian responsibility by working in these areas of human relations.

"The church should lay emphasis on the practical implications of Christian brotherhood and on the need of promoting mutual understanding. We believe that friendships between individuals of different races are an effective means to these ends.

"That the churches in communities near camps where Negroes are in training give special attention to maintaining good relations between the races under the trying conditions of camp and community life.

"We express as Christians our sympathy with the Jewish people in this hour of calamity for so many of their group in Europe. We deplore the existence of anti-Semitism in America and declare our opposition to it because it is contrary to the teachings and the Spirit of Christ. We call upon all His followers to create Christian attitudes toward the Jews . . .

"In view of the war hysteria now affecting Japanese in our land, who are Americans, the churches should endeavor to secure at once publicity for the peculiar problems faced by the Japanese in the United States. . . Spanish-speaking peoples present one of the greatest challenges to the Christian churches. We urge that more attention be given to creating appreciation of their needs and to spiritual fellowship.

"The observance of Race Relations Sunday and Interracial Brotherhood Month is commended as a beginning of a race relations program. This should be followed with practical social action.

"All labor unions should practice democracy in control and should not discriminate against any workers because of color or creed. . . .

"Congress should provide that no industry receiving defense contracts shall discriminate in employment against any American citizens on account of race, creed or color.

"We urge the appointment by Congress or the President of a Commission on Unemployment to be composed of representatives of consumers, farmers, labor, finance, manufacturing, commerce, government, education, church, youth and welfare agencies without regard to race or color. . . " in a release last week, hte followwhich the above were reported and recommended to the churches, Negro leaders were active participants. In addition to those listed in release last week, the following were in attendance: Mrs. L. W. Kyles, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Dr. S. S. Morris, Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. George M. Plaskett, Orange, N. J.; Dr. Charles W. Abington, Philadelphia; Dr. Joseph Gomez, Cleveland, O., and Dr. Thomas S. Harten, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Yaba Trained Practitioners (1)

THE Yaba Higher College, like the Achimota College, Gold Coast, is a recognised institution of learning which has set up a prestige that not only justifies its existence but proves that, given the necessary backing, it could come to parity with the standard of efficiency set up by some of the recognised Universities in Europe. With these prospects to its credit, the announcement of the opening up of a medical course attached to the school, was very welcome, as it was considered consistent with the drive for internal development. Not only this. It was also realised that by training Medical Students locally they would be privileged to do more of practical work than would their colleagues in Europe.

Although at the outset a section of the public misconceived Government's efforts in this direction, and held the view that such locally trained students would be half-baked, experience has proved that the scheme was not only justified but that Yaba trained Practitioners have proved themselves equals in every respect with those of their colleagues who had qualified overseas. But strange as it may seem, Government, which initiated the scheme, is consciously or unconsciously encouraging a sort of contempt for the locally trained Practitioner. This arises in the matter of salary and the allocation of responsible posts in the Medical Department, not excluding the denial of certain privileges which are usually enjoyed by overseas trained Practitioners.

According to information to hand, the present scale of salary offered to local Medical Graduates is £160x12 x 20, £240 x15x375. £240x20x360 (twenty six years to reach the maximum). This applies to Assistant Medical Officers. Now, as it would be seen, there is a striking demarcation line between the salary of the qualified Medical Officer from the United Kingdom and that qualified locally. Yaba qualified Practitioners, it is true, were trained with Government's funds and this might seem a good reason for the difference in salary but we certainly are of opinion that in order to maintain the dignity of this profession, the salary should be £240 x12 x274 (for Medical Assistants) and £300x20x600 (for Assistant Medical Officers) respectively. A Bus Trip From Chicago to Deep South

Tulsa, Okla.

Workers Correspondence Dept.:

We had ridden together all the way from Chicago in the cheap bus —"meals and pillows free" — the Negro and his little girl, myself a red-headed Oklahoman who came to the state in the days of free land. He had a litle job, he told me, which barely kept his family alive so that he had to take orders for a mail order shoe concern in the evening to "squeeze by."

Jim Crow

"It will be the first time that my girl will have ever seen her grandparents down in your state," he told me. "I wouldn't want her growing up in the South where she would have to go to a jim-crow school and maybe get taken advantage of when she gets older because she is a colored girl."

All of us in that bus were poor people—people to whom the saving of two or three dollars in meals en route might mean food at the end of the line for a week. We laughed and talked, kidded, and sang songs. Everybody on the bus liked the little girl buying her candy bars on the way and fixing pillows on the hard, worn seat in order that she might take "cat naps" along the way. The child's father, neat in a patched serge suit, was treated with equal respect by the other passengers.

THE OZARKS

We arrived tired and sleepy-eyed at dawn of the first morning in St. Louis, gulping down lumpy oatmeal and brackish coffee for breakfast. We rode on down through the Missouri Ozarks with the wayside bushes showing the first faint buds of spring. We passed gaunt, hungry-looking men and women trudging on the road and carrying sacks of corn meal.

"There's lots of poor people around here,' the Negro remarked to me as I awoke from a doze. "Negroes are not allowed to live back here in lots of these hill counties. When are the people around here going to get wise and learn that everybody is just folks?"

We drove into Oklahoma past abandoned mines with heaps of slag thrown on huge scrap heaps. We crossed the line into Oklahoma —and the Negro moved with his child back to the hard rear seat over the wheels. Negroes may not sit up front in a public conveyance under Oklahoma law.

The child tried to sleep but tossed and whimpered as every motion of the wheels shook her. There were some vacant seats up front. But had the Negro and his child tried to occupy them, he might have been arrested and put to working out a fine on the Oklahoma roads.

The first rest stop was at Claremore, Okla., Will Rogers' old hometown, in a cafe filled with pictures and souvenirs of the cowboy humorists. I went in with the rest of the white passengers for a cup of coffee. For 15 minutes, we relaxed and cracked jokes.

JIM-CROW BEGINS

When I stepped to the washroom, I saw the Negro and his child sitting all by themselves at a jim-crow counter back of the kitchen. Because they were black, they had been debarred from the company of other human beings and treated like those lepers of Biblical times who were not allowed to enter farther than the outskirts of a city.

What would Will Rogers, part Indian and proud of it, have thought of the treatment of members of another dark-skinned race in his home town? What would he have thought also of the attacks upon the Workers Alliance in this city which gave to America a man who became one of its most universal symbols? What would he have thought of the arrests of 12 people in Oklahoma City for "criminal syndicalism." — Will Rogers who spoke the language of the poor all of his life and who preferred his Oklahoma cowpuncher friends to the stuffed elite of Hollywood.'

I cannot believe that the dead come back to pass judgment upon the living. But I believe that the memory of any man beloved of the people condemns any injustice perpetrated upon any individual of any race or color. The Negro and his child—not the jim crow legislators and sheriffs of Oklahoma—are Will Rogers' own kin and the kin of those troubled millions awakening to life down here in the South.

HAD URGED BAN ON ABUSES IN LOCAL COURTS

MAY 24 1941

His Crime Lay In Asking Judges To Abolish Use Of Term 'Nigger'

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — (ANP)—A local newspaper editor was railroaded to the "Blue Jay" city prison farm here, Tuesday on trumped up charges of operating a newspaper without a city license and contempt of court. Arrested, jailed, tried in municipal court before Judge I. Honey Anderson, fined $100 cash and sent to the city prison farm all within a period of a half hour was Spike Washington, who for the past seven months has served as managing editor of the Florida Press, local weekly newspaper publication and member of the Scott Newspaper syndicate of Atlanta, one of the most militant, progressive and outspoken papers ever to be circulated in this city.

Two weeks ago the Florida Press published an editorial urging that the prevalent use of "nigger by police officers, white witnesses and others in municipal court be discontinued.

The story stated that the court had no dignity and urged Judge-Elect, Charles Miller, who defeated Judge Anderson, in the recent April primary election, to discontinue the procedure when he takes over the bench on June 3rd.

MAY 24 1941

Judge Anderson and the municipal license inspector, J. Ray Permenter, were furnished copies of the Press in which the editorial appeared and immediately Washington was sought to appear in court. He was finally reached by telephone and ordered to court on Saturday of last week.

He refused and Tuesday morning two police officers were sent for Washington. He was taken to jail in the "Black Maria," the patrol wogan, and appeared before Judge Anderson and Permenter with his counsel who was hurriedly summoned to court. Court for the day had adjourned but the judge held a special session for the sentencing of the young journalist.

While counsel was arranging to pay the $100, Washington was hurried to the "Blue Jay," where he donned the prison garb, consisting of a ragged pair of blue overalls, an overall jumper with many rags hanging from it, and shoes several sizes too small for him.

Washington was arrested at 10 o'clock in the morning, without a warrant, embarrassed and humiliated because he dared to write the truth about a court which has little respect for the colored citizenry here.

Jim-Crowism As A National Policy

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The issue of jim-crowism as a national policy was dramatically kept to the fore during the last Presidential campaign. Its sinister and ugly significance was exposed. Its benumbing influence intending to reconcile 13,000,000 Negro men, women and children to its baleful effects in the present, and in the long future, was pointed out.

It was shown that the jim-crow unit in Government employment is a device invented by New Dealism to deny Colored persons full and free opportunity to achieve a career in the federal service of the government as well as to prevent them from having any significant or policy-making activity. The net result is practically to eliminate them from all professional and skilled service under the federal government.

It was shown that the jim-crow unit in government employment is a device invented by New Dealism to deny Colored persons full and free opportunity to achieve a career in the Federal service of the government as well as to prevent them from having any significant or policy-making activity. The net result is practically to eliminate them from all professional and skilled service under the federal government.

This stigma by the Roosevelt administration is reserved for colored Americans alone. No such units have been established for other racial groups in the Federal Service. This is the scandal of Washington and of the nation.

The policy is so vindictively mean and vicious that one of the candidates for the Presidency, Wendell Willkie, in his first speech of the campaign, mentioned it, first of all as an issue to be met.

APR 26 1941

He said: "If elected, I will see to it that Jim Crow Departments in the Federal Government and in the Divisions which the New Deal has created by Executive decree are eliminated....and that colored citizens shall be appointed to any branch for which they are qualified."

Gestures of Mitigation

Some few gestures toward mitigation were made by Mr. Roosevelt during the hectic campaign, but the issue was not squarely met. The few jobs dished out momentarily quieted certain elements of the Negro group, but not the intelligent, thinking elements that recognized the wrong and injustices of the whole jim-crow program.

Now comes the American Peoples Meeting, which recently met in New York City, with 5,000 representatives present from 43 states, challenging, as reported by National Negro Congress headquarters, "the right of the Roosevelt Government to establish jim-crowism as a national policy in the Armed Services, the job life, and the political life of the country."

This un-American policy, nurtured and promoted by the Roosevelt administration in Federal employment, has found its way into defense industries now manufacturing the implements which are to constitute "the arsenal of democracy.

APR 26 1941

Alien Sabotage

Henry Wallace, Vice President of the United States, was moved to indignation in an address in the South last week when he declared that alien sabotage is interfering with the production of arms, forgetting and overlooking the apparent and well designed policy of the administration, industry and labor to hire and coddle aliens in industrial employments while callously refusing opportunities to able, skilled, eager, willing and suffering Negro citizens who have a real stake in this government of ours—the only one they have known and supported by arms, by taxes and by long continued loyalty.

The time has arrived for name-calling and blame placing. It all "heads back" to the Roosevelt administration. The Negro press has pictured William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the Office of Production Management, serving directly under the President as being adamant to refusing to crack down on those planth which have been awarded millions upon millions in defense contracts which specifically interdict discrimination in employment on account of race, creed, color or sex.

And all of this while plaintive cries are being publicized calling attention to serious shortages in man power in defense industry.

Ironically, one of the loudest of these cries is from the Naval Occupational Adviser to the Maritime Commission, which has called a conference here in Washington on April 28, to discuss present and impending shortages.

And, in the meantime, Secretary Knox and Naval officials are being kept busy writing letters advising that no Negroes will or can be employed in the Navy "for the good of the service."

Uphold Unholy Tradition

It is a fair conclusion that these gentry would much rather uphold the unroly tradition that Negroes shall only serve as messmen in the Navy than open the doors of opportunity to this group of citizens for training as firemen and engineers in the transport service and other branches where they would quickly qualify to meet whatever the exacting requirements may be.

It is no longer a secret that government officials are greatly and visibly disturbed because of the large numbers of Communists, aliens and saboteurs now employed in the federal service and in industry who are threatening general strikes of one kind and another.

But they are not disturbed enough to throw overboard the ancient prejudices which effectually bar men of loyal blood and tradition, who love America and who would efficiently serve the needs of the nation if only granted the privilege and opportunity Must some greater emergency arise by reason of the troubles now existing and threatened before they awake to the possibilities of -national disaster?

Senator Glass Wants Negroes to Have 'Freedom'

MAY 24 1941

Another committee has been organized in the United States "to fight for America." The Honorary Chairman of this Committee is Senator Carter Glass of the State of Virginia. The names of other Southerners also appear in An Appeal to Colored Citizens to join this Committee in its fight for what it calls "Freedom."

Quite properly the Committee asks: "Freedom for whom? It must be freedom for all men. Since the Declaration of Independence, the American tradition has been one of justice and dignity for all. . . .

"Now dark danger threatens. If we are to be worthy of saving democracy from Nazism, we must prove ourselves worthy of building it more perfectly at home. Nobody knows better than the American Negro the vanity of promises made in an hour of peril but left unrealized when the peril has passed.

"During the last war," the Committee declares, "we made brave promises of inter-racial justice—after the war would be over. The promises were forgotten. Today we must prove as we march towards war that we mean to advance freedom for ALL men here in America."

A new day has come to America if Senator Carter Glass and the other Southerners who have joined with many liberals in signing this appeal addressed directly to the Negro people, mean what they say!

MAY 24 1941

Truth to tell, —the "American tradition" has been one of justice and dignity for all. However, in the past, this tradition has never been interpreted by such Southerners as Senator Carter Glass and others of the democratic South as including Negro citizens.

Fervently, it is to be hoped that now since "dark danger threatens" and it becomes necessary to address an appeal directly to Colored men and women that Senator Glass and the Southern contingent in Congress,—Senators and Representatives alike, may recognize this new day and earnestly strive to establish it in this country,—not only the tradition of justice and dignity for all.

The Negro people of the United States have not forgotten that, as Senator Glass' Committee declares—"During the last war we made brave promises of inter-racial justice—after the war would be over," only to forget those promises and to unload on Colored citizens embittered discriminations, prejudices and injustices unworthy of those who wrap themselves in the habiliments of freedom and democracy.

This is too perilous a time for even exhalted persons of the class of Senator Glass to be selling another load of gold bricks to Negroes.

There is no threat of disloyalty or sabotage on the part of Negroes. They stand loyally behind the Government in whatever decisions it may reach.

These Colored citizens, however, are now disposed to ask for a little bit more of justice and cooperation as they struggle for the privileges of true democracy.

Wasted Idleness, Economic and Racial Discrimination Attacked as Labor and Industry Fail to Get Together for Common Good.

MAY 17 1941

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, May 15—One of the tragedies of these muddled days is the woeful losses which have been sustained by Labor, by Industry, and by Government these first four months of the current year.

During the more than eight years of the present administration, when 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 men and women were without employment, there was constant cry and demand for the Government "to do something about it."

GOVERNMENT PUMP-PRIMING

Pump-priming, as it was called, was tried, with heavy expenditures in the billions through WPA, PWA, FERA, CCC, NYA, FHA, AAA, USHA, Rural Electrification, Farm Security, and numberless others. Secretary Morgenthau, at one time, made report to Congress of 30 Government lending agencies alone.

These, and the alphabetical agencies above mentioned were busily engaged in drawing money from the U. S. Treasury. The announced purpose being to relieve distress and misery, and to provide employment even of uncertain character for persons who were unable to secure regular work in Industry.

CLAIMS A CHAOTIC SITUATION CREATED

And then came the War Scare and the Lend-Lease Bill, with provision for Federal appropriations for defense reaching up to, and going beyond, $10,000,000,000 with the finals not yet computable. This is to be added to regular Budget appropriations.

Naturally, it was thought, these defense employments, while but artificially stimulating recovery, would be eagerly seized upon, with resultant happiness in hundreds and thousands of homes throughout the land.

Instead, there has followed a chaotic situation involving misunderstandings, confusion and disorder, with the forces of Labor and Industry sharply divided, and the Goverment's Defense Program halted and hindered, bottle-necked and throttled.

STIMULATED PROSPERITY

The return of this stimulated prosperity has given rise to many actions, which, at least, can be referred to now only as being discouraging and disheartening. These embattled forces, with all the troubles inherent in their disputes, were also called upon to face the question as to whether men of dark complexion should also be permitted to share in the golden harvest of dollars released by the Treasury to make secure the freedom, the liberty and the security of the Nation.

Men, who themselves for years had suffered, their wives and children along with them, overnight became militantly ungenerous in blocking the efforts of these others to share in the privileges and opportunities of the hour.

ADEQUATE DEFENSE EFFORTS GO AWRY

And all the while, the well-intentioned plans of the Army and Navy for adequate defense were going awry.

Employment turned to idleness has been a costly thing. Pictured interms of delay and upset production plans, it has interfered with the uninterrupted utilization of the best energies of all of our people.

National cooperation, so necessary to the attainment of the ends sought by Congress and the enlightened wisdom of the country, has been prevented.

WASTED IDLENESS

This wasted idleness, for instance, has meant, in one case alone, never-to-be recovered man-days irrevocably lost in providing 12,000 giant cannon-carrying tanks worth $500,000,000.

Bombing planes, guns and munitions have also failed to come through.

To state it another way, the time wasted on production is the same as if 50,000 men regularly employed had suddenly quit their work for a whole year of 12 months.

Devastating as this has been to the welfare and losses of white labor, it is tragedy magnified to Negro labor. It has had no substantial look-in at all.

Even a portion of these 13,000,000 man-days wasted and lost would have provided opportunities for these eager people who wish, along with their fellow-Americans, to save our country from the destruction and perils which threaten it.

More than that, Relief Rolls would be lessened, non-defense expenditures reduced and self-respect restored to that all-too-large, proportionately high and excessive number of the Negro group who have been kept out of jobs by the New Deal Depression.

ECONOMIC AND RACIAL DISCRIMINATIONS

The economic, racial discriminations practiced all these years have confined these people to a separate relief economy, and has served permanently to shunt them out of the normal productive employments of the country.

They, too, wish to share in progressive living standards and family security. They know and recognize the fact and wish their country to recognize it, that human need is human need whether the complexion be white, black, yellow, red or brown.

STIMULATED PROSPERITY

The return of this stimulated prosperity has given rise to many actions, which, at least, can be referred to now only as being discouraging and disheartening. These embattled forces, with all the troubles inherent in their disputes, were also called upon to face the question as to whether men of dark complexion should also be permitted to share in the golden harvest of dollars released by the Treasury to make secure the freedom, the liberty and the security of the Nation.

Men, who themselves for years had suffered, their wives and children along with them, overnight became militantly ungenerous in blocking the efforts of these others to share in the privileges and opportunities of the hour.

ADEQUATE DEFENSE EFFORTS GO AWRY

And all the while, the well-intentioned plans of the Army and Navy for adequate defense were going awry.

Employment turned to idleness has been a costly thing. Pictured interms of delay and upset production plans, it has interfered with the uninterrupted utilization of the best energies of all of our people.

National cooperation, so necessary to the attainment of the ends sought by Congress and the enlightened wisdom of the country, has been prevented.

WASTED IDLENESS

This wasted idleness, for instance, has meant, in one case alone, never-to-be recovered man-days irrevocably lost in providing 12,000 giant cannon-carrying tanks worth $500,000,000.

Bombing planes, guns and munitions have also failed to come through.

To state it another way, the time wasted on production is the same as if 50,000 men regularly employed had suddenly quit their work for a whole year of 12 months.

Devastating as this has been to the welfare and losses of white labor, it is tragedy magnified to Negro labor. It has had no substantial look-in at all.

Even a portion of these 13,000,000 man-days wasted and lost would have provided opportunities for these eager people who wish, along with their fellow-Americans, to save our country from the destruction and perils which threaten it.

More than that, Relief Rolls would be lessened, non-defense expenditures reduced and self-respect restored to that all-too-large, proportionately high and excessive number of the Negro group who have been kept out of jobs by the New Deal Depression.

ECONOMIC AND RACIAL DISCRIMINATIONS

The economic, racial discriminations practiced all these years have confined these people to a separate relief economy, and has served permanently to shunt them out of the normal productive employments of the country.

They, too, wish to share in progressive living standards and family security. They know and recognize the fact and wish their country to recognize it, that human need is human need whether the complexion be white, black, yellow, red or brown.

"Democracy Only As Strong As Each Individual Link!"

By HILLIARD R. JOHNSON

One of the greatest enemies of a democracy, or any democratic way of life, is its intolerant attitude toward minority groups. If discriminating practices were ceased, if racial prejudice was outlawed, and if some of the emphasis placed on the color of a man's skin were shifted to concern over the patriotic intelligence mothered by native minorities, it would mean more to democracy than any previous step taken to achieve an ideal democratic state. With the removal of this enemy would come real christian brotherhood, a true democracy, and a lasting peace.

A democracy is a chain made up of the desires, principles, laws, morals, and economics of the whole of the peoples. It is only so strong as each individual link is strong. Each link must be molded to weather the onslaughts of the corrupt, the unjust and intolerant, the arrogant, and the evil aggressor. This chain, in order to accomplish its purpose, must have imbedded in its character—unity. All basic foundations must be earmarked with the sterling good metals of reliance, a oneness of purpose, and a do or die spirit of resistance, if this way of life is to live; is to be preserved.

If democracy is to be saved, it first becomes necessary to adhere to the true principles of democracy devoid of hypocrisy. The whole people must realize that the whole is dependent upon each integral part that makes up the democratic machine, and that each part is as essential as the other. That if one part be neglected and the other favored, inefficiency of operation will result. A machine which will not operate efficiently will soon be discarded and disposed of as scrap. And there are too many dealers in scrap commodities to allow an otherwise useful article which, save for a few repairs, could be quite capable of satisfying a natural urge—an urge to be free, and secu

Minneapolis Local Smashes Red-Baiting

FEB 3 1941

Minneapolis, Minn.

Workers Correspondence Dept.:

Despite of a campaign by the opposition on red-baiting, Negro-baiting and opposition to foreign born, the progressives in the militant Hotel and Restaurant Workers No. 665, A. F. of L. Minneapolis, won by a decisive majority in the recent elections.

The membership in their vote of three to one showed their understanding of the present day issues and repudiated any tendency towards an employer-dominated union.

NEGRO ELECTED

The opposition to the progressive leadership was built around a small clique promoted by the bosses who felt in the present war hysteria these issues could be used most effectively. In this respect they were helped by the Trotzkyites in the labor movement.

FEB 3 1941

In spite of the race-baiting a Negro running for Vice-President on the progressive slate was elected by the highest vote of all the candidates elected. The local learned a lesson in the fact that they cannot rest on laurels achieved in the past for the enemies of organized labor are always looking for opportunities to smash progressive organizations and continuously at work.

New Masses Publishes Photographic Essay On Conditions Among Black Folks of South

FEB 8 1941

NEW YORK CITY—"Our way of life—what does it mean if your skin is black?" is the title of a series of photographs taken in the Deep South and published in the January 28th issue of New Masses.

A staff photographer travelled through South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Alabama and North Carolina for typical scenes in Negro communities, several of which are reproduced with descriptive comment in the progressive weekly magazine.

TYPE OF PHOTOS

The photographs show a typical street scene in Georgia, with "White Only" signs indicating the Jim Crow local laws. "I don't go in the stores," says the Negro who walks past this sign. "Not in this part o' town, but they can't stop me from walking the streets."

Another scene is a shape-up for work in Alabama, with a score of young men waiting outside factory gates. "All we want is work, that's all," they say. "Maybe you folks know where us black fellows can get work. All we want is work, that's all."

VIRGINIA WORKERS

Then there is a pose of tobacco workers of Virginia, with the caption: "I bin dying for a smoke. Glad you offered. I was afraid to ask. It's funny working tobacco and not owning a butt."

From South Carolina is a picture of a man reading a book. "I can read," he says. "I can read books, too. I once bought seven dollars worth of books, real ones, the Bible and 'Our War for Human Rights?' All good folks have the Bible, but I can read it." A full page picture of a young mother completes the photographic visit to the Southland.

"Last to be hired, first to be fired, the poorest houses, the highest rents," says the New Masses, "the Negro is Jim Crowed, persecuted, disfranchised, lynched—this is 'our way of life' for thirteen million black Americans.

FEB 8 1941

"Why go to Germany to find racism and fascism? Hitler merely imitates the bourbons of our own South. And they are not in the South alone. Is this what thirteen million Negroes are asked to defend? Is this what liberty-loving white Americans are asked to defend?"

HOW DOES THE UNITED STATES FEEL ABOUT HAILE SELASSIE

JAN 31 1941

The United States is working with full speed ahead to give aid to Great Britain in order to defeat the Axis powers. The president of the United States has defied all dictators and has made our nation an arsenal for Great Britain to carry on the war against the Axis powers. We wonder if the United States plans to give any assistance to Ethiopia. Haile Selassie is in partnership with Great Britain and is fighting against the Axis powers and is in great need of aid. A little more than four years ago Haile Selassie was forced to flee before the invading hordes of Mussolini, the dictator of Italy. But a few weeks ago the deposed Emperor emerged from his mountain hide-out to take the lead in a revolt against Mussolini and the Italian Blackshirts. When he landed in Ethiopia, he was riding in a British army plane, according to reports. And it seems as if Britain is giving Haile Selassie aid which, if it had been given four years ago, would have kept the Axis powers from starting on their rampage.

As the war progresses, and the darker races of Europe become more involved, it is well to take note of several points. In the first place, England ignored Haile Selassie when he really needed aid four years ago. But now England seems anxious to give all possible aid to Selassie. England is now talking of a United Africa, and we wonder if England has in mind to make Africa free—to bring about the same freedom in Africa as that for which Great Britain is fighting. Or does England just mean a United Africa set up for the purpose of defeating Hitler and Mussolini? Will England's attitude toward Ethiopia be the same when the war is over as it was following the last world war? It is remembered that, during the last war, promises were made but were broken to the darker races of Europe. And if one is to make a prediction based upon past experience, it might be safe to say that Ethiopia will not be in the highly touted Federated Union which is expected to emerge when the present European war is over. The United States stands as a big brother to all anti-Axis groups, but so far we have heard of no aid given to Ethiopia and we ask this question: When and in what manner will the United States give aid to Selassie in his great campaign to stop the Axis powers?

Experiments Reveal Chemical Which Turns Negroes White

World-Telegram JAN 31 1941

Special to the World-Telegram.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—A chemical which in many cases causes the skins of Negroes to turn white has been found by the United States Public Health Service in a series of experiments over nearly two years.

The social implications of this discovery, should it lead to commercial use of such a product, are obvious. Health officials are reluctant to discuss it in commercial terms.

New York N.Y.

It is pointed out that before there could be any general application of the principle there would have to be carefully controlled experimentation over a substantial part of a lifetime.

JAN 31 1941

Loss of skin color, or depigmentation, has been traced to an antioxidant called monobenzyl ether of hydroquinone, which heretofore has been used in rubber to retard oxidation. The discovery resulted from depigmentation which occurred among Negro and white employees of a Midwest tannery who wore rubber gloves containing two-tenths of one per cent of this chemical. Restoration of color eventually occurs, but very slowly.

The experimentation has been carried on and directed by Dr. Louis Schwartz, medical director of the Public Health Service.

White Spots Appear.

The interest of the Public Health Service in its experimentation, officials said, was only to find out what had caused the unusual skin condition and to inform the manufacturers of rubber gloves not to use the chemical further.

But experiments are being made by feeding quantities of the chemical to certain animals in an effort to determine its effect over an entire body. In the cases of the tannery workers depigmentation occurred only where the rubber gloves were in contact with the skin.

The tannery workers began to complain in September, 1938, that white spots were appearing on forearm and hand areas covered by the rubber gloves furnished them by the factory. The workmen were said to have been wearing a heavy gauntlet type of rubber glove with curved fingers.

In some instances most of the skin covered by the gloves became depigmented; in others it was only spotted with areas of leukoderma or skin-whitening. A few developed leukoderma on parts of the body not covered by the gloves but which could have been touched by them.

Bureau Consulted.

The tannery management discontinued use of the glove, consulted the Department of Leather Research of the University of Cincinnati, which referred the matter to the Public Health Service on May 16, 1939. About the same time representatives of the glove manufacturer consulted the Public Health Service's Office of Dermatoses Investigations.

About a month later another tannery reported that Negro and white workers had depigmentation in areas covered by the rubber gauntlets (in white workers depigmentation sometimes caused skin to become whiter). Since the first two reports similar reports came from other industries using the rubber gloves of the same manufacturer.

At a second tannery 16 workers were found with leukoderma on parts touched by the rubber gloves purchased from the same rubber company as in the case of the first tannery.

While Public Health officials were reluctant to discuss general application of the chemical, a report by Dr. Schwartz comments that "the possibility of using antioxidants for the depigmentation of hyperpigmented areas of the skin (spots) is suggested."

Three Notable Addresses

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

Three notable addresses were made here in Washington last week. Each sought to stress, and, more definitely, to define this thing we call democracy. They each came from high quarters—from the President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and a high-ranking member of the United States Senate.

In substance and form and eloquence of statement, the three addresses rang high, very high.

Coming from such high quarters they deservedly challenged the attention of the country and the world. They dealt with the fundamental concepts of our democracy, and were surcharged with patriotic purpose and social vision.

They set forth ideas and ideals, which, if lived up to, would bring about in this country of ours, a philosophy of living, a way of peace, and, in truth and in fact, a "government dedicated to the proposition that the rich and the poor alike stand upon common ground; that each has equal rights as well as equal opportunities; and that, each is entitled to the full protection of his government in the preservation of the priceless rights and priviliges of citizenship."

Racial Prejudices and Bigotries

The realization of these ideals in America is at present prevented mainly by racial and bigotries. These prejudices and bigotries fall with threatening impact day by day, year in and year out, upon the hapless heads of the great masses of one particular group of our American citizenship—the Negro group.

Chief Justice Hughes spoke with unaccustomed bluntness when, in his address, calling for the improvement of human relations in America, he said that "liberty cannot be preserved by majority rule unless the majority hold sacred basic individual rights regardless of race or creed," so that there may be "an abiding sense of human dignity and worth —and friendly cooperation in pursuit of common ideals and justice."

In further comment, and following up this thought, he emphasized the fact that "rancor and bigotry, racial animosity and intolerance are wholly incompatible with that cooperation because they undermine the very foundation of democratic effort."

JAN 1 1 1941

The Consent of the Governed

In his addess to the nation, Mr. Roosevelt referred to the totalitarian dictators as seeking to set up a "new order," and, by implication, spoke of our country as having a government "based upon the consent of the governed."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the third notable to speak during the week, declared that "while we sympathize with the oppressed and persecuted peoples of the world, we realize that we have great problems at home; that one-third of our population is illfed, ill-housed and ill-clad. We have been told repeatedly," he said, "upon the highest authority, that unless and until this situation is corrected our democracy is endangered."

The thesis of his remarks revolved around the sentiment that we should settle our own problems before we undertake to settle the problems of Asia, Africa, Australia, South America and Europe. He declared that the best way to safeguard our independence and freedom in America is to set our own house in order.

Colored Americans Baffled

Colored Americans who have read these speeches, and hundreds of others like them, are baffled and confused. They know that thousands and thousands, yea millions, of their fellows are ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad in this rich country of ours, and that they remain so after years and years of billion-dollar spendings. They are kept from employment in industry with regular wages, and that their color alone condemns them to the lower and lowest levels of living.

They know that in some eleven States of our union, the so-called Solid-South, the principle of government by consent of the governed does not apply to them. They know that they are disfranchised and subjected to economic and racial repressions and oppressions and generally decitizenized.

Because of these things they know that a gnawing cancer is eating at the vitals of American democracy and that these things "undermine the very foundation of democratic effort."

JAN 1 1 1941

A Call for Sincerity

They are baffled and confused, and view with extreme skepticism the prattlings of those who declaim so loudly and so eloquently as they pay tribute to the blessings of liberty, freedom and democray in a republican form of government.

They wonder why the enlightened, Christian citizenship of this country, and our American statemen, do not rise up, denounce, and expose present-day hypocrisies which are threatening the very foundation of true democracy.

An ounce of sincerity of purpose to do away with these proscriptions will outweigt a ton of abstraction and pretense. It will hearten and encourage the 12,000 000 men, women and children of the Negro group in the United States, and contribute to that national unity so much needed and desired during these perilous days.

Texas White Girl On Southern Policy

APR 5 - 1941

(Special for Guardian)

APR 5 - 1941

HOUSTON, Texas—A young Texas white girl contributed a sensational front page article in the Houston Informer, colored weekly, here in the deep south last week. Name unsigned, the article was entirely unsolicited:

"KNOW MENIALS—It is high time that we faced such vital problems as the black man's with perspective. Southerners claim to 'know the Negro'—they only know colored menials, and that knowledge is superficial and limited" said the article. "It seems logical that reform in this line will be largely accomplished by youth. It is this generation and our descendants who will finally put aside anachronistic, unjust tradition and refuse to have a good citizen deprived of any phase of the franchise or complete enjoyment of life, liberty, or property on account of color. . ."

Hitler, Boyle, Crump and Memphis

Maybe we ought to be greatly excited because that section of the Bill of Rights guaranteeing the freedom of the press is being trodden underfoot down in Memphis, Tenn. Somehow or other we aren't.

Last week Memphis's Police Chief Joe Boyle, white, called the editors of two colored newspapers into his office and forbade them to tell the truth about the shenanigans of the cops in the colored section.

It seems as though Memphis's Democratic boss, Ed Crump, also white, having successfully help elect Roosevelt President in the campaign last fall, has given orders to Boyle to chase the colored G.O.P. leaders out of town.

One of these leaders was Dr. J. B. Martin, and Boyle sent coppers to stand outside Martin's drug store and search every customer who sought to enter. Those who insisted on their right to make purchases were "pushed around" by Boyle's police.

Dr. Martin was forced to flee to Chicago for safety. The temper of the people was such, however, that the store is still open and customers still patronize it despite Boyle's police.

The right to be secure in one's property, the right to vote, the right to a trial by a jury of one's peers, the right to attend non-segregated schools, and ride Pullman trains are as much a part of the Constitution as the right of a free press.

And the Constitution has been kicked around in Memphis and the rest of the South for so long that we fail now to get excited about any new evidences of the South's lawlessness.

Hitler and all his gang are with us in the Crumps and the Boyles of Memphis. Jim crow in Dixie and Hitlerism in Germany are one and the same thing—only the names differ.

Youth Congress Leader Protests Persecution In Letter To F.D.R.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The attempts of Memphis machine politicians to drive leading Negro citizens out of the city, the interference by police with Negro business establishments, and the threats and slander heaped upon individual Negro citizens by public officials of that city since the last elections were the subject of an open letter to President Roosevelt from the Southern Negro Youth Congress, asking that the Federal Government intervene to protect the lives and property of Negro residents.

The letter, signed by Edward Strong, Congress secretary, referred to Police Commissioner Boyle of Memphis who recently declared, "This is a white man's country, and always will be, and any Negro who doesn't agree to this better move on." This statement, Strong declared, was an incitement to violence against the Negroes of the city. He indicated that behind the situation in Memphis was the attempt to force Negroes to vote for only those candidates endorsed by the machine of "Boss" Ed Crump.

The letter said, in part: "There is documentary evidence available to... warrant a Federal investigation of the Crump machine. There is being established in Tennessee an American Fascist stronghold with its hatreds, enmity to labor, and suppression of speech and press."

BOYLE BANS NEGROES FROM RACIAL PARLEY

Only White Committeemen Will Be Permitted At Conference Today

JAN 30 1941

Commissioner Boyle yesterday afternoon notified the Memphis Commission for Interracial Co-operation that he would meet with them to discuss better white-negro relations in Memphis, but that the conference would be limited to the commission's white minister members only.

His notice was sent to Dr. Sam E. Howie, president of the commission, and pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, by special delivery letter.

Meeting This Afternoon

The meeting will be held in Mayor Chandler's office at 3 o'clock this afternoon with the Mayor and Commissioner Boyle representing the city.

The letter was in answer to a renewed request by a special committee appointed by the commission for a conference with city officials on the question of better racial relations, for which the commission was organized.

The commission's last request for such a conference met a firm refusal from Commissioner Boyle, the commissioner pointing out that he considered certain commission members inimical to better racial relations here.

The commission Monday announced its plans for a mass meeting of whites and negroes here in February to promote improved racial relations, with Dr. Will W. Alexander, executive secretary of the national C. I. C., and administrator of the Farm Security Administration, as principal speaker.

Boyle Letter Quoted

Commissioner Boyle's letter to Dr. Howie follows:

"Rev. S. E. Howie, D. D.
Chairman of the Interracial Co-operation Committee,
1233 Lamar Avenue,
Memphis, Tennessee.

"Dear Sir:

"It is true I declined to discuss the racial question with your committee and wrote you giving my reasons, that some of the newspaper negroes on your committee for many months had been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present relations between the white and colored race in this community; and told you that Z. L. Bonner had lost his pob at the post office for failing to account for some money.

"We have no race trouble here, and there will be none unless some foolish, misguided persons are determined with the help of outsiders to foment strife. Negroes are given every opportunity to engage in any honest endeavor. They will not be disturbed, but to the contrary will be given all possible encouragement. But when they go down to a church meeting of their own bishops, and start a cry of fire, so that they may rob, the police will take a very decided hand. Likewise, they will interefere when a bad crowd starts fighting with pistols and knives, as they did at the annual football game between the Booker T. Washington and Manassas High Schools. And that interference is for the benefit of the great majority of honest and law abiding negroes.

"I enumerated in my letter to things that had been done for the negroes in Memphis and Shelby County.

"Those benefits have come from constant study and collaboration on the part of Mayor Chandler, Mr. E. H. Crump, Mr. E. W. Hale and others of us in City and County Government, and I am certain they will continue to help the colored people whenever and wherever possible.

"If some of you have resided time, and necessarily are ignorant of real conditions that exist in a large city night and day, intend to attend these social meetings merely as an outlet for oratory, and propose to import an anti-lynching speaker to the city, it will only stir up bitter feeling, and will certainly do no good to this community, only a lot of harm. We never have condoned or permitted anyone to be lynched and our entire police force would be used to prevent such an act.

"If you white ministers desire to confer with me, I will be pleased to meet with you.

Respectfully yours truly,
JOE BOYLE,
Commisscioner of Public Safety.

The. Rev Alfred Loaring-Clark, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, is chairman of the committee named to confer with Commissioner Boyle.

The Commission is asking all churches in the city to observe Feb. 9 as "Race Relations Sunday," a 19-year old movement sponsored by the Federated Council of Churches in America.

MEMPHIS POLICE

Since the national elections last November, the Memphis police, acting under the urging of a political dictator, have instituted a veritable reign of terror against the Negroes of that city.

Where threats and other coercive means of intimidation fail, they resort to the well known Nazi technique of mass arrests to harass and cow members of the black population. There remains only one thing for the police to do to complete the German pattern—that is to huddle their victims into a concentration camp.

That they have not taken this step is not for reason of decency or respect for civil rights, but because the eyes of the nation are focused upon them, and because the Negroes themselves have stiffened their resistance. The situation is yet tense and may flare up any moment into unrestrained violence.

This antagonism which is being fanned by the local authorities is a sort of reprisal against Memphis Negroes who voted a Republican ticket in the November elections.

The trouble started when Dr. J. B. Martin, head of the Shelby County Republican organization and operator of a large drug store was warned sometime before the elections that if he insisted on staging a Willkie meeting, his drug store would be picketed. Well, the meeting was staged, and the drug store was picketed day and night.

All patrons including ministers, physicians and even school children who entered the store were subjected to a minute search. Rather than be humiliated by these indignities, the people simply stopped patronizing Dr. Martin's place. The result, of course, was the drug store went out of business and Dr. Martin was driven out of town.

This happened right here in America, the land of the free and of the brave. Here, where democracy is girding itself to stage a last-ditch fight, one would scarcely expect to find a glaring contradiction in the form of reprisals against those who dared to exercise their political rights.

The right to vote for a political candidate of one's own choice is a major feature of democracy—a feature that distinguishes it from the corrupt philosophy of the authoritarian states. To deny or frustrate that principle is tantamount to destroying the central pillar on which rests the temple.

Memphis, with an ignorant police commissioner and a vest pocket edition of Hitler, is doing its share toward the demolition of the temple of democracy. When its chief of police said:

"That is a white man's country, and always will be, and any Negro who doesn't agree to this better move on."

He was giving a convincing demonstration of what happens to authority when it is conferred uncritically upon stupid and arrogant people. One thing is certain—only Memphis would have him for a police commissioner.

HOLY JOE TO START CLEAN-UP

Plans to Rid Memphis of "Negro Undesirables" — Cops Ride Street Cars to Tell Us Where to Sit.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 23—Police Commissioner "Holy Joe" Boyle announced Thursday renewal here on an intensive scale, of a campaign launched early in December which he said was being conducted for the purpose of ridding the city of "Negro undesirables," and resulted in the arrest of several hundred Negroes on charges of carrying pistols and knives.

"I announced before the holiday season that after the first of the year I would start a general roundup of all loafing, worthless, knife and pistol-toting Negroes, young and old," the Commissioner said. "We are beginning that drive." For several days, it was stated, police had been checking "Negro dives" throughout the city, "where lawlessness has been known to exist," and arresting "Negro undesirables."

Declaring that he had recently received complaints of "Negro impudence" on city street cars and buses, Commissioner Boyle said policemen have been assigned to duty on them "to prevent disturbances and to tell the Negroes that they must not feel at liberty to sit one in a seat until they go clear to the front of the vehicle."

Stating, "We are not going to have any race trouble here," the Commisioner commented that "the best way to avoid it is to let these fresh upstart Negroes know their places. We have too many good, hard-working and honest Negroes for the few bad ones to pull them down."

The Commissioner's announcement followed publication of a statement quoting Department of Justice officials in Washington as saying no violation of civil liberties had been disclosed by investigation of a complaint of police discrimination against Negroes here, and that the conclusion had been reached there was no ground for Federal intervention.

FREEDOM FOR ALL

WHEN COLUMBUS crossed the Atlantic in search of the new world one of his ships, the "Nina", was captained by a Negro, Alonzo Pietro. Also the record shows that one Negro, Nuffo de Alamo, accompanied Balboa on his tour of discovery to the South Seas in 1513. Also the record shows that when the Spaniards explored the Pacific Ocean there were some twenty-five or thirty Negroes in the party. Colored men took part in the discovery of Guatemala and were present during the conquest of Chile, Venezuela and Peru. The record also shows that in 1565 Mendez had a black company with him when he founded St. Augustine.

One cannot study history and leave the colored man out because it will be found that everywhere the white man planted his feet, footsteps were also made by black men. American history is not complete when the black man is omitted. Such exciting events as the Gold Rush in California in 1843 and the discovery of the North Pole did not go down in history without the footprints of Negroes.

The Negro laid claim to American citizenship by early demonstrating his desire for freedom through his deeds of heroism, loyalty and willingness to defend this country with his blood. It was a black man, Crispus Attucks, who was first to sacrifice his life in the American revolution at the Boston massacre in 1770. For us to relate what the Negro has contributed in the time of war would only force upon the readers of this newspaper reading material with which they are already familiar. So we will not go into details.

The Negro in America has a right to the same freedom as any other race of people, and no man nor group of human beings have a right to deprive him of that freedom. There is no justification in limiting the ability of a man or a race of people because of color. Last week when the president of the North American Aviation, Inc., J. H. Kindelberger, made the statement that regardless of Negroes' training they would not be given employment because of a policy the company has of not hiring Negroes, he challenged twelve million Negroes, not only as aircraft workers but as human beings desiring to display their abilities in every walk of human endeavor. His statement put a limitation on every Negro boy and girl in our schools and colleges today. His statement meant to twelve million black people of America just this: You are black, you are a Negro, you are of African descent, you can go so far and no farther. There is no need of trying because we have the standard set and we will not let you by. This statement and policy is un-American in every sense of the word, and we are glad to know that there are Negroes who have the courage and backbone to stand up and refute such a statement.

MAR 28 1941

The Negro is being drafted into military trainnig under the Selective Service Act just as other Americans. He will be called on to die if this country should go to war. "In the midst of battle," as our eminent governor, Payne H. Ratner of Kansas, once said, "there is no discrimination. Bullets know no color line. They will mow down the white boys and the colored boys alike. When I was in France during the last World War I saw the blood of black men and white men flow down the battlefield, and you could not tell one from the other. And it was there I realized that if a colored man is good enough to die for this nation he is good enough to be respected and be a citizen."

MAR 28 1941

The Negro has no intentions of ever being disloyal or ever joining the ranks of the Fifth Columnists. But he desires the same freedom as other American citizens. The demand made by Negroes is not a radical one, but one which is justifiable in his own defense for freedom. The Negroes of America are just as anxious to see Hitler stopped in Germany as any other American citizen, and they will help stop him when called upon. But at the same time they desire to stop Hitlerism in this nation in order that they might enjoy freedom and become a part of this democracy which we fight to save.

The Negro is not a tramp; he is not an alien, and neither is he an immigrant. He is an American citizen in every sense of the word, and has a record unblemished as a loyal citizen to the Stars and Stripes. Such people as these should have every protection possible from the Federal Government. Whitewash Of Memphis Terror By U. S. Expected

MEMPHIS — (ANP)—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, special assistant to the United States attorney general in Washington, spent two days here last week reputedly investigating complaints which the attorney general's office had received, charging police discrimination against Negroes in Memphis.

The complaints grew out of the rough treatment, mass arrests and public announcements by the Memphis police department directed at Negroes; and the policing of Dr. J. B. Martin's drug store, where for weeks every customer who entered was subjected to search and similar indignities by policemen stationed at its door.

The activities of the Memphis police are said to have been ordered by Boss Edward H. Crump, political dictator of Memphis, in retaliation for the staging of a Willkie meeting during the presidential campaign last fall by the Shelby County Republican organization of which Dr. Martin is the head.

Colonel Woodcock, the federal investigator, is said to have interviewed the chief of police and the local United States district attorney, William McLanahan. He talked to no Negroes as far as can be learned and how he was able to get an accurate picture of the treatment which Negro businessmen and citizens were receiving from his room at the Hotel Peabody where Negroes go only as servants, has not been explained.

Colonel Woodcock returned to Washington but daily newspapers reported that he would declare that the evidence was insufficient for any action on the part of the government.

Boss Crump, who, though retired from political office, rules Memphis with an iron hand and who is supposed to have issued orders to his police chief "Holy Joe" Boyle to crack down on Negroes, was contemptuous of the federal investigator's visit.

In a letter to a local daily he de-

It's A Fake! No Crepe On Drapes On Beale St.

JAN 10 1941

MEMPHIS—(ANP)—Beale street's coterie of snappy dressers were relieved Saturday when they learned reports of a police ban on the extreme English drape suits were a fake.

But they were not half so relieved as were Memphis merchants who sent a committee to call on Mayor Chandler and investigate these reports. They were being hurt financially, for customers told them such a ban existed and were not going to buy any more highwaisted trousers and long coats.

The report also had it that the large wide brim hats which go along with these extreme drapes were also on the police blacklist.

But both Mayor Chandler and Police Chief Carroll Seabrook denied any such order existed. This ban, according to reports, was a precaution against carrying of firearms.

"The police department has issued no order whatsoever regulating the clothes or hats which any person chooses to wear," said Seabrook. "Several inquiries have been received as to such an order and it is evident that some malicious minded person, or persons, have spread this false rumor but any such statement is ridiculous and absurd."

What lent credence to the report on Beale street was the knowledge that local police might be capable of anything following the long picketing of Dr. J. B. Martin's drug store, the issuance by Commissioner Boyle of a list of Negroes who were allegedly "trying to stir up racial trouble" and Boyle's statement that "this is a white man's country."

Discovers Chemical That Will Turn Skin Of Negroes White

FEB 6 1941

U. S. Public Health Service Tells of Formula

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Discovery of a mysterious chemical that causes the skin of Negroes to turn white has been made by the United States Public Health Service in was disclosed this week. The solution has been developed following a series of experiments over a period of two years.

The social implications of the discovery, should it lead to commercial use, are obvious. Health officials are reluctant to discuss it in commercial terms.

It is pointed out that before there could be any general application of the principle there would have to be carefully controlled experimentation over a substantial part of a lifetime.

Loss of skin color or depigmentation, has been traced to an antioxidant called monobenzyl either of hydroquinone, which heretofore has been used in rubber to retard oxidation. The discovery resulted from depigmentation which occurred among Negro and white employees of a Midwest tannery who wore rubber gloves containing two-tenths of one per cent of this chemical. Restoration of color eventually occurs, but very slowly.

The experimentation has been carried on and directed by Dr. Louis Schwartz, medical director of the Public Health Service.

The interest of the Public Health Service in its experimentation, officials said, was only to find out what had caused the unusual skin condition and to inform the manufacturers of the rubber gloves not to use the chemical further.

But experiments are being made by feeding quantities of the chemical to certain animals in an effort to determine its effect over an entire body. In the cases of the tannery workers depigmentation occurred only where the rubber gloves were in contact with the skin.

Some commercial experimentation is under way outside the Public Health Service.

The tannery workers began to complain in September 1938, that white spots were appearing on forearm and hand areas covered by the rubber rubber gloves furnished them by the factory. The workmen were said to have been wearing a heavy gauntlet type of rubber glove with curved fingers.

In some instances most of the skin covered by the gloves became depigmented; in others it was only spotted with areas of leukoderma, or skin-whitening. A few developed leukoderma on parts of the body not covered by the gloves but which could have been touched by them.

BUREAU CONSULTED

The tannery management discontinued use of the glove, consulted the Department of Leather Research of the University of Cincinnati, which referred the matter to the Public Health Service on May 16, 1993. About the same time representatives of the glove manufacturer consulted the Public Health Service's Office of Dermatoses Investigations.

About a month later another tannery reported that Negro and white workers had depigmentation in areas covered by the rubber gauntlets (in white workers depigmentation sometimes caused skin to become whiter). Since the first two reports simular reports came from other industries using the rubber gloves of the same manufacture.

As a second tannery 16 workers were found with leukoderma on parts touched by the rubber gloves purchased from the same rubber company as in the case of the first tannery.

While Public Health officials were reluctant to discuss general application of the chemical a report by Dr. Schwartz comments that "the possibility of using antioxidants for the depigmentation of hyperpigmented areas of the skin (spots) is suggested."

At the Southern University conference meeting there some of the educators before whom Eugene Talmadge appeared in defense of what he has done to the University of Georgia told us they were "much impressed" with him. Not with his point of view or what he is making of race relations and the educational system in Georgia but with "his forthrightness." They thought him a very earnest and sincere man, believing passionately in the course he has taken. It seemed to us that such sincerity and passion, if they are indeed in Eugene Talmadge, make him all the more a menace to the processes of education, science and good will upon which the South's hope depends. Another man who believes sincerely and passionately in what he is doing is Adolf Hitler.

"Watermelon Pete" In School Book Irks Parents Of 1st Grader

One "darky" story has been injected into the curriculum for first grade children at the James Alcorn public school, 32nd and Dickinson streets. The book in which the story appears is not the approved list, but one of the teachers evidently believes it essential to the education of the youngsters in his care.

The parents of a 6-year-boy, hearing him repeat the story, was anxious to find out where he had heard it. They thought he had picked it up from one of his playmates. Instead they discovered that it was one of several stories his teachers had told him and other members of the class.

The book, whose title is "Watermelon Pete and Other Stories," was presented to its original owner "with the compliments of Uncle Wip" whose daily children's broadcast is a presentation of Gimbel Brothers department store.

How Story Goes

The theme story, "Watermelon Pete", opens as follows: "Once there was a little darky boy, and his name was Watermelon Pete. They called him Watermelon Pete because his mouth was just the shape of a BIG slice of RIPE watermelon." The story goes on to tell how Watermelon Pete was encouraged by a "naughty little Blackie" to steal a farmer's watermelons.

"Other Stories" referred to in the title are not at all objectionable. Even "Watermelon Pete" has a happy ending and teaches a fine lesson for children. Unfortunately, its phraseology is offensive and the illustrations of Pete ludicrous.

"I never heard of the book", Francis M. Baker, principal of the Alcorn school, told the TRIBUNE on Tuesday, when the opening sentences of the story were read to him. "It perhaps is some extra reading material, brought in by the teacher, because it is not on the approved list. I am glad you called by attention to it, because we positively would not countenance the use of any objectionable reading matter in the school."

Negroes Urged To Solve Own Economic Problems

Editor of The Knoxville Journal:

We Negroes in Knoxville for years have been lying to ourselves about what we have accomplished as a race. We have been loudly boasting to the world of our unity and our ability to cooperate in all things which make for racial progress. We have done this so long that we have come to believe that it is true, and that we are moving forward as a race.

As a matter of fact, we are doing nothing of the kind. We have been only kidding ourselves. We, as a race, can't claim a small degree of progress until we at least can feed ourselves. This we have not been able to do. Human progress calls for more than providing food for our stomach. Any smart dog or cat can do that. Surely our aim is higher than that. And today in a country of prosperity many of us are faring worse than dogs and cats.

The cause of our plight isn't difficult to determine. We are not interested in one another racially; we do not sacrifice for our common cause. We are ignorant of the forces at work in our midst, which are designed to keep us divided and helpless.

We are fools enough to believe that other races will do more in our interest than we can do for ourselves. We do not have that intelligent, courageous, honest leadership which our struggle for success demands.

We Negroes do not possess that degree of pride which should make us ashamed of ourselves and of our position in the eyes of other races about us, who are solving their economic problems at our expense.

We are fools. We are only objects of exploitation of any race which cares to take advantage of our ignorance.

ASK ROOSEVELT TO END MEMPHIS POLICE TERROR

FEB 15 1941

FEB 15 1941

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 13—Prominent educators and civic leaders joined with the Southern Youth Congress in a letter to President Roosevelt asking for an immediate Federal Government investigation of police terrorism in Memphis, Tenn., and that safeguards be taken to protect the lives, liberty and property of the colored citizens.

Charging that since the November election city officials working under the direction of "Boss" Edward Crump, Democratic political leader, have been committing acts of terror on the more than third colored population of the city as political reprisal for failure to follow the dictates of the Crump machine, the resolution said in part: "America has no place for a fuehrer and unscrupulous municipal dictatorship such as the Crump machine has established.

"In these days of International insecurity when the rights of men are being scrapped in the warring nations, we Americans are bequeathed the task of guarding ever more zealously that freedom upon which our system of Democracy is based."

Police Commissioner Bans Negroes From Interracial Conference In Memphis

To Hold Meeting To Discuss Interracial Cooperation But No Negroes To Be Present

To Hold Mass Meeting

FEB 8 - 1941

MEMPHIS.—(ANP)—Commissioner of Public Safety Boyle Wednesday afternoon notified the Memphis Commission for Interracial Cooperation that he would meet with them to discuss better white-Negro relations in Memphis, but that the conference would be limited to the commission's white minister members only.

His notice was sent to Dr. Sam E. Howie, white, president of the commission, in response to a renewed request by a special committee appointed by the commission for a conference with city officials on the question of better race relations, for which the organization was formed.

The first request for such a conference met a firm refusal from Boyle, who pointed out that he considered certain commission members inimical to better racial relations here.

Plans are being made by the interracial group to stage a mass meeting of whites and Negroes here in February to promote improved racial relations, with Dr. Will W. Alexander, white executive secretary of the National C. I. C., and administrator of the Farm Security Administration, as principal speaker.

Boyle's letter said in part: "It is true I declined to discuss the racial question with your committee and wrote you giving my reasons, that some of the newspaper Negroes on your committee for many months had been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present relations between the white and colored races in this community.

FEB 8 - 194

"We have no race trouble here, and there will be none unless some foolish, misguided persons are determined with the help of outsiders to foment strife. Negroes are given every opportunity to engage in any honest endeavor. They will not be disturbed, but to the contrary will be given possible encouragement.

"If some of you who have resided here but a comparatively short time, and necessarily are ignorant of real conditions that exist. in a large city day and night, intend to attend these social meetings merely as an outlet for oratory, and propose to import an anti-lynching speaker to the city, it will only stir up bitter feeling, and will certainly do no good to this community, only a lot of harm. If you white ministers desire to confer with me, I will be pleased to meet with you."

Intolerance In Memphis

MAR 23 1941

THE preaching of racial equality in the city of Memphis, Tennessee, is a sufficient reason to be thrown in jail and held incommunicado for days. That is what recently happened to a white minister who preached to Negro congregations in that city and told them that the tenets of his religious faith demanded justice and equality for all persons regardless of race or color. When the white Christians of Memphis got wind of such a sermon they called in the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate a man who harbored such "unAmerican" ideals as would encourage the equality of persons of all races. After fourteen days behind the bars Rev. Edward T. McGuire was formally released and told to leave the city without returning.

It was not a very pleasant reception that the minister received in the southern city, to say the least. But, suffice it to say, the attitude of the police officials was consistent with the treatment accorded colored sympathizers throughout the South. There is little or no tolerance accorded those whites who are desirous of conferring equal rights and privileges upon all persons regardless of race or color. There are, of course, exceptions, but they are few and far between.

The fact illustrates forcibly how hollow is all this hue and cry about arming for democracy. It shows how far Americans must go before they can criticize without mental reservations the treatment of Jews in Germany. It illustrates the fact that the white people of the South are not only ready to dissuade Negroes from seeking justice and equality but will persecute whites who preach to them the merits of equality. The fact that he was a minister of the gospel did not change the nature of the reception accorded him.

While America is spending billions for arms it is ignoring the biggest weapon of national defense—racial tolerance. It might therefore, be well if the federal government would use some of its vast funds to better the conditions of minority groups in this country and to stimulate that degree of tolerance that is imperative to a real national solidarity.

Inter-Racial Commission Confers With Joe Boyle

Members of Commission Let Mayor Chandler Voice Their Approval of City Law Enforcement After Meeting

FEB 7 - 1941

MEMPHIS.—Members of the Memphis Commission for Interracial Cooperation expressed "approval" of the city's law enforcement program this week and offered officials their services in meeting future interracial problems.

Their approval of city policing and offer of services was announced by Mayor Chandler after a two-hour closed session with white members of the commission and Commissioner Boyle.

Want to Cooperate

"The ministers who called on us expressed approval of the city's law enforcement program and assured us that their sole desire is to cooperate whenever possible for them to do so," the mayor said. "They expressed the feeling that their membership on the commission might enable them to be of good service to the city government in meeting interracial problems arising from time to time.

Members of the group headed by the Rev. Alfred Loaring-Clark of St. John's Episcopal Church, declined comment on the meeting, saying:

"The mayor is the spokesman."

The meeting was suggested by Commissioner Boyle Wednesday in a letter to Dr. S. E. Howie, chairman of the Interracial Commission. In his letter the police commissioner pointed out he had declined to discuss the racial question with the committee on grounds "some of the newspaper Negroes on your committee for many months had been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present relations between the white and colored race in this community."

After the session had adjourned the mayor said only general topics were discussed.

Thanked by Officials

"Commissioner Boyle and I thanked them and assured them of our appreciation of their good purposes," Mr. Chandler said.

The commission recently announced plans for a mass meeting of whites and Negroes here in February to promote improved racial relations. Dr. Will W. Alexander, executive secretary of the national C. I. C. and administrator of the Farm Security Administration, will be the principal speaker.

FEB 7 - 1941

They also are sponsoring a city movement to observe February 9 "Race Relations Sunday".

Attending the conference with Mr. Chandler and Mr. Boyle were:

The Rev. Mr. Howie, the Rev. Mr. Loaring-Clark, the Rev. J. J. Walker of Central Avenue Christian Church, the Rev. Marshall Wingfield of the First Congregational Church, the Rev. W. G. Gehri of Grace-St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Rabbi H. W. Ettelson of the Congregation Children of Israel, the Rev. W. B. Selah of St. John's Methodist Church and the Rev. Josiah Sibley of Lindsay Memorial Presbyterian Church.

"'TERROR' ARTICLE NOT TRUE," SAYS STUART

(Special to The Courier)
By Staff Corrospondent

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 22—"There is no 'reign of terror' in Memphis."

The speaker was M. S. Stuart, vice president of the Universal Life Insurance company, a leader of the National Negro Business League, author and one of the South's most influential business figures.

Mr. Stuart was referring to an article which appeared recently in The Pittsburgh Courier. He made the statement during an exclusive interview in which he upheld the good name of Memphis, presenting facts to lend foundation to his contention. Said Mr. Stuart:

AIMED AT MARRING COMING CONVENTION

"Your article is evidently intended to accomplish a sinister purpose. It is obviously aimed at marring the coming convention of the National Negro Business League.

"We are loathe to believe that a paper, holding such a high place in our esteem and affection," he continued, "would knowingly publish anything entirely false. We here in Memphis, like thousands of people all over the country, regard The Pittsburgh Courier as the leading and most outstanding of Negro papers.

"There is 'no reign of terror' in Memphis at this time.

NEGROES HAVE NOT LOST CIVIL RIGHTS

"Negroes in Memphis have not lost their civil rights, any more than have Negroes living elsewhere in the South. Negroes here now enjoy just about as great a measure of civil rights as they ever have. All the courts in Memphis are as fair to Negroes as the courts in any state in the South, and very probably as fair as the courts anywhere in the land.

"There is no record of Negro tourists having been arrested for trivial offenses or being otherwise mistreated by the police. Negroes here can and do cast their ballots without interference. They are called for service on juries in all of the courts, both federal and state.

CHANGE IN POLICY BROUGHT BOYLE IN

"A little more than 15 months ago, there was a change in the office of Fire and Police Commissioner in this city. Mr. Clifford Davis was elected to Congress and Joseph Boyle succeeded him as Police Commissioner.

"It was not long before Commissioner Boyle let it be known that he would insist upon strict enforcement of the law, regardless of whom it affected. He started with a drive on the houses of ill repute, conducted by and for white people. He closed all of these and several small white hotels. He then started a drive against gambling; and the white gamblers were the first to feel the effects of his campaign.

"In the midst of these drives came the national election last November. There were two or three unfortunate misunderstandings growing out of this election. As a result of these unfortunate cases, a sensational condition developed in Memphis.

JUSTIFICATION FOR DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

"There will be no attempt in this article to establish the merit or demerits of either side in this regrettable controversy. There may have been justification for difference of opinion on both sides. In any event. these cases, largely of an individual nature, have been settled.

"The South Memphis drug store, around which this controversy raged, is now and has been for many weeks, operating unmolested by police interference. If the authorities are content to close this unfortunate situation by letting it rest, why do Negroes continue to rehash it? To continue this kind of agitation is injurious to the best interests of all the people.

RELATIVE TO THE KILLING OF DAVID LOVE

"The killing of David Love on a street car was most regrettable, but in no way was the city police department connected, except that after Mr. Love's death, the white man who killed him was arrested. He was turned over to state authorities and was not indicted. If blame is to be attached to this action, it certainly does not lie at the door of the police department.

"Mr. Love was a member of the church which Rev. H. R. Gibson pastored during the trouble there last autumn. It is said that Rev. Gibson was requested to leave town but he was being transferred by his Conference anyway. Your correspondent appears to say, in effect, that the street car conductor killed Mr. Love because he was a member of the church which Rev. Gibson pastored. his is too unreasonable to be credited.

"I am giving these facts so that those who plan attending the session of the National Negro Business League here next August may come on with every assurance that they will not be molested in any way. The law-abiding type of people who attend this meeting may be sure that they can sojourn here in safety and happiness."

Because Life Magazine used the word "pickaninny" in a story of a healthy baby contest at the Memphis Negro Fair, Secretary Walter White, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, rebuked the magazine in an official letter from his organization. He should speak to Noah Webster about this, too, for Mr. Webster put the word in his dictionary. Does Secretary White know there is a war going on in this world which threatens his race more than perhaps any other? Even if "pickaninny" were really an offensive word this would be no time to be agitating about it, especially as Life was giving splendid publicity to a project of much benefit to the Negro race. Secretary White does not mind making himself objectionable but he might mind making himself ridiculous.

Eleazer Sees Education As Aid To South

OCT 30 1941

The belief that association of members of both races would do more than anything else to solve the racial problem was expressed by R. B. Eleazer, educational director of the Southern Interracial Commission, Wednesday evening.

Mr. Eleazer appeared as principal speaker at the regular weekly forum being sponsored by the Sociology department of Morehouse college, Prof. W. R. Chivers, director.

OCT 30 1941

The speaker, who has spent almost twenty years in interracial work, told of his many experiences addressing white groups and gave a brief background of the things that lead to prejudice and racial misunderstandings.

A question period followed the address during which Mr. Eleazer said that he believed a large regional university would b ethe best solution to the South's present dilemma over graduate and professional training for Negroes. The dilemma was brought about by the recent Supreme court decision in the Gaines case.

Intimidation, Attacks Follow Defection Of Voters

BIRMINGHAM, (ANP)— Prominent Southern Negroes joined with the Southern Youth congress this week in a letter to President Roosevelt seeking for an investigation of Memphis and for the federal government to take immediate steps to safeguard the lives, liberties, and property of Negro people there.

Among those who signed the statement to the President included William J. Faulkner, Fisk university; President David D. Jones of Bennett college, Greensboro, N. C.; Dr. Alain Locke, Howard university; Carleton L. Lee, southern Hi-Y secretary, Atlanta; Rev. DeWitt S. Dykes, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Dr. J. F. Watson, San Antonio, Tex.; John M. Gandy, president Virginia State college; Hartford Knight, UMWA, Birmingham; Carter W. Wesley, Informer Publishing Co., Houston, and Rev. William P. Mitchell of Tulsa, Okla.

REIGN OF TERROR

The statement to the President on the suspension of civil liberties in Memphis said in part, "Since the November elections there has been in Memphis an unremitting wave of intimidation and acts of terror against the Negro citizens of this city on the part of the police force, inspired by Commissioner of Police Joseph P. Boyle, by Mayor Chandler, and by Democratic National committeeman and political boss of Shelby county, Edward Crump. This attack upon the Negro citizens of Memphis, who constitute something more than a third of the population of the city, has come as a political reprisal against a section of the Negro electorate who refused to abide by the dictates of the Crump machine and voted for candidates of their choice.

"America has no place for a fuhrer and an unscrupulous municipal dictatorship such as the Crump machine in Memphis is attempting to establish. All citizens must be protected in their liberties as guaranteed by the bill of rights of our constitution. The officials of Memphis and the political machine of Ed Crump stand guilty of abrogating the right guaranteed to American citizens under the constitution, the right of assembly, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, right of private property, and security from arbitrary power.

POLITICAL TYRANNY

"In these days of international insecurity, with revenous wars engulfing whole continents, when the rights of man are being scrapped in the warring nations, we Americans are bequeathed the task of guarding ever more zealously that character of freedom upon which our system of democracy is based. The recent acts of political tyranny in Memphis menace our democratic institutions. Our government cannot permit such grievous wrong to afflict our body politic. It is the responsibility of the federal government to make a formal declaration of freedom contained in our bill of rights become a living reality for all Americans.

"With love of liberty and with deep concern for the fate of Civil Liberties in our country, we, the undersigned, call upon the President to direct a federal investigation of the totalitarian political regime which has annulled the civil and political rights of the citizens of Memphis and to immediately use the authority of the federal government to take the necessary steps to safeguard the lives, liberties, and property of the Negro citizens in Memphis."

BOYLE BANS NEGROES FROM RACIAL PARLEY

White Committeemen Only Invited To Conference

LETTER TO DR. HOWIE

Tells Him Some Members Of His Group Will Not Be Welcome Because They Are Fomenters

Commissioner Boyle yesterday afternoon notified the Memphis Commission for Interracial Co-operation that he would meet with them to discuss better white-negro relations in Memphis, but that the conference would be limited to the commission's white minister members only.

His notice was sent to Dr. Sam E. Howie, president of the commission, and pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, by special delivery letter.

Meeting This Afternoon

The meeting will be held in Mayor Chandler's office at 3 o'clock this afternoon with the Mayor and Commissioner Boyle representing the city.

The letter was in answer to a renewed request by a special committee appointed by the commission for a conference with city officials on the question of better racial relations, for which the commission was organized.

The commission's first request for such a conference met a firm refusal from Commissioner Boyle, the commissioner pointing out that he considered certain commission members inimical to better racial relations here.

The commission Monday announced its plans for a mass meeting of whites and negroes here in February to promote improved racial relations, with Dr. Will W. Alexander, executive secretary of the national C. I. C., and administrator of the Farm Security Administration, as principal speaker.

Boyle Letter Quoted

Commissioner Boyle's letter to Dr. Howie follows:

"Rev. S. E. Howie, D. D.
Chairman of the Interracial Co-operation Committee,
1233 Lamar Avenue,
Memphis, Tennessee.

"Dear Sir:

"It is true I declined to discuss the racial question with your committee and wrote you giving my reasons, that some of the newspaper negroes on your committee for many months had been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present relations between the white and colored race in this community; and told you that Z. L. Bonner had lost his job at the post office for failing to account for some money.

No Race Trouble

"We have no race trouble here, and there will be none unless some foolish, misguided persons are determined with the help of outsiders to foment strife. Negroes are given every opportunity to engage in any honest endeavor. They will not be disturbed, but to the contrary will be given all possible encouragement. But when they go down to a church meeting of their own bishops, and start a cry of fire, so that they may rob, the police will take a very decided hand. Likewise, they will interfere when a bad crowd starts fighting with pistols and knives, as they did at the annual football game between the Booker T. Washington and Manassas High Schools. And that interference is for the benefit of the great majority of honest and law abiding negroes.

"I enumerated in my letter to you of December 4, the many things that had been done for the negroes in Memphis and Shelby County.

"Those benefits have come from constant study and collaboration on the part of Mayor Chandler, Mr. E. H. Crump, Mr. E. W. Hale and others of us in City and County Government, and I am certain they will continue to help the colored people whenever and wherever possible.

Ignorant Of Conditions

"If some of you who have resided here but a comparatively short time, and necessarily are ignorant of real conditions that exist in a large city night and day, intend to attend these social meetings merely as an outlet for oratory, and propose to import an anti lynching speaker to the city; it will only stir up bitter feeling, and will certainly do no good to this community, only a lot of harm. We never have condoned or permitted anyone to be lynched and our entire police force would be used to prevent such an act.

"If you white ministers desire to confer with me, I will be pleased to meet with you.

Respectfully yours truly,
JOE BOYLE,
Commissioner of Public Safety.

The Rev Alfred Loaring-Clark, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, is chairman of the committee named to confer with Commissioner Boyle.

The commission is asking all churches in the city to observe Feb. 9 as "Race Relations Sunday," a 19-year old movement sponsored by the Federated Council of Churches in America.

HARMONY SOUGHT IN MEMPHIS

FEB 14 1941

We notice by last week's press releases that the better class of white citizens of Memphis, Tennessee interceded to bring about better relationship between the Negroes and the police department. We also notice that according to press releases a satisfactory program was worked out whereby the Memphis police would not intimidate and molest Negroes any further. We hope that the Interracial Committee has worked out a situation wherein the Negro citizens will have the protection of the law rather than the intimidation of a few weeks ago.

We hope that "Holy Joe" Boyle and his police department have a better understanding that Negroes are good citizens and deserve the protection of the law rather than to be humiliated. The leading white citizens of Memphis are to be congratulated upon their stand of fairplay regardless of race, color or creed.

MEMPHIS.--(ANP)--Commissioner of Public Safety Joseph Boyle Wednesday afternoon notified the Memphis Commission for Interracial Co-operation that he would meet with them to discuss better white-Negro relations in Memphis, but that the conference would be limited to the commission's white minister only.

His notice was sent to Dr. Sam E. Howie, white, president of the comsion, in response to a renewed request by a special committee appointed by the commission for a conference with city officials on the question of better race relations, for which the organization was formed.

The first request for such a conference met a firm refusal from Boyle, who pointed out that he considered certain commission members inimical to better racial relations here.

Plans are being made by the interracial group to stage a mass meeting of whites and Negroes here in February to promote improved racial relations, with Dr. Will W. Alexander, white executive secretary of the National C. I. C. and administrator of the Farm Security Administration, as principal speaker.

Boyle's letter said in part: "It is true I declined to discuss the racial question with your committee and wrote you giving my reasons, that some of the newspaper Negroes on your committee for many months had been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present relations between the white and colored race in this community . . . . .

"We have no race trouble here and there will be none unless some foolish, misguided persons are determined with the help of outsiders to foment strife. Negroes are given every opportunity to engage in any honest endeavor. They will not be disturbed, but to the contrary will be given all possible encouragement

"If some of you who have resided here but a comparatively short time, and necessarily are ignorant of real conditions that exist in a large city day and night, intend to attend these social meetings merely as an outlet for oratory, and propose to import an anti-lynching speaker to the city, it will only stir up bitter feeling, and will certainly do no good to this community, only a lot of harm. If you white ministers desire to confer with me, I will be pleased to meet with you."

CRUMP TELLS ONE

JAN 24 1941

In telling why it is not timely to remove his "rock in a weary land and shelter in the time of storm," otherwise known as the state poll tax, Mr. E. H. Crump has an excuse that will rank high among the classic bedtime stories of all time. Here's how the Boss tells it:

"There has been a very decided change in world affairs in the past eighteen months and, of course, that change has affected local conditions. Since the fall of France, Belgium and Holland and other Countries, Communist and German Bund propaganda is going the rounds, encouraging race hatred and equality. This is one reason for not repealing the poll tax."

And another, we would guess, if Mr. Crump were given time further to develop his theory, is that there is a rumor coming from Africa to the effect that Hailie Selassie is threatening to emerge as the Conquering Lion of Judah again.

WHITE STUDENTS BURN IN EFFIGY SIX NEGRO STUDENTS

FEB 27 1941

Los Angeles — (Harold Mehling for CNA)—Seeds of America's "strange fruit" were sown at the local Fremont high school here when a band of white students parodied Dixie's law of rope and faggot.

FEB 27 1941

On the front lawn of the campus in the light of a big bonfire, Fremont's six Negro students were hung in effigy. Books of a Negro student were thrown high into a tree. A poster read: "This isn't coons' day."

Fremont principal J. P. Ingles did nothing about it. Neither did the vice-principal, "Doc" Skinner.

The story leaked out slowly. After one Negro student had been terrorized into leaving the school, Negro and white mothers and fathers of the neighborhood grew indignant and determined to take action themselves in lieu "efforts" of the school administration.

A committee of ten neighborhood people, including six white mothers, visited the vice-president, got no satisfaction from Skinner, save his opinion that "it might be better" and "they might be happier" if Negro students went to another school.

The committee refused to let the outrage go unprotested and unfought They obtained an appointment with Principal Ingles, an American Legionnaire.

"Why doesn't this go into all the classes so the lesson of democracy may be well learned?" asked Mrs. Hendricka Beakes, white chairman of the parents' committee.

I'm not sure it's the school's place to discuss these things," returned Ingles. Mrs. Myra Ehetta, committee member, tried without success to get Ingles to agree to cooperate with a civic committee to work out a program for education of students on the Negro question.

"It is very fortunate that our schools do not teach a true conception of Negro history," Mrs. Rhetta said. "Our history books do not tell of the Negro blood spilled on the commons during the Revolutionary War in Boston and of other Negro heroes.

"White, black, Mexican and other peoples are going to move in on the board of education to see that these things we ask are accomplished. This is simply because these people want to see our democracy work for all the people, not one section of it."

The Origin of Little Black Sambo.

Regarding the origin of Sambo [Feb. 25], often used as a comic first name for a Negro:

Spanish has the word "zambo," meaning knock-kneed. In Spanish America this word was applied to the children of Negro and Indian parents. By extension it has come to mean any Negro, especially a mulatto. It comes from the Latin "scambus," referring to deformed or twisted legs. See the dictionary of the Royal Spanish academy.

Memphis Mayor And Police Chief Accused Of Anti-Negro Hysteria

JAN 4 1941

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(CNA)—E. H. Crump, Grank Kleagle of the political machine in Memphis which bears his name and leader of the Roosevelt forces in Tennessee, has set the wheels in motion for a wave of anti-Negro hysteria not seen in these parts since the campaigns for the "disfranchising constitutions" fifty years ago.

The campaign began shortly after the elections when Crump decided to penalize Dr. J. D. Martin, Negro druggist, for organizing support among the Negro voters in Shelby County for the Republican ticket: On instructions of Mayor Walter Chandler and Police Commissioner Joseph P. (Holy Joe) Boyle, a squad of police officers was stationed in front of Dr. Martin's pharmacy and every man, woman or child leaving the place was searched.

Police say they were searching for "narcotics" but to date no illegal drugs have been found. The main result of this action has been to destroy the business of Dr. Martin and to kindle deep seated resentment among Negroes and the white progressives of Memphis.

JAN 4 1941

Church Groups Protest

A committee for inter-racial cooperation was formed and issued a fairly mild protest, which was answered by a vicious and slanderous blast by Police Chief Boyle.

The chief's answer was in the form of a letter to Rev. Howie white chairman of the committee. Although Rev. Howie declares that he has not yet received the original letter, it was printed conspicuously in the Memphis Commercial Appeal the very next day.

Boyle's letter begins with an attack on the Negro personnel of the committee, aiming especially at the Negro newspapermen:

"For many months, these papers have been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present friendly relations (sic) between the white and Negro races in this community. These selfish and unprincipled Negro paper promoters must know they cannot write this character stuff. They are not going to carry on and conduct themselves in Memphis as if they lived in Chicago, Pittsburgh or Philadelphia.

"We never had it before and we will never have it. For after all this is a white man's country."

The chief makes it clear that what he and the class he represents fear is the growing movement among our people for civic equality. "These papers have been talking about the taxes Negroes pay and that the Negroes should make certain demands and assert themselves on that account, and emphasize the fact that there shouldn't be any white preferment."

In a later interview, Boyle had even more to say on the subject: "I say again this is a white man's country, and always will be, and any Negro who doesn't agree to this better move on."

JAN 4 1941

Threatens Trouble

Negro leaders who protest against jim-crow oppression are "fanning race hatred" according to Boyle. "We have an eye on five Negro preachers, four Negro doctors, one Negro barbecue and restaurant operator, two Negro postmen, five Negro newspaper writers, one Negro drug store operator, one Negro undertaker, who have been inciting race hatred," he said. "Should anything happen in Memphis these 19 will be largely responsible for it."

Martin Is Renamed Leader

Dr. J. B. Martin, Memphis, was re-elected president of the Negro American league at the annual winter meeting of the league at the Hotel Grand Sunday afternoon. Other officials re-elected were Horace G. Hall, Chicago, vice-president; J. L. Wilkinson, Kansas City, Mo., treasurer; Frank A. Young, Chicago secretary and Major Robert R. Jackson, commissioner of the league.

Present at the confab were Dr. W. S. Martin, Memphis Red Sox; Dr. B. B. Martin, Memphis Red Sox; H. G. Hall and Mason W. Fields, Chicago American Giants; Dr. J. B. Martin, Memphis; Jim Taylor, Birmingham Black Barons; George Mitchell, New Orleans-St. Louis Stars; J. L. Wilkinson and Tom Beard, Kansas City Monarchs.

Represented by proxies were Hank Rogney of the Toledo Crawfords and J. B. Greer of the Jacksonville Fla. Red Caps which played in the league last season as the Cleveland Bears. There will be no club in Cleveland this summer because of the poor attendance in the Forest City.

Tom Wilson, owner of the Baltimore Elites and president of the Negro National league, paid a visit to the afternoon session and addressed the league members. The entire meeting was harmonious.

Two owners of clubs in Detroit sought associate memberships in the league. They were George Quinn and Louis R. Taylor. The president was empowered to investigate both men and their financial backing before the league took any action.

There were several trades rumored but when the meeting adjourned none had been made although it is certain some will be made before the February schedule meeting.

Loss of the grand stand seats in the Chicago American Giants park was regretted but Horace G. Hall's announcement that other seats had been purchased and would be moved in this week was met with a round of applause.

Both Hall and Fields stated that there would be ample seating at the Giant's park for all the patrons this year. Also both men declared the fence would be rebuilt, the grandstand painted and other necessary things done to have the park in tiptop shape when the season opens.

Fields will have charge of the park and will have an office at the park.

A working agreement will be sought with the Negro National league in order that the eastern clubs can make a swing through the west during the playing season and the western clubs through the east.

GRAND JURY INDICTS 'RACE RIOT' KNIGHT

Accused In Shooting That Led To Police Shakeup

JAN 22 1941

The Shelby County Grand Jury yesterday indicted Leonard (Race Riot) Knight, West Memphis, Ark. negro, on charges of assault to murder and carrying a pistol for his part in the shooting here May 20 of James Ivery Smith, negro.

The shooting is the same which led to the suspension and retirement of former Police Chief Will Lee last Summer and the demotion to rank of detective of former Chief Inspector Clegg Richards and former Capt. Frank Glisson, homicide chief.

Officer Glisson, who released Knight after his arrest here, was accused by Commissioner Boyle of accepting a $200 bribe for the negro's exoneration. Mr. Lee and Mr. Richards were cited by the commissioner for having knowledge of the case and failing to report it. All three were suspended at the time.

In a hearing before the City Commission, Officer Glisson was exonerated, but he and Mr. Richards were demoted. The latter resigned shortly afterward and Mr. Lee's petition for retirement on pension was accepted by the Pension Board.

The case against Knight was presented to the Grand Jury by Preston Battle, acting in place of Atty. Gen. Gerber, who is in Nashville to assist the Shelby County delegation at the State Legislature.

CENSUS WILL CLASS MEXICANS AS WHITE

FEB 8 1941

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (ANP)—For the first time in the history of the census, Mexicans will be definitely classed as white persons. Previously, Mexicans had been classed as "non-whites" and until protestations were received from various organizations, this designation had stood. However, it has been said that many organizations in Mexico protested against the protest and wanted the designation to stand as it has in the past.

SAYS SELFISH LEADERS PLAGUE OF RACE

FEB 8 - 1941

To the Editor of The Guardian:

The selfish Race leader has been the plague that has handicapped our people. His evil arts have constituted the "black magic" of politics, he has proved an elusive and wily customer. Yet as long as he flourishes in our midst we shall never have representation for our group.

Boston has been infested with his kind for years, and the administration of local affairs that affect our people so directly and intimately in their daily lives has suffered acutely as a consequence. Our own community has always had its full quota of these political impostors.

The demagogue is a man who in all things consults no interest but his own; all his powers and talents are consecrated to thoroughly selfish ends. He is insincere and intellectually dishonest to the core. He thinks one thing and says another. Many a time I have sat in an intelligent audience of men and women and listened to such a hypocrite orate, proclaiming his love for his race, his hatred of those who exploit his race; but his "anxious devotion" to the interests of his people is merely lip service: his heart is far from them. I hope the day will soon come when we can say, "Get behind me, Satan!"

Byrnes Is Favored As Judge

Negro South Carolinians Say He's All Right

GREENVILLE, S. C.—(A N P)—Greenville Negroes are not going to aid any movements to fight the rumored appointment of Sen. James Byrnes to the supreme court, a local survey revealed this week.

Byrnes has been the opponent of much pro-Negro legislation but Carolina colored folk seem to favor him for the prospective appointment to the supreme court.

The Senator is unique in South Carolina politics, a state where most candidates must "ride into office on the back of the Negro." In a state that has sent more "race baiters" to congress than any other, Byrnes is a rara avis.

In his younger days as a solicitor, and old resident declared, he established a precedent by insisting that all colored witnesses be treated with consideration. His campaigns for congress were conducted on a high plane. Never as a candidate did he raise the color question. His avoidance of the race question caused one of his opponents to charge him with being a "Negro lover," a term that usually spells defeat for any Carolina candidate.

Some years ago, when a congressman, Byrnes tried to block an appropriation for Howard university. He took the position that if the government was going to spend money for Negro eduction it could be better spent in his own state, where the need was greater.

Another old Greenville resident said, "He never kissed us on the cheek, but he never bit us in the back. We ain't mad with Mr. Jimmy."

Southern Negroes Ask Roosevelt to End Terror in Memphis

FEB 7 1941

Prominent Educators Cite Intimidation Against Negroes by Crump Democratic Machine; Charge 'Totalitarian' Terror Rule

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 6.—Prominent Southern Negroes joined with the Southern Negro Youth Congress this week in a letter to President Roosevelt asking for an investigation of Memphis, and for the Federal government to take immediate steps to safeguard the lives, liberties and property of Negro people in Memphis.

Among those who signed the statement to the President included: William J. Faulkner, University Minister, Fisk University, Nashville Tenn; David D. Jones; President of Bennett College, Greensboro, North Carolina; Dr. Alaine Locke of the Department of Philosophy, Howard University; Carleton L. Lee, Southern "HIY" Secretary, Atlanta, Georgia; Rev. De Witt S. Dykes, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Dr. J. F. Watson, San Antonio, Texas; John M. Gandy, President Virginia State College; Hartford Knight, District Representative, UMWA, Birmingham, Ala.; Carter W. Wesley, Informer Publishing Co., Houston, Texas; Rev. William P. Mitchell of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

CEASELESS INTIMIDATION

The statement to the President on the suspension of civil liberties in Memphis said in part, "Since the November elections there has been in Memphis an unremitting wave of intimidation and acts of terror against the Negro citizens of this city on the part of the police force, inspired by Commissioner of Police, Joseph P. Boyle, by Mayor Chandler, and by Democratic National Committeeman and Political "boss" of Shelby County, Edward Crump. This attack upon the Negro citizens of Memphis, who constitute something more than a third of the population of the city, has come as a political reprisal against a section of the Negro electorate who refused to abide by the dictates of the Crump machine and voted for candidates of their choice."

"America has no place for a fuhrer and an unscrupulous municipal dictatorship such as the Crump machine in Memphis is attempting to establish. All citizens must be protected in their liberties as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights of our Constitution. The officials of Memphis and the political machine of Ed Crump stand guilty of abrogating the right guaranteed to American citizens under the Constitution, the right of assembly, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, right of private property, and security from arbitrary power."

"In these days of international insecurity, with ravenous wars engulfing whole continents, when the rights of man are being scrapped in the warring nations, we Americans are bequeathed the task of guarding ever more zealously that character of freedom upon which our system of democracy is based. The recent acts of political tyranny in Memphis menace our democratic institutions. Our government cannot permit such grievious wrong to afflict our body politic.

"With love of liberty and with deep concern for the fate of Civil Liberties in our country, we, the undersigned, call upon the President to direct a Federal investigation of the totalitarian political regime which has annulled the civil and political rights of the citizens of Memphis and to immediately use the authority of the Federal government to take the necessary steps to safeguard the lives, liberties, and property, of the Negro people of Memphis."

LIBERAL GROUP OF SOUTHERNERS WILL CHALLENGE CRUMP

Fight to Repeal Poll Tax Is Made "Moral Issue"; Ask Pastors to Help.

JAN 31 1941

Defying the corrupt machine politicians, led by the strawbosses of Ed Crump and "This is a white man's country" Governor Cooper, who yesterday killed a bill in the State Senate to abolish the poli tax, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare today speeded a statewide campaign to bring majority rule to Tennessee.

A letter has been sent to Negro and white clergymen throughout the State, calling on them to preach on "The Poll Tax as a Moral Issue." This appeal is the opening gun in the campaign to organize a people's movement to abolish the poll tax.

"Too long," declared Howard Lee, Conference secretary, "have we allowed the forces of evil which are personified in Boss Crump to crush the aspirations of the common people for their elementary democratic rights. Throughout the length and breadth of Tennessee we will organize to defeat at the polls every public official who votes not as the people wish but as Boss Crump dictates."

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, which is also conducting a campaign against police brutality and the violation of civil liberties of Negroes and labor unions in Memphis is an organization of Southerners of all races, parties and creeds.

The Southern Conference letter to the clergymen of the states reads as follows:

January 16, 1941

Dear Fellow Pastor:

Time after time, the people of Tennessee have made known their insistent desire that the undemocratic poll tax restriction upon the franchise be removed. But the political leaders of the State, in spite of pre-election pledges to the contrary, have undemocratically refused to even honestly discuss measures to bring majority rule to Tennessee.

Once again, it appears, the corrupt machine politicians, led by the Crump delegation from Shelby County, conspired to frustrate the people's will. Poll tax repeal bills having the support of all political parties, all organizations of labor, and statewide church, civic and women's organizations, were voted down in the Senate by men pledged and elected on a promise to repeal the poll tax.

That poll tax repeal is not only a political issue, but a moral question, which demands the earnest attention of the religious and ethical leaders of our state, is clear. Last week, you will be pleased to know, the Ministerial Association of Memphis, a city which has long felt the heavy weight of the oppressive Crump machine, took the lead in demanding that this session of the Legislature repeal the poll tax. Said the Rev. Dr. J. Ralph Roberts: 'Tennessee stays in the hills on too many of these issues. The poor have no voice and it is up to the church to petition for them. That has been our right since the Constitution was founded. I ask you now to exercise your religious and patriotic franchise." (Memphis Press-Scimitar.)

What is most needed if we are to repeal the poll tax law and to bring democracy to Tennessee is for our ministers throughout the State to speak out as did our fellow clergymen in Memphis. Therefore, as chairman of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, an organization of Southerners of all parties, races, and creeds who have joined in a common program to upbuild the South and to advance human freedom in all our Southern States, I am appealing to you to take any or all of the following actions immediately:

1. Preach a sermon on the Poll Tax as a Moral Issue in Our Democracy. (A series of articles by Mr. Jennings Perry, editorial writer of the Nashville Tennessean, about the poll tax is enclosed.) We hope you will deliver your sermon next Sunday. Please, if you are willing, send us a copy or excerpts from your sermon to be released to the newspapers and religious journals throughout the State.

2. Have your church organizations pass resolutions requesting public hearings on poll tax repeal bills addressed to the State representatives from your district. Please request that they send copies of their resolutions to the newspapers and to our office here in Nashville.

3. Write a personal letter to your State representative urging him to secure public hearings on the repeal bills and to vote in favor of poll tax repeal.

4. Send us the names of other leaders in your community who might help us in getting Tennessee to join the 40 other states which enjoy the blessings of universal suffrage.

5. Write us your ideas on how we can best carry on our campaign to repeal the poll tax in Tennessee.

6. Send a small donation to our office in Nashville to help defray the mailing and other expenses we are encountering in organizing this state-wide campaign.

The issue as to whether 10,000,000 Southerners are to remain disfranchised in the eight states still cursed with the poll tax is one of the gravest problems confronting our American Democracy. Repeal of the poll tax in Tennessee would give impetus to repeal in the other seven states as well as to federal legislation now pending in Congress.

Will you join with us in this campaign which challenges our highest Christian traditions?

Faithfully yours,
The Rev. John B. Thompson.

MEMPHIS POLICE HEAD WON'T TALK WITH MIXED GROUP

FEB 8 1941

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 6—Notifying the Memphis Commission for Interracial Cooperation he will meet with them to discuss better relations between the white and Negro races in Memphis, Commissioner of Public Safety Joe Boyle has advised the group that white minister members only may attend such a meeting. The notice was contained in a letter to Dr. S. E. Howie, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, and president of the Commission, answering one from the minister asking for a conference with city officials by a special committee from the Commision to discuss the objective for which the Commission was organized—betterment of racial relations.

The Commision, whose first request for such a conference was refused by Commissioner Boyle, has announced plans for a mass meeting to be held sometime this month of white and Negro citizens for the purpose of race relationship improvement. These plans include the appearance as principal speaker of Dr. W. W. Alexander, Farm Security Administrator, and National C.I.C. Executive Secretary.

In his letter to Dr. Howie, Commissioner Boyle said:

"It is true I declined to discuss the racial question with your committee and wrote you giving my reasons, that some of the newspaper Negroes on your committee for many months had been carrying on a campaign with inflammatory articles calculated to disrupt the present relations between the white and colored race in this community; and told you that Z. L. Bonner has lost his job at the postoffice for failing to account for some money.

"We have no race trouble here, and there will be none unless some foolish misguided persons are determined with the help of outsiders to foment strife. Negroes are given every opportunity to engage in any honest endeavor. They will not be disturbed, but to the contrary, will be given all possible encouragement. But when they go down to a church meeting of their own bishops, and start a cry of fire, so that they may rob, the police will take a very decided hand. Likewise, they will interfere when a bad crowd starts fighting with pistols and knives, as they did at the annual football game between the Booker T. Washington and Manassas High Schools. And that interference is for the benefit of the great majority of honest and law-abiding Negroes.

"I enumerated in my letter the things that have been done for the Negroes in Memphis and Shelby County. Those benefits have come from constant study and collaboration on the part of Mayor Chandler, E. H. Crump and E. W. Hale and others of us in city and county government, and I am certain they will continue to help the colored people whenever and wherever possible.

"If some of you...ignorant of conditions that exist in a large city night and day intend to attend these social meetings merely as an outlet for oratory, and propose to import an anti-lynching speaker to the city, it will only stir up bitter feeling, and will certainly do no good to this community, only a lot of harm. We never have condoned or permitted anyone to be lynched, and our entire police force would be used to prevent such an act.

"If you white ministers desire to confer with me, I will be pleased to meet with you."

Boss Ed Crump Praised; Condemned In Congress For Poll Tax Bill Fight

Says Ed Crump Betrayed His Promise To Tennessee Voters After Getting in Office

FEB 22 1941

Democracy's Throat Cut

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — According to his former colleagues, or rather those who served with him in the house of representatives, Boss Ed Crump of Memphis is one of St. Peter's finest prospects and a folden halo, harp and lovely white wings should be placed in reserve for the day when Ed knocks and tells St. Peter that his earthly career is done.

On the floor of the house Wednesday, Lincoln's birthday, Congressmen Davis, Cooper, McCormack, Pearson and Doxey all joined in rendering to Boss Crump a eulogy seldom heard except at funerals, having taken umbrage at some remarks made an. 22 in the Congresional Record by Congresman Lee Geyer of California.

The article headed, "Democracy Again Crucified by the 'Fuehrer' of Tennessee" took the place of a speech and heaped coals of fire on Crump's head for his blocking the passage of the Anti-Poll Tax bill promised the people of Tennessee by the present governor when he campaigned for office.

"This is how the threat of democracy was cut," said Mr. Geyer, "and minority rule perpetuated in Tennessee at the bidding of one of the foulest political bosses that even the foul poll-tax system ever produced."

As a result, newspapers of Tennessee carried stories that Congressman Davis, a supporter of Crump, threatened to whip Mr. Geyer when he left the floor, so outraged was Mr. Davis. But when he read the story in the Tennessee paper, the Californian merely said, "It is always the pig that is caught under the fence that squeals the loudest, so it would follow that Davis is a part of the Crump machine."

After the outburst in Congress Wednesday, when Mr. Crump was lauded to the skies by the men mentioned above, Mr. Geyer further said:

"I am not concerned with local political squabbles in any state. Nor do I have any intention to impugn Mr. Crump as an individual. I have never met the gentleman, and for all I know he may be everything that Mr. Davis claims for him. But I do know this: that Mr. Crump and his machine led the people of Tennessee to believe in 1938 that they were sincerely for the repeal of the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting. His candidates were elected to office because of that pledge. In 1941 Mr. Crump betrayed his promises to the people of Tennessee.

FEB 22 1941

"I daresay that Mr. Davis and his sponsor, Mr. Crump, are not so much concerned with what I have had to say about the poll tax as they are with the growing determination of the people of Tennessee to restore majority rule for themselves, either by state action or through federal anti-poll tax bill. I am happy to know that at last I have 'smoked out' recognition in Congress of the fight I have been putting up for those who have been denied the democratic process."

Intruder In Florida, Talmadge Informed

Governor, Told He Is "Unwelcome Guest" at Football Game, Leaves Jacksonville Without Comment.

The Governor left Jacksonville immediately after the annual Georgia-Florida football game yesterday but there was no indication that a letter from a group of Florida students calling him an "unwelcome guest" had anything to do with his quick departure.

The Governor attended the game, apparently unworried by the letter. He watched the first half from the north stands, where the University of Florida student section always is located, and moved across to the south stands at half-time.

John Cotton Brown, editor of the Florida student newspaper, The Alligator, headed a group that delivered the letter to the Governor's hotel in Jacksonville.

Apparently referring to recent changes made by the Governor in the Georgia University System, the letter said the Florida group felt "that you have no true interest in today's game since you have shown no sympathy or regard for the universities of your state."

"Today you are on hand for the annual gridiron clash between our respective state universities," the letter said. "Ordinarily we Floridians would take great pleasure in extending our hospitality to the Governor of a neighboring state.

"But I believe I reflect student sentiment of the University of Florida when I say that today we consider you an unwelcome guest at today's game—a damper on an otherwise festive occasion."

The letter invited the Governor to "enjoy the game if you can," adding that "you are an intruder against whom our welcome mat has been withdrawn."

Among the hundreds of decorated automobiles which jammed the streets here before the football game was one on which was mounted a dummy hanged by the neck. The dummy was placarded with the Georgia Governor's name.

The Governor could not be reached during or after the game for comment. At his hotel, it was understood he had checked out after a luncheon in his honor and that he never had any intention of spending the night in Jacksonville.

Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida, also was not available. Other university officials declined to comment officially. One said, however, that Brown and the other students acted on their own initiative without any authorization to represent the university or the student body.

TALMADGE ON THE SPOT

The world, the South and Georgia in particular are all just living for next Wednesday, for it is then that everybody will be let in on the secret of just how the Peach State's home-grown Hitler is going to wriggle out of the dilemma which faces him.

A special committee of Georgia's Board of Regents has drawn up a program of what it is prepared to do to preserve the state university system's accredited standing, now jeopardized by charges of political interference. Dire secrecy surrounded the preparation of this document, but the impartial Associated Press has permitted itself to infer that the principal issue is whether to offer to rehire educators whose ouster started the current controversy and put that heavy frown on the collective brow of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. At any rate the program will be unveiled before a special session of the full board next Wednesday. Presumably at this time both Georgians and the benighted foreigners outside the limits of the state will also be let in on the good news.

That the final decision will represent Talmadge's decree need not be doubted by anyone who recalls his previous success in making the Board of Regents, packed with Talmadgites as it is, jump through a hoop.

The trouble is that just here lately genial Gene and Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the Regents, have been valiantly paddling the boat in opposite directions.

Chairman Beaver, who seems to be in a perpetual cold perspiration these days, has said that he has been contacting the ousted men with the object of rehiring them. He apparently means just that, for he has already stated that he is willing to "crawl on his belly" to keep the Georgia system in good standing. And he has before him the Governor's august mandate to the Regents to do "whatever is necessary" to keep the state's institutions accredited.

NOV 1 5194

Through it all one cannot help believing that, whatever Beaver and Talmadge may think, rehiring of Cocking and his former colleagues has little to do with the question. The real issue is whether the governor of the state of Georgia has a right to subvert the Board of Regents as he has done by tampering with its membership through forced resignations and additions.

In the meantime Talmadge, after a few snorts about "nobody's going to crawl," has flatly said that former Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the University of Georgia, will never darken the state's scholastic doors again and that goes for anybody else who advocates "racial co-education." Since most of the ousted gentlemen were ousted on that charge, Gene's ukase seems pretty sweeping.

In the meantime the Lord of the Red Suspenders has been trying to take Georgians' attention off the sorry mess he has created by administering a few thumps to an old scapegoat of his, the daily press. Confronting Atlanta newspapers with a ponderous mass of so-called "evidence" about Dr. Cocking's dire intentions, he demanded that it be printed in full and verbatim, in regular news type, as "news."

The average newspaper reader knows instinctively and Talmadge should have known by his experience during the years in which Georgia's public life has been afflicted with him, that this was quite an impossible request. The generality of newspapers long ago made a rule against running running anything in the way of a report or long document verbatim, as news. In the first place not one in a hundred of the public will care to plow through it. And newspaper space is far too valuable to be donated in this fashion. Almost the sole exception to this unvarying standard are presidential addresses.

So, by making an impossible demand, Talmadge sought to gain a point with the ignorant and unthinking, his principal allies in any controversy.

If the newspapers had really been disposed to make trouble for him, they could have refused to carry his "evidence" at all. As it was, they ran full-page advertisements carrying the questionable data in question and Talmadge flourishingly paid off and called upon his friends to chip in and repay their generous benefactor.

So, everybody is looking forward to next Wednesday. What will slippery Gene do? Will he let the Board of Regents do his crawling for him and try some other dodge to distract the public's attention? Will he stand firm and sling a little more of the mud he has already slung at the Southern Association? Or what?

Somehow or other he will save his face—at least nominally — no matter what becomes of Georgia's university system. The little matters of stirring up dangerous racial hatreds and imperilling the standing of thousands of innocent students are just details. Gene's ego must be preserved.

NOV 5 1941

"All's well that ends well . . ."

Eugene Talmadge has suffered a defeat so total and auspicious in the double matter of laying unholy hands on the South's educational process and falsely agitating its race problem that he should have only to go through with the terms of surrender to have Georgia's higher educational system restored to glory in this land, we believe. He has been defeated by the very public opinion upon whose prejudices he tried to play. The newspapers of the South and the student bodies of Georgia have been his immediate opponents but their antagonism has reflected the opinion of Southern people as a whole. If the incident ends now in the surrender and restorations which seem to be in store, it can be put down on the profit side of the Southern ledger. For there is much profit in the disclosure that the Southern people have gone forward from the times when ignorant or demagogic plays to their worst qualities could succeed.

NOV 5 1941

There is an educational problem in the South, and there is a race problem. But our people are coming to understand that the hope of solution for both lies in directions of science, calm, cooperation and good will, not in the heats and hates of false prophets, white or black.

* * *

Two vessels of the United States Navy have been struck by German torpedoes. They were convoying merchant ships loaded with war material for England and other enemies of Germany. Germany says the United States is guilty of attack. The United States says Germany is guilty. And we everyday Americans, preferring to take our own country's side, are troubled a little by the commonsense which tells us that aggression as between the United States and Germany's has been that of the United States. To this writer it seems that the war crisis has become too stern and exalted a thing for Americans at last to subject them to doubts like this. The American people are beginning to feel all-out. In that state they are too big for legalistics or sentimentalities about the shooting war at sea. They much prefer, we believe, to have it said that this country has indeed attacked Germany, and for supreme cause.

For the record's sake and the law's sake and eventual reparation's it may be well for our government to deny Germany's charge of having been "attacked." But we-the-people, who are simple enough to find simple fact hard to escape, know well that it is our country which has taken the aggressive in this war. Neutrality on our part has become a more and more shadowy formality. For many months now we have been moving to thwart Germany and aid England in every possible way short of shooting. For many months we have been moving nearer to the shooting, and now that we have arrived, the tortures of debate over who shot first or who made the first hostile gesture that required an answering shot are matters we can leave to the lawyers. Long ago we made up our national mind to do whatever was necessary to keep Hitler from putting England down and leaving us alone in the world to face him. At just what point in the progress of that policy a technical "attack" has occurred, and just who has done the attacking, is hard to say. But for benefit of the great mass of Americans who don't like subterfuge and who think this cause is too great to depend on it, why not let it be said without question or quibble that the United States has, indeed attacked Germany?

We have attacked Germany because our national life depends on England's survival against Germany. We have attacked Germany because we know that we cannot live in the same world with Hitler. We have attacked Germany because Germany has attacked civilization, honor, humanity, the plighted word, the dignity and privacy of human beings, the habit of freedom, the heritage of ages gone and the hope of years to come—and we are not willing to stand by when a thing like that happens to our planet. It is glory for us and it means life for us that we have taken the aggressive against this situation, not waited to be attacked but, in every fundamental sense, have ourselves attacked.

And our people, who know this in their hearts to be the truth, need not trouble themselves over the necessary claims, decisions and subtleties of our political officers.

* * *

From Kilby Prison comes a request for donations of tennis racquets, balls and nets to go with the tennis court Warden Wilson is permitting prisoners to build. There must be plenty of tennis players in Birmingham with old equipment they will never use again. Here's hoping they will send it down to Kilby. We refrain from saying that they may be down there themselves some day, for tennis, the greatest of all games, is distinctly conducive to law-abiding.

Talmadge Removes Politicians From Board of Regents

Mixing White and Colored Only Issue In Cocking Hearing

—By W. T. Anderson—

NOV 15 1941

TALMADGE TURNED the tables on his political enemies when he brought out the sworn stenographic notes of Miss Madge Moore, court reporter of Athens, Ga., who officially kept the minutes on the meeting between Cocking and seven or eight Negro educators of Georgia, and three from other states, where Cocking outlined his plans to have two Negroes on the Board of Regents, another in the office of Chancellor Sanford, and to establish conditions in Georgia where white students would be applying for admission to Negro colleges in Georgia.

People who defend Cocking and denounce Talmadge, in the face of that evidence, do nothing less than endorse Cocking's plan for mixture of white and colored students in the schools of Georgia—which is contrary to the constitution and laws of the state. And it is contrary to the wishes of the people of Georgia, both white and colored.

TALMADGE'S ENEMIES had him in the dog-house on the charge that he had played politics to re-organize the board of regents and refuse to re-elect Cocking. But few people gave any thought to the fact that the board of regents was already under political manipulation, brought about when Governor Rivers appointed nine or ten university alumni on the board, instead of tracking the law which specifies not more than five alumni from any one school of the university system. Where all these virtuous, "law-abiding" Talmadge enemies have been all these years, that they didn't say anything about Rivers having played politics with the schools of Georgia by ignoring this law, and the board of regents having been illegally organized and its operations illegal—where were all these accrediting associations and the house-top shouters that they didn't get Georgia thrown off the accrediting lists away back there? No, Rivers appointed some Atlanta newspaper men on the illegal and political board—and that was different, quite all right.

The plain facts of the case are that Talmadge really took politics out of the board as it had been politically and illegally organized and operated all these years. Although his enemies claim he put stooges on the board who would do his bidding, that is a charge to be proved, not taken for granted. It is an insult to the new members on the board, but that is their fight. If Rivers and the Atlanta gang hadn't played politics to begin with, Talmadge could not have removed anybody from the board, and he couldn't have "interfered with the state's educational operations." Cocking could have gone on with his plans for mixing the whites and blacks, as he was doing unchallenged under the Rivers board of regents.

INQUIRY ARISES as to why Talmadge didn't previously bring out these stenographic notes of the Athens meeting between Cocking and the Negro educators—that if he had done so it would have prevented all the hurrah about his playing politics with the educational system of Georgia.

I don't know why he didn't bring it out. My guess is that he didn't have it. "Then," says one, "it is too late to consider it now."

"That is silly," said I. "The law provides for introduction of newly discovered evidence being a basis for a new trial, and plenty of people condemned to death have been saved from the electric chair by newly discovered evidence."

TALMADGE MADE no political charge against Cocking at the hearing in the legislative halls, but he did charge him with trying to mix the races in Georgia schools. He relied upon Cocking's close and long association with Edwin R. Embree, chairman of the Rosenwald Foundation, and Embree's book Brown America, in which Embree contends that the South is carrying a double load in maintaining separate accommodations for two races—that it would be cheaper and more practical if the two races were "integrated" or mixed that better accommodations and facilities could be provided this applying to everything. Dr. Embree thinks the Negroes and whites will eventually intermarry, and we shall have a Brown America, the Negro race will be absorbed by the whites, and thus all race problems will be solved.

Also presented at the hearing was evidence by Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, who swore Dr. Cocking told a faculty meeting at which she was present that he planned to have a campus within 30 minutes of Athens, that all graduates of the college of education would have to take practice teaching there, and that it was to be for both whites and blacks, "in order to uplift the state of Georgia." That was the evidence on which Dr. Cocking failed of re-election and set all the Talmadge enemies howling that he had played politics with the University of Georgia by removing several illegally appointed members of the board of regents.

The Spoils System In Georgia

Gov. Talmadge, who ought to know, from experience, what he is talking about, gave this advice at Savannah about handing out State jobs: "Of course you want to give jobs to your friends, and that sometimes means firing somebody else. But never fire one man—that's a real mistake—fire a hundred, and they'll get all messed up with each other and you come out all right."

Which points out one of the greatest evils of the spoils system in Georgia—the people of the State and the welfare of the State are not taken into consideration. Nor is any weight given the fact that it costs money and State affairs are confused when it is necessary to break in new employes of the State.

Gov. Talmadge is not the only offender; all governors before him have kicked out employes and replaced them with friends, or friends of his friends' friends. And so every two or four years, State business comes practically to a standstill, while new workers are taught their jobs.

Naturally, the governor should have some appointive power in order to operate the State. But for the ordinary workers, there should be some form of civil service, where the workers are placed on ability and keep their jobs from one administration to the next as long as they are capable and efficient, and keep out of State politics.—Tifton (Ga.) Gazette.

Stifle the Incendiaries

Thirty-five years ago the Atlanta newspapers fanned a rumor into a race riot. With flaming headlines and inflammatory news stories, having no solid basis of fact, the people of Atlanta were worked up to a frenzy. Angry and unreasoning mobs gathered. Innocent Negroes by the score were shot and stabbed while the shrill cries of the newsboys, hawking these incendiary extras, fed the passions of the mob which gave Georgia an unprecedented night of horror.

Any fool with a lighted cigarette can start a prairie fire, but a heavy responsibility rests upon the conservative citizens of this state unless they halt the infamous mob psychology whipped into riotous fury by these Atlanta newspapers in their cowardly political attacks upon Governor Talmadge in connection with the university system.

We have only to turn from the hysteria to the facts, and what are the facts? The real politics in the background of this affair consisted in the violation of the plain letter of the law by Governor Rivers who packed the board of regents with his own friends.

OCT 30 1941

Section 50 of the Act of 1931, after prescribing qualifications of board members says, "Nor shall more than five members of said board be alumni of any one of the institutions or schools named herein."

Governor Talmadge merely did his duty and upheld the law when he displaced members of the board who had been illegally appointed. In all this hysterical fanfare about maintaining high ideals, upholding "democracy" and eschewing "politics", are these agitators blind to the common honesty of obeying the law?

The newly named members of the board are among the most high-minded and representative citizens of this state. Surely in their devotion to the best interests of the State University system they can stand comparison with the cheap demagogues whose one purpose is, not to serve the university, but "to get Talmadge."

And yet these incendiaries have the nerve to raise the cry of purging the university from "politics." O shame, where is thy blush!

The sniveling hypocrisy of the agitation is evidenced by the further fact that no one dreams for a moment that the general assembly, as now constituted, would strip Talmadge of the right to appoint members of the board of regents. Two-thirds of the members in the last session supported Talmadge and greatly enlarged his powers. To strip him of any power now would mean that the two-thirds formerly his friends have now become his enemies, and nobody believes it.

So this whole crusade is just a transparent farce.

It is admitted that the one issue with the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools arises from the refusal of the regents to renew the contract of one teacher out of 1,500 in the university system.

OCT 30 1941

Opposition to Dean Cocking was based on his affiliation with the Rosenwald Fund, coupled with the charge that this fund encourages racial equality.

Is this a myth?

It has been shown that the present head of the Rosenwald Fund published a book entitled Brown America, blatant in its advocacy of racial equality.

It was charged, moreover, that this doctrine, so odious to the South, is but the spearhead of the drive by subversive influences to destroy our American institutions.

Does the student body at the university doubt the racial implications of the Rosenwald Fund?

On the bulletin board of the graduate school at the university last week appeared a poster offering Rosenwald scholarships to university students. It was addressed to Negroes as well as whites.

How did the student body construe this poster? Their publication, Red and Black last week contained a reference to this poster with the following comment:

> It was GENERALLY CONCEDED ON THE CAMPUS today that the paragraph was designed to "entice Southern students to be damn-yankee North and teach them to be nigger-lovers" before they return home.

If this was "generally conceded" on the the university campus we may at least infer that the racial issue was not a myth in the eyes of a majority of the student body.

In addition to the Atlanta dailies, the most vocal of the agitators against Talmadge is the Communist party of Atlanta which last week distributed pamphlets along the highways in front of our Georgia schools. Here we have the same old Communist tags about the "capitalistic" class. Says one paragraph:

OCT 30 1941

> Everybody but Gene and his dying-out landlord-banker reactionary dominating class with their Fascist ideas of class and racial hatreds, knows reaction is doomed before a rising wave of democracy all over the Southland. . . . Why do we, the people of Georgia, permit this living relic of the feudal ages, the Georgia Hitler, to purge progressive trends from our libraries and school faculties.

If this means anything, it was wrong to purge from our schools the infamous text books of the Red radical Harold Rugg and to purge from the university any taint of "progressive" radical equality. If the taint wasn't there, how could Reds be peeved by its removal?

At all events, we find the Atlanta newspapers waving the same torch with the Atlanta branch of the Communist party, which boldly gives its address on the pamphlet just named as Box 810, Atlanta.

Finally, the so-called accrediting agency which assumes to dictate to Georgians how we are to run our affairs carries into the field of education the principle of John Lewis who is willing to wreck national defense to bring about a closed shop. It is an impudent OGPU from which the state university should free itself, in line with the suggection of the Office of Education at Washington, which says these agencies are so "arbitrary and adventitious" that they should be liquidated.

OCT 30 1941

Any ambitious boy can get an education at the state university which will qualify him for success in life without any "credits" from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and we should be proud of the distinction of freeing ourselves of its impudent despotism.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

KNEE-PANTS HUEY LONG.

The student demonstration against Gov. Eugene Talmadge on the University of Georgia campus was not an irresponsible manifestation of youthful spirits. It indicated that the youth of the state appreciate that they must pay the price because the voters were sufficiently ill advised to return Talmadge to office after once getting rid of him. The first payment has already been exacted. In reprisal for the governor's bigoted attack on the state's educational system the Southern University conference, composed of 41 leading institutions from Maryland to Georgia, has unanimously dropped the University of Georgia from membership.

The action resulted from Talmadge's removal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking as dean of the university's school of education. The governor charged that Dr. Cocking advocated racial equality. The conference found that Talmadge had acted without justifiable cause and that he was guilty of political interference with education. The cases of half a dozen other educators purged by Talmadge were not considered.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is also investigating the Georgia situation and there are indications that it will remove all state schools from its accredited list. The General Education board, a philanthropic organization which has given a large amount of money to Georgia educational institutions, has withdrawn all further support. The Rosenwald fund, which is dedicated to the improvement of the colored people, is expected to follow suit.

The funds to sustain education in Georgia are being taken away and accredited status is on the way out. When that happens Georgia students will be unable to transfer their credits to any other approved school which they might seek to attend. In a system of free schools this would result in the debasement of Georgia scholarship to the level prevailing in Nazi Germany.

There have been many invasions of academic freedom in the past. In most cases the pressure exerted by such organizations as the American Association of University Professors, the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and similar agencies which set standards and protect the spirit of free inquiry have been sufficient to bring the offender to mark.

Let us hope it is so in Georgia. Not since Huey Long degraded the educational system of Louisiana and attempted to convert the state university into a hippodrome has there been such a pernicious assault on the province of learning. The development of an enlightened younger generation that would prevent the recurrence of such abuses and lead Georgia forward into a respectable place among the states is being retarded. Gov. Talmadge, like Huey Long, apparently prefers the perpetuation of a Tobacco Road civilization. Only in such an environment could he survive as a pint-sized tyrant.

Here's To Gene—The Crowd-Master

In his campaigns for office, the great Talmadge crowds gave superb color and uniqueness to the rampages of Governor Talmadge. The crowds went from stump to stump, hurrahing for their candidate. In many instances those comprising the vast audiences that turned out to hear the governor were largely the same crowd. They knew his speeches by heart and they went from town to town rehearsing them before the speaker. Crowd counting became a favorite pastime. Governor Talmadge often colored the occasion by riding up the street in a wagon behind two healthy mules. Candidates argued more about crowds than issues. Gene loved his crowd—whether the crowd loved Gene or voted for him or not, it generally availed itself of the opportuity of communing with the boys around the courthouse squares and the barbecue groves.

That was a different crowd that serged upon Atlanta from the University of Georgia on October 15. There was not the glamour of the famous "Tell 'Em Gene" banners, the snapping of red suspenders and the one-tooth yells of brown mule swappers. These were students of the university—sane and sober protesting the demoralization of their alma mater. There were crude drawings of the governor with forelock and horn-rimmed spectacles—but "pin the tail on the jackass" supplanted the well known slogan "He Kept His Promises".

Thus the state and nation endured the hardships of an unsurpassed chagrin and embarrassment at the fate their educational systems met in the Southern Conference.

Doubtless the governor's oft-expressed admiration of Huey Long and his reading of Hitler's book are having repercussions in his ravages upon the educational system of Georgia.

In his contention before the Southern Conference at Birmingham that he was afraid of the Negro, the governor contented himself with the charge that those who opposed him were working for co-education of white and blacks in the school when he himself knew and the conference knew that this is prohibited by law.

The vote of the conferees and the massive protest of students—winked at by the authorities at the university and teachers as well, say in so many emphatic terms that the day is gone when the Negro question can hoist demagogues into high office in the South.

In the Old days some candidates on sundry occasions always inserted a Negro plank in their platforms. The people caught up with them and are showing them that they are tired of it.

Possibly, this is the last time in the dear old Southland a candidate will come out waving the bloody shirt and shouting from every stump the fear of the Negro peril.

So—here's to Gene—the crowd-master.

Students Mad at Talmadge As Georgia '11' Heads North

OCT 1 51941

Fascist Minded Governor Hung in Effigy After Team Is Expelled from Southern Conference —Students o Demonstrate at Columbia

Booted out of the Southern Conference because Gov. Eugene Talmadge forced it to oust a dean advocating racial equality, Georgia University sends its crack eleven to New York to play Columbia this Saturday—and can expect decent people here to also protest Talmadge's action.

More than 1,500 Georgia students hung Talmadge in effigy Monday night, after the Southern University Conference, comprising 41 southern schools, declared that removal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the Georgia School of Education, was "a contradiction of the ideal of education and a threat to democracy in America."

New York students are planning a huge demonstration against Georgia's poll-tax, fascist governor outside Baker Field, where the Bulldogs meet Columbia.

And up at Columbia (which itself has a far from perfect record so far as minorities are concerned) officials although hesitating to speak for publication, indicated that they are glad that the two-game series with Georgia comes to a close this week.

An avowed admirer of Hitler, Talmade accused Dean Cocking of the dreadful crime of advocating a school near the university campus for both white and Negro students.

After shuffling the university board of regents to get a majority, and flying in the face of Georgia public opinion, "Our Gene" forced the dismissal of the dean and of Dr. Marvin S Pittman, president of the South Georgia Teachers College.

OCT 1 51941

This wrecker of education and small-fry fascist probably thought that was the end of the case. But it was only the beginning. Protests were heard all over the nation. The ouster of the university from the Conference and the action of aroused Georgia students in hanging Talmadge in effigy. indicate that Talmadge will soon have reaped more than he can sow.

Georgia has a strong team this year. If the students are so aroused at being ousted from the Conference—and it is most significant that they reacted correctly against Talmadge, and not against Negroes or their professors—then it's likely that Georgia's footballers are even angrier at the Governor.

Being booted from the Conference after hard weeks of practice, their hopes of a championship blasted, the boys no doubt concur with student sentiment on Talmadge.

Star of the Bulldog eleven is Frankie Sinkwich, junior and potential All-American who will play with a healing broken jaw. It's wired—and Frankie is wired for speed.

Both Georgia and Columbia are undefeated.

700 STUDENTS 'GO TO TOWN' ON TALMADGE

OCT 17 1941

Ride to Georgia Capitol, Want Star Halfback for Governor

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 16 (UP).—Seven hundred University of Georgia students today piled into jallopies, roadsters and borrowed autos and drove to the state capitol, shouting demands that red-calloused Gene Talmadge be replaced as Governor by the University's star halfback.

The students were mad because the southern university conference had dropped the University of Georgia on the ground that Talmadge had interfered politically by engineering the ouster of Dr. Walter D. Cocking from the deanship of the university's school of engineering.

Talmadge was not on hand to greet the undergraduates, including 200 co-eds, when they reached the capitol after a 75-mile trip from the campus at Athens. He was in south Georgia—exact place undisclosed—where he announced he was going soon after the protesting students yesterday decided to come to Atlanta.

Streaming over cars in the lead of the motorcade were banners.

"Sinkwich for Governor."

And through the crowd of students ran the chant:

"We want Sinkwich for Governor."

The college youths were referring to Frankie Sinkwich, star junior halfback at the university.

"Act like a Georgia alumnus, Governor"; "take politics out of our university"; "we don't want to go to an unaccredited school."

After demonstrating on the capitol lawn, the students drove through downtown Atlanta, honking horns and yelling:

"Down with Talmadge"; "Give him hell, Georgia."

The Talmadge-dominated board of regents fired Cocking because he allegedly had favored racial equ ity.

Gene Loses Fight To Block Advance Of Ex-Mercer Man

ATLANTA, (AP)—The state board of regents, recently embroiled over racial issues, Monday overrode Governor Eugene Talmadge's effort to block the appointment of a law school dean whom he accused of eating a meal with Negroes.

SEP 9 1941

The governor told the regents he wanted them to know that Henry A. Shinn, recommended by President Harmon W. Caldwell of the University of Georgia for acting dean of the law school, was "one of the boys who had his picture taken eating with Negroes."

The reference was to a farewell dinner tendered by selective service officials to the first Negro selectees from Athens

Professor Shinn was a former resident of Macon, having served on the Mercer University law faculty from 1929 through 1935.

Talmadge said if a majority of the board approved the appointment, he would abide by their decision, adding that he liked Shinn personally and that he believed the law professor had been induced to attend the dinner against his will and lacked the boldness to leave.

Then Talmadge pointed out that Shinn had been serving as dean of the college of liberal arts and that his transfer would create a vacancy in that position. He recommended E. H. Dixon, acting head of the physics department, saying that Dixon had defended the regents when they were all called fools at an indignation meeting of the university faculty.

The governor was not specific, but apparently his faculty gathering followed the regents' refusal to re-employ two educators accused by Talmadge of advocating racial co-education.

SEP 9 1941

Vice Chairman E. Ormonde Hunter of Savannah announced that Talmadge's remarks did not sit well with him, claimed another man had been fired on the grounds he was in the picture with the Negroes when he was not and said he would vote against the governor's recommendations. George C. Woodruff of Columbus said he thought the procedure was irregular because faculty nominations should come through the chancellor from the head of the institution involved.

An immediate closed meeting of the education-finance committee was called while the board marked time. When the committee came back, it recommended 3 to 1 that Shinn be appointed. This was accepted without dissent. Mrs. Susie T. Moore of Tifton said she cast the negative committee vote.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford said the appointment of Dixon did not arise in the committee because no recommendation had been made by President Caldwell. Earlier, however, Talmadge had instructed Sanford to recommend Dixon.

SEP 9 1941

In Athens, E. R. Hodgson, chairman of the local draft board, issued a statement commending the regents for their refusal "to join with the governor in his attempt to punish Dean Shinn because to have done so would have victimized one who, in a sense of patriotic duty to his country, attended the selective service meeting."

Hodgson called the governor's action regrettable and said he believed white citizens who do not want to jeopardize harmonious race relations "must voice their disapproval of these unpatriotic tactics."

'Used Patriotic Event To Stir Racial Hatred'

E. R. Hodgson 'Surprised' at Critical Utterance of Executive.

The reference by the Governor yesterday to Professor Henry A. Shinn, of the University of Georgia, as "one of those boys who had his picture taken eating with Negroes," brought the following statement from E. R. Hodgson, chairman of the Clarke county draft board:

"It is regrettable that Governor Talmadge has attacked the selective service meeting held here in December, 1940, by attempting to punish a member of the University of Georgia faculty, Dr. Henry L. Shinn, for taking part in that patriotic occasion. I am glad the Board of Regents refused to join with the Governor in his attempt to punish Dean Shinn because to have done so would have victimized one who, in a sense of patriotic duty to his country, attended the selective service meeting.

"The newspapers have reported that agents of the Governor have gone about the state seeking to make it appear that the meeting held for the Negro volunteers last December was an occasion fostering social equality between the races and have thus thrown into the realm of partisan politics a national defense event held at the request of the state selective service headquarters and we were informed, with the approval of the National Selective Service headquarters.

"I am, indeed, surprised that the chief executive of our state, sworn to maintain law and order and discourage fomenting of racial antagonisms and who is himself at the head of the Georgia Selective Service System, should use a patriotic occasion given by selective service in such a manner as to jeopardize co-operation between the races in defense of the country.

SEP 9 1941

"The meeting here last December for the Negro volunteers, similar to one previously given in honor of white volunteers, was attended by Major C. J. Brockman officially representing the Georgia Selective Service headquarters and its purpose was to demonstrate that the southern white citizens, in charge of operating selective service, were appreciative of the Negroes' support of the national defense program."

There Was No Alternative

OCT 1 51941

Though the racial aspect of the Cocking case was carefully avoided by members of the Southern University Conference in deciding to drop the University of Georgia from its ranks, there can be no doubt that it played no small part in aiding the committtee to reach its drastic decision.

Actually there was no alternative for the conference to take, representing as it does the major liberal arts colleges in the South, than the one decided upon. The course was clear to all fair-minded persons anxious to keep this section's educational institutions from falling to the low level that marks the thinking of many of the demagogic politicians, who unfortunately too often find fertile ground in the South.

Though the conference used the diplomatically stated reason of "a clear case of political interference" as the grounds for dropping the University of Georgia, the executive committee in substance told Governor Talmadge and his Board of Regents that it just did not believe the charges lodged against Dr. Cocking justified his discharge.

The conference by its decision, held that Dr. Cocking committed no fundamental wrong if he attempted to find a way for the South to abide by the Supreme Court's decision holding that professional and graduate training of equal rank must be provided all residents of that state, no matter what the color of their skin might be.

Discharging of professors, "packing" of boards or loud cries of "racial co-education" designed to stir up deep-seated emotions will not change this decision. This, the members of the conference well know.

OCT 1 5 1941

Those members who cast their ballot to erase the University of Georgia's name from the conference's rolls were placing themselves on record in opposition to those who would disregard this high court decision.

Right-thinking Americans should be grateful for their action. It reveals to the world that the cry "Negro, Negro" can no longer be effectively used by ambitious Southern politicians as a stepping stone to office, without having disastrous repercussions. It is to be hoped that the harsh lesson has been effectively absorbed by those who would still attempt it.

Governor Hurls Four-Way Blast; Appears Tired

Hits Group Here Moving for Restoration of School Liberty.

By LUKE GREENE.

Fulfilling the supreme law of the big top—"the show must go on"—the Governor came back to his office yesterday, admitted he had been a "little under the weather" for the past week, but mustered his available energy and started jabbing in the following directions:

1. Blasted a group of Atlantans who have joined in a movement for the restoration of educational independence in Georgia by charging they were connected with inter-racial organizations.

2. Told the representative of a New York newspaper that The Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta Journal were "lined up to git him," and urged the New York newsman to "write a story that will bring an independent newspaper to Georgia."

Monroe Action Legal.

3. Declared it wasn't necessary to have a legal opinion as to whether the State Board of Education could take over David I. (Red) Barron's school at Monroe, since he already had decided it was legal, but added he was asking State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. to make an audit of the institution's $25,000 indebtedeness.

4. Let it be known that Mrs. Sylla Hamilton, principal witness against Dr. Walter Cocking, already had been approved for an instructorship at the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville by explaining he talked to Chairman Sandy Beaver and Chancellor S. V. Sanford about two weeks ago, and that the move had been agreed to by the three-man committee. Chancellor Sanford, however, had announced a meeting of the committee would be held this week.

Appearing tired, the chief executive was seeing callers in his office for the first time this week. When newsmen asked him what he had been doing in the last few days, he said he had been "findin' out things."

"Little Under Weather."

Later, however, when the New York reporter walked in, he said he had been "a little under the weather" and "layin' it on business."

Gradually he warmed up to his attack on James Branch, Atlanta attorney; Edwin Camp, editorial writer, and Dr. Ashby Jones, minister, who signed their names to a letter sent out over the state urging a return to educational independence.

"Who is this Dr. Jones?" he said. "Well, I'll tell you who he is. He's honorary president of the Commission of Interracial Co-operation. They send out this stuff advocating equal traveling facilities for the Negroes and admonishing the courts to watch out in their dealings with the Negroes. I understand he writes for The Constitution.

Case of Dr. Jones.

"That's all right if he is. When one of these preachers get mixed up with newspapering and interracial organizations and a few other things they'll bear watching, too.

"And what about Edwin Camp? he went on. "He's with the Journal, isn't he? I think I'll do a little investigating and see if he's on the Rosenwald Fund."

When the New York newsman walked into the Governor's office, the chief executive snapped into a routine that has become "stock stuff" for visiting newspapermen who are planning to write pieces about him.

First, he asked permission to get rid of his cud of tobacco before any pictures were taken. Then he relapsed into a series of telephone conversations in which he talked at length about cows and the fact that this was not the time of year for "pink eye" in cattle. He interspersed these with generous helpings of good old backwoods phrases.

Hits Atlanta Papers.

Then when the newspaperman had taken copious notes and become thoroughly acclimated to the Georgia scene, the Governor launched his customary attack on the Atlanta newspapers.

"The Atlanta newspapers have stirred up something that is not to the best interests of Georgia," he said. "We need another paper. The Constitution and Journal have gotten together."

The Governor said he wasn't asking for an opinion on the Barron school transfer despite the fact State Superintendent of Schools M. D. Collins had called for one. He said he had studied the act and thought the transfer was legal.

Asked whether the Board of Regents committee would approve the transfer of Mrs. Hamilton from the University of Georgia to G. S. C. W., the Governor replied:

"That already has been settled. We did that about two weeks ago. I talked to Chairman Beaver and Chancellor Sanford and we agreed it was all right."

Talmadge Says None Can Discredit Ga.

The Southern University Conference of Schools, comprising 41 institutions for higher education in Southern States, voted Monday night to drop the Univerity of Georgia from its ranks, according to reports. The educators were in meeting in Birmingham, Ala.

Action came after a special conference committee reported on the ousting of Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the University of Georgia. Dean Cocking had been accused of advocating racial co-education.

The special committee reporting on the ouster of Dr. Cocking termed the Talmadge Regent board action unwarranted in the face of pleas and recommendations by Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the Georgia University System, and Harmon W. Caldwell, University of Georgia president.

Governor Talmadge and members of his Regents' Board which ousted Cocking appeared before the conference Sunday to "explain" their actions.

In Atlanta Monday night, Governor Talmadge was quoted as saying no outside force on earth can discredit the University of Georgia. He was quoted further as saying that those who voted to drop Georgia from the list of the conference evidently advocated co-education of the races.

GA. SCHOOL LIBRARIES PURGED OF 23 BOOKS

Race Question Involved; Talmadge Lauds Move

Twenty-three books were ordered removed from the libraries of Georgia high schools and grade schools by the State School Board Wednesday on the grounds that their teachings were subversive or opposed to Southern views on the Negro question and evolution.

The Board's report said books were found criticizing the South's treatment of Negroes, teaching that the Bible is a myth and that men and monkeys are of the same descent.

Governor Talmadge was particularly pleased in the report of the committee. He had brought about the "probe".

Titles of books ordered thrown out of Georgia school libraries were: "Since Yesterday," "Leadership in a Changing World, or the Socialist Cure for a Sick Society," "The March of Science, or Making Life Longer and Sweeter," "Southern Regions," "American History Told by Contemporaries," "American Social Problems," "The First Days of Man," "Growing Up," "We Call It Human Nature," "Social Problems and Social Sociology Dealing With the Negro Problem," "From Many Lands——a Special Questionnaire on the Negro," "A Child's Story of the Animal World", "Psychology of Adolescence," "Growth and Development of the Young Child," "Increasing Federal Power," "Big Problems on Little Shoulders," "Windows on Henry Street," "A Man Named Grant," "Men Who Found Out," "The Stream of History, or From Amoeba to Man," "Education for Democracy in Our Time," "In the Beginning," and "Being Born."

Authors of these books include some of the foremost writers and sociologists of all time.

A move to have textbooks printed in Georgia was indorsed by the board.

GEORGIA CHAIN GANGS AND TALMADGE

56K

The death of two Negro convicts recently on Georgia chain gangs—one by suffocation in a 'sweat box' and the other beaten to death with a rubber hose—seems horrible to citizens of other states, but in all probability is considered of no consequence in Georgia.

It is hard to conceive of Georgians taking exception to anything that transpires during the administration of Governor Eugene Talmadge. The red-suspendered, intolerant and autocratic clown is the idol of all classes in Georgia. The farmers worship him and the business interests and their political lawyers and public relations men look upon him as Georgia's greatest statesman and outstanding economic mind. His campaigns are conducted like a circus, and the fanaticism of his followers, along with the aid of big business gives him a landslide at the ballot box.

Although a small one, Talmadge is a circus. He can't do anything without creating loud noises in order to fool the boys on the farm about Gene doing things for the wool hat boys. The business interests like this because that helps Gene to get votes. And they want him to stay in power. He is good for their business they believe. But is he? He is impulsive in his actions and words. He is not intelligent in the sense that he has a trained and cultivated mind; he has, and exercises, a native cunning that gets the votes. In other words, he pleases Georgians. He is what they think they want, he fools the farmers and plays ball with the public relations men and political lawyers of big business. So, Gene gets them coming and going. Passing the biscuits gets Texas' votes, in Georgia one must wear red suspenders.

It is not surprising that Talmadge is defending the wardens of the chain gang camps where these Negroes died because of brutality. It will be surprising if there is enough resentment and fight left in the better class of Georgians to do the things that will win the respect of the peoples of other states. Even though citizens of other states are furriners according to the ruling of their red suspendered clownish governor, Georgians will learn that public opinion cannot always be flaunted to an advantage.

Looking at Georgia chain gangs and Talmadge THE CHATTANOOGA TIMES said:

"The death of 25-year-old Lewis Gordon, a Negro who was serving a life sentence, in a 'sweat box' at the Georgia chain gang camp near Rising Fawn, has had repercussions throughout Georgia. Reports that another Negro prisoner in a camp at Sparta, Ga., was beaten to death with a rubber hose are being investigated, and Governor Eugene Talmadge has instructed the Legislative Penitentiary Committee of the two houses of the General Assembly to "complete an investigation of all prison camps as soon as possible.' That is a step forward, and the promise that something will be done to eliminate the worst conditions in the barbaric chain gang camps would be reassuring if it were not for Governor Talmadge's record in the field of penal care.

"Unless it is former Governor Ed Rivers, no other Georgia executive has turned out of the prisons and jails by pardon and parole more convicted murderers and convicted felons than has Mr. Talmadge. His attitude toward any recommendation made by legislative investigators will be conditioned by the view he expresses now in defending his appointment as wardens of convict camps two convicted murderers whom he pardoned. Governor Talmadge says of Ed Goble and Fred Goble, who "helped a deputy sheriff kill a Negro in Elijay when they were 15 or 16 years old," that both are 'good boys.' Several years after he pardoned the men and soon after becoming governor for the third time about a year ago, Mr. Talmadge appointed the Gobles, who are twin brothers, as prison camp wardens. Defending their appointment, Governor Talmadge asserted on Monday that "if you want to treat prisoners why not get somebody who has been a prisoner himself and knows how they ought to be treated?'

"As a character witness for two convicted murderers, Governor Talmadge may have sound reasons for restoring their liberty. But he will find few persons who will agree with him that two men who in their teens 'helped kill a Negro" and were sentenced to serve the rest of their lives in prison are persons who should act in the name of a state government in the supervision of prisoners. It is debatable whether the chain gang system in Georgia will be abandoned or substantially improved so long as a Governor with Mr. Talmadge's views is in office."

Talmadge Not Too Sick To Lash At His Opponents

SEP 2 1941

Back to his desk Saturday after being "under the weather" several days, Governor Talmadge launched a verbal attack on a group of Atlantans who have joined in a movement for the restoration of educational independence in Georgia.

The Governor blasted the group, charging they were connected with interracial organizations.

It was revealed that Dr. Ashby Jones, noted minister and writer; James Branch, Atlanta attorney, and Edwin Camp, editorial writer, out over the state urging a return signed their names to letters sent to educational independence.

Talmadge Foe Named Law Dean

SEP 2 1941

ATLANTA, Sept. 18—(ANP)—Despite Gov. Eugene Talmadge's objections to him, the Georgia board of regents appointed Prof. Henry A. Shinn as acting dean of the University of Georgia's law school last Monday. Gov. Talmadge based his disapproval of the board's upon a picture which showed the professor dining with the first group of colored selectees leaving Athens, the seat of the university. Mr. Shinn is a member of the Athens' draft board.

Following the governor's objection, the finance and education committee of the board, of which the chief executive is a member, held a brief closed session. After reviewing his qualifications, the board recommended the appointment of Mr. Shinn. It was learned from the governor that the committee had voted three to one for the new acting dean.

Talmadge Gives "Stop" Signal To Intermingling of the Races

Editors Of Weekly Papers Beginning To Inform The People Of Progress Rosenwald And Other Funds Have Made Toward Breaking Down Color Lines In The South.

In an editorial, somewhat fraught with alarm, the Columbia News, published at Harlem, Georgia, Georgia people are cautioned that the influence of these Interracial League people and the various "funds" subsidizing Georgia newspaper men and educators have gone much further than the average man suspects.

A Student Resolution

"We were recently talking to a bright young Georgian," the editorial says, "who told us the following incident:

"In the summer of 1936 he attended a religious encampment at Blue Ridge, N. C. There were around 40 University students present along with delegates of other Georgia and southern colleges.

"A resolution was introduced to invite Negro boys and girls to attend the conference the next summer, and the colored girls were to share rooms with the white girls, and the colored boys were to occupy rooms with the white boys.

"The young man was one of four to speak and vote against the resolution. Nothing ever came of the movement, said the young man, inasmuch as it was in conflict to the state laws of North Carolina. But the flower of the white youth of the South was willing."

These "funds" send these students to these "conferences," giving them a vacation and carefully schooling them in the ways of Dr. Embree, the author of "Brown America." Only the "Jim Crow" laws of North Carolina prevented these people from inducing white boys and girls to the dormitory with negro boys and girls at this conference.

In both "Brown America" and "Calling America," and every other piece of literature or book they distribute in Georgia condemns most strongly the "Jim Crow" laws.

Produces Radical Students

"A brilliant young Georgian was presiding at the meeting," the editorial continues, "and advocated the adoption of the resolution. Several months ago this same youth was removed from the gallery of the U. S. Senate for vocal disturbance when the Lend-Lease bill was being discussed in Washington. He is under the wing of the National Youth Movement."

There is an example of what these radicals are doing for boys and girls. This Georgia boy was so indoctrinated with their ideas that he became President of the communist organization which paraded about Washington a few months ago, and which the President of the United States strongly chastised for their communist leanings. "It happened in Georgia" and these Funds were directly responsible for it.

Stir Up Race Strife

"A negro girl from Atlanta applied for admission to the University of Georgia," the editorial says. "If the truth were known, some group of white people inspired this colored girl to make such application."

The radicals decided to make the test case in Missouri instead of Georgia and certain negroes applied for admission to the School of Journalism and the School of Law. The federal courts decided that the state of Missouri would have to admit them or provide educational facilities equal to that enjoyed by whites. Missouri is laboring right now with the problem of whether to mix the races in her University. Talmadge has answered the question for Georgia.

False News Stories

The Rosenwald Fund and the General Education Fund (this name is used by the Rockefeller endowment) and others have gotten far with their program of race equality by two methods: (1) colored news stories and (2) secrecy.

Dr. J. R. McCain left the impression that a group of girls went to Tuskegee on their own volition and at a time when school was not in session and that it was nothing more than a tour of the school grounds. In truth and in fact, Dr. Arthur Raper, the Professor at Agnes Scott College whom the Rosenwald Fund sent there, carried these girls; they lived on the campus while there and they were introduced socially to the negro boys. Not only that: there have been numerous and regular "te-ta-te's" on the campus of negro schools, white girls and negro girls sitting on the lawns, practicing this "Brown America" doctrine. And this has been participated in by other colleges enjoying Rosenwald donations.

CONFERENCE DROPS GEORGIA UNIVERSITY

OCT 14 1941

Ousting of Dean Cocking by Regents Held Political

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 13 (AP)—Charging that removal of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia constituted "a clear case of political interference," the Southern University Conference voted unanimously today to drop the school from its ranks.

The conference approved an executive committee report stating that Mr. Cocking, dean of the College of Education, was "dismissed from his position without due and reasonable notice and upon charges which are not substantiated."

The Georgia Board of Regents, revamped by Governor Talmadge, voted to dismiss Dean Cocking this Summer. Governor Talmadge charged that the dean had advocated racial co-education.

Practically all of the South's major colleges are members of the Southern University Conference. Some educators had expressed the belief that action by the conference would influence later action by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, the official accrediting agency.

The conference has power only to remove the university from its ranks, but the association could drop the school from its accredited list.

Governor Talmadge left Atlanta today for his farm home in McRae, Ga., and was not available for comment. Several weeks ago he said that if the University of Georgia lost its accredited rating he would cut salaries of the school's professors in half, commenting that "they would not be worth as much."

SOME TALK FOR GOVERNOR TALMADGE

Listen, Governor,
In case you don't know,
Jim Crow has got to go!
Maybe you don't understand,
Jim Crow never did belong
In our great land,
Not in the original plan.
We fought England
So we could be free
To build a Democracy.
So let me tell you now,
Negroes crossed the Delaware
And froze at Valley Forge,
Negroes helped Washington
Beat King George.
Why don't you take a look
In a history book?
Listen, Governor,
Folks like me, well—
We believe in Liberty.
We like the Constitution
And the Bill of Rights, too.
What's more, we are tired
Of Governors like you,
Who can't find anything to do
But spread race hatred
Across the land,
Instead of trying to make Us all one American band.
Listen, Governor,
We are getting wise
To all you Poll-Tax guys.
We know you hold the South
By the throat,
We know you take away
The right to vote
From all poor people,
White and black.
We know how you stab Democracy
In the back, with lying speeches.
We know you are all
A bunch of leeches,
Taking it easy in high places,
Forgetting the people—
Hungry, with unturned faces.
Listen, Governor,
In case you don't know,
You, and Jim Crow both got to go!

Georgia U. Students In Demonstration

OCT 1 51941 OCT 1 51941

ATHENS, Ga.—(SNS)—The campus of the University of Georgia was calm Wednesday after an all-night demonstration against Governor Eugene Talmadge and the Board of Regents whose recent action in ousting Dean Walter D. Cocking on charges of advocating racial co-education resulted in the dropping of the school from the membership of the Southern University Conference. Students plan a motorcade to Atlanta and a protest mass meet on the State Capitol lawn. Sixteen senior and junior colleges in the University System of Georgia face possible loss of their acredited rating when an investigating committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools meets in Atlanta November 3 to determine whether the state will be penalized for the ouster of Dean Cocking.

GEORGIA
CLARKE COUNTY

On July 1, 1941 a man who said that he is Robert F. Wood and that he represented the State of Georgia came to the studio of which I am manager and asked for copies of pictures taken of the first volunteers for national defense in Clarke County. I sold him several dozen prints. I later learned JUL 12 1941 was using these pictures to stir up racial prejudice. This same man came back to my studio on July 8, 1941, and demanded that I sell him more prints of these pictures. I told him I regretted selling him the first prints because he was said to be using pictures of a patrictic occasion to stir up racial disunity, which endangers our national defense program. When I refused to sell him more prints, he asked if I would superimpose the face of Dr. W. B. Cocking on the negative. I refused. He offered me $50.00. I still refused. He asked me to put the negatives on the floor and he would pick them up. I told him that we did not intend to sell him any negatives or any more prints, since he deceived us in the first place and was using the pictures to prejudice one race against JUL 12 1941 another whereas the pictures were of an event endorsed by the Selective Service organization, State and National, to foster cooperation between races for the defense of the nation. The man then left.

Dixon, Davis New Victims Of State Purge

Bush Dropped; Talmadge Moves To 'Quiet Down' Controversy.

Governor Talmadge yesterday launched a movement to "quiet down" the unsettled state of affairs at the University of Georgia and the Georgia State Teachers' College at Statesboro following the action of the State Board of Regents in ousting five officials of the University System, including Dr. Walter D. Cocking, Dr. Marvin Pittman and Vice Chancellor Curtis Dixon.

During the day the Governor held lengthy conferences with Chancellor S. V. Sanford and Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia. During these conferences he emphasized the need for immediately naming successors to Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman.

Post Abolished.

Vice Chancellor Dixon was dropped from the university system in an executive session of the regents, and Chairman Sandy Beaver and Chancellor Sanford yesterday announced that the post had been abolished. At the same meeting the board dropped Professor P. D. Bush, of North Georgia College at Dahlonega, and R. E. Davis, of the animal husbandry department, of the State College of Agriculture.

Governor Talmadge said Dixon "was allowed to go" because of his previous connection with the Rosenwald Fund. He received a salary of $6,000 a year.

Chancellor Sanford was said to have told the Governor it was not necessary to name a successor to Dixon since, in the interest of economy, the regents would be able to get along without a vice chancellor.

Resignation Denied.

Dr. Sanford said he, Chairman Sandy Beaver and Governor Talmadge had been appointed as a committee to recommend the successors to Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman.

Reports were circulating that Dr. Caldwell planned to resign as president of the University of Georgia, but he denied yesterday that he had any such plans.

In his conferences with Chancellor Sanford, Governor Talmadge pointed out that he was informed from Athens and Statesboro that the feeling created by the trials of Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman would disappear quickly if their successors were named immediately.

Chancellor Sanford indicated the appointees to these posts would be known within the next three or four days.

Lunch With Barron.

When asked if he planned to recommend Barron for one of the vacant places, the Governor said, "No comment."

At the Cocking and Pittman "trials" Monday, spokesmen for the Governor attempted to show that the Rosenwald Fund sought racial equality and, therefore, by implication, anyone having anything to do with it must advocate such equality.

Talmadge said Dixon and Davis "were connected with the Rosenwald Fund as much as the others" and added the board voted unanimously not to renew their contracts.

Dixon, Davis and Bush were listed in university system records as natives of Georgia. The Governor previously had hinted he might "purge" non-native Georgians in the university system.

Budget Is "Headache."

When State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. today presented the university system's quarterly budget, containing the birthplaces of all employes, to the Governor, Talmadge pushed it over to one side, clapped his hat over it and said:

That's a pain and a headache. I've got to take a da. or two off on that."

Dixon said he had not been notified of his ouster prior to newsmen's informing him and said he had made no plans for the future. He added that Davis, listed on university system records as a beef, cattle and sheep specialist of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Georgia, had "absolutely no connection with the Rosenwald Fund."

Dixon said he personally had been "intimately connected" with the fund and pointed out that he was its director of rural education from 1936 until he assumed his present position last July.

Contributed $325,000

Dixon said that since 1935 the Rosenwald Fund had contributed $325,000 to Georgia.

Of this amount, he added, $138,000 was given to the Fort Valley State College for Negroes and $187,000 was distributed among three white colleges. The University of Georgia, he said, received $28,000, the West Georgia College at Carrollton $87,000, and the Georgia Teachers' College $72,000.

This sum, he said, "doesn't include the hundreds of thousands of dollars that the fund provided for building Negro schools and libraries before it began a development of its program of rural education.

Cocking To Speak.

Dixon said he understood his contract, like those of Cocking and Pittman, ran until August 31. Governor Talmadge said the present contracts of Cocking and Pittman "won't be changed, but if they want to take a vacation I'd be in favor of giving them one, provided they were subject to call."

In the meantime, it appeared that some folks in Georgia want to hear more about Dean Cocking's side of the story.

Cocking yesterday accepted an invitation to "tell all" at a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Griffin Wednesday, July 23. Otis Weaver, program chairman, extended the invitation.

Miller R. Bell's comment yesterday on Monday's Board of Regents meeting at which he was "bounced" was terse. There was a meeting Sunday at Brenner Pass. Monday everybody was there but Hess, who is being held by the British."

TALMADGE CHARGED WITH "HITLER METHODS"

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—The Keep America Out of War Congress today asserted that Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, used "Hitler methods" and "undemocratic procedure" in obtaining dismissal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia School of Education and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman as president of Georgia Teachers' College.

In a telegram sent by Mary W. Hillyer, executive director, the congress said: "One reason why we all hate Hitler is because of his racial intolerance. You are using Hitler methods in Georgia."

Wood Ordered To Round Up Trial 'Crowd'

Fuel Oil Inspector Linked With Case Against Pittman.

Robert F. Wood, one-time candidate for Governor, receives a salary of $125 per month as a fuel oil inspector.

Wood strode militantly into the Governor's office last Thursday afternoon to receive orders from his chief. These orders were delivered in the typical Talmadge style.

"You better get your crowd up here from Statesboro," the chief executive ordered. "Looks like we're not going to get any resignations, so we're going to prepare to go through with these trials."

The Governor did not elaborate on what he wanted done, leaving the impression that Wood had a group already rounded up in Statesboro to testify against Dr. Marvin Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers' College, on charges of too much participation in politics.

Newspapermen were in the office at the time. The Governor apparently had an after-thought that they were hearing too much. So he turned to them and said:

"Any directions that I give to my office force are strictly off the record. I am not to be quoted on my orders to them."

However, he had not prefaced his remarks with any statement that what he was about to say was off the record. He made a request after he had made his statement —a request on which no comment was made.

Records in the office of State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. show is referred to as "Governor" Wood.

During Governor Talmadge's campaign last summer, Wood accompanied him on virtually every speaking tour and aided in preparations for most of the Talmadge speeches. Around the capitol he

Dr. Cocking, Iowa-Born, Has Wide Experience in Education

Georgia Dean Member of President's Advisory Commission.

Dr. Walter Dewey Cocking, dean of the College of Education at the University of Georgia since 1937, was born in Iowa in 1891. Educated at Des Moines College and at the University of Iowa, he earned his Doctor of Philosophy degree at Columbia University in 1928.

Teacher and superintendent of schools in Iowa from 1913 to 1922, he, from 1923 to 1925, was director of junior high schools in San Antonio, Texas, and from 1925 to 1927 was director of the division of curriculum, books and supplies in the public schools of St. Louis. Professor of school administration at Peabody Teachers' College at Nashville from 1928 to 1933, he was commissioner of education for Tennessee from 1933 to 1937, when he came to the University of Georgia.

His attainments have earned him wide recognition in the field of education. One of his posts is that of chief specialist on school administration on the President's Advisory Commission on Education, and he is also a consultant of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

He holds a reserve commission as second lieutenant in the Field Artillery, and is a Democrat, a Methodist, and a Mason.

"FURRINER"—Dr. Walter D. Cocking will learn tomorrow after a meeting of the Board of Regents whether Governor Talmadge will be successful in ousting him from the University System.

Dixon, Davis New Victims Of State Purge

Bush Dropped; Talmadge Moves To 'Quiet Down' Controversy.

Governor Talmadge yesterday launched a movement to "quiet down" the unsettled state of affairs at the University of Georgia and the Georgia State Teachers' College at Statesboro following the action of the State Board of Regents in ousting five officials of the University System, including Dr. Walter D. Cocking, Dr. Marvin Pittman and Vice Chancellor Curtis Dixon.

During the day the Governor held lengthy conferences with Chancellor S. V. Sanford and Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia. During these conferences he emphasized the need for immediately naming successors to Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman.

Post Abolished.

Vice Chancellor Dixon was dropped from the university system in an executive session of the regents, and Chairman Sandy Beaver and Chancellor Sanford yesterday announced that the post had been abolished. At the same meeting the board dropped Professor P. D. Bush, of North Georgia College at Dahlonega, and R. E. Davis, of the animal husbandry department, of the State College of Agriculture.

Governor Talmadge said Dixon "was allowed to go" because of his previous connection with the Rosenwald Fund. He received a salary of $6,000 a year.

Chancellor Sanford was said to have told the Governor it was not necessary to name a successor to Dixon since, in the interest of economy, the regents would be able to get along without a vice chancellor.

Resignation Denied.

Dr. Sanford said he, Chairman Sandy Beaver and Governor Talmadge had been appointed as a committee to recommend the successors to Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman.

Reports were circulating that Dr. Caldwell planned to resign as president of the University of Georgia, but he denied yesterday that he had any such plans.

In his conferences with Chancellor Sanford, Governor Talmadge pointed out that he was informed from Athens and Statesboro that the feeling created by the trials of Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman would subside quickly if their successors were named immediately.

Chancellor Sanford indicated the appointees to these posts would be known within the next three or four days.

Lunch With Barron.

When asked if he planned to recommend Barron for one of the vacant places, the Governor said, "No comment."

At the Cocking and Pittman "trials" Monday, spokesmen for the Governor attempted to show that the Rosenwald Fund sought racial equality and, therefore, by implication, anyone having anything to do with it must advocate such equality.

Talmadge said Dixon and Davis "were connected with the Rosenwald Fund as much as the others" and added the board voted unanimously not to renew their contracts.

Dixon, Davis and Bush were listed in university system records as natives of Georgia. The Governor previously had hinted he might "purge" non-native Georgians in the university system.

Budget Is "Headache."

When State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. today presented the university system's quarterly budget, containing the birthplaces of all employes, to the Governor, Talmadge pushed it over to one side, clapped his hat over it and said:

That's a pain and a headache. I've got to take a da. or two off on that."

Dixon said he had not been notified of his ouster prior to newsmen's informing him and said he had made no plans for the future. He added that Davis, listed on university system records as a beef, cattle and sheep specialist of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Georgia, had "absolutely no connection with the Rosenwald Fund."

Dixon said he personally had been "intimately connected" with the fund and pointed out that he was its director of rural education from 1936 until he assumed his present position last July.

Contributed $325,000

Dixon said that since 1935 the Rosenwald Fund had contributed $325,000 to Georgia.

Of this amount, he added, $138,000 was given to the Fort Valley State College for Negroes and $187,000 was distributed among three white colleges. The University of Georgia, he said, received $28,000, the West Georgia College at Carrollton $87,000, and the Georgia Teachers' College $72,000.

This sum, he said, "doesn't include the hundreds of thousands of dollars that the fund provided for building Negro schools and libraries before it began a development of its program of rural education.

Cocking To Speak.

Dixon said he understood his contract, like those of Cocking and Pittman, ran until August 31. Governor Talmadge said the present contracts of Cocking and Pittman "won't be changed, but if they want to take a vacation I'd be in favor of giving them one, provided they were subject to call."

In the meantime, it appeared that some folks in Georgia want to hear more about Dean Cocking's side of the story.

Cocking yesterday accepted an invitation to "tell all" at a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Griffin Wednesday, July 23. Otis Weaver, program chairman, extended the invitation.

Miller R. Bell's comment yesterday on Monday's Board of Regents meeting, at which he was "bounced as tenor," there was a meeting Sunday at Brenner Pass. Monday everybody was there but Hess, who is being held by the British."

Find the Real Culprits

No good purpose is to be served by pretending that the evidence produced before the board of regents in the trial of Dean Walter Cocking, of the College of Education, State University, and of President Marvin Pittman, of Georgia Teachers College at Statesboro, met every legal requirement to support a verdict of guilty and the discrepancy between the minutes of the board of regents and the commission of Miller S. Bell, of Milledgeville, as to the term for which he was appointed still calls for explanation.

But it has become definitely clear that subversive elements have been creeping into the educational system of Georgia and this fight should continue until they are eradicated.

One of the high lights of the hearing before the board was the introduction of a book written in 1931 by William R. Embree, now president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, in which he advocates social equality between the races in terms which do violence to every tradition of the South.

This book was linked with the invitation to Dr. Embree to make the principal address at the graduating exercises of the university a few years ago. President Caldwell, in his defense of Dean Cocking, admitted that he, the president, was responsible for the invitation.

The question arises in the most emphatic form as to whether the atmosphere of the university is all that it should be when a man with the background of Embree could be selected, out of all the gifted educators and speakers in this country, to make the principal address at Athens on such an occasion.

When representatives of the America First committee in Atlanta invited Senator Bert Wheeler to make an address in that city there was no doubt in the mind of anyone as to the background of Senator Wheeler. It was well known that he would speak as an isolationist and a defeatist.

If Charles Lindbergh were invited to speak in Macon there would be no doubt in the mind of anyone as to what he stood for.

How did it happen that a man of Embree's racial ideas should have been invited into the deep South to speak at a university commencement?

It is no secret that at the university itself there are elements which oppose the use of money from the Rosenwald Fund since Embree became the head of it, and it is a pity that a resolution, offered Monday by Regent Hunter, proposing that all money received from the Rosenwald Fund be returned, was ruled out of order.

It should always be in order to rule out the use of funds in our Georgia schools which carry with them the right to dictate the appointment of teachers and the purposes for which such funds shall be used. It is an insidious influence and all the more dangerous because this influence has rarely been brought into the open.

It was hardly fair to President Pittman, of the State Teachers College, that he was not furnished in advance with a clear bill of particulars. There was nothing to show he had been active in politics as originally charged. There seems to be no ground for questioning his integrity in connection with his farming operations.

But it is deeply disturbing that there should be found in the college library for collateral reading a book entitled Calling America, two chapters of which admittedly should not be taught to immature minds.

President Pittman claimed that he did not sponsor the use of this book in the college. He said it was approved by the social science committee of the university system and he "presumed it was used in other Georgia colleges." He had nothing to do with placing it in the library.

It should be made plain here and now that a heavy responsibility rests upon the text book committee of the state board of education and apparently upon the social science committee of the university system when books like Calling America and the subversive books of Prof. Rugg can creep into our educational institutions with no realization of their nature.

President Caldwell, in his defense of Dean Cocking, replying to the question as to whether the charges against the dean had impaired the usefulness of the university said, in substance, that the charges may have impaired the usefulness of "all of us over there."

It seems to us that the university system will be all the better for this clarifying upheaval and for a change of policy in many directions in our public schools and in our institutions of higher learning. There is no reason why students in our schools should not be definitely taught that, by the record, the American system of government with its free enterprise and individual initiative, with an eternal social segregation of the races, is the best system in the world.

We have had enough of the fanciful novelties offered by Frontier Thinkers and the Progressive system of education. A nearer approach to the teaching of history and social science as it existed in earlier days, since we know the character of the men and women that system produced, should be restored.

We must rid ourselves of much of the cant about "academic freedom" and eradicate the alien ideas which have, indeed, crept in by the back door, sometimes tied with a slush fund, and make the educational system of the state a means by which we may send wholesome-minded and capable men and women into the world as sturdy Americans.

Governor Talmadge has not yet found the real culprits in this deplorable affair and he should pursue his investigations. He should turn the light on the text book committee of the state board of education and the social science committee of the university system and find out why these objectionable books have been placed in the hands of Georgia students.

Question of Teaching in Southern Schools.

By Frances Lerkoff.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia demands the resignation of three members of the Georgia Board of Regents who favor retiring Iowa-born Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia School of Education despite charges that the educator favored racial equality in schools.

Now, isn't that a disturbing calamity? Because Mr. Cocking, who was born and brought up in a state where there is no racial barrier, he's not qualified to teach, and three other persons are to be discharged, too—for a whim. I know Eugene Talmadge. I admire a number of good qualities he possesses, but I know too, that many persons in Georgia and away who feel toward him as he feels toward the Negro race and people, who in sympathy would like to find a footing for the Negro where he would cease to be regarded "not fit" to be seen among the white people other than as a subversive servant.

To many Gov. Talmadge is regarded as a "man from the soil"—shrewd, educated after a fashion. I know him to be a fine person, generous and just. But in this instance he is wrong. The office he holds gives him the right to demand and execute, but in justice he should consider, too, the possibilities of persons if ousted. What immediate positions will be found?

It is a poor world to live in for those of us who do not always fit in the exact places—a deplorable world of injustice.

Can't someone intervene—make Gov. Talmadge see how petty he is behaving? Unless something is done the South will always go on believing the East and the North are hostile states, harboring "foreign" hostiles who seek to undermine. We have here a counterpart of Hitler and the Jews, Germany and the inferior France, England and our United States, too.

We have the finest people of the earth in our South, but a great many are so dense, so stubborn. Were God Himself found to have dark skin they'd disqualify him.

Likes Editorials On Ousting of Educators

Editor, Atlanta WORLD: My policy is to give flowers while they may be enjoyed, and for this reason I congratulate you upon the editorials appearing in your newspaper Tuesday and Thursday. Especially the one on the latter date, titled, "The Call for Unity and Action."

Now is the time for us as colored citizens to unite and act. Let us as professional and business women and men lead and the others follow. United we stand; divided we fall. Many wishes to your success and encouragement.

"Atlanta Daily World, Constitution And Journal In Perfect Accord" --Talmadge

"The Statesman," Georgia Governor Talmadge's publication, in a main editorial this week says the Atlanta newspapers, "Constitution, Journal and Atlanta Daily World In Perfect Accord."

The editorial quotes an article written by the Rev. William Holmes Borders condemning his tactics as that of a dictator. Ralph McGill, Constitution columnist and editor is also quoted in a release where he compares Talmadge with dictators. The Atlanta Journal also was said to have attempted to draw the same comparison in several editorials.

The editorial continues that "It is singularly odd that these two white Atlanta dailies are in perfect accord with the Negro Daily World. Do these Atlanta dailies believe in social equality, or are they trying to smear Talmadge."

Further it says "If believing that Negroes and whites should attend the same schools and sit in the same classes is 'race prejudice,' then let them make the most of it."

'How About Old Gene?'

My most recent oral correspondent opened, in the usual manner, by addressing me by my baptismal name—to which I do not object, because even the office boys do that. Then in response to my natural inquiry, he continues: "You don't know me, and it don't matter who I am."

This time he wanted to know what I thought about Governor Talmadge's "trial" of Dean Cocking and Dr. Marvin Pittman.

I reminded him that the laws forbid the use of too liberal language over the telephone and I preferred to retain my thoughts, even though acute indigestion might ensue.

"You don't like Old Gene, do you?" he inquired.

I responded that I had long held high admiration for some of Mr. Talmadge's abilities and characteristics and would have voted for him a couple of times if I hadn't forgotten it was primary day.

He then desired to know why I didn't "write it up." To which I answered that we have a wholly efficient editorial and news staff which, I thought, had done justice to the subject that morning. To add my views would have been to gild the lily and paint the rose. He said we wasn't talking about flowers. But how did I stand on Old Gene and the race issue?

At this point in the interrogation I suggested the front door bell was ringing and if he'd excuse me I'd be glad to have him call at my Tudor—in fact, it's a one-door sanctum the next day during business hours, when I'd gladly pursue the subject further. After which I hung up. Not abruptly but gently. And went back to bed.

Tidal Wave Over Georgia

Connection with the Rosenwald Fund has been made the touchstone of un-Georgianism, through the distortion of certain statements contained in a book, Brown America, written by its president, Edwin S. Embree, eight or ten years ago. These were statements of incontrovertible fact, not opinion, but torn from their context at the Atlanta "trials" and interpreted to fit the preconceptions of the bigoted prosecution, they were made to substantiate the theory that the president of the fund, and therefore all persons associated with it, favored "social equality" between the races in the South.

Besides Dean Cocking, of the university's school of education, and President Pittman, of the State Teachers' College, three more members of the university system's staff have been thrown out by the Talmadgized Board of Regents with no ceremony whatsoever. From now on, apparently, even framed-up public hearings will be dispensed with.

As in Germany or Russia, a man is privately denounced, given no chance of defending himself or of producing witnesses to the falsity of the charges against him, and his case is disposed of by a court of prejudiced judges whose verdict is written out and handed to them in advance by the prosecutor.

Of the three men who were privately condemned, two were charged with having connections with the Rosenwald Fund, while the governor said "he didn't know" why the third was let go. Just for good measure perhaps. All three were born in the state of Georgia.

Since dealings with the Rosenwald Fund sufficed to warrant the expulsion of Vice Chancellor J. Curtis Dixon, let us examine the high crimes and misdemeanors of which Mr. Dixon and this philanthropic foundation have been guilty in the state of Georgia.

Mr. Dixon is a native Georgian. He attended the Georgia Military Academy. He was a teacher in the town of Dawson, Ga. During the World War he served as an instructor in the officers' training school at Ft. McPherson, Ga. After the war he went back to Dawson, Ga., as superintendent of schools. In 1928 he was made school administrator in the Georgia State Department of Education. In 1930 he was appointed supervisor of Negro education for the state of Georgia, and this work brought him into contact with the Rosenwald Fund which, in Georgia as well as in other Southern states, was assisting the state to improve educational facilities for Negroes through substantial gifts of funds. Georgia, like the other states, desperately needed these funds to supplement the slender tax revenues which were available for education.

In 1936, Mr. Dixon became director of rural education for the Rosenwald Fund for several Southern states. When the American Church Institute voted to give to the state of Georgia its half million dollar Negro college at Fort Valley, Mr. Dixon was instrumental in leading the Episcopal organization to this decision, and furthermore secured a donation of $50,000 from the Rosenwald Fund to perfect the state's title to a highly valuable property.

During the five years that Mr. Dixon was with the Rosenwald Fund, he was instrumental in securing for the state of Georgia approximately half a million dollars in addition from the fund and the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation. Approximately two-thirds of this amount was expended for white education, while one-third was for the education of Negroes. His services to the state in this regard were so highly appreciated that the Board of Regents elected him vice chancellor of the whole university system in 1940.

Here is a native Georgian who has lived in Georgia all his life, devoting his efforts exclusively to the welfare of his state and the South except for the period when he served his nation in its armed forces during the first World War. And without any pretense at a fair hearing of charges, this man is ignominiously dismissed from the high post which he was awarded on the basis of his magnificent and lifelong service to his native state.

We say again: it is happening here. This sort of business is Fascism. is native American Naziism in action. It is down on all fours with the obscene performances of the German-American Bund, only even more dangerous in that it has succeeded in seizing control of the governmental apparatus of a great American state and of a great university which proudly claims to be the oldest state university in America.

Talmadgism, like any other brand of Fascism, is a threat to the democracy of its neighbors, so we in Alabama have quite as much cause for alarm as the embattled Georgians who are striving to throw off this evil thing which has descended upon them. If the hosts of those who love democracy and human justice and progress here in the South will mobilize and come to the aid of hard-pressed Georgia, this tidal wave of the past which is Talmadgism can be dashed back into the dark depths from which it rose.

EXCITING TIMES IN GEORGIA

Many Northerners must have withheld comment on a recent episode in Georgia, because they knew that Southerners do not take kindly to toplofty advice from Northerners. If Governor Talmadge wished to get rid of two eminent educators who were not born in Georgia, and if to that end he purged his State Board of Regents, raised the issue of "racial co-education" and deprived his State of some outside foundation money as well as of the two outside educators, that seemed to be Georgia's business. Georgia didn't have to have Mr. Talmadge for Governor if it didn't care for him.

But now we note that there is insurrection in Georgia itself. The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal have been criticizing the Governor. Apparently, affairs have not reached the pass where the offended Executive can suppress newspapers by force. But he has a card up his sleeve. If they don't, he says, "correct their attitude, I'm not going to give them any news."

The outcome will be watched with interest from this vantage point north of the Mason and Dixon line. Meanwhile the Governor is holding firm on his Talmadgian line. He can't turn the clock back, but he refuses to turn it ahead. His neighbors in the Tennessee and Alabama capitals have proclaimed daylight saving. He won't do it. The kind of time that was good enough for his great-grandfather is good enough for him.

Georgia Has A 'Duce'

Gov. Gene Talmadge of Georgia, having mired himself deeply by tampering with the state's university system for purely partisan political purposes, now rears back and announces that the Atlanta Constitution and Journal will get no more news from the Cracker Capitol unless "they correct their attitude." As a bonus to this dispensation, Governor Talmadge said there would be another daily paper in Atlanta "if they don't correct their attitude." Gene better watch out. That stuff about kicking out newspapers for an incorrect "attitude" was copyrighted years agone by Benito Mussolini of Italy and Adolf Hitler of Germany. The Fascists used almost precisely those words in explaining the expulsion of the correspondent of the Chicago Daily News a few weeks ago. Evidently, though, Talmadge thinks Georgia wants a "Duce" and that he is it.

Incidentally, the "attitude" displayed by the Journal and Constitution involved detailed, factual and objective reporting of the trumped-up evidence on which Governor Talmadge and his stooges fired five able educators. It likewise included about as pungent, incisive editorial comment as we have lately seen. In short, the "attitude" that so irks red-galused Talmadge was identical with the exercise of freedom of the press, and not anywhere in history is there any record of any "Duce"—big or two-bit size—who thought that "attitude" anything but "incorrect."

TALMADGE-COCKING AFFAIR

Across The Desk

By LUDLOW W. WERNER

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S adopted state, Georgia, figured prominently in the news last week with the Governor of the state, Eugene Talmadge, ousting the president of the Georgia Teachers College, the dean of the University of Georgia and several other white educators merely for being sympathetic to, or advocating, racial equality in the schools.

It may be that Governor Talmadge was jealous of the publicity his predecessor, E. D. Rivers, received the week before with a revelation that he ran a wholesale pardon mill while in office and even used his colored chauffeur in the alleged racket.

It could be that Governor Talmadge had a "mad" on Negroes because ex-Governor Rivers allowed his Negro chauffeur the privilege of recommending pardons. It could be, too, that Governor Talmadge figured that Negroes who comprise about 41 per cent of the population, are due sometime soon to get a break as result of the President's executive order against discrimination in national defense. Whatever the cause of his peeve, Governor Talmadge certainly believes in doing things up right. No halfway measures for him; it's got to be whole hog or nothing, he must have reasoned, so he proceeded to cut the whole hog. His purge, like his sins, will rise up to plague him and he will live to rue the day when he openly started his race-baiting activities.

Ludlow W. Werner

It all started several weeks ago when charges were brought by Talmadge that Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the University of Georgia School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers College, had advocated racial equality in the school system of the state. The charges were transmitted to the Board of Regents who overrode the Governor and voted to rehire the educators by the close vote of 8 to 7. Not daunted by his failure, Talmadge went to work on the Board of Regents, fired three of them, appointed three others to fill the vacancies, then presented his charges against the two educators for the second time.

Last Monday, after a tumultuous public hearing in the House of Representatives, the hand-picked Regents voted 10 to 5 to dismiss the two educators, after the Governor himself personally appeared to present the charges. The case against Dean Cocking was based on excerpts from the book, "Brown America," written by Dean Edwin R. Embree of Chicago, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund; testimony by Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, former University of Georgia teacher, and a charge by Regent James S. Peters that Cocking was disbursing Rosenwald money in Georgia "to insinuate such things as this (racial equality) through our back doors."

"So long," Regent Peters said, "as the Rosenwald Fund aided our colored folks they were welcome, but when they put a book like this ("Brown America") in our libraries, or attempt to push doctrines like this through our back doors, I, for one, am going to meet them at the back door and tell them they can't get in Georgia."

Peters continued by reading an excerpt from the book: "The South is coming to realize the cost of prejudice is great in maintenance of two schools, two libraries, section waiting rooms, separate passenger cars, and white and colored nurses and county welfare agents."

He vehemently declared: "Throughout his book the thought runs, 'erase the feeling of superiority of the white man, not lift the black up.' They want them (the Negroes) to use the same schools, ride in the same trains. They want to pull the white man down and draw the races together. It means they want intermarriage, that's what it means."

The crowd cheered as Governor Talmadge shouted: "They won't do it!" It was the same Governor Talmadge who as Editor Talmadge had written editorially in his paper: "I hope the children of the future will be able to attend Georgia schools and be able to sit down without finding a nigger beside them."

The crowd also cheered as the stooge of Talmadge, Superior Court Judge Joe Ben Jackson, shouted: "Any unintelligent white man, if he is white, is better than the best educated nigger on earth."

Adding his approval to these race-baiters was L. W. "Chip" Roberts, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, former secretary of the United States Treasury, member of the Georgia Board of Regents and warm personal friend of President Roosevelt.

Singularly enough, July 14, was the date and Dean Cocking, a member of President Roosevelt's advisory council on education, called this to the attention of his peresecutors with the following dramatic statement:

"July 14 was a great day of national celebration on the yearly calendar of the Republic of France, for it marked the birth of democracy in that nation. Today, in the year 1941, the French people have been forbidden to celebrate their birth of democracy, for Feuhrer Hitler has said that democracy is dead. Today is July 14 in Georgia, also."

Prominent among national figures who quickly condemned these race-baiters was a great Southern newspaper editor, Herbert Agar, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who declared that Governor Talmadge that he was "guilty of lynching academic freedom in Georgia." Mr. Agar informed both Cocking and Pittman that they have the "full support of Fight for Freedom, Inc., in your fight against intolerance

Speaking for the executive committee of Fight for Freedom, Inc., and bigotry in Georgia. Fight for Freedom believes the survival of democracy is predicated on the military defeat of Hitler, but we also feel certain that your ouster because you believed democracy was for all races and creeds is a blow to freedom in our own country."

The editor told Talmadge and Robert that "Hitler might well be proud that his principles have won a battle in America without the firing of one shot or the dispatch of one division. The Axis agents who were sent home today on the West Point could not have done better.

"The Four Freedoms which President Roosevelt has outlined cannot survive unless Hitler is defeated. But they cannot survive in our own country if persons who prate about American principles practice the methods of Hitlerism here."

TALMADGE PUNCHES HARD

Gene Talmadge usually finishes those things he starts.

Some of those obstructing him discovered this when he gave Georgia the three-dollar tag by executive order; it proved so popular the administration that followed cut the minimum down to $2.50.

Governor Talmadge has taken out after those "foreign professors" with ideas about inter-racial social equality that are not wanted in the South, ideas that may be popular in Iowa and Ohio and New York but are distasteful to Georgians. If acceptance of those ideas is the price Georgia is to pay for certain educational funds, we can get along without them.

The South long ago found out how to get along peacefully with the negro, and it needs no uplifting at the hands of those who wrote our history books from a Northern slant and now have come South to teach those books.

Those in the North who disagree with this stand will holler "Prejudice", but the fact is, the South has no prejudice against the negro in the sense that he is held down. Across The Desk

By LUDLOW W. WERNER

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S adopted state, Georgia, figured prominently in the news last week with the Governor of the state, Eugene Talmadge, ousting the president of the Georgia Teachers College, the dean of the University of Georgia and several other white educators merely for being sympathetic to, or advocating, racial equality in the schools.

It may be that Governor Talmadge was jealous of the publicity his predecessor, E. D. Rivers, received the week before with a revelation that he ran a wholesale pardon mill while in office and even used his colored chauffeur in the alleged racket.

It could be that Governor Talmadge had a "mad" on Negroes because ex-Governor Rivers allowed his Negro chauffeur the privilege of recommending pardons. It could be, too, that Governor Talmadge figured that Negroes who comprise about 41 per cent of the population, are due sometime soon to get a break as result of the President's executive order against discrimination in national defense. Whatever the cause of his peeve, Governor Talmadge certainly believes in doing things up right. No halfway measures for him; it's got to be whole hog or nothing, he must have reasoned, so he proceeded to cut the whole hog. His purge, like his sins, will rise up to plague him and he will live to rue the day when he openly started his race-baiting activities.

Ludlow W. Werner

It all started several weeks ago when charges were brought by Talmadge that Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the University of Georgia School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers College, had advocated racial equality in the school system of the state. The charges were transmitted to the Board of Regents who overrode the Governor and voted to rehire the educators by the close vote of 8 to 7. Not daunted by his failure, Talmadge went to work on the Board of Regents, fired three of them, appointed three others to fill the vacancies, then presented his charges against the two educators for the second time.

Last Monday, after a tumultuous public hearing in the House of Representatives, the hand-picked Regents voted 10 to 5 to dismiss the two educators, after the Governor himself personally appeared to present the charges. The case against Dean Cocking was based on excerpts from the book, "Brown America," written by Dean Edwin R. Embree of Chicago, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund; testimony by Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, former University of Georgia teacher, and a charge by Regent James S. Peters that Cocking was disbursing Rosenwald money in Georgia "to insinuate such things as this (racial equality) through our back doors."

"So long," Regent Peters said, "as the Rosenwald Fund aided our colored folks they were welcome, but when they put a book like this ("Brown America") in our libraries, or attempt to push doctrines like this through our back doors, I, for one, am going to meet them at the back door and tell them they can't get in Georgia."

Peters continued by reading an excerpt from the book: "The South is coming to realize the cost of prejudice is great in maintenance of two schools, two libraries, section waiting rooms, separate passenger cars, and white and colored nurses and county welfare agents."

He vehemently declared: "Throughout his book the thought runs, 'erase the feeling of superiority of the white man, not lift the black up.' They want them (the Negroes) to use the same schools, ride in the same trains. They want to pull the white man down and draw the races together. It means they want intermarriage, that's what it means."

The crowd cheered as Governor Talmadge shouted: "They won't do it!" It was the same Governor Talmadge who as Editor Talmadge had written editorially in his paper: "I hope the children of the future will be able to attend Georgia schools and be able to sit down without finding a nigger beside them."

The crowd also cheered as the stooge of Talmadge, Superior Court Judge Joe Ben Jackson, shouted: "Any unintelligent white man, if he is white, is better than the best educated nigger on earth."

Adding his approval to these race-baiters was L. W. "Chip" Roberts, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, former secretary of the United States Treasury, member of the Georgia Board of Regents and warm personal friend of President Roosevelt.

Singularly enough, July 14, was the date and Dean Cocking, a member of President Roosevelt's advisory council on education, called this to the attention of his peresecutors with the following dramatic statement:

"July 14 was a great day of national celebration on the yearly calendar of the Republic of France, for it marked the birth of democracy in that nation. Today, in the year 1941, the French people have been forbidden to celebrate their birth of democracy, for Feuhrer Hitler has said that democracy is dead. Today is July 14 in Georgia, also."

Prominent among national figures who quickly condemned these race-baiters was a great Southern newspaper editor, Herbert Agar, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who declared that Governor Talmadge that he was "guilty of lynching academic freedom in Georgia." Mr. Agar informed both Cocking and Pittman that they have the "full support of Fight for Freedom, Inc., in your fight against intolerance and bigotry in Georgia. Fight for Freedom believes the survival of democracy is predicated on the military defeat of Hitler, but we also feel certain that your ouster because you believed democracy was for all races and creeds is a blow to freedom in our own country."

The editor told Talmadge and Robert that "Hitler might well be proud that his principles have won a battle in America without the firing of one shot or the dispatch of one division. The Axis agents who were sent home today on the West Point could not have done better.

"The Four Freedoms which President Roosevelt has outlined cannot survive unless Hitler is defeated. But they cannot survive in our own country if persons who prate about American principles practice the methods of Hitlerism here."

COCKING (leaving witness chair) AND TALMADGE
There was hitting and hollering.

Lynching in Georgia

Not since the Tennessee monkey trial had there been such clownish witch-hunting as went on in Georgia last week. Cigar-chewing, red-suspendered Gene Talmadge ran amok through Georgia colleges, chasing furriners (i.e. non-Georgians) and Negro-befrienders. "There was a lynching in . . . the Capitol of Georgia Monday," said the Atlanta Journal, describing the ouster of Walter Dewey Cocking as dean of University of Georgia's College of Education (TIME, July 21). At week's end the Governor had knocked out two more important Georgia educators and provoked serious retaliation.

Dean Cocking, a furriner born in Iowa, had been accused of promoting a graduate school where Negroes and whites might study together. He had also been messing around with a "subversive" organization —the Julius Rosenwald Fund which has spent some $15,000,000 supporting education of Negroes and whites in the South).

Last week, in a packed hall in the Capitol, the Board of Regents held a hearing. The Governor, himself a regent, was there, munching his lunch and prompting his fellow board members. Regent James S. Peters waved a copy of Brown America, a book by the Rosenwald Fund's President Edwin Rogers Embree, charged it preached Negro-white equality. Cried he: "Negroes will ride in the same railroad cars, sit in the same schools, go to the same lavatories as white men."

"They won't do it," shouted Talmadge.

Regent Peters added that Dean Cocking had helped spend Rosenwald Funds in Georgia (the State University system got $325,000 of Rosenwald money in the last five years), therefore was guilty of disseminating Embree ideas.

Said Talmadge to Peters: "Hit the chair and holler." Peters hit, hollered. Cried Talmadge: "Tell 'em about the niggers from Tuskegee visitin' the college [Georgia Teachers] at Statesboro." Peters related that Negroes had munched sandwiches on the campus with whites.

Hearing over, the board voted 10-to-5 to fire not only Dean Cocking but "Furriner" (Mississippi-born) Marvin S. Pittman, president of Georgia State Teachers College and Georgia-born J. Curtis Dixon, vice chancellor of the State University system. Said Talmadge: "Dixon was just as much tied up with the Rosenwald Fund as Cocking was." Next day, with pixie logic, Talmadge chose as Cocking's successor a furriner from Maryland, Dr. Edwin Pusey, who is also a trustee of a Negro school in Georgia (Fort Valley) supported by Rosenwald Funds.

Educators, North and South, lost no time in rebuking Talmadge. The General Education Board, which has contributed $25,000 a year to the University of Georgia and last year pledged $2,500,000 for building a university center in Atlanta, rejected a Georgia application for $74,000 for the next three years. The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools began an investigation of "political interference" in the university. If the association dropped Georgia from its accredited list, its degrees would not be recognized in other States and enrollment would decline.

Unruffled, Governor Talmadge retorted: "We credit our own schools down here." At week's end he was in hot pursuit of furrin textbooks.

Dictator's Way

The refusal of Georgia's Board of Regents to renew the contracts of Dean Cocking of the University of Georgia School of Education, Dr. Pittman, president of the State Teachers College, and several other well-known educators for alleged advocacy of racial equality has again brought the name of Gov. Eugene Talmadge to the attention of the Nation. The ousting of these educators, suspect because of their association with the Julius Rosenwald Fund which has done so much to aid colored people, should not be viewed merely as a racial issue. Such is not the case, as is evidenced by the fact that prominent citizens, including the president of the University of Georgia, appeared to plead the cause of the dismissed professors. Furthermore, the Board of Regents first voted to reengage Dean Cocking, despite the charges brought before it by the Governor. The chief executive thereupon removed three dissenting regents and made sure that the reconstituted body would follow his recommendations.

It only obscures the real issue to assume that the status of the Negro or the cause of academic freedom is involved in this latest successful effort of the Governor to impose his will upon State agencies. The "Wild Man from Sugar Creek" is just running true to form. His methods are certainly well known to the people of Georgia who have thrice elected him to serve as chief executive. A friend and admirer of the late Huey Long, Gov. Talmadge likewise has shown a wonderful capacity for getting rid of the kind of opposition that has an annoying habit of cropping up in democratic communities. In his first administration, when the Highway Commissioners—elected State officials—refused to cut personnel, the Governor ordered out the militia, proclaimed martial law around the Highway Department offices, ousted certain members, and appointed new ones amenable to his will. Something similar happened to the Public Service Commission whose members, after being suspended for failing promptly to cut public utility rates, were put on trial, dismissed, and superseded by appointees more pleasing to the Governor.

With such achievements to his credit, the Governor no doubt concludes that he is warranted in extending his rule of absolutism to the State's institutions of learning. Fortunately, many people who preserve silence when politicians are fighting politicians become very articulate when politicians invade the domain of educators. Georgians who have the reputation of their State at heart will be aroused by this latest high-handed action of their Governor. The people of Georgia generally have ample reason to repent voting into office a chief executive whose desire for power is greater than his love for democracy.

WILL TALMADGE GAIN POPULAR SUPPORT?

Editor Constitution: I thoroughly agree with your stand against Governor Talmadge which Ralph McGill ably expressed in his column.

Indeed, the politics of the state have come to a pretty pass when the Governor, shirking his official duties, having been in office for less than six months, begins his political campaign for re-election. But worst of all to start his campaign by an appeal to the prejudicies of the ignorant classes of people. Just as Hitler appealed to t prejudices of the German people by his anti-Semite policy, so our honorable Gene is appealing to our people to go into battle against the Negroes and out-of-staters who have done so much to further the cause of education in the Empire State of the south.

With such a Governor at the capitol, surely little good can come to the good people who elected him as their representative leader. How will the people respond to this purge of some of their best educational directors? Let us hope that they will respond not as the Germans did, but as Americans and with God's help vote into office a decent, honest administration next time.

FROM AN INDIGNANT TAXPAYER.

Editor Constitution: Congratulations on your fearless stand in Talmadge matter. His statement and action have damaged Georgia's national prestige more than any one thinks in the past ten years. As the daughter of George Foster Peabody I would be unworthy of him if I did not record my indignation as a Georgia taxpayer as well as New York state.

A SIGNIFICANT DETAIL

Editor Constitution: Congratulations on your very full, accurate, though perhaps too temperate report on the proceedings at the capitol.

The whole story is there, with one small but perhaps, significant exception. Your reporters do not point out that Ernest Cannon's affidavit was notarized by one R. F. Wood.

SWALLOWED IT HOOK AND LINE

Editor, Constitution: How is it that some people say they are for our President and straightway they vote for and elect to high office some of his greatest outstanding enemies?

Do you remember about nine years ago? There was a certain fellow in office, whose name has been broadcast, not only in Georgia, but to this U. S. A. as being very truthful; do you remember him telling the people, "If you will elect me to fill another term in office, I pledge you my word I'll retire to my wife's farm and spend the residue of my days fishing and hunting?"

Now he has been gunning for everyone who had cause to ask questions, or show the white of an eye; firing, vetoing, and pardoning promiscuously.

Do you remember about a year ago? The same fellow went out sucker fishing again, telling the people he had learned his lesson, and if they would elect him to office he would be nice. They fell for it, swallowed hook and line. As soon as he was installed, he seemed to relapse with that old fever, waving the bloody shirt and battle ax. I thought he would. The truth of the matter is, that old fever of hate, envy and spite, in a deceptive heart, just had to burn to the surface.

PRAISES GOVERNOR

Editor Constitution: Our Governor has taken a courageous and an admirable stand in this purge. It takes a man of courage. I think every southern man and woman should bow their heads in prayer and give thanks. There is too much made over the Negroes now.

One of the speakers of the Regents made the remark that in a manner the Democrats are dead. No indeed. Our forefathers before us were Democrats, we are Democrats, and we die one. The Governor is not to blame. The Board of Regents voted them out. I am speaking for 800 regular voters.

We are proud of our Governor and every man on the Board of Regents. You can see good, true, Democratic blood running in their veins. Right here under our noses, the Communists are holding meetings. We don't want their kind in our schools. The Governor should be commended and not criticized to take the stand he has. It is not for votes he is thinking of, but our boys and girls.

NOW, HIS VOICE IS STILLED

Editor Constitution: I have been following with the keenest interest your paper's fight to uphold democracy in our educational system.

As a selectee with approximately three months behind me, I have taken great pains in upholding my state's reputation among my fellows. In a friendly way we have argued the merits of our respective states and I have held my ground with New Yorkers, Pennsylvanians, boys from Ohio, New Jersey, Illinois and Kansas.

In the past two weeks, however, these fellows have been following (as I have also) the Cocking-Pittman ruckus.

You can sympathize with me when I say that for once my voice has been stilled. They are making the great mistake of taking "Fuehrer" Talmadge for a typical narrow-minded southerner!

For years, as a native Atlantan, I have enjoyed The Constitution. Thank God for a great newspaper which has the courage of moral convictions to stand for the right and lift the shield of democracy a little higher.

My sole regret is that all of the fellows of my company don't have the opportunity to read your great newspaper. I never feel that a day in the Army is complete without reading The Atlanta Constitution.

May you always fight for the right.

WE MUST WORK FOR BETTER MEN IN POLITICS

Editor Constitution: In ordinary peaceful and prosperous times, the businessmen of Georgia would stand, amusedly, by and watch the 1942 election go off on the one issue of the school purge—its continuation or cessation.

However, in 1942, businessmen must, and will go into politics. Harried by bureaucracy, threatened by taxation, infested by racketeering, capitalism must be made tolerable, or Socialism, born of revenge, will give us its inevitable dictator.

In 1942, the issue must be whether or not usurers, panderers, slanderers, assassins, shysters and monopolists infesting business and politics will be tried, convicted and actually punished without benefit of pardon, and regardless of their previous contributions to church, charity or political party.

In lieu of verbal promises, the winners of the 1942 elections will have to submit written platforms, based on the constitution or amendments thereof. No "smoke screens" will fool our now thoroughly aroused—because frightened—people.

Brewton and The Telegraph Fighting On This for Years

—By W. T. Anderson—

W. W. BREWTON, of College Park, Ga., for many years has devoted a large part of his time and talents to a study of the textbooks taught in the schools and colleges of Georgia. Deeply devoted to the ideals and traditions of the South, he has felt that these textbooks have perverted the truth and distorted the minds of the rising generation. He has been a militant crusader for the purging of this alien teaching.

In the course of his work he has written excellent biographies of Robert Toombs and Thomas E. Watson and a book on civics which was offered for use in the Georgia schools, but not accepted. He is in a position to make some interesting disclosures as to a situation which Governor Talmadge is seeking to correct.

Mr. Brewton's efforts to eliminate subversive text books from our educational system are in line with those of The Telegraph over a long period, specifically in its exposure of the social science textbooks and the communistic advocacy of Dr. Harold Rugg, once approved by the state board of education and not yet definitely condemned by that body.

In this connection it is my conviction that Governor Talmadge ought to see that some competent and dependable person, such as I estimate Mr. Brewton to be, is definitely and permanently engaged to read every textbook now being used or proposed to be used in the educational system in Georgia, and call to the attention of the regents or the educational board the pages and paragraphs in such textbooks that may be open to criticism from the Georgia viewpoint. As a matter of course, the state board of education cannot do this work, and to leave matters as they are subjects us to a repetition of the same unfortunate situation recently disclosed.

As Dr. Pittman testified in the Atlanta hearing, there are 30,000 books in the Statesboro College library, and Pittman had nothing to do with their selection, nor could he read all of them and be responsible for their contents.

In the meantime, it is a pleasure to have Mr. Brewton as "guest columnist" for today with the following communication:

SAYS MR. BREWTON:

"When I left Emory College in 1917 I had a strong feeling that I had been robbed. When I read Aleck Stephens's Constitutional View of the Late War Between the States in 1927 I knew I had been robbed and I knew how and by whom. I had to stumble on the Stephens book—the South had permitted it to go out of print, and, as an eminent Macon lawyer told me, Mercer University threw it out of the window for Northern books even before it went out of print.

"Aleck Stephens rewrote that book in shorter form for elementary Georgia schools, but Georgia school teachers and administrators threw that out of the window and it also is out of print. Indeed, Stephen's elementary book was called a history of the United States, but it contained so many principles and facts that were Southern that it was not regarded as eligible—it didn't bootlick the Northern "boards" and "philanthropy" factories. It thus took me fifteen years to find out for certain I had been robbed of my heritage and who robbed me. At Emory I tried to get the faculty to let me invite Thomas E. Watson there to make an address on France, but they refused to do it on the ground he was against foreign missions. This notwithstanding the fact he lived right down the road from them at Thomson.

"I tried later to do the same at Mercer without avail. Yet both of those institutions today will bring back their expatriates from the North and heap honors on them. Watson, a Mercer alumnus, was adjudged unfit to appear on the Mercer campus for the sole reason he stayed in Georgia and fought for Georgia without getting New York's permission.

"THERE IS NOT a single history book in a single school in America which gives Southern history, and I challenge every single school board or faculty in the state of Georgia to give me a hearing and put me to the test.

I will agree to go forever branded a common liar if I do not prove my charge. That's fair—it ought to work; but in the past it has failed to work for the simple reason that these traitorous teachers are afraid to be unmasked; they are afraid the righteous wrath of patriot Georgians will drive them from their seats if it once becomes known that they are using Georgia taxes to do nothing but dump down in Georgia the culture of somebody a thousand miles away. Some of these teachers say they cannot help themselves because there are no books that give the South, but why are they not crying out to the South and to the civilized world that there are none, and why do they go on teaching what they know is a lie without once raising their voices against it?

"Since 1927, when the scales of error fell from my own eyes, I have tramped from Atlanta to New Orleans shouting that the books were false—by acts of omission and commission—and I have been hooted off of virtually every scholastic campus we have, and out of the office of virtually every capitalist who says the war is over and he doesn't want to hear anything more about the South's past. Yet the fool is taxed to compel his children to hear more of the American past that omits the South.

"THE HUE AND CRY raised against Eugene Talmadge, governor of Georgia, for doing politically what ought long ago to have been done by the teachers themselves, had just as well be stopped for it will come to nought. What Talmadge is now doing with respect to Georgia teachers, who stood by while their own people were defamed in their own schools and did not open their mouths, is just the beginning. Even if it's politics, it had better be done as politics than not done at all.

"This is one time Gene Talmadge is the instrument of destiny whether he knows it or not. He is beginning nothing; he is simply a culmination. His purge is nothing but retribution. The people of Georgia had a right to expect leadership instead of treason from their teachers— and lo! everywhere you turn you find a teacher who is bought and kept. They cannot deny it. Their rage comes from the fact their conduct is now unmasked. And of course it's just the beginning.

"When the people of Georgia see the full results of 75 years of Georgia educational treason they are going to overturn the whole educational system of the state as they long ago ought to have done. What's the good of paying out millions to build modern school houses in which to teach Georgia children that their own fathers are not fit to be heard in their own house?

"But the teachers deny this—they say find it in the book that anybody in the South is called a traitor. It is not in the book—no it isn't, there isn't anything about them in the books at all, and that is precisely the point. I can take the history books one by one and show instantly that our state is virtually unmentioned. When I have done that, I have done all that is necessary to show that the books are nothing but our own doom.

"God Almighty still stands on the Fifth Commandment delivered on Mount Sinai. He says that we honor our fathers and mothers in order that our days may be long in the land He gave us; but that is no less than saying that if we do not honor them our days will be short. It simply means what all secular history has shown for a thousand years, that peoples pass into the hands of their enemies by failing to maintain what God gave them.

"IF THE SOUTH is not fit to maintain, then God Almighty made a mistake in creating the South with her own principles; and whoever accuses the Deity of mistakes is nothing but the kind of atheist and blasphemer as those who have launched propaganda to substitute their private "philanthropy" for God's truths and nature's laws.

"Ever since the War Between the States, the people of the South have been stepping back and stepping back every time a Northern dollar came here, and have been consenting to the utter annihilation of their own culture simply because somebody else does not like that culture and wants to substitute for it something else.

"Education; that is, what they call education—the present educational system in the South—is the channel that was chosen for this infamous work right after that war. And failure of Southern capital to stand up and tell Northern capital: "You are not sovereign over this matter — I am," has thrown to the mercy of Northern capital all the teaching machinery of the South; and this machinery is now revealed to have sold out—there can be no denial of it. There it is, plain as daylight.

"GEORGIANS who have not sold out, who do not get up and bark the tenets of the South's enemies in order to bootlick somebody, should meet immediately in solemn conclave and expose to the general public the wretched textbooks used in our schools, and let our people have the true light on this matter. It is plain the schools and colleges are not going to do it. They were looked to do it but they did not do it—they sold out. They knew better, but they sold out. It is now up to the patriot laymen of the state, male and female, to take these books up, one by one, and expose them. What about a Southern History Institute right there in Macon?"

ging Of Colleges' oraries Probably Next Step Of Talmadge

Two Volumes Dealing With Race Question Are Governor's Latest Targets

ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. Eugene Talmadge may turn to a scouting of books in Georgia colleges now that a revamped board of regents has upheld him by removing two state eductors he accused of favoring racial equality.

Two books, "Brown America," by Edwin R. [illegible], of Chicago, president of the Rosenwald Foundation, and "Calling America," a compilation by various authors, figured prominently in a hearing that resulted in the state board of regents voting, 10-to-5, not to reemploy Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia's school of education and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers College.

Testimony brought out that "Calling America," a book containing a full-page picture of a Negro in chains, was used at the teachers' college and also was in the libraries of some other educational institution in the state.

Dr. R. J. Deloach, a teacher at the college, was asked by W. G. Neville, of Statesboro, attorney for Pittman, if he knew of any movement to "get this book out of these other libraries."

Talmadge quickly interjected, "There is a movement now," and later, when reporters asked him if he planned an investigation of textbooks, he said "that will be acted on. The board of regents will look into that."

Pittman said he was not familiar with the book, "Calling America," and had no part in selecting it.

Regent James S. Peters, of Manchester, spokesman for the governor, attempted to tie in the racial charge against Pittman with the use of this book in the college, just as he tried to link the charges against Dean Cocking with the book "Brown America."

He alleged the latter publication espoused racial equality and that Dr. Cocking "probably is the financial agent in the South for the Rosenwald Foundation."

The general charge that he advocated racial equality and the specific allegation that he recommended a teachers' training school near Athens for whites and Negroes were branded as "absolutely false" by Cocking.

Pittman was equally emphatic in denying the charges against him.

THIS MORNING

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, II

"He is guilty of lynching academic freedom in Georgia . . ."

This is the official verdict on Eugene Talmadge by the Fight for Freedom Committee. The Georgia governor gets a place on the right hand of Adolf Hitler in the estimate of [illegible] which is more active than any other now against the Nazi menace to America's way. A happy side to this unhappy business of Eugene Talmadge is the unanimity with which he is being condemned by men of light and leading everywhere, and especially in the South. Wherever this writer has been lately on Southern travels he has found press and public unqualified in condemnation of the outbreak of Fascism in Georgia.

The two greatest crimes any man can commit against the South are (1) the crime of destroying or debauching the educational process upon which our whole hope depends, and (2) the crime of agitating the infinitely delicate and dangerous race question to get a political following. Of both of these crimes at once, in compounded felony, Eugene Talmadge is guilty.

Pity the poor South that its worst passions can still be played on by men like Talmadge. Pity the Southern Negro that he should be exploited two ways at once, with agitators in his alleged behalf betraying him from the North and agitators against him making political capital of their dishonest game in the South. And pity those of us from the Potomac to the Rio Grande who have to live in the same land with these Negroes and whose hopes of getting along with them peaceably in ways of orderly progress are spoiled by cross fires from demagogic race haters in our midst and damn-fool "champions" of the race outside!

From Secretary Walter White, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, comes a long letter about this column's criticism of him for the proposed Negro March on Washington for intimations to his race that its lot in this country is no better than it would be under Adolf Hitler. His point (the letter is too long for reproduction here) is that he had not been able to get action against discrimination in defense jobs in any other way and that "discontent and bitterness were growing like wildfire among Negroes all over the country. . . . Communists were trying as usual to capitalize on this. . . . It was only then that several of us planned as a last resort to get some consideration of the plight of the Negro . . ."

This column has opposed as loudly as anybody the tendencies to leave the Negro out in the great melee of men and goods and money which the defense program represents. The Negro is as much entitled as other Americans to have wartime jobs substituted for lost peacetime jobs in this crisis. Discriminations make for a serious economic situation as well as a political one. But insofar as Walter White's proposed march on Washington was provoked by "discontent and bitterness which were growing like wildfire," he should consider to what extent he himself and his methods throughout this war crisis have aggravated the very discontent and bitterness against which he says he was forced to act. In his organization's magazine, Crisis, and in his weekly releases, there have been not merely the proper protests against defense job discrimination but all manner of bitter intimations and suggestions, including the one that there wasn't much choice for the Negro between Hitler and Uncle Sam.

If in all the published words of Walter White's group since Hitler became our supreme national problem there had been one sentence of appreciation for this country "as is," of invocation to his race to put national interest before self interest, of praise for the immense progress Negroes have been permitted to make in America, of what all of us owe the country at a time like this—we could have forgiven him much. His sin is that he has forgotten that there is something at stake in this country now more vital than anything that has to do with the "advancement of colored people"—or with extending the New Deal, or with destroying the New Deal, or putting union labor forward or putting union labor down, or promoting the interests of this race or that, or extending democracy to more people, or confining democracy to more qualified people, etc., etc.

He is not alone in his sin. There are many others, devoted to many other causes, who have forgotten to salute occasionally the flag that covers all their causes and permits all to be championed.

Talmadge Hints He May Take Post as Head of Education Body

Governor Now Has Seven Appointees Among Eleven Members of State School Control Board.

Governor Talmadge yesterday intimated he might become chairman of the State Board of Education at its meeting Tuesday when he said he planned to find out what part, if any, the Rosenwald Fund plays in the common schools of Georgia.

Asked whom the board probably would elect to succeed the late A. H. Freeman, of Newnan, as chairman, the Governor said he understood the law already provided that the Governor serves in this capacity.

However, a check with the law department revealed that the board must elect one from its number, but this officer does not necessarily have to be the Governor, although former Governor Rivers held the post for the major part of his two terms.

Governor Talmadge will have about the same majority of appointees on this board that he has on the State Board of Regents. He added another to the list yesterday by naming John H. Woodall, of Woodland, to succeed the late Judge Freeman.

During the legislature the Governor appointed successors to six members of the board. This will give him seven members out of a total of 11.

Rosenwald Fund.

Superintendent M. D. Collins said he had not been informed as to whether the Rosenwald Fund would be brought up at Tuesday's organization meeting.

He pointed out that the last school the fund built in the nation was the Eleanor Roosevelt school at Warm Springs, named in honor of the President's wife. President Roosevelt delivered the dedicatory address when this school was opened in March, 1937.

Another item to be taken up at the meeting, Collins said, was the fixing of teachers' salaries, although he said he expected no changes from the present schedule.

Governor Talmadge declined to comment on whether there would be any change of textbooks or the personnel of the professional textbook committees.

There are eight professional textbook committees, consisting of five members each. They study all textbooks and make final recommendations to the board before the texts are adopted for use in the system.

Changes the Subject.

The Board of Education is now publishing an elementary Georgia history by Lawton B. Evans, of Augusta, and Professor E. M. Coulter, of the University of Georgia, in which virtually a whole chapter is devoted to former Governor Rivers under the title of "Georgia Today." The text has full-page pictures of both President Roosevelt and former Governor Rivers.

Governor Talmadge changed the subject when he was asked if he would permit this book to continue on the schoolbook roster.

The governor also said he would push investigation of textbooks being used in the University System by calling for specific information from college librarians as to what books relating to social equality were being used as required reading matter.

Talmadge Writer On Urban League

In his weekly poltical publication, issued yesterday, Governor Talmadge comments on the personnel of the Urban League. The Urban League is a committee to which is submitted problems of education and economics on which Negro leaders desire conference and advice.

The Governor noted that Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution, was a member of the committee. The committee membership is as follows: Attorney A. T. Walden, chairman; J. B. Blayton, vice chairman; Sam W. Wood, secretary; Dr. C. H. Johnson, treasurer; Dr. Rufus Clement, Robert L. Cousins, Dr. G. R. Dwelle, George L. Googe, Charles W. Greene, Dr. Willis J. King, Edward M. Kahn, Mrs. B. E. Mays, Ralph McGill, Alonzo G. Moron, Jesse O. Thomas, Mrs. R. D. Tilly, S. W. Walker, the Rev. John C. Wright.

Ralph McGill was the newspaper representative and George L. Googe, A. F. of L. official, the representative of organized labor on the committee.

Gene Claims Negro Praise

ATLANTA, [AP] — Governor Eugene Talmadge Monday made public a letter he received from a Negro educator who praised the chief executive for his "magnificent defense" of separate educational programs for whites and Negroes in Georgia.

J. W. Holley, president of the Georgia Normal and Agricultural College at Albany, referred to the ouster of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia and President Marvin S. Pittman of the Georgia Teachers' College — educators accused of advocating racial co-education—and said:

"I will answer fully and effectively the adverse criticism that comes from my own people in Atlanta and the Northern papers and magazines."

The governor immediately replied by inviting the Negro to attend the next board of regents' meeting at Tifton Aug. 11, saying "I want them to hear from you."

Talmadge View Draws Fire of Negro Group

Governor Denies Race 'Equality Under the Law,' It Says.

By The Associated Press.

Asserting Governor Talmadge had denied its race "equality under the law," a Negro civic and political organization in Atlanta yesterday issued a statement saying:

"If one million Negroes in Georgia must remain half-free, then two million whites can never be wholly free for the simple reason that in order to keep Negroes half-free, the dominant race must stultify its conscience, becloud its spiritual vision."

President J. W. Dobbs, of the Atlanta Civic and Political League, and Secretary Joseph Crawford, said the group unanimously adopted the released statement.

Last week the State Board of Regents declined to re-employ for another term two university system educators accused by Governor Talmadge of advocating racial co-education.

The league statement lauded the Julius Rosenwald Fund in assisting Negro education in the south and regretted "most deeply the callous and ungracious attack made upon it."

Talmadge charged the fund sponsored "intermingling of the races" in schools.

"Equality of opportunity is not synonymous with identity of opportunity," the statement continued. "We do, however, take issue with the Governor of Georgia when he publicly denied to a million Negroes equality under the law.

"And this question has absolutely nothing to do with purely social relations, those being matters in which every individual has the inherent right to determine for himself. If one-third of the people of Georgia is to be denied equality under the law, then our basic law is a farce and our preachments about democracy are the quintessence of hypocrisy itself. . . ."

Gene Gets Away With It

The governor of Georgia got away with it.

Employing the kind of ruthless and undemocratic methods made familiar to us by Huey Long in Louisiana and Adolf Hitler in the German Reich, Gene Talmadge has established complete personal control over public higher education in Georgia.

Behind the dismissal of two outstandingly competent educational administrators by Talmadge's "packed" Board of Regents lies as nasty a mess of unproved smears, organized slander-mongering and exploitation of the darkest prejudices as has offended the nostrils of the decent South since the heyday of the Ku Klux Klan.

The university system of Georgia has not merely lost two outstandingly competent and progressive educational administrators, Dean Cocking, of the university's school of education, and President Pittman, of the State Teachers' College; it has lost much of its integrity as well.

The puppet majority of regents who did the governor's bidding in the travesty upon a "hearing" which took place in Atlanta Monday displayed the temper of Quislings in delivering their university system over to political despoilment.

Now the walls defending the freedom of learning are down. Now public higher education in Georgia is open to every sort of vengeful depredation, is subject to being terrorized by the governor or any ignoramus vested with a little political authority.

Who thinks this is the end of anything more than the first chapter of the sickening story?

The day following the public spectacle in Atlanta two more educators were deprived of their positions without any sort of hearing, J. Curtis Dixon, vice chancellor of the university system, and R. E. Davis, of the state college of agriculture, both native Georgians. Their alleged connection with the Rosenwald Fund, which has contributed so magnificently to the progress of Southern education, was the only excuse given by the governor for this further indefensible invasion of academic freedom.

Already we hear that the governor is going to send his agents into the libraries of the state institutions of higher learning to ferret out any volumes deemed subversive by the mentality now in the political saddle. Perhaps we shall be treated to book-burnings on the Nazi model.

Whatever further measures of harsh repression are decreed by the almighty governor, calamity has already befallen the university system of Georgia.

It may be blacklisted by educators and their associations in the remaining free states of the union.

Teachers honestly devoted to democracy will hesitate to accept positions in the Georgia system.

Morale will collapse within the system. The best remaining professors will desperately attempt to find positions in other states. In their teaching, the constant terror of being informed against by some "planted," or neurotic, or simply unsuccessful student will haunt their minds and inhibit their honest speech. Perhaps a quotation in their mouths from Thomas Jefferson or Abraham Lincoln or Franklin D. Roosevelt will be enough to convict them of treason to the official philosophy of Talmadgized Georgia. Thereupon the Peach State Gestapo may be turned loose, as it is charged in the Cocking and Pittman cases, to manufacture evidence against them, to poison their home communities against them with outrageous and obscene charges, to terrorize their Negro servants into rifling their private papers and signing fraudulent statements about their personal lives.

Who said it can't happen here? It is happening in Georgia, despite all that an aroused and fighting citizenry can do to stem the undemocratic tide.

And this same Gene Talmadge, who is engaged in destroying democracy in Georgia, stood upon a platform here in Birmingham on the Fourth of July and spoke words in praise of democracy. We have long been told that if Fascism ever came to this country, it would attempt to cover itself with the Stars and Stripes while paying frantic lip service to "democracy." Any incipient American dictator is mighty easy to identify, not by his words, but by his deeds.

Georgia Dean Busted On Racial Issue

By the Associated Press

ATLANTA, July 14—Backed by a Board of Regents shaken up after a previous reverse, Gov. Eugene Talmadge today succeeded in ousting a university dean whom he accused of advocating racial co-education.

After seating four new members appointed to replace men who previously opposed the Governor, the Board of Regents voted 10 to 5 not to re-employ Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the College of Education at the University of Georgia in Athens.

In today's hearing, James S. Peters of Manchester, newly named-regent, extended the previous charges to include implications that Dr. Cocking favors general racial equality. This was based on an assertion—denied by counsel for the dean—that Dr. Cocking is a Georgia representative of the Rosenwald Foundation and that his philanthropic organization advocates racial equality.

The Iowa-born educator denied any advocacy of racial equality.

Men Like Georgia's Governor Keep South Backward And Wretched

IT IS EXCEEDINGLY fortunate for America that men like Eugene Talmadge, governor of Georgia, are rapidly disappearing from public life. And the sooner they disappear entirely, the better will it be for all Americans.

At one time it was considered smart for men who sought public office to gain their objectives by denouncing colored Americans. The man who could yell the most vitriolic epithets concerning colored people climbed into the highest offices.

With the South becoming a wee bit more civilized, apparently candidates for public office attempted to gain votes on merit rather than hate. But apparently Georgia is still sufficiently stupid to elect its officials on anti-Negro slogans.

The rankest and most silly outfit in control of a State in America today is the machine of Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

Because certain educators in Georgia were intelligent enough to know that there is no such thing as racial superiority, Governor Talmadge kicked them out. "Gene" Talmadge, the hill-billy statesman, shouted at the meeting: "The educators of Georgia must not attempt to erase the superiority of the white people of Georgia."

Governor Talmadge knows that nobody can make anyone superior or inferior to anyone else. "The dumbest white man is superior to the smartest 'n——r'," yelled one of the Governor's henchmen. Any fool knows that such remarks are not true and the statement is a bare-faced lie. And if Talmadge thinks such tommy rot he is crazy.

But Talmadge knows better; he makes those fool statements to appeal to the nitwits whom he hopes will vote for him. Since he undoubtedly does not have the qualifications which would appeal to the intelligence of the electorate, he is forced to appeal to the baser instincts of racial prejudice.

The South is the most backward section of America. It is the most illiterate and the economic poorhouse of the United States. And men of the Talmadge stripe are responsible.

'Ruthless, Unprincipled Men' Lambasted by Ousted Educator

GRIFFIN, (AP)—A menace which by "its unlimited rapacity shocks the intellect and exhausts the emotions" threatens democracy in Georgia and in this nation, Walter D. Cocking, ousted dean of the University of Georgia asserted Wednesday.

Cocking asked the Griffin Kiwanis club "shall the forces of despotism and tyranny in the hands of a small group of ruthless and unprincipled men, making use of the twin hates of ignorance and prejudice, destroy our democratic way of life, upset decency among men, permanently shelve fair play and destine the Empire State to a permanent place of decadence?

"Or shall the tides of freedom and righteousness and fair play and decency rise anew . . . to meet the current threats of dictatorship and remove the underlying conditions?"

The educator said "the tools of the despot are blackmail and high-jacking."

He suggested that to preserve the democratic way of life and protect democratic education "every community in America must provide an adequate educational opportunity for all of its citizens. Every community must see to it that all citizens who can benefit from education take advantage of the educational opportunities provided."

Vote Out Gov.. Talmadge Is Borders' Plea

Urges Negroes To Register And Go to Polls

In a letter to the Atlanta Daily World yesterday, the Rev. William Holmes Borders, pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church, said the action of Governor Talmadge and his revamped Board of Regents in ousting two noted white educators was "an appeal to prejudice to inflame the animosity of certain whites towards Negroes by dressing the issue in the clothes of social equality.'

Rev. Mr. Borders' entire statement follows:

"EDITOR, Atlanta World: The recent action of the governor of Georgia concerning two professors in our state university system is ill-timed. Within a supposed democracy almost at war with the dictators, the badly-advised governor uses all the tactics of a dictator.

In the second place it is an appeal to prejudice to inflame the animosity of certain whites towards Negroes by dressing the issue in the clothes of social equality. If this intelligent white professor is fired because he is accused of teaching social equality it would be even easier to start a race riot waving this same red flag if the objectives become the Negro rather than the professor.

In the third place Mr. Talmadge as a governor is a poor educator. I for one wonder if the governor has checked other universities in the East, West North, South and even in Europe on the point of contention. Intelligence as to what the remainder of the world deems wise does no harm and there are many chances of genuine help.

In the fourth place there are no superior races, as President Roosevelt pointed out in a recent radio address, when discussing German superiority as related by Hitler. If Germans are not superior over Americans, can it not also be true that whites are not superior over Negroes? I know some Negroes who for me are better at what they are doing than Mr. Talmadge is at being a governor. Marian Anderson and Roland Hayes at music; Just and Carver at science; Owens and Louis at athletes; DuBois and C. S. Johnson as scholars.

In the fifth place this is an act of a coward. No tall, wise, religious son takes an unfair advantage of an underprivileged group.

In the sixth place such action turns the clock of civilization backwards. It wasts energy and time in destroying, when that time and energy might be used constructively in the state in improving education.

In the seventh place the governor must remember that he just happened to be born white. He could have been a Chinese, Indian counts the same. or Negro. If he had been a Negro what would his attitude now be?

A man such as this has no business in an office of power, therefore he should be voted out. Negroes, thousand of Negroes, should register and meet him at the polls where every ballot, black or white.

Albany College President And Governor Agree

Talmadge—Cocking

The "black is black and white is white and ne'er the twain shall meet" speech made six years ago by J. W. Holley, white-haired president of the Georgia State Teachers College at Albany was accepted Friday night by Governor Eugene Talmadge as his stand in the present controversy raging over the high-handed methods he used in the "shake-up" of the University System of Georgia.

The acceptance came in a thirty-minute radio broadcast made over Radio Station WSB in defense of the methods he employed to secure the discharge of Dr. Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia educational school and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman as president of the Georgia Teachers College at Statesboro.

The governor had previously pointed to Dr. Holley's speech as laudable in a front page editorial appearing in the current issue of the Statesman, his personal newspaper published at Hapeville.

OLD ADDRESS

The aging, white-haired educator was quoted as saying that Negro units have no place in the University system, that they should be set apart by themselves under a special commission, whose business it would be to build Negro people a school system, based upon the group's special needs.

Dr. Holley contended in the address, which was delivered in 1935 before the general council of the University System at Statesboro, that whites and blacks should be educated in different schools because of their different background, environment and future outlook.

"The great mass of our people need to be trained in agriculture, mechanical arts, the trades and industries and the art of homemaking, the Albany educator stated, according to the governor.

The governor prefaced his address with a summary of statistical matter, tending to prove that he had reduced the state's indebtedness without increasing the cost to tax-payers of the state.

BEHIND-THE-SCENES

Moving down to the historical trial before the newly-inducted Board of Regents on July 14, the governor blandly omitted mention of the behind-the-scenes moves that ended in the resignation and expulsion of three members of the board, who had previously voted to keep Dr. Cocking.

Making repeated references to the "christian democracy he contended he believed in, the state's chief executive sought to fan the flames of racial prejudice through his contention that Dr. Cocking and the Rosenwald Fund were seeking to establish mixed schools in Georgia.

The Governor in his address mentioned the two books, "Brown America" and "Calling America." He pointed out that these books point to co-racial education and were found in some of the libraries of some of the white schools of this state.

Another reference was made to Negroes when the governor quoted briefly from the statement issued Tuesday by a committee of the Atlanta Civic and Political League, an entirely Negro organization. The governor, apparently misinformed. contended that the league was inter-racial.

He derided the league's contention for "equality of opportunity," and quoted the paragraph from the statement reading:: "If one-third of the people of Georgia is to be denied equality under the law, then our basic law is a farce and our preachments about democracy are the quintessence of hyprocrisy itself."

President Holley's Address Of 1935

"ADDRESS TO THE GENERAL COUNCIL OF THE UNIVERSITY SYSTEM AT STATESBORO, GEORGIA, IN 1935 BY J. W. HOLLEY.

"It is a great privilege, Mr. Chancellor, to address this Council on the important subject of 'What Should Be the Place on the Negro Units in the University System?'

"The question might more correctly be put in this form: namely, 'Have the Negro Units Any Place in the University System?' I make bold to say, in the outset, THEY HAVE NOT.

"The background of the Negro is vastly different from that of the white man; his environment is unlike that of the white man, and his future outlook so different, that, it will be impossible to orientate or fuse both races in one educational system. In other words, when a Negro youth a and young white man enter the freshman class of college, the Negro boy enters with a vastly different background, very dissimilar environment and a tremendously different future outlook from that of the white boy, and therefore their training should be different. It would be unfair to both races to try to establish and operate mixed schools — 'Black is black and white is white, and ne'er the twain shall meet.'

"Those Negro units should be set apart by themselves under a special commission, whose business it will be to build our people a school system, based upon our special needs. Courses of study designed for the white children of New England are not suited to the needs of Negro boys and girls of Georgia.

"The great mass of our people need to be trained in Agriculture, Mechanic Arts, the Trades and Industries and the Art of Homemaking.

"Your forefathers, Mr. Chancellor, wrought well in their day.

"Whatever may be said of the hardships of slavery, it must be admitted that the slave owners turned out four million men, women and children, better trained in the Trades and Industries, Morals, Manners and Religions, than any other four million people in all the world. And, by the way, Mr. Chancellor, the Southern white people and the Ancient Egyptians are the only people who ever got any real work out of the Negro and the Jew.

"We came to this country pagans, today there are seven million Protestant Christians among us.

"We came here without a language, [illegible] we speak the proud Anglo-Saxon, which seems destined to become the language of the globe.

"We came here with the shackles of slavery about our wrists, today we are clothed with the American ballot, which makes us citizens of the greatest republic on earth.

"We came naked, today we contribute Two Billion Dollars to the annual income of the nation.

"We came here ignorant, today we have more than one hundred colleges, manned by men and women of our own race.

"We are proud of the achievements of our people, and we want a separate little university of our own. A university made of two or three branches or units, with courses of study based upon the needs of our people.

"Every state in the South has at least one university for Negroes except Georgia, and, Mr. Chancellor, there is no man in the state in better position to divorce these Negro schools from the University System and set them up, separate and distinct from the whites, than yourself, and I trust that you have come to the kingdom at this time for that purpose.

"Give us separate schools from the elementary grades through the graduate schools and we will give to the State a Negro citizenship that will contribute its full quota to the sum total of all that makes for a happy and prosperous commonwealth.

"Give us this, and 'We'll take our stand in Dixie Land, and live and lie for Dixie.' "

Hundreds of Atlantans swamped the Atlanta Daily World Friday night, with telephone calls after the Governor made his speech. They called to say they were not in accord with Mr. Talmadge. They all disagreed with President Holley, of Georgia Normal College, in Albany, whom the Governor quoted to put over his point of separate schools for colored and white students in Georgia.

Letters to the Segregation

56k

Editor The Telegraph:

"For God's sake, please advise them to move over yonder by the other white folks. Race strife in the same quarters breeds more trouble for us." Just a common sense plea from the good colored people to the influential for segregation. Observe, if you don't mind facing ugly facts, the humble rental houses of some of your towns and cities and you may see different colors of the little "American tragedies" where colored and whites live side by side. The physician who visits all types of homes says that many of the former have the cleanest houses inside.

While shedding sympathy for children in war-torn foreign countries let's don't neglect the children here in our black-ankle belt.

Perhaps they would want two weeks to decide if the privileged were compelled to take their choice of living in the blackouts over there, or the black-ankle belt here. "Born in defeat and licked before they get in the battle" are the children in such living conditions. To start off with, some of these are very beautiful children, but by unwholesome environment they soon become bond slaves of the three greatest enemies of the races. Ignorance, sin and disease. Occasionally one gets a break and ascends. All baby animals can shift better for themselves than human babies. Even a tiny alligator can go straight to another pond when his home pond dries up. High heaven above, what a need for a revival of courageous Christian living and education!

When a man treats every personality like a human being, irrespective of race or creed, then the stars in their courses will fight for him. Plato defined justice as being the greatest of virtues. Is there any way we can stay in the grace of a just God without giving to every human being the consideration that is justly due him?

"Only Ourselves To Blame"

Now comes the Jacksonville (Ala.) News, as a candidate for fellowship with that group of Georgia newspapers which, Governor Talmadge said in his Fourth of July speech at Birmingham, "ought to be in hell."

For, in its issue of June 26, even before the Talmadge denunciation of newspapers which do not approve all his policies and pronunciamentoes, the Jacksonville News carried an editorial most decidedly condemnatory of the Georgia governor's attempt to stir up racial prejudice and to disrupt the University of Georgia.

Here is the News' editorial:

* * * * *

GENE TALMADGE ACTING UP IN GEORGIA.

For the past several weeks, Gene Talmadge, he of the red suspenders, has been acting up in Georgia, with respect to the schools of higher learning; more particularly the Georgia School of Technology and the University of Georgia.

His first step was the attempt to appoint "Red" Barron, a former athlete at Tech, to the position of vice president, which would place him in line to succeed the 74-year-old president, Dr. M. L. Brittain. It was brought out through the newspapers of the state that Barron left school before he completed his work on a degree, and it was several years later before he received it. He has been serving as president of an agricultural school in Georgia, and has never added any graduate work to his record. For him to succeed a scholarly man like Dr. Brittain was contrary to the ideas of the students of Tech and certainly to thousands of Georgians.

More recently he charged the dean of the College of Education at the University of Georgia with violating southern traditions and advocating the establishment of a school in which both the Negroes and whites would be enrolled. A hearing was held before the Board of Regents and no evidence was produced to support this accusation. The regents voted to reinstate the dean.

It all promises to be another unpleasant incident which will give the state of Georgia a lot of unfavorable publicity. It is just such stunts as these which give people of other sections of the country the idea that the south is an ignorant area, characterized by such people as were portrayed in "Tobacco Road," and in Carl Carmer's book, "The Stars Fell on Alabama."

The race issue will always bring in plenty of attention, and will incite a lot of people who are hipped on the subject of preventing "equality of Negroes and whites."

Talmadge wasn't satisfied with his efforts to tear up the university, and other institutions of that state, he comes along and states that he expects to start a drive to run all "foreign" professors (those who are not natives of Georgia) out of Georgia institutions of higher learning.

Just suppose that every state in the Union fostered the idea of eliminating every college teacher who was not a native of the state in which he happened to be teaching. This would indeed become a narrow-minded, provincial section. In fact, every state in the Union would probably produce a crop of just such men as Eugene Talmadge, so narrow between the eyes that he can't see beyond his nose. So selfish that he can't support anything which does not give him personal benefit. So steeped in his own ignorance that he would place all others in his class.

While we are sympathetic toward our neighbor state for the predicament in which she finds herself, we must say that the people of that state have no one but themselves to blame —they put Gene Talmadge in the driver's seat. Intelligent, patriotic (?) citizens of Georgia last summer were tearing their shirts for him and predicting what great things he would do for the state; how he would get them out of the hole financially and put the state on a sound economic basis.

Maybe money means more than anything else, but we doubt it. We believe that it means more for a state to have a broad vision which takes in all parts of the country, north, south, east and west; for the children of the land to benefit from the association with people from these sections; for citizens to have open minds and that the pursuit for knowledge should not be bounded by geographical lines.

Let Alabamans and others of this region resolve that no such leader shall ever be chosen who will hamper the intellectual and spiritual development such as Gene Talmadge is doing for Georgia.

'Brown America' May Be Removed From Libraries

Libraries of Georgia colleges may soon be purged of the books "Brown America" and "Calling America", from which excerpts were read Monday in the trials of Drs. Walter D. Cocking and Marvin S. Pittman, and said to be racial equality doctrines, it was learned Tuesday.

"Brown America" was written by Edwin R. Embree, president of the Rosenwald Foundation, which came in for "smearing" by the prosecution of Governor Talmadge at the trials. Dean Cocking never was in connection with the publication or author, yet the excerpts were used against him.

Although both Drs. Cocking and Pittman emphatically denied that they favored race equality or had anything to do with the books and tracts used in condemning them, they were ousted from their posts at the University of Georgia and the Georgia Teachers' College by identical votes 10 to 5.

It became known at the State Capitol Tuesday that five educators were eliminated by the Regents instead of only two as previously announced. The others ousted include Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon, of the University System; Professor P. D. Bush, of North Georgia State College, at Dahlonega and B. E. Davis of the Animal Husbandry Department of the State College of Agriculture.

A NEGRO'S PLEA

Editor, The Journal: I intend to continue to be a patriotic Negro American citizen and to believe in American democracy in spite of the attacks made on my race in connection with the recent ousting of Dean Cocking, of the University of Georgia. I have come in contact with enough high-grade white people in all walks of life in Atlanta, from college professors who possess a Ph.D. degree, to salesmen with not more than an elementary school education to know that Atlanta has a large proportion of fair-minded white citizens who believe that the new South in which all of us are interested cannot be built by one race keeping its foot on the neck of the other.

I don't think I can adequately portray how disconcerting it is to members of my group to have the Negro's aspirations, ideals and such achievements as he has been able to make under great handicaps not only ridiculed and depreciated, but actually nullified. Many of the Negro group have become bitter and discouraged lately and are asking "What's the use? You are damned if you do and you are damned if you don't." The worst feature of this new assault on the Negro is not that it creates new enemies but that it acts as a deterrent to white persons who for some time have been giving the Negro a helping hand in various ways and to new friends who might have been in the making. Already some of us have been told by white friends that "I don't believe I can serve on that committee any longer or give any support to that movement longer because I can't afford to have my desire to practice true Christianity in aiding an underprivileged group to be deliberately misinterpreted.

I am quite aware that the persons responsible for this propaganda may not believe it themselves, but political exigencies cause them to say these things. My God! have they no heart? can't they understand that thousands and thousands of the less educated white people believe every word of it? And more than that, how can they, in their hearts, be willing to stand for the handicaps and mistreatment which will be imposed upon thousands and thousands of Negroes who have no part in this affair one way or the other?

In the midst of the great world struggle there are two opposing ideologies, one which stands for godliness, racial hatred, and cruelty to others and one which stands for Christian brotherhood and the opportunity for all men to develop to the full extent of their potentialities with the Sermon on the Mount as its basic tenet.

I would like to believe that America as a whole, the South as a whole and Georgia as a whole is still fighting for the latter ideology. Recent developments in the State Capitol would make one believe that Georgia was arraigned with Hitler and his totalitarian ideology, but I like to believe that this point of view represents only a small minority of the good white people of the state. I am not writing this to call groes of the state to fight with even more really enthusiasm, for democracy, for American ism and for a better world as a whole.

GEORGIA STANDS BY HER TRADITIONS

JUL 26 1941

DESPITE THE CLAIMS of the New Dealers and other advocates of the theory that America is the last outpost of democracy and their efforts to prove to the outside world that everything is sweetness and light in the good old U. S. A., the sovereign state of Georgia reverted to tradition last week and notified the world that in Georgia, at least, democracy is for whites only.

Governor Eugene Talmadge caused the removal by the State Board of Regents of two liberal-minded educators from their positions as dean of the University of Georgia and president of the State Teachers College because they had expressed the conviction that Negroes were entitled to the same kind of education as other Americans. Dean Cocking of the University of George had favored the program of the Rosenwald Foundation in promoting higher education for Negroes; and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman of the Teachers College had permitted Negro students from Tuskegee Institute to eat on the campus of the State Teachers College.

The tradition of Georgia is best expressed in a statement by one of Governor Talmadge's followers, Superior Court Judge Ben Jackson, when he said:

> "An unintelligent white man, if he is white is better than the best educated nigger on earth."

This tradition goes back to the time when a ship load of people from the over-crowded prisons of England were landed in Georgia, and were used along with the Negro slaves to clear the forests and till the soil for the early settlers. These poor whites, who were themselves serving a term of servitude just as slaves, wanted to feel that they were better than the black; and their descendants from that day forward have shown an intolerant spirit against the Negro. Governor Talmadge and the hill-billy type of white Georgian are descendants from these people, as are the people depicted in Erskin Caldwell's "Tobacco Road." Knowing their background, it is not surprising that these "poor whites" have this prejudce.

What is most surprising though is that such men as "Chip" Robert, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, one of the leaders of the Democratic party in Georgia, a former federal office holder and a personal friend of President Roosevelt and other leaders of the New Deal, should endorse the attitude of the Georgia governor. Although the fight was aimed at white educators, indirectly it was aimed at Negroes and Jews, for the basis of the attack on the Rosenwald Foundation had its origin in that fact that this foundation is controlled by Jews. The Rockefeller family has contributed thousands of dollars toward the higher education of Negroes at Morehouse College and Atlanta University but the courageous Governor dares not attack so powerful a family as the Rockefellers.

It is through the demogoguery of men like Governor Talmadge that such organizations of intolerance and hate as the Ku Klux Klan are kept alive. Whenever the German propaganda bureau gets around to it, they can show up the hypocrisy of the United States claim to being a democratic nation by just such incidents as that which happened in Georgia last week.

"Weep for Georgia"

Governor Talmadge, making a July 4th speech at Birmingham, Ala., said, among other things, that there are several newspapers in Georgia which "ought to be in hell."

Presumably he was referring to papers which do not always agree with his own policies or actions, among which The Constitution is one.

More important, however, in the light of subsequent events was Governor Talmadge's statement: "Here in Alabama you have newspapers that tell the truth."

Since the Governor voluntarily has announced that Alabama newspapers tell the truth the people of Georgia may be interested in the following editorial from the distinguished Montgomery Advertiser, of Montgomery, Ala., written the day after the Governor's speech in which he endorsed as truth statements by the newspapers of Alabama:

A NEIGHBOR'S TRAGEDY.

One sure earmark of the demagogue is an itch to meddle with institutions of higher learning. Another is a tendency to arouse ignoramuses against professors.

There is a type of hard-bitten, bigoted southerner who is suspicious of learning, of scientific research, and of colleges in general. The demagogue delights in arousing this fellow, creating a lot of excitement, and thus distracting public attention from other issues—including the shortcomings of the demagogue.

Eugene Talmadge is playing this game.

The Georgia governor has been trying to put on a show at the expense of the State University System—and there are indications that patronage is at the bottom of his effort.

It seems that an embittered former teacher at the University of Georgia charged that the dean of the school of education there, Dr. Walter D. Cocking, had advocated the establishment of a school in which both Negroes and whites would be enrolled. Despite hearings and an investigation there has been no other evidence to support the charge.

But it was all that Talmadge was looking for. Now this blatherskite is starting a drive to run all of the "foreign" professors (those who are natives of any state other than Georgia) out of state colleges.

To the ignorant Georgian it is hot stuff to say, "We have enough competent, educated Christian young teachers in Georgia without jobs, who cannot get a place in a college in another university system. I will take this into consideration."

"I ain't saying what I'm going to do," says this great Georgian. "I'm going to look them over and those who have been bragging about the big salaries they could get elsewhere, I'm going to help them get those bigger salaries."

And of course it's easy to get an audience by dragging in the race issue. And it's convenient, too, since that issue beclouds all others. "I'm not going to put up with social equality in this state as long as I'm governor," Talmadge says boldly. "They can't slip through no crack and they cain't crop up in no funds coming to this state. We don't need no Negroes and white people taught together."

A few years ago "The Man" Bilbo set out on a crusade to put his own peanut-headed followers in every position of responsibility in Mississippi's colleges. It took a decade to rebuild what had been torn down.

Great teachers are rare. Whether they come from the south, the east, the north, or the west does not make a great deal of difference. The search for truth and the art of teaching know no geographical bounds. Unfortunately, teachers are not a match for demagogues. They are not willing to stoop to the wiles and tricks of appealing to ignorance and prejudice. Their appeal is to the intelligence, to the open mind, to the enlightened point of view. Perhaps they who did not respect learning, and realize to a degree at least that a people's only salvation is in a public school system based upon a constant search for truth.

Let her sister-southern states weep for Georgia! Let them all resolve that the day of the demagogues who afflict our region from time to time will be ended shortly!

The Call For Unity and Action

We are gratified at the instantaneous reaction on the part of race leaders to the threat to democracy as revealed during the recent "trials" and subsequent ousting of Dean Cocking and other members of the University System of Georgia.

Before and during the "trials", Governor Talmadge did everything possible to stir up racial prejudice by unwarranted attacks on Negroes. At one point during the last hearing the Governor is quoted in the white press as ordering his prosecutor to "Tell 'em about the 'niggers' from Tuskegee visiting here in Georgia at Statesboro".

One of the local white papers referred to the spectacle Monday as a "Lynching at the Capitol". A lynching it was. But this time the Negro had democracy with him.

There is a close parallel between the steps the Governor has taken and those of Hitler. First, Hitler inflamed the Germans against the Jews; Governor Talmadge is inflaming the white people against Negroes. Second, Hitler got control of the colleges so he could have taught only what he thought should be known; Governor Talmadge has gotten control over the Board of Regents of the University System by ousting members who disagreed with him. Also it was reported in the press during the campaign Governor Talmadge made for the Senate that he had read Hitler's book "Mein Kampf" nine times. A man does not read anything nine times just for fun. It is generally known that the present Governor admired the late Huey Long.

There is no doubt in our opinion as to the imminent threat of dictatorship in our state as far as Negroes are concerned. Therefore, we should begin now to help defend ourselves and democracy. There was a time when we let go unchallenged attacks on our race. But not so now, judging from the reaction to the Governor's recent offenses.

Rev. M. L. King in a letter published yesterday urged the registering of a protest by a representative group of race leaders. We concur in this idea and suggest that this committee be representative of Negroes over the state. Apparently to formulate some plan of action, a special citizens meeting is being called by Rev. King at the Ebenezer Baptist Church this afternoon at five o'clock.

President T. M. Alexander of the Atlanta Branch of the NAACP is calling a special meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the Butler St. YMCA for the purpose of getting the reaction of this organization toward the recent attack on the race by the Governor.

It is to be hoped that after these two meetings one committee representative of colored Atlanta will be formed and around this Atlanta committee will be built a state-wide group that will speak for the entire Negro population. This committee should make appropriate representation to Governor Talmadge.

Above all, let us get unity now. Let us forget for the time being all personal or religious jealousies. If we unite victory is ours! Democracy is on our side!

GOVERNOR TALMADGE, THE NEGROES AND THE JEWS

One of the latest outbursts of the spirit of Adolph Hitler in America is seen in the action on the part of Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia who is now persecuting teachers and professors in that state's educational system who are or have been the beneficiaries of the Rosenwald Fund or those who believe or who have expressed the belief of the equality of races. Mind you, the words, "equality of races" as have been expressed by some of the white educators in Georgia meant equality of opportunities in democracy for all groups regardless of race, creed or color.

The persecution of these educators has not reached its final climax in the state of Georgia, but Governor Talmadge, according to press reports, is on the war path and has caused to be removed from Georgia colleges Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia State Teachers' College. The evidence introduced by Governor Talmadge to show that these men were unfit to teach in the Georgia educational system, was that both of them had studied under a fellowship of the Julius Rosenwald Foundation, with reference to the founder as a "Jew in Chicago who believed in racial equality", and that Dr. Cocking was "probably the financial agent in the South for the Rosenwald Foundation."

The action on the part of Governor Talmadge in this instance shows two things. First, is his enmity for the Jews. It is our opinion that if Talmadge had his way he would issue an edict today or tomorrow against the Jews which would be more goring by far than any order that Adolph Hitler ever issued against the Jewish race in Germany. Second, it portrays ir. Governor Talmadge a haughty, ignorant conception of "the place" of the American Negro. It also shows that Eugene Talmadge is far below the intelligence of the average white men of the South who have reached the status of public office holder, especially the rank of governor. He has not developed to the point where he understands that the day of slavery is passed and that democracy in America today is riding a high horse and men like him and his ilk must necessarily stand aside as democracy rides on.

Because of his ignorance we hope he will go further with his persecution of the Negroes and the Jews. We would not be surprised if he sent out his emissaries to gather all of the books written on the advancement of Negroes wherever found in the state and bring them to the executive mansion in Atlanta and then burn them in the public square. We would not be surprised should he also, through the work of his emissaries, pass a law removing all of the professors, both white and black, from the schools of Georgia, who have written books on racial equality, or all of those who would admit under oath that they believed in racial equality. And that as a further exercise of his dictatorial powers he would have all of the Negroes and Jews in the state of Georgia disfranchised with the hope of perpetuating himself in office. What more could Hitler do?

We hope that in his mad scramble for place and power that he will undertake all of these things so that his public career will be shortlived.

NAME SUCCESSOR TO OUSTED DEAN IN GEORGIA PURGE

Act Before Contract of Educator Expires.

Atlanta, Ga., July 16 (AP).—Appointment of Dr. Edwin Pusey as acting dean of the college of education at the University of Georgia, succeeding Dr. Walter D. Cocking, was announced here today.

Chairman Sandy Beaver of the board of regents, in making the announcement, said that Dr. Pusey had been associated with the university for 15 years and that his appointment became effective immediately.

Contract Still in Force.

Asked whether this meant that Dr. Cocking, whom the regents voted not to reëmploy after a public hearing on charges by Gov. Eugene Talmadge that he favored racial equality, was no longer with the university, Beaver said: "He can do as he likes, but Pusey begins his duties immediately." Cocking's present contract runs until Aug. 31.

Beaver said Pusey is a native of Maryland, was superintendent of schools at Durham, N. C., for seven years, and at present is professor of school administration in the college of education at the state university, which is at Athens.

The selection of the successor to Cocking was made by Beaver, Gov. Talmadge, and Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the university system.

Offers Jobs to Two.

Roy H. Gill, superintendent of Brooks county schools, wired Dean Cocking an offer of a position as supervisor of teachers in that county, and Dr. Marvin Pittman, deposed president of Georgia Teachers college at Statesboro, the superintendency of a high school.

"I think the situation which has developed in the board of regents in regard to these educators a bad augury for the case of higher education in the state," Gill said. "I also deplore the injection of the race problem. We have a number of Negroes in Brooks county, and I feel that our inter-racial problems are being solved satisfactorily and that this development is not helpful."

Atlanta Negroes Answer Talmadgeism

In a sane and intelligent manner, Negroes of Atlanta have answered race-baiting Governor Talmadge that they still have faith in democracy, have always had faith and performed dutifully in it and appealed to liberal-minded white people of the state to join in censoring the farce of American liberty now paying in our state.

Without the fanfare as attached to the recent Capitol show in which the very aspirations of the race were flaunted, the group has warned the majority that none can be free when some are slaves.

They have correctly expressed regret that the great benefactor Rosenwald and his humanitarian work have been "smeared" by those whose contribution to civilization will pass from the minds of men ten thousand years before the memory of Rosenwald has begun to die.

This is no time for the disunity sought by dictator methods such as are being used in Georgia, as the committee declared. Such practices as were exhibited in the state last week may be considered a type of fifth column activity.

It is to be hoped that more sane-thinking Georgians will join with well doing Negroes in making our state the exemplification of democracy, rather than the scourge of it.

Education In Georgia

A controversy has recently been raging in Georgia over the asserted statement of Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the college of education at the State University at Athens, that he advocated the creation "of a post-graduate teachers' school at which whites and Negroes would attend the same classes."

Governor Eugene Talmadge, upon hearing of the dean's statement, demanded his resignation, stating that so long as he was "governor of Georgia white and Negroes would not attend the same classes." The regents in a meeting, in which the dean is reported to have denied the statement, refused to dismiss him, and later three of the regents resigned, among them being Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

After the vacancies had been filled by the governor, the new board voted 10 to 5 to dismiss the dean, who, it is charged, has liberal notions regarding education, being closely identified with the Julius Rosenwald work in the state.

It might interest the governor of Georgia to know that a student of the University of North Carolina from the State of Georgia once expressed the view that so far as he was concerned Negroes and whites could attend the same classes and that there would be no feeling in the matter if all felt as he did.

White and Negro students from Georgia have attended classes together in other states, have become warm friends and have been mutually helpful to each other in the pursuance of their work. On several occasions in Atlanta in national church gatherings all discriminations have been removed, and we have not heard of anybody dying of heart failure as a result.

If Georgians as well as others in all other states could replace their prejudices with a little Christianity, or even a little of the milk of human kindness we would all be much better off.

Lynching at the Capitol

THERE was a lynching in the Hall of Representatives of the Capitol of Georgia Monday.

Neither wisdom, justice nor moderation was shown in the mock trial given to Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the University School of Education, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of Teachers College, at Statesboro. Both educators were dismissed by a vote of 10 to 5 of the Board of Regents on charges not previously made known to the victims and on evidence that would not be admitted in any court of justice in a civilized community anywhere.

Dean Cocking spoke mildly and with self-restraint when he said: "That such tactics could be employed in any country on earth is hard to believe. That they were employed in Georgia has all the earmarks of a terrific nightmare. I refuse to believe that the people of Georgia condone such tactics." And so do we.

Tried and acquitted by a vote of eight to seven, Dean Cocking's position and reputation were placed in jeopardy a second time within less than a month after three regents who had voted to vindicate him had been forced off the board and three new members named in their places. Tragic to relate, the vote in the second so-called trial was 10 to 5, the majority made up of the seven anti-Cocking members from the first hearing and the three new appointees. No doubt had the present Board of Regents voted to retain Dr. Cocking, the educator would have been cited again and confronted by still another jury. Having himself found Dr. Cocking guilty, the Governor's procedure was simple if not judicial. He picked new jurors. Such a travesty on trial by jury has seldom, if ever, been witnessed in this State.

Briefly, the evidence on which Dean Cocking was convicted was a book, "Brown America," written by Dr. Embree, of the Rosenwald Foundation, with which Dr. Cocking has no official connection; tracts published by the Commission on Interracial Relations, of which organization Dean Cocking is not a member, and the statement of one witness which was contrary to the evidence of some 30 others present at a faculty meeting.

"If Dean Cocking holds such views on racial education as has been charged here, he ought to go," said President Harmon W. Caldwell, "but I do not believe he does. I have therefore recommended that he be re-employed as dean of the School of Education of the University of Georgia."

Thus spoke the Southern born president of a Southern university. We believe he spoke for the faculty, students and patrons of the university and for the enlightened people of Georgia. We know he spoke the sentiments of this newspaper.

Disregarding President Caldwell's recommendation and the overwhelming endorsements of his colleagues and of educators from near and far, and in the face of Dean Cocking's own emphatic declaration that the charges were "completely false," the Regents brought in their shameful 10-to-5 verdict.

Dr. Pittman's trial was equally ruthless. Having completely answered the charge that he had personally benefited by sale of products from his farm, or work done thereon, Dr. Pittman was confronted with a copy of a book, entitled "Calling America," lifted from the thousands of books in the college library, a book adopted in 1938 by the Textbook Commission of the University System. Dr. Pittman asserted that he had never seen the book, was not aware that it was in the library and that it was not used as a textbook in the Teachers College. The verdict was the same, 10 to 5.

Those who voted to oust Dean Cocking and later to remove President Pittman were:

Governor Talmadge, John Cummings, Seminole County farmer; L. W. (Chip) Robert, Atlanta contractor; K. S. Varn, Waresboro naval stores operator; Mrs. Susie T. Moore, Tifton capitalist; James S. Peters, Manchester banker; Scott Candler, DeKalb County commissioner; Judge Joe Ben Jackson, of Gray, Superior Court jurist; Julian Strickland, Valdosta cotton mill operator; Dr. Joe Jenkins, Hartwell physician.

Those who voted to re-elect Dean Cocking and President Pittman were:

Chairman Sandy Beaver, who voted to vindicate Dean Cocking at the first hearing, presided and did not vote, as his vote could not have changed the result.

The trials are over, the two educators have been dismissed; but one moment, please. Regent L. W. Robert Jr. has the floor. He takes a two-page typewritten resolution from his pocket. It appears to be the formal verdict in both cases. Regent Robert seems to have accurately anticipated the verdicts. The resolution is adopted. The vote is 10 to 5. We quote the preamble: "In view of the fact that there have been a great many exaggerated statements and misstatements made and appearing recently tending to infer that the Honorable Eugene Talmadge, Governor of the State of Georgia, is trying to inject politics into the University System, the following resolution is offered, etc."

Thus is Governor Talmadge acquitted of playing politics with the University System in the same resolution that carries out his demand for the dismissal of the two educators. He is not only acquitted, he is thanked as regent and as governor "for the valuable assistance he has rendered to his Alma Mater and the University System of Georgia, and to the people generally, and to the generations to follow, etc."

By a vote of 10 to 5 this humiliating chapter in Georgia history was written. Dean Cocking and Dr. Pittman have been denied the right to a fair trial and deprived of their jobs without due process of law or common decency. But the injury to them as individuals will be righted long before the State of Georgia recovers from the damage it has suffered in "the decent opinion of mankind."

Such a World

What Is 'Social Equality' and Who Ever Had It?

* * *

'Brown America' Is Damnable Idea

Fill Up Country With Mulattoes

God Manifests His Opposition In Many Ways

By W. T. Anderson

WE HAVE HAD a "right smart" talk recently about social equality. Just what social equality is or what it means, I have never been able to understand. I don't believe there is any such thing. By implication it means, presumably, that one person shall be forced to associate with another, whether it is agreeable to both parties or not. And just how and just who is going to bring that about? I have seen a great many people in my time with whom I would like to associate, but they didn't appear agreeable, so I dropped the matter. I never thought about taking it to court or any other place.

IF WE ARE DISCUSSING or advocating the indiscriminate intermingling of the Caucasian and Negro races, in churches, schools hotels, restaurants, etc., that is another matter. This intermingling may be a means of bringing about mixing of the blood in the races, through intermarriage, etc

If that is the plan of those who want "social equality," it is a damnable proposal, and our Creator is evidently as much against it as are the self-respecting white and colored people of the South. Groups of individuals in every species and every variety are bound together in racial pride and help, that races shall advance as races, because in that way they can make greatest progress, and so can the world. To mix races defeats Divinity's plan and purpose.

Apparently our Creator set up the law of the survival of the fittest as a means by which to make the world and everything in it build and progress—and whatever was slothful and lazy and indifferent didn't progress, and something else of divine origin got ahead and crowded out the least fit and indolent.

And by reason of the fact that every one of the species—vegetable and animal—keeps itself aloof and apart from all other varieties, does not interbreed of its own volition, is proof in plenty that it was the Divine intent. Go into the wilds, and observe the thousands of different kinds of vegetation and animal and bird life to be found there, and each one true to his own markings and peculiarities through one generation after another. In animal life God fixed it through the sex nerve so species and varieties would remain true to their kind beyond the thousandth generation.

I HAVE NEVER SEEN a Negro in the South who manifested any desire to mix up with white people in his association. In fact, the most uncomfortable Negro to be found is one who is thrown with white people and cannot get away from them. The Negro wants to be with his own kind. For 20 years I have had an attractive 2-room apartment back of my home, built for servants, with bath, electric lights, heat, constant hot water, etc., rent free—and not in that entire time have I ever had application or suggestion from our servants as to occupying it. They have walked two to three miles to Negro sections, to get to their homes for which they pay rent.

Practically all the Negroes who want "social equality" or intermarriage have gone North. It is up there they meet a few of John Brown's descendants who fill them up with all the stuff about "social equality," and it is these John Browns who have raised money and organized all kinds of associations to invade the South and upset the apple-cart by proposing that Southern white people get on the same plane as these long-haired, hook-nosed meddlers and reformers who have raised hell all over the world, wherever their blood is found. If mixing and mingling of the races in the South is such a desirable thing, according to Dr. Embree, in his "Brown America," why the segregated Harlems in New York, Detroit, Chicago and other places with large Negro populations?

THE SOUTHERN Negro's attitude in relation to associating with the white man and what the Negro thinks of such white people, is aptly portrayed in the old story of a white couple from Boston who came down South right after the Civil war. They found an old Negro woman out in the country sitting in front of her cabin—or her old Marster's cabin—smoking her pipe as contentedly as though "freedom had not been give out."

"Mrs. Johnson," said the Bostonite, "we came down to meet you and see how you were getting along. We want you to come up to Boston and visit us. We will furnish expense money."

Details were arranged, and Aunt Mary took off for Boston. She was given the company bedroom in the white folks mansion, given a seat at the white folks' table, taken for carriage rides, introduced at teas given in her honor . . . One fine morning after Mrs. Johnson was seated at the breakfast table, the host wanted to ascertain how he was getting along in giving Mrs. Johnson a glimpse of the new life.

"Well, Mrs. Johnson," he said, "how do you like the treatment the white people are giving you in Boston? Down South they never showed you such nice attention, did they—giving you the company bedroom, carriage rides, teas, and having you at the dinner table with the family? You never saw anything like this down South, did you?"

"Naw, sir," said Aunt Mary. "My ole marster was a gentleman. He never let no Negro sleep in his house or set down to his table."

THERE ARE VERY FEW Southern white people but who want the Negro to progress as a race, to become self-sustaining, and will help him in every way possible, within his sphere. Southern white people long ago recognized the fact that whatever the Negro lacked of making a living for himself, the white man had to supply it. So it is an economic necessity as well as a human urge of the white people that the Negro be given his chance, be educated and trained in arts and crafts, in the ways of citizenship and democracy. The Negro has made great progress under this plan, and gradually and as rapidly as it could be done the hatred and villainy that was planted in the two races against each other by the scalawag and carpet-bagger and camp-follower that came with and behind the Federal army into this sorely stricken section has been eliminated.

DR. EDWIN R. EMBREE, president of the Rosenwald Fund, Chicago, wrote a book called "Brown America." In the very title of that book the suggestion is apparent that this section shall be changed into mulatto people, hybrids, through intermarriage and promiscuous mixing, association. And God Almighty is against that as much as are the Southern white people and the Southern Negro. God stops it by deterioration of the mixed kind—they are less hardy, are more vulnerable to disease, reproduce to a less degree, and in many instances reproduction is stopped entirely—the mule, for instance.

IT IS EXTREMELY unfortunate that the Negro has to be brought into the white man's squabbles. The intelligent Southern Negro does his best to keep out of all kinds of disputes between the white people, and to make progress by adapting himself to his environment, by philosophically accepting things that are and make the most of them, that he may achieve most toward his goal, which nobody understands and strives for more than he.

He knows Rome wasn't built in a day, and he has seen through many hundreds of years that the Negro has accomplished more with his plan or practice than any other race on earth in a similar period of time.

If he could receive the largesse and bounty of Northern philanthropists who undoubtedly have good intentions but little comprehension of the task, and the Negro be allowed to proceed in his own way, everything would come out all right in its own good time—the Negro of and for his kind and the white of and for his kind, each co-operating understandingly and sympathetically in his own sphere as a race, and not mixing up as individuals.

But Dr. Embree and others of his mind are like the elephant that insisted on co-operating with the hen in hatching her eggs. While the hen was away getting food, the elephant sat down on her nest to keep the eggs warm for her, with the easily-imagined result.

The Negro had rather have kindness and justice than all the social equality this side of kingdom come.

WAY DOWN IN "GEORGY," THE LAND OF COTTON, CORN AND MULATTOES!

They Believed, "Democracy Was For All Races and Creeds"!

New York — Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia is "guilty of lynching academic freedom in Georgia" by his ouster of a university dean and a state college president, Herbert Agar declared today in a telegram to Talmadge, speaking for the executive committee of Fight for Freedom, Inc.

In a separate telegram to L. W. (Chip) Robert, of the Georgia Board of Regents, Agar said, 'Fight for Freedom, Inc., is ashamed of you, a former Assistant Secretary of the U. S. Treasury and former secretary of the Democratic National Committee should have been a leader in the disgraceful campaign to oust TWO OF GEORGIA'S LEADING EDUCATORS, DR. MARVIN S. PITTMAN, PRESIDENT OF GEORGIA STATE TEACHERS' COLLEGE, AND DR. WALTER COCKING, dean of the school of education at the University of Georgia. We can discover no evidence that their records have been anything but laudable," Agar stated.

At the same time, Agar informed Cocking and Pittman that they have the "full support of Fight for Freedom, Inc., in your fight against intolerance and bigotry in Georgia."

"Fight for Freedom believes the survival of democracy is predicated on the military defeat of Hitler," Agar added, "BUT WE ALSO FEEL THAT YOUR OUSTER BECAUSE YOU BELIEVED DEMOCRACY WAS FOR ALL RACES AND CREEDS IS A BLOW TO FREEDOM IN OUR OWN COUNTRY."

Agar told Talmadge and Robert that "Hitler might well be proud that his principles have won a battle in America without the firing of one shot or the dispatch of one division. The Axis agents who were sent home today on the West Point could not have done better.

The Four Freedoms which President Roosevelt has outlined cannot survive unless Hitler is defeated. But they cannot survive in our own country if persons who prate about American principles practice the methods of Hitlerism here." —Fight For Freedom, Inc.

Denounce Georgia Govenor for Stand of Negro Issue

Atlanta, Ga. — Adopting Fascist methods, Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, wielded an axe over democratic principles Monday by ousting two of the State's leading educators from the Board of Regents because they dared to speak in favor of racial equality.

The two educators were Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the State Teachers' College, who is "guilty" of allowing Negro students from Tuskegee to eat sandwiches on the campus of his institution; and Dr. Walter Cocking, dean of the College of Education at the University of Georgia, who has been vitally interested in the Rosenwald Foundation and higher education for Negroes.

When Gov. Talmadge asked the State Board of Regents, a week ago, to remove the two educators, he was refused by a vote of 8-7. But the Gov. would not be stopped. He removed three members of the board and added three new ones. Monday, the board voted to oust Cocking and Pittman by a vote of 10-5.

One member of the board stated that "any unintelligent white man, if he is white, is better than the best educated nigger on earth," while Gov. Talmadge, himself, in a newspaper which he publishes said "I hope the children of the future will be able to sit down without finding a nigger beside them."—Amsterdam Star News.

Permit me to sa in reply that I am proud to be a member of the 'American First Committee,' a committee many of whose members are publicly vilified because they dare to speak the truth and follow the 'isolationist' principles firrst suggested by Washington to his beloved country. I would suggest to you and the members of your committee a careful reading of the farewell address. I suspect our first President would meet the same treatment at the hands of some of our American Anglophile patriots, were he alive, as Lindbergh is receiving today.

"There are many other reasons why I could not subscribe to the principles of your committee.

ROOSEVELT'S PROMISE

Recalling President Roosevelt's promise that "our boys would not be sent out of our country to fight in foreign wars," the Rev. Mr. Littmann continued: "If the events of the past few weeks have shown anything, they have demonstrated again the wisdom of Washington's advice to keep ourselves completely free from all foreign entanglements, and that is the object to which the America First Committee has dedicated itself. We love our freedom. We can keep it if we will make ourselves strong. If thirteen weak colonies in 1776 could win their freedom in a hostile world, it is an insult to American manhood to say that we cannot maintain our heritage against Hitler, Stalin or anyone else without the aid of Engand, which upon many occasions was our mortal enemy and became our friend only when she needed us desperately."—Times-Star.

Georgia Pays for Its Prejudice

The action of the general education board in refusing further aid to Georgia's school system, follows close upon the dismissal of prominent educators for liberal views. It must be that the board thinks money the wrong medicine, the action of the governor and regents in dismissing the educators having proved how badly Georgia stands in need of education.

It is a sorry situation. Like floatsam assembles in a backwater, ignorance and illogical thinking grow where the corrective of education is lacking. Georgia, by objecting to teachers who say that Negroes should be given equal education, is now to lose money which went to educate whites.

The governor's action does not make sense. One of the best proven facts about community life is the mutuality of it. Everyone is helped or hurt by his fellow. An educated Negro in Georgia is to the advantage of his white neighbor.

The incident has served to bring out the fact that Governor Talmadge is not typical of Georgia in his effort to keep blacks, Georgia suffers lowering of that for whites, so that a sort of equality will prevail after all. Booker Washington never spoke a greater truth than when he said that for one man to keep another down, he must get down in the gutter too.

ROOSEVELT'S PROMISE

Recalling President Roosevelt's promise that "our boys would not be sent out of our country to fight in foreign wars," the Rev. Mr. Littmann continued: "If the events of the past few weeks have shown anything, they have demonstrated again the wisdom of Washington's advice to keep ourselves completely free from all foreign entanglements, and that is the object to which the America First Committee has dedicated itself. We love our freedom. We can keep it if we will make ourselves strong. If thirteen weak colonies in 1776 could win their freedom in a hostile world, it is an insult to American manhood to say that we cannot maintain our heritage against Hitler, Stalin or anyone else without the aid of Engand, which upon many occasions was our mortal enemy and became our friend only when she needed us desperately."—Times-Star.

Georgia Pays for Its Prejudice

The action of the general education board in refusing further aid to Georgia's school system, follows close upon the dismissal of prominent educators for liberal views. It must be that the board thinks money the wrong medicine, the action of the governor and regents in dismissing the educators having proved how badly Georgia stands in need of education.

It is a sorry situation. Like floatsam assembles in a backwater, ignorance and illogical thinking grow where the corrective of education is lacking. Georgia, by objecting to teachers who say that Negroes should be given equal education, is now to lose money which went to educate whites.

The governor's action does not make sense. One of the best proven facts about community life is the mutuality of it. Everyone is helped or hurt by his fellow. An educated Negro in Georgia is to the advantage of his white neighbor.

The incident has served to bring out the fact that Governor Talmadge is not typical of Georgia in his opposition to keep Objecting to equal schooling for blacks, Georgia suffers lowering of that the old animosities alive. for whites, so that a sort of equality will The two leading papers of his state have prevail after all. Booker Washington been sharp never spoke a greater truth than when in rebuking him, so sharp that he said that for one man to keep another down, he must get down in the gutter too.

Caught With the Goods?

Public-spirited efforts to eradicate alien influences from the educational system of Georgia always meet in certain quarters, the holier-than-thou charge of "intolerance," but the peevish action of the General Education Board in withdrawing its subsidies from the University of Georgia would indicate the climax of intolerance.

It has been well pointed out that there are hundreds of employes in the university system of Georgia and that the board of regents is under no more obligation to give a reason for not employing one any more than another. It was clearly within the right of the regents to refuse new contracts in any given instance for any reason or no reason at all.

At all events, it is absolutely certain that the people of Georgia are fully capable of managing their own educational affairs without dictation from any man or group of men outside the state.

Se we well may ask if the attitude of the General Education Board in refusing to continue the allocation of funds to the University of Georgia is not an open confession of its claim that it has the right to dictate to Georgia how it shall conduct its educational affairs and perhaps has been doing it.

And if that be true, is it not time to make it plain that the ideals and traditions of this state are not for sale?

If the few scattered dollars distributed over Georgia by the Rosenwald Fund can become the means of arousing bitterness and dissension in our educational affairs and if honest efforts to preserve the integrity of our schools and colleges are to be challenged and the state punished by the arbitrary dispensers of the bounties, we may ask if the time has not come to divorce ourselves completely from this unwholesome domination.

We can hardly believe that the General Education Board is fully aware of the main purpose entertained by the real friends of education in Georgia. Whatever may be the errors in detail, this main purpose is to drive from our public schools and institutions of higher learning those agencies and influences which already have crept in so insidiously that many honest and fair-minded men and women can hardly believe they exist.

That they have existed is shown to the hilt by the approval for many years of the Rugg text books on social science, the nature of which was not realized for years.

Does the General Education Board choose to align itself in opposition to this clarifying movement?

If such be the case we would like to know it in plain terms.

The fact of the matter is that the General Education Board, which was born in the South, nurtured in the South and fostered in its formative years by such splendid characters as the late J. L. M. Curry, of Georgia, the noblest Roman of them all in the fight to carry educational and economic uplift to the underprivileged of this section has suffered a loss of prestige. We can hardly imagine the late Edwin A. Alderman becoming a party to any such intolerance as the board is exhibiting by its attempt to hold a big stick over Georgia's educational institutions.

In passing, it is to be noted that one of the purposes for which the board's subsidy was used at Athens was in the study of plant diseases and their eradication.

Now, in the name of the great hornspoon, do not the taxpayers of this country contribute enough billions to the department of agriculture at Washington to finance the study of plant diseases without having to rely on the General Education Board or any other board?

The federal government may expect us to "vote right" when it hands out the money of the taxpayers and pretends it is doing us a favor, but at least, thus far, it does not claim the right to tells us what professors we shall hire and what they shall teach.

It is not the people of Georgia nor the board of regents of the university system now on trial, but the "boards" and "foundations" which, more clearly than ever, have admitted that their subsidies carry with them the demand that they shall exercise the right of shaping the public policy and the educational future of this state.

Better Times in Georgia

Signs of the times in Georgia presage a new and better day for the Negro . . . as America moves ahead. Last week Governor Eugene E. Talmadge sounded off with a venomous tirade on the race question after he had forced the ouster of the University of Georgia's Dean of Education, who advocated the establishment of schools in the South in which Negro and white students could study side by side.

Reaction from the press of the state, was decidedly unfavorable to the Governor; that of the nation almost solidly opposed to his action as being un-Democratic, un-American and fraught with danger to the principles upon which this country was founded.

It is too much to hope that within any relatively short period of time, Georgia or any other Southern State is going to abandon its Jim Crow institutions and accept the Negro as an equal in things social, economic or political. But one thing is certain: The philosophy of Thomas Watson, Hoke Smith, and Eugene Talmadge is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. From now on, judging from the trend, white people and Negroes of the South are going to strive much harder to understand each other. They are pulling farther and farther away from the pre-Civil War psychology of master and slave with its theory of inherent superiority of one race over another.

Talmadge and his ilk, it seems, are on their way out. For it has been said "Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad."

In previous days the Negro-baiting antics of Talmadge would have caught the fancy of his constituents and the press of his community, and he would have been hailed as a great champion of the South's cause. Today his own people regard him as narrow-minded, stubborn and unfit for the high office he holds.

Georgia may be about ripe for a change, and it behooves all persons interested in spreading true Democracy throughout our nation to support movements in Congress to secure passing of the Anti-Poll Tax Bill, the Anti-Lynching Bill and the Federal Aid for Education Bill. These measures should receive ample support even in the South.

THAT GEORGIA GOVERNOR

No one who reads the charges that led to the dismissal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the University of Georgia school of education, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers' college, can fail to recoil with shame. It is incredible that so brazen a display of backwardness could take place even in the outer rims of an advancing civilization.

On the grounds that these two educators had advocated racial equality in the schools, Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia appeared in person to press the charges before the university system board of regents. The evidence was based on excerpts from the book, "Brown America," written some years ago by the president of the Julius Rosenwald fund—Dr. Edwin R. Embree of Chicago.

The passage in Dr. Embree's book that caused Governor Talmadge to foam at the mouth is:

"The South is coming to realize the cost of prejudice is great in maintenance of two schools, two libraries, two section waiting rooms, separate passenger cars, and white and colored nurses and county welfare agents."

This was read to the board of regents, majority of whom can neither read nor spell beyond the fifth grade level, as incontrovertible evidence that the two educators wanted to change the bi-racial system of the South through advocacy of racial equality and intermarriage. So extraneous an interpretation is too ludicrous for serious comments.

That Georgia, a poor state can ill afford a system of segregation that is draining more and more the meagre resources of the commonweath should be obvious even to a sub-normal, tobacco chewing politician. Georgia is yet medieval in its concept of social justice. It is high time that enlightenment and human decency have brought to this primitive stronghold of the reactionary south. There is however little hope that the light of modern civilization will dispel the pall of ignorance that hangs over this state so long as Governor Talmadge continues to have a hillbilly for Governor.

MR. TALMADGE'S SETBACK

Louisiana is a classic example of what happens when politicians meddle too much in State universities. Possibly Eugene Talmadge was too busy farming to read about the Louisiana scandal, for Governor Talmadge has just undergone a defeat in his attempt to have Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the school of education of the University of Georgia, discharged from his position.

The Board of Regents, by the narrow margin of 8 to 7, refused to remove Dean Cocking, who is a former Commissioner of Education of Tennessee.

Governor Talmadge will continue to seek the scalp of the dean. At the dedication of the LaFayette park Wednesday, the governor said: "Smoke boiled out of the capitol Monday, and, believe me, the smoke is not through boiling on that issue. The board heard an affidavit that this man favored a graduate school for both Negroes and whites to attend. While I am governor, there'll be no Negroes in the same schools with white folks in Georgia, and there'll be no men in our school system who advocate it."

If a governor has to meddle in state educational institutions one would think he would base his attack on definite action taken by the man he seeks to discharge, instead of demanding an educator's job merely on the strength of something somebody charges that educator said. However, the only evidence brought against Dean Cocking was contained in an affidavit by Mrs. Sylvia W. Hamilton, a former teacher in the Georgia schools and now a secretary at the State university.

Her affidavit, produced by the governor, accused Dr. Cocking of recommending at a March, 1939, faculty meeting erection near Athens of a training school for graduates of the education school. She testified that Dean Cocking suggested that pupils be "both black and white—in order to uplift the State of Georgia."

No other witness appeared against Dean Cocking, but others from the faculty, the student body, the graduate schools, the heads of other Georgia colleges, the superintendents of Georgia schools and some of the leading educators of the United States gave testimony of their confidence in Dean Cocking and in his outstanding ability as an educator.

Dean Cocking denied making the remark attributed to him, while others present likewise denied that he said it.

Governor Talmadge now threatens to cut the item for Dean Cocking's salary out of the budget, which he has power to approve or disapprove. Likewise, he asks the State auditor to furnish him a list of "all those foreign professors," and the governor remarks, "I ain't saying what I am going to do. I am going to look them over, and those who have been bragging about the big salaries they are offered elsewhere, I'm going to help them get those big salaries. * * * I never did think that these foreign professors were smarter than our own Georgians."

One can only hope that the next step will not be the burning of all books written by "foreigners."

Most of the members of the Board of Regents are Talmadge appointees, which makes their vote in this case all the more striking. The governor himself voted to oust Dean Cocking. Persons familiar with Georgia affairs will be interested in the roll-call of the Board of Regents, Chairman Sandy Beaver not voting; and it was as follows:

For Retaining Dr. Cocking—Clark Howell, Atlanta; George C. Woodruff, Columbus; Jack Lance, Young Harris; W. S. Morris, Augusta; Miller Bell, Milledgeville; Lucien P. Goodrich, Griffin; R. D. Harvey, Lindale, and E. Ormonde Hunter, Savannah.

Against—Governor Talmadge, John T. Cummings, Donalsonville; L. W. Robert, Jr., Atlanta; K. S. Varn, Waresboro; J. I. Jenkins, Hartwell; Julian Strickland, Valdosta, and Mrs. Susie T. Moore, Tifton.

On the same day the vote was announced, Herman Talmadge, son of the governor, was voted a fee of $50 for lobbying a bill through the Legislature for the Atlanta Police Board pension trustee, although State capitol records do not show that Herman paid the $250 fee which lobbyists are supposed to pay to the State.

Georgia, however, is reconciled to lobbyism, even by governors' sons. It is not reconciled to having its leaders in higher education punished by the State executive on the sort of evidence produced against Dean Cocking.

The Board of Regents did a good job of work in their vote on this case.

A NEIGHBOR'S TRAGEDY

One sure earmark of the demagogue is an itch to meddle with institutions of higher learning. Another is a tendency to arouse ignoramuses against professors.

There is a type of hard-bitten, bigoted Southerner who is suspicious of learning, of scientific research, and of colleges in general. The demagogue delights in arousing this fellow, creating a lot of excitement and thus distracting public attention from other issues — including the shortcomings of the demagogue.

Eugene Talmadge is playing this game.

The Georgia governor has been trying to put on a show at the expense of the State University System — and there are indications that patronage is at the bottom of his effort.

It seems that an embittered former teacher at the University of Georgia charged that the dean of the school of education there, Dr. Walter D. Cocking, had advocated the establishment of a school in which both Negroes and whites would be enrolled. Despite hearings and an investigation there has been no other evidence to support the charge.

But it was all that Talmadge was looking for. Now this blatherskite is starting a drive to run all of the "foreign" professors (those who are natives of any state other than Georgia) out of state colleges.

To the ignorant Georgian it is hot stuff to say, "We have enough competent, educated Christian young teachers in Georgia without jobs, who cannot get a place in a college in another university system. I will take this into consideration."

"I ain't saying what I'm going to do," says this great Georgian. "I'm going to look them over and those who have been bragging about the big salaries they could get elsewhere, I'm going to help them get those bigger salaries."

And of course it's easy to get an audience by dragging in the race issue. And it's convenient, too, since that issue beclouds all others. "I'm not going to put up with social equality in this state as long as I'm governor," Talmadge says boldly. "They can't slip through no crack and they cain't crop up in no funds coming to this state. We don't need no Negroes and white people taught together."

A few years ago "The Man" Bilbo set out on a crusade to put his own peanut-headed followers in every position of responsibility in Mississippi's colleges. It took a decade to rebuild what had been torn down.

Great teachers are rare. Whether they come from the South, the East, the North, or the West does not make a great deal of difference. The search for truth and the art of teaching know no geographical bounds. Unfortunately, teachers are not a match for demagogues. They are not willing to stoop to the wiles and tricks of appealing to ignorance and prejudice. Their appeal is to the intelligence, to the open mind, to the enlightened point of view. Perhaps they should be made of tougher stuff, but they are not.

Alabama is not perfect. It has had good governors and bad, but it has been this state's great good fortune not to have been saddled with an ignorant governor. Nor has it had one who did not respect learning, and realize to a degree at least that a people's only salvation is in a public school system based upon a constant search for truth.

Let her sister-Southern states weep for Georgia! Let them all resolve that the day of the demagogues who afflict our region from time to time will be ended shortly!

FREE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

(From The Brunswick News.)

The board of regents of the University System, in refusing to carry out a gubernatorial whim to remove Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia's School of Education, has performed a distinct service to the people of this state. It is regrettable, however, that the vote by which the services of dean Cocking were retained was favorable by only one ballot.

Dean Cocking has a long and distinguished career of educational service in Georgia and it would have been regrettable to see the state lose his talents. More regrettable than that, however, would have been to have allowed the educational system of this state to sink deeper into the mire of politics.

The effort to oust Dean Cocking points up a very serious question which should arouse all Georgians. This is particularly so when one considers the dictatorial manner in which the Governor jammed David "Red" Barron, the former football player, down the throats of Georgia Tech students over their vigorous protests.

The rightful wrath which Georgians should feel is well summed up by the Bartow Herald, which declares:

"There is no justification, in any government of the people—a democracy, for the muzzling of its schools and what they teach. There can be no justification for the firing of the head of a state institution, or any of its faculty, simply because such head or member of its faculty voted against the current administration in power. If what is to be taught in our schools is to be dictated by political factions or political interests, then this is no longer a democracy."

Talmadge Wrought Up Dean Walter W. Cocking Over Failure to Oust

Says 'While I Am Governor There Will Be No Negroes in the Same Schools With Whites, and No Teachers Advocating It'

ATLANTA. — (ANP) — Defeated in his efforts to remove Dr. Walter W. Cocking from dean of the school of education at the University of Georgia, wrathful Gov. Eugene Talmadge has resorted to high handed budgetry power to purge liberal educator from the payroll.

Writing in his own political paper, Gov. Talmadge has requested an investigation of "all foreign professors," (meaning non-Georgians) and an investigation of all salaries. The American Legion meantime, undertook to investigate books with a view of throwing out all with "communistic teachings."

"While I am governor," the state executive said vengefully, "there will be no Negroes in the same schools with white folks in Georgia, and there will be no men in our school system advocating it."

"I never did think these foreign professors were smarter than our own professors," the governor remarked scornfully.

The governor said the charges were made on affidavits sworn to by Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, former teacher at the university, which quoted the dean as recommending a school near Athens, Ga., for Negroes and white where graduates of the education college could do required practice teachings.

When it was called to the governor's attention that his action might lead to loss of Rosenwald funds he said resentfully, "Georgia is not to be bought by any donation that has the atmosphere of social equality and the mixture of white and blacks in our school."

Asst. Atty. Al Henderson of the Georgia Labor department and a leader in the American Legion, indicated that Georgia would likely have another textbook purge. Two social science textbooks, "Calling America" and "Modern America," are under fire.

Charging that Columbia university of New York was seeking to dominate their school, Henderson said "in almost every instance they require that we accept a 'professor of race relations' of their choosing and he comes down and drills in Georgia boys and girls the idea that they should associate with Negroes."

Continuing he said, "one female college, as grand finale to a year's lecture on race relations, sent its entire class of girls over to Tuskegee Institute, where they lived on the campus for a couple of days with these Negroes and attended their parties and mingled with them socially."

Appealing to traditions, Mr. Henderson said: "we must lok to our loyal men and women in the teaching profession to preserve Americanism as our fathers knew it and our school officials."

The torch of race prejudice set off by third-term Gov. Talmadge swept the state as various political leaders picked up the cry and whooper anti-Negro bitterness reminded of Hitler's attacks on the Jews.

CLARK HOWELL RESIGNS.

(From The Moultrie Observer.)

Clark Howell, of The Atlanta Constitution, has resigned from the Board of Regents of the University System. He had been asked to resign by the Governor; he and three others who had opposed the efforts of Governor Talmadge to remove a valuable member of the faculty of the university. They were friends of the Governor, but they acted for the best interests of the state university. For doing their conscientious duty they were asked to resign.

Other members of the board have refused to resign, but Mr. Howell, because of a promise he had made the Governor earlier in the year that his resignation would be offered any time the Governor asked for it, felt bound by honor to quit. It is another sample of the impossible government we have in Georgia.

The Howells, through three generations, have been friends and backers of the university. Mr. Howell has shown the same loyalty to the university that his father displayed on every occasion. It is the best friends of the institution and the ablest friends that the Governor seeks to weed out in order that he may have a free hand in personally running the university. What can we expect of a university system that is made a football for factional politics and dragged down to the level of the Highway Department? Surely the Governor has better judgment than that. He acts as if he were actuated by something worse than poor judgment or even poor politics.

Beneath the Surface

By Dewey H. Wollstein

The Ghost of racial equality returns. It is a dramatic situation forced upon the people of Georgia. National Defense, America's future, everything that is timely and important, must be pushed aside while the game of politics is played in Georgia.

Now we will hear the stock stories with their worn out theme: "I have a great respect for the Negro race but———". You have heard it time and again with certain variations.

The Negro in Georgia is not the problem. Georgia politics is the problem.

If courage is needed, let us be unpopular but honest. If a choice is necessary, let us be branded names rather than be bandits in a scape-goat hunt.

Do we lose our self-respect when we say that the Negro is a human being created by God? Is there some special form of Christianity that we send out to Negroes in foreign countries, and at the same time teach a stingy Christianity in our own country?

The negro of Georgia does not ask for social equality. He humbly asks for God-given rights.

Beneath the surface of a politically planned situation there is an Issue.

Opinion On Talmadge

It's a pretty good idea for politicians to leave educational systems alone. More often than not, when they endeavor to manipulate universities and other state institutions to serve political ends, they get burnt. Gov. Talmadge has already blistered his fingers on a hot issue concerning the University of Georgia, and since he is apparently determined not to leave it alone, he stands to lose larger areas of his hide, tough as it is. At least we hope so.

The issue concerns Dean Walter D. Cocking of the school of education at Athens, whose head Gov. Talmadge has determined to get. Dean Cocking was reported as saying that Negro students should be admitted to the university's graduate school. Dean Cocking denies that he made such a statement, but this issue has too great a demagogic appeal for Gov. Talmadge to neglect pressing it to the ultimate degree.

He first requested the Board of Regents, which is charged with the guidance of the Georgia university system, to discharge Dean Cocking. By a close vote the Board of Regents declined. Seizing upon a legal technicality, which was ferreted out for him by a subordinate of the state attorney general, he has demanded the resignation of three regents, including the chairman and vice chairman of the board. They have not complied and Attorney General Arnold has blasted the validity of his subordinate's ruling, maintaining that the governor has no legal grounds upon which to request the resignations of the regents.

The governor, in turn, flouts the opinion of the attorney general, saying "I interpreted the law for myself. That was a Talmadge opinion on which I acted." Here the governor certainly appears to be saying that he himself is the law.

By other means, just as questionable, he has succeeded in securing the resignation of two other regents. One of these is Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution. A Talmadge appointee to the board, Mr. Howell promised the governor upon assuming the post that he would resign should the governor ever request it. So now that Mr. Howell opposes the governor's attempted interference with academic freedom, Mr. Talmadge asks him to get out.

In resigning, Mr. Howell expresses his profound regret "that a promise not well considered at the time forces me to retire from a fight which so deeply involves the welfare of my state." Although we are comfortably separated from this ugly row by the state line, we nevertheless view Gov. Talmadge's high-handed conduct with the gravest apprehension. The mantle of Huey P. Long looks better packed in its moth-balls than it does draped on the narrow shoulders of Gene Talmadge.

ON TEACHING IN GEORGIA.

Hammond, Ind., July 17.—THE TRIBUNE editorial, "Georgia in Chains," struck a high note. How the governor of a great state should mix politics of the vilest sort with its fine educational system is hard to understand. Dr. Walter D. Cocking and three other distinguished educators were deliberately let out of the state's highest educational teaching force for no other reason than that they advocated better school advantages for colored people.

Your editorial will stiffen the backbone of other educators who believe in justice to all the people, regardless of race. It will hearten those who would speak out for the underdog, but are fearful lest they lose their livelihood.

Georgia Press Blasts Talmadge For Race "Foreigners" Stand

ATLANTA.—(ANP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge was r buked indirectly editorially by the Atlanta Constitutic Sunday, and openly by Executive Editor Ralph McGill his column, "One Word More," for "attacks upon the ur ty of the nation" by arousing "sectional and racial prej dice" growing out of his devious, but yet unsuccessful efforts to remove liberal Dean Walter Cocking fr[illegible] the University of Georgia.

When his effort to eliminate the dean failed at a meeting of the board of regents that voted 8 to 7 to retain Dr. Cockling, the governor opened a vicious attack on "foreigners" (non-Georgians) employed in the state and asked for the resignation of three of the members of the board voting to keep the dean. Chairman Sandy Beavers, Ormonde Hunter and Miller R. Bell of the board were asked to discontinue their services on the grounds that their appointment was illegal. The governor said that when he made the appointment, they being the last, he was ignorant of the fact that not more than seven of the 15 regents could be from the same college and that he found that that the University of Georgia, from which they were, had ten.

The governor, who like Huey Long, owns his own newspaper, printed bitter attack in it on "foreigners," "mixing Negroes whites," and his power to use the budget to gain his ends of purging the university. Others in his administration, the attorney general, revived the "book issue" charging that some "social sciences showed Communistic teachings."

Warned the Constitution: "He who arouses sectional and racial prejudices is playing directly into the hands of Adolph Hitler and his henchman, Goebbels, who have predicated their campaign against the United States upon creating interal discord and dissention inside this country."

The Constitution blamed, "Some ill-advised persons have attempted dubbing citizens of other states to re-waken sectional prejudice by than their own as 'foreigners'."

It reprovingly observed, "The tragic pity of appeals to racial or sectional prejudices is that they do win political support and approval from so many."

The Constitution recognized, "We are all American, Jews and Gentiles, white and Negroes; Baptist and Catholics. There is a job for every one to do if the menace of the axis is to be broken. Let us get on with these jobs, each in his proper place, and show the world a democracy that is free yet united to the last man, whatever his race, his color or his place of birth."

Going to the heart of the motive for the attack, Ralph McGill said: "He who indicates he is going to base his (1942) campaign on white supremacy (Negroes in Georgia cannot vote in the 'white primary'), which is not at all challenged, and a 'nigger' appeal to ignorance and prejudice."

A bit embarrassingly, Mr. McGill, continues, "We have suddenly had forced upon us, from an entirely false beginning, the issue of 'white supremacy,' when there most emphatically is no such issue."

Scoffingly, says Mr. McGill, "It is ridiculous there will be a common campus and even more ridiculous to assume that the dean in a Georgia school would advocate such a thing even if he believed it. Commonsense ought to tell us that.

'The governor himself knows there is no 'white supremacy' issue. He has but recently completed a visit to at least two of the Negro colleges in the state system, praised them and their leaders."

"He knows that it is utterly ridiculous to assume that any plan is afoot to put students of both ra[illegible] on one campus."

The columnist reminded that Huey Long had made a similar mistake by taking over the state university and that most of the officials of that regime are now in prison.

Gene Talmadge Acting Up In Georgia

For the past several weeks, Gene Talmadge, he of the red suspenders, has been acting up in Georgia, with respect to the schools of higher learning; more particularly the Georgia School of Technology and the University of Georgia.

His first step was the attempt to appoint "Red" Barron, a former athlete at Tech, to the position of vice-president, which would place him in line to succeed the 74-year-old president, Dr. M. L. Brittain. It was brought out through the newspapers of the state that Barron left school before he completed his work on a degree, and it was several years later before he received it. He has been serving as president of an agricultural school in Georgia, and has never added any graduate work to his record. For him to succeed a scholarly man like Dr. Brittain was contrary to the ideas of the students of Tech and certainly to thousands of Georgians.

More recently he charged the dean of the University of Georgia with violating Southern traditions and advocating the establishment of a school in which both the Negroes and whites would be enrolled. A hearing was held before the Board of Regents and no evidence was produced to support this accusation. The regents voted to re-instate the dean.

On the heels of this, Governor Talmadge has "withdrawn" his nomination of three of the regents, two of whom have already been approved by the state legislature. His excuse for doing this is that the attorney-general has informed him that it is illegal for more than seven of the fifteen members to be alumni of the University. One of the three declares that he is not a graduate of the University. He is a graduate of a law school which is under the supervision of this institution, but not of the University itself.

It all promises to be another unpleasant incident which will give the state of Georgia a lot of unfavorable publicity. It is just such stunts as these which give people of other sections of the country the idea that the South is an ignorant area, characterized by such people as were portrayed in "Tobacco Road," and in Carl Carmer's book, "The Stars Fell on Alabama."

The race issue will always bring in plenty of attention, and will incite a lot of people who are hipped on the subjec tof preventing "equality of Negroes and whites."

Talmadge wasn't satisfied with his efforts to tear up the University, and other institutions of that state, he comes along and states that he expects to start a drive to run all "foreign" professors (those who are not natives of Georgia) out of Georgia institutions of higher learning.

Just suppose that every state in the Union fostered the idea of eliminating every college teacher who was not a native of the state in which he happened to be teaching. This would indeed become a narrow-minded, provincial section. In fact every state in the Union would probably produce a crop of just such men at Eugene Talmadge, so narrow between the eyes that he can't see beyond his nose. So selfish that he can't support anything which does not give him personal benefit. So steeped in his own ignorance that he would place all others in his class.

While we are sympathetic toward our neighbor state for the predicament in which she finds herself, we must say that the people of that state have no one but themselves to blame—they put Gene Talmadge in the driver's seat. Intelligent, patriotic (?) citizens of Georgia last Summer were tearing their shirts for him and predicting what great things he would do for the state; how he would get them out of the hole financially and put the state on a sound economic basis.

Maybe money means more than anything else, but we doubt it. We believe that it means more for a state to have a broad vision which takes in all parts of the country, North, South, East and West; for the children of the land to benefit from the association with people from these sections; for citizens to have open minds and that the pursuit for knowledge should not be bounded by geographical lines.

Let Alabamians and others of this region resolve that no such leader shall ever be chosen who will hamper the intellectual and spiritual development such as Gene Talmadge is doing for Georgia.

Governor Starts War Against Educators Not Natives Of Southland

ATLANTA, (ANP)—Defeated in his efforts to remove Dr. Walter W. Cocking from dean of the school of education at the University of Georgia, wrathful Gov. Eugene Talmadge has resorted to high-handed budgetary power to purge the liberal educator from the payroll.

Writing in his own political paper, Gov. Talmadge has suggested an investigation of "all foreign professors" (meaning non-Georgians) and an investigation of all salaries. The American Legion meantime undertook to investigate books with a view of throwing out all with communistic teachings."

"While I am governor, the state executive said vengefully, "there will be no Negices in the same schools with white folks in Georgia, and there will be no men in our school system advocating it."

DERIDES NON-GEORGIANS

"I never did think these foreign professors were smarter than our own professors," the governor remarked scornfully.

The governor said the charges were made on affidavits sworn to by Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, former teacher at the university, which quoted the dean as recommending a school near Athens, Ga., for Negroes and white where graduates of the education college could do required practice teachings.

When it was called to the governor's attention that his actions might lead to loss of Rosenwald funds he said resentfully, "Georgia is not to be bought by any donation that has the atmosphere of social equality and the mixture of whites and blacks in our schools."

BOOKS UNDER FIRE

Assistant attorney Al Henderson of the Georgia Labor department and a leader in the American Legion, indicated that Georgia would likely have another textbook purge. Two social science textbooks, "Living America" and "Modern America," are under fire.

Charging that Columbia University of New York was seeking to dominate their school, Henderson said "in almost every instance they require that we accept a 'professor of race relations' of their choosing and he comes down and drills into Georgia boys and girls the idea that they should associate with Negroes."

RAPS "FEMALE COLLEGE"

Continuing, he said, "one female college, as grand finale to a year's lecture on race relations, sent its entire class of girls over to Tuskegee institute, where they lived on the campus for a couple of days with these Negroes and attended their parties and mingled with them socially.

Appealing to traditions, Mr. Henderson said, "We must look to our loyal men and women in the teaching profession to preserve Americanism as our fathers knew it.

The torch of race prejudice set off by third-term Gov. Talmadge swept the state and various political leaders picked up the cry and whooped anti-Negro bitterness remindful of Hitler's attacks on the Jews.

ANTI-SEMITISM ACTIONS SCORED

B'nai B'rith Officer Says Jews Ready To Offer Lives For Nation

(From Yesterday's Final Edition)

A wave of anti-Semitism is engulfing the country, and must be stemmed by an aroused Jewish and Gentile people if democracy is to be preserved, Sidney G. Kusworm, national treasurer of B'nai B'rith and chairman of the fraternal organization's National Americanism Commission, said at a dinner meeting of the B'nai B'rith Tuesday night at the Tutwiler Hotel.

The Dayton, Ohio, attorney, who has been a member of the B'nai B'rith executive committee 20 years, said that the American Jew must shake his lethargy to the world situation if the "keg of dynamite" on which he is sitting is not to explode.

Blaming much of the anti-Semetic feeling in this country on the speeches and writings of Congressman J. E. Rankin, of Mississippi, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, and the Rev. Charles Coughlin, Kusworm said that the Jew has been picked out as the "scapegoat of this war," and this in spite of the fact that the Jews are ready to give their lives if necessary to defend America.

Alertness Urged

"The Jews of America must wake up to the fact that they have a battle on their hands. Hitler is spending $35,000,000 in this country for anti-Semetic purposes, and $25,000,000 to support his gestapo here. The law-making body of the United States is the body which the Nazis want to get into in order to deprive the Jew of his liberties," Kusworm warned.

In discussing various fifth column activities in the United States, many of which he said were instigated by the "America First Committee," Kusworm exhibited "Appreciate America" posters issued by the government in an effort to combat these subversive forces, and said that this counter-movement had its beginning in the offices of the B'nai B'rith.

"The Ten Commandments are Jewish as well as Gentile rules of life," Kusworm pointed out. "We are lied about, punished, harassed, persecuted, and with it all, we rise to the occasion, put our shoulder to the wheel, and fight for this country which is ours."

Work Is Reviewed

In reviewing the work of the B'nai B'rith organization, Kusworm said that its 35 foundations and councillorships in universities and colleges throughout the country now reach 30,000 of the 100,000 Jewish students in the United States, and that more than $50,000 was raised last year for various philanthropic causes, local, national and overseas.

Kusworm is en route to Texas for the national convention of the Junior B'nai B'rith, the A. Z. A., of whose advisory council he is a member.

Honorary vice chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, a member of various hospital and welfare boards, and a prominent lecturer in Jewish circles, Kusworm was introduced by Sam A. Goldstein, chairman of the dinner committee.

A favorable report on Alabama's B'nai B'rith membership was given by Gust K. Mark, of Hattiesburg, Miss., second vice president of District Lodge No. 7, who urged full cooperation of all members to make the District No. 7 Grand Lodge meeting in Birmingham next year a success.

Rabbi Myron Silverman, of Temple Emanu-El gave the invocation.

Alabama Sends 'Passport' So Talmadge Can Visit State

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 3.—(AP)—Governor Talmadge, of far-away Georgia, who has expressed himself strongly on the presence of "foreigners" from other states in Georgia, has been sent an elaborate "passport" to enable him to travel freely in Alabama when he comes here tomorrow to make a speech.

City Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor, apprehensive lest Talmadge encounter difficulties that might lead to a break in diplomatic relations between the two states, hastily mailed the passport today.

The passport, complete with gold seal and the usual whereases, declared:

"This is to certify that Eugene Talmadge, Governor of Georgia, is a free citizen and permitted to enter the state of Alabama."

Having read in Talmadge's paper, the Statesman, that a "foreigner" is not only a fellow who was born in another state but one with different upbringing, Connor said he certainly would attempt to follow as many peach state customs as possible in welcoming the red-suspendered Georgian.

Talmadge is scheduled to speak at a Fourth of July barbecue.

GOV. TALMADGE CHEWS CIGAR, DIRECTS 'SHOW'

A resolution adopted Monday by Georgia's revamped Board of Regents at the close of the hearing, which resulted in the ousting of Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the school of education at University of Georgia, Dr. Marvin Pittman, president of Georgia Teachers' College, pointed out that the traditions and customs of Georgia are to keep its colored and white schools separate.

:-: :-: :-:

While Dr. Pittman was being questioned, the prosecution brought up the question of a visit a delegation from Tuskegee Institute had made to Teachers' College in 1938. Dr. R. J. H. DeLoach, faculty member, said the Tuskegee students were on the white campus at least three days. He said the colored students visited class rooms but he did not see them eating with the white students.

:-: :-: :-:

In defense of Dr. Pittman, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, said "I'm not pleading for Dr. Pittman. I'm pleading for the boys and girls of Georgia. We have an opportunity to train young men and women in this state so that they won't hate anybody.

"If Georgia doesn't want that kind of people (Dr. Pittman), God have mercy on Georgia."

:-: :-: :-:

"The most uneducated white man is better than the best educated N e g r o," declared Judge Joe Ben Jackson when he attempted to argue with Dr. Sutton.

:-: :-: :-:

A fight was reported to have taken place in audience at the end the "trial." No names could be obtained.

Governor Talmadge, chewing a big cigar, was present during the entire session. He was kept busy giving instructions to his spokesmen, who appeared to be Judge Jackson and James S. Peters, newly appointed regents.

THREE MORE OUSTED IN WAR ON TEACHERS

Vice Chancellor Of Georgia University Loses Job

ATLANTA, Ga., July 15.—(INS)—Three more educators were eliminated from Georgia's university system Tuesday as Gov. Eugene Talmadge drove forward in his campaign to oust from the schools elements which he has declared are inimical to the racial traditions of the state.

The latest to feel the ax were Vice Chancellor J. Curtis Dixon of the State University; R. E. Davis, a cattle and sheep specialist with the Agricultural Extension Service, and P. D. Bush, an assistant professor at North Georgia College in Dahlonega.

The Board of Regents Monday ousted Dean Walter D. Cocking of the School of Education and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of State Teachers College at Statesboro.

Dublin, Ga., Citizen

THE SITUATION IN GEORGIA

It seems to be a hard matter to keep down quarrels in the government of Georgia. When Mr. Talmadge was governor in his second term a fight was waged all the time. When Mr. Rivers became governor a fight was waged all the time. The courts had to be called upon to settle nearly every thing. Now, Governor Talmadge and Attorney General Arnall are fighting each other and that involves the educational system of the state.

It is unfortunate that the race question has come into it. The Negro seems to be a stumbling block and the Jonah in every issue. Yet he goes on in the even tenor of his way rejoicing and working when they let him. He is the puzzling question in the army and navy to-day. It seems that the white man does not know yet what to do with the negro. I would advise that they let him alone and give him a job and a square deal and he will get along all right.

God evidently, is with the Negro. With all of the knocks and discriminations he gets, he has made more progress than any other race of people on earth in the length of time he has been free.

Dr. Cocking's Ouster

The behind-the-scenes maneuverings, the refusal of Governor Talmadge to accept the principle of the rule of the majority and the farce called a trial, which ended at the State Capitol Monday in the ousting of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia School of Education, constitute a definite threat to our democracy.

How little progress Georgia has made since the hectic days of Tom Watson is plainly proved by Georgia's present-day crop of demagogues in successfully waving the old red herring of "Negro, Negro" to once again get across a Political motive.

Before its under-handed thrust falls one of the ablest educators of our time, recognized nationally for his preparation, experience and foresight in the field of passing along the culture of our civilization.

According to affidavits and reports, some of the lowest methods were employed by the opposition in a well-plotted attempt to "smear" the accused.

And just what were the charges against this noted educator, whose sincerity of purpose, clearness of thought and sterling character despite the dirty intrigue resorted to by his opponents still remains unblemished?

One lone woman, fired two years ago from the University of Georgia, charges that he had suggested a graduate school to which students of both races would be admitted. More than forty others who attended the same lecture, contended that this statement was not made. Dean Cocking himself denies the charge.

The action of the Board of Regents lightly tosses aside the testimony of reputable citizens and on orders of one man accepts that of the probably disgruntled, former teacher.

In doing so, Georgia, through its Board of Regents puts itself on record as opposed to and unwilling to abide by the ruling of the United States Supreme Court in the Gaines case, holding that the state must provide equal educational opportunity for all of its citizens.

Whether Dr. Cocking suggested a bi-racial graduate school or not, this sort of provision would have made progress toward opening some course of graduate education to thousands of young Negroes in Georgia now illegally deprived of it. Persistently ignoring the issue and discharging all those who seek to find a way to put Georgia in line with the United States Supreme Court certainly will not remove the problem.

Young Negroes of Georgia, now forced to leave their native state to secure graduate or professional work, while the money they pay in taxes goes toward the support of schools in the state from which they are barred, should see to that, even if it is necessary to keep an ever increasing number of cases before the courts.

The ousting of Dean Cocking also resulted in a wholly unnecessary slur against the Rosenwald Fund and its progressive president, Dr. Edwin A. Embree. At one time, hearers had difficulty, no doubt, deciding whether Dean Cocking or the Rosenwald Fund, which has spent more than a billion dollars for improving the South's school, was on trial.

This sneering at possibly the greatest single benefactor of Southern education certainly does not meet with the approval of those thinking Georgians, sincerely interested in the improving of the state's lagging educational system.

At this late date of our democratic development, it is too bad that politicians still have the power to hinder a progressing scene. Society moves backward under them.

But Negroes of Georgia should not become discouraged. This latest "witch hunt", directed toward persecution of those who have shown themselves friends disposed to make this a democracy of all the people, can become a signal for a forward surge of determination on the part of Negroes all over the state—determination to become so strong politically that a hundred Talmadges will not dare use them as a stepping stone to the Senate or any other office.

Bell Loses Board Post To Jackson

Gene Finally Wins Battle to Remove U. Dean Cocking Chief

ATLANTA, [AP]—Newly named regents shifted the balance Monday and brought Governor Eugene Talmadge belated victory in his week-long fight to remove a university dean and a state college president.

By identical votes of ten to five, the reorganized board of regents declined to renew the expiring, one-year contracts of Dr. Walter D Cocking, dean of the college of education at the state university in Athens, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of Georgia Teachers College at Statesboro.

TEN TO FIVE

The vote on the motion to re-employ Dean Cocking and on the motion to re-employ Dr. Pittman was:

Yes—T. Jack Lance, Young Harris; W. S. Morris, Augusta; E. Ormonde Hunter, Savannah; R. D Harvey, Lindale and George Woodruff, Columbus.

No—Talmadge; James S. Peters, Manchester; Julian Strickland, Jr., Valdosta; Judge Joe Ben Jackson, Gray; John Cummings, Donalsonville; K. S. Varn, Waresboro; L. W. Robert Jr., Atlanta; Mrs. Susie T. Moore, Tifton; Scott Candler, Decatur, and Dr. Joe I. Jenkins, Hartwell.

Talmadge first asked the dropping of the two men about a month ago when the regents met in Athens and their contracts were not renewed pending a hearing on charges by the Governor that Dean Cocking favored racial co-education and Dr. Pittman had engaged in partisan political activity.

RACIAL ISSUE

At the subsequent hearing in Atlanta the regents heard a former university teacher testify that Dr. Cocking at a faculty meeting advocated creation of a postgraduate teachers' school at which whites and Negroes would attend the same classes.

Dr. Cocking denied making such a statement, others at the same meeting said they had not heard it and the regents voted 8 to 7 to re-employ him. Dr. Pittman's case was postponed until Monday.

Aroused by this setback, Governor Talmadge called for the resignations of five regents who had opposed him. Two resigned and a third Miller Bell of Milledgeville, declined to resign but was voted out at an executive session prior to Monday's public hearing.

HUGE CROWD PRESENT

Held in the house chamber at the capitol, the hearing attracted a packed crowd of more than 800 that repeatedly broke into the proceedings with cheers for Talmadge, for the accused men and their defenders.

Immediately after the vote on Pittman, Regent Robert offered, and the board adopted by voice vote, a resolution thanking Talmadge "for the valuable assistance he has rendered to his alma mater [University of Georgia] and the university system of Georgia and to the people generally of the state of Georgia and to the generations to follow."

The resolution, which cited the charges against the educators and held they had been substantiated, was prefaced by the statement that it was being offered because of "a great many exaggerated state - and mis - statements . . . tending to infer that [the governor] is trying to inject politics into the university system."

OUTSIDE FUNDS HIT

It added the belief that any funds coming from inside or outside of the state that tended to disturb the existing separate schools for whites and Negroes were "not for the best interest of the state or its citizenship."

Only comment of Pittman on the board's action was "that's the board's decision, and it's up to the people of the state to decide whether it's right."

Newly named Regent Peters of Manchester took the role of chief prosecutor and with frequent promptings from Talmadge sought to show that Dr. Cocking is closely identified with the Julius Rosenwald foundation's work in Georgia, that this philanthropic group is committed to full racial equality, including intermarriage, and that, therefore, Dr. Cocking favors such equality.

DEAN DENIES CHARGE

Standing beside the Governor, Dr. Cocking denied categorically that he favored any such equality, "charged that he had been made the victim of the filthiest sort of concocted evidencee" and had refused to resign because "my fight . . . was a fight for decency and democracy in Georgia."

Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, testified in Dr. Cocking's behalf, declaring the charges against him unfounded and expressing fear that the charges "have impaired the usefulness of the University of Georgia and many of us over there."

In offering the case against Dr. Pittman, Peters made no mention of political activity but charged that state materials had been used on a farm near the school owned by the President. Regent George Woodruff said permission to use such materials in return for produce for the University System had been given two years ago by the regents.

'FOREIGNERS' UNCOUNTED

In pique at his first reverse in the Cocking case, Governor Talmadge criticised employment of many "foreigners" by the state—Dr. Cocking was born in Iowa, Dr. Pittman in Mississippi—and hinted at a general purge in favor of native born Georgians.

Later the executive said he was interested at present only in the removal of the two accused men. A survey ordered by Talmadge showed 713 natives, 714 non-natives now on the University System payroll.

Chief source of evidence used by Peters against Dr. Cocking was a book, Brown America, written by Dr. Edwin Embree, head of the Rosenwald foundation. He read from the book paragraphs speaking of the "excessive cost" of maintaining separate parks, schools and other facilities for whites and blacks in the South.

PETERS PROSECUTES

Peters, who is chairman of the State Democratic committee, was challenged by Hatton Lovejoy, LaGrange attorney representing Dr. Cocking, to show that the dean had any connection with the Rosenwald foundation. Peters, frequently counseled by the governor, had said that the accused man "probably is the financial agent in the South for the Rosenwald foundation" and declared:

"They [the foundation] want them [Negroes] to use the same schools, ride the same trains and sit side-by-side. They want to pull the white man down and draw the races together. It means they want intermarriage, that's what it means."

"They won't do it," Talmadge cried vehemently from his seat nearby and his interpolation brought cheers from his supporters.

GRANTS SAID DEVISE

Peters said that grants by the foundation to aid education in Georgia were only a device for going "into our University System in Georgia to get its sentiments expressed."

Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, a teacher who was dropped from the University faculty shortly after Dean Cocking came there, reiterated testimony given at a previous hearing about having heard the dean advocate mixed classes at a postgraduate teachers' school.

In his prepared statement, Dr. Cocking called all charges against him "absolutely false" and declared:

"The press in the past few days has disclosed almost unbelieveable things, things which make the blood of a believer in any sort of justice and fair play run cold. That such tactics could be employed by any country on earth is hard to believe. That they were employed right here in Georgia has all the earmarks of a terrific nightmare. I refuse to believe that the people of Georgia condone such tactics.

"The charges against me are false, completely false. As the official representatives of the people of Georgia, gentlemen of the board of regents, the responsibility for the decision is yours.

"July 14, was a great day of national celebration of the yearly calendar of the Republic of France, for it marked the birth of democracy in that nation. Today, in the year 1941, the French people have been forbidden to celebrate their birth of democracy —for the Fuehrer Hitler has said that democracy is dead. Today is July 14 in Georgia, also."

In addition to affirming emphatically that he had always believed in separate schools for whites and Negroes and this was a part of his school's official program, Dr. Cocking said that under his guidance the college of education had improved its courses so that now it is possible to get the highest possible preparation for teaching, whereas in 1937 it was necessary to go outside the state.

COCKING APPREHENDED

When he sat down, Dean Cocking was loudly applauded.

Dr. Caldwell followed Dean Cocking to the stand to testify that the charges against him had been fully investigated by the university and found to be untrue. He said also that:

"Soon after coming to Georgia, Dean Cocking prepared a long term program for education in Georgia which showed such rare educational workmanship that it was adopted by the university faculty and by the state board of regents."

Dr. Caldwell said that while he would not doubt the veracity of Mrs. Hamilton he was convinced that she had misunderstood what Dean Cocking had said in the faculty meeting because 35 or 40 others who heard him had not interpreted the remark as she did.

Asked by new regent Chandler if he did not think the charges had impaired the usefulness of Dean Cocking, Dr. Caldwell replied:

"The usefulness of the University of Georgia and many of us over there has been impaired by these charges. I am unable to say whether Dean Cocking's usefulness has been impaired more than that of the rest of us."

Asked if his attitude indicated that he might resign in protest, Dr. Caldwell said:

"Whatever I do will be done through the board of regents."

PETERS AGAIN

Peters again was chief spokesman for the prosecution in the case against Dr. Pittman. Although the racial question had not been previously mentioned publicly in his case, Peters told the regents that a party at the college which had been attended by both white and Negro students and that they ate at the same time and on the same lawn, although at different tables.

Bulk of Peters arguments had to do with use of state materials on a farm owned by Dr. Pittman near the college. An affidavit of a former foreman of the farm was offered to show that the state materials had been used on the farm.

Regents Woodruff and Hunter interposed to ask if Peters did not know that use of state materials on Pittman's farm had been authorized by the regents two years ago with the understanding that produce and profits were to go to the benefit of the University System.

To this Peters replied:

"You can make some mighty funny things out of written statements."

This brought laughter from the crowd.

Dr. Pittman in his statement said "I have never stolen a penny" and testified that in two years his farm had returned $535.32 in profit to the state.

He also complained that he had been given no bill of particulars from which to prepare his defense. He said that while he was accused originally of political activity there was no mention of such in Peter's summing up.

Before the meeting opened, Talmadge in his office swore in regents Peters, Candler and Jackson, named to succeed Lucien Goodrich of Griffin, Clark Howell of Atlanta, and Miller Bell of Milledgeville.

Both Howel and Goodrich had acceded to Talmadge request that they resign but Bell refused and attended the executive meeting called just after the swearing in.

A few minutes later he emerged from the office to tell newsmen:

"I have been bounced."

It was learned later that Jackson was seated on a nine to five vote, along the same lines as the votes on the later ousters, except that Jackson did not vote.

Although Talmadge had said prior to the meeting that he did not consider Chairman Sandy Beaver and Vice Chairman Hunter members of the bord, the former presided and the latter voted throughout the day.

NEW REGENTS OUST GEORGIA EDUCATORS

ROSENWALD FUND IS HIT

It Works Against 'Superiority of White Man,' Says One of Governor's New Appointees

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, July 14—The Board of Regents which Governor Eugene Talmadge recently reorganized voted today to dismiss Dr. Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia School of Education and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman as president of the Georgia Teachers College. Both had been accused by the Governor of advocating racial equality in the State's higher education system.

The ousters took place following a stormy open hearing in the chamber of the House of Representatives, a hearing at which the Governor appeared personally to press his charges. Spectators filled the hall and interrupted the proceedings several times with boos and appplause. State patrolmen stood guard at vantage points.

It was the second time Dean Cocking had faced the Regents in recent weeks. At the original hearing, the Regents overode the Governor and voted to rehire Dean Cocking.

Governor Talmadge subsequently shuffled the membership of the board, displacing three dissenting Regents, and it thus was a "hand-picked" majority which upheld his charges today.

The vote to dismiss Dean Cocking and Dr. Pittman was 10 to 5. At the previous hearing, the Regents overode the Governor by a vote of 9 to 7.

Dr. Caldwell Opposes Ouster

The Regents voted against the educators despite appeals in their behalf by a group of prominent witnesses, including Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia.

To substantiate Governor Talmadge's case against Dean Cocking, Regent James S. Peters read excerpts from the book "Brown America," written by Edwin R. Embree of Chicago, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, and tracts published by the Commission of Interracial Relations of Atlanta. There was also testimony by Mrs. Sylla W. Hamilton, formerly a teacher at the University of Georgia, and a statement by Regent Peters that Dean Cocking was disbursing Rosenwald money in Georgia "to insinuate such things as this (racial equality) through our back doors."

"So long as the Rosenwald fund aided our colored folks, they were welcome," Regent Peters said as he waved the book before the large audience. "But when they put a book like this in our libraries or attempt to push doctrines like this through our back doors, I, for one, am going to meet them at the back door and tell them that won't get in Georgia."

Mr. Peters said that "throughout this book the thought runs, 'erase the feelings of superiority of the white man.'"

"They want them (Negroes) to use the same schools, ride in the same trains and sit side by side," the regent declared. "They want to pull the white man down and draw the races together. It means they want intermarriage, that's what it means."

Governor Calls From Seat

From his seat near by, Governor Talmadge shouted:

"They won't do it."

Cheers came from the crowd.

Dean Cocking, a native of Iowa, and formerly superintendent of schools in Texas, Missouri, Tennessee and member of President Roosevelt's Advisory Council on Education, denied the charges. Addressing Regent Peters, he said:

"July 14 was a great day of national celebration on the yearly calendar of the Republic of France, for it marked the birth of democracy in that nation. Today, in the year 1941, the French people have been forbidden to celebrate their birth of democracy, for the Fuehrer Hitler has said that democracy is dead. Today is July 14 in Georgia, also."

The dean, who stood at the side of Governor Talmadge as he read his statement, received a long round of applause.

Dr. Pittman also appeared at the hearing and denied the Governor's charges. He has been in the State's university system seven years, Dr. Cocking four.

Norfolk, Virginia

Old South vs. New South

DEAN Walter D. Cocking, of the University of Georgia, suggested some kind of an arrangement under which colored students might be admitted to the university graduate schools. The suggestion brought an instant objection from Governor Talmadge, who demanded the resignation of Dean Cocking. The university Board of Regents stepped in and voted eight to seven to sustain the dean. Then the Governor demanded the resignation of the board members who were in accord with the dean's plan. One of these members, Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, submitted his resignation and in doing so said: "I am proud of those regents, of whom I am one, who refused to participate in a witch hunt."

Apparently, Dean Cocking's plan of extending the university's facilities to colored graduate students contemplated some form of segregation. But the Governor swore that "as long as he was Governor of Georgia there would be no whites and Negroes attending the same schools." He branded Dean Cocking, who is a native of Iowa, as being a "foreigner," whom he intended to eliminate from the state's educational system.

Meanwhile Florida met the problem of its Negro graduate students by asking Attorney General Tom Watson for an opinion. The state university at Gainesville was pondering an application from a colored student who wanted to pursue graduate work. Then Attorney General Watson reviewed the Gaines decision and suggested that there was a "practical side" to the question which could be met by providing separate dormitory and dining room facilities for the applicant. He even advised separate class-room space, but observed that this need not be made a continuous practice. He evidently reasoned that once the thing got started it would work out its own solution along humane democratic lines.

Thus we see the Old South in a life and death conflict with the New South, and our guess is that the New South will eventually win.

Governor Calls For 3 Regents To Quit Posts

Chairman Sandy Beaver, Vice Chairman Hunter, Bell Affected.

(Pittman corresponce appears on Page 5.)

By FRANK DRAKE.

Governor Talmadge yesterday snapped his red suspenders and knocked three members, including the chairman and vice chairman, off the State Board of Regents.

JUN 2 1941

He called for the resignations of General Sandy Beaver, chairman; E. Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah, vice chairman, and Miller Bell, of Milledgeville, recently named to the board by Talmadge to succeed his late father, and declared that he had to do it because they were holding office in violation of a 1937 law limiting board membership to seven persons with the same Alma Mater.

Two for Cocking.

His action gave rise to speculation that in this manner he will oust Dean Walter D. Cocking from the pay roll of the University of Georgia. Hunter and Bell Monday joined with six members of the board in voting down Talmadge and six other members in their efforts to dislodge the dean on charges he advocated social equality for Negroes. If the Governor contends that Beaver, Bell and Hunter were holding office (under his appointment) illegally, then it was said the official vote of the board on Cocking might be changed to seven to six against employment of the dean, instead of eight to seven for.

JUN 2 1941

Talmadge, in a move which took observers by surprise, said the legal department had pointed out to him the 1937 law limiting board membership from institutions. There were 10 graduates of the University of Georgia, not including the Governor himself, who is ex-officio member of the regents.

Last 3 Appointees.

Beaver, Hunter and Bell were the last three appointees of the Governor to the board.

Beaver, located last night by The Constitution in New York where he was attending the Naval Corps Intelligence Service graduation of Herman Talmadge, the Governor's son, said he would wait until his return home for comment about the matter. He appeared surprised that he had been asked to resign.

Bell, in Milledgeville, Hunter, in Savannah, said they had no comment to make.

The Governor requested their resignations in identical letters, a copy of which follows:

"I was much surprised when one of the assistant attorney generals for the state called my attention to the Georgia Laws of 1937 that amended the law creating the board of regents of the state university.

"On page 527, paragraph 3, there is a provision which limits the number of regents that are alumni from the same school operated by the board of regents. Here is the language that I refere to:

"' * * * nor shall more than seven members of said board be alumni of any one of the schools operated by said board.'

JUN 5 1941

"I know that you do not wish me to violate the law or to allow any provision of the law to remain violated. I did not know this provision of law when I appointed you as a member of the board of regents. There are now 10 members of the board of regents who are alumni from the University of Georgia at Athens, seven of whom I appointed this spring.

"In keeping with the law, I am, therefore, asking for your resignation.

"With kindest regards, I am
Sincerely,
EUGENE TALMADGE,
Governor."

JUN 7 1941

Coolnel Beaver is a long-time political friend and ally of Talmadge. He did not cast a vote at Monday's board meeting, since there was no tie, but it was understood he broke a tie vote recently at Athens on the question of giving a hearing to Dean Cocking. He also was photographed at the capitol Monday admonishing the Governor not to give out a statement on the board's intentions before the meeting was completed. A short while later Dean Cocking's contract was renewed by the regents by the 8-to-7 vote.

Intimated Cut.

Since then, the Governor has intimated he would cut Cocking out of the budget or slash his pay.

If the votes of Hunter and Bell to re-employ the dean are voided, it would have the effect of firing Cocking without another hearing, some political observers pointed out yesterday.

In addition to Beaver, Bell and Hunter, the Governor listed as regents who are alumni of the University of Georgia: Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution; John J. Cummings, of Donalsonville; W. S. Morris, of Augusta; George C. Woodruff, of Columbus; Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin, and Julian Strickland, of Valdosta, and himself. J. L. Jenkins, of Hartwell, was listed as a graduate of the university's school of medicine at Augusta, and Jack T. Lance was listed as having attended both the University of Georgia and Young Harris College.

JUN 2 1941

Friends Understand.

Asked why he had sought the resignations of these three, Talmadge asserted, "They are strong supporters and friends of mine and I thought they would best understand the situation."

The Governor yesterday sought information on all "foreign-born state employes from the auditing department, but when asked if this meant he planned a purge of all those born outside the state, the Governor said, "I don't know what I'm going to do."

Cocking is a native of Iowa, while Dr. Marvin Pittman, of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, whom the Governor has charged with taking too much interest in politics, is from Mississippi. A hearing for Pittman is scheduled for July.

Talmadge commented that since Beaver, Bell and Hunter had all been appointed in violation of the 1937 law, he really did not have to ask for their resignations but had done so as a courtesy.

The act under which he called for the resignations was passed during the Rivers regime and increased the number of regents from 11 to 15, increasing the number allowable from any one alma mater from five to seven. Talmadge said he had not known of the limitation when he appointed the three he clipped off yesterday.

GEORGIA MAY CUT PAY OF EDUCATORS

Talmadge May Drop 'Foreign Professors From Duty

ATLANTA, June 1.—(AP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge said Thursday that "we're going to have a little fun here in Georgia "with out-of-state professors in the state university system, and he intimated he might either cut their salaries or drop them from the pay roll.

His statements followed a query by a reporter about the status of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the school of education at the University of Georgia. The governor has accused Cocking, a native of Iowa, of espousing racial doctrines contrary to Southern tradition, but after a hearing on the charge the state board of regents voted to renew the dean's contract.

Talmadge's promise of "a little fun here in Georgia" was coupled with a request that State Auditor B. E. Thrasher, Jr., compile a list of "all these foreign professors" in the state university system.

Asked if this meant he would "purge" all professors in state colleges who were not natives of Georgia, the governor answered, "I ain't saying what I'm going to do. I'm going to look them over."

Gov. Talmadge's Policy Continues

Governor Talmadge continued his race-baiting policy Wednesday, declaring in a statement prepared for his political publication that an agreement had been reached whereby white nurses from the Georgia Baptist hospital would not have to get part of their training by assisting in the Negro children's wards of Washington hospitals.

JUN 2 1941

The Governor said he had arranged for the nurses to take their post-graduate work in the white wards of Atlanta hospitals. He said there were other hospitals here that send their graduate nurses to a Negro hospital in New York City to do postgraduate work and that unless this is corrected he was "going to come out and tell." He charged Atlanta newspapers with trying to "fly speck" him, citing his campaign involving racial equality and native-born job holders as examples.

Takes Rap at Talmadge For Action on Trying To Oust Dean

ATLANTA (ANP).—Governor Eugene Talmadge was rebuked indirectly editorially by the Atlanta Constitution Sunday, and openly by Executive Editor Ralph McGill in his column, "One Word More," for "attacks upon the unity of the nation" by arousing "sectional and racial prejudice" growing out of his devious, but yet unsuccessful efforts to remove liberal Dean Walter Cocking from the University of Georgia.

The Governor, who like Huey Long, owns his own newspaper, printed a bitter attack in it on "foreigners," "mixing Negroes and whites," and his power to use the budget to gain his ends purging the university. Others in his administration, the attorney general, revived the "book issue," charging that some "social sciences showed Communistic teachings."

Warned the Constitution: "He who arouses sectional and racial prejudices is playing directly into the hands of Adolph Hitler and his henchman, Goebbels, who have predicated their campaign against the United States upon creating internal discord and dissention inside this country."

The Constitution blamed "some ill-advised persons have attempted to reawaken sectional prejudice by dubbing citizens of other States than their own as 'foreigners.'" It reprovingly observed, "The tragic pity of appeals to racial or sectional prejudices is that they do win political support and approval from so many."

A NEIGHBOR'S TRAGEDY

One sure earmark of the demagogue is an itch to meddle with institutions of higher learning. Another is a tendency to arouse ignoramuses against professors.

There is a type of hard-bitten, bigoted Southerner who is suspicious of learning, of scientific research, and of colleges in general. The demagogue delights in arousing this fellow, creating a lot of excitement and thus distracting public attention from other issues — including the shortcomings of the demagogue.

Eugene Talmadge is playing this game.

The Georgia governor has been trying to put on a show at the expense of the State University System — and there are indications that patronage is at the bottom of his effort.

It seems that an embittered former teacher at the University of Georgia charged that the dean of the school of education there, Dr. Walter D. Cocking, had advocated the establishment of a school in which both Negroes and whites would be enrolled. Despite hearings and an investigation there has been no other evidence to support the charge.

But it was all that Talmadge was looking for. Now this blatherskite is starting a drive to run all of the "foreign" professors (those who are natives of any state other than Georgia) out of state colleges.

To the ignorant Georgian it is hot stuff to say, "We have enough competent, educated Christian young teachers in Georgia without jobs, who cannot get a place in a college in another university system. I will take this into consideration."

"I ain't saying what I'm going to do," says this great Georgian. "I'm going to look them over and those who have been bragging about the big salaries they could get elsewhere, I'm going to help them get those bigger salaries."

And of course it's easy to get an audience by dragging in the race issue. And it's convenient, too, since that issue beclouds all others. "I'm not going to put up with social equality in this state as long as I'm governor," Talmadge says boldly. "They can't slip through no crack and they cain't crop up in no funds coming to this state. We don't need no Negroes and white people taught together."

A few years ago "The Man" Bilbo set out on a crusade to put his own peanut-headed followers in every position of responsibility in Mississippi's colleges. It took a decade to rebuild what had been torn down.

Great teachers are rare. Whether they come from the South, the East, the North, or the West does not make a great deal of difference. The search for truth and the art of teaching know no geographical bounds. Unfortunately, teachers are not a match for demagogues. They are not willing to stoop to the wiles and tricks of appealing to ignorance and prejudice. Their appeal is to the intelligence, to the open mind, to the enlightened point of view. Perhaps they should be made of tougher stuff, but they are not.

Alabama is not perfect. It has had good governors and bad, but it has been this state's great good fortune not to have been saddled with an ignorant governor. Nor has it had one who did not respect learning, and realize to a degree at least that a people's only salvation is in a public school system based upon a constant search for truth.

Let her sister-Southern states weep for Georgia! Let them all resolve that the day of the demagogues who afflict our region from time to time will be ended shortly!

GEORGIA PURGE TAKES ANOTHER FROM REGENTS

Talmadge Gets Resignation of Lucien Goodrich—Now May Appoint Two Men

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, June 27.—An embattled state board of regents, torn asunder over charges brought by Gov. Eugene Talmadge against a university dean, lost another member today with the resignation of Lucien Goodrich, of Griffin, long-time friend of the chief executive.

Goodrich announced that Talmadge, who yesterday forced the resignation from the board of Clark Howell, editor and publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, had snapped up his own offer to quit whenever his services were considered "not satisfactory."

This gave the governor two vacancies to fill before the regents' next meeting, July 14, but his efforts to obtain the resignations he demanded from three other regents who crossed him have been unavailing so far.

The turmoil began when the regents voted, 8 to 7, to re-employ Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the University of Georgia's school of education, over the protest of Talmadge, who charged the Iowa-born educator with advocating a practice teachers' school for whites and Negroes near Athens.

Newspaper In Blast on Talmadge

Rebuke Him for 'Attacks Upon Nation's Unity'

ATLANTA,— (ANP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge was rebuked indirectly editorially by the Atlanta Constitution Sunday, and openly by Executive Editor Ralph McGill in his column, "One Word More," for attacks upon the unity of the nation" by arousing "sectional and racial prejudice" growing out of his devious, but yet unsuccessful efforts to move liberal Dean Walter Cocking from tre University of Georgia.

The governor, like Huey Long, owns his newspaper, printed a bitter attack in it on "foreigners" "mixing Negroes and whites", and his power to use the budget to gain his ends of purging the university. Others in his administration, the attorney general, revived the "book issue charging that some "social sciences showed Comministic teachings."

Warned the Constitution: "He who arouses sectional and racial prejudices is playing directly into the hands of Adolph Hitler and his henchman, Goebbels, who have predicated their campaign against the United States upon creating interal discord and dissention inside this country."

The Constitution blamed, "Some ill-advised persons have attempted to re-awaken sectional prejudice by dubbing citizens of other states than their own's foreigners'." It reprovingly observed, "The tragic pity of appeals to racial or sectional prejudices is that they do win political support and approval from so many."

The Constitution recognized, "We are all Americans, Jews and Gentiles, whites and Negroes; Baptist and Catholics. There is a job for every one to do if the menace of the axis is to be broken. Let us get on with these jobs, each in his proper place, and show the world a democracy that is free yet united to the last man, whatever his race, his color or his place of birth."

Going to the heart of the motive for the attack. Ralph McGill said: "He who indicates he is going to base his (1942) campaign on white supremacy (Negroes in Georgia cannot vote in the 'white primary'), is not at all challenged, and a bigger, bigger appeal to ignorance and prejudice."

A bit embarrassingly, Mr. McGill, continues, "We have suddenly had forced upon us, from an entirely false begining, the issue of white supremacy, when there most emphatically is no such issue."

Scoffingly, says Mr. McGill, "It is ridiculous to assume there will be a common campus and even more riduculous to assume that the dean in a Georgia school would advocate such a thing even if he believed it, Common sense ought to tell us that.

"The governor himself knows there is no 'white supremacy' issue. He has but recently completed a visit to at least two of the Negro colleges in the state system, praised them and their leaders.

He know that it is utterly ridiculous to assume that any plan is afoot to put students of both races on one campus."

The columnist reminded that Huey Long had made a similar mistake by taking over the state university and that most of the officials of that regime are now inprison.

Clarke County Probes Alleged 'Smear' Effort

Robert F. Wood Named in Affidavit by Chester Weatherly.

By WILLARD COPE.
Constitution Staff Writer.

ATHENS, Ga., July 12.—An affidavit charging that a representative of Governor Talmadge offered an Athens photographer $50 to fake a photograph of Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the school of education, University of Georgia, in the company with a group of Negroes, in support of the Governor's accusations that Dr. Cocking is an advocate of race equality, has come to the attention of Solicitor General Henry H. West, of Clarke county.

The accused Talmadge agent is Robert F. Wood, who holds a job as field representative in the State Motor Fuel Tax Unit, whose duties are to check on motor fuel violations for the Revenue Department.

The affidavit against Wood which the Clarke county solicitor is investigating and which has come to the attention of the Federal Bureau of Investigation because it involves the Clarke county draft board and its patriotic duties, was made by Chester E. Weatherly, a responsible commercial photographer, of Athens.

Citizens Indignant.

The affidavit and the record of Talmadge's apparent undercover agent, Wood, and the indignant response of the respectable citizens of Athens and Clarke county to Wood's circuitous movements through Athens and other parts of the state, will form a stellar part at the hearing of charges against Dean Cocking on Monday in Atlanta when the purported frame-up will be disclosed.

Reports are current here that Wood has been beating the bushes around Statesboro in an effort to "dig up something" about Dr. Marvin Pittman.

The Weatherly affidavit will find a further reaction as the investigation of the solicitor general proceeds along with that of the FBI to determine whether Wood acted on his own behalf or on specific instruction from Governor Talmadge to "smear" Dr. Cocking as being a participant in an official draft board meeting concerning Negro selectees at which he was not even present.

Investigations Proceed.

Just how much of the plot to discredit the educator by putting Dean Cocking's face on a photograph in company with Negro selectees called for the draft had its inception in the offices of Governor Talmadge only the Federal Bureau of Investigation inquiry and the probe of the Clarke county solicitor general can determine.

Both those investigations are under way and officials are silent as to the progress they have been making in tracing Wood's steps back to those that run up to the Capitol building in Atlanta instead of those leading to the office of the state motor fuel tax unit, which is in the new state office building across the street.

The affidavit reads as follows:

"Georgia,

"Clarke county,

"On July 1, 1941, a man who said that he is Robert F. Wood and that he represented the state of Georgia, came to the studio of which I am manager and asked for copies of pictures taken of the first volunteers for national defense for Clarke county. I sold him several dozen prints. I later learned he was using these pictures to stir up racial prejudice. This same man came back to my studio on July 8, 1941, and demanded that I sell him more prints of these pictures. I told him I regretted selling him the first prints because he was said to be using pictures of a patriotic occasion to stir up racial disunity which endangers our national defense program. When I refused to sell him more prints he asked if I would superimpose the face of Dr. W. D. Cocking on the negative. I refused. He offered me $50. I still refused. He asked me to put the negatives on the floor and he would pick them up. I told him that we did not intend to sell him any negatives or any more prints since he deceived us in the first place and was using the pictures to prejudice one race against another, whereas the pictures were of an event indorsed by the selective service organization, state and national, to foster co-operation between races for the defense of the nation. The man then left.

"This, the 10th day of July, 1941,
CHESTER E. WEATHERLY.

"Witnesses:
"W. S. EBERHART.
"ROY W. CURTIS.
"N. P. Ga., State at Large and Seal."

Roosevelt Foe.

Wood, who ran for Governor in 1938 on a platform asserting he is opposed to "Roosevelt and all his works," also was declared in other quarters to have exhibited a photograph of the same occasion to another university faculty member, in trying unsuccessfully to coerce him to give an affidavit against Dean Cocking. This member, who served on the draft advisory board, was shown in the photograph.

The original picture was made by Weatherly's brother, Robert, on order of draft officials, who said they acted at the suggestion of Adjutant General Marion Williamson in giving the even dozen Negro volunteers a send-off.

Williamson, in turn, was but following out uniform practices suggested by the War Department in Washington.

County Alarmed.

A wave of feeling verging on alarm has swept Clarke county in the last two weeks to such an extent that the mayor and council of Athens were forced to take official action deploring the intentional spread of racial prejudice and its effect upon the methods of carrying out the national defense program. The Lions Club Thursday backed up this position.

In various quarters, including membership of the draft board, it was pointed out that efforts toward disunity might proceed from a well-planned subversive effort. It was for this reason, it was declared, that the FBI office in Atlanta had been consulted. This extract from Section 11 of the selective service regulations was quoted prescribing penalties for:

" . . . Any person or persons who shall knowingly hinder or interfere in any way by force or violence with the administration of this act or the rules or regulations made pursuant thereto, or conspire to do so."

Wood Unlocated.

Efforts of Constitution representatives to locate Wood here today were unsuccessful. He formerly made his headquarters at the tourist camp at the eastern edge of the city operated by I. M. (Bull) Bray, who in past Talmadge campaigns won distinction by carrying the candidate on his shoulders through crowds. It was at Bray's camp that Wood's trailer, in which he lived, was seized during the 1938 gubernatorial campaimn.

A scowling, brusque individual with flaring black hair, Wood was described by Solicitor General West as a former "medicine show spieler" of undetermined whereabouts.

Also shown are Major C. J. Brockman, representing the federal selective service agency, and Mayor Bob McWhorter, professor of law at the university.

Athens Tradition.

Completely negating the implications sought to be drawn from the picture, it was pointed out that the head of the Negro group that gave the dinner, James W. Davis, widely known and respected old house servant and former United States mail carrier, stood throughout the meal.

Local tradition is that virtually no socially important wedding can be held in Athens successfully unless Davis serves as major domo.

On the eve of the regents' meeting in Atlanta, all university officials were loath to discuss the Cocking situation. About the streets, however, little else was under discussion, and there was much feeling apparent, especially over a whispering campaign of a nature not permissible of description under postal regulations.

It was declared that someone with animus against Dean Cocking had approached several Negroes and attempted intimidation in obtaining declarations of an extremely prejudicial character. Whether such statements had been obtained was not known pending developments at the regents' meeting Monday.

Mayor McWhorter's condemnation of the race prejudice tactics was contained in this formal public declaration:

"The colored people of Athens and Clarke county have always been peaceable and law-abiding.

"The authorities of the city of Athens do not intend that professional agitators shall disturb the peaceful relationship between the races here.

"Pandering to racial prejudices for any reason whatsoever is intolerable.

"Especially is it intolerable that anyone should use a patriotic occasion given by Negroes, in behalf of their young men who volunteered for service in their country's defense, to break down co-operation between the races.

"Investigation reveals that the movement to destroy effective efforts at national defense by weakening support of the selective service program is being organized by a wandering agitator of known subversive sympathies who has at times take a more or less prominent part in state political campaigns.

"Conspiracy against effective operation of the selective service law is punishable in the United States court by imprisonment of five years in federal penitentiary and $10,000 fine, or both.

"The responsible, constituted lawful authorities of the city of Athens, so long as I am mayor, will not sit idly by while anti-racial agitation is being fomented. And this is notice to anyone who has engaged in such un-American Hitler-like practices in this community.

"ROBERT L. McWHORTER,
"Mayor."

Reporting developments, the Athens Banner-Herald made the direction assertion that "investigators have uncovered here what looks like a conspiracy of statewide proportions to interfere with successful operation of the national defense program."

It continues:

"The conspiracy attempt follows the familiar Nazi pattern of appeal to racial prejudice and in this instance the conspirators are trying to arouse opposition among white people to the national defense program because Negroes are co-operating with selective service and in some communities have been given public commendation by white citizens of their patriotic desire to serve their country in its hour of danger."

Talmadge Is Charged With Stirring Race Prejudice

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(SNS)—How Governor Eugene Talmadge's unwarranted tirades against fair-minded educators of Georgia and against the Negro citizens of that state have not at all fooled people of a neighboring state was shown last Saturday when the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, a white daily newspaper, in a brilliant editorial drew an accurate picture of the state's plight under Talmadge.

Georgia's governor was accused of stirring up the race issue in a demagogic effort to becloud all other issues.

The editorial entitled "A Neighbor's Tragedy" is reprinted below:

One sure earmark of the demagogue is an itch to meddle with institutions of higher learning. Another is a tendency to arouse ignoramuses against professors.

Two Editors Are Blasted By Talmadge

J. Curtis Dixon, Mercer Grad, Fired As Vice-Chancellor

ATLANTA, (AP)—Governor Eugene Talmadge, engaged in a shakeup of educators in the state university system, Tuesday issued a statement linking the president of the University of Georgia and two newspaper editors with the Julius Rosenwald fund.

A few hours earlier he announced that his newly revamped board of regents had "eliminated," in an executive session, two university system employes on the grounds they were associated with the Rosenwald fund—the same fate that Monday overtook two other state educators after a public hearing.

TWO MORE OUSTED

The governor announced that the regents voted unanimously in a closed session Monday not to re-employ J. Curtis Dixon, vice chancelor of the university system, and R. E. Davis, beef cattle and sheep specialist of the agricultural extension service at the University of Georgia.

[Dr. Dixon, a graduate of the Mercer University class of 1913, is a native of Richland and taught for many years in Georgia schools. He was awarded an honorary doctor's degree at recent Mercer baccalaureate exercises.]

"They were connected with the Rosenwald fund as much as the others," Talmadge said, and in his later statement he asserted "it has never been the policy, nor is it possible, to give all of these employes [in the university system] a public hearing as to whether or not they will be re-employed."

JOB ABOLISHED

Sanford said the regents had abolished the office of vice chancellor and no successor to Dixon would be named.

ed racial equality and implied that anyone connected with it in any way subscribed to the same doctrine.

Bell Bounces Back

[Special to The Telegraph]

MILLEDGEVILLE, July 15—Miller R. Bell's comment Tuesday on Monday's board of regents meeting at which he was "bounced" was terse: "There was a meeting Sunday at Brenner Pass. Monday everybody was there but Hess who is being held by the British."

The governor, in a statement dictated for publication in his personal newspaper, cited a 1937 newspaper article announcing that five Georgians were among 19 Southerners awarded fellowships by the Julius Rosenwald fund.

Among these were Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia; Ralph McGill, then sports editor and now executive editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and James S. Pope, then assistant managing editor of the Atlanta Journal and now managing editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal. All three awards were for study in Europe.

'FALSE ARTICLES'

Talmadge charged that the fund paid McGill "to make a trip abroad and to come back and write false and prejudicial articles in the Atlanta Constitution and to color and direct the whole policies of that paper."

McGill, he also charged, traveled over Europe while on the payroll of Rosenwald fund and at the same time drew $100 a month from the state as head of the state athletic commission.

McGill declined to comment on the governor's assertions.

Of Pope, the governor only said "I wish to call your attention to the activities of James S. Pope, of the Atlanta Journal, in connection with the Rosenwald fund." Then he pointed out that Pope had received a scholarship for study in England and Europe. Pope went to the Louisville paper several months ago.

DIDN'T ACCEPT GRANT

The governor made no comment about the fellowship awarded Caldwell, but Chancellor S. V. Sanford of the university system said the university president "never accepted the grant to study in England. Like many other fine people, he was designated but he didn't take it."

Sanford emerged from a conference with the governor to say "there probably will be some news in a day or two. I am just trying to see what we can salvage."

He said he and Talmadge had discussed the selection of successors. Dean Walter D. Cocking of the school of education at the University of Georgia and to Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro.

'PAIN AND HEADACHE'

State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr., presented the University System's quarterly budget to the governor Tuesday for action, but Talmadge pushed it aside with the comment:

"That's a pain and a headache. I've got to take a day or two off on that."

The budget, in compliance with the request of the governor, listed the birthplace of all employes in the University System. Talmadge, when his dispute over Iowa-born Dean Cocking first arose, hinted he might "purge" non-Georgian professors but he later said he objected to only two employes in the system.

Both Dixon and Davis were listed as Georgia born. This also was true of P. D. Bush, assistant professor at the North Georgia College at Dahlonega, whom the regents, Talmadge said, voted not to re-employ at a previous meeting. The governor said he could not remember the reason.

'VACATION' FAVORED

The governor said that the contracts of Cocking and Pittman, which run until August 31, "won't be changed, but if they want to take a vacation I'd be in favor of giving them one, provided they were subject to call."

Meanwhile, the governor said the board of regents "will look into" the question of investigating books in Georgia Colleges. Two books, Brown America, by Edwin R. Embree, president of the Rosenwald Fund, and Calling America, a compilation, were woven by the governor's spokesmen into the charges against Cocking and Pittman at Monday's hearing.

During interrogation of one witness, Talmadge interrupted to say "there is a movement now" to remove Calling America from state colleges.

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Patiently, Calmly

The Governor has spoken again.

Patiently, calmly, the newspapers of Georgia will reply, as they have replied for the past weeks. The newspapers are not fighting the Governor. They would like to work with the Governor for a constantly improving state.

It should mean something to the Governor that 90 per cent of the weekly newspapers of the state and an even higher percentage of the dailies have disagreed with him.

These newspapers support the constitution of the state which always has said there shall be a separation of the races. These newspapers insist on supporting the constitution of the state of Georgia.

These newspapers, not merely the daily papers of Atlanta, but almost the entire press of the state, weekly and daily, do not believe anyone has made an attempt to put the two races together, on or off a school campus.

These newspapers do believe that there should be co-operation on the part of the white men of Georgia with those Negro leaders who are trying to better the lot of their people. This is necessary. Fine relations long have existed. The Negro leaders are patriotically and intelligently meeting the white leaders more than half way in solving their mutual problems.

It comes to all of us that the Governor privately says he can go to the rural counties on the "nigger question" and win any election. That is what the newspapers of Georgia, weekly and daily, fear might happen. They fear the state may be disgraced with an unnecessary racial campaign.

The Augusta Herald, which assuredly is not an Atlanta daily, is just one of the many newspapers outside which have spoken on the subject, calmly and well:

> Somehow we have an abiding faith in the intelligence and the patriotism of the people of Georgia and are confident that they will not again make the mistake of being carried far afield by political demagogs who seek to build their own fortunes upon such foundations as race or religious prejudice.
>
> Most of us remember when Georgia—much to her shame later on—permitted one man to fan the fires of anti-Semitism through the medium of the Frank case in Atlanta.
> Then the so-called Catholic issue had its day and it, too, ran a course which brought only stain to the escutcheon of the south's empire state.
> Now comes another . . . who, for reasons that could be only political, would throw the whole state into a condition of turmoil over the race issue simply to promote his own interests. . . . Georgia surely deserves better treatment from those into whose hands her fate has been entrusted.
> There are thousands of citizens and practically all the newspapers of the state who are defending the state, the university and its future.

We always have!

Democracy Gone Haywire

NEGROES can not vote down in the state of Georgia. The governor knows it. Therefore, any action he may take is not calculated to be in the interest of the colored citizens of that state inasmuch as votes constitute the factor that keep politicians in line. Politicians in Governor Eugene Talmadge's state campaign on issues that are dear to the heart of southern crackers. Those who by conviction and experience can best convince the voters as to how mean and wicked and ruthless they can be to Negroes have the better chance of winning in the elections.

"What about the constitution of the United States?" you ask. They ignore it. The Thirteenth Amendment? They flaunt it in the face of law enforcing officers. The Fourteenth Amendment? They don't give a hoot about it. The South is a country unto itself which enacts undemocratic laws for itself and without regards to the Federal laws and constitution insofar as the Negro is concerned.

The South is the place where every politician has a common plank in his individual platform with his opponents.

A Cotton Ed. Smith, a Bilbo, or a Talmadge can garner more votes by vehemently denouncing colored people and manifesting their deep hate for them than a Maury Maverick can poll revealing the commendable aspects of his measures to insure economic security and freedom for all citizens.

The South is willing to lag, to stay back, to retrogress, to be the domicile of the ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed if, by so doing, it keeps the Negroes down.

Don't take our word, just look at the record.

Last week Georgia's Negro-baiting, diabolical and evil governor ousted the dean of the University of Georgia and the president of Georgia Teachers' college on the ground that they were encouraging racial equality in that state. These men, the governor pointed out, had the audacity to place in the libraries Embree's "Brown America" which, among other things, states that the "South is coming to realize the cost of prejudice is great in maintenance of two schools, two libraries, two section waiting rooms, separate passenger cars, and white and colored nurses and county welfare agents." To the governor this was advocating intermarriage and encouraging Negroes to think that they are as good as whites. In the legislative hearing the governor extolled the virtues of the treatment of Negroes and commanded his stooge to "hit the table and holler," whereupon said stooge cried out that the lowest white man is higher than the highest Negro. This pleased the governor very much for it put the tobacco chewing, sloppy beer drinking Geeter Lester type of white man as portrayed in "Tobacco Road" on a higher plane than the scholarly, astute Harvard man, W. E. B. Du-Bois.

Take the case of the Memphis police force and its reign of terror against Negro citizens for another case in point. If Negroes were not politically impotent such a thing would not be present in that city.

No state's attorney would have asked a jury to exonerate a Cochran who blew Bob White's brain out while he sat waiting for a jury to hear for a third time his case of rape if the colored people were able to vote.

These cases can be multiplied a million times with others. They illustrate how far this country is off when it boasts of democracy. It is safe to say that less than one man in ten enjoys democracy in the South.

Still our government is doing nothing about enforcing the amendments that would guarantee to millions their suffrage privileges. Congress is not interested in enacting an anti-poll tax law. It will not reapportion the districts based on the actual number of people who vote. Congress is too busy to take up such things. Totalitarian dictators would probably give the same answer.

It would appear that our democracy is going a bit haywire. The people of this nation ought to stop it and stop it now.

"Industries which come for war and remain for peace . . ."

"At your suggestion," writes Gov. Homer M. Adkins, of Arkansas, "I am going to set up a reconstruction committee in Arkansas to deal with the question of trying to retain industries in the South after this emergency is passed . . . There isn't any reason why the South should not be the beneficiary. We believe Gov. Adkins is setting an example which all the other Southern states, separately and collectively, could follow to the great advantage of this region. In the inevitable let-downs and shut-downs that must come when this war is over, the best survivors will be those regions which are most foresighted now and most active then in the many possible ways and means of holding on.

For sake of that basic public health without which neither national defense nor education can adequately be carried on, for sake of Alabama's record in history, for sake of that name for enlightenment he has courted always in office, Gov. Dixon will surely see to it that state funds are contributed to the Spies laboratory. Even if only a penny in token should be given it would be something for the record—but a really substantial sum is indicated.

Death, which comes to all of us at last, came to Mrs. H. A. Sharpe, of this city, in something like total grace, it seems to us. It found her surrounded by more love and rich in more of dear memory and noble achievement than are in the fate of most of us here. To her four daughters—Mrs. Paschal Shook, Mrs. A. M. Lynn, Mrs. William Jordan and

Mrs. Arthur Eastwood—she had never once ceased to be a loved counsellor and companion. For her unfailing qualities of mind and heart she had saved through the years the friendships of years. And in dignity and public spirit, she had honored always the memory of the husband who served with distinction the courts of this state.

A third term in which practically everybody is in favor is that of Jim Smith as federal district attorney here. Fearless, able, honest, forward-looking, he has made a notable record in office and is still young enough to be considered only in the beginning of his career. Judge Grubb was on the federal bench here when Jim Smith began his work as federal attorney, and since then Judge Davis and now Judge Murphree have presided. Each one of the three has had reason to trust and admire Jim Smith.

Something so appropriate we can't see why we didn't think of it first comes to this column from Superintendent of Schools B. B. Baker, of Fairfield. "Why not call it 'Defense Time,'" he suggests in reference to the new daylight saving. "It is short, convenient, understandable and appropriate. 'Daylight saving time' is rather cumbersome." This is an excellent idea. We could eat supper in broad daylight in much better grace these evenings if we knew it was "defense time" rather than just "daylight saving."

Those of us who believe a great objective of this war should be the restoration of a world in which people will no longer claim their ends justify their means should not make the mistake of thinking such a world has already been restored and that we can be too scrupulous in our operations against Adolf. Against him, the No. 1 justifier of means by ends, no means should be overlooked. He has made this a world in which one end at least justifies absolutely any means, and that is the end of Adolf.

What a story gets its final chapter in the death at Troy Tuesday of this state's 90-year-old Leopold M. Bashinsky! A Polish immigrant boy, coming to America when he was 15 years old, settling first at Macon, Ga., then moving over to this state to become one of the leading business men and citizens of Alabama—it is the sort of life history that is America's finest and most meaningful. To his son, Leo, of this city, who is one of the leading cotton men of this part of the country, there will go from many friends here both sympathy for his loss and pride for him in the father whose son he is.

For his editorials in this paper against Talmadgism in Georgia, a toast to John Beecher! In these and other expressions he is proving himself a truly substantial addition to journalism in the South—forthright, courageous, immensely well-informed, and clean-cut in both his writing and his thinking. He knows what he thinks and dares what he knows.

Students Explain

Editor The Telegraph:

We, the students of the University of Georgia, desire to inform you, by a statement of our own, of the purpose of our recent motorcade and other similar demonstrations.

We do not desire to make an issue of the racial question. Ours is not a political fight; ours is not a fight against the Governor of Georgia, nor is it a fight in behalf of any of his enemies; we are entirely divorced from political influence.

Our one supreme desire is to prevent the 16 colleges of our University System of Georgia from being dropped from the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, by restoring the Board of Regents to its former state of political freedom. We believe that if this alone is done, the association, at its meeting in December, cannot refuse to allow our schools to remain on the accredited list. This is the one thing we ask of the Governor.

We apologize for the interruption and inconvenience caused the Atlanta and Athens people by our motorcade, but we sincerely believe the gravity of the occasion more than warrants all of this. However, many of them come to your attention, the vast majority our our students have refrained from all unkind pictures, posters, and remarks in the derogation of any individual, and those that appeared were no part of our official demonstrations. One elderly man at the capitol Wednesday, long experienced in motorcades, remarked that ours was one of the biggest, yet the most orderly he had ever witnessed. Are not these facts sufficient proof of our sincere earnestness.

Governor Talmadge, people of Georgia, we plead with you to save our schools.

A "FURRINER" TAKES THE RAP

Editor Consitution: At the peril of being "deported" back to my home state from the state of Georgia, which has been my home for only two years, I wish to relate an embarrassing experience I had on the train when I recently returned from a visit outside the state.

A group of soldiers sat down at my table in the club car. By way of including me in their conversation, they asked where I lived. To my great consternation, when I replied "Georgia" they let out a mighty howl of laughter.

For miles as we rode along they entertained themselves by recounting sneeringly our Governor's actions. Actions which by no stretch of imagination I could be proud.

It was only natural that all the really fine thinking, kindly people whom I have met in Georgia should come to my mind. I felt bitterly sorry that all such people were naturally included when the jibes and jeers flew thick around me. But why bring that up?

When they flatteringly asked me just how I accounted for such government, I replied "My opinion is that not enough people vote. But they will some day; you'll see!"

"You mean vote 'Ja,'" they taunted.

STORMS AGAINST PEGLER

Editor Constitution: I respect your decision relative to the publishing of the Pegler column, but I want to add my vote to the opposition. I am for freedom of expression—emphatically, most of us would be in a bad fix if we couldn't air our views. As long as the press confines itself to things constructive and in good taste there should be no confines.

Pegler's attacks on Mrs. Roosevelt are deliberately calculated to smear the President. Peglar's vim apparently is to badger the President, through his family and his immediate entourage, hoping to inflame the President into a reply and a consequent loss of dignity.

Under present grave conditions, anyone who uses the freedom of the press for the purpose of villifying the President of the United States has transgressed all the cannons of loyalty and decency. He is doing this country a disservice little short of treasanble.

SHAMEFUL REMOVAL OF WORTHY MEN

Editor Constitution: I commend your clear presentation in the editorial columns of the shameful removal from our state college, University of Georgia, the most worthy men who must face humiliation for no wrong committed. This Governor of Georgia is just smart enough to not miss the opportunity in appealing to the minds of the prejudiced on racial problems.

This mock trial would have possibly been more complete had the presence of the decoy, Frank Norris, been in their midst, whose friendship and intimacy is claimed by Georgia's Governor, and whose pulpit the Governor fills when Norris is out on his tirades of sensationalism. Possibly, too, the photograph of Huey Long would have been very fitting also in this mock trial.

May I urge you gentlemen to carry on, giving full expression and exposure to tirades of this nature until the citizens of Georgia will rise as a unit, as Winston Churchill and all of England and Russia are now doing against Dictators Hitler, Mussolini, etc.

TALMADGE MADE GEORGIA A GERMANY

Editor Constitution: Please accept my grateful appreciation for your excellent reporting of the Cocking trial and for the virile quality of your editorial comments. If there is any encouraging aspect of the whole affair it is that our newspapers are still free and unshackled and are permitted to tell people the truth.

July 14 was black Monday for Georgia. Decent-spirited Georgians can well join their voices with that of an Alabama newspaper which calls on America to "weep for Georgia." There are reasons for weeping.

Tragic enough it is that able educators have been martyred in the best Nazi style; absurd and pathetic it is that the Governor of Georgia goes on record as considering teachers born in another part of his own country as "foreigners" (and frightening for the disunity and lack of patriotism implied in such a warped viewpoint); regrettable it is that leaders for the purpose of clouding sober reasoning. And heart-breaking it is that those responsible for the education of Georgia young people do not realize that the profession of teaching is in the class of fine arts—and not skilled labor.

No longer can we condemn Hitler for sending his storm troopers into the universities (in every country the repository of the liberal spirit) to unseat their professors and burn their books; no longer can we indict him for using racial propaganda to achieve his political ends. Governor Talmadge has narrowed the gulf between Georgia and Germany. For that we cannot forgive him.

TALMADGE WINS OUSTER OF DEAN ON RACIAL ISSUE

An Advocacy of Mixed Classes Changed.

Atlanta, Ga., July 14 (AP).—Gov. Eugene Talmadge today succeeded in ousting a university dean whom he accused of advocating racial coeducation.

After seating three new members named to replace men who previously opposed the governor, the board of regents voted, 10 to 5, not to reemploy Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the college of education at the University of Georgia in Athens.

The board indorsed Dr. Cocking in an 8 to 7 vote a few weeks ago in the face of a former teacher's testimony that she had heard him advicate mixed classes for whites and Negroes in a proposed post graduate teachers' school near Athens.

Two Resign; Third Ousted.

The governor promptly asked for the resignations of five of the men who opposed him. Two resigned and a third was voted out by the regents in executive session prior to today's public hearing. This gave Talmadge a clear majority.

In today's hearing, James S. Peters of Manchester, newly named regent, extended the previous charges to include implications that Dr. Cocking favors general racial equality. This was based on a claim—denied by counsel for the dean—that Dr. Cocking is a Georgia representative of the Rosenwald foundation and that his philanthropic organization advocates racial equality.

Dr. Cocking, who was born in Iowa, denied any advocacy of racial equality in or out of schools.

Wants Natives Employed.

After his reverse at the hands of the regents, Gov. Talmadge sharply criticized employment of so many "foreigners" in the university system, declared there are plenty of native Georgians to fill the jobs, and hinted at a general purge of employe not born in Georgia.

Later he said, however, that he was interested at present only in the removal of Dr. Cocking and Bississippi born Marvin Pittman, president of South Georgia college at Statesboro. He accused Pittman of excessive political activity, and the board planned to take up his case later.

Students Stage Burlesque Of Dean Cocking Episode

NOV 23 1941

By EARL WATSON,
[Telegraph-News Staff Writer]

ATHENS, Nov. 22—The backdrop for a brilliant etching on the stony face of Georgia politics was set to fall here today before 18,000 beneficiaries of a University of Georgia homecoming football crowd.

But Governor Eugene Talmadge, the man who could have infused high drama into a stadium that was adorned with such luminaries as Ellis Arnall and Senator Richard B. Russell, failed to emerge from the Atlanta wings.

Hence, a serio-comic tableaux that presented the spectacle of Dean Cocking, deposed University educator, being stabbed in the back in a patomine right out on the cleat-torn football field almost failed to explode into the earthquake of mirth that the student perpetrators apparently strove for.

One of those who shook with laughter, however, was Sandy Beaver, the regent who rumor has insisted is about to fall under the gubernatorial frown because he has insisted upon asking Dean Cocking if he wants his job back.

GIVES NAZI SALUTE

The mock assassination was the highlight of the initiation of four top-hole students entering the mystic cloisters of the leading honorary Sphinx club.

Jay Smith Jr., Newnan, impersonating James S. Peters, of Manchester, chairman of the state Democratic committee, conferred with B. C. Gardiner Jr., the pseudo-Talmadge, then with great stealth planted a dagger in the ample back of Alpha [Dean Cocking] Fowler Jr., of Douglasville.

NOV 23 1941

Forthwith, "Peters" returned to "Talmadge" and fashioned a fair effort at the Nazi salute. Meanwhile, Verner Chafin, Toccoa, impersonating the collective board of regents, had strolled arm-in-arm with "Talmadge."

LAUGH COMES THROUGH

For the blackout, a swarm of Georgia students belatedly chased the entire cast from the field, and the laughter that had been held in awed reserve finally crashed through.

The university entertained the largest homecoming throng of its history Saturday with a dance for every meal and countless foot shaking interspersed for bites between.

Delta Tau Delta won top honors in the homecoming decoration contest, with Sigma Alpha Epsilon second and Pi Kappa Alpha and Alpha Epsilon Pi deadlocking for third.

BOWL TALK HIGH

Athens buzzed with Georgia bowl talk as the Bulldogs swept aside a well-liked Dartmouth eleven, 35-0, while Alabama took a pasting from Vanderbilt.

The covey of bowl scouts who goggled through the gray November haze at the inspired antics of an inspired Bulldog team had released no official information late Saturday. There was high favor expressed for a meeting of Harry Mehre's Ole Miss eleven and the Bulldogs in the Orange Bowl, provided they get by Mississippi State.

If the political scene gained no spice, it gained color as notable figures thronged the south outer rim of Sanford Stadium. Besides Sen. Russell, Arnall, and Beaver, there were Secretary of State John B. Wilson, former representative Watkins Edwards, county commissioner at Ellijay, Ryburn Clay of Atlanta, Shelby Myrick of Savannah, and of course, Dr. S. V. Sanford, whose dream of adequate stadium for Georgia bloomed forth 12 years ago when another Eastern team, Yale, took a licking scarcely less drastic than Saturday's under a wilting October sun.

William [Bill] Crane, Georgia alumnus who won a Phi Beta Kappa key in 1920 when he lived in Athens, was elected secretary of the Georgia Alumni Association at an executive session of directors.

Billy Dixon, Macon youth who had led the Georgia student fight to preserve Georgia's association credits, pointed Saturday night, while checking over credentials of pass bearers at the Woodruff dance hall entrance, to a large button with red background overprinted with a slogan "We Want Arnall," but he eschewed official connection with the emblem.

Regents Asked For Proposal, Says Cocking

NOV 22 1941

Negro Education Report Said Requested in 1938.

By LUKE GREENE.

Regent L. W. (Chip) Robert, who voted with the Governor to oust Dr. Walter D. Cocking, and Chairman Sandy Beaver, who did not vote, both were members of the Board of Regents in 1938 when the board adopted Dr. Cocking's report on higher education of Negroes in Georgia, which figured yesterday in a statement by the former dean as he stoutly denied the recent charges lodged against him by the Governor.

Back in Athens, where he is spending a brief vacation, Dr. Cocking took cognizance of the Governor's accusations that proposed placing a Negro on the Board of Regents and employment of Negroes in the chancellor's office.

"Most definitely these suggestions and proposals were not my opinions or suggestions," Cocking said in a letter to Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, of the university.

He pointed out he was authorized and requested by the regents to make a survey of higher education for Negroes in Georgia. While he was making this study, he said many suggestions were advanced by whites and Negroes.

Regents Praised Cocking.

The minutes of the Board of Regents for October 28, 1938, tell the story of this report—a story which reveals how the board adopted the Cocking report and praised him generously for his work. Robert was not present at this meeting, but there is no record he ever raised any protest to the minutes of the meeting which were sent to him for approval.

Here is the way the minutes read:

NOV 22 1941

"Dr. W. D. Cocking appeared before the board and explained the report on Negro education. Mr. Curtis Dixon (ousted vice chancellor) was also present.

"Upon motion properly made, variously seconded and unanimously adopted, it was:

"Resolved, (1) That Dr. W. D. Cocking and his assistants be especially commended for the thoroughness of his study and for the apparent judiciousness of their recommendations and that the Rosenwald Fund and the General Education Fund be thanked for defraying the expenses connected therewith.

"(2) That the report be adopted subject to the carrying out and the completion of satisfactory legal and financial measures necessary to make it operative."

The resolution then outlined the steps to be taken to make it operative and named a committee composed of Abit Nix, chairman; Chancellor S. V. Sanford and Dr. Cocking, to work out these steps and report to the chairman of the finance committee, the chairman of the committee on education and the chairman of the finance committee.

It was just before the regents approved this report that Cocking held a meeting in Athens, which has been widely advertised recently by the Governor in his effort to prove his charges against Cocking.

Although Cocking, in his Athens interview, would not say whether or not he planned to come back to the University now, it is authoritatively reported that he will not be recommended by Dr. Caldwell because he will hold onto his job in Washington. He said, however, he did not plan to sell his home in Athens.

NOV 22 1941

"Mrs. Cocking and I like Georgia, like the University of Georgia and love the people of Athens," he said. "We built our home here with the expectation of living in Athens the remainder of our lives."

Meanwhile, Dr. A. M. Gates, president of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, said he would not recommend re-employment of three employes who were discharged from that institution when he came in. He pointed out, however, that if Dr. Marvin S. Pittman were reinstated first, it would be up to Dr. Pittman to make a recommendation.

Vote to Rehire Teachers Fired By Talmadge

ATLANTA, Nov. 21.—Eight members of the Board of Regents, including L. W. (Chip) Robert, voted to re-hire 10 University of Georgia's faculty members ousted in Gov. Talmadge's crusade against the advocacy of racial co-education, Chancellor S. V. Sanford announced last night. NOV 22 1941

It was understood that Talmadge would challenge the action, taken at a midnight meeting in the Atlanta Municipal Airport, on the ground that nine members of the board constitute a quorum instead of seven.

Expelling Talmadge

THE cap and gown is winning over the white hood in Georgia. More important, democracy is winning over "White Supremacy" in the case of Eugene Talmadge versus the people. By a unanimous vote of its forty-one members the Conference of Southern Universities expelled the University of Georgia because of Talmadge's action in forcing the dismissal of Dean Walter Cocking of the School of Education on charges of advocating "racial equality." The dismissal, said the conference, was "Both a contradiction of the ideal of education and a threat to democracy in America." To this concise, accurate indictment "Gene" has found no answer except the favorite yelp of southern demagogues: "Outside influences!" The charge was rendered absurd in advance. Shortly after the decision, made by southern educators, became known to the University students 1,500 burned the governor in effigy. Newspapers as far in the deep South as the Birmingham News and Age Herald denounced "Gene" instead of the conference. It will be remembered that Talmadge had to coerce and reshuffle the university's Board of Regents in order to fire Cocking. And another group of southern educators, the Association of Southern Colleges and Universities, is expected to oust the University of Georgia.

It is also worth pointing out that protest against Talmadge's Ku Kluxism was nationwide. It was based, as the conference's statement recognizes, on the fact that racism and attacks on free education are "a threat to democracy in America." The phrase is as applicable to Rapp-Coudert as to Talmadge. A victory has been won not only in Georgia; it is a national triumph against Hitlerism and for unity.

Accusers on the Spot

Before the people of Georgia go into hysterics about the power of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to blacklist graduates of Georgia's university system and prevent their transfer to other colleges it might be well for them to spend two bits on the purchase of Bulletin 1940, No. 3, issued by the Office of Education, and on sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

S-6

The Atlanta newspapers, and some of the student publications, have drawn a horrendous picture of what will happen if Governor Talmadge stands to his guns and refuses to sanction the re-employment of Dean Cocking.

These same alarmists have spread the report that if the university system is dropped from the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools it will be impossible for the students in our university system to secure an appointment under Civil Service rules, which require a course taken in a "recognized" college.

On this point The Telegraph has received a courteous letter from C. F. Klinefelter, assistant to the commissioner, Office of Education, at Washington in which he says:

NOV 21 1941

> Where the Civil Service examination calls for certain courses in a recognized college, if the applicant is from a college that is not carried on any accredited list of colleges, but the college, nevertheless, is OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED BY THE STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION, THAT RECOGNITION IS ACCEPTED BY THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

It is difficult to describe in temperate terms the outrage committed against the educational institutions of this state when the Atlanta newspapers circulate the malicious libel that disapproval by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools would bar Georgia college students from government jobs, when the highest authority in Washington tells us that the State Board of Education will be accepted as the accrediting agency.

This political attack on Talmadge, by demagogues who are willing to destroy the state university system to carry their own ends, is a shameless procedure and its exposure in this specific instance is enough to discount all the other alarmist statements.

The bulletin to which we refer is entitled Collegiate Accreditation by Agencies Within the State. It was written by experts in that office, after years of study and research.

Its conclusions all tend to the idea that agencies such as the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools should go out of the "accrediting" business and confine themselves to the broad task of trying to improve the QUALITY of educational institutions.

On Page 206 of this bulletin we read:

> After months of study of this problem, the authors of this bulletin are convinced that such change [in the accrediting system] should be in the direction of placing GREATER RESPSONSIBILITY UPON APPROPRIATE AGENCIES IN THE SEVERAL STATES.

Fortunately, Georgia is among the states in which the Board of Education and the boards of examiners for law and medicine, for example, are already clothed with legal authority for accreditation. In other words, we have the very system which these experts in the Office of Education at Washington say should exist in every state of the union.

The Atlanta newspapers recently featured an announcement that the National Association of State Universities had agreed not to drop the University of Georgia from membership, indicating that it was a narrow escape.

The fact is that this association is in open war against the arrogant "accrediting" agencies. A summary of its proceedings for 1938 is thus described on Page 219 of Bulletin 1940, No. 3:

> Reviews control of higher education in its relation to the development of voluntary accrediting agencies, pointing out the GATHERING STORM OF CRITICISM against their activities.

On Page 204 of the Office of Education bulletin we read:

> The general assumption has been that unless a college is accredited, students may not transfer from it to an accredited college or university. Or at least if such transfer is permitted, certain definite strings are tied to such transfer.
> But an examination of the actual operation of accrediting reveals a DIFFERENT SITUATION. ADMISSION OF TRANSFER STUDENTS IS NOT LIMIT-

Regents Okay Re-Hiring Of Educators

NOV 20 1941

ATLANTA, [AP]—The board of regents Wednesday directed Chancellor S. V. Sanford to adjust any irregularities in the University System of Georgia, even to the re-employment of 10 ousted educators, it was learned from an authoritative source Wednesday night.

The action, intended to preserve the accredited standing of the system's 16 units, was adopted after Vice Chairman E. Ormonde Hunter flew here from Savannah to give the board an 11th hour quorum.

It was learned that the board authorized Sanford, if he deemed necessary, to re-hire Dr. Walter D. Cocking, Dr. Marvin S. Pittman or any of the other eight educators who were discharged after Governor Talmadge accused some of them of advocating racial co-education.

Enabling the chancellor to rehire the educators was expected to alleviate charges brought by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools that their dismissal constituted political interference in violation of academic standards.

A program of mediation as drawn up by Chairman Sandy Beaver and other regents appointed by the board to deal with the association. Beaver revealed he had "felt out" Cocking and Pittman on the possibility of their reemployment, but did not disclose their answers.

Talmadge, however, has stated emphatically he will never permit Cocking or any other educator who, in his opinion, advocates racial co-education, to return to the state payroll.

The only statement issued after the day-long, closed meeting from which Governor Talmadge and eight other regents were absent follows:

"The board of regents met today with a quorum present to receive the report of the regents' committee.

NOV 20 1941

"We transacted business which we thought was necessary to show our good faith to the investigating committee from the Southern Association of Colleges and secondary schools, which is scheduled to meet on Nov. 20, 1941."

Pressed for more details, Regent Chairman Sandy Beaver said "We don't want to create any friction. What business was transacted we've got to keep quiet—at least right now."

South in Angry Mood Over Talmadge As Negro Equality Fight Gains

OCT 19 1941

By Rob F. Hall

(Special to the Sunday Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 18.—A quick survey of Southern newspapers indicates that articulate public opinion is solidly — even enthusiastically—behind the decision of the Southern University Conference, meeting here on Tuesday, to drop the University of Georgia from its rolls.

The decision constituted a direct and open repudiation of Governor Eugene Talmadge for his action in ousting liberal Dean Walter Cocking of the university's School of Education and several other leading figures in the Georgia educational field last July. Talmadge charged that the highly respected dean had advocated co-education of Negro and white, which the governor labeled as "social equality." Actually, the dean had not gone anywhere near that far. But he accepted and urged a more liberal attitude towards increasing educational facilities for the Negro people.

This angered Georgia's red-suspendered Ku Klux governor to such an extent that he fired University regents and repacked the board in order to railroad through the discharge of Dean Cocking.

Gov. Talmadge himself appeared before a special committee of the Southern University Conference to present a defense of his actions. The defense was unavailing and the committee report, which characterized Talmadge's actions as "a contradiction of the ideals of education and a threat to democracy in America," was adopted unanimously by the 41 universities represented.

Gov. Talmadge's answer was characteristic of this Negrophobe. "I am going to get a list of the different ones that voted to discredit the University of Georgia. I am of the opinion that the majority . . . are in favor of co-education of the blacks and whites. To this the Board of Regents and the people of Georgia are opposed and they do not care to stay in any association that in any way condones or tolerates the idea of social equality between the Negroes and the whites."

The governor further reclaimed, that "no outside influence can discredit the University of Georgia."

OCT 19 1941

To which the Birmingham Age Herald cryptically replied:

"So said Gov. Talmadge. He was correct. No OUTSIDE influence has."

In another strong comment in support of the conference action, the Birmingham News said:

"Now Georgia, unhappily, is having to pay for the crude political scheming of an essentially ignorant and unenlightened governor, who is using the lowest and meanest device among all the foul tricks of politics, namely the agitation of race prejudice, in an attempt to entrench himself in office. He is using tactics and methods that have long been discredited and that are no longer used in the South by public men of any real standing. Talmadge is a throwback to a darker day in our political history."

It is considered almost certain that the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities, which is an accrediting body, will take action similar to that of the conference and drop the University of Georgia as an accredited educational institution.

It is doubtful that Talmadge really believes that his action has gotten him unalloyed support in his own state. If so, he has had to blind himself to what is happening at Athens, Ga., the site of the university. Masses of University students paraded in a demonstration against Talmadge and burned him in effigy, on the day of the conference decision.

Talmadge and the bourbons he represents are not simply shadow-boxing. They are fighting, in desperation, against a tide of Negro-white unity which is slowly but steadily advancing through the South. The history of the labor movement in the South is the story of a maturing understanding on the part of white and Negro workers as to the necessity of united struggle. And the results of this development is not confined to labor circles.

Perhaps the most significant development in this field was the statement issued by the Kentucky Inter-Racial Committee a few days ago. The committee hailed the fact that in Louisville, salaries of Negro teachers had been made equal to that of white teachers, and that real progress had been made in equalizing Negro education in that city. But the committee stressed there was still great disparity over the state as a whole between rural and urban educational conditions, between Negro and white in the small towns and rural communities. The statement noted that the efforts to equalize educational facilities on the basis of a dual educational system hal almost exhausted the states resources, and concluded that a final solution to this problem could be had only in a single educational system open both to Negro and white.

The Louisville Courier-Journal replied to this statement with an editorial which expressed general agreement but urged a far more "gradual" approach to the question. The Courier - Journal did express support for breaking down bars to Negroes in graduate work in the state institutions for higher learning. So, while the Courier-Journal's attitude represented a step backward from the advanced—and correct position—of the committee, the net result was progressive.

Undoubtedly these liberal trends will be reflected more comprehensively in the third Southern Conference for Human Welfare which which is to be held in Tennessee early in January. The executive committee will meet in Washington on Oct. 31 to finalize plans. However, the theme already selected by the committee is "The South and National Defense."

THEY BOOED GENTLE GENE—Gentle Gene Talmadge (above), governor of the sovereign state of Georgia, got a terrific booing from the stands at Saturday's Alabama-Georgia football game.

Talmadge Gets Royal Razzing At Grid Game

But Gallant Governor Merely Tips Hat, Bows And Walks On

Gallant Gene Talmadge, the gubernatorial gentleman from Georgia, got and took a royal booing at the Alabama-Georgia football game Saturday afternoon.

OCT 26 1941

It was just after the battling Bulldogs from the University of Georgia had sailed their last-minute touchdown over, and the closing gun of the game had barked, that the governor started to walk down the west stands.

Hundreds of University of Georgia students rose in a body, as soon as the governor was spotted, and booed. The booing caught on and in a few minutes it seemed that everyone was booing.

Gentleman Gene, who has aroused the ire of University of Georgia students through the firing of their dean by a gubernatorial-fixed board of regents with the resultant removal of the university's name from the list of the Southern University group, tipped his hat, bowed and flicked his big cigar and marched on.

Gene's brother, Banks Talmadge, of Birmingham, who accompanied him, didn't take the booing so calmly. He made an answer or two, but big-hatted gallused Gene trod proudly out.

University of Georgia students recently marched on the state capitol in Atlanta to protest to Gentleman Gene, but they found him out.

They nominated their football star, Sinkwich, for governor and went back to Athens, the seat of the university.

OCT 26 1941

Saturday afternoon was probably the first real, man-to-man shot that the students have probably had to tell their crusading governor (he accused Dean Cocking of advocating co-educational education for the races) what they think about him.

They certainly told him . . . with a standful of booes.

Regents Misquoted

Editor Telegraph and News:

Your reporter called me over the phone Tuesday evening, and asked me if a delegation from GSCW had been to see me in reference to the Cocking-Pittman matter. I told him that they had not. He then told me that a delegation would likely call on me, and then asked me if there was any likelihood of me changing my mind in reference to the matter. I told him no, for I thought we did right in not re-electing them at the time, and now I know we did right, and that no power on earth would cause me to change my mind. I then told the reporter to be certain to quote my exact words, and he promised me he would, but he failed miserably in attempting to do so. However, I don't make the charge that he willfully misquoted me.

I did not say, "dern it," and I can't understand why he put that in, and why he quoted me in this manner. I did not say that I thought Cocking and Pittman were guilty. I did not say that I know now that they are guilty. I did say that I believed what that Southern woman had said, and I still believe what she said.

In the trial of both civil and criminal cases the judge and jury follow whatever they believe to be the truth on the case, whether it is predicated upon one witness or 20. In other words, if there is one witness on one side and 20 on the other, if the jury believes that the one is telling the truth and the 20 are not telling the truth, it is the jury's duty to follow the one rather than the 20.

Even in criminal cases, it does not make any difference what the state's evidence may be, or how many witnesses the state may have sworn, the jury would have a right to believe the unsworn statement of the defendant in preference to the sworn testimony, if they believed it to be the truth. On the other hand, if the state had one witness and the defendant had 20, if the jury believes the state witness in preference to the defendant's witnesses it would be the duty of the jury to follow the one and not the 20.

Mrs. Hamilton swore positively to the charges that were made against Cocking, and I believed at the time that she was telling the truth, and so believing I voted not to re-elect Cocking, and I believe the other members of the board of regents, who voted that way, were just as honest in their belief as I was in mine. We also pursued the same course as to Pittman.

I think I know about how to judge people and sift evidence about as well as some of our professional critics, who are trying to play politics and not trying to help the university system of Georgia, which they pretend to love so well. They are charging Talmadge and the board of regents with playing politics. They know it is not the truth, but they themselves are playing politics and trying to discredit Talmadge before the people of Georgia.

'Talmadge,' 'Lewis' Run Out of Athens

Governor Talmadge, John L. Lewis and Dartmouth College were run plumb out of Athens yesterday. The Georgia Bulldogs took care of Dartmouth, 35 to 0. The Sphinx took the measure of Talmadge and John L. Lewis, in pantomime.

While Athens was having its fun, Vanderbilt tossed Alabama in the ash can, 7 to 0. Tech was swamp watered by Florida, 14 to 7. Auburn skimmed over Villanova, 14 to 0, and Duke completed an undefeated season by defeating North Carolina State, 55 to 6.

The Georgia students surprised 18,000 fans with a startling demonstration between the halves, staged by the secret honorary society, as part of its initiation routine.

The by-play opened with "Talmadge" strutting down the center of the field, biting upon a long stogey, bowing and scraping to the throng. Then came "Cocking" (ousted University Professor Walted D. Cocking) in cap and gown, walking with dignity from the sidelines.

"Talmadge," aloof from the educator and stalking from a distance, beckoned to the "Board of Regents." They conferred, the "Board" obviously disagreeing with "Talmadge's" pointed charges at the "Dean."

But soon "Peters" went dashing from the sidelines, hurriedly consulted with "Talmadge" and soon "Talmadge," "Peters" and the "Board of Regents" were charging "Cocking," shaking fingers under his nose.

A bit of this and "Accrediting Committee" appeared upon the scene, energetically wagging a finger beneath the upturned noses of the accusers.

Then the scene quickly changed. "Board of Regents" went on bended knee, begging forgiveness. But "Talmadge" refused to bend with them.

The play ended with resounding applause as "Cocking," "Board of Regents" and "Accrediting Committee" turned on "Talmadge" and chased him off the field.

Not ignoring the national situation, students also parodied the coal mine crisis, acting out an episode climaxed by a return to work and a complete route of "Lewis" after "F. D. R.'s" patience finally was exhausted.

Still Garbling the News

The Atlanta newspapers have sunk to a new level of depravity in their refusal to give their readers the evidence recently produced by Governor Talmadge as to the racial equality views of Dean Cocking.

This evidence so completely vindicates the governor and board of regents in their refusal to renew Cocking's teaching contract that we can well understand the reluctance of these newspapers to convict themselves in the forum of public opinion.

But old-fashioned honesty is still the best policy and it would have fared better with these newspapers if they had come clean with the facts which, after all, could not be concealed. Now, more than ever, readers of the Constitution and the Journal are convinced that to get the news they must look elsewhere.

These newspapers are now accused by the governor of demanding pay at advertising rates for the publication of news to which their readers are entitled as a routine service.

Then, What About Negro Professional Education?

GOVERNOR TALMADGE attempted to further explain in a radio address Friday night his dictatorial action in the recent ousting of several members of the State University System for alleged liberal ideas toward the race.

Of special interest to us was his reading of a speech President W. H. Holley of Albany delivered to the Board of Regents in 1935 as the Governor's position on Negro Education in Georgia. Perhaps, this is the first time in the history of the nation that a Governor expressed the view of a single Negro as the state executive's view on any particular issue regarding the race.

Now, what does this Holley speech say? In the first place, President Holley said he thought the Negro state schools should be taken out from under the Board of Regents and "those Negro units should be set apart by themselves under a special commission." This would be most unfortunate for Negro education because there would even be more politics in the colleges than at present, especially if some educator with political ideas like those of President Holley dominated the set-up.

Furthermore, we know of no competent Negro educator who approves such a plan. The Board of Regents has been wise in ignoring this suggestion from President Holley.

The Albany college head also stated "Black is black and white is white and ne'er the twain shall meet. It would be unfair to both races to try to establish and operate mixed schools." On this point, up to the graduate schools, we are in agreement with both President Holley and Governor Talmadge.

Then, what about graduate and professional education for Negroes in Georgia? The Supreme Court of the land ruled in 1939 in the Gaines case in Missouri that each state was obliged to provide within its boundaries EQUAL educational facilities for ALL its citzens. So since the Governor and Regents have stated by their action that NO Negroes shall be permitted to enter the University of Georgia where they can get such courses as law, medicine, dentistry, journalism and other professional courses not available in any Negro institution in the state, it looks like a lot of additional money will have to be raised to provide the above courses for the race.

And right here, we are frank to state, it looks very wasteful to go to such great expense that will be entailed to provide the professional training required by the few Negroes doing post-graduate study. But if the state insists on standing by its law forbidding co-racial education even for post-graduates, Negroes should be equally determined to get their FULL rights under the recent Supreme Court ruling. The acceptance of scholarships to go out of the state to get training that is provided within the boundaries of the state to certain other citizens, would be compromising with the Supreme Court and "selling our birthright for a mess of pottage."

So we ask again, Mr. Governor, what about professional training for the Negro tax payers of Georgia?

Race leaders in the state should not let this question of Negro professional education drop since it has been raised by such a high source. We have essentially the same problems to meet during life as the white man. We pay the same rate of taxes, even if our "environment is unlike" that of some others. And under the democratic theory of government we are entitled to all rights given any other citizen. Let us meet this issue squarely!

A CONTEMPORARY SAYS

Georgia's Attack On Race Relations

When Governor Eugene Talmadge, and his handpicked buddies, ousted Dean Walter D. Cocking and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman from the Georgia University system, merely because it was suspected that the two were lenient in the matter of inter-racial education, a serious challenge was offered those white people who have given freely of time and money to promote, along with colored leaders, better relations and understanding between the two races. The "Talmadge purge" went even farther. It struck at such renowned institutions as the Rosenwald Foundation, Slater Fund, Carnegie and Rockefeller foundations, the Jeannes Fund and others who, for decades have poured millions of dollars into the south that the poor, colored and white, might have educational opportunities which their states, either deny them or wilfully deprive them.

It is with ironical pleasure some of us note that the Rosenwald Foundation and the General Education Board of New York have already withdrawn contributions from Georgia. Others may follow. But with their withdrawal of funds educational opportunities for Negroes and poor whites in Georgia will sink to a new low. And this shall be but one pronounced price Georgia will pay for waving the "Negro flag" and piping out prejudice, with its highest official leading the parade.

When Judge Joe Ben Jackson, handpicked Regent of Talmadge, shouted to Dr. Willis A. Sutton: "The most uneducated white man is better than the best educated Negro", the race-baiting ceremony was complete. It did not matter that Dean Cocking or Dr. Pittman had not specific charges against them. Judge Jackson had quoted from the Magna Charter of the "race-baiters" and it was not to be amended. It is not difficult to imagine the chances a Negro has in Judge Jackson's court.

A few miles out of Atlanta, where Governor Talmadge staged his disgraceful show, is Fort Benning where thousands of colored men, limited in academic training because

Georgia Editors Say:

TALMADGE'S TRIUMPH

(From The Bartow Herald.)

Governor Eugene Talmadge must feel like a great man today. Singlehandedly he has dealt Georgia education the greatest blow it has suffered since Sherman's army marched through Georgia.

As a result of his recent political manipulations of the University System, the oldest chartered state university, the University of Georgia, at Athens, has been dropped from the Southern University Conference—just a hint of worse blows to come. For Georgia is surely to be dropped from the southern accredited list, as well as from other associations that are designed to make uniform the high standards of the nation's universities.

Everyone will realize the importance of schools keeping their standards high. Everyone will realize the importance of an accrediting agency empowered to do this. Georgia's university, despite all its handi aps, has managed to keep such a high standard at every accrediting agency in the land recognized the quality of its work.

With one blow, Eugene Talmadge has destroyed this.

By his highhanded dictation, he has destroyed the work of 150 years of labor. He has fixed things so that a degree from the University will not be recognized by any other college in the land. Until the University is reaccredited, its instruction will not be recognized by any of the other schools. Its effectiveness will be impaired to such a degree that no one will want to send his children to school there. Teachers and professional men trained there will lose much of their prestige.

Georgia willed it so, are preparing themselves to defend and preserve their state and country. Had they a choice in the matter many of them would be elsewhere. But they must die, if needs be, that America might live. They shall die for Talmadge. Jackson, Peters and the others. Their commanding officers do not tell them that white men are better than they. Nor, are they made to feel themselves a separate portion of this country. Even Talmadge would not "purge" them from a battlefield because "white men are better than they". —The Lighthouse and Informer (Charleston, S. C.)

TALMADGE STIRS UP A STORM

Governor of Georgia Is Charged With Following Example of Huey Long

CONTROVERSY-MAKER

Cowan

Governor Talmadge of Georgia.

By EDWIN CAMP

ATLANTA, Ga., July 26—To the question, "What is Talmadge up to?", two contradictory answers are available.

Georgia's Governor says he fired Dean Walter D. Cocking from the University of Georgia and President Marvin Pittman from the Georgia Teachers College to quash the designs of "furriners" to establish in this State social equality of Negroes with whites through subversive teachers and teachings in the school system.

The more prominent of his critics say that the "Wild Man from Sugar Creek," as he loves to be called, has reverted to his former ambition to become the Huey Long of Georgia. They say that he has manufactured an issue which does not exist, in order to make an appeal to the prejudices of the backwoods voters in his next election campaign.

But they also declare that they see in the latest move, which has given him personal control of the State university system as well as the common schools, a political blunder which will defeat his plan and send him back eighteen months hence to the private life in which he fretted between 1937 and 1941.

Widespread Bitterness

Marion Smith, twice chairman of the university's Board of Regents, The Atlanta Journal, and The Atlanta Constitution, as well as one large city newspaper and a dozen strong county weeklies which had supported his candidacy for the Governorship, have denounced the dismissals as despotism and a travesty on justice. Other newspapers, formerly backing his political aspirations, refrain from defending him.

In his campaign, Mr. Talmadge promised that he would permit no new taxes and would pay the State out of its from twenty to thirty million dollar debt. He intimated, and his spellbinders said, that he was a wiser man than the stormy petrel of four years before.

When the Legislature met, his lieutenants introduced and obtained passage of a bill authorizing the Governor to handle all State funds as he saw fit. He then asked for and, with expressed reluctance on the part of Assembly members, received power to suspend the Controller General and the State Treasurer, the only officials with any check on the disbursement of funds. Thus he obtained the power to disburse forty-odd millions of dollars a year without legislative appropriation. As master of the budget he had power to remove any official or employe by the simple expedient of striking his name off the payroll. Out went all appointees of the Governor's predecessor; in came the Talmadge boys.

Asks 4-Year Term

He asked the Legislature to authorize a constitutional amendment for a four-year Gubernatorial term. To the amazement of some, it was discerned that far down in the resolution were words extending his present two-year term to four. That provision was hastily withdrawn. With their suspicions aroused, the legislators balked on the proposal.

Talmadge leaders promised a concurrent amendment providing annual instead of biennial sessions as a check, and the resolution was passed.

When the amendment went to referendum, the provision for annual sessions was scuttled while the full force of the Administration was put behind the four-year term. It carried, and Mr. Talmadge then announced he would be candidate for the Governorship in 1942.

His next step was to obtain control of the State Board of Education, which administered the common school system. He appointed ten members and has taken charge.

One great function of the State was beyond his reach. It was the university system, with its thirteen units and its enrollment of 23,000 students. It is administered by fifteen regents with the Governor as ex officio member. The six-year terms are staggered in an effort to prevent domination by any one Governor.

Moves Against Electors

Mr. Talmadge appointed three members last January and had the political fealty of a few leftovers from his previous Administration. When he raised his allegedly fictitious issues against Dean Cocking and President Pittman, he lost by an 8-7 vote. He demanded the resignations of three of the majority, and obtained two. To a third who refused to resign further membership was denied by means of an alteration of his commission. With three new appointees, the Governors' demands were carried out by a 10-to-5 vote.

"Them That Call Good Evil."

Ever since I read very carefully the dramatic account of the so-called trial of Drs. Cocking and Pittman at the capitol on last Monday, there has run rhythmic like a funeral march through my mind, the terrible sentence of the prophet Isaiah, when Israel had reached a moral low in her history. "Woe unto them that call good evil, and evil good." That is indeed the last level of the moral descent when people have lost their power of ethical discrimination, and cannot tell good from evil, a truth from a lie, light from darkness.

The removal of these two distinguished and beloved teachers from their positions in our University System was unique in its violation of every standard which we have come to associate with a procedure of justice. Dr. Cocking had already been tried and acquitted by a regular meeting of the Board of Regents, and re-elected for the coming year. Then the Governor of the state, who is ex-officio member of the board, announced that Dr. Cocking would be tried again. It was not a trial on an appeal to a higher court. It was to be technically the same court—the Board of Regents—but with a radical change in the personnel.

Prepared Verdict.

The Governor announced a week in advance of the trial what the verdict was going to be. There was nothing mysterious about this, since in the interim he forced three of the members off of the board, and appointed three others, whose votes he seemed able to predict with perfect confidence. Indeed, one of these new appointees made his first appearance as a member in the role of prosecuting attorney. In addition, this modern Poobah was a member of the jury, a judge, and a witness. But the Governor was not the only one who knew what the verdict would be. When the jury — or would you call them judges—took their seats, to hear the charges and the evidence against two reputable teachers, one of the jury—L. W. Robert—had in his pocket a typewritten copy of the verdict. That paper, which was later made the official verdict of the Board of Regents, said "having thoroughly investigated the charges" — "fair trial having been given," etc.—then the verdict followed. All of this written before the trial began. Translated into accepted moral standards, they "called evil good."

The Governor, according to his own statements, is attempting to make the impression that there is a conspiracy in the ranks of the University System to do away with the separation of the races in the schools of Georgia, and that he is engaged in a heroic fight to save us from such a calamity. When we remember that the separation of the races in our schools is embedded in the constitution of our state, and that the overwhelming — we might say the unanimous—sentiment of the people are back of that provision, it is fantastically absurd for Governor Talmadge to raise this question as a serious issue. It is worse than absurd. It is wicked to turn in a false political alarm, which can only result in arousing racial prejudices and hatreds to the deep hurt of our state. If we would save our people from moral "confusion worse confounded," we must brand this political melodrama as "evil" and not "good."

Education Foundations.

Since the reorganization of our university system under a board of regents, the wise and patriotic members of the board have succeeded in winning the confidence of several of the great national education foundations, so as to receive from them large financial appropriations for the expansion and efficiency of our state schools. The tremendous advantage of these connections is to be found not merely in the money received, but even more in the nation-wide credit which has come to our schools from the favorable recognition of these foundations.

Among these philanthropic organizations, perhaps, the Rosenwald Foundation has been the most helpful to Georgia. I say this not because htye have been the largest givers, but because their representatives have shown a sympathetic intelligence in dealing with the special needs of our state. Which has enabled them to render the greatest service to our people. With the most intelligent discrimination they have divided their gifts between white and Negro schools, recognizing (whether they approved or not) the separation of the races. Perhaps the most helpful service was rendered to the health conditions among the Negroes. When we remember, as we have criminally forgotten that the germ knows no color line, we can see how this service was rendered to us all.

Now the Talmadge regents say that this "good" is "evil". They charge that the Rosenwald Foundation is attempting to introduce mixed racial schools into Georgia. Having done this, they sought to connect the teachers whom they desired to get rid of with this foundation. There has not been a scintilla of evidence to support this charge. On the contrary, Mr. Marion Smith, one of our truly great citizens, who was chairman of the Board of Regents for many years, declared without reservations that neither the Rosenwald nor any of the educational foundations had sought even by suggestion to introduce mixed racial schools into our state.

We might forgive the Talmadge regents for slaying justice upon the high altar of the state capitol, but it will be difficult ever to forgive them for justifying this judicial murder as a defense of the people of Georgia. "Woe unto them who call good evil, and evil good."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

OCT 16 1941

THE LIGHTS DIM A day or so ago Dr. Willis Sutton was asking Georgians what sort of citizens we could expect from schools in which teachers were paid $60 and $70 per month.

Almost the same day the Southern University Conference dropped the University of Georgia from membership.

A curious thing happened.

There really was nothing else the conference could do if it planned to maintain the integrity of educational standards and the integrity of those who teach.

OCT 16 1941

Nevertheless, a curious thing happened.

Those who had connived to bring about the dimming of the University's light; who had ruthlessly and with complete tyranny of method removed from the University's Board of Regents those men who would not do the political killings, cried—of all things—"Tyranny!"

He who had charged, without any sustaining evidence, that there were men in Georgia who wanted to send colored and white students to school together, heatedly charged that the heads of all southern universities wanted to do the same thing.

The charge was that heads of large and small southern institutions in the south—Mississippi, Alabama, Southwestern, Sewanee, Vanderbilt—to name a few—were in favor of racial coeducation.

This charge, so absurd that it must be incredible to all, is as true—and no truer—than the charge that such a course had been suggested in Georgia.

It was the German dictator who said that his own method was deliberately to state a great untruth and then to keep on repeating it. Finally, he said, there would be those who would believe it because of the very monstrousness of the lie.

There have been no lying newspapers.

There is no one in the hire of any foundation writing about it.

There are no lying professors.

There is not now, and never has been, anyone who has advocated or who wishes to advocate in Georgia or anywhere in the south, any sort of racial coeducation.

A ruthless political maneuver, for an issue to oppose those in a time when the war is the major issue, is dimming the lights.

They will burn again. How soon no one can say.

ADMISSION OF WRONG There was another cry, "Leave us alone down here in Georgia."

They are leaving Georgia alone.

OCT 16 1941

No one is trying to say what Georgia is to do.

There is no effort being made to say whom Georgia shall employ as teachers.

They are leaving Georgia alone. Completely.

A curious thing happened last Sunday. A committee of "appeasement" went to Birmingham. It went seeking to iron out the differences, to fend off the expected blow.

Whether they meant it so or not, the very formation of this committee was an admission of wrong, a confession of guilt in what already had happened—the firing of ten professors because they were not "right" politically.

When they formed the committee to go asking forgiveness on the basis it would not happen again, they pleaded guilty.

The conference, and the others which will consider the fact that every teacher's job is at the mercy of one man, are not seeking to do anything in Georgia. They are letting Georgia alone. That was the purpose of the action.

They let Mississippi alone when Bilbo destroyed the integrity of the University of Mississippi.

OCT 16 1941

They acted with regard to Louisiana when Huey Long had done the same thing there.

They heard what amounted to a plea of guilty in Birmingham.

"NO AUTHORITY" This conference, it is said by a few, has no authority. It is just a "bunch of professors."

That is true.

They have no authority in Georgia.

They assuredly would have no authority were they in Georgia.

In Georgia they could be pushed around; "fired" if they refused to take political orders; mistreated.

They have no authority.

It might be well to recall that Truth has no authority.

Nor, for that matter, does integrity have any authority.

Yet, oddly enough, even without authority it was a strong wall against which there crashed and broke an accumulated load of false charges.

It is well to remember that no outsiders are trying to do anything in Georgia. They are leaving Georgia alone. They are not saying whom we shall have as teachers or what we shall pay them or whether we shall fire them for not voting "right."

It is well to remember that equally false is the charge that foundation money is behind it; to remember it is untrue that anyone on any foundation pay roll is in any way connected.

No one has subsidized them.

No one has influenced them. They have been in opposition from the beginning.

There is no authority behind truth and integrity and honesty that comes from the dictation of a man or group of men.

Yet the authority is there. Falsehood breaks against it.

Superior to All "Credits"

OCT 16 1941

Friends of the state university system have little reason to be disturbed by the action of the Southern University Conference in dropping the Georgia unit from membership.

OCT 16 1941

This will also be true if the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools strikes the university system from its accredited list.

Governor Talmadge has well pointed out that neither of the foregoing associations or any other agency on the face of the earth can "discredit" the oldest chartered state college in the United States, whose history and traditions reach back almost to the beginnings of our constitutional form of government.

Its alumni have held positions of honor and trust in the various branches of the government and something of their prestige hangs like an aureole over the great institution at Athens, whose fame was international when some of the mushroom colleges which now undertake to dictate to the Georgia regents were not even conceived in the womb of time.

For many months there has been a strong feeling on the part of many real friends of the state university that we should "carry the war into Africa," which is to say that the university system should take the initiative and refuse to be associated with the Southern University Conference or the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Looking the facts squarely in the face, what prestige can the state university derive from the approval of a little group of educators who have set themselves up as a scholastic brain trust and assume to tell an independent board of regents what they shall or shall not do?

It will not be forgotten that the Office of Education at Washington has issued a statement in which it said such organizations as the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools were so arbitrary and erratic they had outlived any usefulness they ever had and the time had come to abolish them.

A great institution like Princeton University, for example, has definitely and persistently refused to be allied with one of these "accrediting" outfits and seems to prosper quite as well as those that kow-tow to the dictators who tell them what members of the faculty they shall hire and how they shall run their affairs.

One of the counts in the Southern University Conference indictment is that Cocking and Pittman did not have due notice that their services would not be required for another year.

There is simply no answer to the fact that the board of regents has to hire 1,500 instructors of various kinds and they do not have to give any reason for refusing to employ a faculty member for another term at any time. It would be impossible to give a "hearing" to each of those 1,500 instructors each year and it would be folly to expect it.

If the university system preserves its fine traditions as an outstanding exponent of Southern life and thought, with a sound curriculum, it will stand high in public esteem and no outside agency can discredit it.

It Affects Us All

More than 25 per cent of the native-born population of the United States does not live in the state of origin.

Americans are, as a nation, of migratory habits. They are prone to wander, especially in youth, and to find new places for themselves. The young man born, educated and brought to manhood in Georgia goes to New York or some other distant state when he is a man and establishes a home there. On the other hand, Atlanta is largely populated by people who were born and who spent their youth in far distant states.

All of which means that conditions which do not contribute to good health or better education, in one state or section, affects the entire nation. Young men and women who have grown up under the handicaps of the slums of some eastern industrial city may, in later life, form the underworld of a city in the south. Persons who have suffered from lack of educational facilities in some remote area of the south may become part of the public relief burden of a city in the midwest.

The city of Detroit finds one of its most distressing civic problems among a Negro population of more than 100,000. Yet it is safe to say by far the greater number of those Negroes were not born, or raised, in Detroit.

That is why the "Tobacco Roads" of the nation, which are not confined to Georgia or to the south, are the problem of all. The evil that springs from the "Okies" in California brings the backwash of its ill effects into every other state, while prejudice and intolerance anywhere sends out widening circles of trouble until the entire nation is affected.

That is why the disgraceful injection of shoddy politics into the affairs of the University of Georgia is of wider interest than the limits of the state.

The freedom of education is as vital to American life as any of the freedoms we so proudly boast. When academic freedom is touched with the tainting finger of politics, the effect is felt wherever men seek to learn truth.

That is why it is the vital duty of all associations or groups of educators to jealously guard the freedom of education wherever it may be, to take proper steps to rebuild the ramparts when that freedom is attacked, anywhere.

That is why the University of Georgia today rests under a cloud. Because members of its faculty who had incurred the personal dislike of politicians, were illegally, unjustly and dictatorially thrown out of their posts by a politically dominated "trial" board.

That is why every man or woman, in or out of the state of Georgia, who realizes the truth that freedom of education is fundamental to freedom of both the individual and the nation, is today giving every possible aid to the students of the university in their brilliant fight to save their beloved institution from the pit of shameful oblivion which has been dug under it by politicians who know no scruples when seeking their own selfish or nefarious ends.

Out of His Own Mouth

Addressing a group of Negro educators in Peabody hall, at Athens, in May, 1938, Dean Walter F. Cocking, of the College of Education in the state university system said, "I rather think the time is fast approaching WHEN WHITES WILL BE ASKING ADMITTANCE, AFTER A TIME, IN CERTAIN OF OUR BETTER NEGRO INSTITUTIONS."

This statement is taken from a stenographic report of the meeting in question and if the English language has any meaning the head of the College of Education at Athens was and is in favor of interracial education in Georgia.

It bears out the affidavit made by Mrs. Hamilton that Dean Cocking made a similar proposal, within her hearing, to which she testified before the board of regents when it finally refused to renew Cocking's contract.

The entire transcript of the proceedings in this conference with the Negro educators is a complete vindication of the position Governor Talmadge has taken.

Once for all, it should silence the childish charge that he has been "playing politics" with the university system.

The plain truth is, as the governor says in making public this latest evidence, that he was upholding the constitution and laws of this state, which prohibit interracial teaching, just as he was upholding the law in unpacking the board of regents which had been packed, for political purposes, by Governor Rivers.

He is waging no fight on the Negro, whose uplift within his own sphere, he urges strongly, but he wishes to track the law.

Every intelligent citizen of Georgia owes it to himself to read this stenographic report which appeared in The Telegraph of Nov. 5.

While the language we have quoted is clear-cut and specific it is also true that all through the conference runs the same idea.

The subject under discussion was the appointment of a coordinator who would seek to give higher education to every Negro in the state. There were suggestions that a Council of Negroes should be set up and in plain terms Dean Cocking proposed:

> I THINK WE MIGHT HAVE A NEGRO A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF REGENTS, and if we do have such a thing I should think we ought to have an advisory board of Negroes, for Negro higher education.

In this conference was Robert E. Clay, described by the State Department of Education as "state developer of education, State Department of Education, Nashville, Tenn., formerly Rosenwald school building agent for Tennessee."

In the Athens conference, Clay said, according to the stenographic minutes, "I am able to speak for 40 thousand Negroes in Tennessee—THERE IS NO RACE PREJUDICE THERE."

Further along in the conference, Cocking said:

> I have invited three people from out of the state. Bob Clay was my RIGHT-HAND MAN in the state department of education in Tennessee. I rely a great deal on his judgment. There may be other people who know more about higher mathematics, but when it comes to knowing people AND PROMOTING AN INTERRACIAL PROGRAM, I DO NOT KNOW ANYBODY WHO CAN DO IT BETTER.

A man who hopes to see the time "when whites will be asking admittance . . . in certain of our better Negro institutions" and who boasts that the former Rosenwald Fund agent, Bob Clay, is his "right hand man," has no place in the university system of Georgia and Governor Talmadge is to be applauded for upholding the constitution and the laws of Georgia all along the line.

Protest in Atlanta

A thousand excited young men and women converged last week on the tree-lined lawn before Georgia's domed limestone Capitol in Atlanta. Students of the University of Georgia, they had come seventy miles by motorcade from their campus at Athens to call on Governor Eugene Talmadge. Although the Chief Executive happened to be absent on a speaking tour in the State's back country, the visitors staged a demonstration for his benefit. While thousands of onlooking Atlantans cheered, they booed a bust of the Governor. When one of their leaders yelled "Are we scared of Talmadge?" they roared back "Hell, no!" They displayed placards which read "Phooey Talmadge!"

The students had come to the State Capitol to protest against the Governor's responsibility for what some termed a disgrace to their Alma Mater. The Southern University Conference, an association of leading Southern schools, had ousted Georgia from its ranks. The ouster had been prompted by the dismissal of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the Georgia School of Education. There were charges of "political interference" in university affairs. Governor Talmadge had forced a personally revamped Board of Regents to remove the dean on the grounds that he favored equality between Whites and Negroes in the educational system. When newspapers and academic groups upbraided him, the Governor denounced "furriners" from the North and demanded the burning of books advocating racial equality.

Georgia Regents Defy Talmadge On College Issue

NOV 29 1941

ATLANTA, Ga. —(ANP)— At the municipal airport here recently, seven members of the Georgia board of regents met and concurred in their move to rehire university educators ousted at Gov. Gene Talmadge's direction, according to Chancellor S. V. Sanford.

The meeting was held at midnight, said the chancellor, hours after E. Ormonde Hunter of Savannah had flown here in response to a telephone call to make a quorum.

NOV 29 1941

However, Thursday, Gov. Talmadge challenged the actions of the special session, charging that nine—not seven—members are required for a quorum of the board which controls the state university system.

The unexpected flurry of activities as interpreted by political observers to indicate a move to defy Gov. Talmadge, who previously said he would not permit the reemployment of Walter D. Cocking or any other educator whom he considered an advocate of racial co-education.

Send 6-Foot Petition to Georgia Univ.; Meeting Hisses Nye, Walks Out

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Nov. 25.—North Carolina University students this week let Governor Talmadge of Georgia know what they felt about his interference with democratic education at the University of Georgia. A six-foot petition with the signatures of university students was sent to Georgia University students. It read:

NOV 26 1941

"We, the students of the University of North Carolina, commend you for your fight against political intervention in democratic eduction and pledge our full support in all fights for academic freedom."

The campus of North Carolina University has become more articulate in the matter of national defense of late. Evidence of this was the reception of boos and hisses which met appeaser Senator Gerald F. Nye, when he addressed a meeting here recently. Not only was the audience extremely hostile, but questions embarrassing to the America First speaker were flung at him from all corners of the auditorium.

NOV 26 1941

A highlight of the Nye meeting was when he was asked to repudiate Lindbergh's anti-Semitic speech at Des Moines, Ia. When Nye replied, "there is not an anti-Semitic hair in Charles Lindbergh's head," a good number of the disgusted audience rose in a body and quit the auditorium.

Views Accepted At One Time, Says Cocking

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 22 (AP)—Dr. Walter D. Cocking, again denying Gov. Eugene Talmadge's charge that he advocated racial co-education, said Friday that his views on higher education for Negroes had been set out in a report to the State Board of Regents.

He added that the regents unanimously adopted the report, presented to them in 1938, and appointed a committee to put the recommendations into effect.

Ousted by a revamped Board of Regents last July after a second hearing on the Governor's charges, Cocking now is a planning consultant for the federal government. He said he had not been offered reemployment, that if he were, he would make a reply. He added he had made no plans for selling his home here.

Necessary

The action of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools Thursday in dropping the University System of Georgia was necessary. Gov. Eugene Talmadge had brought educational standards in Georgia into clear question. The Georgia University System, by a unanimous vote of the delegates assembled in Louisville, was removed from the accredited lists of the Southern Association.

The decision will make no one happy. It is not pleasant to deal a great blow to the higher educational work of an entire state. The delegates in Louisville realized the seriousness of their decision. Their courage in the hard but necessary action is commendable.

The ruling of the Southern Association will take effect Sept. 1, 1942. Perhaps in the time interval remaining, something can be done to reestablish Georgia's standing. At present there appears to be no means of doing this by persuasion or pressure on Gov. Talmadge. The governor's comment on the association's action was that he hoped The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal were satisfied.

No one, surely, is satisfied with this action. But the citizens of Georgia now, surely, should be able to see their course toward satisfaction. May they act with the same kind of courage that motivated the members of the Southern Association.

The Yoke

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is meeting in Louisville. Among the problems confronting this group is the question of whether to remove the University of Georgia system from its list of accredited schools.

Earlier this week two students from the University of Georgia flew to Louisville and urged the association to be temperate in its decision. The two students, both members of the executive committee of the student body, were pleading for the students in Georgia, not for Gov. Talmadge. If Georgia schools are removed from the Southern Association's lists, the yoke will be borne by Georgia's students, not Georgia's Gene.

The blow to education which has been directed from the governor's office in Georgia is very serious. The burden which will fall on students' shoulders if the Southern Association strikes the Georgia system for its list will be very heavy.

We Must Clean House

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, official scholastic accrediting body, has temporarily dropped ten Georgia colleges from its accredited list. These institutions are units of the University of Georgia and include the University itself, the Georgia School of Technology and eight other colleges scattered over the state.

DEC 7 1941

The suspension from the accredited list need only be temporary, if Georgia sees to it that the undesirable conditions which have been exposed are eliminated prior to next year's meeting of the association. If this is done the association has promised the suspension will be lifted in time to avert any damage to the educational credits earned by students at the various schools.

The action by the association does not become effective until September 1, 1942, thus not interfering with the work done by students this year nor during next year's summer school sessions. And, if Georgia meets the requirements, by providing complete safeguards against future political interference with the operation of the University and its subsidiaries, the suspension will be lifted in time to avoid damage to scholastic credits earned next year.

The association has shown utmost consideration for the university in its action. Under conditions as they exist it was impossible, if the crediting agency was to retain any semblance of authority, to ignore the actions of Governor Talmadge in interfering with the conduct of the various institutions. But, by making the suspension only temporary, and by granting opportunity to remedy the evil before it has time to hurt the credits of any student, the association has left the door open and pointed the way to quick reinstatement.

Angry Citizens Loudly Berate Talmadge After School Action

DEC 6 1941

Governor's Political Interference Soundly Scored.

DEC 6 1941

By LUKE GREENE.

Shocked and embittered citizens of Georgia staged a virtual uprising yesterday as they grasped the real meaning of what had happened to their University System when it was ordered suspended Thursday by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools because of political interference by the Governor.

From Rabun Gap to Tybee Light the people spoke. The Governor did not appear at his office. The attaches said they did not know where he was.

The high points of what the people thought came in statements and dispatches to friends of the University System as follows:

Regent E. Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah: "For some time I have realized there was no chance of the Board of Regents remedying a situation which our Governor was at heart unwilling to have remedied as long as he thought that he had half a chance of gaining his point. Until Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman are re-employed, I say that we are still compromising and have still lost the fight."

Professor J. E. Mathis, superintendent emeritus of Americus city schools and former president of the Georgia Educational Association: "No such calamity has ever befallen the state." He added he held the Governor responsible for the present plight of the system.

John H. Moore, of Dahlonega, donor of Moore Hall at North Georgia College: "Had I been a member of the Southern Association of Colleges committee I would have felt honor bound to vote as they did."

R. H. Moore, department store manager at Dahlonega: "If removal from the accredited list becomes effective, our university degrees would be of little more value in the educational and business world than a high school certificate."

R. C. Meadows, son of B. R. Meadows, former trustee of the Dahlonega College: "The legislature should pass acts that would convince the world that the University System cannot again be used as salve for political ills."

Fred C. Jones, former legislator: "Everything possible should be done to keep the colleges on the accredited list."

Hubert Well, president of student body of Georgia Southwestern College at Americus: "We regret hearing that the University System has been suspended, but we have hopes that adjustments will be made so that by the next meeting we will be reinstated."

Miss Maxwell Williams, of Cordele, president of student government at the Georgia State Woman's College at Valdosta: "We regret very much the removal of the units of the University System of Georgia from the accredited list by the commission on higher education of the Southern Association of Colleges, but we hope the situation can be remedied and that next December our college and other units of the system will be put back on the accredited list."

Omer Franklin, city attorney of Valdosta: "I think it a very unfortunate affair and I exceedingly regret that the University System gets even a temporary suspension. I think that everything possible should be done to restore the system to the accredited list. Even a temporary suspension will create an uncertainty in the minds of prospective students for next year which may seriously affect the attendance."

"It Is Deplorable."

George Hains, at Augusta, former regent and now superior court solicitor: "I think that it is deplorable that we have been dropped. The University System has got to get this rating back. Students are not going to college unless they get their rating, and it is perfectly proper they should have it. I hope the rating will be restored."

Dr. G. Lombard Kelly, dean of the University of Georgia School of Medicine, at Augusta: "I don't concede to the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, or to any other accrediting agency, the authority to discredit any college or university or professional school on any basis except that of merit."

Attorney James M. Hull, of Augusta, former state president of the Georgia Alumni Society: "The responsibility for this deplorable situation does not rest alone on the Governor, but must be shared by those trustees who assisted him in carrying out his misguided and reprehensible plan. While damage has been done, every effort must be made to remedy the situation as soon as possible."

Henry J. Heffernan, president of the Augusta Georgia Alumni Association: "Members of Georgia Alumni Association of Augusta are greatly disappointed that the colleges have been dropped. Naturally this causes great concern among the alumni and we hope for early reinstatement."

Sanford Tired.

Tired from a week of fighting to save the University System, Chancellor S. V. Sanford returned to his office and immediately began preparations which he hopes will salvage the University Law School and the medical college at Augusta. The American Bar Association is scheduled to meet the latter part of this month, and the American Medical Association is expected to convene some time in the early part of next year.

The order of the accrediting association suspended 10 institutions in the University System, effective next September 1, but did not apply to the law and medical schools since they do not come under its jurisdiction.

It was pointed out the association followed precedent in setting the effective date at September 1. Nevertheless, the date of the Georgia primary next year falls just after this date, about September 11. There was no connection between the two dates, it was said.

The students, who were the most directly concerned, likewise expressed their opinions freely. Pretty Frances Lindfors, of Gainesville, and Roy Sanders Jr., of Atlanta, who represented University of Georgia students at the Louisville meeting, stepped from their train yesterday morning and forthwith declared the fight would have to be carried to the polls.

To Report.

These two student envoys said they were going back to their campus and report on what transpired in Louisville and leave it to the mass of students as to what should be done.

Although the two students would not say it themselves, they left the general impression that indorsement of a candidate for Governor who would work to restore the University System to its rightful place would not be out of the question.

Miss Lindfors and Sanders were noticeably upset by what had happened to their Alma Mater, but they expressed the opinion they still had a fighting chance inasmuch as the association had promised to reconsider the Georgia case again next December and, if it decided to lift the ban, to make its action retroactive to September 1, which would mean that no credits would be lost.

As he sat in his office in the Board of Regents, Chancellor Sanford talked of what constructive steps could be taken to restore morale in the state colleges. He construed the association's decision to mean a virtual probation.

"Very Hopeful."

"I am very hopeful that we are on a constructive road," he said. "We need to lift the morale of faculty members and students to the highest level consistent with the truth."

DEC 6 1941

He declared there was no need for students to be afraid to enroll in the colleges next year and added there was no reason for them to withdraw now. Observance of proper procedure in hiring and firing personnel rather than the reinstatement of ousted educators is the important factor in having the colleges' accredited standing restored, he said.

He explained that faculty appointments, under the regents' regulations, must be based on the recommendations of the head of the institution and on that of the chancellor.

In Athens, the university student publication, Red and Black, said editorially:

"A storm has come upon the horizon and every member of the crew should stand at his post so that we will come through this storm with our red and black flag flying high."

A statement from William Tate, dean of students, and Robert M. Strozier, associate dean, said "the intelligent and loyal student will realize that we have before us a problem which we must meet squarely and attempt to solve with all our resources."

ONE WORD MORE

DEC 6 1941

By RALPH McGILL.

MAN MAD AT HIS WIFE Reaction by Mr. Talmadge to the dropping of the University System from the accredited list was to the effect he hoped the Atlanta newspapers were satisfied.

This was very much like the reaction of a husband who does something wrong and can't find anyone but himself to blame for it—he always gets mad at his wife. He never blames himself for getting caught doing wrong.

The Atlanta newspapers had nothing to do with the firing of 10 members of the faculties of the various schools in the University System. They knew nothing about it until it was done.

The accrediting association declared they dropped the University System because of the unjustified and unwarranted political interference by the Governor.

Nowhere did I note any references to newspapers.

The newspapers didn't send one of the state's representatives to Athens and try to bribe a photographer to fake a picture showing one of the faculty men present at a supper given the first Negro boys drafted from Clarke county, and leaving the next day to serve their country.

The newspapers didn't send to Athens and take a Negro cook, working for one of the faculty members, to a tourist camp and tell him it was the Ku Klux Klan headquarters and make him sign a paper he was not allowed to read.

The newspapers didn't fire one of the faculty men because he had a cousin who worked against the Governor in the campaign a year ago.

The newspapers didn't fire another faculty man because he wouldn't okay the buying of inferior beef cattle for the University agricultural college at a high price from one of the political favorites.

The newspapers didn't have a thing to do with those, and other, reprehensible acts. Not a thing.

Those cynical and unwholesome acts explain—and they alone explain—why the university was dropped.

DEC 6 1941

DICTIONARY STUFF The newspapers had nothing to do with that famous and futile effort to find a dictionary and determine the meaning of the word "integrate." The newspapers of Georgia, daily and weekly, were able to show that the work of the schools had been integrated, so as to avoid duplication, and that the program recommended had been in effect for three years; and that there was no racial problem in it. And never had been.

The newspapers had nothing to do with the deliberate distortion of the word and of the real facts. The newspapers have had no part in the campaign of falsehood and calumny.

The newspapers had nothing to do with the promise made to the Board of Regents and the breaking of that promise.

The newspapers of the state deeply regret that the University System was dropped from the list of accredited schools. They regret that almost every newspaper and magazine of character in the United States has felt forced to comment unfavorably on political depravity in Georgia.

The newspapers of the state regret it. The Governor said he hoped the Atlanta newspapers were satisfied. They are not satisfied, and have been dissatisfied ever since the 10 men were fired from the faculties of the state University System. They have been dissatisfied ever since the integrity of education in the state was destroyed.

Can it be that all of us—the educators, the heads of universities, the editors of newspapers, the editors of magazines, the ministers, the teachers—are all out of step?

Are we all out of step but Jim?

GEORGIA

Gene Dropped It

DEC 8 - 1941

Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, scourge of furriners,* picked up another poker and found it hot. Six men convicted of taking part in nocturnal Ku Klux Klan floggings, three of them now on the chain gang, appealed for clemency. Gene's tender heart was touched. He expressed sympathy for "misguided" floggers, admitted that he had once been one himself. Promising a public hearing on the appeal, he reportedly advised attorneys for the floggers to "have some preachers up here to speak for these men."

Preachers came, at least a score, but with few pleas for mercy. Instead, most denounced flogging, compared the Klan to "the despicable Gestapo." One stocky pastor described his own flogging to unconsciousness. Except for an orthodox Jew, who paid tribute to the Ku Klux Klan, the show took an altogether wrong turn.

DEC 8 - 1941

* Last summer he ousted the dean of the College of Education, University of Georgia, and the president of Georgia Teachers College, on the charge that they advocated mingling blacks and whites in undergraduate classrooms (not so). He considers all extra-Georgians (and even Georgians who disagree with him) "furriners."

When young Assistant Solicitor Daniel Duke brandished two heavy, cleated leather lashes, crying out: "A man could kill a bull elephant with one of these," the Governor interrupted and took over the defense himself. Of the floggers he said, "Some of them thought they were doing the right thing. I have seen some pretty good people get misguided and cut the fool." At the conclusion of the hearing he remarked, "These men have been away from their families long enough."

But over the weekend Gene's fingers began to burn. Monday morning he announced that he would leave the floggers in prison.

Talmadge Loses Again

DEC 5 - 1941

MAYBE EUGENE TALMADGE, the "Fuehrer of Sugar Creek, as he is termed in an article by WALTER DAVENPORT in the current Collier's, is beginning to see what a shambles he is making of Georgia's system of higher education. The unanimous decision yesterday of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to drop 10 of the institutions in the Georgia University System from the association ought to beat some sense into GENE'S adamantine pate, if anything will.

Remember, gentle reader, those who are fighting TALMADGE on this issue are "furriners" and "nigger lovers," in case you hadn't heard. We're all supposed to believe that this is an accurate description of the 40-odd officials of Southern institutions who voted unanimously in September to drop the University of Georgia from the Southern University Conference because of TALMADGE'S policies, and of those who reached a similar decision yesterday with respect to the university and nine other institutions in the system.

Times-Dispatch

TALMADGE got distinctly frigid pedal extremities, on the approach of yesterday's session in Louisville, and he sought to convince the association by various stratagems that he would correct the injustices which had been done 10 dismissed members of Georgia college and university faculties. But the association was not hoodwinked by this, any more than informed Georgians were hoodwinked by the bogus evidence on the race question which was produced against DEAN COCKING and other Georgia educators, as an excuse for firing them.

What will "Our GENE" do now? "We accredit our own institutions in Georgia," said he some months ago, as he blusteringly indicated that he wasn't interested in whether some aggregation of "nigger-lovin' furriners" in Alabama or Tennessee refused to accredit Georgia schools. Not only was he indifferent to the verdict of such furriners, but he announced publicly that all salaries of professors in the Georgia University System would be cut in half, if the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools dropped the system from its accredited list. The association has dropped only 10 out of 16 institutions, which may give him an "out," since six have been omitted from the decision. At all events, the organization has taught this blatant rabble-rouser a lesson that he won't forget.

The colleges and universities of Mississippi lost some 1,400 enrollees the year after GOVERNOR BILBO began axing presidents and professors for political reasons in the early 1930's, and the institutions were dropped by several of the recognized accrediting organizations. A similar loss of enrollment is apt to be in store for the 10 Georgia institutions dropped yesterday by the Southern association. Why spend years getting a degree from a college, if that degree isn't going to be recognized by the standard accrediting agencies?

GEORGIA COLLEGES LOSE RATINGS IN ASSOCIATION

DEC 5 1941

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 4—(AP)—The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools late Thursday voted unanimously to drop 10 colleges of the University of Georgia system from its accredited lists.

Political interference in the university system by Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia was blamed for the action, taken upon recommendation of the association's executive committee.

The suspensions are effective Sept. 1, 1942.

DEC 5 1941

The 10 colleges dropped were the University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Georgia State College for Women, Georgia State Women's College, Georgia Teachers College, Georgia Southwestern, Middle Georgia College, North Georgia College, South Georgia College and West Georgia College.

The executive committee cited the removal of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the university and President Marvin S. Pittman, of Georgia Teachers College, by a revamped state board of regents on Talmadge's charges that the educators advocated coeducation of the races.

Then the committee said that after sifting all the evidence it was "forced to conclude that the University System of Georgia has been the victim of unprecedented and unjustifiable political interference."

In Atlanta, Gov. Talmadge issued this comment on the association's action:

"I hope that The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal are satisfied.

"I am proud that the degrees of the university students are not affected by the ruling and will not be."

He declined to go into further detail.

DEC 5 1941

The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal both have criticized the governor vigorously for his removal of faculty members.

CITIZEN DEFENSE BODY TO VOTE ON TALMADGE PLANS

Committee to Meet Tuesday; Three-Point Program Up for Action

The Citizens' Defense Committee of Georgia is scheduled to adopt a program for co-ordinating all the home defense efforts throughout the state when it meets here Tuesday.

Acting under an executive order of Governor Talmadge, the committee will absorb the older Council for National Defense, and will act upon other recommendations of the Governor. These include:

1. Appointment of Robert B. Troutman, Atlanta lawyer, as chairman of the committee to replace Mr. Troutman's legal associate, Hughes Spalding, who resigned last week from the chairmanship.

2. Appointment of Colonel A. T. Colley, of Washington, Ga., U. S. Army retired, as executive director of the defense group in place of Richard C. Job, director of the State Planning Board, who has been serving temporarily in that capacity.

3. Establishment of a headquarters in the Capitol or the State Office Building, with Basil Stockbridge, employe in the State Department of Education, as committee secretary in charge of sending all information and bulletins to the various county defense organizations.

Charles A. Collier, of Atlanta, vice chairman of the committee, has promised that Tuesday's meeting will serve to clarify the entire home defense picture, and will remove "the smoke from our eyes."

College Park Leads In Citizen Registration

College Park Monday became the first of the three south Fulton municipalities near the Municipal Airport to open big-scale registration of citizens for defense activities.

The registration is being held for white people at the College Park Woman's Club and the City Hall, while Negroes are registering at the Friendship Baptist Church. Registration will continue all week from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. to select air raid wardens, auxiliary firemen, policemen, first aid workers, etc.

Georgia Negro Women Organize for Defense

Negro women of Georgia are being organized to do their part in home defense under direction of the Negro branch of the Citizens Defense Committee, it was announced from Albany, where the committee met Saturday.

A general meeting, to be attended by representatives of the race from every county, will be held in the near future. Those attending the Saturday meeting were:

M. Agnes Jones, Atlanta; Esther T. Holley, Albany; Hattie Reese, Albany; Annie B. Clark, Cordele; Blanche T. Johnson, Macon; F. M. Stanley, Camilla Weems, P. H. Stone, A. Orsot, A. H. Gordon, and Benjamin F. Hubert, all of Savannah; and J. W. Holley, Albany.

Talmadge's Latest Admission

[Roanoke Times]

IN THE course of a hearing on a petition for the pardon of six members of the Ku-Klux Klan who had been convicted and sent to prison for the flogging of union mill workers four years ago, Georgia's renowned though not so highly respected Governor, the Hon. Gene Talmadge, admitted that he had once participated in the illegal flogging of a Negro. "Maybe I wasn't in such bad company, after all," he added.

Commenting on the Governor's admission, the Washington Post observes: "Considering the kind of people who become heads of governments nowadays, the confession is much less shocking than it might have been a generation ago. It will certainly surprise no one who is acquainted with Governor Talmadge's psychology and general sociological outlook."

The public has ceased to be surprised at anything Gene Talmadge does or says. He seems bent on proving to the satisfaction of everybody that the voters of Georgia made an awful mistake and a sad mess of affairs when they returned him to the office of Governor in the last State election. His actions have brought sore discredit on the Commonwealth and on the office that he occupies. The revelation that he once took part in a flogging episode, though shocking, is not so surprising as it might otherwise be. The man seems to be capable of anything except behaving himself and administering his office capably and with dignity.

TALMADGE-COCKING AFFAIR

Time Table of Events Leading Up to University's Suspension

DEC 5 1941

Following is a time table of events which led up yesterday to the suspension of the University System of Georgia by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools meeting in Louisville, Ky.

May 30 — Board of Regents meets in Athens. Governor asks that Dr. Walter D. Cocking and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman not be re-elected. Members vote 8 to 4 not to rehire the educators. Board then recesses, meets back and reconsiders its previous action. Despite protests of the Governor, board orders hearing for two men. Hearing is set for June 16.

June 16—Dr. Cocking is re-elected by a vote of 8 to 7 after a hearing. Numerous nationally known educators appear in his defense. Case of Dr. Pittman postponed until July 14.

June 20—The Governor demands resignation of Chairman Sandy Beaver, of Gainesville; Regent Miller S. Bell, of Milledgeville, and Regent E. Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah, on grounds there are too many members on the board who are graduates of the University of Georgia. Governor cites 1937 statute as basis for his demand .

June 25—Attorney General Ellis Arnall rules that three regents hold their posts legally after Chairman Beaver asks for opinion.

June 26—The Governor calls for and accepts resignations of Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, and Judge Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin. Beaver and Hunter refuse to quit.

June 28—The Governor orders rehearing for Dr. Cocking, setting it for July 14, date of Pittman's hearing.

DEC 5 1941

July 12—Athens photographer makes affidavit that one of the Governor's agents, Robert F. Wood, offered him $50 to fake a likeness of Dr. Cocking in a picture of an Athens draft-board meeting with Negro draftees. Governor also orders Wood to "round up your crowd" at Statesboro.

July 14—This is the date of the famous "trial." Governor first swears in Judge Joe Ben Jackson, of Gray; Scott Candler, of Decatur, and James S. Peters, of Manchester, as new members of the board. Board refuses to recognize Miller Bell. Members adjourn to house of representatives and with the Governor directing from sidelines, Peters "prosecutes" Cocking and Pittman. Board then votes 8 to 5 to oust the two men. At an executive session following the trial three more educators are discharged—Vice Chancellor Curtis Dixon, R. E. Davis, of Agricultural Extension Service, and Professor P. D. Bush, of North Georgia College at Dahlonega.

July 16—Committee from Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools named to launch investigation into Georgia situation.

DEC 5 1941

July 21—Marion Smith, Atlanta attorney, flays the Governor's "dictator methods" in speech in Atlanta.

August 11—Board meets in Tifton and fires five more educators he ordered swept from the libraries of the state because they were not fit for people to read.

Chairman Beaver was not outwardly perturbed by the decision in Louisville. At the bus terminal, just before he left for home, he argued that if the board lived up to its laws and regulations the association would meet again next December and take away the suspension, making its action retroactive to September 1. This meant, he said, that there would be no time when the accredited rating of the University System would be void.

DEC 5 1941

It all hinges, he said, on what happens between now and next December.

—C. M. Destler, professor of history; Jane Franseth, assistant professor of laboratory schools, and Mamie Veazy, dean of women, all of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro; J. A. Evans, administrative assistant in the Agricultural Extension Service, and Mrs. L. E. Mize, market supervisor of Extension Service.

September 8—Board meets and authorizes that the ousted Statesboro educators be left off the budget.

September 18—Cocking gets job as consultant in program planning for the Federal Security Agency in Washington.

October 11—Board meets in Atlanta and Chairman Beaver reads statement, adopted by board, questioning the authority of any outside organization or committee to inquire into the action of the regents.

DEC 5 1941

October 13—Southern University Conference meeting in Birmingham drops University of Georgia from its approved list.

October 15—Students from University of Georgia, approximately 1,000 strong, march on state capitol, "booing" Governor and demanding an end to political interference.

November 1—The Governor reads statement to Board of Regents saying he realizes he has run afoul of best practices and asks board to do whatever is proper to save University System. Later denies he has recanted from his former position.

November 3-4 — Investigating committee of Southern Association meets in Atlanta. Committee om Board of Regents appeals to ommittee to be lenient, promising there will be no political interference in the future, and finally pledges to do anything the board names to get back in good standing.

November 19—With the Governor repeatedly declaring he will never stand for Cocking to come back to University System, seven members of board meet and authorize Chancellor S. V. Sanford to rehire all educators who were discharged irregularly. Regent L. W. (Chip) Robert concurs in this action at a midnight meeting at the airport. The Governor used his influence to keep members away from the board meeting and attempted to rule it illegal.

GENE CLAIMS NEGRO PRAISE

ATLANTA,—Governor Eugene Talmadge Monday made public a letter he received from a Negro educator who praised the chief executive for his "magnificent defense" of separate educational programs for whites and negroes in Georgia.

J. W. Holley, president of the Georgia Normal and Agricultural College at Albany, referred to the ouster of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia and President Marvin S. Pittman of the Georgia Teachers' College—educators accused of advocating racial co-education—said:

"I will answer fully and effectively the adverse criticism that comes from my own people in Atlanta and the Northern papers and magazines."

The governor immediately replied by inviting the negro to attend the next board of regents' meeting at Tifton Aug. 11, saying "I want them to hear from you."

Survey of Negro Schools Planned by Regent Board

TIFTON, (AP)—University regents Monday called for a survey to determine improvements needed in Negro colleges but failed to agree on a proposal giving a Negro college president funds to tour the state and explain the regents' attitude on education of Negroes.

AUG 12 1941

J. W. Holley, prehident of the Georgia Normal and Agricultural College at Albany, for whom the expense money was proposed, told the board creation of a "reasonable program" for the state's three Negro colleges would "hurl back into their teeth of those holier-than-thou critics their words that the governor and regents oppose Negro education."

FIVE MORE FIRED

The regents announced five additional dismissals from the university system and selected Dr. A. M. Gates, as successor to Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, who was denied re-appointment as head of the Teachers College at Statesboro after Governor Eugene Talmadge charged him with undue political activity.

Without immediately announcing reasons, the board Monday disclosed it had dispensed with the social science department of the college at Statesboro; Miss Jane Jane Franseth, assistant instructor in social sciences and Miss Mamie Veazey, dean of women of East Hall, Statesboro College; Miss Leila R. Mize; extension worker; J. A. Evans, administrative assistant with the extension service.

Regent James Peters introduced a motion calling for $500 expense money for the proposed tour by Holley.

AUG 12 1941

Chairman Sandy Beaver recommended further consideration of the motion and suggested that Holley confer with Savannah and Fort Valley college heads and offer an agenda for the board's consideration.

GENE SAYS NO

A shouted "no" came from Governor Talmadge at this suggestion. The executive said there was "Rosenwald influence in those other two." He previously had charged the Rosenwald fund sponsored racial co-education.

Chairman Beaver urged Peters to withdraw his motion and said he would name him chairman of

Jones Jurors Laud Policies Of FDR, Gene

[Special to The Telegraph]

GRAY, Oct. 22.—Jones county grand jurors expressed a distinct approval of the governor's conduct of the affairs of their state and of the president's international policy as they concluded their three-day session Wednesday.

In their report, which was made after they had heard testimony which resulted in three indictments, the following comment was made:

"We wish to commend our governor, the Hon. Eugene Talmadge for his efforts and success in the management of the affairs of the state and for the reduction of the indebtedness of the state and for the payment of back salaries and his advocacy of better pay for school teachers and for the setting up of more funds for the public welfare and for his interest toward the development of our natural resources and preservation of wildlife.

OCT 25 1941

"And especially do we commend him for the action he has taken in stamping out social equality, Communism and the teaching of social equality in the state schools and in the appointment of a Jones county man, the Hon. J. B. Jackson, as a member of the board of regents to assist in the splendid work in stamping out this growing evil.

OCT 25 1941

'McCain Can't Make Dummy Out of Me,' Gene Asserts

ATLANTA, (AP) — Governor Eugene Talmadge took issue Tuesday with a suggestion that the state's chief executive should not be a member of the board of regents.

"The governor," Talmadge said in a statement, "is the only one on the board of regents who is amenable to the people. The governor is the only one who is put on the board of regents by the vote of the people."

President J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott College, recommended in a recent address at Griffin that the governor be excluded from the board. He said he advocated this and other steps to reorganize the composition of the board so that the regents would be free of politics.

In his statement, Talmadge asserted that "McCain and his crowd holler, 'dummies! stooges!' but the only thing that is hurting McCain and the rest who tried to fool the people of Georgia is that they could not make a dummy out of me."

ATHENS, Aug. 19 — Gus Bernd, political science senior from Macon, has been chosen president of the University of Georgia Society for the Promotion of Better Government, which has as its immediate aim the destruction of Talmadgeism in Georgia.

The organization was formed over the week-end. In addition to Mr. Bernd, officers are Peter Wheeler of Crawford, first vice president; G. Knight Jr., Sale City, second vice president; Jimmy Sanders, Columbus, secretary; Jim Paulk, Miami, Fla., treasurer; Daniel Magill Jr., Athens, publicity director; Shelor Rodgers, Dublin, parliamentarian, and Billy Dixon, Macon, sergeant at arms

Legislature More Liberal

Whites Gobbled Up Most Of Rosenwald Fund; Negroes Suffer

ALBANY, Ga. (ANP) — The "white is white and black is black, and ne'er the twain shall meet in these schools" advocate, President J. W. Holley, Georgia Normal College, in an open letter to the Atlanta Daily World, last week, said the Georgia Board of Regents had been cutting appropriations for Negro education ever since it took over affairs in 1933. Stating that it had reached $105,500 in 1932, he revealed that the slash had brought it down to the present level of less than $50,000.

Pointing out that Negro schools received more State funds when the Legislature handled appropriations, Holley, whom Governor Talmadge singled out as being "the only Negro in the State who stood for racial separation in Negro schools," declared that $6,000,000 was spent for white schools, while only $70,000 was allowed for the Negro schools in the past five years.

The United States Supreme Court's decision in the Lloyd Gaines case provides that Negroes be furnished equal educational opportunities as whites within a State. How this is to be done is left to the discretion of the States. One way would be to provide separate schools, and the other, to allow Negroes to enter the white schools.

President Holley avers that the fight to obtain equal facilities for Georgia Negroes in the field of education began in 1917 and is not connected with the political feud going on in the white university system and with the Governor.

Reviewing the facts, it was discovered that in 1917, during Governor Hugh M. Dorsey's administration, the Georgia Legislature was made to provide funds for a normal training school for Negro teachers. Later, in 1922, an A. and M. school for Negroes was established at Forsyth. The Legislature gradually increased the annual maintenance fund of these two schools and Georgia State College from 1922 up to 1932, when the Board of Regents was created.

Practically all the money contributed last year by the General Education Board to Georgia, and more than half of the Rosenwald fund went into white units. The chancellor in his annual report said, "The Negro units will have to depend upon outside sources for their support. I am giving them every dollar I can spare from white units." The State auditor's report released August 2, shows the State paid to the regents more than $2,000,000 during the fiscal year just closed, and less than 1-20th of that amount went to Negroes.

Holley sums up the situation by saying that as long as Negro schools had access to the Governor and Legislature, their appropriations were increased each year. They would have been $8,000,000 to the good if the regents had given the appropriation they were getting when the board took charge. As it was, however, Negro units last three quarters of a million dollars in annual appropriations. The fight is, Holley further declared, to get the Negro units in a position where the State can see what is not being done, and do something worthwhile. Having something to do with the creation of the regents board, Holley feels that the units could have had the House and Senate committee on reorganization of the university and its branches, exclude Negro units from the system, but they had no idea that such treatment would be accorded them.

State 'Machine' Can Be Ousted, McCain Asserts

Urges No Governor Be Allowed To Run University System.

GRIFFIN, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP)—Predicting that the Governor "and his machine can be ousted completely on the issues that will be clearly drawn," President J. R. McCain urged today that no Georgia governor ever be given a hand in running the state's University System.

McCain, head of Agnes Scott College, Decatur church school, recently criticized by the Governor, told the Kiwanis club "that if the Board of Regents which administers the University System could be established on a nonpartisan basis, it will be possible to continue the excellent progress which has been made."

Dr. McCain has defended former Dean Walter D. Cocking, of the University of Georgia, who was ousted by the regents, 10 to 5, after a hearing on Talmadge's charges that Cocking advocated racial co-education.

Wipe Slate Clean.

"While I have no doubt that the Governor and his machine can be ousted completely on the issues that will be clearly drawn," says McCain, "I do not like to think of another political clique (even though a reform one) being in charge. It would seem essential that the slate be wiped clean, and it would be necessary to repeal the reorganization act of 1931. This automatically would bring to a close the terms of service of all the present regents. In many cases it would be regrettable but it seems to me essential."

In a new regent set-up, he said the Governor should not serve as a member, neither should he be represented by any member of the board.

The school president asserted that the Governor "is desperately clutching at straws to justify his untenable position," and cited Talmadge's recent reference to a trip Agnes Scott girls made to Tuskegee Institute, Negro school in Alabama, in 1935.

Inspect Tuskegee.

"A group of Agnes Scott girls visited Tuskegee," the president said. "It was during spring holidays and the college had disbanded for the vacation time. Each girl got written permission from home before going. They stayed in Dorothy hall, which is run by Tuskegee for white guests as exclusively as any hotel is operated. They inspected the college as thousands of other white people from all parts of the United States and from most foreign lands have done. They ate and slept entirely apart from Negro quarters or people. There was no 'mixing and mingling' in any way which would be objectionable to you or to any other parent.

"As the Governor and some of his associates present their version of the matter, it is erroneous in almost every detail. They say 'I had the girls to go.' This is wholly false. They say they stayed 'three or four days.' They were not there a full day. They claim that the trip was in some way to curry favor with some group or board. There was never a more untrue statement or inference."

Cites Inconsistency.

Citing "the inconsistency of the Governor in the matter of race relations," Dr. McCain asked, "Why does not the Governor talk about an indisputable case of intermingling in his own family?

"During the first Cocking trial, behind closed doors, he admitted that one of his daughters went to an interracial meeting and ate with Negro men and women and thought it all right. When the Governor delivered the commencement address at the excellent Negro college at Fort Valley recently, he mixed and mingled quite as much as has been done by white people on other college campuses for Negroes, so far as I am aware. Personally, I think he was quite justified in being present at the exercises and giving encouragement in the good work that is being done at Fort Valley."

"Agnes Scott is one of the most conservative—possibly 'old fashioned,' some would say—among the 1,700 colleges of the United States. In common with all other fair-minded people, we rejoice in the amicable relations which have been maintained between the whites and Negroes in the south, and we are anxious to have these continued. We think this best can be done if the Negroes are given a chance to improve their situation with fair economic conditions, with reasonable educational opportunities, and with a sense of pride in what their race as Negroes can accomplish.

Social Life Distinct

"On the other hand, Agnes Scott has always believed that greater progress can be made by both Negroes and whites, if their educational and social life are distinctly separate. So far as I know, I have reason to believe that every college for white people and every college for Negroes has the same understanding. If there were no statutes or constitutional provisions on the subject, I am confident that both whites and blacks would oppose the educating of the races together or mingling in social life."

McCain charged "our colleges and other institutions of higher education for the state of Georgia are as completely in the hands of a dictator as are the schools of Germany and Russia or Japan. Any individual of the entire university system might be ignominiously fired at the mere suggestion of the Governor."

He predicted that accredited institutions of the state would be dropped by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and other standardizing agencies, recalling as precedents the inquiries into the Mississippi and Louisiana schools.

GEORGIA NEGROES SAY GOVERNOR TALMADGE RACE'S BEST FRIEND

War Fever Spread of Entire State; Blackout Is In Progress

THREE NEGROES NAMED ON COMMITTEE

DEC 27 1941

MACON, Ga.—Rising to the supreme effort in submerging all racial and political partisanship, over 4,000 defense minded Georgians gathered in the auditorium here Sunday and cheered Governor Talmadge as the best Governor in Georgia's history and potentially the best friend the Negro has ever had during appointment of a Statewide committee on national defense.

Benjamin F. Hubert, president, Georgia State college; J. W. Holley, president, Georgia Normal school, and Benjamin Davis Sr., former Atlanta Republican leader, were named by Talmadge as members of the committee.

Holley is regarded as being very close to Governor Talmadge. Davis is former National Republican Committeeman of the State of Georgia and father of the noted barrister of the same name, who successfully defended Angelo H. Herndon, condemned to serve on a Georgia chain gang.

Georgia Verdict

In bright red pajamas Lawrence W. ("Chip") Robert Jr. popped out of a plane in Atlanta one midnight last month, ushed with seven other members of Georgia's Board of Regents to a near-by building, there convened a special meeting of the board. Purpose: a last desperate effort to save Georgia's academic reputation. The regents hurriedly voted to rehire two educators they had previously voted to fire at the behest of Governor Eugene Talmadge (Dr. Walter D. Cocking and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman—TIME, July 21; July 28), then let Regent Robert resume his trip.

DEC 15 1941

The maneuver failed. Governor Talmadge challenged the regents' action on the ground that they lacked a quorum, vowed that the dismissed educators would never come back. Last week, despite a penitent appeal by the regents, the Southern Association of Colleges & Secondary Schools, official accrediting agency, decided to black-list ten colleges in Georgia's University System.

Having made a thorough investigation the association held that Governor Talmadge had packed the board, that his university system had been made "the victim of unprecedented and unjustifiable political interference." It ruled that students' credits at University of Georgia, Georgia Tech and eight other State colleges would not be recognized by other universities after next Sept. 1.

Already dropped by the Southern University Conference and the Association of American Universities, the University of Georgia also is being investigated by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business and the American Medical Association's Council on Medical Education and Hospitals.

That Man Talmadge

Our esteemed contemporary down Richmond way, The Times-Dispatch, thinks the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools has taught Georgia's Eugene Talmadge a lesson he won't forget. We hasten to disagree.

DEC 16 1941

Talmadge has not been taught a lesson. He wouldn't take to learnin' that fast. The lesson has been taught the people of the good State of Georgia for putting such a critter in the Governor's chair.

The Southern Association had no choice but to drop 10 Georgia colleges from its accredited list because of Talmadge's deliberate and studied interference in the State's university system. This may faze the furriner-hating Governor, may tweak his conscience, but we are inclined to doubt it. What does a little thing like wiping out the credits of 10 colleges mean to a min like "Our Gene," who can just set up an accredited system of his own?

It is no less than tragic that conscientious educators and youth in search of untainted knowledge must suffer for the antics of one of the South's prize political packages.

Yet the association's action may prove beneficial to the State made famous by peaches and notorious by Talmadge. It may stir Georgians to deeper political thought. It may lead them to eliminate the quirk in their election laws that makes election of men like Talmadge possible.—Roanoke World-News.

THE TRUE SOUTH

Last Summer Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia reorganized the State Board of Regents in order to get rid of Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia's College of Education. Dean Cocking is a distinguished educator who seems to have offended the Governor, first by being born in Iowa, second by being somewhat less than antediluvian in his theories of education. The Governor accused him, and still accuses him, of being "in favor of co-education of the blacks and the whites." In the North, students of all races do attend many of our colleges without unpleasant results. In the South public opinion undeniably stands for segregation.

OCT 16 1941

But it is now apparent that something other than what Governor Talmadge calls "social equality" was at stake in Georgia. This week the Southern University Conference, with representatives of thirty-three out of forty-one of the South's leading colleges and universities in attendance, voted with no dissent to drop the University of Georgia from its rolls. Specifically, it was held that the Georgia institution could not be in harmony "with the ideals and aspirations of the colleges and universities of this Conference as long as its board of control disregards the fundamental concept of academic tenure and the basic principles of professional administration of an institution of higher learning."

Education in the South has suffered because the South, for historical reasons, had little money to spare. In recent years great progress has been made in spite of this handicap. The Southern Conference rightly disregarded the fake issue in Georgia and dealt with the real issue. Its action

That Red-Suspendered Clown

GEORGIA'S gift to education, GOVERNOR EUGENE TALMADGE, hasn't cut all the salaries of the University of Georgia faculty in half, as yet, as he threatened to do if that institution was taken off the accredited list of educational agencies, but he is just enough of a bullheaded exhibitionist to do it, now that the Southern University Conference has struck the institution from the list, by a unanimous vote. Congratulations should go to the conference for its refusal to be intimidated by the red-suspendered clown who sits in the gubernatorial chair in Atlanta.

Contrary to popular impression hereabouts, not five, but ten, members of faculties in the Georgia University system, have been ousted in recent months by TALMADGE and his stooge board of regents, who are bringing to the State the same sort of advertising which BILBO brought to Mississippi a decade ago and the SCOPES "monkey trial" brought to Tennessee five years before that.

TALMADGE professes to believe that the Southern University Conference is composed of persons who, in the majority, "are in favor of coeducation of the blacks and the whites." We say "professes to believe," because of course he doesn't believe it. He is merely trying to establish some sort of plausible "out" for the benefit of his semi-literate following, which doesn't know anything about the conference, and probably never heard of it, until this issue arose. If "GENE" tells them the organization believes in educating blacks and whites under the same roof, they accept it. The students at the university know better, as is evidenced by their strongly worded petition to TALMADEG.

It is only too obvious that the University of Georgia and the other 15 State-supported institutions in that Commonwealth are going to be dropped by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, when that body meets to consider TALMADGE'S antics, just as the university was dropped by the Southern University Conference, which has no jurisdiction over the other 15 Georgia colleges. In other words, the Georgia University System, which had been making real progress during the past decade, and was on the way to genuine accomplishment, has been dealt a terrific blow by a cheap politician who is simply interested in his own political advancement. It is a tragedy, not only for Georgia, but for the South as a whole.

"We Know The Facts"

Students of the University of Georgia Tuesday night met in Woodruff Hall on the university campus and planned a protest parade to Atlanta. The next day approximately 600 students appeared before the governor's mansion and gave forceful evidence that Eugene Talmadge's acts are not being ignored, indeed, are bitterly resented, by Georgia's undergraduates.

This protest was no small gathering of students, a "college prank," such as students occasionally engage in "for the fun of it."

The Georgia students resent greatly Gov. Talmadge's acts regarding the shuffling of the Board of Regents of the Georgia university system and the removal of Dean Cocking.

Perhaps such a mass meeting is not actually productive in tangible results. Obviously Gov. Talmadge is not easily influenced, by reasoning or by physical display. Perhaps to some persons who saw the more than 100 automobiles packed with students en route to the Georgia capital the protest was "great sport." Doubtless many students did find the event something of a holiday, since it was reported that professors were "not calling rolls" in the university classes that day.

But, underlying all the shouting, all the excitement which—praise be!—is a mark of youth's courage and independence, there was the strong, the silent, fact that here were the persons who would suffer from the governor's acts. Students are the persons who would feel the blow if the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, the accrediting agency, should, in a few weeks, wipe the university system of Georgia from its membership as did the Southern University Conference.

The petition which the students of Georgia presented to the governor—through an aid, since the governor was "not at home"—was sound, simple and unemotional. It spoke eloquently in plain language: "We, as the students of the university, feel that we know the facts and should know if such things have been practiced. We honestly state to the governor and to the state that no racial equality has been taught, advocated or practiced on this campus. . . ."

OCT 17 1941

This was the governor's primary reason for beginning his "purifying" actions. Here are persons who know what has been taught. Will Gov. Talmadge ignore these facts? Will his lack of understanding cause him to continue to ignore the course of reason?

I WRITE AS I SEE

By ARTHUR HUFF FAUSET

DEMOCRACY EVEN IN GEORGIA

BY a unanimous vote, the members of the southern conference of college football teams of which the University of Georgia was one, voted to expel that university from its list. The reason? Because Governor Talmadge of Georgia, and his hand-picked Board of Regents, dismissed a man of the college whose real crime had been to encourage higher education for all Americans, including Negroes, and to foster the use of texts which throw light on interracial and inter-cultural conditions in our country.

FAUSET

The blow came particularly hard to the students of the University of Georgia. This year their team is one of the most formidable in the country. It might have been in line for Rose Bowl honors; but what self-respecting college will invite for such high honors a college group which is on the blacklist of its own conference?

YOUTH REVOLTS

The reaction of these students is most interesting. One would have expected that they would be very bitter against the conference committee which voted to expel the college. Instead their bitterness is directed solely against Governor Talmadge. The newspapers reported that 1500 of them gathered on the campus and burned their president in effigy. The old lynch spirit couldn't help being revived, but at least for once it is employed against the true representative of the forces of evil and not against one of the victims of these forces.

The two incidents — the conference committee's action and the students' reaction—are most significant, especially in times like these. When the South, and notably Georgia, can give a demonstration of this kind it means that Nazism is going to meet every bit as much resistance in America as it has been meeting in the Soviet Union. Thank God for that.

BEWARE THE FIFTH COLUMN!

On the other hand, however, we must always remember that Russia has not been plagued with a Fifth Column. The Trotskyites, Bucharinites, Radinites, etc., and all their ilk had passed off the scene quite some time before the great crisis. Even with all that we are forced to observe that Russia alone still may not be able to prevail against the Nazis.

Here in America, the Quislings abound. Talmadge of Georgia is only one of thousands of his kind. The forces of right in our country are determined and powerful; but the evil forces also are very formidable.

AMERICANS WANT DEMOCRACY

That is why I keep pointing out to you that we as Negroes must force the issue against Fascism. Insist on scrapping the Neutrality Act. Insist on a guarantee to Russia that if Japan dares to attack her in the East, we will deal with Japan. Insist on all-out aid to Russia and the creation of a second front even if we have to supply the soldiers who are to form that front. Insist on closing the mouth of any individual who breathes anti-Semitism and any other kind of hatred of race or culture.

The fight against Talmadge is the fight against Germany. When we see the youth and intellectuals of Georgia standing shoulder to shoulder with us against these men who menace democracy we should take heart and go all-out to place America in position to crush the Nazi dragon.

TALMADGE-COCKING AFFAIR

Daily World

"Who Speaks For Whom?"

56K

By JESSE O. THOMAS

There seems to have developed some conflicting opinions on the part of certain segments of Negro leadership in the State of Georgia, stimulated by an alleged address made by Dr. J. W. Holley, president of Georgia Normal and Agricultural College at Albany before the Board of Regents some six years ago.

Excerpts from the address were included in a speech made by Governor Talmadge over the radio a few days ago.

Holley's alleged philosophy of education and the position Negroes should occupy in American culture do not coincide apparently with the philosophy of some of his contemporaries. It is important to understand for whom Holley spoke and whom he essays now to speak for. As a citizen of the United States and a taxpayer, "being of age," he has a right to express his opinion concerning any subject about which he feels he has enough information or intelligence to speak as long as he makes it clear that he is registering his personal opinion. In any connection where he assumes to speak for the race or to advise concerning the type of educational opportunities shall be afforded Negro children without consultation with those in whose name he speaks and whose fortune his speech is calculated to condition, he moves out on thin ice.

According to the press, the President of Georgia Normal has been invited and we are sure he will accept the invitation, to speak before the Board of Regents in the early part of August, Since he is scheduled to speak in a representative capacity before the Board of Regents on the subject under discussion, it would seem that other Negro leaders would want to have their position stated to the same Board.

The executive committee of the State Teachers Association ought to ascertain whether or not this proposed address of Dr. Holley is to be made in the name of the Negro teachers of the state and to the extent it does or does not represent the position of the majority of the teachers in the state. This fact ought to be made clear to the Board of Regents: No one individual "it does not make any difference how white his hair is" has a right to speak in a representative capacity concerning the program of education which shall be provided for the Negro youth of this or any other state, without having been commissioned or authorized so to do by the intelligent majority of the people most concerned. In addition to an expression from the Negro teachers of the state, Negro parents and Negro citizens of the state should be interested in the program of education which the state shall foster on behalf of Negro youth.

On the question about which there is obviously such widespread disagreement, some means of collaboration or clearance would seem necessary. Whatever is the position of the State Teachers Association or the majority of Negro teachers in the state on the subject, as well as the position of leadership in other professions and vocations, it should be made clear at the next meeting of the Board of Regents where the President of the Georgia Normal is scheduled to speak. The Board of Regents ought to be clear in its mind as to who has what opinion on the question of the education of Negro youth of this state.

GA. DICTATOR WOULD BURN SCHOOL BOOKS IN NEW RACE PROGRAM

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 7—Tossing the United States Constitution into the gutter, Governor Eugene Talmadge today took a drastic step in his campaign to "nazify" the people and state of Georgia by imitating Adolf Hitler's racial theories.

The Dixie Dictator announced that he was going to ask the State Legislature to pass a resolution ordering that all books in Georgia schools and libraries which advocated racial co-education, be burned.

Talmadge will be a candidate for the United States Senate next year, where, if elected, he is expected to press for the national adoption of his Nazi racial theories.

The public burning of books by world famous scientists which professed theories contrary to the Nazi concept was one of the most spectacular expressions of the early Hitler regime.

Talmadge read several excerpts from a book entitled "We Sing America," telling of white and colored children attending school together, playing together, becoming friends and sharing a sandwich.

"We are going to get rid of that book and all books of that kind," he said today. "I'm going to turn them over to the State Legislature and ask them to pass a resolution to burn them."

By DEAN GORDON B. HANCOCK
(For ANP)

Terrible Talmadge

Even Georgia deserves better advertising than it is getting through its hillbilly governor, Talmadge! Just as the South had shown signs of recovering from the shock of shame for its Ben Tillman, Hoke Smith, Cole Blease, Tom Watson, Vardaman and Heflin, Talmadge fares forth to further afflict a region which in many ways evinces signs of moral regeneration. It is true that in Georgia, if anywhere we would expect the rise of a Talmadge; but we were not prepared to endure the like of the present governor. Talmadge is a tragedy, a misfortune and a calamity combined!

HANCOCK

That the students of the University of Georgia had the courage to repudiate him by burning him in effigy is one of the healthiest signs of the times. It was heartening when the deposed board of regents refused to sanction his high-handed dismissal of Dean Cocking; but it was doubly heartening when the students revolted against the Hitlerization of Georgia's educational system. Some weeks ago we rejoiced in the fact that though Georgia had a pigmy governor, it had giants in the deposed board of regent and in those who sympathized with them. The demonstration of the students in the University of Georgia is further proof that moral knighthood still flowers in Georgia and that in spite of its handicaps Georgia's heart is on the right side.

One of the salutary aspects of the Talmadge episode in Georgia is the unmasking of prejudice. At best prejudice is a hideous moral disease and it becomes doubly dangerous because it is insidious in its ramifications. Once prejudice is brought into the open to a head—even the most prejudiced become ashamed of it. The shame of race prejudice has never before shocked the moral sensibilities of Georgia and the nation as when Georgia's terrible Talmadge shows a clubfoot from beneath the toga of gubernatorial prominence. A glimpse of prejudice may not be revolting; but once it has been glaringly exposed to the astonished gaze, its hideousness becomes its own condemnation. Governor Talmadge has indirectly rendered the cause of race relations a great service in that he has dragged into the open one of the most hideous skeletons in the "closet" of the country.

Pain is one of the greatest of life's blessings ; for without it death would come upon us unawares, and would leave us no chance to fight for our lives! But pain gives warning, and through its cruel ministry, life is saved and prolonged. So with the uncovered club-foot of evil, it is ugly to behold, but it reveals the dangerous as prejudice veiled beneath the toga of social amenities. When we add to the courageous actions of the deposed board of regents and the heroic demonstrations of the students the action of the Association of Southern Colleges in revising downward the rating of the Georgia educational system Hitlerized by Talmadge, we get further proof that there are giants in Georgia and in the South. It is always good for Negroes to remember that all of the whites of the South have not bowed their knees to the Baal of race prejudice. The unbowed are the leaven that will work until the brotherhood of man and not racial fanaticism will actuate and motivate the lives and endeavors of this curse-ridden region of this nation.

The infrequency of these political freaks is a source of great encouragement to serious students of the color question. Georgia's terrible Talmadge stands almost alone in his blighted pose before the gaze of the civilized world. His tribe is doomed to extinction. His line is nearly at an end. His role will become more and more inglorious and the promise of the students to meet him at the ballot box is ominous indeed. Negro baiting and Negro hating once were prevalent and popular; but today they are popular no more. This is a healthy sign. The moral regeneration of the South as pictured by the heroic stand of the students of the University of Georgia proves further that this is a great country. Its democracy is worth fighting for and if need be, dying for.

Under Hitlerism Talmadge would be a miniature hero; under democracy he is a moral and political humpty-dumpty! The encouraging thing about the whole matter is that not alone in Georgia, but throughout the land there are those of the younger college generations who abhor political clairvoyants and tricksters, who base their case for political preferment on the wicked appeal to race antagonisms.

WALTER CHIVERS SAYS:

Answers Holley

By WALTER R. CHIVERS

Last Sunday's edition of the Atlanta Daily WORLD reproduced under the caption "What Our Readers Say" an open letter to the editor by a young Negro soldier in reference to President Holley's publicly expressed philosophy of education for Negro youth. The fundamental significance of this letter lies in the fact that it is a Negro youth's answer to an educator of youth. It is to me the most meaningful statement that I have read about this entire unfortunate affair.

CHIVERS

The letter reveals how far apart modern educated Negro youth and educated Negro Educational administrators can be and too often are. This is particularly true of those aged Negroes in leadership positions who assume that they have worked out the correct prescription for all racial problems. There are to my knowledge several such men and women occupying strategic positions in reference to the future of Negro youth. They have convinced themselves that any thinking on racial problems which differs from theirs is dangerous, even communistic.

These leaders, of course, have the approval and assistance of certain powerful people in the majority racial group who erroneously believe that the best interests of themselves and the South are served by forcing Negroes to live continuously, year after year, in a non-changing societal structure. The Negro educators, which I refer to here, are largely responsible for this illogical attitude. You see these Negro men and women carry the authority of age and gray hairs.

The South by tradition, is peculiarly prone to regard age and gray hair as sacred. This has value when the aged are characteristically honest, mentally alert and dynamic personalities. The wisdom of such aged people has through the ages served valuable ends. However, the type of aged Negro leaders, to which reference is made here, act so much at variance with the accepted prevailing philosophies of life of modern educated Negro leaders and the aged Negro traditionalists. He says that "we want an equal opportunity to live and not exist". These aged Negro educators, judging from their actions as well as speeches, fell that old age entitles Negroes to live rather than exist.

And believe you me they live oftentimes their palatial homes are the most imposing and completely equipped buildings on the campus. Their expensive high powered automobiles would do a bank president proud.

The pleas of these educators for Negro youth to live different lives than other American youth are sickening. How can the United States maintain its unity and support and active democratic government if it must perforce harbor a variety of cultures based upon color? The best one could hope for would be a hodge-podge society at odds with itself.

I am convinced after years of experience in the fields of social work and education that the only Negroes who are worried about racial intermingling are these staticminded, self-centered, defeatist age Negro educators. Modern educated Negro youth are rather inclined to be highly race conscious. They are fighting for a chance to live rather than exist. This makes them increasingly apprehensive of white people who hold lucrative positions that might be filled by Negroes.

The rapid displacement of Negroes from traditional jobs and the obvious effects to keep them out of new and remunerative vocations is forcing them to become not only race conscious but black conscious. Increasingly the effective leaders of Negro youth are persons who are distinguishably Negroid in color.

Private Peeks issues a stinging rebuke to President Holley when he tells him that, "it is discouraging to the many young Negroes who are in line with the defending forces when vent is given to race baiting spleens, bigotry and stupidity".

Private Peeks has the philosophy of American life which should make him a soldier of which his country might well be proud.

TALMADGE-COCKING AFFAIR

Talmadge Joins Constitution In Blasting A Dr. Dana

Hapeville, Ga. Statesman

Georgia College Professor Makes New England Speech Saying Georgia People Are Fascist and Communistic And Ninety Percent in Some Counties Afflicted With Dread Diseases — Talmadge Says Same Professor Sent White Boys And Girls To Tuskegee.

I have been ragging our two big Atlanta dailies for some time now, and the reason that I ragged them was because I thought they needed it.

Those reporters and the boys on the papers knew that I was not mad with them, and they sort of suspicioned that I was about half right in the criticism that I was throwing against them.

Well, it is our duty to give credit where credit is due, and believe it or not, here's an editorial commending the Atlanta Constitution for their editorial which appeared in column one in their issue of Sunday, October 5th.

A news item was carried in the Atlanta Journal, quoting this Professor Malcolm Boyd Dana, President of the Piedmont College here in Georgia, as saying "there are 836 different Fascist groups in Georgia . . .", and that in a recent survey of a Southern mountain district it showed that 90 percent of an entire county suffered from tuberculosis, cancer or pellagra.

This Dr. Dana hails from the State of Iowa, where they grow tall corn and a lot of other things.

Dr. Dana made this speech at Providence, Rhode Island, in the center of the old New England states. He thought that he was talking to an ignorant crowd of people in Rhode Island.

I have addressed an audience at the same place, and was pleasantly surprised to see how the New England people reminded me of the old Georgia stock. I believe that the high-pressure crowd gave Dr. Dana some foreign brand of liquor, either absinthe, or vodka, or maybe schnapps. He was certainly on a big drunk in Providence.

I wonder if he has sobered up in Habersham County. If he is over it now, he must have a terrible headache, if he reads the Atlanta Constitution and The Statesman.

In Habersham County, Hall County, and all of that section of the State, you will find the purest Anglo-Saxons on earth. Even the girls don't have to go to the drug store to get the rouge.

And this drunk talking about Habersham County, when people go to that section of the State to be cured of tuberculosis.

Three cheers for the Atlanta Constitution! And, let them write about this same Dr. Malcolm Boyd Dana taking those white boys and girls and sending them over to Tuskegee Institute, and letting them stay on the campus of that college for two days and debating with the negroes.

Decision

The Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia has a decision to make. The two choices which have undoubtedly been discussed in board meetings during the week and which will be finally decided upon in a meeting set for tomorrow in Atlanta are, first, to adopt a belligerent attitude to the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and, second, to "eat crow," as The Atlanta Constitution puts it.

It has been reported that Gov. Talmadge has said he will not back down. But there seems to be something of an undercurrent which tends to heighten the possibility of the Board of Regents deciding that the time has come for it to act separately.

It is probable that the committee from the Southern Association, which meets in Atlanta Monday, has already notified the Board of Regents what will be expected of it if Georgia's University System is to be kept on the accredited list. A rumor has intimated that an invitation to return to their jobs must be extended to the 10 men purged from the Georgia schools.

It seems unlikely that the governor will eat his words and swallow his past actions. But there is some hope that the Board of Regents will, if necessary, split with the governor and do whatever is necessary to keep Georgia schools accredited. This "right" will not correct the "wrong" done. But it may save the University System and keep the final blow from falling on Georgia students.

Talmadge Hanged in Effigy For Ouster of Georgia Dean

OCT 14 1941

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 14.—The University of Georgia has been dropped from the Southern University Conference here by a committee that charged politics caused the removal of Georgia's Dean Walter D. Cocking. Students at Athens, Ga., at night staged a demonstration against Governor Eugene Talmadge, a leading figure in the dean's dismissal. Several hundred students paraded through Athens and the campus there last night, and, Alpha Fowler, student president, said, hung an "effigy of Gov. Talmadge in front of the main entrance to the campus."

The unanimous action of the conference, composed of 41 leading colleges from Maryland to Texas, followed the appearance Sunday of a Georgia delegation including Gov. Talmadge, which defended the State Board of Regents' decision several months ago not to renew Dean Cocking's contract. The board and Gov. Talmadge charged the educator with advocating racial co-education.

The conference committee asserted that "not only was Dean Cocking dismissed without due notice and without just cause, but by a board of Regents at the direction of the Governor and by a board of Regents reconstructed for the purpose of securing that dismissal even against the recommendation of the president of the University of Georgia and the chancellor of the university system."

Gov. Talmadge, informed of the conference committee's action, said "no outside influence in the Unites States or on the face of the earth can discredit the University of Georgia."

He asserted that he believed "the majority of those voting to discredit the University of Georgia are in favor of co-education of the blacks and the whites."

Action Scored As Dictatorial By Talmadge

OCT 14 1941

Charges Against Educator Not Substantiated, Group Says.

By unanimous action the Southern University Conference, meeting yesterday in Birmingham, dropped the University of Georgia from its ranks, holding that the removal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking as dean of the university's school of education on charges that he advocated racial coeducation, constituted "a clear case of political interference."

The Governor, who led the State Board of Regents in ousting Cocking after a sensational trial, last night bitterly attacked the action of the conference, declaring that "no out-of-state agency has the authority or the right to dictate to the Board of Regents concerning whom they should employ or whom they should fail to reemploy."

OCT 14 1941

Called Dictatorial.

"When an accrediting association composed of self-appointed college professors attempts to discredit any institution for not reemploying a college professor it develops solely into an intellectual association of the most dictatorial, tyrannical, and autocratic principles," the chief executive added.

In its unanimously approved resolution the conference, which met in executive session, declared that Cocking was "dismissed from his position without due and reasonable notice and upon charges which are not substantiated."

"Not only was Dean Cocking dismissed without due notice and without just cause, but at the direction of the Governor and by a Board of Regents reconstructed for the purpose of securing that dismissal even against the recommendation of the president of the University of Georgia and the chancellor of the University System."

OCT 14 1941

"Threat to Democracy."

The resolution went further and declared that "such procedure is both a contradiction of the ideals of education and a threat to democracy in America.

"It is the considered judgment of your committee, therefore, that the University of Georgia cannot be in harmony with the ideals and aspirations of the colleges and universities of this conference as long as its board of control disregards the fundamental concept of academic tenure and the basic principles of professional administration of an institution of higher learning."

Attacks Association.

The Governor asserted last night that he was of the opinion the majority of those "voting to discredit the University of Georgia are in favor of "co-education of blacks and white" and added that Georgians did "not care to remain in any association that in any way condones of tolerates the idea of social equality between Negroes and the whites."

Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, who was in Birmingham last night with Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the University System, and Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the State Board of Regents, said he "regretted exceedingly that the University Conference found it necessary to take this action."

Dr. Caldwell said he, Dr. Sanford and Chairman Beaver all spoke on the floor and urged that the institution not be dropped, but that their pleas were to no avail.

OCT

Possible Effects.

Asked if he thought this action would affect the decision of an investigating committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools which will determine whether the university will be dropped from the accredited list, Dr. Caldwell pointed out that Dr. Alex Guerry, of the University of the South, who was chairman of the Birmingham committee, is also head of the accrediting committee which will meet early in November and report to the full association in December.

The university president explained that if Dr. Guerry "feels this way as head of one group, he may feel the same way as chairman of the other."

Dr. Caldwell saidthe Southern University Conference was an entirely separate association from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It includes all of the country's major colleges from Virginia to Texas. It is limited to colleges of liberal arts and universities having schools or colleges of art and sciences.

Neither Dr. Sanford nor Chairman Beaver could be reached last night. Dr. Caldwell said Dr. Sanford was attending a meeting at Birmingham-Southern and that Chairman Beaver was attending another meeting.

Over long-distance telephone from Washington last night Dr. Cocking said the action was no more than he expected. He said he could see no other way out. Dr. Cocking is now consultant in program planning for the Federal Security Administration.

Informed of the Birmingham decision, Judge Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin, president of the Georgia Alumni Society and a former member of the State Board of Regents, who resigned because he could not go along with the educational policies of the Governor, said last night.

Injustice to Children.

"I'm might sorry of that. If the university is dropped it will be a great injustice to the children of Georgia and to those now atending the university. I can speak with feeling on the subject, as my daughter is now a student at Georgia."

James Shelor, a vice president of the society, declared last night he felt quite sure the matter would be discussed at the alumni board meeting to be held November 22 in Athens.

"I'd rather not speak my mind at the present time," he said. "Members of the alumni society have been working among members of the Board of Regents and the Governor for some time, and if I said anything it might upset some plans we have in the making."

Beaver Queries Dr. Cocking On Resuming Job

NOV 1941

Action Follows Regents' Pledge to Southern Rating Group.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Nov. 11.—Educators ousted from the Georgia University System have been "felt out" on whether they would return if reappointed, Sandy Beaver said today.

Beaver is chairman of the Board of Regents, which removed Dean Walter D. Cocking from the University School of Education and precipitated a controversy over "political interference with academic freedom." Several others were also ousted on charges by the Governor they advocated racial coeducation.

Beaver said he had asked Dr. Cocking in a letter whether he would consider accepting his former position "if a reappointment should be offered him by the board."

NOV 12 1941

The letter was written following a hearing by a special committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to determine whether Georgia's state colleges should be retained on its accredited list.

A committee appointed by the regents offered to take any action necessary to retain accredited standing.

Beaver said his letter was not an offer to reappoint, but merely a "feeler" to guide the regents in offering such appointments. He said the only official offer to return the jobs to the ousted educators would be by the board, and the board had not yet made any offers.

Pittman was removed on racial charges and charges involving college funds. No announcement was Beaver also wrote to Dr. Marvin made concerning the reason for S. Pittman, who was ousted from Bush's removal. presidency of the Georgia State Teachers College, at Satesboro, and Professor P. H. Eury, of North Georgia College.

Negro Praises Talmadge for School Defense

Says He Will Answer for Criticism Coming From His People.

Governor Talmadge yesterday released a letter he had received from J. W. Holley, president of the Georgia Normal and Agricultural College, a Negro institution, at Albany, praising the chief executive for his "magnificent defense" of separate educational programs for whites and Negroes in Georgia.

Referring to the removal of Dean Walter D. Cocking from the University of Georgia, and President Marvin S. Pittman, from the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, Holley said:

"I will answer fully and effectively the adverse criticism that comes from my own people in Atlanta and the northern papers and magazines."

The Governor replied by inviting the Negro to attend the next Board of Regents' meeting at Tifton August 11, adding "I want them to hear from you."

Enrollment In University System Drops

Survey Shows Matriculation Is Down 891 From Last Year.

Enrollment in the entire University System of Georgia is down 891 from last year, the State Board of Regents announced yesterday after a complete survey.

A few days ago the regents released a report showing that enrollment in the senior colleges alone was off 674, but figures from the junior colleges painted an even darker figure.

The total for the University System, including Negro colleges, was listed at 12,845, as against 13,736 last year. The survey was made as of October 15.

One of the largest drops was at the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, where Dr. Marvin S. Pittman was ousted as president. Only 350 students were enrolled there, as compared with 506 last year.

Accrediting Body's Ruling Affects 11,500 Students

By LUKE GREENE.

Suspension of the University System of Georgia yesterday by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools affected approximately 11,500 students enrolled in 10 colleges throughout the state, and its effects are expected to be felt throughout the United States.

Although the suspension will not become effective until next September, predictions were freely circulated there would be a mass exodus of students, since many of them already have been making inquiries about transferring to out-of-state institutions.

The Southern Association is the most powerful body controlling the University System. It is to southern education what the American Bar Association is to lawyers or the American Medical Association is to doctors.

When an institution loses its standing with the association, it means that students of this institution will not have their credits recognized in any other accredited college. A teacher or a professional man or woman graduating from a blacklisted college finds it difficult, if not altogether impossible, to get a job out of the state.

The suspension has been ordered. Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the State Board of Regents, who returned to Atlanta yesterday, was quick to point out that students now enrolled in the colleges would suffer no loss of credits for this year's work. What the association will do when it meets again next December is problematical.

When the educational controversy in Georgia reached its climax with the famous "trial" of last July 14 when the packed Board of Regents voted to oust Dr. Walter D. Cocking and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman and later discharged eight other educators, the eyes of education throughout the United States have been on Georgia.

Because of the Governor's squabble with the University System, numerous national publications and newspapers all over the country have sent special correspondents here to do special articles on the Governor and the school situation. The names of Cocking and Pittman and the others have become watchwords throughout the United States. Many national organizations have adopted resolutions deploring the plight of education in Georgia.

The students themselves have been cognizant of the danger hanging over them, as have alumni of the various institutions. The students have held mass meetings, marched on the capitol, pleaded with the Governor to do something that would cause the Southern Association to temper its ruling. They have held mass demonstrations and called on the legislature to hold an extra session to stop political interference and keep Georgia in the good graces of the association.

All the while the Governor has remained stolid. He has repeated time after time that he never would have Dr. Cocking back in the University System, no matter what happened. He has never gone before the Southern Association or appealed to it any way.

At one session of the Board of Regents, just before the meeting of the investigating committee in Atlanta, the Governor read a statement in which he said he recognized that he had run afoul of some of the best practices of the association and authorized the regents to do what they thought was proper to save the University System. But he would not stand for the committee to do anything that was necessary. Later, he said he was not recanting in his position.

Yesterday, the Governor had little to say about the decision of the association. He said he hoped the Atlanta newspapers were satisfied. He said he was glad "the degrees of the university students are not affected by the ruling and will not be."

He was asked to explain what he meant by the statement that the degrees would not be affected. He was asked if he was taking the best possible thing that could happen—that the association would meet next year and lift its ban—and basing his statement on that. He was asked if he would stay away from meetings of the Board of Regents in the future and steer clear of political interferences.

The Governor reared back in his swivel chair and said that was his statement and he did not care to elaborate on it.

The Governor said he had not heard from Chairman Sandy Beaver, although Beaver arrived in Atlanta about 10 o'clock yesterday morning and remained until he left for Gainesville by bus at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Governor said, however, he had just approved payment for 500 copies of "Brown America," 500 copies of "Calling America" and 500 copies of "We Sing America."

These were the books that figured prominently in the famous "trial." James S. Peters, of Manchester, who "prosecuted" Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman waved them through the air, shouted that they advocated subversive philosophy and charged they taught the kind of things Dr. Cocking and Dr. Pittman stood for. When Prosecutor Peters relaxed in his prosecution, the Governor would prod him on, saying "Hit the chair and holler, Jim."

DEC 5 1941

The Governor said the books were bought by the Statesman Publishing Company, which publishes his political organ. He was asked what he was going to do with the books, but he just grinned, leaving the impression he was going to use them in a campaign.

These 1,500 books coming into Georgia are the same books which

GOV. TALMADGE TO URGE BURNING OF RACIAL BOOKS

Atlanta, Aug. 1 (AP).—Gov. Eugene Talmadge said today he would recommend to the legislature the burning of all books in Georgia schools and libraries that advocate racial coeducation. The legislature meets in January, 1943.

AUG 2 1941

The governor had a copy of a book entitled "We Sing America."

"We are going to get rid of that book and all books of that kind," he said.

The author of the book was listed as Marion Cuthbert and the publisher as the Friendship Press of New York. The book was illustrated with drawings of white and Negro children playing together.

State Superintendent of Schools M. D. Collins said the book was one of the Rosenwald library books and that these were provided by the Rosenwald fund for distribution in libraries of Negro schools.

Inter-Racial League Offices Headquarters to Blast Talmadge

Letters and Pamphlets Poured Out of League Offices Last Week Signed By Strange "Bedfellows."

Dr. M. Ashby Jones, President of the Inter-racial League, and his negro associates, strongly backed up by writers of the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution, launched an attack last week upon Governor Eugene Talmadge, and upon about all of the customs Georgia people have been taught to respect since colonial days.

Strange Combination

The attack consisted of a letter printed upon the stationery of James A. Branch, an Atlanta lawyer, but was mailed from the offices of the Inter-racial League at 701, Standard Building, Atlanta. The signers were Dr. M. Ashby Jones, President of the League and a feature writer for the Atlanta Constitution, Edwin Camp, sports writer for the Atlanta Journal, and their lawyer, Mr. Branch.

Along with the letter was mailed a copy of "Southern Frontiers", the official paper of the Inter-racial League. The Statesman has photographed the "mast head" of this paper, showing the officials of the League and a typical anti-Georgia and anti-South article which it contains. About fifty per cent of the officers of the League are negroes, but the Statesman was not able, before going to press, to learn just which of Dr. Jones' associates are negroes and which are whites.

Talmadge Hit the Nail

The letter was in the nature of "fan the fire" propaganda against Talmadge and the excuse for it was that they feared ". . . in the course of the next few months the educational situation may no longer be news and the press will naturally relax its pressure," to quote them directly. There was a postscript reading ". . . make checks to Dr. M. Ashby Jones," and an addressed envelope directed to Dr. Jones was enclosed.

While the letter spoke of a "crisis" in Georgia's educational system it was clear that the main purpose was to agitate for laws which would remove any control of the school system from any official elected by the people so that future "Dr. Cockings" who might attempt to carry out the Inter-racial League's plan for mixing the races in our schools could get no such backset as Talmadge recently gave it.

Many people who got the letter said that the very fact that this inter-racial group of negroes and whites launched this attack on Talmadge convinced them that Cocking was playing into their hands to mix the races in schools, and the league resented the prompt halt that Talmadge called on the plan.

Letters Resented

The vast majority of people who received the letters, accompanied by the League's paper, resented the mixed race attack on Talmadge. The Doctor will get very few dollars with which to support it. And the attack was not limited to Ta[illegible]

madge, Georgia's Governor by overwhelming choice of her people; it is also an attack on Georgia history, Georgia traditions, Georgia people and Georgia's idea of the proper place in Georgia affairs of white people and negroes.

Paper Extremely Radical

The League's paper carries out, as prominent as a sore thumb, the idea that Georgia white people have no claim to any superiority over the black race. The issue mailed out with the letters is given over to blasts against Talmadge, and to insinuations belittling him. It brags about cases in the courts breaking up "white primaries" in some of the Southern states; about smashing the "Jim Crow" laws, putting negroes on juries, the poll tax and about forcing the entrance of negroes in white schools.

But the two things in Georgia they shoot their biggest guns at, in this issue mailed along with their letter, are Eugene Talmadge and the poll tax law. Knock out either one of these, their slogan is, and full racial equality is not so far away.

League Has Backing

The attack in this paper does not come from Dr. M. Ashby Jones and his negro associates alone. The paper and the letter were mailed at the same time and to the same people from the offices of the Inter-racial League and was a scheme on the part of the men who signed the letter to put over the contents of the paper along with the contents of the letter.

And they want to "get Talmadge now"—before the people find ou that the University of Georgia ca get along very well without Dea Cocking and his plan for amalg mating the races for a Brov America.

Needs of Negro Colleges Studied

A committee headed by James S. Peters, of Manchester, set out Wednesday to determine the needs of Negro colleges in the Georgia University System.

Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the Board of Regents, who Tuesday appointed the committee, said it would attempt to co-ordinate activities of the colleges and prevent overlaping.

Chairman Beaver is an ex-officio member of the committee and Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the University System, also will serve with the group. Other members are Scott Candler, of Decatur, and E. Ormonde Hunter, Savannah.

Philip Morgan, of Savannah; A. J. Evans, of Fort Valley and Henry McIntosh, of Albany, will consult with the committee when it surveys Negro colleges in their respective cities.

Negro institutions in the University System are the Georgia State College at Savannah, the Fort Valley State College at Fort Valley and the Georgia Normal and Agricultural College at Albany.

GENE GIVES THE "STOP" SIGNAL

For the past eight years, there has been a concerted effort in Georgia and the South to gain wholesale advantages for the Negro race.

The Negro as an individual has not sought many of these advancements —if one is to term them as such— but the movements have been initiated and mostly fostered by white men.

We were recently talking to a bright young Georgian who told us the following incident:

In the summer of 1936 he attended a religious encampment at Blue Ridge, N. C. There were around 40 University students present along with delegates of other Georgia and southern colleges.

A resolution was introduced to invite Negro boys and girls to attend the conference the next summer, and the colored girls were to share rooms with the white girls, and the colored boys were to occupy rooms with the white boys.

The young man was one of four to speak and vote against the resolution. Nothing ever came of the movement, said the young man, inasmuch as it was in conflict to the state laws of North Corolina. But the flower of the white youth of the South was willing.

A brilliant young Georgian was presiding and advocating the adoption of the resolution. He became under the influence of his elders. Several months ago this same youth was removed from the gallery of the U. S. Senate for vocal disturbances when the lease-lend bill was being discussed in Washington. He is under the wing of the National Youth movement.

In the summer of 1938, we were in a party of ten or more white men who attended a field-day meeting of Negro farmers in a neighboring county.

A representative from the Department of Agriculture came down for the meeting.

We saw him mix and mingle with colored men, swapping jokes, and exchanging back slaps.

In the afternoon, a number of addresses were made, first by the white speakers and then followed by at least two colored represententatives of the Department of Agriculture.

The speakers gave the large group of Negroes assembled some good advice. But we recall one phrase the Negro orator told the gathering: "This is the first administration that has ever been in Washington that doesn't know the difference in the color of your skin."

Another Negro speaker told the assembly of how proud he was to have been in the first group of colored men to ever sit in a conference with white men in the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

New Dealism was being administered in easy doses.

The famous 1938 senatorial "purge" campaign was underway. And as Senator George lambasted Dr. C. H. Foreman and others, the Senior Senior didn't scratch the surface. Many things besides subsidy checks were being handed out.

Several years ago a Negro girl from Atlanta applied for entrance to the University of Georgia.

If the truth were known, some group of white people inspired this colored girl to make such application.

In the case of the University of Missouri, where a Negro sought admittance to the journalism school and another to the law school, the Supreme Court ruled that the authorties had to admit the Negroes or provide equal educational opportunities in a state-supported colored school.

In a South Georgia city, where a lawyer was defending a Negro accused of rape, this lawyer entered a plea for a new trial on the ground that there were no Negroes on the jury, or names of Negroes in the jury box.

Several years ago, a bright young man with the Carnegie Foundation was making a survey in a number of Georgia counties—Greene being among them—with the view of making a report as to securing the ballot for the Negro. He thought that the poll tax law should be repealed and the Negro allowed to vote.

We cited him to the history of Populism in Georgia, and told him that the Negro would lose more by being given the ballot than he would gain with it. The white man would use the Negro as a political football.

Now that the U. S. Supreme court has ruled that the federal government has jurisdiction over a primary in which a member of Congress particpates, we look for a concerted effort to vote Negroes in large numbers.

The last vestige of state rights are disappearing with so much federal control.

We have no quarrel with the Negro race. The southern white man frequently befriends, helps and assists the individual Negro when he will not do so as a collective race. The Negro is not seeking these things. It is groups and foundations that are trying to do these things.

In the past, the green light has been given. Operations had been limited to the extent public opinion would permit.

Governor Talmadge has raised the "Stop" signal.

GEORGIA LOSES PLACE ON ROLLS OF CONFERENCE

OCT 13 1941

University Is Dropped After Firing Of Dr. Cocking Scored

Declaring removal of Dr. Walter D. Cocking from his post as dean of the University of Georgia "both a contradiction of the ideals of education and a threat to democracy in America," the Southern University Conference Monday night voted unanimously to drop the University of Georgia from membership in the organization.

OCT 14 1941

The resolution, presented after an investigating committee had heard Gov. Eugene Talmadge's personal defense of the action, was adopted by unanimous vote of the executive conference. Among members of the executive session were Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the Georgia University System; Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, University of Georgia president, and Sandy Beaver, of the Board of Regents.

In Birmingham for its seventh annual session devoted to "better education in the South," the Southern University Conference is an organization of 41 leading Southern colleges and universities. The conference does not have the power of accrediting institutions.

Teacher Training Discussed

Report of a six-year study of requirements for teacher training was given by Dr. Alex Guerry, vice chancellor of the University of the South, during the Tuesday morning session.

OCT 13 1941

"Our concept of what should enter into education of a teacher is expressed by the criteria which follows," Dr. Guerry said:

"Teacher education in a democracy must have a definite objective . . . must lead to an understanding of the major problems of social life . . . must develop leaders in the major learning areas and levels . . . must provide for professional integration and orientation . . . and must provide for selection and guidance and for evaluating means . . ."

After outlining a "minimum pattern to be used as a basis for certification," Dr. Guerry said that state departments of education have in one way or another approved the criteria set up by the committee in the Southern University Conference which worked in cooperation with a similar committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities.

OCT 14 1941

"The State Departments of six ates—Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, ouisiana, Tennessee and West rginia—have accepted the proam by formal resolution . . . The ate Departments of 10 states . . . ve made curriculum adjustments carry out the pattern upon which have agreed."

Dr. Foster Speaks

Dr. Richard Foster, president of e University of Alabama, discuss- a report of the committee on faculty pensions and retirement.

OCT 14 1941

"As might be expected," Dr. Foster said, "the greatest number (of institutions) entered into such plans before 1930, which marks beginning of the depression. In the period when the depression was at its worst, only six institutions embarked on such a venture; since 1935, however, a rather large number have entered upon the plan.

"The whole problem," Dr. Foster concluded, "is so much affected by prospective changes in the Social Security law that it is difficult to determine what course should be pursued by an institution not operating under one of the plans."

Dr. Raymond R. Paty, president of Birmingham-Southern College, will speak Tuesday morning on reports of the committee on Summer schools, and Dr. O. C. Carmichael, chancellor of Vanderbilt University, will report for the committee on quality of instruction and its measurement.

Dr. Theodore Meyer Greene, of Princeton University, will be speaker Tuesday afternoon.

After adjournment of the Southern University Conference, the Association of Alabama Colleges will meet under leadership of Dr. Wyatt W. Hale, dean of Birmingham-Southern and association president.

Politics the Same Everywhere

Crowds demonstrated down in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, against the candidacy of Elie Lescot, who is said to be one of ten candidates for the presidency.

The unanimous choice of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate is Stenio Vincent, who has been in office since 1930, and, like President Roosevelt, wants to serve a third term.

APR 19 1941

It was expected that the Haitian public would merely ratify this choice when it goes to the polls on April 20, but this is now uncertain, as several newspaper articles have intimated that Vincent will not be able to accept re-election and has chosen M. Lescot as his successor.

Several thousand persons stormed the Legislature, smashed desks and shouted their opposition to Mr. Lescot, former Haitian minister to Washington and a very decent gentleman.

When the news first reached us about this demonstration, we said we wished the Haitians weren't quite so violent in their politics.

And then we remembered our own Presidential campaign last year in which Wendell Willkie dodged everything from rotten eggs to waste baskets, and we said to ourselves: "Human nature is much the same everywhere."

DEMAND PROTECTION FROM SEGREGATION

APR 26 1941

Cites U. S. Policy In Panama Following Lease of Territory—West Indian Council Asks For Strong Action.

APR 26 1941

By Our London Correspondent

LONDON, Apr. 24.—(Censored)—Islanders have sent a petition to Lord Moyne, Secretary of State for Colonies, asking British protection against American rule in the areas leased as naval and air bases in the West Indies.

The appeal signed by W. A. Domingo of Jamaica, president of the West Indies National Council and Herman Osborne of Trindad, secretary, strongly urged that the British government takes steps to incorporate in the leases covering the bases specific and complete guarantees protecting the local populations from all forms of racial discrimination and segregation on the leased areas. In support of this demand reference was made to the letter on the subject sent to the Colonial Secretary of Jamaica by the People's National Party headed by the colored advocate, Norman Manley, K. C.

JIM-CROW POLICY IN PANAMA CITED

APR 26 1941

The petition says that "the West Indies National Council is extremely anxious to obviate any friction between the unarmed populations and Americans connected with the bases and is confident that this anxiety is shared by both the British and American governments. However, it is generally known that on the Canal Zone, leased by the Republic of Panama to the United States for military purposes, the very worst forms of racial segregation and discrimination are practiced. It is almost commonly known that a large porportion of the personnel of the United States armed forces is from sections of the United States where it is customary and legal for persons of the colored race to be segregated and subjected to uncivilized and undemocratic racial discrimination and persecutions."

GREAT MORAL RESPONSIBILITY

"By completely excluding the West Indian people from direct participation in the negotiations of the leases which will vitally affect theri lives, property and future development, the British government has inescapably assumed the heaviest moral responsibility for fully protecting the interests of the local populations of the territories in which the bases are being constructed . . . The Council feels that it should not be difficult for the British government to secure the cooperation of the American Commission negotiating the leases to include clauses designed to meet the wishes of the local populations."

NEW ACCORD WIDENS HAITI'S FISCAL SCOPE

MAY 6 - 1941

Basis for Servicing Its Bonds of 1922 Liberalized by U. S.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 5—Haiti has attained a greater degree of autonomy in fiscal affairs through a new agreement with the United States Government under which there is a considerable liberal modification of the fiscal machinery set up in 1933 to protect holders of Haitian bonds issued in 1922.

MAY 6 - 1941

The agreement, announced today, provides that the offices of Fiscal Representative and deputy fiscal representative be abolished. The National Bank of the Republic of Haiti will control and operate the Haitian budget, the accounting and disbursing systems, the collection of customs and internal revenues and other financial responsibilities.

The bank will, however, receive irrevocable orders to make no payments for the account of the Haitian Government until the service of the 1922 bonds has been amply provided. During the first ten days of each month the Haitian Minister of Finance is to make available one-twelfth of the sums necessary to service the bond issue.

As an additional safeguard for investors in the bonds, the board of directors of the National Bank of the Republic of Haiti shall consist of four Haitians, including the Minister of Finance, and three Americans, one of whom will represent the holders of the 1922 bonds. All decisions of the board will require the agreement of at least five members.

MAY 6 - 1941

The agreement is hailed in official Washington circles as another evidence of the success of the "good neighbor" policy.

THE HAITIAN REPUBLIC

MAY 10 1941

The election of Elie Lescot to the presidency of the Republic of Haiti is good news not only to Haitians but also to American liberals who watched with anguish the oppressive rule of Stenio Vincent—the island's would-be dictator.

Under the Vincent regime, the Haitian masses suffered the suppression of their common civil rights. The press, which in all democratic countries is looked upon as the watchdog of a free people, was gagged. Like Trujillo of Santo Domingo, Vincent perpetuated himself in office by ruthless silencing of his opponents. He either jailed or exiled those who opposed his autocratic rules. It was not unusual for a severe jail sentence to be imposed on those who dared to whisper even the mildest sort of criticism.

But for the vigilance of some fearless Haitians, the Vincent government would have returned itself to power for a third term in violation of clearly expressed provisions of the Constitution of Haiti.

Despite a wave of police violence and a veritable reign of terror which marked the election campaign, Stenio Vincent was voted out of office. This represents a magnificent triumph of the liberal forces that have fought for years to rid their nation of this Caribbean imitator of Hitler.

MAY 10 1941

Elie Lescot, the president-elect, is one of the finest figures in the political life of modern Haiti. He is sober in judgment, clear in his thinking, honest in his decisions. As Minister to the United States he has given on numerous occasions convincing proofs of a deep, sincere sympathy for the plight of the Haitian masses, and of his interest in the major issues that affect the Negro people everywhere. Under him, the black republic of the Caribbean will enter into a new era of national prosperity and political freedom.

FINDS MAJORITY OF WEST INDIANS FAVOR U. S. RULE

Natives Would Like to Get from Under Britain's Government

BARBADOS, B. W. I., May 29—(By Nancy Cunard for ANP)—After a total of almost six months spent in some of the British West Indian Isalnds I think there is no exaggeration in saying that the majority of the people, certainly the greater number of those I have met and talked with, distinctly favor the coming of the Americans "for works of hemispheric defense", as it has been called, and even that they would welcome the change-over from John Bull to Uncle Sam without displeasure. But that is an eventuality not quite immediately in view.

MAY 5 1941

And yet it is felt generally that if history should precipitate matters as it does now about once a week—see President Roosevelt's solemn announcement and warning to France that if any of her colonial territory in Africa on the Atlantic side is ceded to Germany this will be considered by the United States to be a grave menace (consequences would mean taking over of French possession in this hemisphere; that is, Martinique, Guadeloupe, French Guiana—well, the Americans are "here and ready." This is felt with a degree of relief. There are voices raised to be sure, that question anxiously whether "we are American subjects now" would not mean "and therefore subject to certain Dixie customs and legislation." One of the anxious is T. A. Marryshow, a member of Grenada's legislative council. Taking the opposite point of view, is another Grenadian-born, Lawyer Hudson Phillips, who recently said:

"Historically these bases are just as much a part of the defense program of the U. S. as the acquisition of Louisiana, Florida, Texas, and California by the United States during the 19th century." He continued by saying that he had no fear that the "penetration of the U. S. into these parts might be accompanied by certain of the less agreeable manners.... America is democratic to the backbone and there is a wholehearted dislike in America of anything savoring of imperialism. Secondly, race relations in America have improved progressively during the past quarter century and the republic, true to democratic ideas, has striven to train all its citizens, irrespective of color, class or creed, for citizenship and to give full opportunity for service according to merit for all men."

"He quoted the examples of Howard University, Tuskegee, Hampton Institute, as proof of the advancement of the colored people, saying and with truth, that there is nothing quite like these in the British empire. "While there will be greater and closer co-operation between the British empire and America in the coming years in world matters, I should like to see closer relations between the best in West Indiana and colored American life." Everyone in the West Indies agrees with the last sentiment at least.

Asks American Negro To Visit Isle Of Haiti

New Haitian President Invites Citizens To Inspect Republic

NEW YORK, (ANP)—"I want you to tell the colored Americans that they have two countries; one in which they were born; the other, the Republic of Haiti. Here they will receive every right, liberty and complete equality. There is no discrimination or segregation"—these words from the new Haitian President, Elie Lescott, were the hight point of a 45-minute conference with Dr. L. D. Reddick, just back from a good will tour in the West Indies.

The meeting took place in the national palace at Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Also present were Madame Lescot, Mrs. Reddick, Gotram Rouzier, under secretary of the department of interior, and Dr. Louis Mars.

The purpose of the conference was to discuss ways and means of developing closer cultural relations between Haiti and the Negro people of the United States. President Lescot stated that he was definitely interested in this project and pledged the support of his government.

The new chief of state of the black republic issued a special invitation to teachers of English who understood the French language, for there is to be increased instruction in the American language. There is a great need for physicians and dentists to settle in Haiti. The field of business is wide open for development. At the present time most of the shops are run by immigrant Europeans or white Americans.

President Lescot favored the proposal of exchanging outstanding American and Haitian authors, scholars and singers. Athletes such as Joe Louis and the sprint champions are very popular.

GEN. ANTONIO MACEO

The unveiling at Howard university, last week, of a bust of Gen. Antonio Maceo—the black Cuban patriot—marks an epoch in the cultural relations of the Negroes of America and those of the Republic of Cuba.

Presented to Howard by the Cuban sculptor, Teodoro Ramos Blanco, the bust is an expression of Pan-American good will that may go far toward deepening the mutual affections of the people of the two nations.

Antonio Maceo is to Cuba what George Washington is to America. He was a struggle advocate of liberty, democracy and human rights. He is recognized as a national hero to whose memory popular tribute is paid annually. That Cuba can venerate the spirit and sacrifice of a black man is a demonstration of democracy far in advance of the American mentality. Too bad American black men know so little about Cuba and her great patriot!

ROOSEVELT TO NAME RACE MAN GOVERNOR

B-U-L-L-E-T-I-N-!

WILBERFORCE, O., Jan. 2. (ANP)—Bishop R. R. Wright Jr., said here early this week that he definitely is "not interested" in becoming Governor of the Virgin Islands. The vacancy has been caused by the resignation of Gov. Cramer.

JAN 4 - 1941

By JAMES M. REID
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—According to ..er reliable sources close to the White House, President Roosevelt will shortly offer to Bishop R. R. Wright Jr., the post as governor of the Virgin Islands. This appointment will come as added recognition for the political support of colored citizens during the recent campaign.

This source reveals that if Bishop Wright will relinquish his present position and accept the governorship there is no doubt of the appointment being made. Bishop Wright is a prelate of the A. M. E. Church and presides over the Thirteenth District, which includes the states of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Bishop Wright is the son of Major R. R. Wright, president of the Citizens and Southern Bank of Philadelphia. He was elected to the Bishopric at the 1936 General Conference of the A. M. E. Church and was assigned to preside over the African Diocese.

URGE COLORED MAN FOR POST

During the 1940 Presidential campaign Bishop Wright headed the Western Division of the Democratic campaign and took an active part in the election of Roosevelt to a third term. In the '36 campaign the Bishop organized the Good Neighbor League for Roosevelt's second term.

The appointment of Bishop Wright to the Virgin Islands' post will satisfy the yearnings of a large group of citizens who have been urging the President to appoint a colored man to the post when it became known that Lawrence W. Cramer would resign.

Roosevelt has shown more interest in the welfare of the Islanders than any previous U. S. President. Many of the Administration social reforms have been instituted there. PWA grants have made possible the building of good roads, public works and school buildings. The AAA program has rehabilitated the agricultural economy and through the WPA and NYA a broad educational program has been started.

The Islands were purchased for $25,000,000 from Denmark during the World War because St. Thomas, the largest of the islands and the "Gibraltar of the West Indies," had a fine harbor for a naval base and was strategically important for the defense of the West Indies trade routes and the Panama Canal.

There are over 50 islands in the group and they have a combined area of 138 square miles, with a population of about 23,000 of whom 7,000 live in the capital, St. Thomas.

Chief interest in the islands are agricultural with sugar, coffee and tobacco the principal crops.

Because of the protest of Negroes against conditions in the islands, President Coolidge sent a commission there in 1924 headed by George H. Woodson and including W. H. C. Brown, C. E. Mitchell and J. S. Coage.

Nothing developed from this placating move and the report of the commission was never made public.

The Governor of the Islands receives an annual salary of $8,000 and resides at the capital, Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas. He appoints all the officials of the Island except the District Attorney and District Judge. Attorney Herman Moore is now serving as District Judge.

Wright's appointment will be sent to the Senate for confirmation some time between the opening of the new Congress and the Presidential inaugural.

Haiti President Charged With Dictatorial Aims

JAN 28 1941

President Stenio Vincente of Haiti, agent of the American imperialists, was accused of attempting to overthrow the constitution of the country in seeking a third term election, by Max Houdicourt, secretary of the Party for Democratic Action yesterday in an interview at the offices of the Council for Pan American Democracy, 100 Fifth Ave.

"Haiti looks to the American people for support in thier campaign to rid themselves of President Vincent and his regime, said Houdicourt. "With such support, not only Vincent and his crew, but the American monopoly interests in Haiti which are his main prop, and which are responsible for the economic strangulation of the country, will become a thing of the past.

"By making the third term issue a platform of the Vincente candidates for the legislature, President Vincente and his cohorts are, in their opinion, carrying through a referendum and, if these candidates win, then the government will declare that the majority of the Vincente group is in effect a referendum, and that the election of the Vincente group is in effect a vote for a third term, and popular revision of the Constitution.

"Haiti has never known an election campaign like the present one. Members of the liberal opposition were subjected to physical violence. They were arrested by the Vincente police and tortured. I can personally attest to the kind of treatment accorded opposition candidates.

"Mme. Alexandre Lorient, a 60-year old woman suffered horrible brutalities in prison, and is still in the hospital. Saturnin Franccis, David Stephen, Joseph Crespin, T. Francois, and others, were made to suffer this violence because they dared oppose Vincente.

"This wave of police violence has as its purpose the muzzling of any effective campaign against Vincente.

"The democratic people of Haiti have not been silent. They have registered their protest. They have continued with their work to rid Haiti of this ambition-ridden dictator.

"A recent news story from the Haiti Journal, discloses that a secret radio station has been operating in Haiti, bringing the people the message of democracy.

"The Vincent police found the station and arrested several Haitian patriots. Among them were Jean Weiner, an official of the Public Utilities Company of Haiti (American monopoly), Emil Chancey, a leader of the Party of Democratic Action, and an employe of the public works monopoly, the J. G. White Company, and Rene Moravia, government employe.

"The work will continue, but these heroic leaders of the Haitian people face court martial (Haiti has been under martial law for the past ten years). They face death, unless democratic people everywhere intervene."

New Masses
New York, N. Y.

The Duchy of David Windsor

JAN 7 1941

To NEW MASSES have been spending a vacation in Nassau, that tiny outpost of the British empire where David Edward Windsor, former king-emperor, has been installed as governor. As a typical example of British colonial rule, and because of their strategic location at the gateway to Central America, the Bahamas assume an importance out of relation to their size.

The island of New Providence, whose capital is Nassau, is populated predominantly by Negroes who formerly owned the land which was bought for a song by white speculators. The latter reaped a golden harvest to build a white man's paradise. Today these white men govern the island in the name of the crown. The Negroes live under a theoretically democratic government, but the island administration has established a form of Jim Crowism as complete as our own southern variety. Behind Nassau's facade of luxurious homes there's another town seldom seen by the tourists. This is a shanty town—decrepit huts lining narrow, unpaved streets, the majority without sanitary or other conveniences. Quarters are cramped in a climate which demands room and air. Dirt and squalor, disease and hunger—these make up the real Nassau.

What pleases the English and American residents, is that labor is cheap. $2.00 to $3.50 per week is considered a generous wage. You can get a couple, man and wife, to run your home for $3.00 weekly, a cook who will average ten hours a day for $2 to $4. Apparently giving cognizance to the low standard of living in the Bahamas, the government in 1937 fixed, by Order of Council, minimum wages for unskilled workers. In the tomato industry (a principal source of export) minimum, and therefore average, wages for laborers were set at 30 cents to 60 cents per day. In the building trades, the rate is 80 cents per day for males. These figures are from the Bahamas Blue Book for 1938 and must be considered in relation to living costs which have always been high, are higher today. Skilled workers, of whom there are few, get from $1.20 to $2.00 per day. Painters and plumbers receive the former figure, carpenters the latter.

Some hope for better conditions has been put in the Duke of Windsor, but as one of the natives expressed it, "He hasn't done anything yet." At the opening of the Legislative Council this Fall, the Duke in a prepared address, reviewed among other things the increase in unemployment. With respect to unemployment, his sole recommendation was that an advisory committee be set up to study the matter and be ready to act when the need arose.

The death rate, by the way, is 126.2 per 1,000 live births, a figure which is double that of the US. There's a lack of proper medical and dental care.

My own conclusion about Nassau is that without the British or any other ruling group to hold them down, the Negroes could make a significant contribution to the culture and well being of the Bahamas.

AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM SET ON LONG TERM

Oil, Forestry Farm And Mineral Products To Be Cultivated

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti—(ANP)—The governments of the United States of America and the Republic of Haiti announced this week that agreement has been reached in principle regarding a long-term program of cooperation in the development of Haitian agriculture and economy.

The central feature of this program will be a broad plan of rubber developments; an increase in banana plantings; the planting of oil crops, spices, drug plants, food plants, and fiber plants, cacao improvement; the development of Haitian forestry resources; and the stimulation of small handicraft industries.

Although details for the carrying out of the project are yet to be worked out, it is contemplated that the development will begin at carefully selected central plantations from which a small grower industry may be stimulated and directed, and technical information and assistance provided.

The program is based on numerous surveys and long experience of the United States Department of Agriculture, which has already established in Haiti breeding gardens for rubber plants and an experiment station.

JAN 7 1941

This cooperative program will also involve an extension in the amount of up to $500,000 in the existing contract entering into the 1938 by the Export-Import Bank and the J. G. White Engineering corporation, to permit the completion of certain highway and irrigation projects now in process and to provide adequate transportation facilities to the areas suitable for rubber and general agricultural development.

Discussions which have led to the agreements in principle in the above sense have been conducted between the appropriate agencies of the Government of the United States and His Excellency Elie Lescot, Haitian minister to Washington and President-elect of the Republic of Haiti.

Cordell Hull Defines U. S. Policy for West Indies

MAR 1 1941

In a letter to the West Indies National council, Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, this week outlined the policy that his government intends to pursue in relation to United States acquisition of naval bases in the British West Indies.

The West Indies National Council, fearful of the effect on the West Indian population of the introduction of discriminatory practices and racial segregation as practiced in the Canal Zone and the southern United States, had stated its apprehensions in a communication directed to President Roosevelt:

MAR 1 1941

In his reply, Secretary Hull said: "The general terms of the agreement with Great Britain are contained in notes exchanged between the two governments at Washington on September 2. At the present time an American commission is in London for the purpose of drawing up with the appropriate British and colonial officials the actual leases covering the various bases. In connection with these negotiations the American government has informed the British government that the military authorities of the United States are prepared to do everything in their power to operate the various bases in British territory so that interference with the normal life of the communities will be reduced to the lowest possible degree.

"At the same time it is perhaps needless for me to point out that through this government's policy of using local material and local labor to the fullest extent practicable, economic benefits will accrue to the colonies and their peoples," Mr. Hull declared.

WINDSOR TRIES TO HELP POOR

Bahama Governor Works For Minimum Wage, Tax Exemptions

NASSAU, Bahamas, July 15—(The Special News Service)—The Duke of Windsor is taking the lead in providing a helping hand from the government for the poor classes of this British colony who have been hit hardest by the mounting cost of living.

Soon after he became governor of the Bahamas, almost a year ago, the abdicated king appointed a labor advisory board to study living costs.

JUL 16 1941

The board found a constant upswing in the cost of essentials, due largely to the fact that the colony imports most of its foodstuffs and has been shut off from all but essential shipping because of the war.

The governor endorsed a recommendation of the advisory board that all common laborers be given a minimum wage, by law, of four shillings (about 80 cents) for an eight-hour day. This minimum now is imposed only on building construction.

The legislature balked at extending the minimum wage law, and came back with a counter-proposal that the governor find employment for those out of jobs, then propose a floor for wages.

Windsor, unsuccessful in this first attempt to meet the problem of high living costs, then proposed that the customs duty on essentials be reduced.

The legislature agreed and, a few days ago, the governor signed an act under which lumber and shingles, fresh and salt meat, and raffia, used in Nassau's straw-work industry, are exempted from the special five per cent war tax. The same act reduced the annual license on radio from one pound (about $4) to five shillings (about $1). This tax, as in England, is collected from each radio set owner.

Important foodstuffs, such as eggs and milk, already were exempt from the special war tariff.

The duke made it plain, in signing the new law, that he still was not satisfied with what had been done to meet the high cost of living and would ask the legislature soon for still further reductions on "certain articles which are essential to the life of a large section of the community."

Says Haiti Would Welcome Aid Of Black Brothers In America

By PETER DANA

NEW YORK—(T W P)—It was a happy family reunion when Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Cater, of Atlanta, with their two sons, Charles, Jr. and Robert, and Mrs Hattie Haynes, sister of Mrs. Cater, greeted their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, on her return from a year's study in Haiti on the S.S Cristobal this week.

Returning with Miss Cater was Miss Marion Speight, of Memphis, with whom she left the States last October for Haiti, where the two were exchange students on a plan worked out between Atlanta University (and its affiliates Spelman and Morehouse) and the National University of Haiti. The Haitian students at Atlanta this year were Marie Gagneron (at Spelman) and Lelio Faubias (Atlanta University).

The exchange-student plan is the result of suggestion made by former Haitian Minister to the United States Dantes Bellegarde to officials of Atlanta University during his visiting professorship in the summer of 1939, one of whose sons, Dr. Auguste Bellagarde, is a professor in Langston University, Langston, Oklahoma.

TELLS OF STUDY

After meeting their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, at the pier, the Caters took up residence at the Hotel Theresa for a vacation together. It was at the Hotel Theresa that Miss Cater spoke of her thrilling and enlightening year in Haiti.

In response to a question on the value of the exchange-student plan, Miss Cater said, "I think the plan perfectly splendid for American students and, I have reason to believe, for the Haitians as well. Certainly, Miss Speight and I found a whole new world of contact and knowledge during the past year. I can only hope that the plan will continue."

NOT AFRAID OF NEGRO

Continuing, Miss Cater said: "I feel that the Haitian invitation to American Negroes to visit or settle in Haiti is sincerely extended. The Haitian people are definitely not afraid of the educated Negro of the United States: they welcome the intelligence and skills of their dark brothers. They feel that the coming of American Negroes to Haiti will be of mutual benefit. For skills the Haitians offer opportunities."

The two Haitian students at Atlanta this year will attend Columbia University next fall. Miss Cater will resume her study of French at Atlanta University, and Miss Speight will teach. Her year of study in Haiti, Miss Cater said, has done wonders with her conversational French, the island's language.

PRESIDENT LESCOT OF HAITI

In keeping with his inaugural promise of closer cultural relations with Negroes of the United States, M. Elie Lescot, newly elected president of the republic of Haiti, will hold an official reception for the members of a traveling seminar sponsored annually by the Aframerican Woman's Journal, official organ of the National Council of Negro Women.

This is a conspicuous departure from the policy and attitude of President Lescot's predecessors. Heretofore Haitian presidents have studiously avoided any contact with the American Negro. Haitian diplomatic representatives have reflected in their aloofness the traditional attitude of their government. They ignored invitations to functions in Negro communities although representatives of other lands accepted with grace the courtesies extended to them.

The behavior of former Haitian presidents which amounted to disdain, was perhaps engendered by fear of being identified with the U. S. black man, which would (in their judgment) render them objectionable to white societies, rather than by congenital hatred. Doubtless they were acting under instruction, and so could not follow any course adjudged prejudicial to the best interests of their government. Since the American Negro has no social status in fashionable white circles, Haitian ministers reasoned that to mingle with him is to invite a disastrous ostracism that might somehow lessen their influence with official Washington.

This situation was of course very unfortunate for Haitian envoys whose presence except at official functions was sought neither by white nor by black social circles. They, therefore became victims of a worse type of ostracism than they might have experienced had they mingled with their black brothers in Washington.

Until Dantes Belgarde and later Elie Lescot came to Washington as representatives of the island republic, Haitian ministers came and went without causing a ripple on Potomac society, and without being noticed by anybody outside of officials at the state department and members of the diplomatic corps.

In diplomatic as well as in social circles Monsieur Lescot was the most popular minister ever to represent a foreign government in Washington. He was genial, affable and cordial to all, regardless of racial identity. His impressive personality and delightful social manners added grace and dignity to the functions he attended. He was a popular figure on the campus of Howard university. Immaculate in dress as in speech, he was virtually the idol of Washington.

As a result Monsieur Lescot succeeded in giving a more wholesome picture of the Haitian people and their government than had been obtainable hitherto. While the white press incessantly portrayed the barefoot Haitian peasant with an over-sized basket on the head as typifying the women of that island, Monsieur Lescot proved to America that Haiti has culture and social mores as highly developed as any in the western hemisphere. He accomplished all this without injury to the dignity of his office, and without losing caste with Washington officialdom.

As president of Haiti, we believe Monsieur Lescot will display the same keen foresight in inter-cultural relations that characterized him as foreign diplomat. His official recognition of this group of representative American women adds to our respects for him.

This should be a red-letter day for our women of this continent, who will be honored for the first time by the president of a sovereign state. It will be an occasion of equal importance to President Lescot, as he is the first to break away from the fruitless and thoughtless tradition of his predecessors.

Duke To Study Race CCC Setup

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—So impressed was the Duke of Windsor with the excellent records and work of the Negro CCC institutions operating under the Federal Security Administration, he plans to spend a little time on his return trip to Washington studying methods of operation in order to bring this innovation to the Bahamas where it is sadly needed.

Since the population of the Bahamas is largely Negro and since there is little in the line of employment and training for these Bahamas other than domestic work and fishing, the former king thought it a splendid opportunity to give these youths training in other fields whereby they may better serve themselves and the empire.

A trip to one of the nearby Negro camps is planned for the duke and duchess upon their return from the Canadian ranch where they will vacation.

Release of W. A. Domingo from Concentration Camp Expected

BY J. ROBERT SMITH

Release of W. A. Domingo, president of the local West Indies National Council, who was seized and placed in a concentration camp in Jamaica, B. W. I., on his recent visit there was denied officially by Governor Sir Arthur Richards in a cable to the Amsterdam Star-News Wednesday afternoon.

Sir Arthur's statement, reading "Domingo Not Released," was in answer to a cable from the Star-News to him which read: "Learned that Jamaica's defense regulations are now similar ot those of Britain. Under new regulations is W. A. Domingo released? Wire reply, collect, immediately."

W. A. DOMINGO

The Star-News' query was provoked by receipt Monday morning of a special cable from Jamaica reading: "Jamaican officials welcome the decision to make the emergency defense regulations exactly the same as Britain's. Jamaican regulations hitherto gave the Governor the power to detain suspects indefinitely without stating the reason.

A check with the British Consulate revealed that the British representatives are ignorant of whether Mr. Domingo is now free or is still being held behind guarded camp wires, ignorant of what are the reasons for his arrest.

In an interview W. James, one of the many vice consuls, told the Star-News that he had been away from the general offices for some time and was not acquainted with the Domingo case.

"We know nothing about it. We have not a word about it. We have not been advised officially that he was arrested. We were not aware that he was in Jamaica and only knew of it by means of protests from West Indian friends of his here in New York, and those protests were sent to the Embassy," the vice consul said.

The Consul P. Tandy, to whom the Star-News was referred for more authoritative information on the matter declared, "I know nothing about it. I know as much as you do."

No Harlem Secret Service

The British Consulate here denied to the Rev. Ethelred Brown, president of the Jamaica Progressive League that it knew anything about the case or the operation of any British Secret Service in Harlem.

In his letter to the Consalute, dated July 19, the Rev. Mr. Brown stated that he was of the opinion that insofar as Mr. Domingo's arrest was based on his public activities, the information must have been passed on to the British authorities in Jamaica by the Consul-General's office, which in turn was kept posted by the Harlem Secret Service.

Council Responsible

The West Indies National Council, with headquarters at 2007 Seventh Avenue, and with Mrs. Ivy Essien as president, is responsbile for the recent change in the emergency regulations in Jamaica.

Learning of the arrest of Domingo on his arrival in Jamaica last June, the council sent a cablegram of protest to the Governor of Jamaica and to members of Parliament in London demanding Mr. Domingo's unconditional release.

A. Creech Jones, one of the many members of the British Government in London who was astounded at the act of Sir Richards, in a letter to the council stated, "I have received your protest about the detention in Jamaica of W. A. Domingo, your president.

"I am surprised at the news. Immediately, I received it, I made representations to the Colonial Secretary of State and the matter is receiving his urgent attention. I hope we have persuaded him as to the urgency and necessity of action."

Feeling Runs High In Antigua At Failure To Try U. S. Marine For Killing A Native

ANTIGUA, B.W.I.—Relations between natives and U.S. Army Marines continue to be strained as the public clamors for Government action in the case of a native who was shot to death by an allegedly intoxicated U.S. marine on the night of July 12.

The native, known as Oska, was holding a conversation with the marine when the native remarked that he was from the "Point"—a bowery district—where a few days previously another marine had been seriously cut on the wrist in an altercation with another native.

To avenge the cutting, the marine then drew his service revolver and without warning shot to death Oska. A second marine, who was a witness, was severely beaten when the two fleeing soldiers were pursued by natives. The marine responsible for the killing returned to the U.S. military reservation at Crabs.

When local police went to the reservation to arrest the marine for murder, the commanding officer refused to admit them and told them that the matter would have to be handled by U. S. authorities .

Feeling among the natives ran high as the killing occurred on British territory and efforts were made to have the soldier tried by British justice. Negotiations were immediately begun by telegraph between London, Washington and Antigua but months have elapsed with nothing yet done to bring to justice the marine.

Because of the ill-feeling engendered by the killing, marines are now prevented from leaving the military reservavtion and going to town when off duty.

BAHAMAS FOLK MUSIC EN ROUTE TO JUKE BOXES

Nassau Visitors Bringing Them Home to U. S

NASSAU, Bahamas, Nov. 11 [Special].—The haunting melodies which form these islands' folk music may be pouring soon from a million juke boxes and millions of radios in America.

Stirred by the rhythmic ditties which are the stock in trade of Nassau's colored troubadors, a number of recent visitors, including a widely known composer, a Hollywood lyrist, and a publisher, have carried records and sheet music back to the United States. They are convinced they have discovered a musical treat for eardrums grown weary of swing. They intend to capitalize on their discovery.

Origin Is Doubtful.

The origin of the songs which the wandering minstrels croon for tourists is hidden in the Bahamas' past. Some of the doggerel resembles the harmonies which used to rise every evening from the slave quarters of southern plantations before the Civil war. Other tunes were brought to Nassau by seafarers who had picked them up in the course of trading trips thru the West Indies. Still others were born here or on the nearby islands.

These are Negro songs, with the qualities that separate the melodies of the colored people from every other kind of folk music. They are plaintive, wistful, droll, risqué, slapstick, or quaint, depending on the mood of the singer. Some of them are not unlike the Calypso songs of Trinidad.

Probably the one best known to travelers is "Peas 'n' Rice." It came to the Bahamas from Jamaica and was inspired by a shortage of lard when complaining natives, compelled to substitute coconut oil in their cooking, moaned: "Mamma don' want no peas, no rice, no coconut oil."

Heard 80 Years Ago.

One elderly woman in Nassau recalls having heard that song 80 years ago. Several musicians claim credit for having lifted it from the realm of folklore to dance floor popularity. It was used in the movie, "Honeymoon in Bali," and as a result the interest in Bahamian tunes took a decided jump.

Today no ship enters the harbor without its passengers being greeted by the words and music of "Peas 'n' Rice." The copyright is owned by Charles Lofthouse, who has written a score or more of additional verses—not all of them strictly respectable.

Other songs of the islands have unusual titles, such as "My Name Is Morgan, but It Ain't J. P.," "Lord God, Tomatoes," and "Delia Gone" [the Nassau version of "Frankie and Johnny"]. Now that they have been discovered by outsiders, some of them may find a place in the hit parade.

Federal Report Shows Caribbeans With Great Resources; Small Population

Education Is Very Limited; Only 5 Per Cent Can Read and Write

SLAVE TRADE DEVELOPS

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Intrested now in the good neighbor policy, the United States has just released a survey of the Caribbean republics which includes Central American republics and the islands generally known as the West Indies.

Interesting data has been furnished through the office of Joseph R. Houchins, specialist in Negro statistics of the department of commerce, bureau of the census.

"Taken as a whole," says the report, the "Caribbean area is not densely populated, save on half a dozen of the islands. The rich tropical soil could support many more millions of people. Vast mineral resources, especially on the mainland, remain unworked because of the lack of capital and labor for the mines.

"Unlike the United States and other highly industrialized nations, where the birthrate has been falling for centuries, the Caribbean area shows no indication of a decline in its rapid expansion of population. The birth rates in many countries are among the highest in the world, while improved sanitary and medical science hew point after point off the death rate.

"Because of the inability of the natives of the Caribbeans to stand the hard work required of them by their foreign masters, an intensive slave trade developed there. In many areas the original residents have almost disappeared. The islands are populated largely by the descendants of the imported Negroes.

"The Caribbean is a huge ethnological laboratory where European and African races have interbred with the original native stocks to form every combination of mixed racial types.

"These people live in undisguised poverty. Grenada, Martinique and the Barbadoes are more densely populated than any state in the U. S. although their farming is primitive and they are almost entirely without mechanical industries. If the U. S. were as densely populated as Puerto Rico, it would have one and one-half billion citizens—approximately 11 times as many as its present total.

"In other countries, there are not enough people to till the soil, dig the mines and cut down the trees. British Honduras has fewer persons per square mile than does Utah. If the U. S. were as thinly populated as Venezuela, it would have only 30,30,000 inhabitants.

"Education is very limited. The best estimates show that out of every 100 persons the number able to read and write is only five in Haiti, 14 in Guatemala, 23 in Venezuela and Nicaragua and 33 in Columbia."

Some of the better known areas are analyzed herewith.

Haiti, population (last official estimate) 2,000,000; area, 10,204 square miles; products, coffee, cotton, logwood, sisal, undeveloped gold, silver, copper, iron, antimony, tin, sulphur, coal.

Puerto Rico: population, 1,806,000; area, 3,435 square miles; products, sugar, pineapples, oranges, grapefruit, tobacco, coffee; cotton, linen, silk manufacture.

Jamaica: population, 1,174,000 (about 25,000 whites); area, 4,404 square miles; products, sugar, logwood, coffee, bananas, rum, ginger, pimento, oranges, tobacco.

Virgin Islands, U. S.: population 25,000; area, 133 square miles; products, sugar, rum, bay rum, bay oil.

Virgin Islands, (British) population, 6,000; area, 67 square miles. Cotton, tobacco.

Antigua, British, population, 34,000, area, 108 square miles, products, sugar, molasses.

St. Christopher, British, population, 18,000; area, 68 square miles.

Nevis, British; population, 14,000; area, 50 square miles; cotton, cocoanuts.

NOV 15 1941

Anguilla, British; population, 6,000; area, 34 square miles; produces salt.

Montserrat, British; population, 14,000; area, 32 square miles; produces cotton, tomatoes, onions.

Guadaloupe, French; population, 243,000; area, 688 square miles; sugar, coffee, rum, vanilla.

Dominica, British; population, 51,000; area, 305 square miles; limes, fruits.

St. Lucia, British; population, 69,000; area, 233 square miles; cotton, copra, sugar, molasses.

St. Vincent, British; population, 60,000; area, 150 square miles; arrowroot, cotton, copra, sugar, cacao, peanuts.

Martinique, French; population, 255,000; area, 585 square miles; sugar, rum, bananas, pineapples, cacao.

Bahamas, British; population, 68,000; area, 4,404 square miles; including 20 islands, some of which are uninhabited; sponges, sisal.

Barbados, British; population, 193,000; area, 166 square miles (the population density for this small island is higher than that of Japan and six times that of Western Europe) sugar, cotton, tamarinds, molasses, rum.

Trinidad and Tobago, British; population, 465,000; area, 1,978 square miles; oil and asphalt.

Curacao, Netherlands: population, 101,000; area, 584 square miles; corn, stock raising.

Elected To City Council At Trinidad

DEC 20 1941

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad. — Hugh O. B. Wooding, brilliant Trinidad lawyer, was elected to Port-of-Spain city council at his first attempt in the recent annual elections.

Wooding, who is one of the leading junior counsels, secured a clear-cut victory over Reginald Vidale, an ex-school principal and inspector, the retiring candidate.

Councillor Wooding, who won a Trinidad island scholarship from Queen's Royal college, studied law at Gray's Inn, London, and was one of the founders and leading lights of the West African students' union.

In his final examination for call to the English bar he topped the long list of English and colonial students to win the coveted studentship of 300 guineas (about $1,500).

From his return to Trinidad to open practice in 1926 he jumped to the front of junior lawyers and has always been in demand for important litigation.

INSULTING HAITI

MAR 8 1941

Charging that Nazis are mixing in Haitian politics and transforming that little republic into a "trouble center," Pat Frank, a New York POST reporter, proceeds to insult Haiti by asserting that:

"Haiti is five hours from Miami by clipper;
500 years in terms of civilization."

Thus does the "liberal" war-mongering New York POST carry on the Good Neighbor policy.

Frank's statement is intended to add one more pebble to the mountain of detraction which Americans have heaped upon the black republic since its birth.

As a matter of fact, Frank's statement IS true but not in the way he intended it.

MAR 8 1941

There IS about 500 years difference between the civilization of Port au Prince and that of Miami because the former has produced great scholars while the latter has produced none; because the former treats all visitors as equals while the latter does not; because the former permits all its residents to participate in civic life and the latter does not; because the Haitian schools are open equally to all while there is the grossest discrimination against Negro children in Miami; because the former treats white people as equals while the latter treats black people as inferiors; because Haiti has produced great historic characters while Florida has produced none; because the right to work in Port au Prince is open to all while Miami practices the most ruthless and disheartening industrial discrimination against Negroes.

On every count Port au Prince is so superior to Miami (except in press agents) that it is no exaggeration to say that they are separated in terms of civilization by "500 years."

Negro Workers

By Glen Levin Swiggett

Latin-American Suspicions

THE PRESIDENT'S REQUEST to industry through the Office of Production Management that there be no discrimination in defense industries against Negro workers will probably do more to win Latin-American labor's support for his continental preparedness program than the various meetings of diplomatic representatives since the Lima Conference of December, 1933. It should help soften Latin-American labor's dislike of armed intervention in labor strikes, as well as strengthen labor's slipping belief in our Government's continental defense measures.

If so, the significance of the President's message inheres less as a measure for more effective home defense than as an indication, equally needful, of a more sympathetic social attitude on the part of our Government. Therefore, if received by Latin-American labor without reservation, and taken at the tide, this home-defense measure may become the means of allaying labor's suspicions of imperialistic designs in our present Pan American promotive efforts.

THE POLITICAL IMPLICATION of Pan Americanism is equality of treatment. To Latin Americans in general, social equality is implied. Until the recent denial of citizenship to children of non-Spanish-speaking Panaman Negroes, born after November 8, 1903, there has been no significant discrimination against Negroes by a Latin-American government since the conflict, a century ago, between the blacks and protected whites of Santo Domingo.

Our Government has not always been able to give favorable consideration to the social bases upon which Pan Americanism, as Latin-Americans understand it, must rest and to this condition is partly due the fact that dependable Pan Americanism has been slow to develop. In the making of our Nation and in the building of our national economy, certain divisive social attitudes toward non-white races at home has created prejudice against, or prevented recognition of, values in Latin Americans as a people, four-fifths of whom stem from Indian or Negro races.

AFTER THREE CENTURIES of Spanish colonial control, the mestizo made up less than 40 per cent of the population of Mexico; today he constitutes 70 per cent. In Brazil the Negro is the basic stock. Due to this fact, geographically, the Negro is the largest racial bloc in Latin America, including most of the Caribbean countries. Extending down the West Coast, from Mexico to Bolivia-Peru, is the Indian bloc, the second. The white block is the smallest in extent and population.

From Bolivar to Batista, from Placido and Goncalvez Dias to Ruben Dario and Cruz e Souza, called by a Brazilian literary historian the greatest lyric poet of his country, men born to rule by sword or pen have sprung from this new-forming "raza cosmica," to merge imperceptibly into the traditional Ibero-American cultural pattern.

The Latin-American peoples honor these men. Although fixed within frontiers by the spirit of nationalism, the poets, if not the politicians, are not insensible to these common race ties. Negro or Indian, through which they sense some kind of union, even political. This feeling, doubtless, inspires efforts, century old, for a Central American Union and a Caribbean Confederation, the bases of which were laid down before the Spanish-American War by great Caribbean intellectuals like Hostos, the educator; Marti, the poet-soldier; Betances, physician in exile, affectionately known as "El Antillano," and Henriquez Carvajal, statesman and father of Max and Pedro, than whom no living Latin-Americans have, perhaps, greater cultural influence today in Spanish America.

THE CARIBBEAN CONFEDERATION is the cultural type of union to which popular groups in Latin America aspire even today; facing, as labor seems to realize, fascist assault from within, if not aggression from abroad.

Out of a similar situation, at the beginning of the century, came the attack upon Yankee imperialism by the Rodo-Ugarte-Palacios South American intellectuals to whom Pan Americanism meant capitalistic imperialism, while the mission of Spanish Americanism was for spiritual conquest.

Then, as now, the same fear was expressed, and not by irresponsible persons speaking without authority. The neutrality of Argentina and Mexico in the World War of 1914 may have partial explanation in this suspicion of the United States. Since then our government has traveled fast and far in dispelling this suspicion of political conquest.

The President of Mexico has recently denied, publicly, ground for this suspicion. It has just been announced in the press that Acting President Ramon S. Costillo, of Argentina, will appoint, in the interest of continental solidarity, a visiting mission to the United States, the head of which will probably be the chief of the Radical Party, responsible for Argentina's refusal to go along with the United States in the first World War. But today this fear is not political; it is economic, and the suspicion comes from labor.

LOMBARDO TOLEDANO, secretary general of the Latin-American Federation of Labor, can doubtless speak for organized labor, at least in Cuba and Colombia, Argentina and Chile, as well as in Mexico. In a notable address to labor, printed in full in El Universal, June 8, he states labor's position with respect to cooperation now for defense and, later, for a more permanent type of continental union, born of better popular understanding, and not the creation of chancelleries.

Labor's objective, he says, means now the maintenance of sovereignty and peace at home, in fulfillment of labor's aims expressed by the Mexican revolution; and cooperation now, under the principle of self-determination, in the establishment of democratic governments in the Western Hemisphere and, at the end of the War, in creating a world-wide democratic regime.

Plainly, labor's aim is, first, the building of an impregnable national economy for each Latin-American country; to be followed by the building, through labor's cooperative efforts, of some kind of a continental and, eventually, international union of free democratic peoples, patriotically committed to democratic ideals. The United States must not become again, he says, at the conclusion of this War, Latin America's one buyer-creditor-seller nation, as it was in 1918.

THE IMPLICATIONS of this type of union may seem dangerous to some readers. That depends whether it will be used to further national, continental or international ends. The charge of communism of the Stalin stripe is repeatedly brought against the Lombardo Toledano federation. Labor is divided in Mexico on this very issue. The Stalin-Trotsky controversy has had a small-stage setting in Mexico, foremost painters leading opposition camps with fatal results. This division, doubtless, is due to personal reasons. Attacks upon Lombardo's federation by former associates suggest this possibility.

But the fact that President Avila Camacho selected Lombardo Toledano as the channel through which to address Pan American labor shows the strength of Lombardo T. in Mexico and before Latin American labor.

For the present, therefore, understandings, if not agreements, of mutual advantage to our Government's continental defense plans and to union objectives that Lombardo Toledano has in mind are of the highest importance. In view of the racial make-up of the Latin-American labor organizations, no more helpful gesture to this end from the United States could be made at this time than that of President Roosevelt in his request for nondiscrimination against Negro workers in defense industries.

NO "GOODWILL" NEGROES

The Rockefeller Committee for Cultural Relations between the U. S. and Latin America is reliably reported to have about $3,500,000 to spend.

This committee has been paying the expenses of assorted movie actors and other "Goodwill Ambassadors" to Latin America to convince the erstwhile "greasers" that we love them.

It is interesting to note that this adjunct of the State Department has apparently been unable to find any qualified Negro citizens to send to Latin America.

This is singular because three-fifths of the Latin Americans are what are called colored people in this country, and the greatest single obstacle to hemisphere unity is the known Anglo-Saxon snobbery of those Americans with whom Latin America is best acquainted.

Latin Americans are suspicious of the "Good Neighbor" policy because they regard this country justifiably as imperialistic and racially arrogant. They read about our lynchings regularly and are well acquainted with our ghettos and jim-crow accommodations.

They actually believe Negroes here are worse off than they are because they've never heard anything good about them or seen any outstanding representatives of our group except some singers and entertainers.

If the State Department and the Rockefeller Committee were as smart as the Nazi and Fascist propagandists in South and Central America, they would have long since sent some outstanding Negroes as goodwill ambassadors and spent some money countering the propaganda of the Axis with their own propaganda showing the progress of darker people under the Stars and Stripes.

There is, of course, still time to do this.
It would be a smart thing to do.

HAVANA — After four weeks in Cuba, I am still convinced that this island has the world's zig-zaggiest color line. Here are three paradoxes to prove my point:

In the public schools, from the kindergarten to the University of Havana, there are many colored teachers.

Havana's normal school has a brilliant colored woman at the head of its English department. She is Senora Consuelo Serra de G. Veranes, doctor of pedagogy, letters, and philosophy and daughter of a great black Cuban patriot and statesman, Rafael Serra.

The superintendent of schools in Oriente, Cuba's largest province, is also a colored woman.

Catholics Raise Bar

Despite all this, a colored ex-congressman, Senor Abelardo Mola, who is now private secretary to the Minister of Public Works, told me that he could not get his own son admitted to a certain Catholic school.

When he applied one year, the priest informed him that there was no vacancy but that he would put his name on the waiting list. However, the following year he was again given the same "run-around."

True, this was a private institution, but the fact that it was a Catholic school makes the paradox more striking.

Priests All White

While American Catholics are making a special effort to attract colored converts by dropping the bars at Catholic University, the Cuban church is doing just the opposite by this undercover but none the less relentless exclusion of black Catholics from many of its schools. Incidentally, there is not a single colored priest on the entire island.

Colored and white Cubans are now fighting for what they call the nationalization of these private schools.

In all fairness, however, I should add that there is no segregation at any of the church services. Colored Cubans attend all churches and sit wherever they please.

Paradox No. 2 is in the economic field. Although there are many colored policemen, street car conductors and motormen, eminent physicians and lawyers, black Cubans have a difficult time obtaining employment in certain fields.

I have not yet seen one colored waiter in any of the Havana hotels or restaurants I have visited.

One colored Cuban, who opened a night club several years ago which later failed, tells me that he employed five colored men and trained them in the art of waiting table. A representative of the waiters' union called on him to learn why he had not employed union waiters.

"I'll be glad to hire union waiters," the manager replied, "I'll take five, but they must be colored."

"Sorry," the union official replied, "but there aren't any registered colored waiters."

"Well, get out of here!" said the manager, and the interview was ended.

Businesses Few

A glance at the classified ads in Havana newspapers proves that many jobs are handled on a racial basis. "White Cuban wants work as seamstress, chauffeur, cook, or clerk."

Colored businesses are few and far between, and the masses of black folk struggle to keep their heads above the nearby Atlantic.

I've heard that conditions are better generally in Oriente, and at least two colored Cubans have asked me why colored Americans "who have made such tremendous economic progress" don't put some of their capital to work in this island.

Races Mix Freely

Paradox No. 3 is one that is not entirely unfamiliar in the States. One friend of min at the university here, turned up the other day with a brother who couldn't possibly be anything but colored in the United States.

The friend, who is almost as white as a Scandinavian, assured me that they are both children of the same parents. Extensive intermingling of the races here has made the Cubans an unusually beautiful people, and has also made it possible for many Cubans to pass for white.

Men "Pass" Too

Obviously, the women have no monopoly in the "passing" business. Some of the most eminent "white" Cuban men have colored skeletons in their family closets.

Last year, for example, while the House of Representatives was discussing a bill to make discrimination illegal, the presiding officer, allegedly a "Peola," disapproved of the inclusion of the word "color." "Race," he thought, would be sufficient.

Thereupon, a young colored Representative, Salvador Garcia Aguerro, who is one of four colored Communist Congressmen, took the floor and asked the chairman whether it were possible to know how all the mixed-bloods in the Congress felt about the measure.

The uncomfortable chairman replied that there was no way to determine who the mixed-blooded deputies were. When Garcia Aguerro offered to point them out, the chairman hurriedly remarked that that would not be necessary.

No Pure Race

Two nights ago I went to the

A TYPICAL HAVANA BELLE

Palaccio Municipal (city hall) to hear a lecture in which the distinguished anthropologist, Dr. Fernando Ortiz, stated that we are all mulattoes in the sense that there isn't any such thing as a pure race. That seems to go double for Cubans.

In the reception room of the city hall, I noted a life-sized portrait of Theodore Roosevelt in one corner, and just across from him a painting of Toussaint L'Ouverture.

I still say one can't guess these Cubans, as far as the race question is concerned!

PRESIDENT OF HAITI HONORS HOWARD PROF.

Elie Lescot Bestows High Merit Rank Upon Dr. Rayford W. Logan

WASHINGTON, D. C.—M. Elie Lescot, president of Haiti, has just named Dr. Rayford W. Logan, professor of history at Howard university, Commandeur in the Order of Honor and Merit, it was revealed this week by university officials.

This signal honor, which is the rank above chevalier, was conferred upon Dr. Logan especially because of his recent book entitled "The Diplomatic Relations of the United States with Haiti, 1776-1891," published by the University of North Carolina Press.

First Lieutenant

Professor Logan is a product of the Washington high schools and of Williams college, Class of 1917. Immediately after leaving college he enlisted in the First Separate Battalion, D. C. National Guards. He was promoted to first lieutenant and saw action in the Argonne Forest with the 372nd Regiment of Infantry where he received a concussion of the brain.

Dr. Logan remained a number of years in Europe as secretary and interpreter of the Pan-African Congresses and as secretaire-adjoint of the Pan-African association.

After his return to the United States he taught at Virginia Union university, served as assistant to Dr. Carter G. Woodson, and became head of the department of history at Atlanta university.

Dr. Logan obtained his doctorate from Harvard university in 1936 and since 1938, he has been a professor of history at Howard university. He is a member of the Advisory committee of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Rogers Says:-

UNITED STATES NAVAL BASES IN WEST INDIES MAY BE SOURCE OF TROUBLE FOR AROUSED NATIVES

FEB 1 1941

BY J. A. ROGERS

FEB 1 1941

THE popular belief, both in the United States and the West Indies, is that the American naval bases in the latter islands will bring much good—economic and otherwise—to the natives. But following my role of pessimist, I do not intend to rush to conclusions. A pessimist is one who, when everybody else is shouting hurrah, stops to see ust what's in the package. ere goes:

1. President Roosevelt has made it clear that the naval bases in Jamaica, Trinidad, Antigua, St. Lucia, the Bahamas, British Guiana and Bermuda are outposts for the defense of the United States. This means that whenever America goes to war, these places will not only be at war, too, but will be the first to be hit.

Mr. Rogers

From the 16th to the 18th centuries, the West Indies were the great battleground of the European nations, not to mention the pirates; but since the Monroe Doctrine they have been at peace, even when England was at war. Now their immunity is over.

This, of course, will be good for the USA but bad for the West Indians.

WOMEN MENACED

2. THE planting of white garrisons in the islands means the demoralizing of the native women. This always happens when a highly-paid group of single males gets among a poorly-paid native population. Port Royal, Jamaica, where white English troops were stationed until not so long ago, had a very bad reputation, and justly so. Not that I am opposed to race-mixing but it is high time that Negro women stop bearing illegitimate children for white men. Around naval and army bases, too, there is always much homosexuality.

Courier

3. The naval bases may also be bases for race prejudice. There is always much coolr prejudice, largely of the inter-color variety, on the islands, but it is not the virulent kind that exists in Dixie and the Canal Zone. However, this mightn't be an unmixed evil. The prejudiced mulattoes of the West Indies do need a dose of their own medicine to cure them.

LABOR TROUBLES

4. LABOR troubles might result that can be expanded to a point where Latin-American sympathy will be aroused for the islands. The West Indian is hot-headed and has always been known to fight for his rights. Already the Americans have announced that they are going to pay only top island wages, while the island labor unions announce they expect the American rates.

5. Race riots may also be mixed in with labor troubles. American Marines have the reputation of being rioters and brutes. We remember their record in Haiti. Innocent Negroes have been beaten up in New York, too. Right now the Porto Rican newspapers are inflamed over the beating of natives by these marines, the great majority of whom are Southern whites who look down not only on blacks but on foreign whites in the latter's own lands.

Still other factors may be named but we'll skip them.

PROPOSALS SENT

THE West Indies National Council in New York, anticipating trouble, has sent in the following proposals to Washington:

1. Americans not to be permitted to carry arms outside the lease area.

2. There shall be no importation of foreign labor.

3. Persons lawfully within the leased area, while subject to U.S. military regulations, shall not also be subjected to racial segregation or separation of any kind, such as exists in the Southern states or the Canal Zone.

4. Under no circumstances shall Americans connected with the bases be permitted or invited to participate in local police or industrial disputes of any kind.

All in all, it is clear that the situation is loaded with dynamite. If not handled with justice and interracial democracy, there will surely be an explosion, in which, unless I am much mistaken, the Latin-American peoples will side with the West Indians.

Latin-Americans have never loved their big brother to the North, and not without cause.

Political Rule Over Islands Unwanted, Says Speaker

Declaring that the location of United States naval and aerial bases in the West Indies will "alter the entire political and social outlook of the British Caribbean colonies," W. Adolphe Roberts, author and reformer, told a large audience last Sunday that official opinion in the nation's capital was not in favor of complete political control of the islands.

Mr. Roberts, a former president of the Jamaica Progressive League and author of "The Caribbean: The Story of Our Sea of Destiny," spoke under the auspices of the League at the hall of the British-Jamaicans Benevolent Association, 210 W. 129th Street. FEB 8 1941

He declared that three reasons motivated high American opinion against a total West Indian grab. 1. Reluctance of the United States to increase its Negro citizenship by 3,000,000; 2. Unwillingness of American capitalists to encourage the entry of additional tropical and agricultural produce duty free into the United States; and 3. the opinion held by many American economists and politicians that the islands constitute an economic liability.

Mr. Roberts said, that although the United States may not press for complete political control of the colonies, the U. S. government will occupy the position of "protector" of the colonies in the future. And it may be necessary. he said, that the smaller islands he put under American sovereignty.

Negro Wins Auto In Bahamas Lottery

FEB 1 1941

NASSAU, Bahamas—(ANP)— First prize in the Bahamas War committee's raffle, drawn at Clifford Park here, last Friday afternoon by the Duchess of Windsor, was John Bethell, youthful colored Bahamian. The prize was a Plymouth car.

"My mother gave me the ticket for a Christmas present," young Bethell said. "It's the first thing I ever won. I nearly dropped dead from heart failure when the winning number was announced."

The duchess who was accompanied by the Duke of Windsor, the governor, smilingly drew the etntire list of 110 prizes for which some 4,000 tickets had been sold. The governor and the duchess were received on arrival at the field by A. K. Soloman, C. B. E. Chairman; the chief justice; Dr. J. B. Albury, Godfrey Higgs, C. P. Bethell, I. S. O., Herbert McKinney, Sidney Farrington, Dr. D. S. Graham, T. Augustus Toote and Etienne Dupucy, the latter the editor of the Nassau Daily Tribune, and with Mr. Toote, exceedingly well and favorably known among the colored population of the United States.

Haiti To Get $1,100,000 In Lease-Lend Aid

WASHINGTON—(SNS) — The government agreed Tuesday to send $1,100,000 worth of lease-lend materials to Haiti. The agreement, long contended for both in this country and abroad, is an endeavor by the government to reinforce the hemisphere's defenses and make the approaches of the Panama Canal impregnable.

Secretary of State Hull and Fernand Dennis, the Haitian minister, signed an agreement covering the shipments, repayment to be made in imports from the strategic Caribbean island.

The products which will be imported from Haiti in return for defense materials are to be stipulated in future agreements. Probably they will include rubber, sugar, cocoa, fibers and other raw materials.

The Navy, meanwhile, announced it had let contracts for the construction of every warship that has been authorized by congress "in the creation of the greatest array of fighting ships under one flag the world ever has seen.

Haiti Faces Dictatorship Under President Vincent

FEB 6 1941

The plans for the unconstitutional third term for President Vincent of Haiti were prepared for final execution at a meeting called by the Minister of the Interior, Mr. Lelio Joseph, at which were present members of the Legislative Corps, the Secretaries of State and the Mayor of Port au Prince, according to information received from Haiti, Clifford T. McAvoy, Chairman of the Council for Pan American Democracy here at 100 Fifth Ave., announced yesterday.

Mr. Lelio Joseph, reporting on the general situation in Haiti, emprasized that the time was ripe for a final decision regarding the "legalizing" of the third term for President Vincent, and that any delay must be avoided. FEB 6 1941

The meeting of the officials of the Vincent regina then adjourned to the offices of the President of the Senate, General Nemour. A resolution was prepared favoring a third term of five years for President Vincent. This resolution is to be presented at the forthcoming meetings of the Chamber of Deputies, and the Senate.

An interesting sidelight on this meeting is the presence of General Nemour as President of the Senate. General Nemour was formerly Minister of the Interior, and was charged with the responsibility for securing the desired results in the elections to the Chamber of Deputies. Since then, the former President of the Senate was removed and General Nemour named in his place by Presidential decree.

"Thus, the Vincent regime takes the final steps for self-perpetuation in direct conflict with the Constitution of Haiti. Thus, the terror against the people of Haiti, the violence against the opposition parties and candidates is consummated in these anti-democratic schemes to continue the dictatorial rule of President Vincent and his regime," declared Max. L. Hudicourt, secretary general of the Party of Democratic Action of Haiti, in a statement to the Council for Pan American Democracy.

Spingarn Medal For Wm. Pickens

JAN 16 1941

To the Editor:

I don't know who the members of the Spingarn Gold Medal Award committee are. I am not familiar with the yardstick by which the committee measures achivement of individuals whom it considers eligible to become the recipient of the coveted recognition. I don't know the requisite with respect to age, physique or educational or social history. I do recall that some half dozen staff and board members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have received this award through the years.

Since being a staff member does not disqualify a person to have his achievements reviewed by the committee, I am offering the name of William Pickens, director of the branch association, as the person to receive the Spingarn medal for 1941.

I have followed in the wake of many excursions Dean Pickens has made through different parts of the south. I have been present at a number of meetings where he has spoken and I have seen him do and heard him say things in communities where it required a good deal of intestinal fortitude for a Negro to take the position that he took. It does not require a great deal of courage for a person in New York or some other place to denounce an enemy who is a thousand miles away before a sympathetic audience, but for a Negro to "speak the truth" from his heart in Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana and other sister states, he must have something more than it requires to speak on a soap box on Seventh avenue in New York City concerning some white man in Arkansas.

The inconvenience that one must encounter who travels constantly across this area should be included when one is giving a comparative appraisal of a day's work done by a contemporary public servant.

From the class room in Yale university, where Dean Pickens received his Phi Beta Kappa key, up or down to a conference room where he has championed the cause of the under-privileged, he has given a good account of himself in such a way as to reflect credit upon his group and nation.

His work in the field of education would entitle him to the medal. His largest contribution, however, has been made on the public platform as an employe of the advancement association and in the crystallization of favorable public opinion toward minority groups.

In consideration of the fact that so many of the members of the employe staff have been given the medal, it would seem much more difficult for the committee to decide not to give the medal to William Pickens than it would be to confer this distinguished honor upon him. I, therefore, submit his name as my candidate for the Spingarn medal for 1941.

Urges More Posts For Virgin Islanders

JAN 16 1941

To the Editor:

May I make the following comment on the appointment of the governors to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands?

Both appointments have been made apparently as a direct answer to those who wanted a native governor for Puerto Rico and a Negro for the Virgin Islands. The native people in the islands and on the mainland are more concerned about a good governor than about the race to which he belongs.

While there are many native whites and others with ability and experience to fill the post of governor in those islands, and there are also many Negro-Americans on the mainland who might do a fine job there, it must be remembered that there has been and still is a large waiting list of white politicians and admitted friends of the President of the United States who are to be given preference. Puerto Ricans, Virgin Islanders and Negro Americans in the islands and on the mainland are still without sufficient economic and political power even to be consulted about the appointment of executives to insular possessions.

In defense of the native people of the Virgin Islands, I wish to state that since the American occupation, there has been no resentment against the appointment of executives, white or black, when sent from the mainland.

It is natural to assume, however, that if the islands are a part of this Democracy, the native people must be given their share of it uninterrupted by political job hunters. They must keep up a relentless fight until they receive it. The islands should not be used as a bait for politically-minded people. It is to be hoped that the new Governor will keep in his cabinet those natives already there and place additional natives in other administrative offices since some of the old continentals could now stand being displaced and not feel it.

May we hope that he refrain from carrying with him to the islands a top-heavy cabinet of job-seeking friends, as took place when the civil regime was first set up there. The best assurance of cooperation for the new governor of Puerto Rico and also for the Virgin Islands would be more native representation and less invasion of mainland folks, who have a much wider area of opportunity in the United States.

Universal Vote Right Proposed for Jamaicans

MAR 17 1941

(The Times-Picayune Foreign Service)

Kingston, Jamaica, March 15.—Governor Sir Arthur Richards has announced in the legislative council the terms of the proposed new constitution for Jamaica, which include universal suffrage and an increase in the council from 30 to 40 members, with a majority of 14 elected members over the nominated members.

MAR 17 1941

The terms also include addition of the present veto power of nine electives in financial matters and of 14 in all matters. The governor's veto and compulsory powers are to be enlarged.

The proposals were received with mixed feelings as some people believe the island is not yet ripe for universal suffrage, while others feel that with the increase in the governor's powers the political situation will not be materially improved.

A Reader Writes

MAR 15 1941

A week ago we published an article by Mr. W. A. Domingo, president of the West Indies National Council. In it he discussed in a general way the question for a possible demand by the United States for extra-territorial rights in the West Indies in connection with the construction of naval and aerial bases and the maintenance of garrisons in those colonies. Mr. Domingo this week states his objection to the establishment of these bases and discusses the effect such bases will have on the people of the island. (incidentally since this article was prepared it has been reported that Jamaica, largest of the British West Indies Islands in the Caribbean Sea, is to be granted self-rule under a new Constitution.) Mr. Domingo's article follows:

I offer a few objections to the leases, themselves. Many West Indians thoughtlessly echo the white people's opinions on this matter and rejoice that bases are to be established in the islands. But have they thought of the matter in connection with the general welfare of the inhabitants?

It is said that the construction of the bases will be an economic blessing. Unquestionably, some money will be spent, but even in the islands it is being realized that the bases will not solve the unemployment problem. That calls for more than the construction of American naval and aerial bases and garrisons.

It is generally believed that the bases are for the "protection" of the islands, but Mr. Roosevelt has made it quite clear that they are the outer defenses of the United States and American interests. The real purpose of the bases is to make the Caribbean Sea an American (United States) lake. The present war shows that fortifications attract attacks, so the West Indies will bear the brunt of any attack coming from the Atlantic. The "enemy" will have to destroy the bases first before reaching the mainland.

In other words, the lives and property of West Indians are to be destroyed in the defense of the United States. What has happened to London, the Low Countries and Poland will be the fate of Trinidad, Jamaica, British Guiana, Antigna, St. Lucia, Bermuda and the Bahama Islands. Those island-colonies are to be made "shields" for the United States. Of course, that is not a glowing prospect for the inhabintants of the Caribbean colonies.

On the other hand, the Haitians, who have resisted the erection of American bases on their territory for decades, will not have the dubious "protection" which the bases are supposed to afford. At least their lives and property will not be exposed to danger from naval and aerial bombardment which the establishment of bases will invite to the colonies on which they are located.

It must also be remembered that the stationing of a large number of white Americans with plenty of money on the islands will create new social problems. It will have a tendency to encourage allegitmacy and prostitution. The history of Port Royal, Jamaica, and other garrison towns and communities in the United States, Great Britain, South and Central America, and Europe tells an eloquent and sordid story of the demoralization of women living within reach of roving bands of soldiers, sailors and marines.

Already the increase in the number of white men must respect the rights which white men have felt it necessary to demand protection from the past, the West Indies were subject to attack when-ever England dragged them (without their consent) into a war. Now, with the American bases as legitimate objects of attack in times of war located on the islands, the population will run a double jeopardy.

Haitians Want To Know More About Negro

JUN 8 1941

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, June 5——(ANP)——"Send us books and newspapers. We want to know more about the colored Americans," is the constantly repeated request of the people of Haiti to Dr. L. D. Reddick of the New York Public Library, who is on a good-will tour in that country. English is taught in the schools and by the aid of radio broadcasts and movie newsreels from the United States, many adults, also, have learned to read and speak the American language. However, many of the schools and libraries do not receive a single Negro newspaper or magazine from America.

In a conference of Haitian authors and newspaper men, which was arranged by Dr. Louis Mars of Port-Au-Prince, Dr. Reddick was asked about the newest and best books in the fields of history, Negro music, rural sociology and literature.

In his radio broadcast of Wednesday, May 22, over the Port-Au-Prince station, HH2S, Dr. Reddick outlined the general plan for the exchange of books, scholars and newspapers between Haiti and the United States. An arrangement has been completed for sending one copy of every new book published in Haiti to the Schomberg collection of the New York Public library.

"It would be a worthy public service," said Dr. Reddick, "if the leading Negro newspapers of the United States would send copies of each issue to the leading newspapers, libraries and schools of Haiti."

United States Gets Program Designed to Solve Problem

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A far reaching program of economic federation with a view to solving the economic and social problems of the West Indies Islands, has been submitted to President Roosevelt this week, a White House spokesman announced Tuesday.

The plan, which is part of a broad program to help the Caribbean peoples meet the effects of the war, has been receiving the close study of a group of experts, including Charles Taussig, who has made an island-to-island tour of inspection and study, and Rexford G. Tugwell, who has spent several months in Puerto Rico. The islands specifically mentioned, although the whole West Indian group and British Guiana and British Honduras are to be included, are: Cuba, Haiti, Jamaica, the Dominion Republic, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

It is said that "ever since the United States took over complete military responsibility for the Caribbean and made it an American sea, United States officials have been deeply concerned over the economic situation;" and that "impoverishment of the inhabitants would have a disturbing effect on the national defense program," especially the construction and maintenance of naval and aerial bases and garrisons in the area.

The experts advocate a customs union between the United States and the islands and Great Britain, respectively. Agricultural products from the Caribbean would be stored for shipment when cargo space becomes available, and under favorable tariff conditions. Britain and the United States would contribute to a loan to finance the program.

According to the tentative plans of the experts, there would be no interference with the internal economy or the governmental status of each island.

CHANGE THE WORLD

Evidently This Man Is A Dangerous Person for American Writers to Hear

By MIKE GOLD

NICOLAS GUILLEN is a Cuban Negro poet, famous through Latin America, where poetry still has prestige and a home and the common air is full of song.

Mr. Guillen had been invited by our League of American Writers to attend its annual convention opening here on Friday.

Our State Department has vetoed the invitation. Evidently, this poet is dangerous for American writers to hear.

I did not need to do any elaborate research to discover what made our old school tie gang consider Guillen so menacing. I spent some fascinating hours with Guillen several years ago while in Cuba. I have heard his poetry read and sung. I have seen how his figure is instantly recognized in every city, town and country village, of Cuba. The people on the streets greet the Bard with a fervor reserved here in the north mainly for Hollywood critics.

But Guillen has committed many crimes to offend the Groton-Harvard fascists in our State Department. Yes, yes, that is true.

He is a Negro, for one thing, who does not know his place in the racial hierarchy mapped out by Nazis and the Groton boys whose rich papas buy them places of influence in American diplomacy.

Guillen is a Negro who writes and speaks against all racial oppression. He would have been all right if he had confined himself to Hitler's persecution of Jews and Englishmen. But Guillen includes the American oppressors who degrade and barbarize Negroes. That is highly dangerous.

For another thing, Guillen has always been in the foremost ranks of Cuban democracy. He fought for years in the underground movement that finally deposed the bloody and crooked Dictator, Machado. He is active in the democratic united front that still functions in Cuba, despite American sugar barons.

Last but not least, in the criminal dossier: Guillen was a sworn enemy of General Franco during the Spanish tragedy. He spent several months in Republican Spain. He returned to Cuba to become a leader in the campaign that roused overwhelming sympathy and aid for the Republic among the Cuban masses.

All this, naturally, makes him highly repugnant and disliked by our State Department's smart set. What would they have done to Walt Whitman, I wonder? Walt signed a petition for the Chicago Anarchists; as did Bernard Shaw.

About a month ago this same State Department clique invited, by special, formal, government invitation, a certain Cuban journalist to visit us, as an example of the Good Neighbor policy.

This honored guest was an editor of Diario de la Marina, the oldest newspaper published in Havana; anyone who knows Havana knows what the paper represents. It is owned by Spanish merchant millionaire, members of that proud, vulgar, brutal Spanish colony of exploiters that remained in Cuba and still flourishes under the American hegemony.

During the fascist invasion of Spain, the "Diario" was 100 per cent for Franco. Its reports and editorials were of a stripe with those published here in Coughlin's Social Justice.

Today, the Spanish fascist organization, the Phalange, has become Hitler's tool for fascist penetration of South America, and this same Havana newspaper is the Phalange organ in Cuba.

The editor, then is an avowed and well-known fascist, working with Hitler to undermine American and democratic influences in Latin America.

So he is invited to Washington, to be dined and wined, to be shown special honors, as if to encourage him and reward him for his labors.

Nicolas Guillen, enemy of Franco, is denied however, the ordinary visa to enter. Guillen was on the wrong side. He should have been a fascist. Only fascists from South America are welcomed by our State Department, so this lesson teaches us.

Do not imagine for a moment that the lesson is lost upon millions upon millions of Latin American democrats.

They watch, with a suspicion born of a century of Yankee imperialism, every move made by our government.

They do not fail to note that whatever high-sounding words about democracy may be issued from Washington, its deeds speak more loudly. The case of Guillen is only one instance.

The masses of Latin America were solidly for the Spanish Republic. The minority of exploiters was unanimously for Franco. There was a clear class line-up on the issue.

And everywhere, from Puerto Rico, where the American Governor openly attended fetes to help Franco, and forbade mass-meetings for the Republic, all the way down to Paraguay, the influence of United States consuls and business representatives was swung to the fascist side.

The situation has not changed greatly, I fear. The fascist rot evidently spreads from the head—from the inmost secret chamber of the State Department.

A majority of the Latin American countries groan under dictatorships and the rule of a small moneyed clique. The people are in a smoulder of constant revolt—are desirous of democracy. But our State Department consistently encourages the dictators and helps depress and outrage the people.

It will take more than a few patronizing words of good neighborliness to offset this evil tendency.

Our State Department is a partner in establishing and maintaining fascism in South America.

Our State Department still is controlled by the men who supported Franco, and helped overthrow the Spanish Republic.

No Latin American democrat can believe in Roosevelt or Roosevelt's democratic war until they see some visible evidence of it in deeds.

A first democratic deed by Roosevelt might be the wholesale purge of his own State Department. Let him inject a little democracy there before he starts on the rest of the world, is a Latin American opinion commonly held.

Let Roosevelt fight the Hitlers and Mussolinis of South America, not bribe them with millions of dollars in loans. Let him stop honoring fascist journalists and ambassadors, while punishing a distinguished poet as if he were a common criminal, only because he is also a distinguished anti-fascist.

Madam Lescot Expected Husband to Be President

MAY 10 1941

By LULA JONES GARRETT

WASHINGTON

There may be considerable discussion in America, or speculation even in Haiti on the election of M. Elie Lescot to the presidency of the Haitian republic b ascendency of her husband ... no surprise to Madame Lescot.

Madame Lescot said. here, Sunday, that she had expected her husband to become president, that she is only excited and elated that the election has come, and that maybe after the inauguration she will be able to realize the long expected dream has become a reality.

MAY 10 1941

Guest at Reception

The wife of the president-elect Haiti was being entertained at a reception in the home of Dr. Howard Thurman, dean of the chapel of Howard University, and Mrs. Thurman. The affair was one of the many which marked her last week in Washington, where she has lived since her husband became minister plenipotentiary to the United States in 1937.

She had been guest at luncheon at the White House on Wednesday, and Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull had entertained her at tea on Friday. The Pan-American Union had been her host on Saturday and at the time she was in the midst of preparing a presentation of Haitian dances at the Carlton Hotel at a reception on Monday as a parting gesture to her American friends.

She, two daughters, Elyanne and Andree; and a daughter-in-law, Madame Gerard Lescot, who had arrived from Haiti four days previously, arrived at the Thurman residence precisely on the moment of the scheduled time.

Ultra Chic

Those Americans who have seen only her photographs really do not know the appearance of the real Madame Lescot. She is not photogenic, hence the lens in no way captures her charm. She wears clothes with ultra chic. Her ensemble of white and blue frock, blue redingote and hat with a red and a blue feather tipped just north of her nose was worn with an air that her American sisters have prayed for generations to acquire.

On the other hand the daughters' clothes were quiet y simple in the manner of the convent bred. There was a bit of dash, however, in the red and b ue ensemble of the daughter-in-law, who is strikingly blond with that intriguing combination of dark eyes.

MAY 10 1941

Only Counsels

One surmises that Madame Lescot knows a great deal about her country, about its economics and its politics. But, in the true manner of the Haitian woman, she reminds any questioner that the Haitian women do not dabble in economics, and in politics only as wise counselors to their husbands, hence she doesn't discuss the subjects.

Reminded that the first minister to Haiti was Frederick Douglass, and asked whether she thought M. Lescot, after his inauguration, might request a colored minister to Haiti, she said she thought that American attitudes might have a great deal to do with that.

She would much rather talk of her inauguration gown, which she says will, of course, be navy blue and red, the national Haitian colors. The Haitian women, are, however, evolving from a life confined to only devotinal duties of the church and the management of the home and children, to some participation in community and child welfare and relief of the needy.

It is, says Madame Lescot, her most sincere wish to see created in Haiti, a department exclusively concerned with public aid, and to see such a bureau headed by a woman minister of public aid. So it is to be seen that the wife of the new president will not be contented to sit by, an ornament only.

MAY 10 1941

Presented Tokens

The reception on Sunday afternoon was attended by the wives of all the deans and administrative officers of Howard University and representatives of women's organizations.

To Madame Lescot and her daughters were presented two silver vases inscribed "from friends in America." The presentation was made by Dean Susie Elliott of Howard University, following which there were tributes from Mesdames Julia West Hamilton, Charles Thompson, Mary Church Terrell and Lillian Evanti.

Women students of Howard had sent as special representatives Miss Eirene Canegata of St. Croix, Virgin Islands; Miss Rae Eleanor Williams, Miss Perxealia Parker and Miss June McMechen of the music department, who sang two numbers.

Mrs. Thurman was assisted at the serving table by Mesdames Terrell, Hamilton and Albert Dunham. Mrs. Rayford Logan had charge of the guest book.

Other guests were:

Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, Mrs. Kelly Miller, Mrs. Armond Scott, wife of the judge; Dr. Gertrude Rivers, Mrs. Sadie Daniel St. Clair, Mrs. Dorothy Waring, Howard, director of the Garden of Children;

Mrs. Addison Richmond, Mrs. Walter Dyson, Countess Kai de Vermond, Mrs. Mercer Daniel, Mrs. Campbell Johnson, Mrs. Edward Swain Hope, Mrs. Albert Dunham;

Dr. Alethea Washington, Miss Lo's Jones, Miss Celine Labary, Mrs. George Thomas, Miss Alida P. Banks, Mrs. Garnet C. Wilkinson, wife of assistant superintendent of education; Mrs. Ellis O. Knox, Mrs. Ina B. Lindsay;

Mrs. Mordecai W. Johnson, Miss Susie Elliott, dean of women at Howard University; Mrs. Charles H. Thompson, wife of the dean of college of liberal arts; Mrs. Charles H. Wesley, wife of the dean of the graduate school; Mrs. William Stuart Nelson, wife of the dean, of the school of religion; Mrs. Lewis K. Downing, wife of the dean of the school of engineering and architecture;

Mrs. Joseph L. Johnson, wife of acting dean of the school of medicine; Mrs. Russell Dixon, wife of dean of college of dentistry; Mrs. V. D. Johnston, wife of the treasurer;

Mrs. Walter G. Daniel, wife of the university librarian; Mrs. Fred D. Wilkerson wife of the registrar; Dean Lulu V. Childers, school of music; Mrs. Dorothy B. Porter, president of the Howard University Faculty Wives; Mrs. Arthur Mitchell, wife of the Congressman from Illinois;

MAY 10 1941

Mrs. Lula Jones Garrett, Baltimore; Mrs. William Leo Hansberry, Mrs. Rayford Logan, Mrs. Leon Ransom, Mrs. Alonzo Smith, Mrs. Robert Todd Duncan, Dr. Marion T. Wright, Mrs. Mary Huff Diggs, Miss Hazel Harrison, Mrs. Berniece Edwards, Mrs. Louise T. Primas;

Dr. Virginia Alexander, Mrs. Thomas E. Hawkins, Miss Violet Warfield, Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee, representing the National AKA; Mrs. Muriel Milton Alexander; Mrs. Lorimer Milton of Atlanta wife of the new trustee of Howard University; Mrs. George M. Johnson.

A reception was given at the residence of Mrs. Howard Thurman, in honor of Mrs. Elie Lescot, wife of the Haitian president-elect, Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Lescot was presented a silver vase by Miss Susie Elliott, dean of women at Howard University, from American friends. CLAIM DISCOVERY OF HUGE NAZI AIR FIELD IN HAITI

JAN 23

Navy Officials Refuse Comment On Report

WASHINGTON. —(ANP) —Considerable surprise is being expressed here over the alleged discovery of a German air field in the nearby island republic of Haiti.

Skillfully camouflaged, the elaborate airport was discovered accidentally by one William Simms, American pilot of Dayton, O., when he was forced to bring down his plane while on a Caribbean aerial cruise.

The incident as reported in a Havana afternoon newspaper relates that Simms reported his findings to the U. S. officials, and the government of Haiti has taken steps to cancel the lease for the field, which was obtained by German residents in Haiti, the newspaper said.

The field was said to be located within less than 100 miles of the American naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, one of the more important naval bases in the hemisphere.

State department officials denied knowledge of any camouflaged German airport in Haiti. Navy officials refused any comment on the report that such an airfield had been discovered by an American pilot.

Shortly after the publication of the story on this mystery Nazi airport in Haiti, Elie Lescot, Haitian minister to the United States, paid a visit to the secretary of state, Cordell Hull, and assured him that no such field existed in the island.

A NEGRO GOVERNOR

President Roosevelt should appoint some worthy and outstanding colored citizen Governor of the Virgin Islands.

There are scores of colored men and women capable of filling that post or, for that matter, any other post within the gift of the Administration.

Negroes have practically been eliminated from the foreign service and are only to be found in less than a half dozen scattered posts, mostly in and around Africa, and yet Negroes help support the foreign service.

Now is the time for the Administration to do something to show its good will toward one-tenth of America's citizens.

JAN 11 1941

A prominent clergyman has been named as a possible choice, but in our opinion clergymen should confine themselves to saving souls and keep out of politics.

We can think of many more appropriate choices, such as Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Charles S. Johnson, C. C. Spaulding, Charles S. Houston and a dozen eminent Negro lawyers who would add lustre to the post.

Colored citizens are due a certain number of important positions, as are Catholics, Jews and other groups, and they should make known in no uncertain terms that they want their share.

Of Virgin Islanders, 97 per cent are colored, and the White House has been constantly petitioned to name a colored governor, but each time has refused.

A Negro for Governor

JAN 3 - 1941

Why not a Negro governor for the Virgin Islands? There is everything in favor of it and only custom against it. Now when Uncle Sam is doing his ut most in preparing national defense, he can bind to him the people who live on the islands of the Carribean Sea.

Ever since the time when William Jennings Bryan asked for more offices in Hayti for politicians, the impression has prevailed that all the United States wanted of the West Indies is fat pickings. A Negro governor for the Virgin Islands would be the complete "about face" of custom. It would be a master stroke, contributing both directly and indirectly to national defense. The West Indies, the sentinels on guard over the Panama canal, would offer little haven for the enemy in air or on the water if a Negro governor in one of them as their pledge of this country's good will.

The vexatious problem of integrating Negroes into the defense forces which so far is little else but talk, would take on concrete form when a Negro governor is appointed to the Virgin Islands. They could be the rampart which the colored part of America would watch. Just as back in Bible days the Jews on their return from the Babylonian captivity built each man that part of the wall over near his house, let the same wisdom prevail now. Give the Negro defender of democracy a post!

It is possible for President Roosevelt to find qualified material from which to make such an appointment. For instance there is Bishop R. R. Wright, who has the standing and the proven executive ability.

Indirectly also the appointing of a Negro to the governorship of the Virgin Islands would help defense. A major defense hope of the United States is an alliance of the nations of the western hemisphere. So far this effort has bogged down. The nations to the South have many "colored" persons in their citizenship. They do not believe this country is sincere in its democracy because of its race prejudice. A Negro governor for these islands would be assurance that at long last the United States is dropping custom for sense.

U. S. Visa Is Denied Great Cuban Negro Poet

MAY 21 1941

Nicholas Guillen, Cuban Negro poet, has just been refused a visa by the American consulate in Havana, it was announced yesterday by the League of American Writers, Guillen was invited to represent Cuban writers at the Fourth American Writers Congress.

Writing to the League of American Writers and to Richard Wright, author of "Native Son," Guillen said, "It seems to me that our colleagues up there, and particularly the American people, ought to be made aware of this occurence which is truly lamentable and wholly without reason."

The newspaper HOY of Havana on May 15 ran the following story on the refusal of the American Consulate to grant a visa to Guillen:

"On June 6, 7, and 8, there will take place in New York the Fourth Congress of American Writers for the defense of culture, called by the 'League of American Writers.'

"This meeting has a special significance at this time when humanity is going through one of the most critical periods of its history. That is why the American writers seek to meet in a great congress to consider and resolve the grave problems which the present world crisis presents to thinking, sensitive men.

"In its Call to the writers of the American Union, the League declared that our continent ought to be defended, not involved in the war, not subjected to dictatorship, nor to enslavement by dictators, nor to enslavement by tactics of imperialist expansion. 'Our lives and our work,' declared the manifesto of the League, 'as craftsmen and as human beings are at stake.'

"It is, then, a Congress of democratic writers, vitally interested in the struggle for culture, which places itself at the service of the people, to protect them against the grave dangers which the present war has created.

"To this Congress, whose extraordinary significance has been explained, the poet Nicolas Guillen was expressly invited to speak for the people of Cuba before his colleagues meeting in New York.

"Contrary to all hopes, the Consulate of the United States in Havana decided that Guillen could not go to the United States, and refused to grant him a visa, a fact which will prevent Guillen from participating in the deliberations of the Congress in the name of his people.

"The decision of the American consulate is a strangely arbitrary one and reveals once more the false spirit of the deceptive democracy of the big business magnates who dominate America.

"While writers who are openly in the services of fascism receive free access to the United States, others who, like Nicholas Guillen—anti-fascist and anti-imperialist—have placed their art at the service of the pepole, find themselves prevented from entering the United States even when it is a question of exercising a professional function and when he has been expressly invited by an organization of such prestige as the League of American Writers.

"Today, Guillen wrote to the League, protesting against the anti-democratic action in order that the American writers learn of this case and denounce it to their people."

Nicholas Guillen is one of the great poets of the Negro race, and, in the judgment of responsible critics, one of the great poets of the modern world. He was born in Camaguey, Cuba, thirty-five years ago, and has been in turn reporter, typographer and state functionary. "At present," as one bibliographer puts it, "he is only a poet, a great poet." His first volume, "Songoro-Cosongo," was published in 1930. His "West Indies" appeared in 1934, and his "Cantos Para Soldados y Sones Para Turistas" ("Songs for Soldiers and Sones for Tourists") in 1937. This last work is distinctly democratic and anti-imperialist in character.

Guillen has run through many "manners" and, like Picasso, has displayed an equal virtuosity in them all. It is significant that in the "Antologia dePoesia Negra Hispano-Americana" ("Anthology of Spanish-American Negro Poetry" edited by another distinguished Cuban Negro poet, Emilio Ballagas, and published in 1935 in Madrid, Guillen is the one poet who appears in all eight sections. His work has been praised by leading Spanish writers, from Unamuno down, and Juan Marinello, in his "Literatura Hispanoamericana" devotes an entire chapter to the "Exploits and Triumph of Nicholas Guillen." Langston Hughes, to whom some of Guillen's pieces are dedicated, is among his admirers.

Say More Native Representation Needed in Virgin Islands Posts

JAN 18 1941

NEW YORK. — Commenting on the appointment of two governors to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands, Oshley L. Totten, president of the Virgin Islands Civic Association and International secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters states as follows:

"Both appointments have been apparently as a direct answer to those who wanted a native governor for Porto Rico and a Negro for the Virgin Islands. The native people in the islands and on the mainlands are more concerned about a good governor than about the race to which he belongs.

"While there are many native whites and others with ability and experience to fill the post of governor in those islands, and there are also many Negro- Americans on the mainland who might do a fine job there, it must be remembered and there has been and still is a large waiting list of white politicians and admitted friends of the President of the United States who are to be given preference. Porto Ricans, Virgin Islanders and Negro Americans in the islands and on the mainland are still without sufficient economic and political power even to be consulted about the appointment of executives to insular possessions.

"In defense of the native people of the Virgin Islands, I wish to state that since the American occupation there has been no resentment against the appointment of executives white or black, when sent from the mainland.

"It is natural to assume, however, that if the islands are a part of this Democracy, the native people must be given their share of it, uninterrupted by political job hunters. They must keep up a relentless fight until they receive it. The islands should not be used as a bait for political minded people. It is to be hoped that the new governor will keep in his cabinet, those natives already there and place additional natives in other administrative offices since some of the old continentals could now stand being displaced and not feel it.

"May we hope that he refrain from carrying with him to the islands, a top-heavy cabinet of jobseeking friends, as took place when the civil regime was first set up there. The best assurance of cooperation for the new governor of Porto Rico and also for the Virgin Islands would be more native representation and less invasion of mainland folks, who have a much wider area of opportunity in the United States.

MOXEY RIGBY IS ASSIGNED

Becomes First of Race To Hold Position In Nassau

JAN 4 1941

Negro political circles buzzed with satisfaction on Saturday morning when a South Jamaica lawyer was named an assistant district attorney in Nassau. It was the first time since the county was organized in 1898 that a Negro had ever held the position.

Moxey A. Rigby, 41, the appointee, resides in Freeport and has his law offices at 160-17 South street, South Jamaica. His annual salary will be $2,-500.

WEST INDIES STATIONS

JAN 4 1941

The War Department announces that the initial garrison of U. S. troops for its recently acquired Newfoundland base will leave some time this month.

The other bases in islands stretching from Bermuda to Trinidad will soon have to be garrisoned with other U. S. troops.

It would be for the best interest of all concerned if these new posts were garrisoned with Negro troops.

There was friction in Haiti throughout the occupancy by American troops because the white soldiers were not instructed to adopt a different attitude toward the colored people there than they were accustomed to showing toward American Negroes.

There has recently been friction in Panama because of the attitude of white American soldiers toward the natives.

There will very likely be friction throughout the British West Indies when and if the natives come into contact with white American troops.

It is too much to expect the ordinary white soldier to drop all his carefully indoctrinated color prejudices, and experience has taught us that neither military nor naval commanders are going to instruct them to do so.

Any such disturbances due to white soldiers running rough-shod over the feelings of the overwhelmingly colored population will knock the Administration's "Good Neighbor" policy into a cocked hat.

South American countries, now being industriously wooed with flattery and credits, might suddenly grow cold toward the United States, as they did when our troops grabbed Haiti, Santo Domingo and Nicaragua, and invaded Mexico not so long ago.

The danger of friction between U. S. troops and British West Indian populations would be removed if Negro soldiers garrisoned these new bases.

It has been the policy of the War Department to "bury" Negro soldiers in Regular Army posts far removed from civilization, or to split up colored units and use them as domestics at Army service schools.

The 25th Infantry has been "buried" on the Mexico-Arizona border for a generation. The 24th Infantry has been "buried" in Georgia since the World War. During the same period the 9th and 10th Cavalry have had "dog robbing" assignments at Service schools.

With the swelling of the Army with Negro draftees and the creation of additional colored regiments, the problem of where to "bury" the dark contingents looms even larger in the mind of the white command.

The problem can be solved by stationing the Negro troops in Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, St. Lucia, Trinidad and British Guiana, not to omit the Canal Zone.

Negro troops so stationed would be among people of their own color and the goodwill engendered through association between natives and the military staffs would be most beneficial to the United States in carrying forward its "Good Neighbor" policy.

Since the bases are vitally important to the nation's defense, it is essential that they be garrisoned by troops thoroughly American and without European connections or sympathies. This is also an excellent reason why the Canal Zone should be garrisoned by Negro units as far as possible.

Here is an opportunity for the Government to take a step that will satisfy everybody concerned and dissatisfy nobody.

It is a step that our readers should urge upon Secretary of War Stimson with all the persuasiveness they can command.

Say More Native Representation Needed in Virgin Islands Posts

JAN 18 1941

NEW YORK. — Commenting on the appointment of two governors to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands, Oshley L. Totten, president of the Virgin Islands Civic Association and International secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters states as follows:

"Both appointments have been apparently as a direct answer to those who wanted a native governor for Porto Rico and a Negro for the Virgin Islands. The native people in the islands and on the mainlands are more concerned about a good governor than about the race to which he belongs.

"While there are many native whites and others with ability and experience to fill the post of governor in those islands, and there are also many Negro- Americans on the mainland who might do a fine job there, it must be remembered and there has been and still is a large waiting list of white politicians and admitted friends of the President of the United States who are to be given preference. Porto Ricans. Virgin Islanders and Negro Americans in the islands and on the mainland are still without sufficient economic and political power even to be consulted about the appointment of executives to insular possessions.

"In defense of the native people of the Virgin Islands, I wish to state that since the American occupation, there has been no resentment against the appointment of executives white or black, when sent from the mainland.

"It is natural to assume, however, that if the islands are a part of this Democracy, the native people must be given their share of it, uninterrupted by political job hunters. They must keep up a relentless fight until they receive it. The islands should not be used as a bait for political minded people. It is to be hoped that the new governor will keep in his cabinet, those natives already there and place additional natives in other administrative offices since some of the old continentals could now stand being displaced and not feel it.

"May we hope that he refrain from carrying with him to the islands, a top-heavy cabinet of job-seeking friends, as took place when the civil regime was first set up there. The best assurance of cooperation for the new governor of Porto Rico and also for the Virgin Islands would be more native representation and less invasion of mainland folks, who have a much wider area of opportunity in the United States.

Trinidad Workers Form Socialist Party; Highest Wage Is $1.20 Daily

Better Pay Sought On Constructing U. S. Naval Bases Despite Opposition of Island Wealthy

MAR 1 1941

Natives Move to Counteract Race Hate

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, B. W. I. — (By Nancy Cunard for ANP) — Surely it is no exaggeration to say that a historic movement has just occurred here in Trinidad which may affect the future of labor in this island, and possibly give an encouraging lead to the other British Wast Indies (where labor conditions are just as bad if not worse)to do likewise—the calling for the founding of the Trinidad Socialist party.

Frankly, labor conditions are appalling here. Yet Trinidad is considered generally, and by specialists in colonial matters, such as Professor MacMillan, author of "Warning from the West Indies," the "best" of the entire British Antilles, Jamaica included. It is said to have, and it has, the "best" wages so that workers emigrate here from the smaller islands, Barbadoes, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Antigua, and others. I have met two women workers from Grenada, one is a cocoa-picker; surely nothing could be worse than her lot, and yet . . .

Look now at these "best" wages, bearing in mind always that the whole cost of living, all food, all commodities, some rents, have gone up between 30 and 50 per cent since the start of the war, and are continuing to rise. In today's "Sunday Guardian" here one reads that government is going to employ a labor adviser to prove into this—in April. "It has been the intention of government for some time to institute an inquiry into the basis of the cost of living index figure." Will this cause prices to drop? Elsewhere in the same issue of the same paper: "The index report showed that the increase for food alone since 1935 was 33 per cent." There it stands, officially. Clothing has gone up 51 per cent, (the kind of clothes bought by workers). Fuel, light and washing-ing, 19 per cent. In all, 35 per cent" it is because I have been told so by native Trinidadians accustomed to the varying prices of life here and to handling figures and statistics. Before the war Trinidad was already a shockingly expensive place to live in, for the poorest as well as for the not so poor.

For the American reader it is necessary to state, and necessary for him to remember, that Trinidad currency, dollars and cents, is not equivalent to American dollars and cents. The dollar here is worth 4 English shillings and 2 pence; the American dollar today is worth one dollar and 17 cents in Trinidad currency, or 17 cents over the dollar. A Trinidad cent is an English halfpenny, or a little less than one American cent.

(Why Trinidad, so British a possession (crown colony) should have to count in dollars and cents as well as in English shillings and pence, instead of like all the other British West Indian islands in English currency alone sterling) is just one of Trinidad's many anamalies, a highly irrating one to all non-Trinidadians!)

Wages run: Oil Workers (mainly Negroes and highest paid of all Trinidadian workers) from 60 cents to $1.20 per day (unskilled and skilled labor), with the small war bonus of one cent more per hour, and working from 8 to 9 hours. Sugar Workers (mainly East Indian) cane cutting, from 30 cents to $1 a day. Often 12 hours work. Children (the weeding gang) get 10 cents a day for the same kind of hours. Cocoa Pickers and Coffee Pickers—"job work"; the men, 40 to 45 cents, the women, 20 to 25 cents per day. Therefore a Trinidad woman worker of this category works for less per day than it costs to buy one pound of pork meat which costs 24 cents! These are Trinidad's main exports (coffee is a minor one but classifiable as same type of work as cocoa). Today "cocoa is in a decline." All these workers are colored.

Has government any particular interest in wages so spalling low? All of the speakers at the meeting where this call was made for the founding of the Trinidad Socialist party stated that government always favors the planters' side and of course, it is to the vast advantage of the planters, and oil; sugar and other companies to keep wages at rock bottom standards, indeed, well beneath, for people simply cannot live on 20, 40, 60 or even 80 cents a day, even when they are single and do not have to provide for a whole family out of the daily wage.

The meeting was called by those of the Trinidad Public Works and Public Service workers, and it was a very large and impressive one, the first I have been to here. It was called most particularly to represent to government, as well as to the public, that Trinidad workers cannot accept to be paid, as it is feared very much they may be on a scale of local wages for work done for the Americans on the new military bases which the British government has leased to the United States for 99 years. This is a most vital question, one which is -'Public Subject No. 1" until it is settled.

The planters and companies are already trying to influence the American authorities not to pay more than they give their own workers; it is not yet known in what manner the Americans will react to this, and what they will decide to do. Trinidad workers are very glad indeed of the coming of the Americans; they feel that they stand the chance of getting a square deal, and President Roosevelt is spoken of here with great admiration and always with sympathy.

The meeting itself (in Prince's building, Trinidad's biggest public hall) was extremely stimulating, for the six speakers are all fearless people very well up in their facts, and all of them excellent speakers. They were Harper, a young mulatto; Kay Donnellan, a young Irish woman teacher and writer who edits one of the rare progressive and intellectual-political magazines here (New Dawn); Adrian Rienzi, an East Indian barrister and mayor of San Fernando, Trinidad's second city; Mentor, Negro councillor of the same town; Rupert Gittens, a young Negro author, a scholar; and Ashby, Negro, secretary of the Public Works. The audience was electrified by what the speakers said, and a definite note of hope that "something is going to get done at last" was present throughout the evening.

Several of the speakers pointed out that it is more than likely that the Americans, at least some of them, may bring their race prejudice here, to the great detriment of present interracial relations; resolutions were passed asking that the government make a law by which such will be considered a punishable offense. It will be interesting to see what happens on this score. Harper referred to the wretched condition of the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands (a matter known to all who know anything of the West Indies), and stated that the Trinidad government did not consult with the citizens of this island when leasing the bases. "Insist on the American scale of wages," said Harper.

Most important is the following point: in Cuba, at the American-leased bases of Guantanamo (I quote from a printed sheet distributed during the meeting) "Common labor is divided into three classes and their minimum rates of pay are as follows: Class 3, $2.24 per day; Class 2, the workers have an 8-hour working day with quarters and facilities for buying commodities on the base, just as the enlisted personnel (soldiers or sailors)."

Presumably, as this is in Cuba it refers to Cuban dollars, which are a fraction higher at present than the American dollar itself; but even if it were translated into Trinidad dollars, the beneft would already be very considerable, as can be seen by comparing with the local wage scale let us call it an intermediate 80 cents a day, though that is putting it high. Public Works laborers receive 70 cents a day here.

Ruppert Gittens offered some further figures: in the Virgin Islands, for work known as "emergency work" the Americans pay 17 cents an hour; the lowest in Cuba (employed by Americans) is $2.25 per day.

The meeting ended in unanimous applause. I saw very few white faces among the 2,500 or so people there and thought: "How can they find out what the people of Trinidad are thinking and feeling about matters of vital interest affecting the entire community, such as this very question of American wages? It is of paramount importance; doubly so because it is making the workers here (and all are colored) conscious that they have the same rights to be employed at proper salaries as those of Cuba, Bermuda, Virgin Islands.

And now, a last important point: To assert that a British Socialist it not as true a patriot, not as good an anti-Nazi as a man of any other party, would go very ill indeed in England these days, and one imagines that the authorities here will bear this in mind. The loyalty of all the West Indians of all races in all the islands is paramountly patent, beyond any possible query. Even more than the white race has the colored race to loathe Hitler and detest Nazi race theories.

I firmly believe that the men and women of these islands would rise with naked fists if they had no other arms to resist an invasion. How much more so than do they deserve decent treatment (which, so far, they have never had. Decent treatment is proper wages, proper housing, better food, possible prices, a decreased instead of an increased standard of living. As things are now they are in want, and in want they will remain until these things are changed; that is obvious. But today, "God Save the King" and "John Brown's Body," the great anti-slavery hymn of the Negro (and it was spontaneously sung at the end of this meeting) can, and do, go hand in hand, and it is right that they should—for that can be a true British Democracy.

Lescot Loses Chance To Haitian Presidency

MAR 29 1941

WASHINGTON, D.C., Mar. 27—(ANP)—Any hope Elie Lescot, formerly minister to the United States from Haiti, may have had for the presidency of his country was rudely dashed to earth last week when the Haitian Chamber of Deputies and the Senate concurred in a resolution giving Stenio Vincent another five-year term as president of the little island republic.

Lescot had previously on frequent occasions declared himself a friend of the American Negro and openly advocated a closer alliance between the race in this country and in his own native Haiti, and convinced the people that he is entitled to this additional term, against the precepts of the Haitian constitution.

Hated by Hatian exiles now in this country, Vincent is the target at which [illegible] a political intrigue in Haiti is aimed.

MAR 29 1941

Having been in office ten years on May 15, Stenio Vincent will have five more years, giving him the longest term of office of any ruler of the turbulent republic since its inception, provided, as it has been mentioned, there is no upheaval to throw him out of office.

Natives Envision Biggest Boom Since Building Of Panama Canal.

DEC 21 1940

WASHINGTON, D. C. — United States expenditure of more than $60,000,000 in the construction of naval and aerial bases and garrisons in the Caribbean was hailed in the West Indies and high official quarters in London as opening a new era of rapid economic development of the islands, it was learned in the nation's capital this week.

The Duke of Windsor following his recent conference with President Roosevelt on his Caribbean cruise of inspection of possible sites for the bases, emphasized the economic factor in the bases deal, when he told of efforts toward getting the United States Government to cooperate in the economic development of the hard-bitten colonies. In Barbados, an economic mission of American experts has been studying social conditions before selecting the sites.

The colonies affected are Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Antiqua, St. Lucia and British Guiana, whose populations are said to be ill housed, ill clothed and ill fed.

In spending the $60,000,000 in the West Indies, the natives are said to vision a second boom as in the days of the building of the Panama Canal, when artisans, skilled workmen and common laborers received employment at high pay for several years. Thus, the building of these bases are expected to prove not only a protection for the islands and the United States, but the economic salvation of 3,000,000 souls.

"NEW DEAL IN JAMAICA"

THE FIGHT TO PRESERVE the British Empire has resulted in the dropping of the color bar by the British, according to a dispatch from London by George Padmore to The Crisis magazine. The dire need of the British for unity during the war has resulted in an about face in their attitude toward the colonial races, Mr. Padmore reports.

This volte-face, says Mr. Padmore, is best manifested in the recent decision of the British government and high command to abolish the color bar in the imperial forces of the crown, especially the Royal Air Force, until now the exclusive preserve of Anglo-Saxons . . . The new policy is quite simply opportunistic. It is dictated by the imperialistic needs and influenced by the present military problems confronting Britain since the collapse of France and other Continental allies.

Another evidence of the changing attitude of Great Britain may be seen in the following dispatch in the daily press:

NEW DEAL IN JAMAICA

"Jamaica, the largest British Island in the Caribbean, will be granted today the right to elect its own officials under a new constitutional government, replacing its present form of supervision. . . . Heretofore Jamaica had been administered by a colonial government, officials of which were chosen in England."

The significance of this announcement can not be overestimated. The allies cannot justify their condemnation of the dictator nations so long as they themselves exercise dictatorial control over their colonial races. If the war continues long enough, the natives of the West Indies and Africa may be permitted to share in the democracy we hear so much about these days.

American Racial Prejudices Make Trouble For Sailors In West Indies

MAR 20 1941

THREE white American sailors were convicted recently in Trinidad, British West Indies, and ordered to pay $10.00 each or serve 14 days in prison for assaulting a colored man.

The case is not important in itself, except as it indicates that United States naval authorities, as they establish their naval bases in the West Indian islands, must find some way of making white sailors understand that it will not be possible to assault colored men in the West Indies with impunity.

MAR 20 1941

Unless this is done, considerable trouble is likely to result from sailors exhibiting their racial dislikes just as if they were in some southern port in the United States.

HAITI

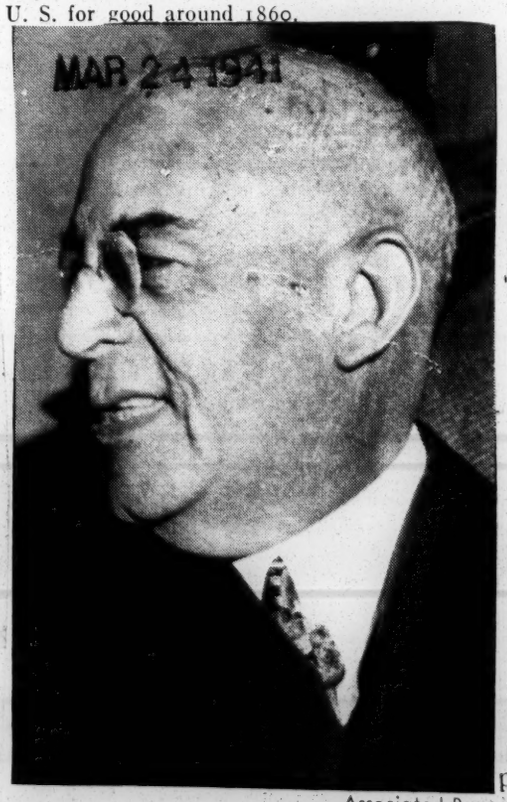
Five More Years for Stenio

President Stenio Vincent of Haiti is a silver-haired, silver-tongued politician who is supported as loyally by the lesser politicians of Port-au-Prince as he is hated by Haitian exiles in Harlem. His friends say he is a statesman; his enemies call him a dictator; both agree that he likes a pleasant job. Such a job is the Presidency of Haiti.

MAR 24 1941

* According to Willkie, they emigrated first in 1848, went back to Germany, returned to the U. S. for good around 1860.

MAR 24 1941



Associated Press

HAITI'S VINCENT
He told it to the Marines.

More Spanish than any other kind of blood fills the veins of Haiti's Stenio Vincent. He is a natural orator and his oratory has carried him far. On the strength of it he had become President of the Chamber of Deputies when, in 1915, after years of ferment, President Vilbrun Guillaume Sam was massacred with 167 political prisoners and the U. S. Marines marched in. To a Marine officer who ordered the Chamber dismissed, Stenio Vincent answered: "Merde." That made him a sort of hero.

MAR 24 1941

Out of a job, Stenio Vincent went to the U. S. to lobby for withdrawal of the Marines. He got nowhere and drifted back to Haiti. By 1930 he had convinced a majority of the people that he could get rid of the Marines, and so they elected him President. Three years later Franklin Roosevelt inaugurated his Good Neighbor Policy: the next year Stenio Vincent went to see him and President Roosevelt withdrew the Marines. In his campaign Stenio Vincent had also plumped for a single five-year Presidential term, but when 1935 rolled around he changed his mind, ordered a plebiscite and was voted another five years in office. These five years will be up next May 15.

MAR 24 1941

Under President Vincent Haiti has enjoyed one of the quietest periods of its history. The President's friends attribute this to his ability; his enemies attribute it to despotism. Whatever the reason, last week President Vincent's loyal Chamber of Deputies considered a resolution to the effect that "exceptional circumstances that confront the nation" make it imperative to continue him in office. Not a voice was raised in dissent. Four days later the Senate passed the same resolution, also unanimously. Unless dissatisfied palace plotters and the Harlem exiles get together and oust Stenio Vincent by force, he will continue to bask in office until 1946.

MAR 24 1941

A criticism often voiced against the Good Neighbor Policy of President Roosevelt and the U. S. State Department is that their good neighborliness encourages Latin American caudillos to perpetuate themselves in office. The State Department's answer: U. S. policy is neither to encourage nor discourage any political factions in other countries, but to let those countries work out their own problems without interference. U. S. abandonment of interventionism has coincided with an epidemic of continuismo throughout Central America. Reading from north to south:

In Guatemala President Jorge Ubico, elected in 1931, held a plebiscite in 1935, extended his term until 1943. In El Salvador Vice President General Maximiliano Hernández Martínez took office in 1931 after an Army revolt had deposed President Arturo Araujo. Refused recognition by the U. S., he resigned in 1934, ran for the Presidency, was elected in 1935. In 1939 a constitutional convention extended his term until 1945. President Tiburcio Carías Andino of Honduras took office in 1933, has suppressed at least five attempted revolutions since then. In 1939 Congress extended his term for ten years. In Nicaragua President Anastasio Somoza took office in 1937 and promptly revamped the constitution. By resigning the Presidency (after appointing himself Acting President during his absence from office) he was able to have himself inaugurated a second time in 1939 for a longer (eight-year) term, ending in 1947. Panama's President Arnulfo Arias pushed through a new constitution within three months of his election last year (TIME, Dec. 30), is now President until 1946.

West Indies Send Many To Fight Hitler; Are Given Equal Standing With Whites

Shows Moving Pictures of Operations in Ethiopia and Sudan-Ethiopian Border

MAR 29 1941

Wants Chance At Hitler

561

By NANCY CUNARD

BARBADOS, British West Indies—The British West Indies are sending quite a number of young men to England or "overseas." Among volunteers of color in the airforce are three Barbadians, Bruce Fitz G. H. Miller, an R. A. F. recruit; Willie Foster, formerly cable and wireless employe now wireless operator, and his cousin, Leon Foster, interer, nof a gunner in the R. A. F. In Trinidad among many others, are Julian Marryshow, son of Albert Marryshow, member of ahe legislative council of the Island of Grenada and dynamic newspaper-man, having founded there "The West Indian", a well composed daily, in 1915, and whom I saw the other day on my way here. MAR 29 1941

Another young man, going to England or other "overseas" very shortly from Trinidad is James Hyde, a former civil servant, whose desire to experience "what the world is like over there" is second only to that of having a go at Hitler. There are discussions speculations in Barbados as to whether these young pilots, observers and other volunteers, when they do get abroad, will be allowed to serve in the army and the air-force on the same footing as whites I think there is no doubt on this matter; they are doing so. The first colored airman, it was started not long ago in a London paper, was an African Alakija, an Oxford student until then; he was given a rousing farewell on proceeding to activeser vice by several governmental personalities who have administrated British West Africa, as I reported recently.

Doubtless, this point being one of eternal query, the position should be clearly stated by the authorities in Great Britain. If war continues a long time, as i appears to us it well may, the England will need and call upon all of her subjects, irrespective of race and color. So far the West Indies are removed from contact with war, save with what they can read in the press. Their effort in contributing money is stupendous; their loyalty unquestionable. But there is ever present and naturally so, this particular point: are we colored ones going to be treated like the whites? I trust that Mr. Hyde will write home from England and tell us how it is there in connection with this. MAR 29 1941

Trinidad's governor, Sir Hubert Young, is just back from consultations in England, and in a speech made on his return stated that the cadets of the Trinidad Air Training Scheme show as high a standard of training as any cadets of their age from any other part of the empire, and said that this reflects well on their training at Piarco (one of the island's present military centres).

Of interest here was the showing last week of the first film picture taken of the operation in Ethiopa and on the Sudan-Ethiopian border. Inncidentally, this border is not more than a long line of barbed wire in the flat sandy desert. When Kassala was taken from the Italians that meant the removal of all danger of any possible attack by them on the Sudan. Excellent shots of tanks and other chariots of war appeared, then Haile Selassie, looking very fit and strong, confident, as well he may be now, in the reconquest of his country. South African troops in this brief but impressive news reel show that some, at least, are African; till now one had always thought of South Africans as "whites only". South African Negroes photographed in the reel as regular troops as well as auxiliaries, such as camel-drivers, etc The shots of the Ethiopian uplands show them as a terrifying sort of perpetial "No Man's Land".

This past year of war is described as an eventual one in the military annals of the British commonwealth. The year of fighting that has passed since the everincreasing arrival of empire troops on the innumerable battlefields says that much action has been seen by East and West African native troops, by Indians, South Africans, Rhodesians, Australians, New Zealanders. The Indians are fighting alongside of the Abyssinian Patriots, in Eritrea and Western Abyssinia. The individual qualities of all these fighters of so many different nationalities has been proved, as also "the unity of aim" of the empire. There is much collaboration from the African Negroes of the Gold Coast, and Tanganyika. The first contingent of young men from India, natives, has arrived in England for factory training.

Not long ago a Frenchman resident of Trinidad for 13 years was able to get back there from France. He stated that "France will fight on", despite its present subservience to German. Mr. Sauvageon, who volunteered to go to France at the start of the war, said that he had spent many months with the French colonial troops in Marseilles. "The battle is far from over", he stated, and said that France, contrary to some reports, is terribly destroyed. (That is so in the North, and in all the parts where the Germans passed along the channel, is unquestionable. My own town, five miles from my house in Normandy, was razed to the ground by a series of 20 air raids, as told me by an eye witness, a Spanish refugee who spent that ghastly June of last year in it, and whom I saw in Mexico).

Many are hungry, many sleep out of doors because their houses are gone, said Mr Sauvageon, and whole regions are destroyed. He described France as a "big prison", because so many are in concentration camps. (What will have become of so many colored and African people? Where are the numerous Martiniquians for instance who were under arms?) Himself slept for six months on the bare grounds, both in France, and in Martinqque on his way to Trinidad, and in the refuge ship which brought him men were huddled on the decks with only sardines and some bread to eat each day. MAR 29 1941

"The French are ready to revolt," stated Count Jacques de Sieyes, U. S. representative of General de Gaulle and Free France; this he could see by letters which managed to come to him from Paris. "Not only are the French people straving but are also ready to revolt if they had the means to carry it out".

Elie Lescot, former Haitian Minister to the United States, who resigned to become a candidate for the Presidency of Haiti in succession to President Stenio Vincent, won that highest of Haitian offices on Tuesday of this week by a vote of 56 of a total of 58 national assemblymen. Lescot's candidacy, when first advocated by Vincent, was protested by a crowd of several thousand persons, who broke down the doors of the legislative building in Port-au-Prince and broke up the furniture. Following his election on Tuesday, Lescot in a short speech pledged himself to follow the policies of the Vincent administration, which goes out of office May 15. President-elect Lescot was a popular figure in Washington.

American Sailors Are Made To Pay For Insulting Hampton Inst. Envoy

By NANCY CUNARD

APR 5 - 1941

BARBADOS, British West Indies.—(ANP)—The island is now talking of a disgusting "color incident" which occurred in Trinidad during recent carnival.

It concerns a person of considerable importance, Ellis A. Williams, accredited goodwill envoy of Hampton institute, and some American sailors. Doubtless reported in the Trinidad press at the time, the result of the case in court now finds a large place in the daily paper here.

Briefly what happened was this: Williams, just back from San Fernando, second town of the island, where he had taken the Hampton art show which is touring some of the West Indies on its mission to help raise funds for British war effort (as a present to England from the colored students and masters of Hampton) was set upon by three American sailors, Leo Smart, Paul Limber and Michael Millin, of the "Argentina" commanded by Lieut. Engelo Simpson. He was in his own car going to one of the big carnival dances at Prince's building in Port-of-Spain, when the three white soldiers held him up.

"He heard one of them shout: 'Oh, it is a . . . nigger too!'" says the account in the Barbados Advocate. "One of them jumped onto the footboard and struck him in the face. He retaliated and threw one on the ground Then another aimed a blow with a truncheon at his face. He parried this blow with his hand. He was struck on the arm with the truncheon. Then he called for assistance. A sailor took a lighted match and placed it very near his face and said: 'Let us see where you got hurt.' He asked the policeman to arrest the sailors. When he noticed the policeman was reluctant to arrest them, he told him that he would only be executing a duty on his behalf as he was the one to lay the charge against the sailors.

APR 5 - 1941

"The policeman then called a sergeant. A sailor jesting said: 'Why call a sergeant? I am a sergeant too.'" Williams was then taken to hospital and the sailors charged. Only one of them, Limber, gave evidence in court. He said that Williams had beaten him, and that he himself was drunk. Asked how many drinks he had taken, the other two shouted out in court that the question was irrelevant. Limber then said it was false that he 'lived below the Mason and Dixon line.' A fourth sailor called as a witness stated that the defendants 'seemed fairly sober.' The judge, F. M. Boland, found the sailors guilty. they were fined $10 each or 14 days

"The commander of the ship had asked to be allowed to act as attorney for the men; this was refused but he was given permission to instruct them during the proceedings. The judge, who is a colored member of the bench, said that he thought the fight could have been avoided if Williams had not made any disparaging remark to the sailors."

There it is—the typical "American sailor" incident.

Regulating Virtue

The Virgin Islands' new governor is sponsoring a law which will punish fornicators and prostitutes with a fine of $500 or two years in prison.

Adultery would be a crime calling for a $1,000 fine or two years in prison.

APR 12 1941

Under this new drastic law, a woman could be classed as a prostitute if she was immoral, whether she received pay or not.

Justification for these harsh measures is said to be the social equality as practiced by natives and white U.S. sailors and marines.

APR 12 1941

It would appear to us that if Uncle Sam desires to be goody-goody, he has right here at home all the adultery, prostitution and fornication he can handle.

If all Americans of easy morals were in the jug, the jails and penitentiaries would have to be enlarged 1,000 per cent, and all the prisoners pardoned every year to make room for new ones.

West Indies Send Many To Fight Hitler; Are Given Equal Standing With Whites

Shows Moving Pictures of Operations in Ethiopia and Sudan-Ethiopian Border

MAR 29 1941

Wants Chance At Hitler

By NANCY CUNARD

BARBADOS, British West Indies—The British West Indies are sending quite a number of young men to England or "overseas." Among volunteers of color in the airforce are three Barbadians, Bruce Fitz G. H. Miller, an R. A. F. recruit; Willie Foster, formerly cable and wireless employe now wireless operator, and his cousin, Leon Foster, interer, nof a gunner in the R. A. F. In Trinidad among many others, are Julian Marryshow, son of Albert Marryshow, member of ahe legislative council of the Island of Grenada and dynamic newspaper-man, having founded there "The West Indian", a well composed daily, in 1915, and whom I saw the other day on my way here.

MAR 29 1941

Another young man, going to England or other "overseas" very shortly from Trinidad is James Hyde, a former civil servant, whose desire to experience "what the world is like over there" is second only to that of having a go at Hitler. There are discussions speculations in Barbados as to whether these young pilots, observers and other volunteers, when they do get abroad, will be allowed to serve in the army and the air-force on the same footing as whites I think there is no doubt on this matter; they are doing so. The first colored airman, it was started not long ago in a London paper, was an African Alakija, an Oxford student until then; he was given a rousing farewell on proceeding to activeser vice by several governmental personalities who have administrated British West Africa, as I reported recently.

Doubtless, this point being one of eternal query, the position should be clearly stated by the authorities in Great Britain. If war continues a long time, as i appears to us it well may, the England will need and call upon all of her subjects, irrespective of race and color. So far the West Indies are removed from contact with war, save with what they can read in the press. Their effort in contributing money is stupendous; their loyalty unquestionable. But there is ever present and naturally so, this particular point: are we colored ones going to be treated like the whites? I trust that Mr. Hyde will write home from England and tell us how it is there in connection with this.

Trinidad's governor, Sir Hubert Young, is just back from consultations in England, and in a speech made on his return stated that the cadets of the Trinidad Air Training Scheme show as high a standard of training as any cadets of their age from any other part of the empire, and said that this reflects well on their training at Piarco (one of the island's present military centres).

Haitian President Speaks To First Military Grads

Must Be Prepared to Serve Wherever Necessary, He Says

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—In awarding diplomas to thirty-two cadets of the Haitian Military Academy at Port-au-Prince recently, Elie Lescot, President of the Republic, urged them to prepare "to be sent wherever it is deemed necessary, even abroad."

At the ceremonies of the City's largest theater, the President told the new Second Lieutenants of the Guard of Haiti that "in the troubled epoch in which we live, no one can predict the role that our little army may be asked to play."

FIRST MILITARY CLASS

It was the first class to graduate from the Haitian Military Academy under the direction of the United States Military Mission and the first time that the President had awarded diplomas at graduation. The exercises followed closely those of the United States Military Academy.

The President was accompanied by members of the Government, the Chief of his Private Cabinet and his aides, the Chief of Staff, Colonel Jules Andre of the Garde d'Haiti, Colonel Leo A. Bessette, director of the Ecole Militarie and members of the School Staff.

Members of the graduating class were in full dress when they received their diplomas from the President. Later they changed into their new khaki uniforms bearing for the first time the insignia of Second Lieutenant of the Garde d'Haiti and were sworn by Colonel Andre.

GIVEN COMMISSIONS

After the oath of allegiance to their country, the young men received their commissions and orders from the President. The precedent established by the participation of the Presidnt is indicative of his desire to weld more closely together all classes of society and begin a new era for the Grade d'Haiti.

"Your class, gentlemen," the President said in his address, "is a remarkable one and for this reason, the eyes of the nation are upon you. You have been unusually lucky to receive a particularly excellent military training and, therefore,, you have, even more than your elders, contracted obligations towards this society of which you are members.

"You must realize that you serve as models for the generations that follow... Because of your special preparation, you must not be inclined to think that all the military science in the world is crystallized within you and to deny to your elders the respect and sympathy you owe them, for they are no less worthy of being officers than you are. On the contrary, you must be grateful to them for contributing by their steadfastness, their devotion, their duty, to maintain this organizatoin of which you will be a part.

"You must model yourselves after them, be prepared to sacrifice the comforts of life, be prepared like them to be sent wherever it is deemed necessary, even abroad, for in this troubled epoch in which we live no one can predict the role that our little army may be asked to play.

"Nowadays, in the midst of unpredictable and momentous development ten men constitute a force, and such force can fulfill its role. In choosing this career you must realize that you have dedicated your entire selves, body and soul, to the service of your country."

West Indians Protest Against Ban On American Negroes

LONDON (BM).—The International African Service Bureau, the League of Coloured Peoples and the Coloured Peoples' Association, have protested to the Colonial Office against allegations of the colour-bar to American Negroes seeking work on the United States bases in the West Indies.

The protest is based upon a report in the Congressional Record of the United States, in which the coloured Congressman, Arthur W. Mitchell, of Chicago, told the House of Representatives that the Civil Service Commission at Washington, informed a coloured applicant for employment in Trinidad that "the British Government has requested that we do not send Negroes to the island, regardless of qualification."

Mr Mitchell added:

"It is my opinion that there are too many people claiming Democracy for themselves and denying it to their fellow men, for no other reason than there is a difference in colour.

"I cannot believe this House will condone the discrimination pointed out in this letter."

This was the letter from Dr John Rice, President of the North Philadelphia Civic League, in which it was stated that coloured people were being refused jobs on fortification work in the leased areas in Trinidad.

Labourite M.P. Reginald Sorensen, has given notice to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lord Moyne, that the charges will be raised in the House of Commons, on behalf of the coloured Colonial organisations in this country.

Great satisfaction has been aroused among West Indians here over the speech of Senator Millard Tydings, warning the United States Government against any idea of annexing the West Indies without consulting the wishes of the Native populations.

"How about the people in the West Indies?" asked the Senator.

"They may not want to become American citizens; they may prefer to remain subjects of the British crown.

"They are entitled to a hearing too, because after all, they are people.

"We must not assume, as quite often we do, that the problem is simply one of acquiring real estate and all the debts and the human problems that go with congested tropical islands which have very little in the way of wealth," declared the Senator.

"In the islands where we have bases, such as Bermuda, Trinidad and Jamaica and other islands that have so far been designated, it would be a fine thing if we owned, as American territory, the property upon which the base itself rests — not the whole island, but only that part of the island where our port and base are located," observed Mr Tydings.

The Senator said that it would be a liability to take over the entire islands and populations which in many respects would become a charge on the United States Treasury like the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Ask Interior Department To Investigate Deplorable Health Conditions In Virgin Islanders

Declaring that "inadequate facilities for the care of the sick in the Virgin Islands are astounding," Ashley L. Totten, president of the Virgin Islands Civic Association, on Tuesday wrote Secretary of the Interor, Harold Ickes, calling for an investigation of defects in the health facilities of the Islands.

"An investigation into some of the major defects," Totten wrote, "will reveal that continentals and natves are often forced to go to Puerto Rico or return to the mainland in order to obtain adequate medical service. Poor people who cannot afford such travel, die from lack of attention."

The Association dislosed four major hospital deficiencies which were studied by one of its executive members who returned from the islands recently. They were listed as follows.

Deficiencies Listed

"1. The first outstanding departure to medical and sanitation principles consists in the placing of a communicable disease with a non-communicable disease in the Medical Ward. This fact is seen in the confining of cases of active pulmonary tuberculosis in the same ward with cardiac and nephritic cases in the hospital at St. Thomas.

"In Christiansted two infants are placed in the same crib, due to overcrowding in the babies' ward.

"The care of the tuberculosis patient is highly inadequate, and there are no facilities for pneumothorax.

"2. Poor laboratory facilities comprise the second major defect which we wish to bring to your attention. Blood chemistry, such as urea nitrogen, non-protein nitrogen, creatinine and sugar analysis is not being performed, even though indications for such tests are imperative for the proper treatment of critically ill cases. It is not practical to obtain a blood sugar tolerance test. This means that a diabetic case is not recognized until the case becomes advanced. A correct prognosis cannot be made in nephritic cases because of inalibity to obtain the blood non-protein nitrogen, urea nitrogen and creatinine. A skilled and adequately trained laboratory technician is needed for the performance of these tests.

"3. The third major medical need is found in the poor X-ray equipment. There are no facilities for deep X-ray therapy or for retrograde pyelogram in any of the islands. In St. Croix the facilities for radiograph of gall bladder and gastro-intestinal tract are poor. A trained and skilled X-ray technician is needed.

"4. The fourth major medical need is found in the failure to possess any equipment for the administration of oxygen, as may be required in pneumonia and cardiac cases.

"In the Christiansted hospital, the health officer, Mr. Harry Beatty, has done excellent work in filaria and malaria. Our Association believes that if special training in blood chemistry and bacteriology were given Mr. Beatty, he would develop a laboratory of high efficiency. In a similar way it may be practical to improve the efficiency of the technicians in the other hospitals.

"The amelioration of the above mentioned defects in the hospitals of the Virgin Islands becomes necessary in view of our defense program which is building air bases in these islands. Adequate medical and surgical facilities will enhance the service of the bases.

CHARLES HARWOOD NEW GOVERNOR OF VIRGIN ISLANDS

FEB 15 1941

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, V. I. — (ANP)—Federal Judge Herman E. Moore administered the oath of office to Charles Harwood when he was inducted last week as governor of the Virgin Isles.

Thousands of natives witnessed the inauguration ceremonies of the former judge in the Canal Zone, who said in speaking of the islands' defense program: "Our freedom, our liberty, our democracy were not lightly won, and, unless we devote ourselves whole-heartedly to their perpetuation, they will not be retained against the alien and subversive forces now threatening their destruction."

The new governor expressed his regret that his predecessor, Lawrence W. Cramer, who resigned following an argument with Secretary of the Interior Ickes, was unable to be present to join in the welcome and give him the benefit of his years of experience.

Shortly after resigning Governor Cramer attended a farewell tea party on one of the island's mountain peaks and fell more than 30 feet down the mountain side. Knocked unonscious, he was rushed to the executive mansion where in a few days he recovered sufficiently to leave with his family for the Antigua, B. W. I.

At a reception at Government House, Gov. Harwood met the island's leading merchants, natives, and political groups. Last week the governor and his party went to St. Croix to attend a public reception there.

TERROR REIGN RULED VOTING

FEB 8 1941

Exile Here Declares Rights of People Are Menaced

"President Stenio Vincent of Haiti is employing everytrick known to dictators to suppress civil liberties and destroy every vestige of human rights of the Haitian people," Max L. Hudicourt, secretary general of the Party for Democratic Action of Haiti, told the Amsterdam Star-News Monday.

"Mi. Vincent is determined to win the presidency of Haiti for a third term, in spite of the clear-cut unconstitutionality of such a move, stated M. Hudicourt, adding, "he (Vincent) is obliged to employ vinoelec against the opposition candidates, false arrests and imprisonment, and unbridled terror to guarantee the success of his third term schemes."

M. Hudicourt, lawyer and journalist, graduate of the famous Alexander Petion, Lycee and of the Faculty du Droit du Port Au Prince, arrived in the United States on January 6.

M. Hudicourt has been identified with the democratic peoples' movements of Haiti for the past 17 years. He is the founder of many of its outstanding newspapers and magazines, including "Trouvee", "Nouvello Ronde", "Le Cantre", and many others.

He participated in the campaign against the occupation of Haiti by the armed forces of the United States in 1923, and is one of the founders of the Party for Democratic Action, and one of its candidates for Congress in Haiti. He was forced to flee Hati, he said, because of the terror of the Vincent government, Mr. Hudicourt is now in the United States as an exile.

In Haiti, the President is elected by a joint session of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, composed of 21 Senators and 37 Deputies. President Vincent, M. Hudicourt said, took steps and made possible the election of senators and deputies pledged to his reelection for a third term. The slogan was that the National will was above the constitution.

The elections scheduled for December 15, he said, ended without any opposition candidates, because the President's henchmen, Major Armand, chief of the palace guards; Armaud Merceron, chief of police. Port-au-Prince; and Colonel Henri Clement, commander of the Department of the West; arrested the four candidates and their supporters and released them after election day.

In addition to himself, who fled the country, the candidates who suffered for their opposition campaign were: Dr. Latortue, Antoine Pierre-Paul, Castel Demesmin and Constant Vieux.

M. Hudicourt declared that "Haiti has never known an election campaign like the recent one." Opposition candidates were arrested and tortured and he suffered a fractured ankle himself while in the hands of the police. Mme. Alexandre Lorient, a 60-year-old woman, was brutally treated while in prison; Saturnin Francois, David Stephen, Joseph Crespin, T. Francois, and many others suffered violence, because they dared to oppose President Vincent, he said.

"It is my purpose to bring to the American people the true facts about the conditions in my native country and to clear up whatever misunderstanding there may be about the internal conditions of Haiti. My country looks to the American people for support in their campaign to rid themselves of Vincent and his regime," he asserted.

Appoint A Negro To This Post

JAN 1 1 1941

THE movement being sponsored by the United States Government Employees, the Virgin Islands Association of New York City, and other influential organizations and persons, to have a Negro American appointed governor of the Virgin Islands to succeed ex-Governor Lawrence W. Cramer, is of more than ordinary significance in these times when this group of small islands have, almost overnight, assumed international importance because of their strategic position in the National defense program.

Moreover, the proposal to make the islands a haven for European war refugees which is being urged by the Island Government, approved by the Department of the Interior, and regarded sympathetically by the United States Department of Justice, gives added weight to the argument that the Governorship of the Islands at this time requires a man whose ethnic and racial background is closely akin to that of the Island's 26,000 inhabitants, fully 90 per cent of whom are of the Negro race.

Characterized by ex-President Herbert Hoover as an "effective poorhouse," a scant fourteen years after they were purchased by the United States from Denmark for $25,000,000, the Virgin Islands have long since outgrown this underdog designation. Their economic condition is more hopeful today than at any time since their purchase by Uncle Sam, and because of the construction of a submarine base and other defense projects, a shortage of labor has actually developed. In addition, repeal of prohibition in the United tates has created once more a market for one of the chief exports—rum.

Tourist traffic in the islands has actually increased from 3,000 visitors in 1934, to 11,000 in 1939. The standard of living among the natives has shown a marked rise, and there is said to be more money in circulation than at any time since 1931 when jurisdiction of the island group passed from the Navy Department to the Department of the Interior.

The Journal and Guide believes that the appointment of a qualified Negro to this important post at this time would meet with the wholehearted approval of every well-thinking American and would be of inestimable value in cementing the relations between our Government and the inhabitants of the Islands who had American citizenship rights conferred upon them in 1932, and universal suffrage granted in 1936.

There is ample precedent for such an appointment. When President Roosevelt named William H. Hastie as Judge of the United States District Court for the Virgin Islands, there were those who were skeptical as to the outcome. But when Judge Hastie resigned the post a few years ago to accept the deanship of the Howard University Law School, there was genuine regret at his leaving on the part of persons high in government circles from President Roosevelt on down. Judge Herman H. Moore, of Chicago, has conducted the office in accordance with the highest and best traditions and is generally regarded as one of the outstanding members of the Federal judiciary.

These are peculiar times in which we live, and they demand peculiar methods in dealing with them. We feel that the appointment of a member of the Negro race as governor of the Virgin Islands would fully justify itself in more ways than one.

Negro Named Assistant Prosecutor In Nassau

JAN 4 1941

MINEOLA, L. I.—Premises-ridden Nassau County seems about to reform in its administration of justice to its Negro citizens. This possibility was seen in the announcement on Monday of the appointment of Mokey A. Rigby, Negro attorney of 8 Gold street, Freeport, to the post of Assistant District Attorney in the office of District Attorney Edward J. Neary.

JAN 4 1941

Rigby, 46, will be the first of his race to hold such a position in the 40-year existence of the county.

Haitans Want To Know More About Negro Americans

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (ANP)—"Send us books and newspapers. We want to know more about the colored Americans," is the constantly repeated request of the people of Haiti to Dr. L. D. Reddick of the New York Public library, who is on a good-will tour in that country. English is taught in the schools and by the aid of radio broadcasts and movie newsreels from the United States, many adults, also, have learned to read and speak the American language. However, many of the schools and libraries do not receive a single Negro newspaper or magazine from America.

In a conference with Haitian authors and newspaper men, which was arranged by Dr. Louis Mars of Port-Au-Prince, Dr. Reddick was asked about the newest and best books in the fields of history, Negro music, rural sociology and literature.

In his radio broadcast of Wednesday, Mar. 22, over the Port Au-Prince station, 5HH2S, Dr. Reddick outlined the general plan for the exchange of books, writers and newspapers between Haiti and the United States. An arrangement has been completed for sending one copy of every new book published in Haiti to the Schomburg collection of the New York Public library.
